Nothing Could Be Further From The Truth

The Truth
Your article "Housing Commission Target of Salary-Cutting Study" ("City Lights," September 30) included some quotes from me pointing out the overpayment of city employees. I received some unexpected feedback that merits shadeattee. In the article, a study of the San Diego Housing Commi sion by Shannon Associate was cited. It called for a 13.5 percent reduction of lower-level salaries coupled with a 10.2 percent pay increase for higher-level bureaucrats. Because my comments on over payments to city employees were also cited in the story, some people called to object to my position favoring the shift-ing of compensation from the blue- and pink-collar jobs to the white-collar employees. Nothing could be further from the truth.

what the state is trying to ac-complish; it doesn't address the issue of getting the build-ing as a whole safe," adds Blaine Brassfield, assistant su-perintendent of property conservation with the City of San Francisco's Department of Public Works. Brassfield notes that San Francisco already had a parapet program in place prior to the 7.1 Loma Prieta earthquake, which hit the Bay Area in October 1989, "and that quake pointed out the fact that it wasn't enough." Even so, says Bronoin Rideout, a research engineer with the City of San Diego's Building Inspection Depart-

"We are coming into Zone

"Because of the concerns of building owners, we quizzed
the state on that, and they said it is not retroactive." Still,

Rideout concedes "this is not to say the state couldn't pass something again, to make us catch up, but that's just speculation."

Well, Zora, if you can avoid falling head first into the paint can, you're probably pretry safe. From diowning, anyway, You've got other troubles, though they're not quite so darmatic. One of your skin's major functions aside from keeping your insides in, the outside world out, and the cosmetics industry in business is body heat regulation. Once your pores are all clogged with silver paint, you won't be able to sweat and your circulatory system won't be able to radiate body heat. If your innards get unacceptably warm, you might suffer something akin to heastsroke. You'll probably begin to feet woosty from electricity embalances in your bloodstream, and your skin. Real silver is quite poisonous; if you'd settle for Navajo White, you might survive a little longer. All in all, the whole idea sounds pretty senseless to me, but I suspect that's part of its charm, right?

Say, Matt:

Who is responsible for discovering the gender of a hurricane? Better yet, who gets to name 'em?

— K. Gleeson-Duff, San Diego

Matt:

Who is it that names hurricanes, and how can I get one named after my wife?

— Jim, downtowr

If the hurricane namers haven't already gotten wind of your spouse's reputation and placed her name on the list, it's probably too late. There are six sets of hurricane names that are recycled continually (that is, each set is used once every six years), and it's unsuad for the lists to change. A name is dropped only when a storm is so big and destructive that it will be tilked about for years to come. Most recently. 'Highey' was reirred, as for years from one they'll have to think expert to the come they'll have to think afraid she won't be in the running.

Hurricane namers are members of the World Meteorological Organization, who also have such duties as keeping an eve on the concel layer and looking out for other global weather-related phenomena. They name the storm alphabetically, alternating womens' and men's names, the long-established, popular tradition of referring to ships, trains, assorted machinery, and any lig, mysterious, uncontrollable things as "she." But pressure from feminist groups convinced them to do more research, which revealed that every other hurricane is actually male and so should bear a man's name. That system was in place in 1979. The names chosen are ones popular monikers.

Why A $1000 House Payment Might Be Less Than $850 In Rent.

(Second In A Series On How To Get The Home You Want.)

To a lot of us. the idea of making house pay means you'll never order Filet Mignon in a restaurant again. While paying rent allows you to afford not only dinner, but even a tip.

Not so. Especially these days, with hor rates at their lowest in 20 years. In fact, owning a home is actu-ally more affordable than renting.

Consider these facts:
First of all, house payments are one of the few tax deductions left from your personal income. You can't de-duct credit card payments, car loan payments (unless it's part of your ousiness) or a personal loan. But you can deduct the interest on your monthly mortgage payments, which is often a considerable portion of your particular case.)

payment. For example: Let's say your household income is $45,000 a year and you've been paying $850 a month rent. With the tax ded tions of home owne ship, you could afford a housepayment of $1000 a month – including property taxes. Mello Roos and homeowners insurance. (Consult a tax advisor for you

Second, some of the fees you pay in obtaining your loan (particularly those known as "points") are also tax deductible. Third, home prices and mortgage interest rates are currently so low, you may be able to afford signif icantly more house these days.

