alk through Balboa Park on a weekend afternoon and there is a chance you will come upon a sight you might think had passed with the War of the Roses or the Field of the Gold Pavilion: warrior knights in perfectly crafted, meticulously authentic armor, chain mail, and Crusader helmes, fighting it would seem at first glance — to the death; ladies in pointed barbettes and mantles lounging in their pavilions. But you will have made a mistake to assume that the Middle Ages are over. For these members of San Diego's branch of the Society for Creative Anachronism, the times are still very much alive. Indeed, they are now called the Current Middle Ages. The Middle Ages that never died.

The person who could afford the desk, credenza,

Otterman li-quidated his 16-year-old Alpine-based company, U. S. Oceanography, and decided to sell three UH-1E "Huey" heli-conters to the Sear-Otter. copters to the San Diego Sheriff's office for $650,000. If Otterman's tastes in fur-niture and helicopters take after the rest of his opulent lifestyle, then it's quite likely he bought the best he could find. Five years ago, court records show, he spent $70,000 on an imported Porsche 930SE sports car, and he's currently trying to sell his 20-acre Descar ranch house and agricultural preserve — complete with heliport, two hangars, swimming pool, and security ming pool, and security entrance — for $1.6 million. Sheriff's officials have been outspoken in their assertion that $650,000 was a bargain-basement price for the Hue's. What they kept silent, however, was the identity of the seller the fact that he sw the fact that he sweetened the deal by throwing in plush fur-niture to go with other "related equipment," and that the county might have cut corners

The sheriff's office a-ked that the county's standard requirements for competitive procurement be waived because Otterman was sup-posedly offering a discount that no other vendor would be able to beat. "These are very unique helicopters; they have extraordinary avionics," which will be used to outfox drug smugglers, said sheriff's spokesman Dan Greenblat. In May 1991, Kahn's C Street Clinic (it has since moved to Home Avenue, just of High-way 94) was issued a citation of noncompliance from the State Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs. The state found 17 deficiencies at the clinic, including failure to document whether patients were narcotics addicts, whether one patient was qualified for the take home dose program, and failure to provide justification for increasing patients' doses.

I've been to a couple of them, and they're usually not bad."

However, one local drug addiction expert questioned how necessary methadone treatment is. comes from publicly funded treatment centers. In 1987, two Western Clinical Services treatment centers in Seattle were accused by King County officials of lowering rates to attract more addicts, accord-ing to a UPI report. "It's the whole idea of an agency's main thrust being the more people you get on methadone, the more money you make," said Phil Showstead, director of the

Dr. Kahn responded to his Washington critics by saying they were "feathering their own nests and afraid of competition that would ultimately lead to the end of public subsidies."

It costs a client $180 a mouth for methadone at one of Rogers' or Kahn's San Diego clinics. It had been $130 a month until Mallincrodkt, the company that supplies most methadone dispensed in the U.S., increased pri O.S., increased prices by 80 percent in 1990. But Dr. Kahn says the current charge is still a bargain. Addicts might pay as much as $100 a day for a fix on the streets, but for just $6 a day, methadone will relieve their withdrawal symptoms.

"Where can you get anything for $6 a day?" he asked.
At publicly, funded clinics.

patients can get doses for free, but taxpayers pick up the tab. Still, even though private clin-ics like Rogers' and Kahn's have relieved the taxpayer burden, the public continues to complain about them. For instance, in Albuquerque, requested that Dr. Kahn move his clinic, which was across the street from a high school. He refused. The controversy has continued here. In 1991, the Serra Mesa Community Council tried to get the Public Services and Safety Commission to issue a conditional-use permit after Rogers moved one of his clinics near a high school there. It is still

Kahn said. They are perceived by the public as a threat. That the only reason they attract any attention at all. Our pro-grams are considered a threat because we gather together Rogers said that 90 perceit of their patients, once stabl-lized on methadone, are able to become gainfully emplowed. People forget history. They tend to be read to the con-traction of the pro-traction of t ics, but citizens here decided they didn't want that."

"The public has to quit focusing on the genesis of this disease and start focusing on treatment," Kahn said. "To many people think of this as something that is caused by the addict's own volition. Once the patient becomes cotic dependent, punishing him or her makes as much sense as attacking a cancer or diabetic patient."

THE REVOLUTIONARY BP 10 BIPOLAR LOUDSPEAKER

Audiophile Performance, Designer Styling and Unmatched Value

The spectacular three-dimensional imaging, awsome deep bass response and silky smooth high-definition linearity of the Definitive Technology BP 10 are the result of the utilization and integration of a myriad of technological advancements and breakthroughs. The goal of the design team was to create a state-of-the-art loudspeaker which offered the sophisticated technology and lifelike musical reproduction systems selling for many times its modest cost, and combine them in a compact and stylish design which could be easily and attractively placed in the superior of the styling of the st systems selling for many times its modest cost, and combine them in a compact and stylinh design which could be easily and attractively placed in a normal home environment.

Thousands of man-hours of critical listening, design processes utilizing the most advanced computer loudspeaker nevel programs available and proprietary engineering investigations at the NRC in Ottawa, Canada (the world's most advanced loudspeaker research facility), have combined to produce a loudspeaker like no other in the world. The success of the design team in achieving their goals is immediately apparent when you sit down and listen to your favorite music through a pair of BP 10s. The elegant slender towers seem to disappear in a huge natural soundstage which extends in a three-dimensional are beyond the speakers from left to right, and exhibits front-to-back depth which, at times, can be almost startling in its ability to recreate the illusion of live music using performed in your room (which will seem to be almost 65.00).

