School administrators de clined to comment on the case, citing reasons of confidential-ity. According to police records, they called juvenile authorities

dents.

The counselor says he's also worried about how easy it is for someone to wind up in juvenile hall. "What does it take to do four days in juvenile detention? Obviously it doesn't take a damn thing. The only time I would involve juvenile hall is if I had a gun situation, or had a serious knife assault, or something that was really life-threatening. That is a serious enough situation to call in the authorities."

But the San Diego Unified School District's Rascon, who has no specific knowledge of Peter's case, stands by the dis-trict's policy of sending kids to juvenile hall whenever a vio-hent incident occurs on school grounds. In his opinion, the policy has reduced the number of repeat offenders. "I think that's a message that's getting out, and why we are on a de-

This is probably the only medical field where nothing less than perfection is usually accepted. If you have to have your gall bladder out, you have to have it out and that's it. People don't question if the sea's not exactly perfect. But people come in here question if the sea's not exactly perfect. But people come in here less than that, they're unhappy. So it's up to us to determine if we can meet their expectations, or whether their expectations are even realistic. Having been through plastic surgery myself, it know that and of us, there's some level that you can't talk to." Silts had her breasts "augmented" when she was in her soly 20. missed that phase of the liposuction process experienced by Madine (not the real name). On the morning of her surgery, Saltz, clad in a tight green surgical top and pants, seemed somehow brisker, tougher, than she had been the first time I interviewed her. Nadine looked tense. She was 32 years old, a native San Diegan. She wore no make-up; very fair skin and very dark eyes, brows, and hair made her look a bit like a madonna. At dark eyes, brows, and rair made net rook a of time a maddoma. At first impression, she seemed too petite to be undergoing this procedure. But when, at Saltz's request, she climbed upon a stool and hoisted her cotton robe up around her breasts, the voluptiousness of her naked middle region was revealed.

"She has what most women have," Saltz commented. "A little extra. You can almost see the outlines of it." Saltz started tracing those outlines, marking her patient's flesh with a purple pen. She circled a gentle mound surrounding Nadine's navel, then circumscribed an area a few inches above that. She sketched what looked like an area a few inches above that. She sketched what looked like guat amoeba, on the woman souter highs, setending partly into each battock. To illustrate where she would make her incisions, Saltz swiftly made a dozen or so purple dots, most situated within the creamy white area of Nadine's body revealing the shape of her very brief bikini bottom. "We like to get at [each area to be vacuumed] from two angles. That helps keep it smooth," Saltz

From the target zones, Saltz predicted she would extract a total of 1200cc, just a little more than a quart of fat. That's only two or three pounds. But those pounds would be composed of some other most tencious cells in Nadines body. If the future Nadine were to gain weight, she would still be able to store fat in the lipouactioned areas, according to Saltz, "because we're leaving some fat cells there." But she would gain fat everywhere che in the proportionally me changing her proportions. LOWEST PRICE GUARANTEE ...

Now let's get this straight. If you go to DOW, GOOD GUYS, SILO or CIRCUIT CITY, they all carry almost identical equipment. Each claims to have the lowest price. Here's how it works - you will be paying a "high" price unless you have time to waste shopping everywhere else. They require you to document a lower price then they bear it by $1.00. Worst of all is the quality of the merchandise. A "so-called" low price on mediocre components is NOT a good value.

At Sound Company, we offer our customers low prices all the time - whether they ask for it or not. Now for the best part: we only carry the "A-stuff" - the components the salesmen at other stores want to own. Now we didn't say more money – just better quality sound. None of the other stores carries B&W, McINTOSH, NAD, PARADIGM, PROTON, NAKAMICHI, B&O, SUMO, DEFINITIVE TECHNOLOGY, KIMBERKABLE, BARCO, VIDIKRON, ETC.