In fact Presley alone offers 13 different models where the payments can be under $925 monthly (P&I only) with a 5% down payment.

Take, for instance, Glen Arbor

Here, you could pay as little as #70c a month OPED For a wonderful a 3-bedroom single-family home in inland North Country a seemic Discovery Hills, a planned by Month of the Seeming Month of the See owners insurance, your payment comes to $975. And that's with only 5% down on an ARM loan. There are also

30-year fixed rate loans beginning at $1225 a month - including taxes, Mello roos and insurance - with 5% down. out to your landlord (who still hasn't fixed the screen door) could just as I have trouble with that, I doesn't look quite so bad, because the patient does not go into arm falling and back speaming convolutions.

Modern, "modified" ECT is actually more dangerous for the patient's brain, fears Leonard Frank, a writer who survived a chilling battery of insulin coma and shock treatments that permanently destroyed his memory. His book, The History of Shock Treatment, has become a community. "What the psychiatrise don't tell you, says Frank," is that today they are forced to use more electricity, not less. Because of the muscle relaxant and single-hemisphere shocks, more electricity is required for a longer length of time, which is the single shock of the muscle electricity is required for a longer length of time.

At Bloomsbury's busy hub were the sisters Vanessa Bell and Virginia Woolf, art critic Clive Bell, artist Duncan Grant, and biographer Lytton Strachey, whose 1918 Eminent Victorians debunked, among other "eminents," Florence Nightingale.

Strachev began to visit Ottoline at her house In London, attending her Bedford Square Thursdays and later staying weeks at a time in her comfy country home. Garsington Manor, where peacocks shrieked in the trees. In town and country, Strachev found painter Henry and country, Strachey found painter Henry Lamb and portratifist Augustus John, with whom Ottoline conducted affairs and both of whom painted Ottoline. Strachey, an outra-geously campy homosexual at a time when sodomy was punishable by prison, clip-clopped along the paths of Garsington's formal gar-dens w. aring high-heeled slippers, earrings, and yellow cordurory shorts. Strachey fell in low with Lamb and did his best to wrest the temperature of the proposed of the propose gan what would be a quarter-century-long love affair. The two regularly wrote to one another and left behind almost 2500 letters. Ottoline apand left behind almost 2500 letters. Ottoline ap-parently never found Russell sexually rousing and complained mightily to him of the bad breath caused by his gum disease. Russell, in turn, complained to Ottoline of his need for sexual release and put up with her attempt to turn him Christian.

In the first years of the affair, Russell hoped to shed his own wife and convince Ottoline to give up the wretched Philip. But she wouldn't. Marriage, she believed, was forever, and Philip, whom Ottoline had encouraged and helped to enter Parliament, had become increasingly emotionally unsta-ble; he needed her. Russell eventually the he meedingst mousel aroundly acquired a divorce from his own wife and with Ottoline's permission courted a series of source, including T.S. Eliot's mad wife Vivien, who recked of the elier she unified War I. Stort mad wife Vivien, who recked of the elier she wife of the work of the elier she wife of the work of t and many more. Ottoline's guests, alas, bit the hand that fed them (sturdy, simple meals, with meat that required energetic chew-ing). Lytton Strachey continued to beg tations, then from Ottoline's com invitations, then from Ottoline's com-fortable Garsington chairs word excur-rilous descriptions of his hostess and fellow guests. Clive Bell and Virginia Woodf were no better. Woodf in her letters vari-tously described Ottoline as a lair, a spitfull bitch, "a rat-eaten ship" who dressed as "gar-ishly as a strumpet," in a letter to her share. Woodf wrote, "Garsington presents a seene of unparalled horror. Needless to say I am go-

Ottoline was not as well to do as her guests Ottoline was not as well to do as her guests enviously imagined. Her mother had left her nothing, and Philip failed as grandiosely at farming as at law. By the war's end the Morrells were desperate for money. At the same time Ottoline's health began to decline, and the many novels that satirized her began to appear in print. Sorrow heaped upon sorrow.

Eventually, the Morrells lost Garsington Manor and in greatly nighted circumstances.