BUILD YOUR SOUND SYSTEM ON A SOLID BASS

Every good sound system must be built on a strong foundation: Whether you're upgrading your current stereo or building a dream audio/video theatre from the ground up, a Velodyne subwoofer

True reproduction of deep bass requires large drivers and abundant amplifier power: By substantially reducing the demands on your main amplifier and speakers, a Velodyne subwoofer promotes tremendous improvement in midrange and treble response. Imaging becomes more precise, transients become sharper, and harmonic distortion is substantially reduced. On every level, the dramatic effect of full-range sound is overwhelming. There are two very specific benefits of the Velodyne System. First, the direct voice coil mounting

Inter air two very special centers or use velocytic system. First, the direct voice coil mounting of the accelerometer provides the most stable and accurate feedback source possible. Second, because the Servo loop operates at a rate of 5500 times per second, the amount of correction – or "loop gain" – is extremely high. The speed and accuracy of the HGS System give the Velodyne subwoofers the highest output and lowest distortion of any other subwoofer on the market today.

Randwulf then admits that the problems of discrimination encountered on the street demand a brave face. "We often go to restaurants in garb or walk around the streets, and we've had some incidents. ur interview, however, has now moved to the outside patio and swimming pool, where Lord Randwulf has donned one of his helms, is holding up one of his shields, and is inviting me to hit him as hard as I can with his regulation simutation sword. This has no cutting edge, being essen-tally a clubbing weapon made of rattan with a fibrous, non-splintering interior and an exterior wrapped in duct tape. It has no point. With the advent of heavy see-t-steel armour, he explains, and with the ability of chain mail to deflect sharp points, hand-to-hand combat was more a matter of breaking bones than cutting flesh. Besides, a broken bone in the Middle Ages was tantamount to an agonizing death.

We watched grings TV and Mexican TV. My heroes were] u "any Downs ("Howdy-howdy!") and B o Dale. But I also had Juan Luis Curiel — general-purpose host to every available .how 'espectacular' on channel 12, and the four Seasons of Tijuana. Los Moonglow. In terms of TV, 1 was doubly rich.

Downstairs, there were a couple of bedrooms, a toilet, and the demon. But we'll get back to the

That was suspicious enough — who would want a hill to himself. This proved outright that something was seriously wrong. At the very least, he probably thought he was better than everybody else, and nothing could make a Mexican madder.

But then this man on the hill revealed his intentions. He turned his center-block house into a castle. A castle! Old folks gawked. Battlements, little archery-slots along the roof-line. Nobody could see if there was a drawbridge and moat or not. His towers three their shadows upon the small gaggle of houses and beauty shops across the Rampa. Rumors flew. He was a general, a retired general, a colonel. The president. The former president. A wards. A Maffa kingin, a white slawer. He was kind, rich, evil, mad, a Russian, or a gringo. Then, as if sensing the constrenation in the neighborhood and savoring it, the bastard painted the whole thing bright yellow!

Of course, death is as fa-miliar to a Mexican as life: it is a constant companion. I'd al-ready learned where life comes from. An older boy had taken me into a field and shown me little gauzy spider egg sacks in the tall grass. "Know what that is?" he

I was afraid to walk in that grass — what if I squished a couple of future homeboys? Now I knew what death looked like, too. Nobody could tell me where death came from, only what it was. However, we only what it was. However, we all knew what — or who — came from death.

I remember my uncle Carlos Hubbard (no relation to Ernesto James though related by marriage to Juan Wong) telling me onc. "Every alley in Mexico has its own ghost." Forget the Haunted House — if you want ghosts, we got "m here. Tijuana is the Haunted City.

We had no proof that the bear on the Rampa was a real bear and not a ghost. We discussed going down and touching it in a limited caucus in the downstairs-upstairs, but the motion was voted down in a landshide, Margo and Luis voting no and the Karate delegate voting yes. And who knew what wraths floated through the war that the control of the control Apparently, Grandpa swooped into whatever bowling alley Aunt Irma was dominating, and he lay his spirit-hands upon her Brunswick ball and guided it Brunswick ball and guided it ostrikes. He was especially effective at cleaning up a troubling 10-7 split. He apparently made several appearances across the border at the Bowlero. Grandpa Urrea is not the only meddlesome ghost in the family. According to Rampa Tales, he himself was inter-vened upon by the dead.

Things had gone badly for the visionary commune he'd planned. Apparently, baking bread was not the ticket, but they couldn't find out what the ticket was. The commune went bust. Furthermore, his dabblings in arcane Rosicrucian se crets got him in serious trouble with the Catholic Church. Me

My father was having some trouble with English. "I don't get it," he'd say. "I go to the bathroom, right? And I'm supposed to take a piss." He'd think a minute. "But I'm not taking a piss. I'm leaving a piss!"

This really disturbed him.

He spent years trying to get to the bottom of the mystery. "Am I taking the piss to the toilet?"

Sometimes we'd sit around and work on it. "If I'm taking a crap, where am I taking it?"
So, concretely speaking, the dogs were a puzzle.
I called my aunt.

She had a funny way of aling with us kids. Hugo, Margo, and I were often known as "Idiots" for whatever breach of reason we'd managed. Once, when I was sleeping on the couch, I was startled to hear her in the other room, farting. Whoa! I'd never heard a woman fart. Brroom! my aunt exulted. Frrapp!

sidoro was an older guy, another first-generation stranger in a strange land. While many of my undocumented clients took their beatings and gave up, limping back south of the border, if not for good, at least for a day's rest, Isidoro kept getting up off the floor for another round. A few examples:

He had come here in 1963 at the age of 30 and a year later would bring back his 26-year-old wife, crossing over through the hills east of Tijuana, of course. During the next ten years they would live in a Dodge camper shell on the Pala Indian Reservation and have six children.

