"Finally, although the secretary (of the Department of Health and Human Services) found that Corrao received uncut heroin and used his physical and mental capacities to 'cut' it (i.e., to add other substances to it), the record does not support such a find-ing. Corrao in fact testified that he purchased uncut heroin and gave it directly to the ultimate purchasers. There is no indication that he ever sold his portion of the drugs for cash or other items." As a result, the justices did not act in any sense to op-orate an ongoing business.

The bottom line: "Corrao argues that the proper distinc-tion is not between illegal and legal activities, but between ad-dicted individuals and other individuals," the justices said.
"He argues that because Congress intended to award SSI to individuals who suffer from substance abuse, and befor cash or other items.

As a result, the justices ruled, "we cannot agree that Corrao's limited and periodic efforts to obtain heroin conefforts to obtain heroin con-stitute a sole proprietorship in any sense of the word. The concept of a sole proprietor-ship suggests a business in which the owner invests time and capital, uses management and organizational skills, and hires employees. Corrao did not have employees, manage other workers, or invest his SSI to individuals who suffer from substance abuse, and be-cause an individual must obtain an addicting substance to be addicted, to use the pur-chase of the substance to deny SSI benefits defeats the purpose of the statute. L.A. Bank Robbers Scared South were the work of visiting gangs from Los Angeles. Not only that, but a top FBI official in Los Angeles blames gangs from his city for San Diego's soaring bank robbery rate. Last year, the number of local hold-ups number of local hold-ups shot up more than 50 per-cent, to 413 from 275. Meanwhile, the bank heist tally in Los Angeles dropped by more than a third, according to FBI officials.

Ronald Iden, assistant

special agent in charge of the Los Angeles FBI office, says there is most definitely a con-nection. "We are seeing nection. "We are seeing LA-based gang members in many cities throughout the country, including San Diego, San Francisco, and Las Vegas," Iden says. "What brings them [to San Diego]? We would like to think that We would like to think that the work we've done here in Los Angeles has sent a mes-sage to them, that we are working very hard to identify and apprehend those who rob banks in Los Angeles. And what we are seeing [in San Diego; may in some way be a reflection of that; a re-

onse to our efforts." Ron Orrantia, a spokesman for the San Diego FBI office, takes exception to that statement. Gangs from Los Angeles, he says, "are a contributing factor, but not a significant factor" to San Diego's soaring bank robbery rate. 'I don't want to step on what he I [den] said.' Orrantia says, 'but the statistics retired as significantly. He tributed significantly." He says only about three or four San Diego bank robberies last year were the work of Los Angeles gangs, and neither he nor Jan Caldwell, the media nor Jan Caldwell, the media representative at the FBI's San Diego office, will release details. "We can't point fin-gers at people and say they came from a gang when we don't know that that's the ab-solute truth," Caldwell says. "We can only extrusive."

Orrantia will say, how ever, that each of the San Diego bank heists carried out by Los Angeles gang mem-bers were so-called "bank takeovers." "These are situations in which two or more robbers come into a bank and usually take a much and usually take a much more aggressive stance, bran-dishing weapons, firing shots, sometimes actually ac-costing tellers and ordering all bank employees and cus-tomers to the floor," Orrantia

Caldwell adds that San Diego banking and law en-forcement officials "have the same approach" to fighting bank robberies as their Los Angeles counterparts. "What we are doing down here is what we've done forever," she says. "We initiated a bank robbery task force, we work with local authorities, and we investigate every bank rob-bery. We also have a reward bery. We also have a reward system, including the statewide "We Tip' hotline." Then why has the San Diego bank-robbery rate sky-rocketed while the Los Angeles count has gone down? "Circumstances," Caldwell says. "We say our rate has gone up because of the economy, because of our cause of branch banking — there's a bank on every cor ner -- and because of our close proximity to the international border.

"And, yes," she concedes,
"sometimes the bad guys do

tion theory. Alarmed by statistics that show nearly a third of all bank robberies reported in the United States occur in Los Angeles, local banks and law enforcement agencies launched a major crackdown. Their efforts are centered around increased centered around increased security and publicity, Iden says. A growing number of Los Angeies banks have installed bulletproof glass, or "bandit barriers," around their teller cages. Banks sponsor a highly publicized rewards program and distribute "wanted posters."