In a society where words and so overemphasized, doe praising large women as sex objects really help the situation? As Ken Mayer explains it, his "personal, initizate attraction" to large women does not qualify as appearance. I have a very relaxed, every broad base. But a woman has to have a certain general size. Like, I'm attracted to you, but you don't fit my stereotype. I mean, you are bigger than average — "I'm just under 62" — "Dut you don't fit my extreotype. Ralph Ernst, University of California at Davis Cooperative Estension poultry expert, has worked with turkeys since 1960. In what Ernst spoke of as the "old days," the '60b, breeders had not yet perfected methods of storage for turkey aperm, (Now the sperm, can be stored for as long as 24 hours and retain mollify!) "Back then, "said Ernst, the male would be milked for his sperm and then the sperm would be rushed to the hen. One person would sit down and put the head of the hen between his legs and the oviduct and pop it up. The other person, the actual inseminator, would then take a slender four-inch tube filled with semen, insert it into the hen, and blow in the semen. It was hard work. These turkeys were big. But they didn't fight much. They get used to being handled." How old does a hen have to be before she can be incomined.

but it's not a good idea. If they are not big enough to lay eggs, you are likely to have a prolapse of the oviduct and the eggs are too small. Also, if you start them too soon, they end up by not laying as many eggs in a cycle. So, you loos at the other end. In the old strains you waited until the hen was $6,37 weeks old. cording to clinical psychologist Dr. Edith Fiore, who has dealt this very question, the decision to integrate is not a good one. Dr. Fiore does not refer to these personalities as "alters" but as "entities," with the dif-ference that, rather than being innate to the patient, they are foreign and should go. And they can. They must, if the pa-tients are once again to beto dominate a living person, and they do less than good. So they must go. As wonderful new books begin to appear which make us realize that there is another world that we cannot see, we have to learn to deal with realities we may have Fiore spells out the ten most Fiore spells out the ten most common symptoms of earth-bound spirit possession in her book The Unquiet Dead, avail-able at libraries if not in book-stores. She has treated thou-sands of MPD patients successfully and shows how to deal with realities we may have never before suspected even existed. Betty l. Eadie's Em-braced by the Light, now 24 weeks on the New York Times do the depossession at home. She does not insist that one believe in departed spirits for her technique to work, but skepticism about their abiliweeks on the New York Times nonfiction best-seller list, should make that clear. And why not, when millions of people have shared many ele-ments of the near-death ex-perience that she reports! For interested readers, Dr. ties -- and evasiveness -- may prolong the problem. The Mingsi Museum's current exhibit of the work of West Coast American designer carfatmen is of major importance, both instortically and asherbically, it is day quite oversion or view, as well as in the numerous distinct artistic personalities revealed by those objects. A rapid and superficial survey of the post of objects of the control of the cont

the natural material he works with, he seeks simplicity and honesty in design, and he does all the work with his own hands (cutting, shaping, joining, sand-ing, and finishing — his ing, and finishing — his young assistants are given only subsidiary and preliminary tasks). Nevertheless, you would never mistake a Maloof chair for one by Gustav Stickley or the early Frank Lloyd Wright. His taste, his personality, and his soul, as revealed in his furniture, are thoroughly distinctive.

qualities. Unlike most Crafts-man or Mission chairs, which tend to be stiff, upright, and uncompromisingly rectilinear, this rocking chair is extraordi-narily comfortable. A Stickley chair may be made comfort able with cushions, and Maloof does offer his furniture with does offer his furniture with upholstered backs and seats, if required, but this rocking chair is so shaped that no cushioning is necessary. The seat, made of several pieces joined with dowels and glue and then meticulously sculpted with a rasp, fits the backside perfectly,

Meanwhile, the artist brings the structure of the chair to our attention with the utmost lucidity (as opposed, for example, to a Louis XV chair, in which all structural articulations are concealed under paint, moulding, or upholstery, and the entire article of furniture seems — deceptively — to be made of a single piece of wood). Every joint, however smooth and curvilinear, is clearly visi-ble, emphasized by contrasted shades and grains of wood and by ebony pegs covering the steel screws. To achieve the elon-

Maybe more. The chairs by Frank Gehry belong to a different world, aes-thetically and in terms of use. Gehry's architecture has noth-ing to do with natural materials, individual craftsmanship, or the normal needs of the human body and psyche; his buildings are abstract sculptural forms creating their effects by shock-ing, disconcerting, confusing, and (sometimes) dazzling the viewer's sensibilities. A rever-ence for tradition is not one of their hallmarks; their aim, in their hallmarks, their aim, in fact, is to create a fresh and stimulating environment by undermining all traditional expectations. including those relating to spatial perception, harmonious proportion, and intelligibility.