Isidoro was a farmer. Perhaps he was more than just a farmer. There was something spiritua about Isidoro's interaction with plant life. Ob-serving him in my own backyard (for he was frequently there paying me in the only way he reasonably could), it was clear to both my wife and reasonably could, it was clear to both my wife and me that lisidor and plants shared some magical bond. You could just tell it — it was in the way he moved, in the way he whispered to the trees, in the way virtually everything he touched seemed to respond, sick trees regained their health; dead plants came back to life; old, worthless seeds that had been in a coffee can in the garage for five years grew into lush vines, producing a bounty of fruits and septables seemingly imperious to first and septables seemingly imperious to farm. While other aliens came north and looked for jobs on farms, siddoro looked for raw land. In January of 19s4, he found it in Pala, a town of sorts near the Indian reservation at the north-ceater needed the county. An anglo named 1

these parts to create a residential architecture that harks back to an idyllic past — a colonial past, a frontier past, or, in many cases, the past of a warm Mediterranean land — Spain, say, or Italy. The image is always comforting. Solid, rustic style, Old World charm. And in the case of Renaissance-La Jolla, a new devel-opment of family houses on La Jolla Village Drive, the trend seems to be toward creat-ing Old World village-style communities as

sponse" facilities at the gates.

Renaissance-La Jolla, upon its completion, will be one of the U.S.'s only masternunities consisting uniquely of what is called "multi-family housing." The $500 million project is one of the largest residential develop-ments in California and will eventually comprise 2400 units — townhouses, con-

Ahmanson Development companies, which are constructing the various "villages" that will combine to form the new community, claim that they are modeled after Tuscan villages and that they will foster exactly those civic virtues that characterize most small Italian towns — safety, intimacy, neighbor-liness, and an aesthetically pleasing, humane architecture designed purely for the conve-nience and delight of the ordinary people

Now, California has always had an eclec-tic suburban and residential architecture. The villas built in the '20s and '30s in both Los Angeles and San Diego attest to that, with their Tudor beams, Gothic turrets, Spanish eaves, and occasional Swiss chales decorations. But here the ethos is rather dif-ferent. This is not one house on a block filled with all kinds of individual and whimsical exwith its own architectural language, a language that is applied consistently and thoroughly throughout. There are, for example, at least 18 10-foot-high pergolas (walkway raised on colonnades covered with blowoming vines), as well as pedestrian bridges, fountains, piazzas, courtyards, and a 90-foot European clock tower that will stand guard over what is to be the "town square."

There are four principal "villages" within the boundaries of Renaissance: Casabella, Avanti, La Florentine, and Villas of Renaissance. Casabella is described by the develsance. Casabella is described by the devel-opers as a "townhome community"—a gated site consisting solely of 108 townhouses spread over 11 acres. Forty million dollars of Old World style can be seen springing into the light of day here, the work of Davidson Construction, and the village will be completed by 1994 at the earliest. The houses are large, two-story Italianate mansions with about 2500, course fees of class. about 2500 square feet of interior space, complete with Pella wood-casement win-dows, barrel-tiled roofs and views over landscaped lawns. The price? From between about $400,000 to $500,000. Pool, spas, and cabana included (here the pursuit of Tuscan authenticity takes a dive)

Casabella may be an attempt to escape the dreary anonymity of California's sub-urban sprawl and the shadow of alienation and solitude that goes with it, but it is itself cast in that strange, half-romantic, half-utilitarian architectural language of Italian it was perfectly unnatural for people to "live so close together." Suspicion of foreign ways, however, is much weaker in California, cal style might just become popular or even dominant in the years to come. And if it did, the whole visual texture of the state would change, as its designers hope: close your eyes and imagine the entire population living in Renaissance-style Italian cities with pergolas and paved piazzas (and armed response at the gates). Dream or nightmare? Wandering around the next village, Avanti, it is hard to say. Here, 158 units priced at about $200,000, designed by Aram Bassenian of Bassenian I agoni, are built to resemble villas, with bal-conies, arched windows, ceramic tile entries, and columns. Inside, though, the Tuscan pretense falls away and you see the necessary Jenn-Air stoves, microwaves, and split-level subterranean garages. But the European atmosphere is perhaps more

The vice president of GlenFed, which has co-financed the project with McKellar Development, says, "It's a replica of a European city, and it actually conveys that feeling when you enter it." To prove it, ornate windows, flowering patios, delicate Renaissance arcades, and suggestions of classical architraves are ev-erywhere. The houses are surmounted by huge, disproportionate chimneys that sug-gest fortified towers more than anything gest fortified towers more than anything else. But there are two factors that make it utterly unlike anything in Florence. On the one hand, there is the sealed, removed feel-ing to the place. It is a gated community with no real connection to anything around it, including the actual land on which it is sit uated (in Florence, one is always aware of Nature and of the Florentine preoccupation with it; the city has been masterfully blended into its setting and reflects a sumptuous, re-fined agriculture).

On the other hand, there is the homo-

$63 million project will be completely fin-ished in early 1993 and, like La Florentine, the developers expect it to be fully sold out before completion. There can be no doubting, then, the immense potential popularity of these modern, geometric versions of Ital-ian rustic dwellings and of the artificial communal settings in which their clever developers have placed them.

