A Domestic Melodrama in Clairemont

SMUGGLED MOTHER

My father-in-law, born and raised in the Philippines, the son of Christian missionaries, grew up with cooks, houseboys, and the like, and when he heard about our plan to hire a live-in Mexican nanny, he remarked, "The thing about servants is that you end up getting all involved in their personal lives." (continued on page 20)

I Began To Scream At The Screen

I would like to say a few words on behalf of the much-maligned movie critic Duncan Shepherd. For many years I, too, was exasperated by his negative reviews of anything produced by Hollywood. Having been absolutely euphoric after viewing Close Encounters, I felt Mr. Shepherd was just too cynical for words.

However, after years of reading his column and seeing many movies (I got to the stage at which I began to scream at the screen when a car chase was used to resolve yet another plot that had nowhere else to go but the L.A. freeway), I've come to value old Duncan's reviews for the background, interest, and love of the medium he consistently displays.

I still don't agree with him on much of the material (Cold Heaven was really stupid and even laughable), but I value the insight I gain whenever I read one of his reviews. I've also been counting his stars lately, and either 1993 was a great year for movies or Duncan has gone soft. I'm guessing it's the former.

Was I Mad!

I just picked up the latest edition of the Reader (March 31) and I was mad! Gina Arnold's "Of Note" on INXS made me furious! INXS is the best band ever! So what if Michael Hutchence dates models. Are you jealous, Gina, or what? They are still a hardworking band putting out great music. With each album they get better and better! I met Michael and Jon Farriss in L.A. a few years back. They were both real nice guys! Michael isn't less of a person 'cause he dates models. I have loved them for seven years and always will. So, Gina, get a life! INXS lives on forever!

Articles Are Boring As Hell

I am calling in regard to the "Off the Cuff" columns that you have. I was wondering if you could get a little more creative with your questions instead of asking, "Has your back ever gone out?" You show lack of imagination or creativity. Why don't you ask something that the people would want to read like...something, something better than what you've been having in your column for the longest time. And then the people that you get are just as uncreative and unimaginative also. The articles are boring as hell. My co-workers (which are about 2000) and I have had it with these questions.

Letters Section One Of Few Watering Holes Found In Arid Plain Of Reader

Week in and week out the Letters section is one of the few watering holes found in the arid plain of the Reader. Some of the most competent, informed, and straightforward writing is penned by the Reader's readers. Example: John Godfrey, Poway, March 24. I'd honestly find a piece about the coping mechanisms utilized by such Reader writers as Duncan Shepherd and Jeff Smith a fascinating portrait in human survival and perseverance.

Otay Mountain Area Very Dangerous

Your January 27 article ("Roam-O-Rama") about the Otay Mountain area is very deceiving and an example of careless journalism, which I have not seen in your book. The Otay Mountain area is very dangerous, and your readers should be aware of all the illegal activity and conditions surrounding that area. I would have emphasized that only high-clearance vehicles attempt to climb this mountain. Those that do choose to see the area should be aware of drug traffickers, illegal immigrants, and reckless shooters. If you would like to shoot in that area, please stop by the Dulzura Gun Club's range, located on the Marron Valley Road, and inquire about using their range. Travel only on those roads mentioned in the article, and do not follow any of the various roads that lead to private properties. Off-highway motorcyclists should have up-to-date registration for their vehicles; vehicle registration laws are enforced. Mountain bikers should never travel alone, much less in this area. Miss a downhill turn and it may be a very long time before someone finds you at the bottom of those steep hillsides. Be prepared for whatever activity you will be partaking in; carry a first aid kit, snake bite kit, spare tire, change for phone calls (there is a phone in front of the Thousand

Where credit is due A recent front-page story in the Union-Tribune on Mario Aburto Martinez, the accused assassin of Mexican presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio, bears an eerie resemblance to a Dallas Morning News Story that had gone out over the wire the same day. The story was about Aburto's political writings and his attempts to interest California Spanish-language newspapers in publishing his views. About two-thirds of the U-T story closely parallels the Dallas version. A passage from the Morning News: "He insisted I help him. I told him I didn't have time,' said Raul Camacho, who publishes a newspaper called El Popular in Bakersfield, Fresno, and Sacramento. Mr. Aburto's writings were called something like 'Political Truths,' Camacho recalled.... Aburto also may have tried to contact Ahora-Now, a newspaper in San Ysidro." Lennox Samuels, managing editor of the Dallas Morning News, is a bit miffed. "We would have preferred they specifically credit us, because it seemed there were a number of passages that had Dallas Morning News phraseology," he says. But because the U-T did credit "wire service reports," albeit at the very end of the story, Samuels says, "we are prepared to get on with our lives." Neither Gregory Gross, whose byline topped the U-T story, nor U-T designated spokesman Herb Klein, returned phone calls. — T.K.A.

Coffee, tea, or lobbying? In a highly qualified legal opinion, the city attorney has ruled that Mayor Susan Golding and City Manager Jack McGrory do not have to disclose getting a free ride last October aboard Chargers owner Alex Spanos's private aircraft. The trip, from Chicago back to San Diego after a successful bid for the 1998 Super Bowl, was a gift to the city, not to the officials, City Attorney John Witt held — although "since this determination is heavily dependent on the donor's intent, this intent should be confirmed in a letter to the city and accepted by the council." Golding and the other members of the San Diego delegation already had round-trip tickets the city had paid for. Spanos said he was headed back to San Diego and offered the officials a more luxurious lift. Witt's opinion acknowledged that while Spanos's gesture "was one of helpfulness," the Chargers and the city have "an ongoing business relationship, hence the appearance, not necessarily the reality" that Spanos might have been lobbying the officials. The opinion also noted that Spanos might also be able to take the high-flying transportation as a tax-deduction. Therefore, Witt concluded, the trip was definitely "a gift." So why don't the officials have to report it, as required by state law? Witt went on to reason that since money for the officials' return tickets went back to the city treasury, the gift was "only to the city," although he makes no mention of how the fare for a posh private jet compares to that of the coach seats the grateful officials were originally going to occupy. — T.K.A.

Ghost of Scripps past John P. Scripps Newspapers, founded by a grandson of pioneering San Diego tycoon Edward W. Scripps, is closing its headquarters here. The company, which operates seven West Coast newspapers, merged in 1986 with the E.W. Scripps Company, the big Cincinnati-based media concern. The elder Scripps, whose Miramar estate became Scripps Ranch, founded his publishing empire in 1878. He eventually controlled 41 newspapers, including the San Diego Sun, which fought a bitter newspaper war with the Union, then owned by J.D. Spreckels. E.W. and partner Milton McRae had a falling out when E.W.'s son John married McRae's daughter. E.W. later disinherited most of his children and grandchildren, including John Paul Scripps, Jr., who, in 1928, under his maternal grandfather's tutelage, formed his own newspaper chain. John P. died in 1989, three years after the merger. According to E.W. Scripps Company spokesman Tim King, the office is being closed "because it's time for a change, and there is no publishing in San Diego." The fate of the historic Scripps building on C Street is uncertain. — T.K.A.

San Diego Tiger Lost in Florida Sex Slaying

By Thomas K. Arnold

One of the San Diego Wild Animal Park's rare Sumatran tigers was killed last month during a fight with her mate while on loan to the Lowry Park Zoo in Tampa, Florida.

New questions are being raised over the bizarre circumstances of the death, which zoo officials concede may have occurred during a bungled mating attempt resulting from a faulty contraceptive implant.

Tuka, a 16-year-old female tiger, died around noon on Friday, March 11, after a brief battle with her mate, 9-year-old Dutch. A necropsy showed she died of respiratory failure from a fractured trachea or crushed windpipe. "It was a very swift attack," says Lowry Park Zoo spokeswoman Melissa Twomey. "We suspect she died almost immediately."

Tuka had been given a contraceptive implant some time after giving birth to three cubs in August 1991. Twomey says. It was the third litter she had produced with Dutch since coming to the Lowry Park Zoo in 1989. Birth control was needed, Twomey explains, because "you don't want to overpopulate any species." Tuka, one of only 34 Sumatran tigers in American zoos, was on loan to the Lowry Park Zoo through the Species Survival Plan (SSP), a computerized mating service for endangered species administered by the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums. And there are strict guidelines "to regulate the genetic pool," Twomey says.

Tuka had been implanted with a similar contraceptive in December 1985, while at the Wild Animal Park, because of difficulties with her first pregnancy the previous August, in which she gave birth to two stillborn cubs, says Jeff Jouett, a spokesman for the San Diego Zoo, which operates the Wild Animal Park.

The procedure, however, was not completely successful. "Keepers observed her breeding again, so they had one of the park veterinarians do an ultrasound in April 1986," Jouett says. "The ultrasound revealed she had bred 60 days pri- -" so that's when she still had some vestige of cycling, because when she is cycling the male tiger picks up the scent and will attempt to breed."

Tuka was promptly given a second contraceptive implant. Three years later, the implant was removed and she was sent to the Lowry Park Zoo to breed with Dutch. After producing three litters with the male Sumatran, one in 1990 and two in 1991, Tuka was once again given a contraceptive implant, Twomey says she does not know the exact date of the procedure, but Jouett maintains he was told "they put one in around the first of this year."

Richard Farinato, director of the captive wildlife protection program for the Humane Society of the United States, says that if Tuka's latest contraceptive implant, like her first, failed to suppress her cycling, she might have sent mixed signals to her mate. "She may have been giving off pheromones, she might have smelled a certain way or looked a certain way and he may have been receiving signals, saying she was receptive to being bred," Farinato says. "She wasn't, obviously, so the fight ensued. That's one explanation for it."

Photograph courtesy of Zoological Society of San Diego

Twomey admits this scenario is "a possibility, particularly since "it is the conclusion of our veterinarian that even when she was on the contraceptive, they have since that time shown mating behavior." But she insists "there's no way to determine" whether the fight that claimed Tuka's life was related to a mating attempt.

"There are some pathological things Lowry Park Zoo veterinarians] are looking into, but whether they could conclusively suggest that she was cycling is doubtful," Twomey says. "A lot of that is based on people's observations, which in some cases are going to be fairly subjective."

Even so, Farinato says, zoo officials should have been more alert. "They had this animal in Lowry Park for quite a while, and she was paired with the male for quite a while," he says. "I would think if there were other incidents in which this was going on, they would have seen it and been prepared for it. Why weren't they? That's the question."

Twomey, however, insists "there was no evidence, prior to that, of any ongoing aggravation."

In any event, Farinato says, the whole problem could have been avoided if Lowry Park Zoo officials had separated Tuka and Dutch after they were taken out of the breeding program. "Tigers are normally solitary, and when we force a male tiger and a female tiger to be living together year-round, we are going against normal tiger behavior," Farinato says. "In the wild, these animals are not going to consort, unless the female is in heat. Tigers are not social cats, like lions."

Mike Hutchins, director of conservation and science with the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, agrees. "Because these are relatively solitary animals, getting them together is difficult," he says, adding that Tuka's death fight with her mate is the first such incident on record. "Animals are quite unpredictable, and you're talking about large carnivores with big teeth and sharp claws."

Twomey, however, says separating the two tigers was never even considered. "Evidently protocol does not suggest that, or we wouldn't have [kept them together]," she says. "We are an accredited zoo, a member of the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, which means we follow all their guidelines. And we are not unique in having male and female tigers together."

That's precisely the point, the Humane Society's Farinato says. "Very often, what is done in a zoo is not always done for the sake of the animal, it is done for the sake of the visitor," he says. "The

Big Money and Big Media Take On the Little Guys Over Miramar

By Melinda Powelson

Doug Manchester's crusade to build a commercial airport at Miramar Naval Air Station is on a roll. He's lined up support from 66 prominent San Diegans, created a nonprofit organization called the San Diego International Airport Foundation, and collected contributions from a host of local big names, including car dealer Bob Baker and San Diego Union-Tribune publisher Helen Copley.

The foundation hired two consulting firms, which reported Lindbergh Field was unsuitable for expansion and determined that Miramar should be San Diego's airport of the future. By January, Manchester had convinced the County Board of Supervisors to put an advisory vote on the June ballot, which would give citizens a chance to tell politicians that they want Miramar to be the site for a new international airport if the military abandons the base.

Ever since, critics claim, the Union-Tribune has devoted columns of glowing coverage to the issue. "The U-T has only printed stories about the good will and benevolence of Mr. Manchester," says Gary Stoefen, a videographer who started Citizens Against Miramar International Airport (CAMIA), a grassroots organization opposing the measure. "We believe that there are other motivating factors that are not being disclosed. Mr. Manchester is a developer who might profit enormously if Lindbergh field is shut down. We wish he — and the media — would be upfront about the true motivation."

U-T publisher Helen Copley's personal involvement with the issue was first revealed last month. "At a community meeting in Carmel Valley, John Seymour said that Helen Copley donated $50,000 to the foundation," says Abba Nikroo, a Del Mar resident who attended the meeting. John Seymour, executive director of the San Diego International Airport Foundation, denies being at the meeting, but confirms that Copley contributed to the foundation. He won't disclose the amount.

"If Helen Copley did contribute $50,000, so what? If someone else contributed $2, so what? I don't see how that is relevant to the issue," he says. U-T spokesman Herb Klein also confirms that Copley donated to the foundation. "This contribution is not related to the news coverage in the paper," says Klein. Despite the editorials, he says, "We have not taken a position on the ballot proposal yet." Copley could not be reached for comment to confirm the donation amount.

According to county records, Copley's holding company, Copley Press, Inc., owns 56 acres of commercially zoned land bordering the intersection of Interstate 805 and Highway 52, immediately south of Miramar. Copley bought the property for $28.2 million in August 1990, with the announced intent of building a printing plant for the Union-Tribune, but plans were later shelved and the property remains undeveloped. Airport opponents have argued that supporters have a vested interest in promoting Miramar as a regional air terminal. Copley did not return calls seeking comment.

"It's a little exasperating that the U-T doesn't write a disclaimer every time they write an article on Miramar saying that it is the opinion of Helen Copley, the owner and publisher of the newspaper — not that of an unbiased reporting agency," says Curtis Macchioni, an opponent of the proposed airport.

In addition to Copley, KNSD general manager Neil Derrough has signed onto the campaign. Derrough is a member of the International Airport Foundation. Moments after KNSD aired a town-hall debate over relocating the airport to Miramar, Derrough endorsed the Manchester position in an on-air editorial.

"We were very disappointed to see the editorial right after the debate," says Lauri Twomey, chairwoman of Residents and Organized Allies for Realignment (ROAR), another organization opposing the plan to relocate the airport to Miramar. "It wasn't unexpected, though, because he is a member of Manchester's foundation."

Derrough did not return repeated calls seeking his comment.

"I feel that the major media sources have acted incredibly irresponsibly by not allowing the facts surrounding the issue — independent, economic analysis — to take place before the damage is done," Twomey says. "Everyone who is supporting this measure says that this is nothing more than a chance for citizens to take a vote, and we all know that the vote will be approved." Twomey continues, "In actuality, the advisory vote says, 'We want to shut Miramar down before we know what the impact is going to be.'"

Organized opposition to Manchester's well-orchestrated campaign has gotten off to a late start. "Mr. Manchester has been on the move, getting speakers at city councils, community meetings and articles into the papers," says Twomey. "So far, we haven't been very effective in getting our message across."

Twomey says it's difficult for a citizens' group to oppose a wealthy developer who has a full-time staff dedicated to running his campaign and easy access to local media. Last winter, Manchester hired Seymour, son of ex-U.S. Senator John Seymour, to be executive director of the foundation, and later spokesman for Citizens for Miramar. Over the past three months, Seymour has pitched the Manchester proposal to "at least one organization every day," he says. "Sometimes we have two or three speaking engagements a day."

Also speaking on behalf of Manchester is Charles Jensen, a commercial airline pilot, Oceanside Deputy Mayor Don Rodee, and retired Port Commissioner Ray Burk. "We've got a very organized campaign," says Seymour, adding that he is the only paid staff person. "I have absolutely no doubt at all that we will get the ballot measure passed." Seymour wouldn't disclose his salary.

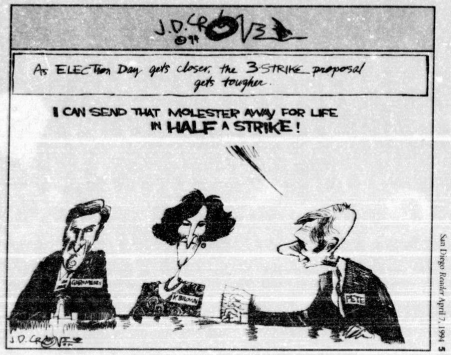

ROAR claims 600 active members. The organization was created four years ago; its primary function was to oppose the airport relocation to Miramar. It is now led by Twomey, an energetic 32-year-old woman whose husband is an F-14 fighter pilot stationed at Miramar. "Most ROAR members have full-time jobs, families, and are doing this in their spare time," explains Twomey. "I'm trying to devote my energy to my 17-month-old baby, my full-time job, and to ROAR. It's a difficult balancing act. If I were being paid to do this, it would be a different story."

Citizens Against Miramar is even smaller, with 30 to 50 members. "I've never run a political campaign in my life," says Stoefen. "But this issue made my blood boil. I had to act."

Another major difference between airport opponents and Manchester's campaign is the amount of money each has available to push its message. Seymour says Manchester hopes to raise $500,000 through Citizens for Miramar, a campaign committee created earlier this year. Between January and March 1994, the committee raised $64,662 in donations, according to county records.

ROAR, on the other hand, asks its members to donate between $5 and $100 a year. The money goes to support a communications hotline and a monthly newsletter called the ROAR Report. "ROAR's bank visitor likes to see more than one animal, the visitor likes to see activity, and even though you can stretch the boundaries of the rules of what you can do with wildlife and get away with 1 99 percent of the time, when you house these animals together, there is always a risk that something like this might happen. And we don't know if this risk is worth taking for exhibitry or for reproductivity, unless that reproductivity is linked with an effort to repatriate animals into the wild. And that is not the case with the tiger SSP, at this point."

Ron Tilson, who coordinates the tiger SSP for the American Association of Zoological Parks and Aquariums, promises an investigation. "We are looking into it," he says. "I spoke with the staff veterinarian and curator, and we will have a pathology report submitted. We do lose tigers, through one form or another, but this has been unusual, in the sense that I don't ever recall [something like this] happening."

Still, Tilson takes issue with Farinato over keeping male and female tigers together. "We have, all across the United States, a number of zoos that exhibit tigers together, and have done so for many years with no recorded instances of aggression," he says. "In fact, we often have tigers together as pairs or with their offspring, so I don't think critics really have a database to go on that tigers can't be exhibited together."

Animal rights activists are outraged over the incident.

"One of the things that disturbs us greatly is this concentration with zoos on breeding, breeding, breeding," says Pat Derby, president of the Performing Animal Welfare Society (PAWS) in Sacramento. "An animal has no value to zoos if it is not breeding. And then when they do try to pull them out of that breeding cycle, I don't think they do their homework in their frenzy to be breeding them. The same kind of care should have been put into seeing if it was feasible to leave her in with the male. Beyond that, philosophically we have a problem with any breeding program, because no matter how endangered a species is in the wild, in captivity we deal with surplus endangered species every day of our lives."

Lynn Manheim, program specialist with the International Society for Animal Rights in Clarks Summitt, Pennsylvania, agrees. "We are opposed to the trucking of animals around the country for mating purposes," she says. "This is one of many tragedies that can and have occurred."

Despite Tuka's death, the San Diego Wild Animal Park will in all likelihood send another female tiger to the Lowry Park Zoo, Jouett says. "Even if the male tiger killed the female tiger while attempting to mate her, it's not really an animal care or animal management problem," he insists. "It's a natural circumstance. In human terms, [sending another tiger to the Lowry Park Zoo] might sound strange, but it's not like this tiger is a serial killer or anything. I'm sure he was just being a tiger. He was probably getting some mixed signals because of the implant. She may have been cycling to some degree, so she may have been sending signals that, Hey, it's time to breed, climb aboard. He's ready to breed — that's what he's programmed to do through evolution; it's his nature to procreate — so he's going to take advantage of that." ■ account currently has about $200 in it," Twomey says. The group doesn't have any plans to start a contribution drive or to form a political action committee. "That's not our role. We are here to educate and inform," she says. Stocfen doesn't even ask for any money from his members. "All I'm asking for is people's time and expertise," he says.

Twomey says she plans to file a complaint with the Fair Political Practice Commission (FPPC) against the Airport Foundation. "It has come to my attention that the Airport Foundation has filed with the Secretary of State as a 501 C-3," she said at a ROAR group meeting last month. "This means it's a charitable organization, which is not supposed to support political causes. It also means this work is tax-deductible."

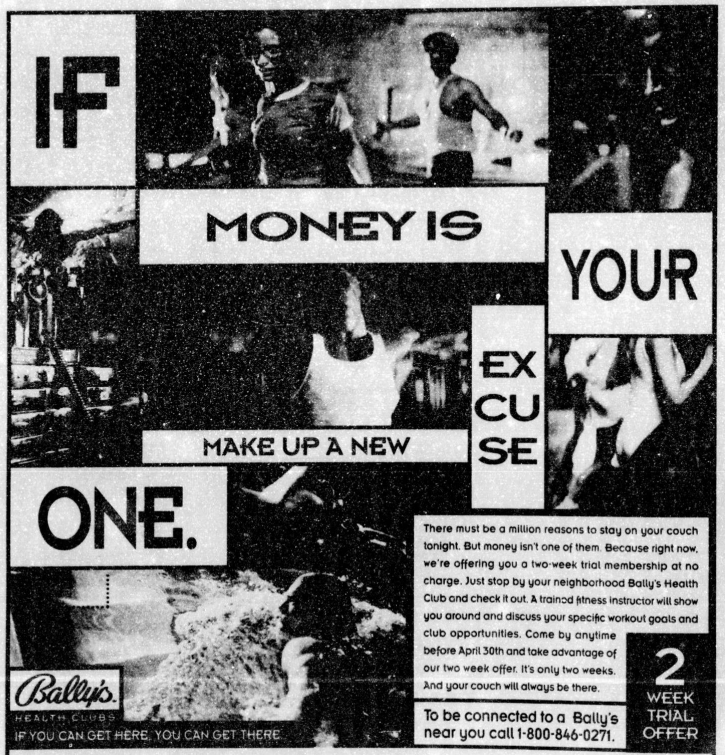

Seymour defends the foundation, and says it is set up like many other groups designed to educate and inform. "The Sierra Club, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, and the San Diego Taxpayers Association are all set up as 501 C-3 organizations," he replies. "We are comfortable with the legality of the organization, and prepared to defend any complaint drawn up against us."

Political observers speculate that the vast difference in financing, sophistication, and media connections could seriously hinder the opposition's success. Citizens for Miramar hired Nelson Communications Group, a public relations firm, to write press releases, take calls from reporters, and orchestrate community events, at a cost of $28,000 over the past three months, according to a campaign statement filed at the Voter Registrar's office.

Additionally, Manchester has said the foundation spent $100,000 on a feasibility study performed by the Washington Airport Task Force and ZHA Incorporated, two independent airport experts, which concluded that continued use of Lindbergh Field would have an adverse effect on San Diego's economy.

ROAR, on the other hand, has a communications network that consists of a single-line hotline, a single-page newsletter, and a grassroots letter-writing campaign and phone tree. Twomey says, "I check the hotline for messages about twice a day."

But ROAR members remain optimistic. At the La Jolla meeting, Twomey told a 75-person audience about the political developments of the airport debate. "I think that together, as a citizens' group, we can defeat this proposal," she said. "Most of you are probably from the communities that will be impacted by the airport. You are the people who can help us go door to door, solicit signatures, and speak out at town meetings. Each one of us has to take an active role."

County Supervisor Pam Slater, the only supervisor to vote against putting the airport issue on the June ballot, presented her views on the Manchester movement during the meeting. "I think Mr. Manchester has put the cart before the horse. We don't even know if San Diego really needs a new airport. We don't know what the demand for a new airport is, and we don't have any idea how much a new airport will cost the taxpayers.

"I've heard all over the city that Doug Manchester strong-armed several organizations — including the San Diego Taxpayers Association, the San Diego Chamber of Commerce, and the Vista City Council — into endorsing his position," she said. "I think it is unwise for the organizations to endorse a product for which there is no price tag."

Seymour denies the charges. "The Taxpayers Association voted 12 to 2 to endorse the vote. The Vista City Council voted 5 to 0, and the Chamber of Commerce voted 14 to 2 (to endorse the ballot measure). Neither Doug Manchester nor I were present during the voting. That doesn't seem like strong-arming to me."

Politicos who have said they will oppose Manchester include council members Harry Mathis and Barbara Warden, Del Mar Mayor Rod Franklin, and Congressman Randy "Duke" Cunningham. "What's important is that we come out with one solid voice on the issue," says Franklin. "If we stick to the issue that San Diego supports a strong military presence, it's very difficult for anyone to argue with that."

Another claim Seymour sharply refutes is that Doug Manchester stands to profit from the airport relocation to Miramar. "Mr. Manchester has said publicly that he is out of the development business. He is not planning to turn Lindbergh Field into a world-class resort. He already owns two hotels on the waterfront [the Hyatt and the Marriott on Harbor Drive], and he doesn't plan to build another." ■

San Diego Ethics Wonks Kneecapped by City Council

By Thomas K. Arnold

There's a proposal before the San Diego City Council to disband the city's two-year-old Elections, Campaign, and Governmental Ethics Advisory Board, and it was put there by none other than the board's chairman, lawyer Daniel E. Eaton. His purpose, he says, was to "make it crystal clear that no one panel is overseeing ethics compliance in the City of San Diego."

Eaton made the unexpected motion — akin to throwing up his hands in defeat — after the council, at its March 22 meeting, effectively killed any hopes of establishing a permanent ethics commission, an idea the board had been pushing since last November.

"I presented them with a poster that listed 19 cities, including Chicago and Albuquerque and San Francisco and Los Angeles, that have ethics commissions, along with the legend, 'Why isn't San Diego on this list?' " Eaton says. "I still don't know whether I got a satisfactory answer. I had hoped they would have asked the city attorney to draft an ordinance establishing an ethics commission, but that's not what they did."

Instead, the council merely asked the city attorney to come up with a plan to tighten campaign laws. The ethics commission matter was sent back to the rules committee "for consideration," which Eaton says means "it may or may never come up for another vote.