Manor and in greatly pinched circumstance moved back to London. Ottoline was diagmoved back to London. Ottoline was diag-nosed as suffering cancer of the jaw, the surgery for which left her hideously disfigured. She had her beautiful hair cut and became careless with her appearance, a caricature of a self that had long inspired caricature. All her life Ottoline kept a journal. Entries in her last ten years reflect upon her progressive illness and unhappinness. About her former guests she confided to her journal. Throught them all my rich gifts. They pecked me with their sharp beaks."

Until Miranda Seymour's biography, Ottoline had been seen, principally, through the eyes of other biographic subjects. There was Michael Holroyd's life of Lytton Strachey in which Holroyd recreated the Ottoline of Stra chey's spiteful letters; there were the biographies and letters of Bloomsbury figures that did the same. Add to this the Ottoline of the Huxley and Lawrence novels and one is left with an empty-headed, sexually voracious mi-nor aristocrat who chased after writers and

A True Farce

The article in your last issue about the San Diego Housing Commission by Melinda Pow-tion ("City Lights," September 30). When the salary study was first initiated, the primary pur-pose was to investigate the salaries of the executives, some the opportunity to work closely with the consultant. There is no question in my mind that they used their influence to twist the study in of whom had manipulated in such a way that the lower-paid creases for themselves that employees would take the brunt, while they would escape nted to from $16,000.00 unscathed. It appears to be practically impossible to ob-tain an adequate and fair to $25,000.00 in a very short me span. We had warned the commission about having the con-sultant work with staff, but that was ignored, and staff had study, as long as executive staff is permitted considerable input into the proceedings

This study is so completely flawed, it should be aban-doned entirely. When it was ented to the commiss the first time in early Au gust of 1993, the omi ere so obvious that Chair Golding requested additional information, especially a com-parison with other housing

When this was presented for the second time on September 20, 1993, the required comparison again had not been made. The survey compared apples and orange and was flawed in many other ways by stating incorrect salary data, salaries of agencies other than housing agencies, etc. It was presented in such a com-plicated fashion that no one could understand it without considerable effort, least of all the commissioners. Just the same, they voted to forward it

In itself, that is not surpris-ing, because the commission-ers, with the exception of Councilman Stevens, have yet to question a single proposal staff has made. If staff should propose that the commission-ers jump off the Coronado bridge, they would most likely approve it and line up like lemmings the next morning to take their turn. Staff also has taken advantage of the fact that we have a new mayor who unfortunately is not familiar with the questions about the executive salaries that arose earlier. When a previous, equally inadequate consultant. I decided to make my own survey. The result was startling. By comparing cities of approximately the same size of approximately the same size as San Diego, and disregarding the executive director. I found the executive director, I found that on average the top executives in San Diego were overpaid by about $14,000.00 per annum. This was a few years ago, and before the abovementioned enormous increases took place. There is no reason to assume that things have changed, except that the gap now might be that the gap now hight be even greater.

The present executive di-rector who was appointed to clean house to enable the new, tor to get a fresh start, has done no such thing. Instead of scaling down, as another con sultant had suggested, he has expanded the staff even further. The former director's ther. The former director's claim to fame was that he built a giant bureaucracy, over-staffed and overpaid. And that has not changed under the new management. Worst of all, the commis sion does a very poor job in fulfilling its primary mission, which is supposedly to assist persons to 50% of the median income ($43,900.00 for a family of four or less). Instead, they get involved in projects that set aside apartments at rents of about $650.00 and $800.00 approximately (for one- and two-bedroom apart-ments, respectively) as "restricted units," when a look at the ads in this publication will less costly rentals available all over the city, a true farce! They also get involved in deals that result in losses of better purposes. It is a total waste of taxpayers' hardearned money. If ever a change for the better is to occur, the following needs to be done: the city council must take a clear stand in support of af-fordable housing; a new direc-tor must be found who cares about his clients and who has millions that could be used for about his clients and who has a background in housing that the current director does not appear to have. The latter should be returned to his job at the city together with his chief financial officer, and a new Housing Commission must be established that is able to act as a monitor of staff, in-stead as merely a rubber stamp.

To provide adequate housing for people should be in all our enlightened self-interest, because the absence of it is a great catalyst for crime and may have other serious social consequences.