Given these precispositions, it is no wonder that his chairs are so unlike those of Sam Maloof. They are made of thin, two-inch-wide, bent plywood straps, interwoven to form the owo-inch-wide, bent plywood straps, interwoven to form the seat, and in parallel vertical ar-rays to form the back, the sides, and (in the armchair) the arms. A faint, delicate maple grain re-mains in the slick, blond surface of these straps, but we feel our-selves very far from the natural wood out of which, ultimately, they were made.

The spacing, weaving, and bending have a formal, me-with a drawer, a sloping leaf on wooden hinges (with a broad prop to hold up the sheet mu-sic or book), and a mechanism on the upright of the pedestal to raise, lower, and tilt the upper members. Not a single square inch of this piece of fur-niture is routine, lifeless, or purely utilitarian; the imagina-tion and the hand of the tion and the hand of the designer-craftsman are every-where visible. At the top, the lines of the beautifully joined boards — as well as the rows of ebony pegs — emphasize the structure and movement of the peeces. Every joint and supposing piece, including the work of the peeces with the position of the peeces with the peeces in the peeces peeces in the peeces with the peeces with the peeces peeces and the peeces with the peec curved, poised legs of the pedestal add to the visual excitement with their suggestion of organic forms, such as ex-posed eucalyptus roots. But even the support arm under the sloped leaf, where it would sloped leaf, where it would carcely ever be seen, is a beau-tifully designed shape, of vigorous multiple curvature and intuitively perfect propor-tions. To own, contemplate, and use such a work of "ap-plied" art must give as much joy, of its own kind, as owning and contemplating a sculpture by Brancusi or Henry Moore.

to speak — and even, amid Lu-cas's very funny/serious collage of assumptions overturned, that when Rachel recounts her bizarre escapades to a psychia-trist, she just might be verreacting" to them. To illustrate the difference between dream worlds and real ones, previous scenic designs for Reckless have used Magritteish, baby blue sky backdrops (Loy Arcenas's for the 1988 New York revival) or cloudlike sheets and mirrors (Cliff through the traums of birth, it's a howl, both literally and Faulkner's for the South Coast Rep's 1985 staging). If anything, these designs verged on the figuratively. Ron Choularton plays Lloyd Bophtolophti, a hu-man chameleon subject to overexplanatory. One draw-back of the Fritz Theater's change by the minute. Like Rachel, Lloyd could be "anyotherwise fine production of Reckless is that Daniel Morris's hody," and Choularton makes his many emanations — from spare set and Douglas Gabrielle's lighting underex-plain. They make no distinction asintille optimism to terminal depression — believable. Michele Caputo, as Pooty, John Seed. as gib game-show host to Seed. as gib game-show host to Carroll also contribute each in multiple roles. And though there are times when her character's fear of overreacting it active for a coveracting in acceptable as Rachel, the woman who, on a snowy Christmas Eve, finds herself evicted from a dream of security and forced and the contribution of the between night- and day-mares. For a play in which change is fluid, instantaneous (practically every character has been at least two or more people by the end of act two), the changes of scene and locale should be fluid as well. They aren't. All this was a reminder that technology has changed not just each with the way people act with the word. Rock music used to be an escape from the ghetto for undoutsated mem. So we will be a supposed to be an escape from the ghetto for undoutsated mem. So we will be well as the word of technology has complicated things.