"That was disappointing," Eaton says. "I applaud the council's desire to make the rules tighter, but without a cop on the beat to enforce the rules, the clearest and tightest laws on the books ar, ineffectual."

Eaton has been accustomed to disappointment ever since he was named chairman of the ten-member volunteer panel in March 1993 by Mayor Susan Golding. In the ensuing year, four boardmembers have resigned and not been replaced. The board lost its city hall meeting space because the mayor's office did not want to incur the extra expense of validating parking. And the board's final report, presented last November, was "skeptically" received by the council, Eaton says.

The report called for the establishment of a permanent ethics commission, with broad investigatory and subpoena powers, to "enforce and monitor compliance with city governmental and campaign ethics laws"; a reform of the city's conflict-of-interest laws, such as banning honorariums for elected officials and the city manager; prohibiting former city officials from lobbying; and a reform of the city's campaign finance laws, such as putting time limits on candidate fundraising.

Despite the council's failure to take any action on the report, Eaton says, he remained guardedly optimistic. Council members "seemed at least somewhat receptive" to the first recommendation, to establish an ethics commission, he says. They directed the city manager to provide information on the costs and funding of such a commission.

On March 17, the city manager's office finally issued its report. Based on a commission made up of three salaried staff members and five appointed volunteers, Deputy City Manager Coleman Conrad came up with an annual budget of $215,000, including $78,000 for an executive director; $60,000 for an investigator; $32,000 for a clerical assistant; $20,000 for office space and other expenses; $18,000 for office furniture and equipment; and $7000 for "paper, printing, and postage."

But the report's conclusion, which was the basis for the council tabling the idea five days later, was anything but reassuring. "The city attorney has verbally indicated to staff that a change to the city charter will be required for the ethics commission to legally perform the duties outlined in this report," Conrad wrote. He then cited an even more formidable obstacle: "Based on the functions of the ethics commission as recommended by the ethics advisory board, the appropriate funding source for these expenditures is the general fund. However, given the city's current fiscal situation, the ethics commission will be a competing priority for general fund monies in 1995."

"He basically said come back tomorrow, like the Wizard of Oz," Eaton says. "We were as sensitive as anyone to the city's fiscal position, although to call it a crisis is overstating it. It was for that reason that we established a staffing level that was relatively modest, we felt. So we certainly did consider the city's budget. But I think it's also important to realize that the same sort of factors which caused the city to have an expanding array of competing forces on its budget are the ones that suggest the city is maturing and growing more sophisticated, and perhaps also suggesting there is a greater need for ethical oversight in a town that was comfortably self-policed before that."

City Councilman Ron Roberts disagrees. He was against the idea of an ethics advisory board from the very start, back when then-Mayor Maureen O'Connor pushed the plan through council in the fall of 1991. "You bring these things together and the next thing you know they'll make a recommendation that you institutionalize them by spending a quarter of a million dollars, and I think that's the problem here," he says. "The issue isn't ethics, most of us on the council understand that establishing another government board is like throwing money out of the window. That's why I voted against the proposal. I'm not going to fund this in the grand style they have asked.

"I keep asking, what are you trying to fix? And nobody can answer that. I've asked that three times — can somebody tell me what we're trying to fix, what we're going to spend a quarter of a million dollars to fix? I'm sure that part of this is the feeling that if you're not spending money to make government pure, then there must be something wrong with you. But the fact is, local government has worked pretty good here in San Diego."

Lisa Foster, a member of the ethics advisory board since July 1992 and the former executive director of California Common Cause, a nonprofit governmental watchdog group based in Sacramento, has some ready answers for Roberts and the other council members who feel an ethics commission is not needed.

"The board as a whole spent two years really doing a lot of investigating, doing a lot of research and interviewing a ton of people, and the recommendations we made were unanimous," she says. "First of all, as the city now functions, there are two different places, sometimes three, where one needs to go to find basic information about how city ethics and campaign finance laws work. You go to the city attorney, or to the city clerk, or to the state Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC) in Sacramento. There's no central location where people can actually get advice that is meaningful, and that's a serious problem, just from the bureaucratic standpoint."

The second problem that needs to be fixed, Foster says, "is that from an ethics standpoint, we found the city's ethics laws are very vague. They say things like don't do anything that would create the appearance of a conflict of interest. What that means in practical terms is that each department head makes decisions for his own department, and what we found is they all interpret these laws differently. Some say when someone gives you lunch or coffee or a Christmas turkey, it's okay; others say it's not okay. And we felt the city should have a uniform policy."

Local campaign finance disclosure laws, too, need to be more carefully scrutinized, Foster says. "Right now, when candidates file disclosure statements, they simply file them with the city clerk—and the clerk is the first to admit that no one critically reviews those forms," Foster says. "And unless someone reviews them to see if there's some kind of pattern, a lot of abuses go undetected. For example, when all the employees of a certain company suddenly contribute to a certain candidate, or when a $250 donor lists his occupation as a busboy, an occupation not customarily associated with giving a $250 contribution, then you start investigating it to see if it's been laundered.

"But apparently the council doesn't think this is needed," Foster adds. "so there's no point in us continuing. We made our point; we have no ongoing reason to exist. It's very frustrating. ■

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Illustration by Rick Geary

Dear Matthew:
Here's a question that I have considered since high school, have done extensive research on, have asked law enforcement officers about, and have received many different answers to. Is it illegal to possess and/or sell balloons filled with marijuana smoke? I need to know this because I would never do anything illegal.

— Lance R., Whereabouts Unknown

(ATTORNEY GENERAL'S WARNING: Contains information that may cause incarceration.) Oh, get serious, man. What you really mean is you don't want to be arrested. Well, same here — so even though the following smells like a duck, quacks like a duck, and follows you around the park begging for bread like a duck, it's not a duck. Or legal advice. Only a bona fide lawyer can dispense that. If one day you're jammed up by the fuzz, forget you ever heard of me. My attorney and I are already having trouble recalling your name.

I posed your little scheme to a sampling of keen legal minds, checked with the state attorney general's office, perused the state health and safety codes, and consulted a criminalist for scientific details, and near as I can tell, you'd be breaking no existing marijuana sales or possession laws by selling smoke. I'm sure when you open your little shop in Seaport Village, you'll be eyed by a gang of cops just itching to slap the cuffs on you. But if they do, the D.A. may not be happy to see the case come across his desk.

Marijuana sales and possession laws all require evidence of some measurable amount of the plant itself. Marijuana smoke, of course, contains the active ingredient THC, and the presence of THC in your balloons could be established in a lab by capillary gas chromatography. And gasses (the balloons' contents) can be weighed. So with enough analysis, it's theoretically possible to quantify the THC in your inventory. But since, strictly speaking, it's not in the form of plant material, you seem to have skated around the law. There's a chance you might be arrested for selling "paraphernalia"; balloons are specifically listed in the health and safety codes as potential drug gear. Balloons full of identifiable marijuana smoke sound like drug paraphernalia to me. But that's just speculation.

There's really no final answer to your question, because the issue of selling smoke, as far as I have determined, has never been tested in court. You might run up against an eager beaver D.A. who wants to make the argument that the intent of the marijuana laws is to keep people from coming under the influence of the drug, therefore the physical form doesn't matter. My sources considered that a pretty shaky argument, but you'd still have to be arrested and hauled into court in order to prove you're right. So until you're willing to put your entrepreneurial butt on the line, we won't know for sure. But whatever the outcome in court, our industrious officials in the Sacramento Home for the Elected will certainly hop on the issue and scribble away at the new "Lance Law," prohibiting the sale of narcotic smoke.

Since balloons gradually leak their contents, you have some interesting inventory problems, but that also might work in your favor when it comes to evidence. By the time your balloons arrive at a lab, there's no telling whether there would be enough THC left on the inside surface of the balloon to identify. And don't forget — America being the capitalistic wonderland it is, with our charming penchant for taking a small idea and force-feeding it to grotesque proportions — you're sure to inspire flashy competition. Crystal, hash, crack, heroin, PCP — all the smokeables. I'm tempted to suggest you apply all that brain power to getting a real job, but you have a pretty intriguing proposition. Anyone with additional thoughts (preferably, informed legal thoughts) is invited into the discussion.

Dear Sir:
I always felt a sense of pride that, of all the words for excrement in all the world's languages, it was the Spanish word caca that had come to transcend language barriers and be used universally to mean what it means. But recently I came across something that indicated that caca is not so much Spanish as Yiddish or Hebrew. Can you tell us what the origin of the word really is,
languagewise?

— Rick Muñoz, San Diego

Answerwise, I can, Rick. The word itself is definitely Spanish. But following the caca trail back many thousands of years in linguistic time, we arrive at the Indo-European language that spawned everything from Norwegian to Hindi. Many languages in Europe, the Middle East, and the Near East include descendants of the Indo-European roots kakka–or kaka–, to defecate. Most English dictionaries that bother to list caca trace it to the Latin equivalent, cacare. The Yiddish kack produced "cockamamy" (ridiculous, absurd). Yiddish expert Leo Rosten calls this Dutch version, kacken, has given us the handy noun "poppycock," meaning "nonsense." The word "Yinglish," a blend of Yiddish and English, since it was born on the Lower East Side of Manhattan early in this century. My favorite loan of the word caca, though, comes directly from Spanish — cacafuego, literally, "shit fire," a perfectly acceptable term in 16th-century England for a devilish or argumentative person or a bully, definitely a word to be proud of.

Got a question you need answered? Get it straight from the hip. Write to Matthew Alice, c/o the Reader, P. O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803, or fax your questions to 231-0489.

His tone was probably noncommittal. But I recoiled, silently rejecting what I took to be the implicit corollary: that I would want to keep my life unentangled with the likes of certain people. Now I look back and see in his statement the simple truth of it, rather than snobbery. And I laugh at myself for being so unprepared for what happened, having been so clearly warned.

A live-in servant was to me as alien as a personal bearer. Though I've had one now for nine years, I still never say "servant" in conversation. I say "babysitter." Even my housewife mom and plumber dad hired a babysitter now and then. Having a "housekeeper" would have struck them as laughably high-toned. I grew up, went to a good university, worked for ten years, then fretted over what I'd do for child care long before getting pregnant — without ever once imagining myself with a live-in nanny.

The size of our dwelling, just 890 square feet, precluded it. With two tiny bedrooms, where would a nanny sleep — in the (once-car) garage? (Since then I've heard of those who do. But then I was an innocent.) I still remember the jolt that ran through me when I realized there was a way another person might be squeezed into my household.

About a month after bringing my son home from the hospital, I was chatting with a friend whom I'll call Julia Bartlett. (I've changed some names and details to protect the privacy of those involved.) Julia had had her first baby nine months before me. While living in Del Mar, she had found a Mexican woman in her 50s who came in daily to look after the baby. But when the Bartletts moved to rural Escondido, Julia, an accountant, was flailing in her attempts to find a replacement sitter. One day the Mexican handyman whom the Bartletts hired occasionally announced that he would bring them up a girl from his home town in Michoacan. Out on the property in back of their house, Nando built a wooden structure about the size of a small construction trailer to serve as the girl's living quarters. He'd disappeared for a while, then showed up one day with Ana, who seemed to be loving, intelligent, tidy, hardworking, conscientious, and grateful to be receiving $300 a month in exchange for working 12 hours a day, six days a week. Recounting what had happened, Julia sounded like she was partly in shock, partly in ecstasy.

Before that conversation ended, I saw the future. We live in Clairemont, on a lot that abuts an alley. At the innermost corner of our property, a previous owner had created a fenced-in area where a recreational vehicle could be kept. The same night as my conversation with Julia, I was badgering Jack, my husband: couldn't we place a house trailer there? Get water and electricity into it fairly easily? Jack was appalled. Still adjusting to having a baby, he hated the thought of adding yet another person to the mix — indeed creating another mini-household. But I was unshakable. The cost of placing Jason (our baby) in a day-care home (plus occasional babysitting bills) would probably exceed $350 a month, I pointed out. And imagine the freedom: we could go out at a moment's notice. Imagine the luxury of being so close to our child (we both worked primarily at home, in an office that adjoined our house). Even the problem of finding someone seemed to solve itself when Julia told me that Ana had a friend back home named Celia who was interested in working here for a while.

On April 20, 1985, we bought a used, 17-foot house trailer from an Escondido RV dealer. It was stubby, but reasonably clean, and no worse, we told ourselves, than the average spare bedroom. It had a built-in refrigerator, stove, sink, and dining nook. A tiny bathroom concealed a toilet connected to a holding tank (one inclined to stink, we would discover). As spring unfolded and Jason learned to smile, I shopped for odds and ends to augment the trailer's homeyness. I found a cube-shaped television, powder-puff pink, at ANA's discount appliance outlet off Mission Gorge Road. At Target, I picked up a set of sturdy pink plastic dishes.

From Ana, a tall, thin woman with a melancholy air, I gleaned only fragmentary insight into the character of her friend. Celia was 25 and divorced, I learned, the mother of three children, a girl around seven and two boys, one five and one just three. She spoke no English (nor did Ana), but I knew Spanish, though not well enough to comprehend much about the vegetable-packing plant where the two young women had toiled and become best friends.

Nando agreed to bring Celia back on his next return trip. On May 15, the date of their projected arrival, I cut a bunch of daisies from my Euryops bush and placed them in a vase in the trailer. But a phone call from the Bartletts made our stomachs tighten: Nando had shown up, tipsy, with a story about missing some connection with Celia. He'd come without her.

The empty trailer seemed to mock us; the day of my return to work loomed. A call from Ana confirmed that Celia still wanted to come. It seemed that Nando had simply decided against the bother of escorting her.

Celia would have to journey here alone, we concluded. I made my first acquaintance with Western Union and sent her money for a plane ticket. As for the problem of getting her across the border, I decided to hide her in the trunk of my Isuzu and drive her across.

Looking back on that decision, I'm amused by how much our lives — Celia's and mine — had merged even by that point. I knew virtually nothing about her, but I'd lived in San Diego long enough to understand the dangers of the alien-smuggling routes through the border canyons. For her to cross that way would expose her to the risk of being robbed or raped. Neither Jack nor I wanted that on our consciences. On the other hand, I'd been traveling to Tijuana (for Spanish lessons) once or twice a week for at least two years. My car was an aging diesel, whose cream-colored body bore many dents and scratches. Yet not once had an inspector ever asked me to open the trunk. Now I pondered whether a person could safely travel there. As a test, I slipped into it one quiet morning when none of my neighbors appeared to be watching. When Jack closed the lid, I found that a fair amount of light and air leaked in. Next I turned my attention to plotting how I would react in the unlikely event of an inspection. I would feign astonishment. I'd say this unknown young woman must have seen me open the trunk with the lever next to the driver's seat, when I stopped to shop at the Calimax. Then she must have popped herself in, in a desperate attempt to cross the border. This story soothed me.

[illegible] out of a moment's notice.

On the morning of June 13, dressed in red, I waited for Celia at the Tijuana airport. I had wired her a note about looking for la senora en rojo, but watching the crowd that streamed out of the plane from Guadalajara, I wondered how we'd ever find each other. And then I knew: she had to be the short, thin woman striding down the hall, battered duffel on her shoulder, grin on her face. I was exuberant, stammering clumsy Spanish, but as sincere as a puppy in my welcome.

I loaded her into the front of my car, then drove to La Calandria, an unpretentious restaurant in the river zone shopping center. I ordered coffee for us both, and as we grasped the cups and sipped the hot, cinnamon-scented brew, I struggled to explain my plan. We would drive to Calimax, to substantiate my cover story (which I wanted her to understand well enough to corroborate, if necessary). Celia seemed to grasp it all, and though nervous, she wasn't quailing. I studied her more closely. Her short dark hair was badly cut, her teeth ravaged by too much sugar and bad dentistry. She smelled of soured sweat. But in other incarnations, she would be beautiful, her skin the color of maple syrup, her eyes huge and set beneath arching brows as delicately feathered as those of a model on a magazine cover.

I have no real memory of how I loaded her in the trunk at the Calimax on that sunny Thursday morning. I do know that when I got to the border line, my heart was pounding. I smoked a cigarette, and if I had driven right up to the gate, surely the guard would have seen the tremor in my hand. But it took me 40 minutes to reach the inspection point, by which time a great sense of calm had taken over me. "What's your citizenship?" I met his eyes: American. And what was I bringing back from Mexico. Nothing. Nothing.

On the U.S. side, I took the Palm Avenue exit then headed for the Silver Strand, thinking to unload Celia at the state beach. But I felt too self-conscious in the presence of the surfers there, and farther north, the Coronado Shores complex contained more traffic than I expected. In some alley in central Coronado, I finally summoned the nerve to let her out. Celia's face was the color of raw sirloin and glistening with sweat. Yet she was safe; we surfed home on a wave of jubilation. Two days later, I was writing in my journal that "those were the best, most comradely moments" we'd shared together. Then the awkward adjustments had crowded them out.

As soon as Celia and I had arrived at the house, Jack and I tried to get her to eat. When she said she wasn't hungry, we urged her to shower, to settle into the trailer, to spend the rest of the day recovering from her long journey. Instead she hung around in the house (lonely? or incapable of loafing on her first afternoon in this terrifying new world?). I still see her as she was in those first hours, a silent, zombie figure moving a rag over our not-too-dusty TV set. Sometime in the mid-afternoon, she cooked herself a fried egg, and that evening she went to bed without supper, pleading lack of appetite.

I knew that Julia had purchased some clothes for Ana, so the next day I carted Celia off to Gemco to follow suit. I bought some jeans and a few cheap tops, and Celia seemed rigid with the mortification of this clumsy charity. But wasn't it my duty as her patrona? At least it was fleeting. That evening we confronted the question that had most disturbed me in the prospect of someone living with us: Where would she eat? Breakfast and lunch at our house were noisy and hurried, perhaps merrier with more, but Jack and I looked upon dinner as our time for private communion. We needn't have worried. Again she turned down food when we ate — then about 8:30 p.m. came in from her trailer to do the dinner dishes, wolfing down a piece of chicken while standing in the kitchen.

We got a break from her on Sunday, her day off, when we showed her how to take the three buses necessary to reach Ana in Escondido. Monday we started our first real workweek together, inventing the patterns that would become our routines.

Routine so soon grinds away the snagging rough spots. After one week, Jack and I whispered to each other that we might survive the transition. The middle of the second week, something happened that made me sure we would.

I was working in my office when a sound caught my ear, a rhythmic noise that came in bursts. I made my way toward it, perplexed; certain I'd never heard this noise before. Ten paces short of the living room, I stared. Jason, four months old, was lying on his back and laughing for the first time in his life, emitting not some weak-kneed coo, but great guffaws that welled up from deep within him, shook his tiny body. Celia shot me a glance, assessing me. Then her hand appeared above the baby's face, dangling a set of keys. More guffaws. She and I said nothing, but astonishment and pleasure connected us, made us a merged adult presence suddenly confronted with evidence that the ultimate ground of Being was...gut-wrenchingly funny.

The other thing that drew us together in those earliest days was her capture by the Border Patrol. Now I look back and marvel that Jack and I didn't just give up. Disaster after only 17 days! But we were the rawest of rookies, she the wettest of wetbacks. Some misstep was inevitable. It came on a Sunday when Ana had made the trip down to visit Celia. Sometime around noon, the two announced that they were heading for the beach. They had changed into shorts and were giggling with self-consciousness. Jack and I joked with them that now they'd fool the migra for sure; now they looked like Americans.

When they weren't back by four that afternoon, I started worrying. Around six we got a call from the Bartletts. They'd heard from Nando, who apparently had made a date to meet with the girls that afternoon. The three of them were waiting for a bus somewhere along Torrey Pines Road, when Nando had spotted a Border Patrol car and bolted, panicking the girls into trying to flee, inexpertly. Around 1:00 a.m. we heard from a mournful-sounding Celia that she and Ana had been caught, driven around all afternoon in a paddy wagon, made to sit for several hours of processing in an INS station, then dumped off in Tijuana. They had about $70 between them and would get a hotel for the night.

Now there were two of them to transport back again, and I felt scared to try carrying both in my trunk. The rear of the car might sag more; the Fourth of July was approaching and the inspectors might be searching for fireworks. Conferring with the Bartletts, we decided that Herb (Julia's husband) should draft Nando to serve as coyote. Early Monday night, the two men drove to the girls' hotel in the Zona Norte, where Herb talked to the miserable Ana and Celia, then left Nando to be their shepherd.

Jack and I braced for a call in the middle of that night, telling us to pick them all up in San Ysidro. But no word came that night, nor the next day. Herb finally telephoned about 10:00 p.m. Tuesday. Nando had just called from Tijuana, very drunk, and had declared that the girls had changed their minds: they had met some guys and were running off with them. They were "no good," Nando muttered thickly, and we were well rid of them.

The Bartletts seemed ready to agree. Jack and I felt otherwise. Two and a half weeks isn't enough to know anything, really, about anyone. But we were as close as you can come to knowing that Celia wasn't irresponsible. Already, I couldn't simply delete her from our life. We decided I would drive down to Tijuana the next morning, to try to corroborate Nando's story.

I found the hotel readily enough, found Ana's name on the register. But the girls had already checked out, earlier that morning. I was trudging back to my car, shoulders drooping, when along the way, in the most amazing coincidence in my life, I glimpsed Ana, accompanied by Celia and two Mexican men in their early 20s. I caught up with them in the middle of Constitucion, and we started gabbling right there in the street, edging over to the line of parked cars. Celia and Ana looked exhausted. Nando had abandoned them, after getting angry and drunk, they told me heatedly. I was in the midst of explaining that I had been afraid to smuggle them both when a third young man, unknown by any of us, butted into our ensemble. This man had been standing off to our side. Good-looking, he was dressed in jeans and a sport shirt. His questions were brusque, badgering: What had I been afraid of? What were we up to? Where were we going? A portly, middle-aged man appeared, producing a badge of the Mexican state judicial police. Seconds later, they were hustling the five of us into the back of an unmarked car, driving away from the center of town.

I will spare you all the details of our session with this pair. In retrospect, I think we must have looked odd, and that was enough to make the two cops pounce. Once in the car, it didn't take me long to reflect that I had done no wrong. That made me unafraid, even self-righteous. I started to badger the badge-bearers, insisted they take us to the station. I also showed them a press identification card issued by the San Diego Police Department. Maybe that press card made no difference to the outcome, which was that — after effusive reassurances that no wrong had been done by either side — they released Celia, Ana, and me.

Into the trunk of my lease and drive her across.

Out on the broiling sidewalk, Celia seemed to make another judgment of me. They had met their two companions during their day with the Border Patrol, she confided, and the men had tried to help them make their way through the canyons on Monday, when they'd been caught a second time. The two men had been muy respectuoso — unlike Nando, who'd started drinking and acting jealous as soon as he got to their hotel. Eventually, he had demanded that one or both of the girls sleep with him, and when they refused, he'd laughed that they were on their own.

So scratch Nando the coyote. By this point I was sufficiently irritated by him and impatient with the mess that I loaded Celia and Ana into the trunk and smuggled them across the border and back to Clairemont. Two days later, I was gushing in a letter to my parents about how well things were going between Celia and me. I kept a copy of that letter, in which I praised her spunk, her level-headedness, the sense of humor she retained during the Tijuana crisis. "I think she's much less timid than Ana, and she seems to have a much easier time being open and direct with me than Ana does with Julia," I wrote.

From a 25-year-old Mexican woman who'd had three of her own children, I had expected competence at such baby-tending basics as diapering, burping, feeding. But in the days and weeks that followed, we discovered that Celia had rarer assets, too, among them a keen mind that took in everything around her. What she saw, she remembered; soon she was routinely finding things that we misplaced. I never once saw her forget about Jason while her thoughts wandered off (and I was scanning for slips). Celia's alertness would have been natural in some edgy, urgent person, say, an air traffic controller. But she also owned a preternatural stock of patience. She could hold and walk and sit with Jason, yielding to his six-month-old rhythms with a grace I never commanded.

I was one to ward off boredom, baby and adult, energetically. When I heard that San Diego State University had an "infant stimulation program" (in which aspiring early-childhood educators got to play with and observe babies), I signed up Jason. My in-laws agreed to share the chauffeuring duties, and I had Celia go along, urging her to walk around and explore the campus while Jason was being stimulated and observed. Living with her, after all, felt in many ways like living with a foreign exchange student; I took some pleasure at feeding her new sights, American visions. But rather than wander, she usually stayed in the large gaudy playroom, watching the young blonde students in their Aztec sweatshirts exclaiming over the babies. If she saw any comedy in the contrast with her homeland, she said nothing.

She wasn't one to chatter or unload unwanted confidences. I had to draw tidbits from her, and this I sometimes did at the end of the day, when I left my desk and came to reclaim my baby. Sometimes we would sit together and watch him crawl or balance or put toys in his mouth, and I would ask delicate questions about her ex-husband or her children or her parents (with whom her children lived). She doled out pieces of her past that were digestible, which whetted my taste for more. When she talked about her children, I sensed heartache over the separation. But she didn't flaunt this pain. It spilled out only rarely, as on the day her mother called to say that Celia's middle child had been stung by a poisonous scorpion. Celia emitted a cry that was animal in its intensity; grilling her mother about the boy (who was recovering well), her voice was deep and hoarse in its shaking fear. Later that day, she told me that every night out in the trailer she fell down on her knees to beg God to watch out for her children. I was surprised; even in those early days, Celia never struck me as a woman much preoccupied with religion.

We were surprised, too, on her birthday, when we presented her with a cake and a sky-blue warm-up suit, and she blurted that no one had ever done this for her before. Her birthday came in late November. It was around then that we broached the question of whether she would go home for Christmas, and if she did, whether she would come back to work for us another year. She didn't answer us instantly, but I don't think she thought about it for long. She loved Jason, loved her cozy trailer, which she'd adorned with photos of her children. Every night she carried out her dinner on a tray to consume it there in happy privacy and watch telenovelas on Channel 6. (We'd told her early on that we could clean up our own dishes; that we thought she deserved a break from us after being in the house from 7:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.) We, in turn, adored her. On her birthday, I wrote in my journal that "being around [her] now feels like being around my sister. We joke a lot, gossip (some). I feel much more comfortable leaving Jason with her than with Jack (though it's kind of too bad to say so. But Celia knows Jason better in some ways...)."