It seems that people no longer want just a house stuck on a street or a block, however desirable the neighborhood. Perhaps these days few places feel really and truly safe—and the image of roters in los Angeles torchig the plushest areas of the metropolis has given a massive push to the trend toward gated communities. Here, then, is the suburban Californian residence of the future: self-sufficient, inward-looking, nostalgic, and self-patrolling. You get the feeling that living here you would never need any out-side agency or facilities other than the supermarket. Renaissance-La Jolla is a little world unto itself, and that is what the in-habitants of increasingly non-urban Cali-fornia are going to want more and more.

Entertaining Columbus Controversy

Controversy

I am writing in response to John Peter Applebranch's
snide assessment of Bill Bigelow's important work in the area of critical pedagogy ("Local Events," September

In other words, Bigelow USED TUXEDOS In other words, Bigclow prepares students for the actual enterprise of historical research, which is never the study of the past "in its own terms," as Applebrants suggests, but rather the modern attempts of modern scholars to make sense of those historical "terms," and "circum stances and values" according to their own unique perspectives and ideologies.

If Applebranch had had the A Journalist Can't FROM $78 Get By On One Or Two Incomes In Vight & Day I wrote the article about climbing El Cajon Mountain. RESTAURANT PROBLEM NO. 4

Finicky Friends

They don't eat red meat, or dairy products or anything fried. And they don't like salads ("No rabbit food!"). No shellfish, no MSG. Don't like Italian, and they're tired of Chinese. So whom do they ask to pick a restaurant? Why, you, of course - the person who eats anything.

Solution: You gotta call Eleanor Widmer!

Eleanor Widmer's Restaurant Line has over 400 restaurant recommendations, including chic eateries where your friends can eat those few foods they will eat. And you can pick late-night eateries, fixed-price meals, coffeehouses, bruncheries, healthful-dining establishments - even romantic restaurants for finicky eaters on a budget! Eleanor will even tell you how much your average meal will cost.

Turn to page 80 for complete instructions and then call Eleanor at 1-900-844-8600.

The line coses only 49c a minute, and you can call it 24 hours a day.

REVIEW

The first time I read The Winter's Tale, I just didn't get it. The play is "late" Shakespeare, first appearing at the Globe in 1611 and I swore the Bard had succumbed to senility. The Winter Tale seemed two plays — a winter's tale and a midsummer's tale — joined by the flimsiest of yokes. It's aswim with anachro-

And then there's the little problem of Leontes's motivation. One minute he's recalling their innocent youth with his best friend Polixenes, the next he's over-the-top roaring jealous and wants to murder the man. No. I didn't get The Winter's Tale initially. It came at me flaws first. But then again I was in my late teens and didn't know a thing shour Times. about Time.

I had only the dimmest notion, back then, how time both reates and destroys. In Shakespeare's plays it is usually one or the other. In Karin William's "cool new play," Australia is actually an idea. Unlike the other plays are decloses—the trage deaths of Hermione and young Mamillus, and the clearly of Antiquions—as well as felicitous gains. Perdia is born and grown up in the interlude between acts three and four a phenomenon that also illustrates time's swiftness). And Leontes's penance rewards him with unexpected gains because, with time, forgiveness can ripen. In effect, with The Winter's Tale. Shakespeare broke the rules of dramatic units to make sage autumnal observations about the passage of time and the human condition. In the process, as John Widders points out, the play shows life in all its phases. "Birth and death, youth and age, sophisticated court and simple countries. If crustic dances and judicial trials, bears and pickpeckets, It is probably Shakespear's most inclusive play, the one which holds the most extensive mirror up to nature. The probably Shakespear's most inclusive play, the one which holds the most extensive mirror up to nature. to the throne Mamillus ("a gallant child" who "makes old hearts fresh"), and his newborn daughter Perdita. There is no lago egging him on, no Old Testament Satan testing the patience of a "blameless" Job. There is only an inexplicable intience of a "blameles" lob. There is only an inexplicable in ner swerve in Lounte's psyche, and everthing is lost. Ever the critical show off George Bernard Shaw said. "Leontes is a magnificent part, worth 50 Othellos (Shakespeare lones nothing about jealousy when he wrote Othellob." In the Cold Golde Theater's production of The Winner's Tale George Old Golde Theater's production of The Winner's Tale George Daloi plays Leontes as if he were only partly there. Deloy has considered with Contract of the Contract of State Only and the colored the Contract of the Contract of State Only well. But instead of 50 cations the Contract of State Only well. the penitent Leontes of act five down well. But instead of 30 calculus Othelios in the first three acts, Deloy is far too controlled. For Leontes, appearance becomes reality, Everything he sessand hears should be a harsh accusation against Hermione. Her alleged infidelity signals chaos in the universe, and we should it just abserve his growing madness, we should feel its threat to the world, to ourselves. Actors playing the role should have remissionly to no creaze out the threat to the word, to dursenves. Actors paying the role smouth have permission to go crazy and become, as Leonites say, "a feather for each wind that blows," Deloy's Leonies, by contrast, is too rationally mad, Instead of having the lightness of a feather buffeted by winds, his line readings cling stubbornly to the structure of the sentences and are far too orderly for the chao-these these structures.

structure of the sentences and are far too orderly for the chaos they threaten to bring about.