ogy has complicated things. Performers, like members of Depeche Mode (not to men-tion Public Enemy), must now know about everything (espectally such things as computers and interior design except music. No doubt DM's synth players. Alan Wilder, Andy Fletcher, and (primary songwirter) Martin Gore could easily write a software program specifying the bass line for "Route 66," but whether they can play guitar or even piano with the warmth and passion one expects from rock 'n' roll is another question entirely. Ludsly for them, they aren't expected to deliver that pas-aton, but the seriously unexy-sings over backing tapes, he has to be hotter than luly to make up for the chill factor—or edse, like Einsturzeed Neubauten's Blita Bargeld, be so cold as to the listener. Calana in neither. He's just dull. He does have a sonorous bass voice (unexsonorous bass voice (unex-pected, coming out of such a skinny and chinless body), and he uses it effectively, tolling out his earnest, rhyming verses about God's silence with nary a smile. But he undercuts it with his ridiculous, frantic disco dancing. In recent interviews, DM to produce Songs of Faith and Devotion (kind of like asking Sam Peckinpah to direct Home Alone 3). You can understand Gahan's impulse though: waking up one day at age 30 and thinking, "Help! I'm sick of being a Euroweenie." Alas, he is what he is To demy. what he is. To den it would be (com-

Luckily, the other members weren't members weren't under any illusions about what they do well; they scotched the grunge idea right at the start. According to Alan Wilder, when Depeche plays production magic, "We sound like ... a bad pub-rock band." As it is, dependent on processed computer sequences, Depeche gets away with its simplistic pomposity by being incredibly tuneful. At the Sports Arena, however, the band concern

Clarke), "Route 66," and "People Are People" — in other words, the hits.
However, the first encore,
"Personal lesus," which injects
a modified Bo Diddley beat into the band's patented anti-religious stance, was a best-case constrio of whet Descele scenario of what Depeche Mode can do when it allows itself a tune, a guitar, and a lighter-hearted, human ap-proach. But that's an increasingly rare occurrence in its repertoire. The second en-core, "Everything Counts," was much appreciated by the pa-tient crowd (and by me; I have tient crowd (and by me, I have a secret fondness for that song, because for years I thought its lyrics went grabbing hands? yapple with dams). Earlier, for the 13th song of the evening, a real drum set had been rolled out. (Gore had already been gooding around with a read guitar on some songs, a real guitar on some songs, the second of the second with a ready been gooding around with a read guitar on some songs, the second of the second with he audience was distinctly un-enthusiastic. In fact, as Wilder enthusiastic. In fact, as Wilder played along to the song, they sat down. True, the tempo was slower, but the real thing sounded a lot better to me. Of course, I wasn't brought up on Sega Genesis games, so what do I know!

The Joy Luck Club — Part cultural ep part soap opera, from the Amy Tan best-seller on Chinese-American family life. There are a couple of sizable stumbing blocks in the movie. The first is the volur 500d¹⁷; the cross-culturally blundering An-op Gance ("You know, Linds, all this needs is a little toy sauce"; the blubbery adoles-cent husband, in an Old Word arranged marriage, with a beetle-sized mole, sprout-ing a wiry hair, on his back; others. The largeness of scope, both in the size of the population and the extent of the time-span, is in the accepted soap-opera tradition, too. Directed by Wayne Wang, 1990.

is that the menu changes constantly and the nightly specials are always a wonderful surprise. Being conservative has its place, as does playing it safe, but soon Liaison should be able to cut the umbilical cord from the French Side and stand proudly on its own. Still, Liaison is a good setting for a romantic evening, and you will not be disappointed with the menu already in place.

For those who are search-ing for a good bargain cafe, I would live to recommend a family Japanese restaurant named Arigato (which means 'thank you' in Japanese) lo-cated right off Lake Murray

Drive in La Mesa, I was there the other night and was aston-ished by the brisk business. The place is run by a young man named Ionathan Hom who takes the orders and sees that they are prepared in rapid fash-ion. The top price for any item is $6.95, but most combination is 8-99.5, but most combination specials served with rice, soup, salad, and pickles cost about $4.50. We had the tempura combination with shrimp and very sound that the same shadow of the same shadow of Arigato proves that if you serve a fresh, tasty, low-cost serve a fresh, tasty, low-cost item, the public will find its way to your door. The physical plant of Arigato is minimalist — just a few tables in an unadorned room. Nevertheless, the food comes out hot, steamy, and de-licious. I took home the katsu-don ($3.25), which conkatsu-don ($3.25), which con-sists of egg over rice with vegetables and slivers of pork. We need more of these low-cost family restaurants. ■