Remember, You

Can't Kill Him In his review of the so-called "Art Rebate," Jonathan Saville raises some disturbing ques-tions about the role of contemporary art in America ("The Art of Rip-Off, NEA Style," October 7). Consider the following

Consider the following thought experiment: Imagine that Christ is alive today. Now imagine that you are He. Naturally, with your abundant talent, you, Christ, are a controversal performance arist. And you know what your mission is. The question arises: NEA funding is available for performance artists, and if you get some, you'll be able to reach lots more people with your message.

Would you take the money? I think you would. (I money? I think you would. (I think He would.) Now try another experi-ment: Imagine you're an American taxpayer. You just heard on the news that some heard on the news that some crazy performance artist is giv-ing away your hard-earned tax dollars to poor people, and He dollars to poor people, and He subscription artists. The subscription arises: should you punish this so-called "artist" by taking away His funding: Remember, you can't kill Him. This is A merica. What would are the subscription of the Richard Gleave. took his plane to the airport, climbed inside, and a few exhilarating minutes later was 3000 feet high, tearing through a hole in the clouds at 200 miles an hour. The Federal Aviation Administration classifies the Lancair as an "experimental aircraft," a term which applies to thousands of airplanes currently flying in the United States. "In this country you can't buy new commercial small planes [for under $50,006] anymore says Wheeler North, president of the San Diego chapter of the Experimenta Aircraft Association (EAA). "Cessna Aircraft Association (EAA). "Cessna and Piper have basically quit production because of liability proposed to the problem. The word "experimental" may be enough to scare off the lay person, but going the properties of the lay person that the properties of the lay person that the properties of the p

In fact, "experimental" is the FAA's catch-all term for anything that doesn't come off an assembly line, and covers a wide range of craft; planes of home-built design and construction; planes, built design and construction; built design and the plane and take it from there; modified kitplanes, such as Hogan's Lancair or North's Kitfox, that come in pieces to be assembled. Like commer experimental aircraft must pass FAA inspection to receive an airworthin certificate, and experimental pilots must earn a private pilot's license. The 500-member local chapter of the FAA (membership nationwide is over 200,000) has two hangars at Brown Field, just south of the control Brown Field, just south of the control tower. On any given Saturday, you can find aviation enthusiasts like North. Hogan, Earl Makela, and Lary Rothrock hanging out, talking shop, maybe going for an occasional spin in their aircraft. North's yellow-and-white, two-man Kitton has a 32-foot wingspan and a top speed of 95 mph. "It took seven months to build, but that's because I'm a fanatic," save North seven months to build, but that's because I'm a familic." says North. Love Stinks: Two Cool New Plays by Karin Williams Karin Williams's Australia, pro-duced last year at the Fritz Theater, duced last year at the Fritz Theater's was an idlosyneratic look at the day youth — a generation, according to the play, more lost than Scott Fitzgerald's. Australia identified Williams as a playwright with promise. Her latest one-acts, Room and Susan, Katiron, and Ilil. hold that promise in abeyance. Both put women in situations where choices are almost non-existent, and where the least amount of the latest of the least amount of the least amount on the least amount of the least a are almost non-existent, and where the lesser among evils is evil nonetheless. Room, a slight, one-note one-act, turns the need to choose a roommate into a metaphor for choosing a mate. For Claudia (Kristin Prewitt), men are either sex-starved, insensitive babies (Britan Bevell effective as a randy ditz) or closet Satan-worrandy ditz) or closet Satan-wor-shippers (Ed Vogel far too dull and disengaged as three apartment seekers). Room has all the earmarks of a homework assignment for ity and depth of Australia. There's good news, though. The one-acts are playing at the new Fritz Theater on Third Avenue (the next block west of the Hahn Cosmopolitan Theatre), and the space, like Williams's writing, also shows promise of good things to come. Sw Sweet & Hot: The Songs of everyone knows when or how long to pause after Hughe's hilairous one-liners. The production, however, is a lively lampoon that reds in its un-subtleties. Sipes and Wire are terrific, their biplay a story within foutside, actually the story. Andrea Zaio's Vicki, an ingenue Andrea Zanes S Vicki, an ingenue with experience, is also great fun. Kim Michaels, Belinda Loper, and the always-dependable Darlene Cleary — as Rod the carpet king, Garnet McClit, and Chief Al Dente — are a hoot playing various emanations of maleness driven to discover "what really happened that fateful night in the salad bar."