There are other perplexities in the Old Globe's production. For reasons that do and don't make sense, director Jack O'Brien has reset the play in late-19th Century Russia. Inspiration for this shift may have come from Herrmione's line. spiration for this shift may have come from Hermione's line. The Emperor of Russia was my father. "But if this's the case, why should she say it! Wouldn't everyone here in Russia already know if "There are many dissumctions like this one. Act four begins with "Time, the Chorus" justifying the 16-year legar. Over the conturies, this figure has been played comically, as a sentle old fool with a scythe, as a "great sir"d monster of a fine thing the control of the contro as a senie oid too with a seyine, as a great size insussi-ingratitudes," and just about everything in between. At the Old Globe, O'Brien has Deloy/Leontes read the lines. Both Leontes and Time use the expression "wide gap." but other than Leontes and Time use the expression "wide gap," but other than that, having Leontes play an abstraction in between scene confuses more than it clarifies. What makes even less sense is Leontes walking past his daughter Perdita before he makes his speech, Visually the mover robs act five of some suspense, since now Leontes already knows his banished daughter is alive. In orareal, the production has trede to keep The Whiter's Takewthin a reasonably believable, human scale. But this is a tricky play—ris both more of Shakesonar's keep and counters glasty to do "it both more of Shakesonar's keep and counters glasty to do." a reasonanty neuevance, numan scale, but this is at they levil it is both one of Shakespeare's best and toughest plays to do— because of the unbelievable elements that inhabit it through-out. part, shics away from heights.
Relocating The Winter's Tale in Russia allows scenic designer Ralph Funicello and costume designer Robert Wojewodds to create a substrict environment where sad winter's tales are best told. Baked from stage right down to stage

black walls, hovering over which are two stately pillars and black walls, hovering over which are two stately pillars and favor darcoal grays and blacks and good sait. The costumes, gal's lighting, also contribute to the appropriately somber look of the first three easts. The design for acts four and five, however, is less successful, largely because what gave the initial set its geometrical elegance now intrudes into the bucolic landscape of a Russian summer. The play's canvas moves from lincare to painterly, but the set doens', Instead of a Bruspeldesque bady as do bold sames's lame musical contributions. badly as do Bob James's lame musical contributions.

Two actors stand out from the large cast. Kath

McGrath and Richard Easton get to play Paulina and Camillo, two of the most likeable characters in Shakespeare. Without ever sounding the least bit sanctimonious, each has an innate sense of right and wrong that defice political and even personal sloyalties. They move instinctively toward the true and the good, and McGrath and Easton keep those instincts sharp with deft performances. Deborah May's Hermione, what there is ofher, is handled nicely. Robert Phalen, Eric Liddell, Jonathan so or ner, a nandted nicely, Robert Phalen, Eric Liddell, Jonathan McMurtry, and especially Vaugha Armstrong, as Polizenes, lend valuable support. Former San Diegan Thom Sesma does a fine comic turn as Autolycus, the rogue someone once said was "Falstaff without the fat." And Hilary James plays Ferdita was "Falstaff without the fat." And Hilary James plays Perdita with a natural ease. —though why her "I was not much afeard" speech (in which Shakespeare makes a case for human equality regardless of social class) was cut is a puzzle, one of many in the Old Globe's very problematic production.

Letter to an Artist About to Burn His Paintings

What a daunting letter you've sent me! Despairing, hysterical, bitter, self-destructive, one enraged thought tumbling over another—it's an atmosphere that makes me feet right at home. Before burning all your paintings and taking that job in the mortgage office of the bank, however, please give me a chance to try to change your mind.

First of all, don't burn anything. Do you know what burning canvas and oil paint does to the atmosphere! If you're determined to destroy your life! swork, bury, don't burn. And have you ever looked as a mortgage contract! Do you ready think you can make your fluid, flaming the property of the property boyant, erratic, fanatic, creative mind concentrate on escrows?

But maybe you won't have to get to that point. I certainly hope so, because I think your artistic talent is too valuable to bury, either in the ground or in Wells Fargo, You have a superb sense of the shape and form and color and texture of a picture. Maybe most important of all and certainly an extremely rare quality in contemporary painting — you have heart. You really care about the human condition, and you have a spectacular technique for expressing that care

Nevertheless, you say, it's your technique, your heart, your talent, and you have the right to do with it what you want—use it, abuse it, throw it away, it's up to you alone. Sorry, you're wrong about that. You don't own this talent. It in't you private possession, like a car or a pair of shoes. It has been lent to you, put in your hands for safekeeping, so that you can do something with it to make the world a hit better. Who or what put it there, I'm not saying (and I'm not implying that I know!, But whatever the source, you have been chosen to have it, and it's your responsibility to use it, whether it makes you happy or not, whether it solves your personal problems or not, whether it pays the rent or not. This is true of all authentic artists, and of all people with authentic gifts of any kind.

For that matter, it's true of all of us, including those of us who have no artistic talent to drive us into extassis and conniptions. We all have our life, which has been lent to us for a brief period. Eventually we have to give it back. While we have it, it's our job to find out why

REVIEW

It has become customary for the La Jolla Chamber Music Society's SummerFest to include a program of orchestral works, as a supplement to the concerts of chamber music (which, naturally, make up the bulk of the festival). This means works for chamber orchestra - which, in its turn, means works of the 18th Century and (to a much lesser degree) the modern period. The concert gives the festival's artistic director, Heiichiro Ohyama, an opportunity to function as conductor, an activity that has been occupying a continually greater portion of this musician's career. It also continually greater portion of this musican's career, it also makes further use of the skills of the "rising stars," who compose the bulk of the chamber orchestra; and this year, in addition, the orchestral concert served as a showcase for the talents of violist Toby Hoffman and pianist David Golub, who performed as soloists with the ensemble.

who performed as soloists with the ensemble.