In my memory, everything about her 1985 Christmas leave-taking seems golden. We paid for her round-trip ticket (our gift to her), and I shopped for presents for her children as pleasurably as I had for my own nephews and nieces. A day or two before the holiday, we drove her and her bulging borrowed suitcases to the chaos at the Tijuana Airport. Dressed in a glittering, heavy-shouldered sweater, wearing thick dramatic makeup, she looked like a distant, wealthy cousin to the sweaty girl who'd sauntered off the plane in June. We knew we'd see her again, soon, and that she would bring us back the working parent's Holy Grail: the guarantee of a full year of the very highest quality child care.

There did remain the nuisance of getting her back across the border. But a Mexican friend had offered us the hope of a permanent solution. This friend, Beatriz, worked in a Tijuana office where she said she could easily concoct some phony pay records for Celia. If Celia took these records to the American consulate (to prove her gainful employment in Tijuana), she might be able to obtain a border-crossing permit, the so-called mica, which enables Tijuana residents to come to San Diego to visit friends and spend money. Celia still would be breaking the law by working for us — but we would at least be spared the risks and inconveniences of alien-smuggling.

So when I picked up Celia, two weeks after her triumphant return home, I drove her to Beatriz's house, where she settled into a spare bedroom. After a day or two, she got up before dawn, joined the long line in front of the American embassy, waited for many hours, then faced a bureaucrat who turned her down summarily. Once again, we resorted to my car trunk. This time I loaded her in Beatriz's driveway, and once again we passed the inspection without incident.

Our inability to outfox the system annoyed me throughout 1986. Celia never again was caught by the INS, and every month increased her camouflage, made herself more American, less vulnerable to detection. Yet we hoped she might decide to stay with us yet another year, in which case we'd face the border-crossing risk again. Every day, I knew, untold numbers of Mexicans crossed the border with legal micas. Some crossed with phony ones, though I had no idea where you got those.

For a while, I turned my attention to constructing a false American identity for Celia, starting with a birth certificate. I knew that copies of these are available from the county health department — but only to requesters who can supply the maiden name of the mother named on the certificate. One day I even went down to the central library's newspaper room and pored over microfilm of 25-year-old newspapers, hoping to find the death notice of some Latina baby, hoping that I'd be able to trace the mother's maiden name through the death certificate. I had no luck. So when Celia did indeed decide to go home and then return for another year, all we'd come up with was a more elaborate version of what we'd tried before.

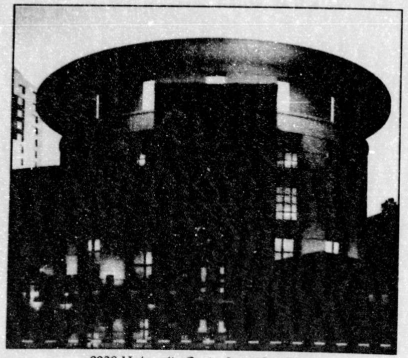

That second year, Celia had taken a bit longer to make her decision. I think she was then probably at the end of the maximum amount of time she had envisioned being away from her children. Her youngest, three when she left, was now nearing his fifth birthday. He'd start kindergarten without her if she stayed. Her nine-year-old daughter would all too soon be approaching those boundaries where childhood runs into puberty. But I think the passage of the months had wrought what once would have been unthinkable: she was getting used to being away from them. She could tell herself that all three children were healthy and secure with guardians who were much more like parents than abuelitas. Whenever she turned her mind to them, I'm sure she hungered to be with them. But by the end of 1986, thoughts of them no longer were assailing her hourly. She was by then too immersed in, too distracted by, the details of our lives.

In the spring of that year, I had taken Celia back with me to Cleveland, where my father had lung cancer. We stayed only about a week, but in the course of it Celia saw something far more hidden than the details of my family members' sex lives: she watched how my father and my mother and my siblings and I faced death. She heard the way my father's ghastly cough echoed through the house. She observed my mother's urgent desire to give him something, anything, that would numb his terrible pain—though the painkillers stole from her, from all of us, the living presence of this man we all loved without reservation.

He didn't die that week. That came a few weeks later, and when I flew back to Cleveland again for the funeral, I left Jason behind me for the first time, secure that Celia and Jack would take good care of him. Almost as soon as I got back to San Diego, workers began ripping apart my house, which Jack and I had decided to enlarge dramatically: expanding the living room and adding an entrance hall, along with a second-story master bedroom suite. In the months that followed, we were assailed by screaming electric saws and hammering headaches and more sheet rock dust than we thought possible and maddening delays. Jack and Jason and I camped in the tiny section of the building that wasn't being changed, compared to which Celia's trainer seemed luxurious. She took Jason out there for his naps when the sun didn't heat it too unbearably. All of us rejoiced as the new spaces finally opened up, and the debris receded, and the new paint went on, the new porcelain cabinet handles from Home Depot, the new dressing-room-style light strips in the downstairs bathroom. When the last worker left, we felt the pride, not just of ownership, but of survival and shared creation.

Celia felt it too. Though her primary job was watching Jason, he took long naps every afternoon. Two mornings a week he went to nursery school (no longer at San Diego State, but at a nearby church-run facility). That left Celia more than enough time to do housework. She hated cooking and had let us know this early on, so we never asked her to do anything more in the kitchen than preparing our dinnertime bowl of greens and chopped raw vegetables. She developed a schedule for the other chores. She'd do the laundry Mondays and Fridays, clean the bathrooms once a week. Every other day, she would vacuum our new Oriental rug in the living room and the old green wall-to-wall we'd reinstalled in Jason's bedroom.

Cleaning was something she did competently, but her greatest aptitude was for creating order. In the master bathroom, she would sweep our toothpaste and contact lens solutions and moisturizers from the gleaming new tiled counter top and conceal them neatly under the sink (from where we would have to extract them all again that very evening). But the place looked like a hotel bathroom when she was done; she liked that pristine austerity. In Jason's room, she would dump out the contents of his drawers and refold his little shirts and pants into geometrically satisfying stacks. Or she would organize the books on his shelf, not alphabetically (she wasn't that literate) but by size, from The Very Hungry Caterpillar and Quick as a Cricket on down to The Tale of Peter Rabbit and the tiny Golden Books.

Sometimes when Jason was napping or playing with a toddler friend, she would sprawl out on the green carpeting and study the books herself. As Jason had learned to talk that year, she had picked up words alongside him, then sped up and passed him by. Though I pleaded with her to speak Spanish to him, I felt tugged too by maternal pride in her English. By Halloween of 1986, when we bought pumpkins and made her carve one for her trailer, she could say things like, "I no can do it! I draw very bad!" But we joked and made her do it anyway, and she knew enough English to say to Jason, "What preetty, preetty pumpkins."

That year, when the Christmas decorations went up, we urged her to return to Michoacán for a three-month stay. We found a temporary replacement for her, and on the day of Celia's departure, she and I took this roundabout route. Very early in the morning, we drove to Mexicali. In the Mexican state capital, Celia and I made for the government office where local residents apply for Mexican passports. It took hours to complete all the steps of the application process, but we got assurances that she could pick up the document in 12 weeks. We then made the three-hour drive along the Mexican side of the border back to Tijuana's airport, where she caught a plane to Guadalajara. Over the holidays, we nursed the hope that, once armed with a passport issued in Mexicali, she would better resemble a Baja local and thus would have a better chance of winning a border-crossing permit. Three months later, she did get the passport (another day trip to Mexicali) and returned to Tijuana. But when she repeated the drill at the consulate, she was turned down once again.

I would have packed her once again into my trunk, smuggled her yet again that way, except for what happened on the day I picked Celia up at the airport and took her to the home of Beatriz. That afternoon, when I was heading back to Clairemont, alone, the border guard asked me to open my trunk for inspection. It was empty, of course. But I drove home frightened and dazed. Two beams pierced my mental fog: She could have been in my trunk. I would have been caught.

So by the time we learned that Celia failed to get the mica, Jack and I had come up with a new plan. I picked up Celia at Beatriz's and drove her to Las Playas, Tijuana's beachfront enclave. In those days, you could cruise right next to the cyclone fence just north of the seaside bullring; from your car, you could see right into Border Field State Park on the U.S. side. When Celia and I arrived there, we detected no sign of the migra's telltale green paddy wagons. She got out, ran down to the sand, and rounded the point where the fence broke off, hanging above the tide line like an unfinished sentence. I drove back to the border in suspense.

Jack was waiting on the American side, in the parking lot. Per our plan, he was carrying a birdwatching book, wearing binoculars, waiting for Celia to show up. We'd figured that he would be wise to stage a little charade, act like she happened to catch his eye, and he was asking her out for coffee. (Gee, Mr. Border Patrol Agent, how was I to know she was an illegal alien?) But the scene Jack discovered at the park made him laugh aloud. With the INS nowhere in sight, the place was filled with schoolchildren from Las Playas. Families were crossing back and forth as if no border existed. Jack became so engrossed by it all that he forgot to watch for Celia; later, she would regale me with a reenactment of what it took to get his attention. "Psssst," she'd practically shouted, across the parking lot. "Jack," she called him. "JACK!"

Though I wasn't present, that scene sticks in my memory. I think it was the first time Celia used Jack's first name. She'd begun our life together addressing us as señor and señora. The subservience implied by those titles bothered me, but I figured she'd be more uncomfortable calling us anything else. So we acquiesced, indeed got used to the titles, just as I got used to calling her tu, while she addressed me back as Usted. I wish I could remember more precisely how this changed. But the realignments between Celia and me came so gradually, so undramatically. From the start, I think I treated her as an equal, a comrade-in-arms in our campaign to raise Jason and keep a tidy house. I think she got used to that, and somehow we came to the day when the señoras and the Usteds sounded silly and distracting, like clanking tin cans tied on by someone else and finally lost in the rush down the roadway.

By 1987, she and I had come to know so much about each other. I'd heard all about her younger brother's drinking and her spiteful older sister. I could picture her youngest son's mischievous independence; her middle son's astonishing blue-green eyes; her daughter's dance triumphs. I knew, too, when Celia started sleeping with the Mexican boyfriend she finally acquired here. (She asked my help in getting contraceptives.) She, in turn, knew all the big things about me, the things that any good friend would know. But she also saw the smaller, more intimate details that almost no one glimpsed, save Jack. She knew exactly when I colored my hair and what shade of L'Oréal I used to color it with. She knew what the inside of my underwear drawer looked like. She could have told you how Jack and I acted when we'd had a major fight.

One thing I didn't know about Celia was how she saw her future. In the early years, she'd always insisted she was going back to Mexico, sooner rather than later. Occasionally, we would hear about some young Mexican woman who had abandoned children back there for a new life in the north, and Celia invariably expressed contempt for such people. Yet year after year, she chose to stay with us.

Then in the fall of 1988, when I was pregnant with my second child, she announced that the time had come; she wouldn't return after the upcoming Christmas season. She'd missed too many years of her children's lives. Her parents, in their late 60s, needed her. Jack and I could hardly quibble. We felt blessed to have had Celia's help for as long as we did. Sometime early in December, we placed ads in the San Diego Union for a replacement, and as we started interviewing candidates, we told ourselves maybe we'd get lucky again, maybe our new baby would begin its life with a babysitter as wonderful as Celia had been.

We didn't talk much about what happened in her hometown, but I mentally filled in the blanks. I imagined her feeling trapped by the all-too-familiar streets, by family melodramas. After enjoying American-style independence for three and a half years, she surely must have squirmed under the strictures of her autocratic father. I imagined her reshouldering the domestic burdens of his house, burdens that came without the compensatory pleasure of a salary (by 1988, Jack and I had increased her pay to about $525 a month). I imagined that she missed us and missed Carlos, her boyfriend, and finally let all that sweep her north again.

I didn't ask many questions. Having Celia back for my baby's impending birth was a gift horse whose forequarters I had no intention of approaching. The baby was born early in May, and I recall a week or two of near-total domestic bliss.

I was nursing the baby, giving her my breast while sitting in the swivel rocker in the living room, when Celia told me that she was pregnant with Carlos's baby. I felt a stab of cranky irritation: this was my time to be pampered, but now, suddenly, Celia would have the greatest claim to pampering. I struggled to hide my dismay, to pose neutral questions about her plans.

I knew she'd felt somewhat ambivalent about Carlos, though their involvement with each other had gradually deepened. Sometime after their romance had begun, we'd learned that Carlos was living in an even smaller, much more miserable trailer. It sounded awful, and we had told Celia that we wouldn't mind if she invited him to live with her. He seemed a decent man, a lean, well-muscled fellow with the weathered good looks of a cowboy and none of the bad habits; he didn't drink, didn't smoke, and showed no inclination to cheat on Celia. Eventually, we came to realize he was too shy to do so, too rigidly fixed in his routines. Those routines transferred easily enough to the trailer. (Despite her hatred of cooking, Celia cooked for Carlos every night; on my rare forays there I smelled oil and onions and chiles, whereas always before it had been odorless as a convent cell.) But Carlos had seemed gripped by too much inertia to marry Celia. The news of a baby changed that immediately

Fourth of July weekend, and we offered them the use of our house for the wedding party.

As Celia planned the details of the celebration, I fretted silently. Jack and I now had a boisterous four-and-a-half-year-old, a newborn, and a house that required more cleaning than ever. What would it be like to watch Celia scrubbing bathtubs, lugging my baby around, while her body grew heavier, ever more tired? I didn't worry for long. A week or two later, Celia announced that she and Carlos weren't ready to start a family after all. She'd decided to have an abortion.

I drove her to the Bvtch Area Community Clinic, and later on I clucked sympathetically when Celia told me how the abortion counselor there turned out to be a closet abortion foe, one who had threatened her with all manner of spiritual repercussions if she took her baby's life. These threats outraged Celia, who went ahead and made an appointment for the procedure, to be done at a doctor's office in Mission Valley. You have to count me squarely among those who believe abortion should not be illegal. At the same time, I'm profoundly thankful that I've never felt trapped by a pregnancy. To me, abortions are painful, bloody, sad reminders of failure. I also felt shamed that Celia's decision to have one happened to serve my own interests so well.

I wound up driving her and Carlos to and from the doctor's office; otherwise they would have had to go by bus. I'm glad I did. On the way home, Celia rolled up her eyes and fainted, and all that Carlos, mortified beyond words, could do was shrug and grin.

If the baby was canceled, the wedding proceeded. In retrospect, I think Celia was testing Carlos; if he'd backed out then, she would have ended the relationship. But he knew he was trapped. After the ceremony, they feasted on carne asada, which they ate with their friends on our patio.

Just three months later, Celia told me she was pregnant again — and this time there would be no abortion. Instead she would go back to Mexico at Christmas and remain in her hometown to deliver the baby there, at a fraction of the cost she would incur in San Diego. Carlos would remain behind, working at the menial job that he'd held for years, though he would escort her home and meet her family.

In November, Jack and I went back to interviewing; a domineering African woman, a beaten-looking American divorcee, and a bubbly German student stand out in my memory. But we settled on Elena, a 20-year-old Mexican who spoke English fairly well. This time, I didn't cry when I said goodbye to Celia. With a husband in San Diego, she seemed likely to return with his baby somehow, sometime. I suspect that even she never dreamt she'd be back as soon as she was. During the course of that Christmas vacation, Carlos cracked up a motorcycle and spent days in a coma, with only Celia keeping a vigil at his side. By around February it appeared that he probably would recover, but he was still often confused and disoriented, and Celia would have to accompany him back to San Diego.

Celia rolled up her eyes and fainted, and all that Carlos, mortified beyond words, could do was shrug and grin.

They got themselves across the border. In the minds of Jack and me, this was one responsibility that Celia and Carlos's marriage had relieved us of, and if Celia disagreed, she never gave us any hint. She likewise never intimated that we should fire Elena to take her back, and we didn't volunteer to do so. Elena, the passing weeks had revealed, was lonely, superstitious, and quirky. She believed, for example, that beet juice was good for her skin, so she smeared it on her face, in place of blush. But she cleaned house well and tended the baby possessively. In the spring of 1990, as Celia's pregnancy advanced, Celia and I settled in to merely being friends.

In this new mode, we stopped speaking in Spanish altogether. (She needed the practice speaking English.) She and Carlos had found a one-bedroom apartment on Clairemont Drive, and sometimes I would drop in just to visit. Other times there was work to be done; I found out what she needed to do to get prenatal care, paid for by Medi-Cal. There were forms to be filled out and hours of waiting to be endured at the welfare office in Kearny Mesa. I helped her find a pediatrician who seemed to welcome Medi-Cal patients. And one night early in July, she called me as we'd prearranged, so that I could drive her and Carlos to Sharp Hospital and hold her hand and tell her to breathe and cheer her on throughout the night and all the next morning, while Carlos, paralyzed with embarrassment and befuddlement, grinned in a corner of the room until his 11-pound son was born.

They named him Enrique.

When he was about two months old, around September of 1990, Celia left for Mexico again with him. I forget now how she explained this move. (She and Carlos were getting along as well as they ever did.) I began to believe that Celia had developed a secret taste for the drama, the pathos, of her leave-takings — on each side of the border. Certainly she had become by this point a woman classically split between her one life in Mexico and her very different existence here.

This time I knew she'd be back, and as had happened before, I heard about it first from Carlos, around February or March of 1991. Elena had quit in November, and we'd hired an older Mexican woman, Juanita, who I had hoped might mother us all. We had prepared for her arrival almost as diligently as we originally had readied ourselves for Celia. For years, Celia's trailer had leaked in every serious rainstorm. It was now more than 20 years old; we felt ashamed to ask anyone to sleep in it. So we shopped around and bought a newer model from an El Cajon RV dealer, trading in the older one. When she moved in, Juanita revealed little of what she thought of the accommodations. Under her jolly exterior, it turned out, there cowered someone childlike in her fear. Whatever Juanita was afraid of seemed to dull her wits, make her stupid, in ways that drove us crazy. (Among other things, she'd straighten a room by stuffing all the clutter willy-nilly into the nearest closet or cupboard.) We were searching for an excuse to fire her, when Celia let it be known that she was interested in coming back to work for us. Even with a baby, she'd be better than Juanita, we had no doubt.

From the spring of 1991 until the fall of 1992, Celia brought Enrique to work with her every weekday. She and Carlos found an apartment three blocks from us, and Celia would walk over between 7:30 and 8:00 in the morning and work until between 4:30 and 5:00 that afternoon. She'd long ago stopped working Saturdays, except to babysit a few times a month on Saturday evenings. Interspersing her days with us was the time that she spent caring for Enrique: breast-feeding him, changing his diapers, settling him down for naps, consoling him. It made for a busy, though hardly an arduous, day.

But Celia wasn't entirely happy. I knew there were tensions between her and Carlos, fights over money and sex and more, no single issue explosive enough to shatter the marriage, but simmering resentments. She was sensitive, too, over the status of Enrique in our house. As time passed, and he got old enough to pick fights and throw tantrums and break things (no more so than any child), she would harshly berate him or slap him as I had never once seen her do to my children.

This bothered me. And it wasn't the only criticism I could have made of her by that seventh year together. Long before then, she had learned how easy it is to make me feel guilty, and this she did routinely (say, when I asked her to babysit at night or when, on the rarest of occasions, I arrived home a few minutes late). As her child-tending duties had expanded, her housekeeping had grown sketchier. Yet whenever I asked her to do some long-ignored task, I felt an intentional chill. Once in a while, some minor incident would reduce her to the toddlers' level, where she became as jealous and touchy as they were.

Even listing these things makes them seem important. But they weren't. I think they were the sorts of minor irritants spawned in any family. I must have done things that annoyed her too. The crucial thing for Jack and me — the fundamental thing — was that we could trust Celia absolutely. She was honest and smart. She had a great sense of humor. And she could take care of our children and run our house almost as competently as we could.

APR 1994

I can't say that we were thrilled when, in August of 1992, she brought from Mexico two of her other children. But we certainly weren't unprepared for it. Celia had gone home during the summer (during which time we got a temporary replacement), then had returned with her 12-year-old son and 14-year-old daughter; her youngest boy had refused to leave his grandparents alone. Throughout late August and early September, Celia had struggled with challenges that would have daunted many a college graduate: getting the daughter enrolled in University High School, the son in middle school. The stresses in her home life built too, as Carlos expressed a fast mounting resentment of his stepchildren. He started accusing Celia of having affairs. She was still recovering from a diagnosis of cervical cancer that she'd been given in the spring of 1992. A mutual friend and I had found a doctor willing to treat her for free, and she'd undergone surgery, successfully. But there were follow-up checkups. And bills from the hospital continued to roll in.

Despite all these things, I would have told anyone that things were under control as we headed into the final preparations for Halloween 1992. Jason was going to be Robin Hood, my daughter a ghost, Enrique a pumpkin. Then I discovered that Celia was stealing money out of my wallet.

I learned this in three stages. The first came a few days after I had borrowed $10 from my husband, money that I thought I might need in the course of doing some errands. I hadn't needed it, after all, but several days passed before I remembered to pay Jack back. And the $10 bill wasn't there. I asked Jack if he had reclaimed it, but he said no. So I concluded that I had to be forgetting some thoughtless expenditure, somewhere.

I gave it no more attention. A week or two passed, and I found myself having to pay a $2.50 fee at my daughter's nursery school. My wallet contained two $ 50 bills, but rather than ask for change, I wrote a check for the amount. That stuck in my mind. A few days later, I went to pay for something and noticed that I had only one of the twenties. I hadn't bought anything in the interim. This time I said something to Jack.

I think we both felt frightened — in the muted way that you do when you can't even face the possibility that something fearful is happening. Celia couldn't have taken the money. We knew that. But what could have happened to it? Suddenly, we weren't completely sure.

"One thing I do know," Jack said, "is that we can't say anything unless we're positive." We resolved to make an effort to keep track of every dollar in our pockets. Again days passed — superficially normal days. But an unaccustomed wariness had infected Jack and me. We felt like people who've become aware that — just possibly — a small wild rodent might be concealing itself within our house.

About a week after Jack's and my whispered conference, I finished my work early and prepared to go out for a run. It was about 4:00 p.m. Celia was watching cartoons with the children in the living room. My wallet lay on top of a heap of papers in my bedroom. I checked the contents just before heading out the door: $68 and some change. I ran for maybe 40 minutes, then entered the house and told Celia she should feel free to leave whenever she wanted. Back in my bedroom, I checked the wallet again, by now almost a reflex action. It contained $43.

Never have I felt more like a cartoon character. My eyes seemed literally to bulge out of their sockets, recoil, then bulge again. Numbness gripped me as I stumbled to Jack, to tell him what I'd learned. We sat there staring at each other, and one thought played over and over in my mind: she's destroyed her life.

Does that sound ridiculously melodramatic? Do Jack and I appear impossibly puritanical? Uptight fisted? But this had nothing to do with money. If some stranger had come into my home and stolen money, I'd feel annoyed. But I wouldn't feel betrayed. I wouldn't feel suddenly incapable of trusting what I had counted on like a fact of nature, like the rising of the sun.

To spare the children, we didn't confront Celia until the end of the next day. As she was walking out the door, I asked if she could come back that evening to talk to us. Her hackles rose. What was wrong? she badgered me. I was scaring her. What did we need to talk about? Finally I blurted out that I knew she had been taking money from my purse. Her face changed from cafe au lait to something colder, milkier. "NO!" she gasped. "You would think that of me?!"

"You must think that I'm really, really stupid," I said.

"No, I know you're not stupid," she answered slowly, sadly. She would be back, she promised, then she shuffled off.

She returned right on time, a dead-eyed, slow-moving shadow of herself. We sat on the couch. She sank down to the floor and kept her arms pressed very closely to her body, as though she were freezing. Woodenly, she told us that she didn't know why she'd taken the money. In doing so, she had lost her very best friends, she added, and for this she was very, very sorry.

"We know you've been under a lot of financial pressure," Jack offered. We had by then raised her salary to $700 a month, but Jack noted, "With your children here from Mexico, you've had a lot of extra expenses..."

But that wasn't it, she interrupted him, with a puzzled frown. She and Carlos had had enough money, they even managed to save a little.

Why, then? She didn't know, she told us bleakly. "Only...it seemed...so easy." She described to us how shamed, how soiled, she'd felt after she'd done it the first time. She'd thought of returning the money, of confessing what had happened. But she said nothing, and she did it again, and again.

None of us announced what we all knew: that she couldn't continue working for us. Jack did say she could stay on while she looked for another job. But she shrank from his words. "I would be too uncomfortable," she mumbled. Before she walked out, Jack paid her what we owed her, while she in turn stuffed something into his hand, about $60. He stuttered that it was probably more than she had taken. Her face was closed, stricken, as she left.

She seemed to vanish. We heard nothing from her, saw no sign of her or Carlos or Enrique or the other two kids, though they lived just three blocks away. At the same time, Celia's presence haunted me. I would wake in the middle of the night, heart pounding, rigid with tension, replaying the final scene with her. For a few days, I abandoned my professional work and did Celia's job: playing with my daughter (now three and a half); preparing after-school snacks for Jason; folding clothing still warm from the dryer, scrubbing the kitchen floor. I like these tasks and do them well; I wasn't unhappy giving myself over to them. But I can't do them and simultaneously work at my desk or talk to business associates on the telephone, so I soon found a replacement for Celia, the same woman who had filled in for her the previous summer. We knew her to be smart, reliable, and a legal U.S. resident. Even after I hired her, however, I found myself drifting away from my desk during the day, to vacuum the floor or dust bookshelves — crude attempts to fix the deeper disarray in our house. I couldn't stop telling various relatives and friends about what had happened. It was in this obsessive recounting that I finally began to feel calmer.

One day a few weeks after Celia departed, while out running, I was struck by how good it felt not to have to worry about her life. There had been so many concerns: her older children's struggles with school, her fights with Carlos, her hospital bills, whether she should find a bigger apartment. If they weren't my problems, they had been close cousins. Now, suddenly, I didn't even know where Celia was. I didn't have to know.

Eventually, I got word that she had taken all the children back to Mexico, and then, a few months later, that she had returned to San Diego again. This latter tidbit I heard from a friend of mine for whom Celia had worked the previous summer (while we were on vacation). This friend had liked Celia enormously and had been stunned when I'd told her about Celia's thefts and abrupt departure. When Celia called her in January of last year, looking for work, my friend had just lost her babysitter and was desperate for a reliable replacement. She asked me what I thought. This is how I discovered that I still thought Celia was a conscientious and responsible person who might never steal again.