The biggest challenge for me is all the food. I work in a hospital, and for about six weeks starting with Thankagiving, there is always food around. Many of the patients or their families bring in presents that are often food. Of course, all the family over tooethers are just an major holidays come around too soon. If it were up to me I'd have Christmas every four years — Leap Christmas. I have two kids though, so that's impossible. There's just too that are often food. Of course, all the family get-togethers are just an orgy of food. I have actually tried praying to stop eating too much on Thanksgiving. I usually carve the turkey, and that's when the trouble much advertising everywhere to iso-late them from it. A few years ago, we told my husband's set of relawe told my husband's set of rela-tives we were going to my relatives, and we told my relatives we were going to his relatives. Then we packed a super pictic lunch and went to Balboa Park. That was one of the most relaxing holidays I've ever hed.

DAVE VERFUSS

I'm a steel sculptor, and every year rather than going hog wild with everyone I know. I make one special piece for somebody. My family knows by now not to espect a big whoopping the steel of the steel there with, that something was wrong. To take some of the pres-sure off, we try to stay pretty low key. Instead of trying to hi all the rel-atives in one day, we usually just hang out at one place, and that's it for the day. It's nice getting into the holiday spirit, but I always find it a lot casier on myselful I don't live up with the radres. The radius are not a osseour death, they are a scam. The ownership is a cynical band of hustlers, would rob their mothers if it weren't easier to hold up the public. Unlike that band of thugs, there has never been a doubt that the Chargers' ownership and management are playing to win. Neither Friesz nor Humphries has played up to the level they held last year, and the team is playing a division winner's schedule this time around. It is still not absolutely, positively, too late, but it's

FOR YOUR LOW PRICE CALL

Missing in Action. Persons with information on the team's whereabouts are urged to call the Sporting Box. The Lightning Bots have been consistent all year-they above up to time for games, lick from field goals, score no touchdowns, change quarterbacks at the start of the third quarter, and lose. It's a simple, yet entirely effective game plan. We, by no means, mean to compare the Chargers with the Padres. The Padres are not a baseball team.

Even though rumor has it that Even though rumor has it that Monday night's game between the 4-and-6 Chargers and the 3-and-7 Colts has been preempted by a lawn bowing special, it is still not too late for the Chargers to find respectability this year. With their toughened schedule, that's not had.

Re Last Sunday's 17-to-13 win by Miami over New England. Don Shula proves again why he is a Hall of Fame coach. Marino goes out, back-up quarterback Scott Mitchell goes out, Shula picks up the tottering Steve Delberg (39 years old, duty tours in San Francisco, Denver, Tampa Bay, Kansas City, Tampa Bay, Miami), and wins with him. Deberg is Miami's fourth starting quarterback this year, and the Lolphins are tied for the lead in the AFC East with a record of 8 and 2.

THIS WIEK'S PICKS The Vegas Line - Week 13 (Home Team in CAPS)

Reminds me of what Bum Phillips once said about Reminds me or what pum rimings once said about Shula. "He can take his'n and beat your'n and then take your'n and beat his'n."

How important is Emmitt Smith to Dallas? He missed two games over a contract dispute and was injured last Sunday against the Falcons. Dallas is 0 and 3 in those games. They are 7 and 0 in games Smith

Cleveland has dropped its second in a row after casting out Bernie Kosar. Yes, it was an outrageous thing to do, an action against everyone's best interest except the insatiable ego of head coach Bill Belichick. But here is an annoying stat: starting Cleveland quarterback Todd Philcox led the league quarterback 10dd Finicox fee tile league in passing last week, going 22 for 47 for 316 yards and 2 TDs. Of course, Philcox was intercepted four times, and Cleveland fumbled and had a punt blocked, but hey, as Belichick says, "I know this team is headed in the right direction. We are going to be okay.

Memo to: Bill Belichick

When you edit game tapes and rush them back to the owner, rightlighting every mistake Kasar made, do it long enough — yeah, you might convince the old man — and get the kid fired, You've fired just about everybody around the clubhouse around the clubhouse of th editing my films?

My guess would be, say, about a quarter million people living in and around Cleveland.