The conviction of those two men, Iden adds, should send a message that mentors of teen bank robbers will be caught. "We hope it sends a message to anyone who would contemplate orcheswould contemplate orchestrating a takeover robbery that we are working very hard to identify, apprehend, and convict anyone who might try the same method, he says.

On the other hand, a Los Angeles Times report late in 1992 about Gary Evans's rat study struck me as being science news that might be worth acting upon. A chemistry professor at the state university in Bernidji, Minnesota, Evans had been looking at what happens when rats are given different types of nutritional chromium supplements. For this particular experiment, he took 30 rats and divided them into three groups of ten each. Two of the groups got forms of dietary chromium that had been around for a long time, while the third group received daily doses of chromium picolinate, a newer form of the mineral that Evans had developed while working for the United States Department of Agriculture.

Of the 20 rats in the first two groups, half died by the age of 33 months. One of the 20 reached 41 months — just one month short of the maximum age achieved by rats allowed to eat as much as they want. The ten rats in the third group also were allowed to eat as much as they wanted; the only difference was their daily dose of chromium picolinate. But at 41 months, eight of them were still alive. Five lived longer than 45 months, and one rodent Methuselah made it to the four-year mark — about the equivalent of a 125-year-old human

Now this I could imagine: swallowing one pill a day in exchange for an extra 20 years. When I saw an ad for chromium picolinate a few months later, I bought some and began taking it. Last fall I also made my way to the offices of Nutrition 21, the San Diego company that holds a legal monopoly over the manufacture of this intriguing substance

The offices are unpretentious, occupying part of the third floor of a massive glassand-stucco office building on Turquoise Street in north Pacific Beach. Fewer than a dozen people work here, at what is arguably Chromium Central for the world. When Herb Boynton founded the business a little more than 20 years ago, he says no chromium was available in any form as a nutritional supplement. Today he estimates that at least four million people are consuming chromium picolinate, last year they spent somewhere between $75 million and $95 million tod $95 million to gum spiked with it.

Then in 1976, the tubolod National Enquirer published an article summarizing some of the research on selenium. Overnight, "our sales quintupled," Boyaron says; by 1977 Boyarton began distributing profits to his investors. In 1978 the company acquired another source of revenue when the development team at Universal Food, finally succeeded at producing a form of yeast that contained about 100 parts per million of chromium— far less than Boynton had originally hoped for, but still a significant improvement over traditional brown's years. Nutrition 21 continues to sell some of this yeast today, and Boynton says it's a good product. But he says he always left there ought to be a still better way of getting formium into people's bodies. Human cells, it seems, are extraordinarily impermeable to trivalent thromum. When researchers have measured what percentage of dietary chromium actually makes its way into our bloodstreams, they've come up with estimates of little more than half of one percent; the rest is excreted. One explanation for why the chromium is so hard for human cells to absorb looks to the chemical structure of the dromium ions, which are "inisting," three electrons and thus have a slight electrical charge. "A positive charge is an impediment to the transport of compounds across biological membranes, "says Mark McCarry, Nutrition 21's research feeteror. Boynton still sounds dumbfounded when he thinks back on this. "All these big companies like Meade-Johnson and Squibb and Lederle were all aware of it, but not a single one evinced any interest in it at all? 3 Ways to Avoid Traffic

Looking for a new way to avoid the heavy traffic on Route 101 between Santa Barbara, Ventura County and Los Angeles? There are now three.

3 Trains Serving the Valley

To make it easier to get around Southern California in the wake of last month's Northridge earthquake, Caltrans has underwritten new Amtrak San Diegan service through the San Fernando Valley.

To L.A. or Through L.A.

We now offer three daily San Diegan round trips that run through Los Angeles. And each train has reliable bus connections on the north end serving Santa Maria, Pismo Beach, and San Luis Obispo.

The new train has midday departures in each direction, so most travel is in daylight hours. Heading south on new train 780, you can cruise effortiessly past the worst rush hour traffic Los Angeles has to offer.