The program this summer was devoted almost entirely to Baroque music; solo concertos or concerti grossi by Vivaldi, Telemann, and J.S. Bach. The only exception was Paul Hindemith's Traucrinusik, a short piece for solo viola and string orchestra, with certain Baroque affinities. In formal terms, it is chiefly the transparent textures of the work that proclaim its Baroque heritage (above all the relationship between the soloist and the orchestra), as well as the rhythmic procedures of the two faster movements. The thematic material also has a distinctly Baroque flavor, including the actual quotation of a Bach chorale in the final section. The occasion for the work's composition, a London concert just after the death of England's King George V, is of small relevance to a listener more than half a century later, but the sombre, luminous quality of the writing, culminating in a spare, still atmosphere of serene resignation, makes the brief Trauermusik one of its composer's most attractive — albeit minor — compositions.

As for Toby Hoffman, the soloist, he plays very much like his brother Gary (who had appeared prominently in the two previous programs that week), given the inherent differences between the viola and the cello. Assured technical mastery; a profound inwardness of expression; dramatic intensity; a rich, dark, pointed, breathing, pulsating tone; a warmth and immediacy of emotional nication, unimpeded by superficial display — these continued on page 78

continued from page 77 are the characteristics of the Hoffman family string players. Toby Hoffman brought them not only to his deeply affecting performance of the Hindemith, but also to the Telemann G Major Viola Concerto that was his other contribution to the late-afternoon concert. Here we had the contribution to the late-anternoon concert. Here we had the authentic Baroque, rather than 20th-century nostalgia for it, and Hoffman's vitality, expressiveness, and sure command of the Baroque style brought out the full value of Telemann's pleasing and shapely musical imagination.

The other string concerto on the program was Vivaldi's F Major Concerto for Three Violins — also pleasing and shapely, but at the same time brilliant and exhilarating in a manner the more sobersided Telemann rarely attains: the difference, in essence, between Venice and Hamburg. The appropriately exhilarating soloists were drawn from the "rising stars" complement of the orchestra: Elisa Barston, and the Frautschi sisters, Jennifer and Laura (the third pair of siblings in SummerFest '92, the others being the Hoffmans and the Phillips brothers of the Orion String Quartet). The performance was notable for the excellent balances and interplay between the soloists and the orchestra, under Ohyama's sturdy, brisk direction.

There was a similar performance, characterized (suitably) by its relentless rhythmic drive, of the Bach Third Brandenburg Concerto, where Ohyama took his place among the violas and directed from there. Consider precise ensemble work and delightful energy of this performance, it may seem like idle carping to complain about the disposition of the musicians on stage. But the physical arrangement of the players, and the consequent spatial interaction of the musical lines, is a significant factor in this unusual score. The Third Brandenburg is scored for three violins, three violas, and three cellos, instrument

This is not a matter of abstract musicological analysis; it is an immediate, audible, palpable element of the piece, which is most effective when the structure of the orchestration is made clearly visible and audible on stage. The best way is to have a single player on each part (so that there are, in effect, nine soloists) spread across the stage in the appropriate groups of three. Ohyama, however, in an otherwise laudable desire to involve the entire chamber orchestra in the performance, doubled or tripled some of the parts and placed the musicians in unarticulated clumps that blurred or obscured much (though not all) of this compositional principle, both to the seeing and to the hearing. There is, of course, a great deal else in the Brandenburg No. 3, with all the rest zestfully and stylishly executed by the musicians; but it was disappointing not to be able to perceive the crucial three-three-three structure more vividly, especially since this could have been so easily

There were similar disappointments - along with similar virtues - in the work that concluded the chamber orchestra concert, the Bach Harpsichord Concerto No. 1, in D Minor. This very title (and its translation in the printed program: Bach, Piano Concerto No. 1 in D Minor) constitutes one of the fundamental problems. Bach never composed any concertos for the piano, an instrument that scarcely existed in the 1730s (when he put together the score of the D Minor Concerto); and whenever a piece imagined continued on next page continued from previous page for harpsichord is played on a modern grand piano, with its totally different sound and its radically expanded expressive resources, there are bound to be musical inconsistencies and Purists these days consider such piano performances of Bach harpsichord music to be anathema. More openminded listeners recognize that, although a piano performance necessarily loss non-negligible elements in the work as envisioned (or enauditioned) by the composer, it also gains a lot. Above all, the piano's ability to shape phrases through an extraordinary range of different loudnesses and articulations, and the modern instrument's far greater capacity to create the impression of a true legato, enable a sensitive, stylistically aware pianist to discover marvelous possibilities in the keyboard part that are quite beyond the technical capacities of the harpsichord. Certainly, Bach did not hear the music this way. But when a certainly, hach do not near the music this way, but when a planist of the quality of David Golub explores the keyboard writing unashamedly as a planist, using the same finger technique and (with the greatest taste and restraint) expressive devices he deploys for Brahms or Schubert, the purely musical experience can be ravishing — as indeed

Golub's performance of the Bach concerto proved to be.
Unfortunately, both the size of the orchestra behind him and the approach of conductor Ohyama to the music were geared very firmly to a performance of the solo part by a harpsichord. With the piano, the balances were disconcertingly skewed: the relatively enormous, blooming welling sonority of the grand piano juxtaposed against the lucid textures of the very small string orchestra. Furthermore, Golub's intuitive way of playing the music was as far removed from Ohyama's approach as his Steinway was from the sounds of the Baroque period. The pianist' agogic rhythmic freedom and nuanced dynamic shading were tactful, downsized, Bachified, but fully pianistic — and strikingly in evidence against the far stricter playing of the orchestra under Ohyama's energetic but rather rigid conducting. Some of the keyboard ornamentation. thoroughly idiomatic for the harpsichord but much less so for the piano (even when played with the point and color of Golub's performance), was particularly startling in contrast with the orchestra's quite different stylistic attitudes.