Sade drew heavily on songs from her latest LP, Love Deluxe, piling the earlier hits —
"Smooth Operator," "Your Love Is King," "Sweetest Taboo," and "Stronger Than Pride" — at the beginning of the show. But if doesn't much Pride" — at the beginning of the show. But it doesn't much there is in artifice, and so Sade's imperfections actually enced her performance. You found yourself pulling for her dances were slightly awkward too: graceful, simple, and child-like, the bodily equivalent of humming. Between songs, her speech was ungainly as well, at-tractively dusky but betraying an insecure cockney accent. It made her seem humble, as far from sophisticated as the char-acter in "Smooth Operator" who longs for the diamond life but instead gets let down by a matter what order the songs are in, since Sade's sensibility is all of a piece. She deals in creating atmosphere, locking the audience into a groove, then letting their minds wander down the ridors of her art. Her music corridors of her art. Her music mingles the engaging musi-cianship of light jazz with salsa and regae beats, then adds a pop sensibility worthy of Paul McCartney. Much of Sade's music is Much of Sade's music is written by her partner, Stuart Matthewman, but Sade weaves her own spell throughout, play-ing up the most seductive aspects of romance, glamour, and ideal love. In Sade's world. love is a) stronger than pride; b) deeper than the ocean; and c) higher than the Empire - not to mention s than cherry pie; bigger than Victoria Lake; like honey, victoria Lake; like honey, blood, and oxygen... "Is it a crime?" she asked seductively, "that I want you ... and I want you to want me too?" — maybe the most universal sentiment ever expressed in popular mu-sic. And uttered, as it was, by a beautiful woman, it carried a gentle pathos impossible to re-sist. Nothing remotely heavy or thought-provoking about it, but it sure went down smooth.

Sade's smoky voice wasn't ways sure of itself on Sunday. She hit a few rotten notes, and she had a strange trick of in-tentionally moving her head away from the microphone during long notes, so that they faded in and out. But there is just as much beauty in truth as cad in Key Largo. Sade is all style and image, but since she makes no attempt to hide it, one sympathizes entirely with her.

Of course, the silken, love soaked world of Sade has almost no point in common with reality. That is a great part of its charm. The rest come from the easy trance Sade's mu sing leaves one's mind free to roam. As night thickened round the Open Air Theatre, it seemed as if the audience were floating off into a dream, a frothy vision of palm trees, parrots, and beautiful blue jungl of velvet cushions, magent liqueurs, cool sunsets; and lov like a blanket, encircling it all, kee a blanket, encircling it all, keeping us temporarily safe from fortune's slings and ar-rows. The bitter blow of life itself could not penetrate the dreamy aura that Sade drew,

When the lights came up, an hour and a half after the show began, it was as if the au-dience had to call their souls back from some far-off planet before they could begin to drive home on this one. But first we gave Sade a standing ovation. Beauty, after all, is truth, and intelligence, and in the eye of the beholder.... It is also, we are told, its own reward. But there's never any harm in rewarding

Since the group was weaned on heresies — minimalism, rock, 'free' jazz, and 'world beat' — it is hardly an affront that a large share of their commissioned and appropriated repertoire reflects not always progressed time. Overworked, underplayed, classy cutie. Good figure, lots of personality, independent baby boomer (high end), likes a man confident, healthy, outgoing, handsome, seasoned, fun.

It's said that all toil and no mirth make fill an ininteresting person of the feminic conder. Or something like that, It's not true of this fill, however, Look on page 136.

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

n 1914, a relatively unknown airplane builder named Glenn Martin used the skies over North Island to demonstrate the versatility of his new tractor plane. Ninetypound "Tiny" Broadwick, strapped into a parachute designed by her husband, leaped out of a Martin T.T. biplane into aviation history. It was the first parachute jump in San Diego. Within the year, the U.S. Army had bought 17 Model T.T.s from Martin; over the next several years, pilots were trained and then organized into the first Aero Squadron. The squadron later became the first flying unit from America to reach France during Word War I.