My friend hired Celia and was happy with her, and news about Celia's life came to me periodically. I didn't actually see Celia again, however, until one day last summer at our local grocery store. I had dreaded such a chance meeting, but she and I found ourselves grinning at the sight of one another. Our conversation was brief, a little nervous, but yearning. A few months later, when she quit working for my friend to go home to be with her dying father, I sent a sympathy card to her home in Mexico. But I heard nothing again, until she called one day this past January.

She asked about the children, about Jack and me, about my mother. She told me that there are days when she can hear the barking of our dog, whom she misses along with the rest of us. We talked for maybe half an hour, and I was struck by how thoroughly all my hurt feelings had drained away; by how completely my anger had disappeared.

I now think I understand what happened. I think all the stress she was enduring made her crack — perhaps along the line of some fault buried within her character, but understandably, forgivably. I think she also felt trapped by her life in America in a way she'd never experienced before bringing her older children here. By doing something that we couldn't tolerate, but had to discover, she forced her life to change.

I still don't see Celia around my neighborhood, but I see others who remind me of her: young, brown-skinned women pushing towheaded babies in their strollers. I look at them sometimes and wonder how entangled they've become with their — what shall I call them? Families? American patrons? "Employers" is inadequate. In these girls, I also see Celia as she was nine years ago, and I feel not the slightest regret for welcoming her into my life. She loved my children and my husband and me, and we all loved her back. We worked together well, and we laughed a lot.

I do wonder if Celia is better off for having come up here to work for us. The equations — what she gained and what she lost — are so complex. Only she could possibly calculate some of the values involved. Maybe she'll be working it out for the rest of her life. I hope I continue to hear from her. ■

ROUGH SKETCH

Rattlesnakes, Outlaws, and Hardship Didn't Deter Painter Charles Fries

Charles Fries painting at Camp Merrit, Laguna Mountains, 1924

By Ken Kuhlken

I learned to write by watching my grandma at her easel. First she'd sketch, then stroke on the base colors, then dab until details began to appear. Around that time she'd step back, gaze, meditate, and finally go to work again, adding new layers of color and nuance.

My grandma's friend and teacher was Charles Fries. In those days he was called the dean of San Diego artists, the founder of San Diego's art community. Ben Dixon, sometime curator of the Serra Museum in Presidio Park, deemed Mr. Fries a master at "...subtly transmitting to canvas the mystic opalescent lights of a twilight mountain glen, the strength and vigor of the California pines combined with a sunlit ripple of water, the grace of a swift-flying cloud across the rarified atmosphere of a blue sky pierced by mountain peaks, or the delicate tints of orchid and rose in the shimmering golden mist of a California dawn."

Mr. Fries, his wife Addie, and daughter Alice trekked west in 1896, leaving behind a Vermont farm. "I spent all my time painting the cows," Mr. Fries wrote, looking back from his 80th year. "So I wasn't a farmer long.

"Addie's health was poor, and I feared that she would not have pulled through another winter in Vermont. We received some literature from Santa Barbara, and I was not long getting the fever to go west.

"On the 17th of September 1896, we started for California against the protests of all the relatives, who prophesied all kinds of dire results.

"In Los Angeles we looked up Mr. Charles Lummis, introduced to us by a mutual friend. He insisted that we go to Capistrano to sketch, as he said it was the most typical Mexican town in Southern California.

"We took Mr. Lummis's advice and went down to Capistrano, to a small hotel owned by a Mr. Mendelson, where Allie came down with typhoid fever on her sixth birthday, October 6, 1896.

"As there was no house in the town to rent, Mr. Lummis got us located in the old San Juan Capistrano Mission. He arranged to get us the rooms' rent free if I'd agree to present the Landmark Club with a painting. No one had lived in the Old Mission for over 20 years, and the dirt was knee-deep. We used the old dining room to live in and slept out in the cloisters. A priest came out every other week and held services. He also slept in the cloisters.

"Allie lingered at the point of death for days. We engaged a nurse from Santa Ana, and Dr. Rowan, giving up liquor for two entire weeks, handled the case just fine, and she finally recovered. That incident suggested the subject Too Late that I painted. The old dining room was a most picturesque setting.

"One day I painted a little cattle piece over by the river. When going to find the subject, I met a Gypsy woman who had a wonderful costume. She tried to get me to let her tell my fortune, and I offered to allow it if she would let me paint a sketch of her. But no! All she could think of was Dinero! Dinero!

"I went on, and coming to the Gypsy camp saw the young ones almost naked, and I sat down to make a sketch of the camp. But she came back and threatened to get her man after me, and she destroyed the sketch.

"After we had been in Capistrano five months, I felt like a change of scenery. I suggested that we go down to San Diego for a few days. The natives around there scoffed at the idea, having acquired the Los Angeles psychological attitude as to San Diego, and derided the idea of its being worth going down to see.

"It was a quiet little town of 16,000 people and had that atmosphere of mañana por la mañana that appealed to us. At first, we lived for a short time on 16th Street. The second place we rented was from Mr. Sherman of Sherman Heights fame, one of the early pioneers of the burg. He was a splendid man.

"We had a few hundred dollars left, and we invested $500 of it in a lot in Middletown, which is today's central district. Addie wanted to invest in La Jolla instead. We could've bought lots in the center of La Jolla for $25.

"We made several moves and finally rented an old building on 24th and Logan Avenue. I used the store below for my studio, and we lived upstairs. As there was no commercial work to do, I'd had to get up a class and go to teaching.

"Not long after settling in San Diego, Ed Davis, who had studied at the Rhil Academy, came to see me and we became warm friends. He settled and developed a ranch at Mesa Grande when there must've been few whites there. The Indians thought a good deal of him and elected him their captain.

"Ed built a hotel as a summer resort. It burned down a few years ago and, as he had a mortgage on it and failed to insure it, has lost everything in his old age. He had three great big husky boys and a girl and a lovely wife. All he has left is one boy. I believe they are now living on Palomar Mountain.

"I was invited to his resort, and he gave me the use of one of his tent houses in an oak grove. I believe an oak grove can be one of the darkest places imaginable at night when there is no moon. I was up at the hotel one evening when he was giving an illustrated talk on Indians and remained until nearly all had gone to their rooms and then attempted to find my tent and became confused and utterly lost; but I found my way back to the hotel where Ed was preparing to retire. He lit a lantern and toted me to my domicile.

"One evening I decided to visit a neighbor in the grove, a writer whose stories in the Saturday Evening Post I had much enjoyed. When I was ready to return to my tent, he kindly brought out the lamp to help me find it. In a few minutes I happened to look out through the fly screen with which the tent was lined and saw my neighbor wandering about apparently lost, trying to identify the trees, so as to get his bearings.

"We had not been in San Diego long when we became acquainted with Mr. Von Poser, an old German and forty-niner. He made a fortune mining in the early days, but still had the fever, had dropped several fortunes — euchred out of them, I presume. For he was quite generous, but suspicion gradually grew upon him as a consequence.

"I was out with him on several trips, to Campo, Jacumba, and vicinity, and we really did make one fine strike near Campo. But he was so suspicious he would not trust anyone who could have financed the find. And we were both so hard up we neglected to work on it, and finally the San Diego and Arizona Railroad covered up the tunnel we had started.

"Mr. Von Poser was a fine character, generous to a fault, very sensitive. He had run away from Germany when quite young. Though the family made strenuous efforts, they never found him. They were a prominent family. He said an old German, who kept a boarding house in New York City, hid him in a straw mattress when they were looking for him, and in that way he escaped and finally landed in California. When he died, sometime in his 80s or 90s, he was camped out at Jacumba, and when they found him, they thought he must have starved, as there was nothing to eat about the camp.

"My acquaintance with Mr. Poser had considerable influence on both my art and finances. The old German went with me on painting and mining expeditions into the mountains and desert, taught me the techniques of dry mining, and related thrilling tales of adventure and hardship. I never did strike it rich in my mining ventures but struck it rich in California lore."

In 1901, in search of adventures and hoping to find a place where he could make a better living with his art, Mr. Fries decided to travel north.

"My pupils Mrs. Gough and Mrs. Goundie, and Mr and Mrs. Boutelle, persuaded us to go north with them. They were going up to the Yosemite Valley, and we were to sketch and they to take lessons. About the middle of April, with four teams, about 3:00 p.m., we started and camped in Rose Canyon on the first night.

"Addie was not well and her heart was troubling her, and the others were not as congenial as might be. The menfolks were in a hurry to get on, and of course that did not leave any time for sketching and giving lessons to womenfolk. So we thought it best to drop out and let them go on, which we did near Pasadena.

"We camped near Los Angeles in a park during a rainy spell, and that gave Addie a chance to rest. We started on, and at Riverside we found tons of beautiful navel oranges dumped out to rot, while thousands would have been glad to get them — another sample of the impracticability of this beautiful system we are living under. Freight rates were so high, it didn't pay to ship them. We filled a couple of gunny sacks and had all we could eat for some time.

"Further north we camped one night in a rancho corral. In the middle of the night I heard a great commotion. A shepherd dog belonging to the ranch was barking furiously at our tent, trying to rouse us. I went out to see what was wrong and found that one of my mares had caught her rope in her front shoe and was strangling.

"I rushed back and got my knife and cut it loose, or she would have strangled to death. How that intelligent dog knew that particular horse belonged to me has always been a puzzle, as there were quite a number of horses in the corral.

"We were short of funds and hurried on. We camped one night on the beach between Santa Barbara and Gaviota Pass. It was a beautiful moonlit night, and the roar of the surf frightened the horses, and they strained at their tethers furiously all night.

"The next morning a tramp asked for some food, which we gave him. On arriving at Gaviota Pass, and pausing at the store to buy some needed articles and to make some inquiries, Addie noticed the same tramp. We had told him we were going to Yosemite, so I imagine he thought we had considerable money with us.

"There was a large number of men — rough specimens — lounging about. They were engaged by the railroad, as they were building the Coast Line at that time. The only camping spot we could find was a mile or so up the canyon, and the wind there blows a gale every night. Addie awoke and heard the horses neighing and heard footsteps, and she screamed, 'Charley, get your gun!' She was sure a man was just outside the tent, about to stab me. However that may be, a man told me the next day that some of those boys would cut your throat for two bits.

"After making a sketch and just getting started the next day, we met an immense herd of wild Texas broadhorn steers driven by a dozen vaqueros. There were about 1200 in the herd. They drive these cattle down through the Pass to ship them from the coast. Our little mare began to kick up didoes, and against the advice of the vaqueros, I was compelled to get out and stand at her head to keep her quiet — quite dangerous, as wild cattle will attack anyone on foot. A bunch started down across the arroyo below the bridge and headed for us, but the vaqueros managed to head them off. Certainly there was considerable excitement for a few minutes, but we came out whole.

"Allie managed to get poisoned in some manner, and her lips broke out in blisters, and she was very sick. We hurried on and in time arrived at Arroyo Grande, where Mr. and Mrs. Frank English lived. They had owned a store and post office in Capistrano, and [Mrs. English] posed as Mother in my painting Too Late in which the doctor arrives too late to cure the dying child. Addie would have nothing to do with it.

"Mrs. English had taken lessons from me, and she was very glad to see us. She cured Allie's sore mouth with one of her recipes. I put the horses out to pasture and we were guests in her home, and she assembled a class for us; and in that way we enlarged the size of our depleted finances.

"We were there about four or five weeks and had a time getting the horses from the pasture when we left. Lucy, our mare, jumped two wire fences.

"We went on to Pacific Grove just outside of Monterey, as we were informed there was to be a Chautauqua convention there, but we arrived too soon, and as hay was a dollar and a half a bale, and the horses having enormous appetites, after a week or so we decided to go on.

"While we were there we made the acquaintance of a young man. He and his sister were running a curio store there and he knew of a bed of olive shells, and we waded out in the early mornings and dipped for them, up to our waists in cold water, and it certainly was a freezing job. I finally collected enough shells to make a curtain, as they were all the vogue and sold as high as $500. We used our spare time rubbing one end over a file so they could be strung on a fine wire.

"A couple of months later in Yosemite there would be a meeting of seven tribes of Indians, and they were crazy for the beads, and Addie strung them on ribbon into waist and hatbands. By selling the beads to the Indians, we reimbursed our finances again.

"From Pacific Grove we crossed the river into San Xavier Valley on a flatboat and camped on the other side of the river for the night. The water in the river was like circus lemonade, and we never saw mosquitoes so thick before. The tent the next morning was completely lined with mosquitoes on the inside.

From Vallecitos Point, Where Extremes Meet, Laguna Mountain Resort, 1928

"Then we passed an immense territory of grain, no houses in sight for miles and miles, and — oh! so hot. The going was tough and we walked a great deal, stopping in Coulterville, where we left Addie's bike and other nonessentials, and in Merced Canyon, a grand spectacle. At last we arrived in Yosemite and passed three glorious weeks, resting, hiking, trading with soldiers and Indians, also sketching and painting the likes of Half-Dome, Bridal Veil, Cathedral Spires, Vernal and Nevada Falls, a Jew peddler, Salem Clark's camp, Mariposa Grove, bears. Our time was only marred by one great tragedy. Addie was writing in her journal and lost her precious fountain pen.

"On our way down, we passed through the mining country, and the havoc made of the country is terrific, great gullies gashed out.

"One Saturday afternoon, we camped at a mining town. The spring in the wagon had broken, and when I finished paying for it I had only 50 cents left. Monday morning we went on and towards evening took a road by the advice of a young fellow living near but found out afterward that it had not been traveled for some time. In descending near a creek, the left rear wheel went all to pieces. There was a little empty cabin near, which we preempted.

"The poison oak was very abundant, and Allie and I were badly poisoned. Addie managed to get a man living near on his ranch to help us lug the wagon down to the cabin. I cut a sapling three or four inches in diameter to bolster up the hind axle; it turned out to be poison oak also. And Allie had to crawl under some ivy vines to get water for us out of the spring, as she was the only one small enough to get in there.

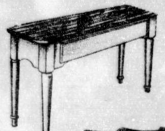

"I helped the man dig his potatoes in exchange for feed for the horses and potatoes and corn for us. In a day or two we heard of a very prosperous farmer living not far off, a sort of horse trader, and I sold him the whole outfit for $60, just enough to get us back to San Diego. He took everything but my pictures, which he was to ship later, and delivered us to the nearest station, 30 or 35 miles.

"We went to Stockton, and by boat to San Francisco, and then to San Diego on a crowded boat. Addie and Allie managed to get a cabin, but I had to go deck passage. And weren't we glad to get back to old San Diego."

The Fries family rented a place on 9th and E Street but soon moved out to 30th and El Cajon Boulevard, where Mr. Fries tried his hand at beekeeping. The way Allie told it, her father didn't like the bees and had to get rid of them. Meanwhile, he couldn't sell his pictures, on account of which he became so blue and downhearted that Addie got discouraged and left him. She took Allie and moved into the St. James Hotel and sold papers on the street to make expenses.

"We had not been in San Diego long when we became acquainted with Mr. Von Poser, an old German and forty-niner. He made a fortune mining in the early days, but still had the fever."

While at the St. James, on July 21, 1905, Addie stood at their fifth-floor window overlooking the bay. The gunboat Bennington, lying peacefully in the harbor, suddenly disintegrated. There was a boiler explosion. Sixty-one crewmen were killed outright and nine more died of wounds, out of a crew of 179. From this tragedy came the first burials in Fort Rosecrans National Cemetery.

Eventually, Mr. Fries's paintings of Yosemite began to sell and to secure him a local following. Several of the paintings he traded to U.S. Grant, Jr., for lots on F Street near 28th. The reunited family moved there.

"While living in a tent in a nearby canyon, I built a little cabin on the back of these lots, and we spent a happy year in the brush, not disturbed by landlords. We had averaged a move a year since our marriage, and that was enough.

"Among the lots traded with Grant were a couple at 14th and L in the wholesale business district. We were wondering what they were worth and decided we would take $1000 for them. I was painting a portrait of Mr. Cleveland, one of the oldest lawyers in San Diego, an old-timer with a good sense of values. He advised us to put them on the market for $2500, and he guaranteed we would sell them in three months, and so it turned out. We received cash for them and used the money in building our house.

"Mr. Von Poser, with whom I had been out prospecting, advised me to build an adobe house. I made 1200 adobe bricks from what is now the cellar. Mr. Von Poser helped me, or I helped him, with the cement and plastering. One of my good friends, Mr. Stageman, helped me out with the lathing. It was great fun but hard work.

"It has been a nice home for us for years, but of course I see where I made mistakes. I believe I could have gotten it built by contract just as cheap, as the people I hired saw I was a greenhorn and chiselled me.

"I have been able to live for the last 25 years on my work and have done little teaching. In that time, I have made it a business of going out on trips of ten days or two weeks, once as long as six weeks.

"Quite a number of years ago Miss Harriet Morris and I went to Palomar Mountain for a week or two. I camped in a tent and she at a farmhouse. I attempted while I was there a subject looking down the hill to see if one could possibly give that effect. Miss Morris thought I did succeed, but I doubt it.

"Later on Miss Morris was teaching out near Escondido with a very small class. Addie and I visited there, and we boarded with a family. The father and mother were not congenial and were living in dire poverty, the man a dreamer and the woman a little energetic piece of humanity and practical, and the combination made it disagreeable for all concerned.

Rocks at La Jolla, 1940

"They had a house full of children, and the ranch was all run down. They lived mostly on beans. I love beans, generally, and never knew I could get tired of them. On arriving home, my wife informed me — knowing my love for beans — that she had just fixed up a nice batch of baked beans!

"I was invited out to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Block, out at the foot of the Cottonwood Grade. They were a very old couple. He was a Russian Jew, and she was an American schoolteacher. He came out and settled on this land in the early days and finally prevailed on her to join him. I don't believe I ever saw a couple more attached to each other.

"Some years ago I went up to San Francisco to sketch the surrounding country. I went over to Mount Tamalpais and made a sketch of Muir Woods from there. I put up at the Inn on the Mountain run by an old German. At the time we were voting to decide whether women should be allowed to vote. Wasn't that old German incensed! He had the same idea that most Germans had that woman's place was a slave in the home.

"We made a number of trips up to Laguna Mountain. Mr. Merritt had built a cabin up there, which was more pleasant than camping out. I'm afraid if a fire ever should get started up there during the summer season there would be a terrible loss of life.

"Frank Thing one year had some sheep pasturing at an old original homestead, and he came after me up at Merritt's cabin, and we spent a week or so down at the old homestead, and I painted sheep. They make very interesting studies.

"Frank played the violin well. He played entirely from memory and he claimed that they have played all night at country dances and never repeated once. His brother plays the guitar.

"Miss Rice, Mrs. Summerlin, and I went by invitation of Mrs. Thing to their ranch up on the Laguna Mountains, quite difficult to get to. Mrs. Thing had been an old pupil of mine precious to her marriage. The Thing family was large, and each boy took up a homestead claim adjoining each other. It makes a ranch seven miles long. They were in the cattle business and engaged Mexican vaqueros entirely, as Frank preferred them to Americans. As he said, the Mexicans did not object to being rousted out at any time during the night, as sometimes was quite necessary. He also appreciated their musical nature. They would no more than get in their cabins than they were crooning and thumbing their guitars.

"We made two trips out there. The last time rattlesnakes were very much in evidence. One day the men killed more than a dozen while tearing down an old barn. Their little dog was bitten, he suffered terribly and finally died. Frank said that dogs usually pulled through, but this dog was rather old. I had not been much afraid of snakes up to this time, rarely thought of them. But after seeing the sufferings of that little dog, have been more careful since.

"While out there we were sketching under an oak tree. Mr. Thing's boy who was with us suddenly yelled, and there was a rattler crawling out of the trees. It caused some commotion but none were bit.

"There was an Indian reservation adjoining the Thing ranch. There was an old couple, he being perfectly blind and she nearly so. When Mr. Thing killed a beef they seemed to smell it, as it was invariably followed by a visit from them; the old woman leading the old fellow. Whatever they took home, she carried on her back.

"We were getting ready to make a third trip, when Mrs. Thing received a telegram informing her that Frank had been instantly killed by a train running into their car. The boy was with him but escaped injury. Mrs. Thing is now living in Calexico, as Frank had large interests down there in Imperial Valley.

While Guy Woodward and his sister were running Warner's Hot Springs, not only did Miss Woodward sell a number of canvases for me, but I had a standing invitation out there and took advantage of it on many occasions. I usually camped at one of the original adobes on what they called Queer Street.

"I was painting one forenoon just north of the bathhouse, when a terrible earthquake shock occurred. I was standing but could hardly keep my feet by holding onto the easel. The ground before me seemed to move in billows similar to the waves of the ocean.

"The Indians were not long in getting buckets of adobe to fill up the cracks. There were shocks for two weeks, and I lay on my bed at night wondering whether the wall would fall the other way or on me. It was the most terrible experience of that sort that I had experienced, and it destroyed several towns almost entirely.

"After her brother died, Miss Woodward took over running the Pine Hills Resort. She invited me to spend a week or so up there, which I did. I lived in a tent with a board floor, quite near where the cook, his wife, and little boy slept. In the evening after their work was through, they would sing their old negro melodies. They had beautiful voices and I enjoyed it very much.

"During World War I, I met Dr. White at Warner's and she invited me to visit Palm Springs. Shortly after, I took advantage of the invitation and found Dr. White just about done in, as several cars had arrived filled with influenza patients. She was compelled to be both nurse and doctor. Several of the patients died.

"I spent a couple weeks there and worked pretty hard. She let me have a nice cottage and I was independent, so I could get out early in the morning for early effects. The doctor and her sister went out camping in the mountains and invited me. They had all manner of paraphernalia, sleeping bags, pup tents, etc. The sister was a 'desert rat.' She could cook delicious puddings in the sand.

I have made many trips to the desert and have been called the Desert Artist. I have painted much of the Coachella Valley. More than once I was the guest of Mr. Reed. The second time I accepted his hospitality I had quite a time getting there. I sent him a postal, but he had not been to town and hadn't received it, and of course, he was not there to meet me. I waited for some time and finally, at the advice of a young man at the store, I decided to take a shortcut.

"In starting, I stumbled and fell flat over a rabbit fence. I kept right on and was heading for some time in the direction I thought was right, until finally deciding that the object I saw was not his house. Reaching for my glasses to verify my doubts, I found I had no glasses. The wind was blowing and it was quite warm. I retraced my steps but soon found my tracks covered up and began to get rattled. But as it began to get dark, it cleared up and I could see the line of lights of the different towns and headed toward the lights. The feeling of helplessness in such a predicament is not pleasant.

"When I got back to town, Mr. Reed's man happened to be there, and we went on to the ranch. I had a hunch my glasses dropped when I fell, and sure enough, there they were, protected somewhat by some bushes. I felt I was saved as I could've accomplished very little without them. Ever since, I always carry two pair.

"Mr. Reed was very indignant at the young clerk for advising me to take the shortcut, as he recognized the danger. Two men in a car got lost in that vicinity a short time before, and one of them lost his life.

"I never knew that rattlesnakes climbed trees, but one morning Mr. Reed realized they were getting some young chicks and shook three or four sidewinders out of some sapling trees.

Mr. Reed took me over to Hidden Springs Canyon in the mountains back of Mecca. It was certainly enjoyable and we stayed a day or two. It takes its name from a spot rather inaccessible where there is a spring that feeds a clump of palms. Mr. Reed had a candle and by crawling on our stomachs for some distance through a natural tunnel, we finally came upon an opening such like the interior of a cathedral — it was a wonderful effect.

"At another time, he took me to what is called the Painted Canyon in the same range of mountains. There is a formation there that interested me greatly. It was of soft red sandstone, and the water had rounded off the tops of huge pillars, and it reminded me of the old Egyptian architecture.

"The trip to Death Valley, in 1930, was made with two cars: Will and I in one, and Fenton Garfield and a friend in another. The weather was beautiful and a campground provided all the accommodations, gratis. The subjects are freaky and almost impossible to render.

"There is a Painted Canyon about seven miles from Coyote Wells, where Mr. Merritt and I went for a couple of weeks. We camped in the bottom of a dry wash, which was rather risky, as cloudbursts are very common, and it would have washed us out, but fortunately that did not occur. The foundation there seemed to be immense stones, as big as a house, and the rain would loosen these boulders and let them fall. While sketching under these cliffs one could hear smaller stones dropping occasionally, which caused one to feel a little uneasy.

Fries couldn't sell his pictures, on account of which he became so blue and downhearted that Addie got discouraged and left him.

"One canvas I was working on caused Mr. Merritt to remark, 'It looks like a fruit salad.' These subjects are rather freaky, and most people prefer not to have them hanging in their homes.

"Another trip to the desert, I was with an artist friend from Chicago. We went to Mountain Springs and camped up against the wall of an old fort, it seemed to be.

"There were two campers near us, and they seemed to resent our getting near them but finally decided we were harmless. They said they had a gem mine over there, but we couldn't understand why they should go at night. There were some smugglers arrested there shortly after that, and I presume it was those men.

"A queer duck was living at Coyote Wells, an Englishman they called Charley. From his account, he had served in every war of the century. At any rate, all he could think of was killing someone. He particularly had a desire to kill the county sheriff. It seemed they had cut his wire fence sometime previously. He certainly had murder in his heart. And yet the peculiar combination expressed in that individual is puzzling: he had a few flowers in pots that he cared for, and he nursed and tended them like babies.

"William Pierce and I decided to camp and sketch in San Felipe Valley. Ted Hopkins took us and we had his tent, which was a make-shift. We had terrible weather ..r two days and nights. The clouds seemed to meet overhead and fight it out. Winds from the sea and desert met and had a duel. We were compelled to sleep on the ground, and it rained constantly that first night of the storm. It was dark as a pocket, and I couldn't even find the flashlight, so we had to grin and bear it until daylight — after having our pots and pans blowing all over the landscape for hours. When I admonished Pierce that we should get up and see if we couldn't anchor down the tent, he rolled over with the remark: 'What's the use? Everything has gone to hell anyway!'

"One day at Jacumba we were climbing a mountain and came upon a cave. It smelled like a menagerie, and we scooted, as we had no guns. The next day one of the boys saw the lioness with a couple of cubs.

A number of years ago, I started out one morning and accomplished riding my bicycle over 75 miles in one day, not, however, for the sake of a ride, as I had an object in view. I had heard of a spot I might homestead, five miles beyond Escondido on a mountain I had once climbed. I didn't succeed in locating the claim. But I did succeed in nearly breaking my neck on the way back home. The chain on my bicycle broke, and as there were no brakes I had to jump off.