My point — I want to make clear — is not that either Golub's playing or Ohyama's conducting (or the orchestra's playing) was in any way defective in technique or musicianship. But for much of the concerto performance they belonged in two antithetical worlds, which even these artists' exemplary talents could not succeed in making fully compatible.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT'S LURKING IN YOUR FISH TACO?

> All fish taces are not created equal. Most are concacted with frazen pieces of fish buried in batter. (Sarry to ruin your appetite.) Now the good news. You —that's right, you—get to select the kind of fish for your toco. Choose tresh snapper, salmon, swordfish, ahi, shark, or shrimp.

Best of all, SENOR PESCA'S fish are expertly grilled, never fried. So you'll really taste the delicious flowr of the fish, as well as the cheese, salsa, and fresh flour tortilla.

Senor Pesca riso offers a full Mexican menu, including muy bueno burritos, tortas and combo plates. Plus fresty Margaritas and ice cold Mexican beer.

So stop worrying about what's lurking in your fish tace. Come to SENOR PESCA, chaose your fresh fish—and dive right in.

REVIEW

Because genuine quirkiness in a musician can be damned intriguing, it has become fashionable for otherwise bland artist marketers to appropriate its superficial manifestations as a hedge against anonymity. The caveat derived from these shams, when an artist tries to hard to make you think he; a wacky original, he probably isn't. True eccentricity isn't applied like makeup; it lives none's art. making it a alipper yet gof critics and a challenge for any but the most industrious listener.

Artists like Frank Zappa, Laurie Anderson, Jonathan Richman, Loudon Wainsvight ill, Tom Waits, Robert Fripp, and the conductive of the control of the cont few discerning fans. Guitarist Michael Hedges belongs in that group as well.

For the past decade, Hedges has been something of a double agent. He was one of the first artists signed to the "new age" Windham Hill label, and 1981's "Breakfast in the Field" age Windham Hill label, and 1981's 'Breakfast in the Field' established him as an acoustic guitarist with a stylistic flair. Iron-ically, as Hedges' renown grew, his association with Windham Hill probably limited his exposure to avantists by painting him, with only marginal accuracy, as one of that label's mer-chants of mellow.

Nevertheless, Hedges' five albums, which showcase not only his guitar skills but also his songwriting and singing talent, have sold well enough to sustain him. He, in turn, has continued on page 92

Accompanying himself on an electronic keyboard, Hedges limned some of the emotional, self-reflective territory that he claims is the new opu's domain. The piece seemed spiritually and tonally compatible with the material on Ioni Mitchell's dolorous Blue album.

Returning to guitar, Hedges performed the instrumental "herial Boundaries," whose symmetrical tangle of competing timbres and repeated melodic phrases in contrary motion suggested aguitar duet as written by Phillip Glass. Then, Hedges threw art a cure.

His protean covers of well-known rock tunes are nearly as important a part of Hedges' ocuver as his original works, and not all of them are to be taken seriously. A version of Fine Young Camibals' 'She Drives Me Caray,' in which Hedges had the audience do the "woo-woos," put a silly wobble on the proceedings, even though Hedges interspersed the verses with amore quitte interspersed.

proceedings, even though Hedges interspersed the verses with singly guitar jams.
As the crowd applauded at song's end, Hedges took his guitar off in one quick motion, bonking his forthead in the process. He kept feeling the spot, as if checking for damage.
No blood onight, 'he said, matter-of-feely looking at his fingers. 'I tend to rip these guitars off real fast. One right tim Minneapolis I also I have a coupled stitches taken.'
"I Carry Your Heart,' a song from Taprone with words by e.e. cummings, closed out Hedges first set on a note of tempered romance. Relatively basic in structure and elegant in execution.' I Carry Your Heart, is evidence that Hedges could give the singer-songwriters a scare if his muse didn't run in several directions at once.

several directions at once.

The second set had a few surprises. Two new songsthe apply named instrumental "literboogie" and the rock-sish words "Sister Soul" — went over well. But one of Hedges' endearing qualities is a klutziness that counterbalance, his genius, and some of the concert's more sublime moments would be mitigated with giggle-worthy incidents that the good-humored Hedges handled masterfully, life was dedicating one song to the long-defunct Old Time Cafe in Leucadis when minor disaster struck.

The audience laughed, and as he quickly replaced the string. Hedges kept them in stitches with an anecdote about a long-ago performance at Humphrey's. Apparently, he'd bro-ken a string in mid-performance but had left replacemen

"I was getting my shoes shined in a bus station in Menphis," Cash and at one point. The boy shining my shoes was moving pretty slow — he dish't do much poppin' like most of those shine boys do. When I told him that, he said to me! That's what's wrong with the world. Too much poppin' and not enough shimin. He was right, and here's a song about what the limit of the him of the shine and a song and a sough face with gentle anecdotes and a teddy bear demeanor. songs and a tough face with gentle anecototes and a tough sear-demeanor. The overwhelming character contradictions only strengthen Cash's appeal.

When he started strumming a mistuned guitar, Cash didn's complain or cuss, he handed the instrument to a roadele and told him to get it tready. Rather than waiting around, Cash laid into an instrument-less spoken-word number. Paged Odl Pale Tild like to do songl's words for the come, but I don't

"I'd like to do a song I wrote for the Vietnam veterans," is aid. "It's kind of a flag-waving, patriotic song, but I don't mind doing that once in a while."

