First, using Torrey pine needles for them as your title would suggest. Local native Americans have used pine needles in baskery for many years. Second, for those that are interested in please do not gather them from Torrey Pines State Reserve. Does The Man On The Left Have A Leg Attached To His Shoulder?

I am curious about the illus-tration accompanying Jon-athan Saville's review of the athan Saville's review of the Tragicomedia concert ("Can People in 1600 Really Have Had Blood in Their Veins?" November 24). Does the man on the left have a leg attached to his shoulder, hidden be-hind the lutenis? The reason I am asking is because the cap-tion says 'viola da gamba," in Italian. It refers to a mem-ber of the viole rouse of instruber of the viol group of instru-ments. Viols come in different sizes, have frets, are played with a bow and are held bewith a bow and are held be-tween the legs, much like the modern-day cello. Nowadays it usually refers only to the bass member of this group. The instrument in the picture looks more like a vielle or fithele or even a rebec, early predecessors of the violin. But if it really is a leg behind there, would he be playing a "vielle da gamba" or a "rebec da gamba"? Would he even have a leg to stand on? Have you seen Tous les Matins du Monde? Do only musicians care about these things

No Munchkin Movie Ever Seems To Rate More Than Two Stars From Mr. Shepherd

Unless it is an ancient classic like Snow White (from his own childhood?), no munchkin movie eve seems to rate more than two stars from Mr. Shep-herd, as if he either hated his childhood or has some prob-lem with "grown-ups" not be-ing able to enjoy "childish" things unless they're mentally deficient ("Old Business," November 11), My three-year-old has seen Nightmare before Christmas four times and, unlike Aladdin, Ninja Tuttles III, Free Willy, and childhood?), no munchkin Turtles III, Free Willy, and Jurassic Park (even minus the first 30 minutes), she doesn't lose interest and start wiggling after 20 to 30 minutes but is glued to the screen, so I've never had to "try to explain the business" to this particular child. Maybe Mr. Shepherd child. Maybe Mr. Shepherd needs a refresher course in Ware the Wild Things Are, for he seems seriously lacking in his knowledge of children. Children love' songs, songs, and more songs," and, for my money, these songs are more enjoyable than the average Disney fare. I don't think fans of Mr. Elfman from his Oingo Boingo days would agree that his music is "in search of a

his music is "in search of a melody." I will admit to pre-ferring powerful vocalists such as Ronnie James Dio, and I as Ronnie James Dio, and I find Mr. Elfman's voice to be very strong and expressive. On the other hand, while I do enjoy some actors in particu-lar because of their excellent

No painted or drawn image I've seen could duplicate the sight of the burning coffin-sleigh and Jack, minus his lower jaw, draped across the angel's book. Why would Skeleton Jack be susceptible to the spirit and sentiment of Christmas?

But when you are facing deadlines for the decommissioning of these things, the money has got to be there. If it is not, the ratepayers are going to have to fork over the difference."

An extreme example of what might happen, Scadding says, is the stock market crash of October 1987, "If that happens five months before the money is supposed to be there for denissioning, you are not cars to make it up. The closer you can get to the drop-dead stage, the risk can be really big."

However, McMonagle

be spent. The nature of the spending would dictate where and how growth occurred in California. If you take $5 bilion and spend it on infrastructure, where you spend that money is where growth would occur."

"I'm worried about the land-use ramifications of giv ing authority for major elected. unaccountable bureaucracy with no policies to govern how they are going to spend this money," says Jim Knox, urban affairs director with the Planning and Conservation League. "This agency would have tre determining where and when growth takes place in Califor-nia, with no oversight and no guidance from the Legisla-ture. We have been working for years on land-use legislacompletely contrary to that notion."

Equally odious, Knox adds, is the source of the money. "It is a blatant rip-off of dedicated transit funds," he says. "These are funds that are ected by Proposition 116 for transit use only, which we sponsored and which passed in June 1990."

"I really object to the fact that the funding source of the bill was taken at the expense of operating funds for urban bus systems at a time when these bus systems need more funding," adds V. John White, and other environmental groups.

Peace takes particular issue with allegations that the infrastructure bank will be able to do whatever it wants with its money. "That's all a matter of perspective," he says. "First of all, each program has to go through myriad steps. This is just the financing mechanism; they financing mechanism; they [the infrastructure bank] don't decide which projects are approved or not.

"As for who the players are, as the bill is currently crafted the funds are admir istered by an independen agency made up of involve ment from the treasurer' office, the controller's office office, the controller's office, and the governor's office. That is our preferred way of doing it, but we also have to get the governor's signature, so we are prepared to negotiate."