2 for 1 Coupon Deal

With the 2 for 1 coupon below, you can bring a friend along free daily except Fridays, Sundays, and February 21. The coupons can be used on one way trips or round trip excursions until March 30. Here are some ideas on where to use them.

I was on a truck company that took a lot of pride in what we did. It's ex Eventually, I had the pleasure of working with a fire investigator named Fred Wright, who is very well thought of in the department. He's one of those rare gems.

"Fred and his crew and his investigators made a call on this fire that I thought was dead wrong. It was a garage and house fire, and I forgot what the deal was, but Fred thought it was one thing and I thought it was another cause or point of origin, and I was right. He had missed the obvious, but it's very easy to be wrong about a fire scene, and it was very rare with him. He asked me if I had ever thought about going into fire investigation I said, 'Yeah, it sounds exciting, I'd be interested.'

I said, 'Yean, it sounds exciting, I'd be interested.

prison where time could deal with him. He should have gone to Mexico. "He chuckles. Brock was among those who investigated the La Jolla fires of March 1980. "I was told to change my report about the shake shingles being the cause of the fire spread— that and the Santa Ana conditions we had at the time. Had there been a tile roof on that comple the damage probably would have been contained to a single condo. The 35 [in UTC] is a real closs fire station; they would have come in and put a stop to the fire in ten minutes. But ber weather conditions and the shake roofs, that fire spread as if you'd poured gasoline from one rooftor to another. Kindling on the roofs! I mean, it didn't take a Rhodes scholar to figure that one out."

Why would the fire department be unhappy with that finding?

Cherie: My married girlfriend and I used to sit around on Friday nights and drink wine, watch sappy movies and read the personal ads. One night she said, "We're going to find you a husband."

John: I wasn't looking to get married. I was just trying to have some fun. I figured that Phone MatchesTM was the best way to meet a bunch of girls at once. It was easy and it was free.

Cherie: When I first read John's Phone Matches™ ad, I couldn't believe that it contained everything I wanted in a man. And when I met him, it was all true.

try it on my own.

John: On our first date she took me jet skiing with some of her friends. It was a test.

Cherie: For both of us. I had to wear a bathing suit in front of him and John had to interact with my friends.

John: Three months later, we moved in together. It's been a fairly simple matter since then, putting a life together. We've had some really good blowouts, of course. But it's not whether you argue or not; it's how you come out the other side.

Cherie: We have a lot in common, especially music. I go to the studio and to all the rehearsals for John's band, China Lake. They do all original music that sounds like Classic Rock and I really like it.

John: If Cherie was into Country-Western, we could have a big problem

Cherie: We talked about marriage from the beginning, jokingly, But on the Fourth of July – with fireworks going off in the background – John asked me to marry him.

John: I said, "I'm really serious, this time." Cherie: Of course I said, "yes." The date is September 3, at the old San Diego Mission.

John: My parents have been married for 35 years. There's nothing more beautiful to me than the way they still love each other. Cherie and I are in for the long haul.

Cherie: It just blows me away that I found my husband in the newspaper.

As for Tchalkovsky's Scond Symphony, a rather shallow and uninventive work to begin with, the only way this score can avoid borredom is by a full realization of its lovely coloristic effects and of the vigor and poignancy of its expressively Russan themes. But atmosphere was in short supply in this consist insus traversal of the music. You would scarcely have thought it possible for the Second Symphony to be as touching and as imaginative as it is in performances by or hestras and conductors who really like it and know how to play it (for example, the London Symphony, the Boston Symphony, the Leningad Philharmonic, Antal Dorati, Igor Markevich, Michael Tilson-Thomas).

rew and officers of the three-masted ship Isle of Arran, on a San Diego stopover, 1894. The Isle of Arran was a British trading ship, roughly the same size as our own Star of India. The young men sitting in the front row were officer cadets; the men behind them ordinary seamen toiling "before the mast." The black crewmembers most likely hailed from the British West Indies.

Barely visible on the steps leading aft to the poop deck, the captain's wife holds a baby in her arms; her three other children are clustered around her. Their companionship on year-long voyages was a perk reserved for captains only -- note that the ordinary seaman in the second row has to content himself with the black cat on his left shoulder.