"Sometime after that I did locate a homestead at the foot of Little Tecate Mountain. I had been visiting and sketching in Bee Canyon where an old friend had a ranch. He persuaded me to take up this claim. I managed to get about $50 worth of lumber on the spot and went out a number of times to fulfill my obligations as a claimant but finally gave it up as a wild dream. Addie was not strong enough to live such a life, and I couldn't qualify without lying like a house afire, as many did. So I afterward turned it over to the Forest Reserve.

"I did considerable sketching in the neighborhood of Dulzura. At one time, Ray Anderson and I rented a cottage and a horse and buggy and had many delightful trips. One day we had been sketching at the top of the grade five miles above Dulzura; it was very dusty, and not having any way of protecting the canvas, when we arrived at our cabin we found about an inch of dust covering it. I brushed off all I could, and it produced a wonderful fog effect. It reminded me very much of the effects I had seen in Scotland.

"One trip going back home towards evening, below Dulzura, it began to rain. A little further on I stopped at a large Jamul ranch owned by the Spreckels interests. The rain continued, so I remained all night for a charge of $2.

"The next morning about 9:00 a.m. a heavy wagon with four mules started for Bonita Ranch.

Charles Fries, c. 1925

We were about five hours getting a short distance to the ranch on account of the mud. There was a restaurant near for the benefit of the working men. I bummed a dinner. From there, 18 miles home, I walked, carried, and rode the bicycle. It was Addie's bicycle, and it clogged with mud much more than a man's. When I arrived home — tired, dirty and angry — if anybody had told me, as I had been told before, that it didn't rain in this climate through summer, I might have resorted to violence.

"The Anderson boys had bought a ranch out back of Alpine and managed to get us with an old rickety wagon over to an old deserted ranch house belonging to them. The road had not been used for years.

"The view there shows the watershed of the west Cuyamacas. I decided to paint a large canvas of it. Mr. Harry McKee, who was handling my work at the time, suggested it and thought he could sell it to the Cuyamaca Club. I built a large easel, pounding the uprights into the ground, and left it out in the open until it was finished.

"McKee managed to have it hung in the Cuyamaca Club and received several subscriptions from members. About that time, I received a very insulting letter from someone I had never heard of. He said that he couldn't see why the directors had allowed the painting to be hung. I showed the letter to the president, and he cussed the fellow roundly. But that same fellow had influence enough to have it taken down.

"There is one trip I neglected to speak of: Mr. McKee was practicing law at Fresno, where he had migrated after his sad experience here in San Diego, in a free-speech fight which was a disgrace to the city. He was one of the leaders in the free-speech fight, which certainly was an eye-opener, what with the lack of adhering to the truth exhibited by the press, and the failure on the part of so many to show any sense of justice, and the savage recourse to primitive modes of torture, such as administering a coat of tar and feathers and brutally treating those with whom they did not agree. Mr. McKee shook the dust of San Diego off his feet, after serving 30 days in jail as one of the leaders in the free-speech fight.

"He was keeping bachelor's quarters in Fresno. He and I took a short trip out to the Sierra Nevada mountains, the first and only time I have been in that range. I have always had a great desire to sketch in the High Sierras; but one is required to have pack animals, and it means much hardship, and I guess I will never be equal to it."

Mr. Fries died in 1940, leaving 1721 catalogued paintings. A generous fellow, he gave my family lots of them, for birthdays, weddings, and anniversaries. All my life I've stared at his eucalyptus groves, beaches, and deserts, and still I can hear the artist's voice. It's gentle, reverent, amused, excited, and grateful. Fifty-three years after his burial, Mr. Fries keeps teaching me how to write. ■

"EYE GLASSES WERE MY HANDICAP"

I love to golf, but trying to hit the ball while looking through glasses often made playing the game seem more like work. After years of fighting the effects of glare and peripheral distortion, I decided it was time to consider the new radial keratotomy. Once I attended the free evaluation I knew "RK" was for me. The entire procedure took just a few minutes, and my vision has been excellent ever since. Now that I no longer need glasses, my only handicap is my putter!

Chicken Little Was Right

By Judith Moore

Modern chickens lead terrible lives. Genetic tinkering has turned out a Frankenstein bird who acquires flesh so rapidly that its skeleton often can't keep pace. Legs bow, twist, and weaken. As these chickens reach four-pound market weight and the last of 49 days of life, many can barely walk. "They squat most of the time or breaststroke their way lizardlike, across the litter floor," (Jim Mason and Peter Singer, Animal Factories)

Ninety-nine point nine percent of the 95 million meat chickens, or broilers, processed each week in the United States are reared in windowless houses that hold as many as 10,000 chickens. Each bird gets less than one square foot of floor space.

Chickens won't eat in the dark. Light burns 22 hours out of 24 while the chickens stuff themselves on feeds that include vita - - ... antibiotics, and rendered chicken intestines, l - ..ls, feet, and feathers. Chickens also eat the occasional fallen chicken, pecked to death by its fellows.

Chickens normally socialize in flocks of some 100 members. Socialization involves establishment of pecking order, typically by fighting and intimidation. Pecking order is disarranged in chickens confined with thousands of other chickens. To keep down injury among mass-reared chickens, the beak tip is singed or sliced away. Even debeaked, chickens manage to wound and kill.

When chickens see blood on another chicken, they peck at it. An early attempt to stop chicken havoc was Dr. Salsburg's No Pick, a nasty-tasting red liquid farmers painted on chickens low in the pecking order. Growers have also tried metal blinders held on with a key that punctured beak and nostrils. These blinders kept chickens from pecking but left them helpless to find feed and water.

The National Band & Tag Company in the 1930s advertised Anti-Pix chicken glasses fitted with red lenses. The glasses, attached to beaks with steel pins, were designed to swing on their frame. When a chicken wearing Anti-Pix glasses held its head erect, all it saw was red: another chicken's blood appeared the same color as everything else. When a chicken lowered its head to eat, Anti-Pix lenses swung forward, away from the beak; the chicken then could see feed. Anti-Pix was time-consuming to fit and often fell off.

Problems aside, so efficient is this modern chicken at converting food into animal protein that during its 49-day life, 1.9 pounds of feed can produce one pound of meat. Previous to World War II, the four-pound chicken took 126 to 140 days to reach market, and as many as 10 pounds of feed were required to produce one pound of meat. But what modern poultry rearing and processing methods have produced is a bland meat often so riddled with bacteria that cooks must deal as warily with chicken as if it were hazardous waste.

Developed chiefly from the Southeast Asian red jungle fowl Gallus gallus, the chicken has been domesticated for 5000 years in Egypt and China. Interest in the then-scrawny bird initially fixed on its prowess as a fighter rather than on eggs or meat. Persians learned of the birds in India and added chicken meat and eggs to their cuisine; the Persians in turn introduced this use to Greeks, who passed it on to Romans, who passed it on to Europeans.

Chickens came to this continent with the first English and European settlers. Chickens were kept in urban back yards and on farms. In the early 1800s, chicken-raising became a fashionable hobby, with householders competing to own the most exotic breeds. Ten thousand people mobbed Boston's Faneuil Hall on one November day in 1849 to view 1432 different ornamental breeds on exhibit at the first Boston Poultry Show.

By 1880, all across the U.S., hens and roosters cackled and crowed in back yards and farmsteads. Page Smith and Charles Daniel in The Chicken Book note that in the 19th Century, roosters and hens were endowed with virtues and attributes of Victorian husbands and wives. The rooster was the "kindly arbiter of the barnyard, a keeper of order and defender of the female." The hen, "in her plump, comforting shape," was the "epitome of the dutiful wife who laid her eggs faithfully at tended to her children, never presuming to intrude into her husband's world."

It wasn't as idyllic as it sounds. "Back in those days," Dr. George West told me from his office in UC Davis's veterinary sciences department, "we weren't efficient in raising chickens. As long as they were running around and eating things you didn't want anyway, you ignored the fact that it took a long time to grow your chick up into a chicken and that you never ended up with as many chickens as you started out with.

"One-third to one-half the baby chicks hatched by our great-grandmothers died when they were 7 to 15 days old due to Marek's disease, a virus-transmitted cancer, the single most devastating avian disease. Those that were left, the usual policy was that hens were allowed to grow forever and produce eggs until their combs turned bright red, which meant they were no longer putting energy into eggs and they became candidates for Sunday chicken and dumplings. And our great-grandmothers were pretty astute at telling which were laying eggs and which were just eating feed. Fried chicken usually was made from a rooster killed between the 15th and 20th weeks.

"One reason they killed roosters is that males fight. The sex drive is very, very powerful. They will commit all kinds of mayhem to mate with the women. They aren't fearful of being hurt; they will fight even if they are being chewed to death. They will suffer anything to defend territory or their harem.

"In those days we weren't efficient in feeding them. We depended upon them to run around and eat grasshoppers and crickets and earthworms and anything they could find. Some of them stood around and gaped and didn't eat and you'd find them dead. They were loaded with parasites. Crickets, grasshoppers, mealworms, and beetles are hosts to parasites dangerous to chickens, of which gapeworm, widely present in California, is one of the worst. This worm is a small, round, red worm. The male is an inch long and the female, an inch and a quarter. They are in permanent copulation and form a little Y-shaped creature. This fork or bifurcation allows them to become tangled with one another. They inevitably appeared in chickens feeding on the ground. One or two of these worms can quickly occlude the esophagus. The bird suffocates and dies. The chicken," Dr. West concluded, "was out there in the midst of an awful lot of challenges."

Roosters will suffer anything to defend their territory or their harem.

In the 1890s railroads helped turn eggs into a cash crop. The farmwife's surplus eggs were shipped in chilled boxcars to major markets in New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and San Francisco. Roosters and spent hens were sent alive on poultry trains, each of whose cars carried four to five thousand chickens.

The chicken itself remained a costly investment. To enlarge his flock, the farmer had either to rent roosters at stud, buy mating triplets (two hens and a cock), or purchase fertile hatching eggs and set hens on them. In 1911, an incubator began to be sold. The incubator allowed farmers to bypass hens and incubate fertile eggs all year long. Incubators also made possible establishment of commercial hatcheries, selling chicks. A newly emerged chick retains sufficient yolk for two days' food after hatching. Thus, chicks could be packed into crates and transported to farmers no more than 48 hours away by train. By 1920, farmers depended almost entirely upon hatcheries to replace egg-laying flocks. The first casualty of the commercial poultry operation, lament Smith and Daniel, was "the classic motherhood of the hen. Economics required that she be reduced to the role of egg-producer and her mother function taken over by machines."

Mrs. Wilmer Steele of Ocean View, Delaware, is credited with starting the chicken-as-meat industry in 1923, when she decided to sell off her laying flock for meat before "range paralysis" or "fowl plague" killed them off. A butcher paid Mrs. Steele 62 cents a pound, as against 10 cents normally paid for spent laying hens. Mrs. Steele immediately bought a new flock, raised them for meat, and killed them.

So profitable was Mrs. Steele's venture that other chicken-rearers thought to make selling chicken for meat a year-round industry. Chickens were kept captive in henhouses and provided feed and water. But the birds didn't grow. Without sunshine, which enables chickens to manufacture vitamin D in their bodies, hens laid few eggs and young chickens developed rickets. In 1930 cod liver oil as a vitamin D source was mixed into poultry feeds. Since then it has been possible to raise poultry indoors and in all seasons.

During World War II, beef and pork were rationed and poultry not. From 1940 to 1945, U.S. broiler production almost tripled. The federal government, which during the war put price controls into effect to curb inflation, set a ceiling price of 30 cents per pound for chicken. Demand almost always outran supply; farmers sold chicken on the black market for as much as 50 cents per pound.

Chicken's newfound popularity attracted feed and pharmaceutical companies, who developed feeds and equipment for chicken-rearing and processing. Chicken breeders went to work trying to create a meatier chicken. In 1944, the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company (A&P), together with poultry organizations and magazines and the U.S. Department of Agriculture, sponsored a contest they called "The World Series of Poultrydom." Contest promotional material noted that A&P's goal was to create the "Chicken of Tomorrow" and "squelch that dream of two chickens in every pot by providing one bird chunky enough for the whole family — a chicken with breast meat so thick you can carve it into steaks, with drumsticks that contain a minimum of bone buried in layers of juicy dark meat, all costing less instead of more." The breeder who produced this chicken would be awarded $5000. Eventual winner was a Live Oak, California, chicken farmer whose prize chicken, together with those of other finalists, were the sources for new breeds of chicken suited for mass-rearing.

POULTRY ZONES

In most of San Diego County, it is legal to raise chickens for personal use. Regulations differ by city but generally specify the number of poultry allowed for a given sized lot; the distance coops must be kept from human habitation; and rules for cleanliness. Depending on where in the county you live, chicken-raising may be overseen by the local planning, zoning, or police departments.

SAN DIEGO COUNTY Most municipalities here use the county code as the basis for their regulations, and they are the rule of thumb in places like Pine Valley, Alpine, Jamul, Dulzura, and Campo. Within unincorporated areas, one may keep from 25 to an unlimited number of chickens, depending on the "animal designator" for your lot. The "animal designator" is a number assigned to each parcel of land, depending on its zone. In addition, chickens must be kept at least 15 feet from side property lines and 10 feet from the rear property line. Their coop or pen must be kept reasonably free of droppings, feathers, flies, and dust, and the animals must be maintained in such a manner as to prevent their noise or odor from becoming a nuisance.

CITY OF SAN DIEGO If you are imagining a little pen of Rhode Island Reds on your deck, forget it. Urban chickens are allowed only within agricultural zones A-1, A-1-5, and A-1-10 (the last numbers indicate acreage). You won't find any of these zones in the heart of the city, although there are pockets in South Bay, and also up north of Carmel Valley, south of Via de la Valle. Fowl have been reported on larger lots in Southeast San Diego, but the city hasn't heard many complaints about them.

CHULA VISTA "The code says no more than 12 rabbits, 12 hens, geese, or ducks, or 25 pigeons," says Chula Vista's Annie Pedder-Pease, "for a maximum of 25 of these beasts." But only if your lot is at least 7000 square feet, and if your pens or coops are at least 30 feet from a residence (other than the owner's) and 5 feet from any property line. "Out of that 25, it seems you can't have more than 12 chickens," Pedder-Pease sighs. "I suppose you could try to pass off your chickens as ducks."

CORONADO Coronado's municipal code has no provision for keeping chickens; likewise, it has none against it. "As long as they are not a nuisance and don't disturb neighbors," says Scott, an administration spokesman, "we are willing to deal with poultry on a case-by-case basis." The county code's rules on sanitation and distance from human habitation and property lines apply here.

DEL MAR Code enforcement officer Mike Emerson says it is unlawful to keep any but domestic animals within the Del Mar city limits, unless otherwise allowed in a specific zone. Most of residential Del Mar is zoned R-110, permitting dogs, cats, "or other domestic animals provided no such animal or any pen, coop or stable or barn shall be located, kept or maintained within 75 feet of any window or door of human habitation, or 40 feet from an adjacent property line." The mention of coops, stables, and barns seems to indicate a pretty loose definition of domestic; Mr. Emerson says only that poultry complaints would be evaluated case-by-case, if they had any. "That's what we did with the potbellied pig."

EL CAJON In RE-20 and RE-40 zones, no more than 24 adult poultry may be kept, on lots at least 20,000 square feet. In addition, they must be at least 50 feet from schools, churches, hospitals, places of business, dwellings, mobile homes, or buildings used for human habitation, but they may be as few as 20 feet away from the owner's dwelling and also 25 feet from a common side property line. Odor, droppings, flies, dust, and "other nuisances" must be prevented.

IMPERIAL BEACH The code doesn't prohibit chickens, in fact, it does not address them at all. "The code specifies that no more than five household pets are permitted," said a spokeswoman. "It has been determined that chickens are not household pets."

LEMON GROVE One chicken per thousand square feet of lot space is permitted, not to exceed a total of 25 chickens. Enclosures can't be placed closer than 40 feet from any human dwelling, other than the owner's. An exception: if your chicken enclosure is less than 6 feet tall and doesn't have more than three chickens in it, it may be located anywhere behind your dwelling, but no closer than 20 feet from anybody else's dwelling — as long as there's a solid, 6-foot-high fence or wall between them. But, your chickens also have to be kept at least 5 feet from side and rear property lines and can't be closer than 25 feet from any side street lot line and 50 feet from any front lot line. Don't even think about putting them in the front yard.

NATIONAL CITY Kerry Grochowiak, the animal regulation officer with the National City Police Department, gets "one or two calls a month" about stray chickens. While technically they're not allowed to be "at large," Grochowiak will let them roam, but only if the neighbors don't complain. A maximum of 12 chickens ("and no roosters!") may be kept by one family, on a tract of land no smaller than 5000 square feet. In addition, to prevent noise and odor nuisance, you must paint or limewash pens and coops once a year.

SOLANA BEACH Chickens are only allowed in low residential zones, with a minimum lot size of 20,000 square feet. A maximum of 25 chickens are allowed but you can't have more than one per 2000 square feet of lot space. Enclosures must be 35 feet from residential dwellings. — Mary Lang

World War II's end brought chaos to the poultry industry. When Americans no longer had to hand over red ration stamps for roast beef and pork chops, chicken was less often a menu feature.

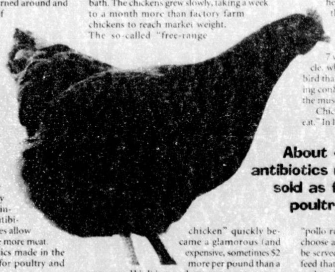

As small chicken farmers went broke, feed companies acquired chicken farms at bargain prices. These companies then turned around and made chicken-share-croppers of the farmers, the companies provided day-old chicks and chicken feed on credit, then when chickens reached market weight, sent in chicken-catchers to collect the birds. The feed companies paid share-croppers a contracted price for each broiler, then subtracted the price of feed.

In 1949, an American Cyanamid's Lederle Laboratories' researcher chanced on the discovery that baby chicks fed chlortetracycline gained 10 to 20 percent more weight than other chicks. Today, nearly all poultry raised commercially in the U.S. ingest subtherapeutic doses of antibiotics. The antibiotic feed additives allow farmers to use less feed to produce more meat. About 40 percent of all antibiotics made in the U.S. are sold as feed additives for poultry and livestock.

During the 1950s and 1960s, commercial chicken-rearing increasingly became the province of vertically integrated firms that hatched, fed, vaccinated, slaughtered, and marketed chicken meat. Now, eight corporations — "The Big Eight" — and three states — Arkansas, Georgia, Alabama — produce almost all U.S. meat chicken. What began as a collection of thousands of small farm and backyard operations has become a $19 billion-a-year industry.

In 1980, a New York chef, wanting chickens that tasted like those he remembered from childhood, turned for help to a microbiologist who had an upstate New York farm. The microbiologist began raising chickens fed entirely on corn, soybeans, and alfalfa from a local miller. No antibiotics. No additives. The flock was allowed outside during the day to peck at bugs, to exercise, socialize, and take the traditional chicken dust bath. The chickens grew slowly, taking a week to a month more than factory farm chickens to reach market weight.

The so-called "free-range chicken" quickly became a glamorous and expensive, sometimes $2 more per pound than a mass reared bird) item on better restaurant menus, in gourmet food stores, and natural foods markets.

About 40 percent of all antibiotics made in the U.S. are sold as feed additives for poultry and livestock.

Restaurant critics and everyday eaters praise this chicken's flavor and texture. (Los Angeles Times: "I had delicious grilled free-range chicken with Delicias fries." The San Diego Union-Tribune: "One of the simple items, grilled free-range chicken with honey-onion marmalade, is one of the best. With skin and wing joints intact, the moist, hardsomely charred full breast gets my vote for tastiest chick in town.") Because free-ranging chicken gets far more exercise than confined chicken, meat is firmer and darker. Flavor is gamier and stronger and differs from chicken to chicken, unlike the fairly uniform "white" flavor of commercially reared birds.

The intensity of chicken's flavor increases with the chicken's age. Dr. West explained. There are two things we taste when we taste meat: esters and aldehydes that are absorbed into fat and metals in hemoglobin. The fatter any animal gets and the more that fat is integrated into muscle tissue, the better it tastes. So one thing you accomplish by letting the chicken move about and grow to 14 rather than 7 weeks is that you have a slower growth cycle, which means they develop muscle. Also, a bird that has walked for 14 weeks rather than being confined for 7 weeks has more myoglobin in the muscle, which also contributes to flavor."

Chickens, Dr. West says, "taste like what they eat." In Italy, often, the free-range chicken is called "pollo ruspanti," families who keep a flock will choose a particular chicken for a specific dish to be served several months in the future and then feed that bird on anise seed or herbs so as to inundate the meat with the desired flavor.

In the U.S., few commercially raised free-range chickens actually range as freely as we might imagine. In the definition of "free range" there is a wide variation in degrees of confinement. Free range, in the per 1 decade, has come to mean that the chicken is not kept all its life in a "grow-out" house, that it at least has some access during the day to the out-of-doors.

Dr. Francine Bradley is a UC Davis veterinary science department specialist in intensive small flock management. Dr. Bradley, a veteran of some 30 years of advising California chicken producers, offers this about the free-range chicken. "To me, when you say 'range,' all you are saying is that there is at least some part of the day when the bird is not within a confined structure. There is a lot of controversy over how much space you have to have to be 'range.' Research has been done showing that you can give birds 100 acres and they will only go so many feet from a structure. They will not normally range that far. There is a point at which it becomes silly, at which you have to ask, if you are pleasing some philosophical bent of your consumer or what, really, the bird seems to want or need.

"If I go to visit one of my range chicken producers and it's July or August, about 11 o'clock in the morning, all the range chickens go inside. Heck, chickens are not dumb. The barn is shaded, it's misted, it's cool. They've got nice litter to stand on. Maybe somebody sitting in downtown San Francisco thinks all chickens want to be running around under God's sun all day long, but chickens don't."

Dr. Bradley knew all about Dr. Salsbury's Nu-Pick and the Anti-Pix chicken glasses. She still recommends Nu-Pick-like products to what she calls her "backyard clients," people raising small flocks. "What's sold now," she says, "looks like a combination of grenadine and enchilada sauce. You can't do that on the area that's getting pecked and the next time an aggressive bird comes over and gets a beakful of that stuff, it's not happy. Some people use plain old pine tar. Both are a good deterrent."

In the chicken industry, says Dr. Bradley, Anti-Pix-type devices are called "specs." They are still in use, she says, in the game bird industry. "With the specs they have enough peripheral vision to eat, but they can't look directly at another bird and peck them. "With chickens, growers have to put plastic, red-tinted contact lenses. "We have seen irritation caused by these, but the studies do show fewer cannibalism problems with the lenses." Dr. Bradley does not feel entirely comfortable with results of lens use. "If you look at videotapes taken of these birds, they look out of it and in a daze. They are not pecking at each other, sure, but they also are not exhibiting a normal repertoire of chicken behavior."

Although there are farms in Northern California raising free-range or quasi-free-range birds, commercial free-range rearing has not been popular in California for the same reasons that California is not one of the "Big Three" chicken states. What it takes to make money raising chickens, says Dr. Bradley, is "proximity to the grain belt, cheap labor, cheap land, and government incentives to either locate or stay in a state." To which she adds, peevishly, "And I am sorry to say, as a native daughter of California, our state government is not all that hospitable to agriculture."

Are many people in California raising chickens in their back yards? "Yes," says Dr. Bradley. "Absolutely. Huge numbers of people, too. It's amazing how much chicken feed is sold in the city of San Francisco. You think, 'Gosh, nobody would raise chickens in San Francisco,' but if you go around the neighborhoods, you will hear crowing cocks and clucking hens."

Dr. West, who has kept his own backyard flocks, says that chickens "have a behavior pattern that is absolutely fascinating. For instance, when the birds get up, they don't all jump off the roost at once. The early-risers are always identifiable. They always go out first. The stay-a-beds stay a bed. Each chicken has its own route. First thing the chicken does is to go get a drink of water. Then they will do some pecking and eating. And then they will have a sort of visitation schedule. There will be three or four points of interest peculiar to that particular chicken — a certain rock, a stump, a depression in the ground — that are important to that chicken's experience and he or she will stay in that same position on that rock or stump or depression for the same amount of time, perhaps ten seconds, day after day. At a given time of day each chicken will be in a specific spot, so specific that you could almost tell time by it. And each chicken eats at a specific time, loafs at a specific time, fluffs its feathers in the dirt, and so on. The same bird does the same thing every day.

"In a given flock, too, behavior of individual chickens can be quite different. Some go out and stay out until evening, always the same ones. Then there is the transient bird that just goes outdoors to smoke a cigarette and comes back in and then the ones that want to stay inside.

"Because of the nature of the pecking order, chickens assume that whenever two of them are together, one is going to be boss. You put three together, one will be boss of the other two. The advantage for the number two and three chickens in a free-range situation is that they can get away when they're bullied.

"They like to visit with their favorite friends, and again, because of pecking order, these friendships are carefully stratified. For instance, Chicken A will always visit with Chicken X but never with Chicken D.

"No matter what their situation, though, chickens will always try to arrange themselves in a hierarchy of who can impose the most stress on the others. That's been a useful thing that has assured that the most virile, the most vigorous, and the strongest have the opportunity to mate and to reproduce. Nature has used the pecking order to make sure that there are always chickens."

Local grocers and restaurateurs purchase a "naturally grown" chicken from Shelton Farms in Pomona. I talked one afternoon with Gary at Shelton Farms, who says about the White Cornish cross that they raise, "Every chicken grown commercially in America, I think, has got some Cornish in it."

Shelton Farms chickens, says Gary, "are raised in houses on the ground. The houses are open on the side so that the chickens get plenty of air and sunshine. But they aren't running around in a pasture. They are fed without antibiotics or artificial growth stimulants. They eat a ration similar to that eaten by commercial chickens — soybean corn, milo, wheat, protein meal, and a vitamin and mineral supplement. Ours grow a week longer than commercial poultry because it takes longer to get there without antibiotics."

Cary echoes comments made by Drs. West and Bradley: "We've found that chickens aren't too excited about being outside. On occasion, when we're raising roosters, they get so big they fill up the house. So, we have to open up the sides of the house to give them some room to spread out. They'll go out as long as the shade is on that side of the building. As soon as the sun comes over, they run right back inside. They're not too excited about sunlight."