The song, written in 1974 as the Vietnam War sputtered to an end, demonstrates an almost alien point of view. Pro-American and conservative, "Ragged Old Flag" might have gararered some expressive middle fingers from the crowd and Cash ung it somewhere the in San Diego Oounty. This being Oceanside, however, the crowd embraced the sentimental country rapsbach Old Glowy with open arms, then minutes latter, the grey-and-blue-haired audience was applauding with enthusiastic hands. enthusiastic hands

"We don't have,"
"We don't always support the government and the decisions they make." Cash announced after the song, "but we do like to go out and give something to the young people risking their lives for their country."

Cash finished his set in predictable fashion, performing his two biggest hits — "A Boy Named Sue" and "I Walk Line"— in succession. By this point in the show, Cash's deep, dark voice was beginning to waver. He couldn't deliver all the vocal variations in "A Boy Named Sue" and struggled through an uneven rendition of "I Walk the Line." But he didn't cheat his auditors, and he didn't he derhied matters cachestration or hurry through the song, "Good night," he said, his voice fluttering, "Good biess." voice fluttering, "God bless."

You're Single. We're Free. Why Wait?

Introducing Reader PHONE MATCHES: a Great Place to Meet Single People. You are provided with a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds. You also receive a free "voice mailbox"—a phone service that allows you to record and receive messages from any touch-tone phone.

NOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free Phone Matches ad, fill out the coupon below and mail or FAX it (233-7907) to us. (If faxing, please photocopy the coupon first and then fax it. The newsprint doesn't reproduce well.) The deadline for receiving free Phone Matches ads is Saturday at 7am. Free ads are 25 words or less and run for two weeks. No free ads will be accepted over the phone or in person. Ads with more than 25 words cost $1.20 per additional word. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number (to be printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You code for exclusive access to your responses.

You may also place a late ad until 6pm Tuesday by phone (235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by FAX (233-9907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word, Ads placed by phone or by FAX are with Visa or MasterCard only. Limit one Phone Matches ad per person per two-week period.

Matches ad per person per two-week period.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILBOX: After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction. Call 527-1966, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions.

Use your introduction to tell more about yourself than your ad does (see below for guidelines). Give your first name; but DON'T give your last name, phone number or address. Make sure you ask your callers to leave their names, phone numbers and the best times to call them. You can re-record your personal introduction once per 24-hour period. All introductions are reviewed by the Reader and go

Place your Reader roommate ad today and get responses tomorrow!

Even if it's 2 am on a Friday morning, you can pick up your phone and place your ad on our computer. You could get responses within 24 hours and have a roommate by the end of the weekend! For just $16/week you get the following:

A 25-word printed ad in the Reader which contains a general description of your roommate situation. You can now place your roommate ad 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, from any touch-tone phone by calling into the Reuder Roommate Line at 262-3066.

24-hour voice mailbox service which will allow you to leave a 60-second recorded message describing in detail your available roommate who the foot of looking for a commate who share your passions for Gole Porter tunes, popcorn at midnight and volleyball games at the beach, this is your opportunity to say so and more. We will also use this recording to write your 25-word printed ad.

Respondents who see your ad in the paper will call into the free response line, hear your detailed mailbox message and leave a message for you. At your convenience, you can call 262-9066 day or night, pick up your messages and choose whom to call back.

Get response before your ad appears! Soon after you record your mailbox message, it will be placed on the Roommate Hotline. Respondents who call the Roommate Hotline will have access to your recorded message before the Reader even hits the streets on Thursday. If you record your message on Monday, you could be interviewing potential roommates on Wednesday and collecting rent on Thursday.

To place your roommate ad, call 262-9066 day or night. For questions regarding Roommate ads call 235-8200, ext. 265 Pay with Visa, MasterCard, check or cash The cost is $16. However you pay, you must first call 262-9066 to place your ad.

We will use the first 25 words of your verbal message as your printed ad in the Reader.

State your neighborhood first.

We will use the first 25 words of minimum of the first 25 words of the first 2

We pursue an active outdoor lifestyle and you'll probably have more luck finding us at Mission Bay playing volleyball than at home in front of the TV. We like to entertain and our back yard is a great spot for barbecues. We're seeking a person who is conscien-tious, financially stable and a good

Respond to Roommate Ads Free

Yes, it's free to call ads that list the Roommate Response Line 262-9462. By using the 5-digit extension number included in the ad, you will bear the advertiser's recorded description of his or her roommate needs.
You can then leave a message if you like.

Get a jump on your competition. Hear the newest ads before they're printed.

Call the Roommate Hotline!

Soon after an advertiser places an ad, his or her spoken introduction goes on the Roommate Hotline. This means you can hear new roommate ads before they appear in the Reader. You can access the Hotline 24 hours, 7 days a week by calling 1-300-844-4663. The cost is just 494/minute and you can expected, 0 for 5 start.

But the good news doesn't stop - and you heard it from this space first - the San Diego Chargers will not lose this weekend! Yes, it's absolutely true, the Chargers will not lose this Sunday because they're not scheduled to play anyone, thereby significantly increasing their chances to skate through week VI in no worse shape than week V.

one, thereby significantly increasing their chances to slate through week VI in no worse shape than week V.

And it has Gest Better! From here on the scheduling goddeses have been exceedingly kind, San Diego pitted against the deeps of the NFL. Ros gut teams like loadsnapoils - hove; (Indianapoils apparently now a new inductee into the AC West.) On to Cleveland, Tampa Bys, the squalled LA. Radiers, Proents, and dosing against Gut aren victory and change the state of th sized pit, cigarette hung from thin lipped mouth, plastic up half-filled with flat beer, glazed brown eyes, a countenance of bovine stupidity, of pharmaceu-tical drug contentment, is to give new meaning to the term - doomed human race.

Which goes a long way in explaining why I went one for three last week.