Although this photo is identified as a Martin T.T., circa 1914, the model or the year may be in doubt; other accounts of the time describe the T.T.s as having "skid" landing gear and side-by-side cockpits. In any event, the planes were an early success, due in part to the inclusion of a feature designed by another "Glenn": the Martin's engines were furnished by another North Island airplane maker, legendary Glenn Curtiss.

1-900-844-6282

To respond to Reader Phone Matches™ ads, call 1–900–844–MATCH (844-6282) any time, 24 hours

If you choose an ad from the Phone Matches™ column, use the 5-digit mailbox number printed in the ad to listen to the person's introduction and leave a response. (An advertiser may not have recorded an introduction by the time you call. If not, you can still leave a message in his or her mailbox.) The date at the end of the ad is the last day to reply to the mailbox. Or you can "browse" through all the introductions and respond to the ones that suit you.

The charge for using Pnone Matches^{rst} will appear on your phone bill under "DATING." If you have any questions, call 235-8200, x268.

Readers who share a morbid fascination for disgrace Readers who share a morbid fascination for disgrace and humiliation will long argue about the precise defining moment of Monday's 35-7 debade. Was it simply the score, or Houston's 7 turnovers (1 turnover for every 2 possessions), or the pulling of inept, allion-dollar-a-year starting quarterback Warren Moon one more timed We can debate but, for me, the moment of crystalization came late in the game—when the Otlers were penalized for having 12 men on the field. Near plays—when the Otlers were penalized for having 12 men on the field. Near plays—when the Otlers were penalized for having 12 men on the field. Oilers forced to call a time-out because they had 13 men on the field.

Point, set and match. Point, set and match.

The owner, Bud Adams, has one of the highest payrolls in the NFL ($41 million). He will have to carve at least $10 million out of that wad when ent year's slaary cap kicks in, which means dropping a lot of talent into the gutter when this season ends. Which is shy Adams has said, "This year, the Super Boul or eise." It is a sentiment that has driven everyone on or near the team crazy with job panic.

Adding to the job fear, Adams, without talking to head coach lack Pardee, hires Buddy "I want your job" Ryan as defensive coordinator, Ryan, a week on the job, publicly ridicules Houston's offense, thereby dividing team members into pro- and anti-Ryan factions.

Button, button, who's going to have a job next year?

members into pro- and anti-Ryan factions.

Button, button, who's going to have a job next year?

With the head coach position in play, the knives are out. Even Houston's coach of yesteryear, 70-year-old Bum Phillips, now sitting in the Oilers' media booth doing game-day radio, is mentioned as a possible head coach replacement. Pardee has been given public notice: no Super Book, no job; half his staff is scheming for his job, every player knows they're going to cut yaryoll by at least 25% next year, no one's job is safe, and the team is 1-and-4.

Blood is in the water.

It's been a long, strange ride. Houston has reached the playoffs for the last six years, the longest current streak in the NFL.

Oustreback Watern Moon wom the 1992, AFC possing title and Quarterback Warren Moon won the 1992. AFC passing title and eight offensive players have made the Pro Bowl. So far this season the offense has scored seven touchdowns over five games, a truly pathetic number, and leads the NFL with an

There are six Pro Bowl players on defense. Although a lot of people don't like Buddy Ryan, and I'm one of them, he's a superb defensive coach, hired on to guide a defensive unit that was already ranked third in the league. They are

Up ahead the road runs downhill for quite awhile.
Houston plays New England (away), Cincinnati (home), Seattle (home), Cincinnati (away), Cleveland (road), Pittsburgh (away), Atlanta (home) and Cleveland (home). The Oilers could win seven of Atlanta (nome) and Cleveland (nome). The Olier's could win seven of those games, and it wouldn't be absolutely impossible for them to win them all. By the second week of December they could be 8-and-5 with Pittsburgh, the Niners and the Jets left to play. Go two out of three and you're 10-and-6 with a solid shot at a wild card.

Solusion at a wild call.

If the course, for all that to happen, everything has to go just right. And that's the one dependable bet you should always lay when you can find it: always take the "Everything Won't Go Just Right" proposition; your children and creditors will be most grateful. So, we bid adios to the Oilers in 1993. Another couple of weeks and we may well be doing the same for the Chargers