Dobson's chef, Deborah MacDonald Schneider, is a free-range fan. Asked if Dobson's offers free-range birds on their menu, she says, "We do, sometimes. It's hard to get real free-range stuff, and the supply is up and down. We use Shelton Farms, but they are very far from a real free-range bird. Rocky Mountain Hens raised in Colorado we have used. They were the only real free-range chickens, and they are between distributors now. They have a hard time getting a distributor and keeping the supply up. So, the long answer is "Sometimes," but the short answer is "No." I would use it if I could get it. In San Diego, we're like the ugly stepchild. Everything good goes to L.A." ■

Jose G. Morales
La Mesa

Jerry Schad replies: Reader Jose Morales brings up some good points about being cautious when traveling through the wilderness and semi-wilderness areas of San Diego County. In the guidebook he refers to, Afoot and Afield in San Diego County, I address many of these concerns from a hiker's perspective. However, it is not feasible to cover every possible safety or legal issue, for every kind of recreational enthusiast, in a quarter-page column such as "Roam-O-Rama."

I have either run or ridden a mountain bike several times on the route described in the January 27 column and I'm so doing have felt far less threatened than when strolling through parts of Balboa Park and downtown San Diego. Life is hazardous to some degree, and activities such as visiting public parks and open-space areas will never be completely free of risk.

Women/Ridicule/Contempt

I am writing in regard to the eavesdropping "confirmed misogynist" in the "Hell-A" section of the March 3 edition. I am offended beyond words by that piece, but not the least bit surprised. After all, it is now socially unacceptable to print openly racist or gay-bashing articles. Of course, women-hating is still okay. We do live in a misogynist society, where women are constantly ridiculed and regarded with contempt.

It's hard enough living in a world where you're conditioned to believe that you are the inferior sex and that you are worthless unless you are skinny and beautiful. Since girlhood, women are taught by television, the media, magazines, models, and music stars that they have to starve themselves and paint their faces, or else. They must constantly despise each other while in an everlasting competition over men of wealth and power. So you get bimbo after bimbo, raging with jealous and materialistic greed. Our "man's world" conditions women to be that way, and then men turn around and despise women for it.

So men become misogynists, too selfish to even try to relate to what it's like living in a world where the nightmare of sexual harassment and discrimination lurks around every corner and the chances of being brutally raped are greater than one in three. Men just sit back in their cushy, cozy little lives and have the nerve to complain about how "bitchy" women are.

Mr. Eavesdrop obviously has no business invading other people's privacy, especially being as self-centered and ignorant as he is. As far as I'm concerned, men have no right to whine about us poor, struggling women until they come down off their power/ego trips and start creating a world where women are equal and worthy of respect from the day they are born. Until then, we are still a minority living in a patriarchal society.

Dressing Up In Leather And Flannel Just To Be Seen

I applaud your printing a short piece previewing the Archers of Loaf, the Chapel Hill, North Carolina, band that played recently at the Casbah ("Of Note," February 24). I was in San Diego for a conference and went to see the show largely due to your preview. They were great. However, I was shocked at how lame the crowd was — from the looks on their faces, I guessed that they liked the music, but they did little more than smile to show approval. Later, when the Meices played an amazingly rocking set, the response was the same. Even the Archers of Loaf commented on the crowd's lameness. I hear all of this talk of the San Diego "scene"; to me, an outsider, it seems like a "seen" — people dressing up in leather and flannel just to be seen.

REPLACE MISSING TEETH
What are Dental Implants? Basically, they are the nearest thing to natural teeth that modern dentistry has to offer. Dental Implants are not new. In fact, Dr. Ronald W. Evasic, D.D.S. has been using Dental Implants since 1968, and was not one of the first dentists to provide this service. Dr. Evasic, along with his partner, Dr. Melissa E. Mani, are general dentists with extensive education and research in Dental Implants and have over 25 years experience in the total discipline. They have recently opened a new practice, California Implant Dentistry Center, which is limited to implant dentistry. To learn more about the benefits and advantages of Dental Implants call CIDC today. You'll be glad you did!

John Middleton ("Letters," March 31) seems to have myopia regarding ideology also. He uses the words "dictatorships of the extreme Right, belligerent nationalism and racism, militarism, etc." and this seems to define the United States rather than any other place.

Cold War Continues To Rage In Letters Column Of The Reader

It appears that my letter of March 24 in which I disagreed with a Mr. D'Agostino re the bias of the media has riled the frantic fringe of the livid Left ("Letters," March 31). Mr. Middleton insists that Stalin, Hitler, and Mussolini were not socialists. The acronym USSR stands for the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics; "communist" leaders have traditionally called themselves socialists. The acronym "Nazi" stands for the National Socialist Party. If they called themselves socialists, so be it, and I stand by my assertion that they were

Glasses In Your Way?
Consider RK

Imagine waking up and seeing clearly without first putting on glasses or contacts! Today, thanks to a modern surgical procedure known as Radial Keratotomy, thousands of men and women no longer depend on corrective eye wear for clear vision.

RK is a proven procedure that reduces or eliminates the common vision problems of Nearsightedness and Astigmatism. National studies evaluating RK have found that for qualified candidates, RK is an effective alternative to wearing glasses and contact lenses.

Join the over 750,000 men and women who've experienced the clear advantage of RK over the past ten years. The Cataract, Laser & R.K. Center offers FREE vision screenings to determine if you're a candidate for RK. To schedule your FREE screening or to receive a FREE audiotape brochure on RK, call the Cataract, Laser & RK Center today.

socialists. Mr. Middleton apparently uses a narrow definition of the generic term socialism, which leads to confusion. Furthermore, Mr. Middleton says there are dictatorships of the Left and of the Right. Hogwash, all dictatorships are of the Left. There is only one realistic yardstick to quantify the form of government: the extent of governmental control. Total control defines a government of the far "Left," and absence of government (anarchy) defines the far "Right." Because Hitler was both a dictator and a socialist, his government (call it Nazism or fascism) was of the Left. When the media calls neo-Nazis right-wingers, we are getting more of the leftward media bias. Incidentally, Mr. Middleton, my dictionary does not define fascism as a government of the Right.

Mr. Middleton seems to be unaware of the existence of an organization known as the Council on Foreign Relations. The basic goal of this group is a one-world socialist government under the aegis of the United Nations. Its membership includes captains of industry (the New York Times and the Washington Post are run by members of the CFR) and religious, educational, political, and military leaders. Just a few examples: Clinton is a member; Bush was a member; Dan Rather and George Will are members. The mainstream media is controlled by these people, Mr. Middleton, and you get to read and hear what they want, and shading the truth doesn't bother them in the least. Perhaps this is why you consider Van Deerlin a moderate.

Mr. Morelli's comments are a little more difficult to assess. He seems to be for the same goals as the conservatives, yet feels that socialism is the way to achieve those goals. To be workable, socialism must have control; it cannot work on a voluntary basis except as tribal communism. And with that control, individual freedom is lost. He, too, does not understand that fascism is a form of socialism. Those who do not learn from history are doomed to repeat it.

I See Mr. Rogers As Simply An Atheistic Fool

Mr. Alan Rogers ("Letters," March 31) replied to my letter by evading all that I said with the exception that I described him as a hate-filled anti-Christian moron. It is laughable that these pseudo-erudite Christophobes and atheists always effect a scholarly and pseudo-sophisticated air "justified" only by their scoffing at God. Mr. Rogers rattles off a list of books — most of which I have read — and then concludes that if I were to read these books, I would not find him to be a hate-filled anti-Christian moron. No, I will not repeat that. Now I see Mr. Rogers as simply an atheistic fool, and I suggest he read the Psalms to locate this citation.

Michael Praetorius
San Diego

I Don't Consider Mr. Rogers A Hate-Filled Anti-Christian Moron

I really appreciated Alan Rogers's response ("Letters," March 31) to Michael Praetorius's letter calling him a "hate-filled anti-Christian moron." I'm a Christian and I don't consider Alan Rogers a hate-filled anti-Christian moron.

Alan, there are a few things I'd like to challenge you with. Your arguments are good arguments, and you express them eloquently. I know of books like Evidence That Demands a Verdict by Josh McDowell and The Word Is Truth by Edward Young that do a fine job of factually defending Christianity and the Bible. I don't think it's a matter of stupid people believing in God and smart people knowing better. Both belief and unbelief in God are primal in people. There's a part in all of us that wants to find God, and there's also a part that wants to deny God's existence.

Let me suggest that both are totally subjective. Man believes in God because man needs God — we don't know enough, we aren't powerful enough, we make mistakes, we get sick, we die. So we imagine or invent or actually find a being who is all-knowing, all-powerful, infinite, eternal, and good. There's also a part of us that needs to deny the existence of God in order to satisfy our primal desire for self-sufficiency. We spend our lives trying to find in ourselves what we would look for in God. Maybe it's true that rationalizing God out of existence is just as possible as fantasizing Him into existence.

I appreciate your listing books to support your beliefs. I'd like to read them because I want to know what keeps you from enjoying the God I've found through you-know-who Jesus Christ. I hope you'll check out the books I mentioned above, but before you do, I'd ask you to really examine the lives of people who claim to know God through Jesus Christ. Please examine our lives as thoroughly as you've examined the arguments against us. If our God is real, we're supposed to be filled with a love and a peace that the world can't give. The simplest test of our God's existence is to go someplace where people are worshipping him with all their hearts and ask yourself if you see real love present. Ask yourself if you feel a peace that you don't and can't understand. I've personally seen and experience this at Hosanna Community Church in Encinitas, Coast Vineyard in La Jolla, New Life Presbyterian in Escondido, Foothills Christian Fellowship in El Cajon, and North Coast Vineyard in Oceanside. Please, Alan, visit any or all of these and see if you experience Jesus and then call us God-filled morons. To me, that's a compliment.

HOW CAN I AFFORD RK SURGERY?
Many people are denying themselves the benefit of Radial Keratotomy (RK) – a safe, simple outpatient surgical procedure that corrects nearsightedness and astigmatism.
They mistakenly believe that they just couldn't possibly afford it.
But Michael J. Borer, M. D. and Ralph D. Anderson, M.D. of the Refractive Centres of Southern California have always believed that everyone should get the care they need.

First Lady Fingers UFOs, Mind-Control Kitties in Foster Suicide Snafu

20th Annual Pegleg Smith Liar's Contest

LOCAL EVENTS

"I killed Vince Foster," Hillary said to me last week over some beers at the Oasis Bar on Orange Avenue in Coronado. It was a few minutes before last call and I could tell she was anxious to get something off her chest.

I don't know how she'd managed to elude the Secret Service and all the right-wing zanies milling around Larry Lawrence's beachfront mansion. Maybe she'd slipped out the back way. Maybe Lawrence has got an underground passage from the mansion to the Oasis Bar. Who knows? All I know is that the First Lady had taken a liking to me after she'd read a pro-Clinton piece I'd written for the Washington, D.C., City Paper (the capital's version of the Reader). She'd dropped me a line, "Thanks for your support. I'd like to meet you sometime." That was before the election. Then there'd been the inauguration. The health-care sideshow. I really hadn't expected to hear from her again. Then the President came to town and late Tuesday night I got the phone call. The breathy contralto, the slightly down-home inflection, were unmistakable. "This is Hillary. Meet me at the Oasis in ten minutes. I'll be wearing a red halter top and cutoff jeans. When you see me, call me Paulette," was all she said.

She sat at the far end of the Oasis's long bar, back in the deep shadows. If she hadn't told me what she'd be wearing, I would've mistaken her for any one of the leggy strumpets that cruise the Oasis for lonely SEALs. Paulette was wearing movie-star sunglasses and a cascade wig of frizzy auburn curls. It looked like Chelsea's hair. She was gnawing distractedly on a stale tortilla chip. She elbowed the salsa dish out of her way and ordered me a beer. "Take a load off," she said, patting the stool next to her. "I've only got a few minutes."

Paulette cleared her throat. "I've gotta tell you something. And although I know I can trust you not to leak this, even if you do, no one will believe it. They'll call you a liar. But that's not the point. I've gotta talk to someone about this. Bill's a mess these days. Whitewater. He's a wreck. He spends all his free time listening to Barbra Streisand records and playing Nintendo."

She drained her mug and ordered another. "Vince was a nut," she continued, her voice weak, but intense. "A dangerous nut. But I loved him. But that's another story. Vince was a UFO buff from way back, ever since he'd sighted some glowing ball over Little Rock back in '79. He was obsessed with flying saucers, little green men, what-have-you. He went to all the conventions. He got in deep with that whole UFO-conspiracy crowd, real tight, which for a Yankee mighta been a political liability, but for us he was just another Southern eccentric. Anyhow, this went on for years and Bill and I really didn't give it much thought until we got to D.C. and Bill wanted to appoint him, over my objections, because I was certain all this saucer hooey would hit the press. But Bill's stubborn. And Vince hits D.C. all wide-eyed and eager and all his UFO buddies are tickled pink because now they've got an ally in the White House. 'You better keep an eye on Vince, 'cuz he's gonna get out of hand,' is what I told Bill. Naturally, he didn't listen.

"So, next thing you know, we start getting calls from the Pentagon saying Vince is over there almost every day, charging up and down the halls, hollering about the MKULTRA Project, about the 'UFO Working Group' — that supersecret think tank Reagan had cobbled together, which wasn't so supersecret inside the Beltway. I tell Bill, 'Look, you gotta put a muzzle on Vince. Keep him on a short leash. He's gonna make this administration a laughing stock.' Bill didn't listen. Had other things on his mind — like all that crapola going on over at Justice, at State.

"So, the next rattle out of the box is that Vince starts having all these 'UFO detectors' installed all over the White House — Lincoln Bedroom, Chelsea's room, you-name-it. Ordered the gadgets out of the back of some UFO magazine. Bill just laughed, thought it was some kind of joke. Meanwhile, Vince had the entire House staff in a tizzy. He's running around saying that the Republicans are in cahoots with the aliens and that they're gonna have Bill 'abducted' and he's got proof. Saying the Military-Industrial Complex and the Republicans have been real cozy with the aliens ever since the Roswell Incident. I said, 'Vince. Put a lid on it. You can't be serious. Take a vacation.' He got real angry at me. Kinda sulked. Said something about my having a 'brain implant.'

"Finally, that fateful night — it eats me up inside just to talk about it — Bill was passed out, OD'd on antihistamines. Chelsea was over at Tipper and Al's. The White House kinda shuts down after 9:00 p.m. and I was feelin' kinda blue, kinda anxious. Goin' crazy over the health-care package. Anyhow, we'd run out of Jack Daniels and I was on my way to chew out the chief usher for not tending to the First Family's needs, and Vince jumps out at me from nowhere and puts his hand over my mouth and drags me up to the Oval Office and slams the door and locks it. He was completely outta control. Talking a mile a minute, going on about cattle mutilations, Project Blue Book, APRO, Area 51 in Nevada, Groom Lake, unusual lights over Kirkland Air Force Base, MJ-12, Project Aquarius. He says the Air Force got its butt kicked when they took on a rogue alien installation out in the Anza-Borrego Desert. He starts yammering about Dr. Jose Delgado's mind-control experiments on cats and starts calling Socks an 'impostor,' and 'one of Delgado's deadly fluff balls.' It was nutty. I say, Vince, calm down. You've blown a gasket. Let's have a drink and call it a night.' Meanwhile, I see Socks curled up on Bill's desk, and I think, 'Oh, my God! I hope Vince doesn't see him.' And it was like he read my mind. He runs over and grabs Socks by the throat and he starts strangling him. And I kinda flipped out. You know, bonkers. Anyway, I always keep this little pearl-handled revolver with me, like Nancy Reagan's, and I thought I'd fire off a few warning shots to really get the message across to Vince that his behavior was totally inappropriate and that I wanted him to stop. Who knows what happened? I was never that good a shot in the first place and there was blood everywhere. So, I picked up the phone and called my old friend Ralph Nader, who knows the D.C. area like the back of his hand, and I said, 'Ralph, look, I know you and I don't see eye-to-eye on this health-care issue, but I'm in a tight spot and I need you to help me out. I need you to dump a 'body for me. You know, professional courtesy.' Ralph said he'd be happy to oblige as long as I'd listen to his single-payer proposal. I agreed. I mean, I couldn't exactly let America know I'd killed Vince Foster because he was strangling a cat."

With that, the First Lady wiped some suds from her upper lip. "Thanks for listening. You're a real sweet*heart*. I gotta go. Stay in touch."

Bile rose in my throat. I grabbed her by the wrist and hissed, "Listen, Paulette. If you expect me to believe that yarn, then I've got a great suggestion for you. Why don't you stick around until Saturday, April 9, when the 20th Annual Pegleg Smith Liar's Contest will be held at the Pegleg Monument near Anza-Borrego State Park."

Although the original Pegleg Smith was a mountain man who'd lost his leg in an Indian battle and claimed to have found gold while en route to Los Angeles in the 1840s, you two have a lot in common. He was considered to be one of the greatest liars of all time. You'd be a grand-prize winner. The only hitch is that contest participants' lies must follow a desert theme and can last no longer than five minutes. But since you have such a creative way with details, I don't think you'll have any problem with that. Hell, you could even work in that Anza-Borrego–alien-installation angle."

Hillary smirked. "No, babe, I don't think I can make it. But," she said as she turned and headed for the bar's back door, "maybe I can get Bill to send George Stephanopoulos."

The Opium Dens of Compulsive Reading

Talk on the History of Books and Printing

Albert Kornblum

Books are a poison. They should be outlawed.

Allan Kornblum, of course, would disagree. He has a personal stake in the matter. As the founder of Minneapolis's Coffee House Press, a publisher of contemporary literature, it's naturally in his interest to arouse enthusiasm for his product. The last thing he's going to do is acknowledge how dangerous books are.

I'm not talking about the ideas in books. In all ages, there have been people proclaiming that the reading of books leads to literacy, literacy leads to free thought, free thought leads to dissent, and the next thing you know civilization will be lying in ruins. That's why the Ch'in emperor Shih Huang-ti burned books in 213 B.C., to be followed by the Spanish in Aztec Mexico and Hitler in our own century.

That's why the Counter-Reformation Inquisition started publishing the Index of Forbidden Books in 1559, why royal censorship controlled publishing in European nations for centuries, and why zealots try to remove The Catcher in the Rye from school libraries.

But I'm talking about something far more baneful than ideas. My objection to books is purely medical. Books are an addictive substance. For certain susceptible individuals, they can lead to an addiction more terrible than alcohol, nicotine, opium, or crack cocaine. People addicted to books cannot stop themselves. They must have more, more, more. The addiction empties their bank accounts, drives them to crime, destroys their souls.

You will certainly hear nothing of this in the lecture on the history of books and printing that Kornblum will be giving in the UCSD bookstore. Here, and on the other 49 stops during his two-year tour of the country (sponsored by the Reader's Digest Literary Publishers Marketing Development Program — a name that reveals all), Kornblum will be giving books a boost in their current struggle-to-the-death with books-on-cassette, mi-rofilm, and CD-ROM. He will even demonstrate a letterpress of the sort he uses in his own elite publishing house, with each member of the audience invited to print his or her own broadside by hand. His historical survey will present only the good side of books. He will not tell you about books as a disease of the mind.

The disease was endemic, even in the ancient world. After the invention of writing by the Sumerians, in the 4th Century B.C., books at first consisted of clay tablets incised with cuneiform script. They were heavy and unwieldy, but baked clay lasts forever, and for someone with a collector's mania a library of such tablets must have had an irresistibly thrilling solidity. The 7th Century B.C. Assyrian king Ashurbanipal was clearly a victim of the mania, assembling in Nineveh the first systematically collected and cataloged library in the ancient Middle East.

Far more addictive, however, was the papyrus roll, developed by the Egyptians as early as 2500 B.C. Made of sheets of crisscrossed reed strips pasted together into a long scroll, with texts written in ink, the papyrus roll must have been tremendously attractive to ancient sufferers from bibliomania. Imagine the excitement of gradually unrolling the scroll (which might be 35 feet long) and watching column after column of text gradually emerge from its dark concealment! The Greeks and Romans knew the same ecstatic anticipation and satisfaction, for the majority of their books too were on papyrus rolls (although they also used waxed wooden tablets). What does the Greek word "biblos" ("book") mean but "papyrus"? What does the Latin word "volumen" mean but "roll"? And for a Greek or Roman book addict, wandering in the great library of Alexandria, with its 700,000 rolls, must have been like an alcoholic exploring the Rothschild wine cellar.

But something even more addictive was soon to come along. By the 4th Century A.D., the papyrus scroll had been largely supplanted by the vellum or parchment codex, the direct ancestor of our modern books. The material now was a refined form of leather, made from the skin of cattle, sheep, or goat—vellum was specifically calfskin, while the word "parchment" indicated the invention of this writing material in the city of Pergamum). These smooth, sensuous, long-lasting sheets were folded (in two for a folio volume, in four for a quarto, in eight for an octavo), gathered in piles, and stitched together on one side. For the first time, book addicts could experience the dizzying pleasure of turning pages!

Much has been written by the enemies of Christian monasticism about the vices of monks. It is perhaps not appreciated that the most consuming vice of these religious celibates, isolated in their medieval cloisters, was the copying of books. As they sat in their scriptoria, silently transcribing texts on parchment, their spirits must have wallowed in the supreme sensuality of the words, the sentences, the pages, the leather bindings. And it was a sin they did not even have to confess, for the highest ecclesiastics were guilty of it too. Witness the notorious Philobiblon (1345), in which the book-collecting frenzies of Richard de Bury, Bishop of Durham, and his intimate relations with stationers and booksellers, are detailed with the breathless eroticism of the pornographer.

Up until the middle of the 15th Century, the disease remained confined to a small group of churchmen. But between 1440 and 1450 a momentous step was taken down the road to mental illness, a step as dire as the later refinement of opium into heroin. This was the invention by Johannes Gutenberg, a Mainz goldsmith, of the printed book. The fatal elements were brought decisively together: movable metal type, paper (originally invented by the Chinese), ink, and the printing press. It was soon to be seen that of the making of books there was no end, and that the insatiable appetite of book-lovers could now enjoy a monstrous and endless fix.

The subsequent history of this degrading mania is a litany of vicious refinements and enhancements. The Renaissance Venetian printer, Aldus Manutius, originated the cheap high of inexpensive "pocket" editions. Soon the presses that had sprung up all over Europe were advertising their wares on handbills or broadsheets, and publishing catalogs for addicts to drool over. The 18th Century introduced the commercial lending library, to get people addicted for a modest fee, so that afterwards they would be driven to spend their last penny on acquiring books. The 19th Century brought cheap reprints, with cloth bindings instead of leather, to draw greater and greater numbers into the "opium dens" of compulsive reading — a process that reached its horrifying culmination in 1935, when Penguin Books first appeared, thus launching the paperback revolution.

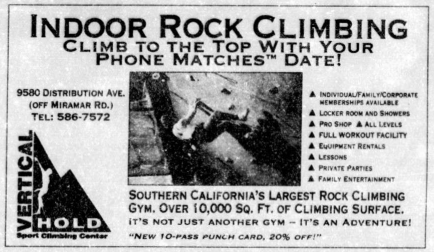

From that moment onward, even the poorest member of society could be enticed into buying and collecting books. And if it had not been for the advent of television, which every year saves millions from reading, the human race would have been doomed to live out its final decades immersed in the intoxicating stimulations of the printed word.

But don't expect to hear these awful truths from Allan Kornblum!

— John Peter Applebranch

Adams Avenue Is the Perfect Place for This

21st Annual Roots Festival

Take your clothes off, if you feel like it."

It's this Aquarian guru at the mike. We're all sitting on the natural amphitheater of a grassy hillside, getting Enlightened, trying to shake off our middle-class inhibitions and see the Naked Truth for the beautiful thing it is.

I'm at this New Age folk-jazz-country-blues festival. With a girl named Sue. Really.

For a shy guy like me to get to a folk festival with a girl is cool. Captain Courageous! I'll not only mix with the hip, the far-out, the "Let's Expose Our Honesty for All the World to See" crowd, but I'll maybe even participate? I went through my teens during the First Coffeehouse Epoque. "Yes'n How Many Times Must a Man Go Down . . . (that's what it sounded like) before he can call himself a man? The answer my friend, is blowing . . ." That sang in my ears, along with Zorba the Greek.

So we've been listening to Woody Guthrie, Arlo Guthrie, Dylan. Impersonators. The whole pantheon of folk gods talk-singing their "aw-shucks" wisdom through the mouths of these intense imitators, until their strumming knuckles are bleeding.

"I'm going down to the Zen tent," says Sue. She can see me wavering. Fighting 20 years of suburban repression, I want to let it out, this once, to drop everything: pretenses, defenses, trousers.

Sue takes off precisely at the moment when white and hairy 40-something males and post-natal moms with hunched shoulders go down to join the naked crowd dancing in front of the makeshift stage.

I, dammit, admire these uninhibited people. I tell myself, "If you don't do this now, you never will. You'll become repressed, bitter, conservative, middle-aged. You'll never have done it! Do it! This is about love!"

A bosomy chanteuse rushes to the mike and yodels, "Where have all the flowers gone?"

I slip off my T-shirt. I sidle closer to the group. I step over undulating bodies. I unbuckle my sandals. I rip off my belt. I drop my trousers. I fling off my underpants.

At last! Freedom!

Howard Armstrong

Kenny Hall

And then, the music stops. The Aquarian guru has recaptured the mike. "Thank you very much, people. The vegetarian cooking demo is on next, so we gotta clear the stage."

Now, nobody's naked anymore. Where the hell are my underpants?

Don't worry, everybody at the upcoming Adams Avenue Roots Festival, formerly the San Diego Folk Festival, will have their clothes on. Local folk aficionado Lou Curtiss has been organizing folk festivals since 1967. Sam Hinton, who has been singing songs like "Frankie and Johnny" and "John Henry," will be there. His was that great '30s protest song, "The Talking Atomic Blues." Fred Gerlach, a student of the late, great Leadbelly, will show off his 12-string aptitude. Johnny Walker, San Diego's premiere British folk artist for the last 30 years, is also on the bill. Also scheduled to perform are blues great Howard Armstrong, folkie Kenny Hall, and traditional Cajun and Mexican bands.