Before the bill's death or se Senate floor last Septem the Senate floor last September, last-minute negotiations to save it found Peace giving in to Wilson on a number of key points, Armong them was that lending decisions would be left almost exclusively to the newly created Housing and Infrastructure Finance Agency, Eight of the eleventy of the condition of the co admini ...or would be Wilson's ...itical protégé former C.S. senator John

Now that he's starting all over again, Peace says, he's re-turned the bill to its original form and enlisted the aid of his close friend Willie Brown, who in October told the Orange County Business Journal that getting the bill passed would be his "number one priority" when the Legislature onvenes next year. Even so, Peace will still sions to gain the governor's support. He can still expect to encounter some stiff environmentalist opposition. And he's still likely to hear cries that he has sold out to Disneyland.

"I realize what the envi ronmental community would like," Peace says. "Their real agenda is to tie any move-ment on infrastructure to a growth-management plan, and they're going to try to stop anything unless it is tied to a growth-management plan.

"I understand their "I understand their agenda. They are concerned that if a financing plan goes into effect without growth management, it's going to be difficult for them to get the support of the business community later on. But I think trying to link those two is an unaccomplishable task, and trying to fuse them together into a coalition ultimately leads to gridlock."

LOWEST PRICE GUARANTEE ...

Now let's get this straight. If you go to DOW, GOOD GUYS, SILO or CIRCUIT CITY, they all carry almost identical equipment. Each claims to have the lowest price. Here's how it works – you will be paying a "high" price unless you have time to waste shopping everywhere else. They require you to document a lower price—then they beat it by $1.00. Worst of all is the quality of the merchandise. A "so-called" low price on mediocre components is NOT a good value.

At Sound Company, we offer our customers low prices all the time - whether they ask for it or not. Now for the best part: we only carry the "A-stuff" - the components the salesmen at other stores want to own. Now we didn't say more money – just better quality sound. None of the other stores carries B&W, McINTOSH, NAD, PARADIGM, PROTON, NAKAMICHI, B&O, SUMO, DEFINITIVE TECHNOLOGY, KIMBERKABLE, BARCO, VIDIKRON, ETC. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 10-6, Sat. 10-5 (Offer expires December 16, 1993) To be fair to the reader, I think I need to put in a disclaimer about the usefulness and accuracy of memory, especially memory of highly stressed situations. It is easy to confuse wivid intensity for accuracy. Smannda and Zachary "see" crocodiles in the house from time to time and schizophrenis" dream "with their yes open, and schizophrenis" dream "with their yes open, depict a reality, one among ungest. Contrivus, plant and Looth thave the same memory about July 12. But we are wise enough not to argue about it.

Janet and I don't have the same memory about July 12. But we are wise enough not to argue about it. Around 7:00 in the morning we were awakened when the telephone rang, Janet's mother was calling to find out how lan was doing. The length of the call, Janet now assures me, was only a few minutes. I could have sworn it was more the 15 to 20. When Janet paid with phone, she led 15 to 20. When Janet paid with phone, she led 15 to 20. When Janet got well they home, and the led 15 to 20. When Janet got well have sworn it was more the 15 to 20. When Janet got well have both still—didn't quite know how bad it was. We called the pediatrician, and the receptionist tried to deflect us until it was pretty Well, that's what Janet remembers me. I think that it took longer somehow. I was upset that Janet had speak intendable you here worked to the promoter of the phone with her mother rather than checking on lan right away. I was upset by the receptionist putting us off until the doctor got on the phone. These emotions added to my confusion, further closing off avenues of opportunity. The drive to the doctor's office was insanity, pure and simple. It is a long way from Mulberry Street in San Marcos to El Camino Real in La Costa. Janet was sitting in the back seat with Ian in her arms. His color was gray, he was lethargic, he was struggling to stay alive. At the corner of Rancho Santa Fe and Palomar Airport Road, he comitted again, then stopped breathing. He turned blue and Janet cursed. She shifted him to start CPR, and this movement started him breathing again.

Most of the drama was out of my field of vision. I was still angry and artificially calm forcing myself not to panic, trying to decide what risks to take behind the wheel. The morning traffic was doubly frustrating, and the drive took 20 minutes. Somehow we made it into the office. In retrospect, going to the pediatrician's office that morning was one of the biggest errors of judgment I have ever made in my life.

From the moment we walked in, judging by the frantic pained expressions on the faces of the nurse, receptionist, and Dr. X., I knew we were headed for an impact, a crash. I've fallen off my bicycle a few times at a good deal of speed; just before the injuries start, you realize great pain is coming your way. As we watched them try, with great difficulty, to get an IV into Inn. my mind first went numb, then it began playing with the myriad death secancies. the doctor's personal offices. We stared blankly at the walls; I picked up a paperweight while lan's heart stopped in the next room. The Children's team was led by Dr. Y. Upon seeing how seriously dehydrated and compromised his patient was, he made a decision to intubate, that is, stick a tube down Ian's throat to his lungs to secure his breathing passage for the trip to Children's. He was having difficulty doing this and decided to give Jan a shot that would immobilize his muscle reactions and therefore enable. Ye to insert the breathing tube. During this procedure, lan vomited and aspirated the tube. Ian's death brought the Peterson and planned our wedding as a grand gesture, a unity

per community, our community. Big words, considering I said goodbye to more than a couple of people at that wedding, haven't seen them since. Still, many of our friends remember that day with some fordness. (It's hard to forget an

Janet and I went about planning the funeral with some of the same zeal that we put into the wedding. We wanted to make another grand gesture by saving goodbye. We wanted to bring the families together even as the world seemed to be coming apart.

With considerable assistance from Janet's mother Marlys, who finagled us a nice boat to take to sea, we scheduled the funeral. Both families came in full force, all shilings, perents, spouse, accume in full force, all shilings, perents, spouse, and the state of the same in the force, all shilings, perents, spouse, from San Francisco. I catoled him a little into coming by pointing out that he could buy a Mexican redheaded parrot in San Diego for half of what he would spend in the Bay Area.

We went back to see Dr. X a few months after lan's death. Going back to La Costa brought the anger up; we were pissed off. I knew that I was unlikely to hear much openness from the doctors. Even if they were responsible in some to admit any such thing. I expected to hear a lot of admit any such thing. I expected to hear a lot of shuffling.

The story I had concocted, the story of a world that encourages doctors to believe the hype that they are special beyond compare, is not without some utility. One thing I did learn and notice was that Sharp and Children's were not only changing physically — new buildings, etc. — they were trying to change the perception the world has about them.

Samantha, our daughter, watches the movie Aladdin quite a bit these days. In the movie, Aladdin, while trying to think what he will wish for, turns to the genie and asks, "What would you wish for?" The genie, shocked, responds, "No one ever asked me that before." Doctors certainly have been asked what they want; now, it's the patients' turn. As the genies of our own future health, we have to learn to ask better questions of those treating us.

Varni gave a quiet "hallelujah" when I pointed out that the medical profession was

"What's Thie" Jack is reacting like a led in a Christimas store. One could even argue lack's intent was not to steal Christimas but to share it with Halloween.

The major message I see, as in The Wizard of Oz., is to not look past one's own backyard for lost happiness. One could even argue something (God! Jack's subconscious!) set the whole thing up to bring lack out of his malate.

Perhaps Mr. Shepherd, like
Jack, has been the Reader vie critic too long. Maybe he needs to hijack someone else's job for '94, perhaps Ms.

Arnold's since she also seems not to enjoy her work. When all is said and done, movies re simply entertainment and actually pretty low on the totem pole in the real world, so it's rather amusing to read people like Mr. Shepherd and his sycophants trying to sound important. When the fire is important. When the fire is racing up the canyon, would they prefer to see their idol or a fire truck loaded with people who enjoy Demolition Man. Hands Can Do Lots Of Good Things Your "I Hate to Break This to You, Kitty, But ..." feature by Susie Bright in the November 18 issue is interesting. Men, for ages, through various talks, print, movies, and direct activ-ities, have shown the world what men expect, want, and try hard to get through sex.

From sweet talk to savage acts.
It is summed up in a costly oil painting. The Rape of the Sabine Women. Access to vaginal entry of women of the losing side has long been an entitlement in wars.

Somewhat a top wage to troops, in days before fighting men were paid wages, as now known.

Explore, conquer, pillage groups did instant rape on the opposition's women. Then went on to further exploits. It's of interest to note that (a gay) Alexander the Great varied this tactic. To solidify gains and peace, Alexander had staged a massive wedding ceremony (in the Near East) between his troops and the conquered women. Very smart.

In earlier eras, not having welfare or support for widows, male relatives of the deceased took over and incorporated the widow and children into the surviving brother's household (all unattached widows and children became some or the surviving brother's household (all unattached widows and children became some or the surviving brother's household continued to the surviving the relationship and bringing the relationship and bring the relationship and cultural times. Scripture has long touted Scripture has long touted vaginal penetration as the one, only way of sex contact. Onan cast his seed upon the ground; when the daylight came around, his brother's widow did not receive his ejaculate, and Onan suffered an awful fate. For breaking tribal law, Onan had to die! Withdrawal, ike mastrhation, was much like masturbation, was much despised. Onanism and mas-turbation are two words as one condemned in Scripture.