"Adams Avenue is the perfect place for this," says Lou Curtiss. "Doing it within the halls of San Diego State (where the Folk Festival happened for 20 years before the university opted for more lucrative rock concerts), there was always that barrier. Like when I brought my mother-in-law one year, first thing she said was, 'I smell dope. Let's go.' For her, all students reeked and smoked dope. On Adams, it's open territory, — and it's free. There's nothing exclusive about it. We're not inside anybody's walls this time. It's our street, our festival. Adams Avenue is full of musicians, book people, crafts. The Library of Congress used to call us 'the best traditional music festival in the Western United States.' I don't think San Diego State realized what it had. I've never seen the support we've got this time around. I think it's going to be a great weekend."

OUTDOORS

Monkey-Flower is blooming impressively this month through May. Look for these low, shrub-like plants with tubular yellow or red flowers wherever native vegetation clothes the landscape — from the coastal bluffs to the lower slopes of the mountains. As you drive Interstates 8 or 805 near Mission Valley, look for the rust tint these flowers give to the steep hillsides. On the mesa just above San Onofre State Beach, you can see springtime monkey-flower blossoms of every intermediate shade from yellow to red.

Bracken Ferns are rising on the higher mountains of San Diego County, their bright green, unfolding fronds (called "fiddleheads") pushing up through the russet remains of last year's growth. Look for waist-high bracken fern along the creeks and hollows of the Palomar, Cuyamaca, and Laguna Mountains.

Desert Agaves, or century plants, are sending up their asparagus-like flower stalks on rocky hillsides throughout much of the Anza-Borrego Desert. On warm, sunny days the stalks may grow almost one foot per day (fast enough for you to notice the sharp leaf tips at the bud actually separating from one another). After the stalk reaches a height of 10 to 20 feet, clusters of waxy, yellow flowers appear, ready for pollination by bees and other insects. After blooming, the fleshy, dagger-like leaves at the base of the plant die (after a life of 10 or 20 years, not a century) and the stalk, bearing a crop of seeds, dries up as well.

Learn about Mysterious Mexican-era symbols on ancient oak trees in Los Penasquitos Canyon Preserve during the mystery tree and flower walk scheduled for Saturday, April 9, from 9 to 11 a.m. Participants will be able to view wildflowers as well; it's an easy walk, with one stream crossing that may involve wet feet. To join the group, take the Mercy Road exit off I-15 and head west to Black Mountain Preserve; parking for the preserve is opposite. The outing is free. Call 484-3219 for further information.

Plant Some Trees on the newly constructed Highland Valley Trail with other volunteers on Saturday, April 9, from 9 a.m. until noon. Instruction for native oaks (Quercus agrifolia, or coast live oak) will be provided by Gene Thompson of the Cara Knott Foundation. Meet at the Highland Valley trailhead found at the corner of Highland Valley Road and Pomerado Road, in Rancho Bernardo. Free. call 595-5602 for the requested reservations. Wear sturdy shoes, and bring gloves and shovels if you've got them.

Native Plants are the subject of a walk through the Tijuana River National Estuarine Reserve, the 2500-acre wetland immediately north of the international border, on Saturday, April 9, from 9 a.m. until noon. The walk will be led by a naturalist from the California Native Plant Society. Meet at the corner of Fifth Street and Iris Avenue in Imperial Beach. Free. 575-3613. No reservations required.

Palm Walk Offshoot Tours offers its monthly hour-long guided stroll past many of Balboa Park's palm tree stands on Saturday, April 9, at 10 a.m., starting from the park's Botanical Building. Free. Call 235-1114 for more information.

Wildlife Corridors of Chaparral and oak woodland provide homes for diverse bird, reptile, and mammal populations in Mt. Gower Open Space Preserve in Ramona. On Sunday, April 10, from 9 to 10:30 a.m., the Canyoneers, San Diego Natural History Museum volunteers with special training to help the public develop appreciation of the native plants and animals in the county, will lead a hike there.

To reach the trailhead, get to Highway 67 in Lakeside, and go east on Mapleview Street one-half mile to Ashwood Street. Turn left (north) on Ashwood (it changes to Wildcat Canyon Road), and continue to San Vicente Road (12.3 miles). Go east on San Vicente 1.6 miles to Gunn Stage Road; head north on Gunn Stage 1.8 miles to the entrance of the preserve, and park in the staging area. Free. For more information, call 232-3821 x203.

Discover the Many Ways in which people affect the environment in both positive and negative ways during a hike at Blue Sky Ecological Preserve on Sunday, April 10, from 9 to 10:30 a.m. Wear comfortable walking shoes and carry water. For further information, call 486-7238. The walk is free. Find the reserve on Espola Road, one-half mile north of Lake Poway Road, in Poway.

Torrey Pines State Park is the site for a seaside exploration hosted by the Birch Aquarium-Museum on Sunday, April 10, from 1 to 3 p.m. A naturalist from the aquarium will lead a tour and talk about the geology and ecology of the cliffs, bluffs, canyons, and beaches in the reserve. The fee is $9 per adult, $7 for children (aged 7-13). Call 534-7523 for more information and the required advance reservations.

Meet at the Foot of the Ocean Beach pier to take a moderate four-mile, 1.5-hour walk with Walkabout peramb(v)lators up Newport Avenue, and then along Sunset Cliffs Boulevard for views of the ocean and homes on Sunday, April 10, at 2:45 p.m. An optional dinner follows; the walk itself is free. Dial 231-7463 for more details.

Venus Meets Crescent Moon in a beautiful close encounter during early evening, Tuesday, April 12. Look for both in the western sky, starting about 15 minutes after sunset. This will be the closest and most photogenic of several Venus-moon pairings during this calendar year.

The Razzmoll Are in Bloom Again on the hillsides in Carlsbad. From now through the middle of May, the fields are open to visitors. Other crops on the site include gladiolus, watsonia, ornithogalum (Star of Bethlehem), spraxis, oxalis, raspberry, and strawberry. The entrance to the fields is found at the northeast corner of Palomar Airport Road and Paseo del Norte. For further details, dial 453-9550.

TV

Young Natalie Wood, Young Robert Redford, star in This Property Is Condemned, a weird, cheesy romp based on Tennessee Williams' one-act play. Wood plays a white trash teen with big dreams. Crass skinny-dipping scene is fun. Airs Thursday, April 7, 6 p.m. AMC, Cox channel 33, Southwestern channel 23.

Dressy Spectacle, Max von Sydow and Liv Ullman star in The Emigrants, a very l-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-ng epic of the lives of 19th-century Swedish pioneers in America. Mild-mannered stoicism on a grand scale. Airs Thursday, April 7, 6 p.m. Bravo, Cox channel 42, Southwestern channel 40.

Incest and America's Favorite Goofy Heartthrob, that's right, Ted Danson transgresses the Universal Taboo in Something about Amelia. Prurience galore. Airs Thursday, April 7, 7:05 p.m. TBS, Cox channel 27, Southwestern channel 2.

Gronian Lust, PBS's filthathon continues with this installment of The Nature of Sex, in which the love life of grunion is given close scrutiny. Airs Thursday, April 7, 8 p.m. KPBS, channel 15.

One of the Best Programs on Television, if you haven't gotten around to watching the Secret Life of Mamba, a truly fascinating series that explains the genius behind everyday doodads, then you owe it yourself to watch at least one episode. This one investigates the evolution of the typewriter. Airs Thursday, April 7, 9:30 p.m. Discovery Channel, Cox channel 35, Southwestern channel 24.

"Rape and Marriage: The Rideout Case," for an intriguing glimpse of pre-Lorena Bobbitt America, watch Rape and Marriage: The Rideout Case, the fact-based TV movie that scrutinizes the landmark trial of an Oregon man accused of raping his wife. Airs Thursday, April 7, 11:05 p.m. TBS, Cox channel 27, Southwestern channel 2.

Burt Lancaster and Anna Magnani star in The Rose Tattoo, a very good adaptation of Tennessee Williams' play about Italians in Louisiana. Steamy, salt-of-the-earth theatrics. Airs Friday, April 8, 8 p.m. Bravo, Cox channel 42, Southwestern channel 40.

Watch Shirley MacLaine Roll Her Eyes and Act Like a Nut alongside Jerry Lewis and Dean Martin in Artists and Models, a little known and seldom watched 1955 flick about a writer of children's stories. Zany. Madcap. Airs Friday, April 8, 8 p.m. The Family Channel, Cox channel 19, Southwestern channel 35.

Zestiness seems to be the theme of this week's viewing (see The Rose Tattoo above). This National Geographic special investigates sherry-swilling, bull-fighting, and flamenco-dancing Spain. Airs Friday, April 8, 8:30 p.m. KPBS, channel 15.

America's Fascination with Women Behind Bars gets a thoughtful twist in Prison Stories: Women on the Inside, a jolly threesome of Chained Heat-type yarns starring Lolita Davidovich and Rae Dawn Chong. Airs Friday, April 8, 9 p.m. Lifetime, Cox channel 38, Southwestern channel 32.

"Island of the Burning Doomed," tempers flare and folks burst into flame in this wacky science fiction flick. Is the heat wave causing people to combust spontaneously? Airs Friday, April 8, 9:45 p.m. TNT, Cox channel 34, Southwestern channel 27.

Aimless Violence Amidst Mold and Mildew, that's right, Cops travels to rainy Portland, Oregon, whose dampness does little to impede deadly mayhem. Airs Friday, April 8, 11 p.m. KTTV, channel 11.

Social Outcasts Kidnap Contraband Pig in A Private Function, a sincerely delightful 1985 flick starring Maggie Smith. Food rationing in post-WWII England. Airs Friday, April 8, 11 p.m. Bravo, Cox channel 42, Southwestern channel 40.

Invisible Moon Creatures Poster Planet Earth by inhabiting dead bodies and playing violent pranks. Invisible Invaders airs Saturday, April 9, 1:40 a.m. TNT, Cox channel 34, Southwestern channel 27.

This 25-mile ride is appropriate for intermediates. The ride is free, but bring as much dinero as you'd like to spend. Call 453-2363 for more information.

Olympic Style Taekwondo is a full-contact martial art; matches can be won (or lost) by a knock-out. The California State Taekwondo Championships will be held at Serra High School on Saturday, April 9, beginning at 9:30 a.m., with the finals beginning at 5 p.m. (It's the qualification event for the 20th U.S. National Taekwondo Championships.) Present world bronze medalist and San Diego native Hyon K. Lee will provide a martial arts exhibition during the final presentation. Tickets range from $8 to $12 for the entire day of competition; call 277-2700 for more information. Find the school at the intersection of Tierrasanta Boulevard and Santo Road, in Tierrasanta.

A Workout for Hope can be found in the 3900 block of Normal Street at University Avenue in Hillcrest on Saturday, April 9, from 3 to 6 p.m. Similar workouts are taking place in gyms and health clubs across the country. The event, sponsored by City of Hope National Medical Center and Beckmar Research, will raise money for AIDS research. Call 685-3660 for additional details. Participation is free.

Ice in San Diego, watch the San Diego Gulls play hockey against Peoria on Saturday and Tuesday, April 9 and 12, at 7:05 p.m. each night. See the playing at the San Diego Sports Arena, 3500 Sports Arena Boulevard. Tickets range from $7 to $18. Call 235-7825 for tickets and more information.

Costa Rica's Talamanca Corridor, a Nature Conservancy project, benefits from the 1994 Rainforest Run 5k, scheduled for Sunday, April 10. Day-of-event registration is from 5:30 to 7:15 a.m.; the race begins at 7:30 a.m. The race starts and finishes south of the Hilton Hotel in Mission Bay Park, with a flat and fast course. There are "baby jogger" and wheelchair divisions. For further information, call 272-8316.

Mountain Madness, both mountain and road bicyclists are beckoned to join the Knickerbikers ride sea for Sunday, April 10, beginning at 9 a.m. This ride for experts begins at Culler Park, at 7th Street and E Street in Ramona; road riders get to the abandoned store in Mesa Grande via the Old Julian Highway, then highways 78 and 79, while the mountaineers ride up Black Canyon. The elevation gain is 1800 feet, so you're guaranteed a workout. Bring water and a lunch. The ride is free; call 276-3471 for more information.

An Ongoing "Village Walkers" Program takes place every Thursday at noon, targeting downtown office workers. Walkers meet at the Seaport Village central plaza for orientation and warm-up stretches and then head out for a brisk walk through Seaport Village and Embarcadero Park North. The walk is approximately two miles long. The program is free and open to people of all ages. For more details, call 235-3106.

The San Diego County Rockhoppers of the American Volkssport Association are sponsoring a 25km hike event in Carlsbad, starting and finishing at the Carlsbad by the Sea Retirement Home, at 2855 Carlsbad Boulevard. The ride may be taken any day of the year, during daylight hours. The route follows the coast to Encinitas. To register, ask for the registration book at the desk in the lobby and follow directions. The walk is free and open to all. Participants desiring American Volkssport Association (AVV) credit will be charged $1.50; if you desire the credit and award, the charge is $5. Questions? Call 758-5667 or 439-6264 for additional information.

SPECIAL

"Around the World with Gems" is the theme for the 55th annual show and convention of the California Federation of Mineralogical Societies, set for April 8 through 10, in the Exhibit Building at the Del Mar Fairgrounds. The show promises exhibits of minerals, gems, fossils, lapidary, and jewelry; crafts demonstrations; educational programs; children's activities; and exhibits from five museums. Show hours are Friday and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Sunday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is $4 for adults, $2.50 for children 12 to 17, and children under 12 free. Need more information? Call 422-6211.

Antique American and European Furniture, cut glass, jewelry, china, silver, and collectibles are all featured at the "San Diego's Prestigious Antiques Show and Sale," April 8 through 10 at the Scottish Rite Masonic Temple, 1895 Camino del Rio South, in Mission Valley. The hours are noon to 9 p.m. Friday; noon to 8 p.m. Saturday; and noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $4 for adults, children under 12 free accompanied by an adult. Call 436-3844 for more details.

Crank It Up, the San Diego Adams Avenue Roots Festival kicks off on Friday, April 8, and continues through Sunday, April 10, at the Adams Avenue Park, on Adams Avenue at 35th Street in Normal Heights. Concerts will run on two outside stages and one inside stage between 6 p.m. and midnight on Friday; between 10 a.m. and midnight on Saturday; and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. The emphasis is on vintage blues, folk music, jazz, and country music. A smattering of performers (from the 28 scheduled to perform) includes the Balkan Folk Orchestra, Eos Californios, the Buddy Blue Band, Tobacco Road, Sam Hinton, Nat Reese, Fro Brigham's Preservation Band, the San Diego Mandolin Orchestra, and Los Feroces del Norte.

Along with all the jamming, there will be an all-day song swap meet and traditional folk dancing in the Normal Heights United Methodist Church (across the street from the park), and booths with food, crafts, musical instruments, and all kinds of other attractions. And what is the admission price for these festivities? It's all free! (How can you beat that?) Questions? Call 282-7833 for answers.

A Storytelling Contest frames The Canterbury Tales, written by Geoffrey Chaucer around 1387. Chaucer's masterwork is the subject for the next meeting of the Del Mar chapter of the Great Books Reading and Discussion Group. Find the group on Friday, April 8, from 7 to 9 p.m., in the second floor lobby at L'Auberge Del Mar. Find the hotel at 1540 Camino Del Mar in (where else?) Del Mar. The meeting is free and the public is invited. Call 755-7742 for further information.

THE REVOLUTION WILL BE TELEVISED

By Abe Opincar

If you think back to the images of real-life events that have stayed with you — the Zapruder film, the tracer fire illuminating Baghdad's sky — they share qualities in common. Their herky-jerky edginess mirrors so closely what we know of reality's instability that their contents are easily etched in our minds. Rough-hewn images like these stay with us, too, because they engage us in ways that smoother, polished images do not. They make us work. We have to reach somehow through the shaky camera work, the scratchy sound, all the details leaping into and disappearing from the frame, to grasp what's going on. This guesswork makes us feel that we have, to some degree, participated in the event.

A Cry for Freedom and Democracy, a half-hour documentary of the peasant rebellion in Chiapas, made by local video producer Che-Che Martinez, has that addled, indelible feel. Taped with a simple 8mm camcorder, Martinez bought at Radio Shack, the documentary is far slicker than, say, the Zapruder film, and considerably longer, but the people and things it records are nonetheless unforgettable. It's remarkable how something so casual-seeming can be, at moments, so heartbreaking.

Martinez, a Panamanian-American whose father was a casualty of the U.S. invasion to oust Noriega, traveled to Chiapas with members of the New York-based Center for Constitutional Rights in early January, shortly after the rebelion began. To hear Martinez tell it, his resulting documentary is something of a polemic. He describes himself as being "passionate," as having a "strong point of view," and, as most politically engaged media-types often do, Martinez scoffs at the notion of "objectivity." But if you're expecting his documentary to be a dreary, sterile exercise in political clichés, you're wrong. "This documentary has less to do with journalism and more to do with art," Martinez says of his work. And he's right.

Courageous or absurd?

Sure, there's politics, per se, in A Cry for Freedom, but it sort of hovers around the edges. There's no editorializing, no preaching; the faces and the monologues Martinez records are so moving that they dominate entirely the documentary's 30 quick minutes: politics, Right or Left, doesn't have much space to wriggle into. Without much explanation, you're dragged right up to the sweaty, bedraggled faces of a historical event.

And what of these faces? They're the tired, befuddled faces of Mexican Indians who've watched their sons and husbands get dragged off by soldiers to an easily imaginable fate; they're the faces of rural clinic workers who watched tubercular patients being shot in their beds; they're the scared, pinched faces of very young Mexican soldiers.

There's also some narrative, most of which is provided by an American "writer/activist" whose presence in Chiapas goes unexplained, and by a Mexican journalist whose presence is implicitly understandable. Their analysis provides a context for what we're seeing, but they're the least memorable of the documentary's elements. Over and over we return to the region's dirt-poor residents. And over and over the crushing bareness of their lives gets driven home: one peasant fellow complains that Mexico's ruling party, the PRI, doesn't even distribute T-shirts to Chiapas's poor at election time. "Only the rich get the T-shirts," he says.

The kind of place where T-shirts go neck-to-neck with torture and mass graves in a contest of relevancy in the public's mind is not a hopeful one. And A Cry for Freedom and Democracy is a kind of home movie of that sort of place. Of all its harrowing images, after viewing, one surfaces repeatedly to mind.

Press reports from a variety of sources have told us that Chiapas's rebels, those lacking real weapons, carried sticks of wood carved to resemble rifles. A Cry for Freedom shows us, offhandedly, two specimens. They're branches of trees, cut, stripped of bark, with a remedial "strap" fixed to both ends with duct tape. Hardly even toy guns. And it would require more than mere imagination to carry one into battle.

At its aching center, A Cry for Freedom and Democracy traces the fine line between the courageous and the absurd.

MUSEUMS

(Art museums are listed in the Reader's Guide to Art.)

Antique Gas and Steam Engine Museum, the museum's activities include locating, collecting, documenting, and preserving historical gas-, steam-, and horse-powered equipment related not only to agriculture, but to the general development of America. The collection is made up of equipment used in lumbering, mining, oil drilling, and construction industries. In addition, the museum has a blacksmith and wheelwright shop, a country kitchen and parlor, a steam-operated saw mill, and 1/3-scale train. The museum is open daily from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 2040 North Santa Fe Avenue, Vista. Admission is free; donations are accepted. For further details, call 941-1791.

Banc-croft Ranch House Museum houses indigenous Indian artifacts and memorabilia of early settlers in the area and is run by the Spring Valley Historical Society. The home, built in 1863, was registered as a National Historic Landmark in 1962 and is on a spot where Kumeyaay Indians camped more than 1000 years ago beside the spring that later gave the area its name. The museum is found at 9050 Memory Lane, Spring Valley; hours are 1 to 4 p.m. Friday through Sunday, and group tours are available during the week. Call 469-1480 for more information.

Bonita Historical Museum, this museum features many historical photographs; artifacts, tools, and farming implements; the district's 1953 fire engine; and bound copies back to the 1930s of the Chula Vista Star News. Find the museum at 4035 Bonita Road, in Bonita. Hours are 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Thursday and Saturday, and by appointment. Dial 267-5141 or 479-0678 for further details. Admission is free.

California Surf Museum, the museum features surfing artifacts and memorabilia — such as surfboards and clothing — of local legends Phil Edwards, John "J.J." Richards, and Peter Johnson, and that way-cool megastar from Hawaii, Duke Kahanamoku. Also featured is a collection of paraphernalia relating to the careers of Ron Drummond, Mike Diffenderfer, Mickey Munoz, and Phil Edwards.

The museum is located at 308 North Pacific Street, Oceanside. Take I-5 and exit at Mission Avenue. Head west approximately one mile, and turn right on Pacific Street. Hours are noon to 4 p.m. Monday, Thursday, and Friday; 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, and Sunday. Admission is free. 721-6876.

Chula Vista Heritage Museum features glimpses of Chula Vista's past; the opening exhibits include lemon packing crate labels, photographs of downtown Chula Vista, doors and adobe blocks from the original Star newspaper building, and relics from the Otay Watch Company. Regular museum hours are 1 to 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Saturday. Find the museum at 360 Third Avenue, Chula Vista. For additional information, call 420-6916.

Chula Vista Nature Center, an interactive living museum devoted to the endangered Southern California coastal wetlands, is located on the middle of Sweetwater Marsh National Wildlife Refuge. The facility is home to fishes and invertebrates that inhabit the mudflats and marshes of the San Diego Bay. Visitors can use a binocular microscope to view animals macroscopically, use a Wentscope for views of microscopic organisms found in the "Sweetwater Soup," and interact with computerized videos exploring how tides affect the bay in the "Moons, Tides, and the San Diego Bay" exhibit. At other exhibits, visitors can pet sharks and rays, see burrowing owls and migratory birds, and enjoy the xerophytic gardens.

On Wednesdays, Saturdays, and Sundays at 2 p.m., there are behind-the-scenes tours of the center. Free birdwatching walks are offered on the second Wednesdays and first and third Saturdays; wildlife encounters are every second Saturday; and nature walks are on the fourth Saturday of every month.

The center is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday. Visitors meet a free shuttle bus at the Bayfront/E Street Trolley Station or at the center's parking lot at the foot of E Street and Bay Boulevard, in Chula Vista. Admission to the center is $3.50 for adults, $2.50 seniors, $1 children six and over. Admission is free on the first Tuesday of every month. For more details, call 422-2473.

Command Museum of MCRD, artifacts from the beginning of the Marine Corps to the present are displayed, with special rooms dedicated to ribbons and medals and to the Boxer Rebellion. Hours are Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and weekends from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Free. The museum is located in Building 26, just inside Gate 4, off Pacific Highway. 524-6038.

Coronado Beach Historical Museum, housed in a restored 1898 house, traces the history of Coronado, mostly through photographs. The exhibit shows the construction and early days of the Hotel del Coronado. Tent City, the first school and restaurant, and the ferryboats. One room is devoted to the story of early aviation at North Island. Find the museum at 1126 Loma Avenue, in Coronado. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Call 435-7242 for further information. Admission is free.

George White and Anne Gunn Marston House, noted San Diego architects William Hebbard and Irving Gill designed this fine example of turn-of-the-century architectural style and design, with an emphasis on the Jacobsavare arts and the Arts and Crafts movement. Currently on exhibit are American Arts and Crafts furniture and decorative arts made by the Rowcroft Shops of East Aurora, New York. The museum is located at 3525 Seventh Avenue, Hillcrest; hours are Friday through Sunday, noon to 4:30 p.m. Adults $3, children under 13 free. 238-3142.

Heritage of the American Museum is a museum featuring art and artifacts from South and North America, concentrating on the utilitarian and decorative artistry of crafts workers from ancient cultures. There are wings dedicated to natural history, archaeology, education, anthropology, and fine art.

Find the museum on the Cuyamaca College campus, 2957 Jamacha Road, Rancho San Diego. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday; 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday. Adults $3, seniors $2, students with ID $1, children 12 and under free. 670-5194.

House of Pacific Relations, the International Cottages in Balboa Park are open every Sunday from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m., presenting the history and traditions of 30 ethnic groups. Children Around the World videos are shown on the fourth Tuesday of every month, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m., in the Hall of Nations, and select cottages are open. Admission is free. For further details, call 582-1316.

Junipero Serra Museum, "Changing Landscapes, Changing Lives: Native Peoples and New Arrivals in San Diego, 1769-1846" is the name of the current exhibit, running through December. Through a variety of images, maps, and artifacts, the exhibit illustrate how local natives and San Diego's first Spanish settlers viewed the land in very different ways. Items on display include richly embroidered vestments worn by a Spanish missionary, intricate basketry from a Kumeyaay tribe, a dugout canoe exemplifying a mix of European and native characteristics, and a reassembled section of the Mission San Diego de Alcalá aqueduct.

The museum is located at 2727 Presidio Drive, Presidio Park, on the original site of the San Diego mission. Permanent exhibits concentrate on the pre-American era of San Diego's history and include one of the finest collections of Spanish Renaissance furniture in the West. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Sunday from noon to 4:30 p.m. Adults $3, children under 13 are free. 297-3258.

Museum of San Diego History has reopened after a six-month construction project improving its facilities. "Irving J. Gill, Architect" features the work of this San Diego architect best known for his Craftsman-style and Prairie designs. "Art Fashion: Important Fashion Illustrations of the 20th Century" is an exhibition of more than 100 fashion illustrations from the early 1900s to the present. The show traces the fashion industry through the artistry of fashion illustrations.

The reopening also sees the reinstallation of two past exhibits, including "Visions of Paradise: The Selling of San Diego," chronicling the growth of San Diego from a population of just 650 (in 1650) to the sixth-largest city in the nation and the boosterism that encouraged much growth. "War Comes to San Diego" focuses on the impact World War II had on the city and its transformation into a wartime metropolis. The exhibit contains new artifacts and previously "classified" materials never displayed before.

The museum, located in the Casa de Balboa building in Balboa Park, is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Admission is $3 per person. 232-6203.

Ramona Pioneer Historical Society and Guy B. Woodward Museum is a complex of historical buildings, including the Verlaque House (the only Western adobe home of French provincial design still in existence), wagons, antique exhibits, and artifacts. There is a cowboy bunk house, a ranch blacksmith shop and tack room. The Casey Tibbs Memorial Exhibit is dedicated to Tibbs, a local resident who was a world champion rodeo rider. Women's clothing and accessories from 1700 to 1800 are also on display. The Bancroft Memorial Rose Garden is on the grounds. Rare documents, historical exhibits, books, photographs, and a research library are also part of the complex.