I'm not afraid to give out my number anymore.

The people I meet at the bars are either rude, boring or both. The last five I dated were just hideous. Two kept calling until I finally took the phone off the hook...for a week. But then, the people I wanted to talk to couldn't get through. Now I don't have to worry about annoying calls at home or unwanted calls at work.

> I decide who I speak to and meet with, period.

I have a special number that's answered 24-hours a day with my own personalized message. It's untraceable. Nobody knows it's not my home phone number. And best of all, my messages are passcode protected for security and confidentiality.

The Influence Of Barbie In Our Culture

Our Culture
The letter you printed in last week's Reader from L.A.
Massey in reference to Ken Mayer and his book Real Women Don't Diet could only have been written by a thin person. Mr. Mayer is an eccentric, as are many artists, writers, and musicains. He could also have broadened the ope and appeal of his book by including the issue of sizeism as it relates to men as well as women who are large sized. However, more women are affected by this issue because of the influence of Barbie in our culture, and few people realize the damage that eating disorders and dieting incur on a daily basis. We large-size women may not need a savior like Mr. Mayer, but it sure is vindicating after a lifetime of acceptable abuse to have someone, anyone, step forward and say fat is OK and you are big and beautiful. I have been singing songs for awhile now about being big, sexy, and empowered, and I am encouraged by the volume of responses I receive from women who have felt feel hopeful when they see me at ease with my body. A little glimmer of hope can be an amazing thing when you're a cound with sickers on their cars that said "No I rews" or "No. Blacks.", people would raise an outly. But to drive around it will be a feel with stickers that say "No Fat Chicks" is perfectly accepted with stickers that say. "No Fat Chicks" is perfectly accept-fine line between being politically correct and losing your sense of humor, but when people are losing their lives from anorexia, or being killed because they are gay or black, it is time for someone to speak out against it. What has L.A. Massey done for a minority lately? And Massey, thanks for the pig analogy. Perhaps you could have been more creative. Why not sloth or whale? All of us fat people have been called these names before. Name-

The calligraphers resisted, however. As part of a general reaction to mass production and the elimination of crafismen, a revival of "beautiful writing" began in association with the Arts and Crafts ideology and similar late-19th-Century movements. William Morris contended that "the letters should be designed by an artist and not an engineer," and a later German calligrapher can produce legible letters but art alone makes them

The potters exhib-ited at the Mingel are individual artists, with identifiable manners, but most of them tend to share basic artistic attitudes. Precisely at the center of the tradition (so to speak) there is Laura Andreson, born in 1902 and exerting a solid, enlightening influence on generations of California students dur-

A spiendadly full retro-spective of Andreson's work was organized at the Mingei a decade ago, but even the few examples of her work in the current show are sufficient to make her artistic self wirdly visible: sturdiness of form, simplicity of means, a reverence (alof form, simplicity of means, a reverence (al-though never slavish) for the past, and a stable earth-iness emphasized both by the well-balanced, tradi-tional shapes and the "natural"-textured, earth-col-ored glaze.

A similar elegance and harmony can be seen in the porcelain pots and bowls of Vivika and Otto Heino, where, however, a lishing for rough-textured glazes and a tendency to emphasize the horizontal lines of the throwing makes one somewhat more aware of the underlying substance of the pottery; earth of the earth, worked on a wheel. There is great vigor in the surface treatment, with a remarkable strength in the surge-de-bout, violet, or brown glazes; most striking is a large, sphroud pot in an intense, wood-freed, iron-blue.

A very long time ago, I was living with a guy and we had what came to be known as the great ani wars. Actually the real problem started with a food fight, you know, we were throwing food at one another. Anyway, both of us hoped the other guy would clean up the seal off both the anist and the lood.
It made for some interesting designs.
The third and forth ant wars following the third and forth flood fights called for more drastic measures. We finally treated the whole place with a series of caustic agents.
We were asked to leave by the owner

ission Cliff Gardens Farmen 1890. Perched on the rim of Mission Valley, the Gardens were originally ission Cliff Gardens Pavilion, circa known as "The Bluffs," and served as a destination for passengers on the San Diego Cable Railway Company. In 1898, sugar magnate J.D. Spreckels purchased the 20-acre site and redeveloped it to attract riders to his electric railway line.

The Gardens offered a view of the San Bernardino and San Jacinto mountain ranges to the north, and provided a safe vantage point from which to view the periodic flooding of Mission Valley. At one time, the attraction boasted a walk-in aviary, lily pond, miniature Japanese garden and an ostrich farm; it was closed in 1929, and subdivided in 1942. Houses and apartment buildings now sit atop the rubble of the Gardens' once-elegant walkways.