Find it all at 645 Main Street, in Ramona. Hours are 1 to 4 p.m. Friday through Sunday. Admission is $3 for people 12 and over. For more information, call 789-7644.

Reuben H. Fleet Science Center, its new hands-on exhibits are featured in "Harvesting the Sun," taking a look at the sun as an energy source vital for plant and animal life. The topics covered range from photosynthesis to food chains, emphasizing the sun's fundamental importance to all life processes. See this exhibit through Sunday, May 8.

The center's permanent exhibitions present a variety of hands-on exhibits illustrating scientific principles. The Science Center opens daily at 9:30 a.m.; closing time is 8 p.m. on Sundays, 6 p.m. on Monday and Tuesday, 9:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, and 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Adults $2.50, children 5-15 $1.25. The museum is located in Balboa Park. For other information, call 238-1233.

San Diego Aerospace Museum, the museum offers exhibits of approximately 85 aircraft, 1400 scale models, 10,000 aviation-related items, and memorabilia from the Montgolfier hot-air-balloon era to the space age, and includes an International Aerospace Hall of Fame. The Spad, a World War I fighter, has returned to the museum. The aircraft just underwent extensive restoration and was found to be approximately 98 percent original, a discovery that makes the Spad the most rare aircraft in the museum's collection. It will remain on permanent display. The museum's latest acquisition (pedestal-mounted in front of the museum) is the Blackbird, a forerunner of the airplane that held the world's altitude and speed records for more than 28 years.

The museum is located in the Ford Building in Balboa Park's Palisades area. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. Adults $4, 6-17 $1. For more information, call 234-8291.

The San Diego Automotive Museum more than 60 automobiles and motorcycles from homeless carriages to future prototypes are included in the museum's permanent collection. Located in Balboa Park near the Starlight Bowl, the museum is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. General admission $4; seniors $3; children 6 to 17, $2; under 6 free. 231-2886.

San Diego Hall of Champions Sports Museum, has permanent exhibits dedicated to Thoroughbred racing, including trophies from some of the world's most famous horseraces, a pair of Bill Shoemaker's boots, and other artifacts as well as artifacts from a wide variety of other sports. The museum is located at 1649 El Prado, Balboa Park; hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. Adults $3, under 12 $1. 234-2544.

San Diego Maritime Museum, the museum features permanent exhibits documenting the history of San Diego's waterfront and the building of the West Coast by sea, including exhibits concerning the old San Diego-Coronado ferryboats, the tuna fishing industry, and the military. The museum fleet consists of the 1863 bark Star of India, the 1898 San Francisco ferryboat Berkeley, and the 1904 Scottish-steam yacht Medea. There are also nautical exhibits, ship carpenters, model building, ships in bottles, woodcarvers, and a complete research library.

Master woodcarver Walter Jacobsen is creating a new figurehead for the Medea from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. most days. The figurehead is being carved from Spanish cedar in the style of the original, to replace the historically inaccurate figurehead the yacht has sported since the early '70s.

Pine Valley Creek

The croak of a soaring raven cracks the stillness as we saunter down the green-fringed path. A groggy dragonfly flits through a beam of morning sunlight. Cool air, slinking down the night-chilled slopes, caresses our faces and sets aflutter the papery sycamore leaves overhead. Approaching the pools and cascades of Pine Valley Creek, we smell the moist exudations of willow and Thuja-fat (a willow look-alike). We cup the clear, cold water in our palms and dash it across our heads.

If you want this kind of escape from the city — and you want it relatively quickly — the Pine Creek Wilderness near Alpine is one great place to find it. The 13,000-acre wilderness area, part of Cleveland National Forest, was created by an act of Congress in 1984 and now includes about 25 miles of hiking trails within its borders.

The recent spate of winter storms, followed by spring sunshine, has transformed the place into a foothill garden, with water dancing down the larger ravines and careening off boulders in Pine Valley Creek — the large drainage bisecting the wilderness area. The tough chaparral vegetation coating the slopes looks feathery soft, the green tint of the emerging annual grasses has turned positively lurid, and the formerly drought-stressed live oaks, sycamores, and cottonwoods are again sending out new leaves and branches.

The easiest and most impressive route into the heart of the Pine Creek Wilderness begins off Lyons Valley Road, 1.5 miles south of Japatul Road [Thomas Guide: page 429, grid K7]. From the trailhead parking lot, walk north along a gated dirt road for about 300 yards. You then veer right, through a pipe gate, and start descending on the steep Espinosa Trail. After a fast, 400-foot elevation loss, the path bends right (east) to follow oak- and sycamore-lined Horsethief Canyon. True to its name, this corral-like canyon was used in the late 1800s by horse thieves to stash stolen horses in preparation for their passage across the international border. After another mile and not much more descent, you reach the sandy bank of Pine Valley Creek, which now brims with runoff from the creek's headwaters in the Laguna Mountains. The large pool just ahead is swimmable but very chilly right now.

Upstream from the pool, you can make your way alongside or over a jumble of car-sized boulders and past several small cascades. Tangled willows and mule-fat impede your progress. Watch your step on slippery slabs of rock, and be aware of poison oak thickets, possible rattlesnakes, and fast water if your visit comes immediately on the heels of a big storm. You can continue in this manner — straight up the canyon bottom — for three picturesque miles or more.

Day-hiking the Pine Creek Wilderness requires no permit or reservations, though you must obtain a wilderness permit for overnight backpacking. Mountain biking is not allowed. Call Cleveland National Forest, 445-6235 or 673-6180, weekdays for more information.

LOCAL EVENTS

The museum is located along the Embarcadero at the corner of North Harbor Drive and Ash Street, downtown. Hours: are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily. Adults $5, 6-12 $1.25. 234-9153.

San Diego Model Railroad Museum, four large-scale models of railroads of the Southwest, past and present, and other toy train layouts are on view, as well as a working semaphore at the entrance that cycles every five minutes. The N-scale Carrizo Gorge exhibit is almost complete and can be viewed. An exhibit called "Railroad Women" includes photos and documents dating back to 1855.

The museum, located at 1649 El Prado, Balboa Park, is open 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, and Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Adults $2, children 15 and under free. 696-0199.

San Diego Museum of Man, over 70 rare human skulls from Peru illustrate the history, motives, and techniques of cranial surgery more than 1000 years ago in "With Holes in Their Heads: Ancient Peruvian Skull Surgery." Trephination, the practice of opening the skull for therapeutic or ritual purposes, has been practiced in many parts of the world. The ancient Peruvians used obsidian blades, abrasive stone drills, and the tumi, a bronze knife with a curved blade; some patients did not survive, but many skulls show partial or complete healing. Visitors will be able to observe the skulls and try to determine why cranial surgery was performed. See this exhibit through December.

"Skeletons from Our Closet" is a show opening on Saturday, April 9, at the museum, with artifacts from around the world revealing information about ourselves and the past. Visitors will see evidence of genetic, environmental, and cultural influences on skeletal development and remains through the displays of actual bones, skeletons, and mummies; photographs and illustrations; and "hands-on" learning activities. See this exhibit through February 1995.

"Fact, Fun, and Fantasy: Navajo Pictorial Weaving from the Weber Collection" includes more than 80 rugs dating from the 1880s through the 1950s. Pictorials feature scenes of life on the reservation, replicas of advertising slogans, early vehicles and airplanes, birds and animals (both fanciful and accurate), and likenesses of the Navajo deities. They began to appear after traders brought bright commercial dyes to the reservation. See this show through Monday, May 30.

"Artists Meet Across the Ages" is an exhibition of Elanie A. Moore's field studies, photographs, drawings, watercolors, and paintings based on the ancient legacy of monumental art believed to have been left by ancestors of the Cochimi Indians. Moore is an artist, educator, and rock art researcher who has spent the last 11 years traveling to record and illustrate the cave murals in the Sierra de San Francisco, Baja California Sur, Mexico. See this exhibit through May 1.

"Life and Death on the Nile: Sun Gods and Mummies in Ancient Egypt" is an ongoing exhibit that includes coffin and mummy masks, sacred amulets, falcon shrines, mummified falcons, and a human mummy of the Ptolemaic period, along with art and utensils of daily life in the Amarna Period, from 1368 to 1351 B.C.

The museum is located in Balboa Park. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. Adults $4, teens 13-18 $2, children 6-12 $1; free to all on the third Tuesday of each month. 239-2001.

San Diego Natural History Museum, explore "Antarctica," the southernmost continent on the planet and the current exhibit at the museum. The kingdom of ice is brought to life with maps, models, microscopes, videos, soundtracks, dioramas, and displays. The complex interdependence between plants and animals is demonstrated in displays, and there is a simulated laboratory at McMurdo Sound to explore. Also on display are 26 painting with Antarctica as subject by David Rosenthal. Enjoy this exhibit through Sunday, April 10.

The museum's permanent exhibits include the Scripps Hall of Mineralogy, the Hall of Ocean and Shore Ecology, and the Hall of Desert Ecology. The museum, located in Balboa Park, is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; open Thursday until 7:30 p.m., with half-price admission from 4:30 to 7:30 p.m. Regular admission is adults $6, seniors $5, children 6 to 17 $2, under 6 free. 232-3821.

San Diego Railroad Museum maintains an extensive collection of restored trains in several locations. At the Campo Depot, the museum offers vintage train trips on Saturdays and Sundays (and on many major holidays, excluding Thanksgiving and Christmas), departing at 12:01 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. for a one-and-a-half-hour trip to Miller Creek, in San Diego's back country. At the Campo location, there are more than 60 pieces of "rolling stock," a wide variety of cars, locomotives, and other train-related artifacts.

Tickets for the train excursion are $10 for adults, $3 for children 6 to 12, children 5 and under free. The Campo Depot is about a one-hour drive from San Diego (roughly 50 miles east). Find the depot at Highway 94 and Forest Gate Road. Questions? Call 478-9937.

The La Mesa Depot, 4695 Nebo Drive, La Mesa, is an authentic Victorian depot restored by volunteers. This wooden structure is the community's oldest building and served as passenger depot for the San Diego-Arizona Railroad from 1894 to 1927. Exhibits include photos and history of the Arizona Railroad, antiques, and memorabilia of the Southern Pacific line, alongside a 1920s locomotive and caboose, and a 1940s diesel engine. The depot is open 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. For more information on either location, call the main office at 595-3030.

San Dieguito Heritage Museum, the museum celebrates the heritage of old and new Encinitas, Cardiff, Olivenhain, Leucadia, Rancho Santa Fe, Solana Beach, and Del Mar. Find the museum at West Village Center, at the corner of Manchester Avenue and Encinitas Boulevard in Encinitas. Hours are Wednesday through Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. Call 632-9711 for admission and other information.

San Pasqual Battlefield State Historic Park commemorates the clash (on December 6, 1846) during the Mexican War between the U.S. Dragoons, bolstered by sailors and volunteers from San Diego, and California militia. A narrated slide show screens throughout the day, telling the story of the war in Mexico and California. A self-guided tour recounts the events of the battle and profiles the leaders of the forces and also describes the lives of the Indians indigenous to the valley. The museum is found at 15808 San Pasqual Valley Road, Escondido. Admission is free. Hours are Friday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 238-3380 for additional details.

Stephen Birch Aquarium-Museum, an aquarium and museum under one roof, is an educational component of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at UCSD. The facility has 33 tanks containing marine life of the Pacific Northwest, the California coastline, Mexico's Sea of Cortez, and the South Pacific. One highlight is the La Jolla Kelp Tank, a two-story-high tank with giant kelp plants and nearly 30 species of local marine life.

The aquarium is located at 2300 Expedition Way (off North Torrey Pines Road, south of La Jolla Shores Drive), La Jolla. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Regular admission is $6.50 for adults, $5.50 seniors, military and 13- to 17-year-olds $4.50, $3.50 for children 4 to 12. For more information, call 534-FISH.

Villa Montezuma, built in 1887 for internationally celebrated author and musician Jesse Shepard, serves as both a historical house museum and cultural center. Hours are Saturday and Sunday, noons to 4:30 p.m.; find the house at 1925 I. Street, downtown. Admission is $3 general admission, children 12 and under free. Call 239-2211 for more information.

Wells Fargo Bank History Museum, the museum features a working agents' office staffed by guides in period costumes and contains a working telegraph for visitors to send and receive messages. There's an audio-visual theater presenting short films on California and Wells Fargo history; a gold display, part of the collection assembled by Wells Fargo agent Samuel Dorsey at the end of the last century; an exhibit of Concord Coach #251, a restored stagecoach built in 1867; and the Davies watch. The museum is located in the reconstructed Colorado House, at 2733 San Diego Avenue, in Old Town San Diego State Historic Park. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Admission is free.

The end-of-empire psychosexual exhibitionism that is currently life in the city of angels is not limited to genital piercers and transsexual performance artists. A lone nut who calls himself "Pieface Mike" circulates business cards advertising his availability for "Events, Concerts, Lectures, Clubs, Business Parties & Bachelorette Parties," for which he presents his face to women as a target for a banana cream pie or a paper doily dolloped with shaving cream.

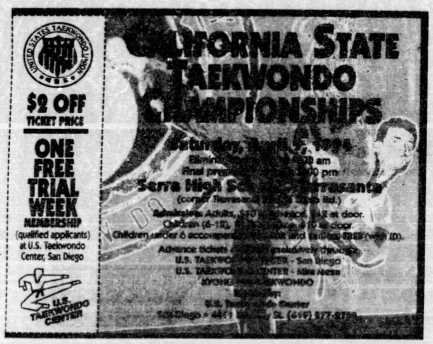

Like a shoe salesman who is also a foot fetishist, Pieface Mike has found a way to service his sexual obsession and make money besides. As revealed in Pieface Mike's four-page "Pie-ography," a typical job begins by spreading newspapers on the floor, setting up a camera and cassette recorder — to capture women's "astonished laughter of release after they pie" him."

The "Pie-ography" continues: "Standing calmly — sometimes impassive, sometimes eager — Mike instructs his new pie partner to step close and place/smash (not throw) the pie in his face. She usually asks if he's ready, and he says, 'yes.' He urges her to freely say something provocative, silly, dramatic or sexy.

"Receiving the pie, Pieface Mike beams joyfully — there are bright eyes and shouts all around. Sometimes the woman sloughs the pie on his face, rubs the filling around, or even tastes it. He quickly puts his glasses back on to soak up her reactions."

The self-styled "piesexual" likens the explosion of pie matter as a cathartic experience for both the pier and the paid. "If she was nervous about smooshing the pie, seeing the result can be an ecstatic release." Perhaps. But remember: Pieface Mike gets to keep his photographs and cassette tapes, where he can relive his "ecstatic release" in the privacy of his own home.

The Real Gérard Depardieu Is a Small, Thin Catalan Musician with a Dark Beard

Savall imparts to the viola da gamba*'s buzz a burnished, almost erotic richness.*

Jordi Savall (left), and Hesperion XX

Illustration by John Hershman

REVIEW
JONATHAN SAVILLE

It was of course the San Diego Early Music Society that brought us Hesperion XX and its renowned director, gamba-player Jordi Savall. But while SDEMS is our foremost local advocate for medieval, Renaissance, and Baroque music, which many ordinary concertgoers judge to be arcane and marginal, in this case the "early-music" artist had acquired a considerably broader following.

The splendidly romantic French film, Tous les matins du monde, had established the viola da gamba in the public imagination in a way mere concerts could never have done, and had given unprecedented publicity to the gamba's greatest modern exponent. Gérard Depardieu may have expertly mimicked the motions of 17th-century composer Marin Marais at his six-stringed cello-like instrument, but the profound, impassioned, intensely affecting sounds, as everyone knew, were being produced by Jordi Savall. As a consequence (and amazingly), the CD of the music from the film's soundtrack became a classical best-seller (more than half a million copies worldwide).

While the viola da gamba may have hit the big time, Savall himself remains a modest man whose exquisite musicianship is directed not at wowing the public but at giving a truthful realization to the music of the gamba's great period. What is remarkable about that realization (as one could hear in Tous les matins, in Savall's numerous recordings, and in the recent concert at St. James by-the-Sea) is that it not only includes a breathtaking technical mastery of this difficult instrument, but that it also brings across the deep feeling and expressive subtlety the gamba is capable of. Hearing Savall play Marais (as he did in three extended pieces on the SDEMS program), one is not aware of anything archaic in the instrument or its music, nor does one sense that this repertoire belongs to a narrow courtly culture cut off from larger human concerns. Instead, what is striking is the power and immediacy of the musical expression, the way the stirringly sensual virtuoso effects (for Savall imparts to the gamba's buzz a burnished, almost erotic richness) are put in the service of heroic and tragic drama of the most exalted kind. Savall's Marin Marais is the musical equivalent of the plays of Corneille or Racine, acted by the most inspired players of the Comédie Française.

I don't want to give the impression that this was a solo recital. Far from it. The other members of the Hesperion XX troupe, Baroque guitarist and theorbo-player Rolf Lislevand and soprano Montserrat Figueras, were equal — and equally impressive — partners in the concert. Lislevand, playing instruments quite as challenging as the gamba (and of much less sensual potential), was in his way even more sensational than Savall. Few concertgoers, even in this era of the revival of Baroque instruments, can ever have heard the theorbo (a type of archlute) played with such brilliance and fire, with such impetuous rhythmic drive, with such expressive phrasing, or with such a varied tonal palette.

As for Figueras, one's judgment of her singing is colored by one's predilection for (or tolerance of) the more or less vibrato-less vocal production favored by most current singers of early music. My objection to this way of producing the voice is not so much that the sounds are disagreeably piercing and hooty (a matter of personal taste, I am willing to admit), but that the range of vocal timbres is severely narrowed, making for considerable monotony (or — more precisely — monochromaticism). Otherwise, Figueras proved to be an exemplary interpreter of the Italian and Spanish vocal music on the program, with so much vigor, suavity, and delicacy in her singing that after a while the lack of tonal variety seemed less important than the almost magical expressiveness and shapeliness of the soprano's phrases.

Figueras was principally responsible for the deeply moving performances of the most revelatory items on the program, two lengthy canzoni by Tarquinio Merula, a 17th-century composer I had hitherto never heard of. Both, "Hor ch'è tempo di dormire" (a heart-rending lullaby sung by the Virgin Mary over the infant Jesus) and "Su la cetra amorosa" (a vivid Petrarchan meditation on the wretchedness and joy of romantic love), with their graceful, feelingful, lyrical melodies and the relentless ostinato of their accompaniments, astonishingly turned out to be masterpieces of Baroque vocal music, not only in their complex yet forceful formal aspects, but also in their gripping interpretations of the poetic texts.

While I recognize the signal contribution made by the performers to the stunning effect produced by these pieces, the extraordinary quality of the compositions themselves provided the foundation for Hesperion XX's compelling performances of Merula's music. Can the virtually unknown Tarquinio Merula actually be one of the great vocal composers of the 17th Century, along with Monteverdi, Schütz, Purcell, and Lully? The answer is no doubt decisively given by the Figueras-Savall recording devoted to Merula's works, a CD I am now energetically trying to acquire. Even better would be a return of Hesperion XX to San Diego with a program devoted substantially to this dazzling Baroque composer — or perhaps a gorgeous movie about his life, with Figueras, Savall, and Lislevand providing the soundtrack. ■

CLASSICAL LISTINGS

Contributions to the Reader's Guide to Classical Music must be received by mail no later than the Friday preceding the Thursday issue for publication. Events listed may run from Thursday at 8 p.m. to the following Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Do not phone. The editor reserves the right to edit all material. Send complete information, including a description of the event, the date and time it is to be held, and, the precise address where it is to be held (including neighborhood), a contact phone number, and a phone number for public information to Reader Classical Music, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego CA 92186-5803.

Chamber Music by composers Mozart, Rodrigo, Soleri, and Dvořák can be enjoyed tonight, Thursday, April 7, at 7:30 p.m., when Allegro performs in the Turrentine Room at the Escondido Public Library. Find the library at 239 South Kalmia Street, in Escondido. The concert is free. Call 738-4329 for more details.

An Alumni Recital is planned by guitarist Eric Standefer in SDSU's Smith Recital Hall on Friday, April 8, at noon. Standefer, a 1991 master in music/guitar at SDSU, will present a program with pieces by Luis Milan, Luiz de Narvaez, Fernando Sor, and Heitor Villa-Lobos, among others. The concert is free. Call 594-6031 for further information.

"Classic Beauties of Brazil" are promised when guitarist Eric Foster and vocalist Ellen Johnson present a concert at 8 p.m. on Friday, April 8, in USD's Shiley Theater. The program includes classical music by Villa-Lobos, Ovalle, Barroso, and popular music by Jobim, Powell, and Buarque. General admission is $6, students $5. Call 260-2280 for more details. USD is found at 5998 Alcalá Park, in the Linda Vista area.

A 13th- and 14th-Century Ladymass — music to honor the Virgin Mary — adorned with motets and poetry in the Middle English of Chaucer's time is on the program when Ars*nova*musa performs for the San Diego Early Music Society on Friday, April 8, at 8 p.m. The group was established in 1986 and specializes in the discovery and performance of medieval music. Tickets are $13 general admission, $13 seniors and members, and may be purchased in advance by calling 291-8246. Hear the music at St. James by the-Sea, 743 Prospect Street, in La Jolla.

And a Partridge in a Pear Tree, a workshop version of the late John Cage's 1991 composition Europeras 3 and 4 is being presented by the UCSD music department on Friday, April 8, at 8 p.m. The work is composed for six singers of different voice types singing three arias of their choice; two pianists playing 1- to 16-bar snippets from Liszt opera transcriptions; and six turntable operators playing segments from old 78 recordings of opera. All of the elements are timed to the clock and positioned on the stage by random procedures using the I Ching, and the entire performance will last one hour. Interested? Admission is free, and the whole shebang can be heard in Erickson Hall (B-210) in Mandeville Center on the UCSD campus. Need more details? Dial 534-5404.

Parking permits are required on the UCSD campus, cost $3 in the evenings, and may be purchased at the Gilman Drive and Northview Drive information pavilions at the north and south entrances to the campus.

A Truly Romantic Tale, La Sonnambula, the 1831 opera by Vincenzo Bellini, is the next production by the San Diego Opera. Unusually for opera, there is no murder, tragedy, or misery — only misunderstandings, gossip, and ghostly sightings. The opera premieres on Saturday, April 9, at 7 p.m., and continues on Tuesday, April 12, at 7 p.m. (with more performances on April 15, 17, and 20). Enjoy this masterpiece in the bel canto style sung in Italian with English supertitles.

Tickets range from $15 to $85. Catch the intrigue in the Civic Theatre, at 202 C St.-et, downtown. Call 232-7636 for more information; for advance tickets, call 236-6510 or 238-TIXS.

Opera Overtures, Suites, and Excerpts are promised during a program entitled "Music of the Stage" planned by the Palomar Community Orchestra on April 9 and 10 in the Howard Brubeck Theatre on the Palomar College campus, at 1140 West Mission Road, in San Marcos. The concert features overtures to Mozart's Marriage of Figaro and Rossini's William Tell. Also on the program are both suites from Bizet's Carmen, the ballet music from The Red Poppy by Gliere, and excerpts from Gershwin's Porgy and Bess.

Performances are planned at 8 p.m. on Saturday, and at 2 p.m. on Sunday. One hour prior to curtain time, conductor Robert Gilson will present a concert preview, an informative talk on the music to come. Tickets are $5 and $9; call 744-0136 or 744-1150 x2435 for information and advance tickets.

Sip Coffee or Tea and enjoy an afternoon of small ensembles, chamber music, and soloists performing a variety of musical styles from different eras in room 2305 at MiraCosta College on Sunday, April 10, beginning at 2 p.m. Find the college at One Barnard Drive, in Oceanside; call 757-2121 for more details. Admission is free.

Civic Organist Robert Plimpton performs music by Bach, Langlais, Locklair, Mozart, Dvořák, and others at the Spreckels Organ Pavilion in Balboa Park on Sunday, April 10, at 2 p.m. The concert is free. Call 226-0819 for more information.

The Brass Quartet and organists Jana Shields and Helena Chan plan a concert on Sunday, April 10, at 4 p.m., at Christ Lutheran Church. Find the church at 4761 Cass Street, in Pacific Beach; 483-2300. Free.

Johann Sebastian Bach wrote St. John's Passion, based on the gospel of Saint John, in 1723 for Good Friday. On Sunday, April 10, at 4 p.m., the San Diego Civic Chorale will present the piece with full orchestra at Christ United Presbyterian Church. The church is located at 3025 Fir Street (at 30th), in San Diego. Admission is free, although a free will offering will be accepted. 685-7701.

A Senior Recital by Kara Akorn on flute may be heard in SDSU's Smith Recital Hall on Sunday, April 10, at 7 p.m. Admission is free. Need more details? Dial 594-6031.

For Nearly 40 Years the Beaux Arts Trio has presented piano trio literature. On Sunday, April 10, at 8 p.m., the ensemble will perform Beethoven's Piano Trio in G Major No. 2; Arensky's Piano Trio in D Minor; and Mendelssohn's Piano Trio No. 2 in C Minor in UCSD's Mandeville Auditorium. Tickets are $18 general; $10 students. Call 534-4559 for information and advance tickets.

Parking permits are required on the UCSD campus, cost $3 in the evenings, and may be purchased at the Gilman Drive and Northview Drive information pavilions at the north and south entrances to the campus.

Take a Break on Monday for the mini-concert planned on April 11 at noon, at the Athenaeum Music and Arts Library 1008 Wall Street, in La Jolla. The series continues with a performance by the Harp Flute Duo, comprising Donna Vaughn and Alice Silverberg, playing music by A. Schaposhnikov and Jean Francaix. Call 454-5872 for more information. This concert is free.

Soprano Ellen Lawson presents a recital on Monday, April 11, at 7 p.m., in Dayton Smith Auditorium, at the department of music at SDSU. Listeners will hear music by Arnold Cook, George Gershwin, Jacques Ibguerney, David Ward-Steinman, and Kurt Weill. Lawson will be accompanied by violinists Mary Kothman and Stephen Bell; Francesca Savage on viola; Renata Bratt on cello; Stephen Rumbold on French horn, and pianist Don LeMaster. The recital is free. Call 491-2473 for more information.

"Death and the Maiden," for the Quartet in D Minor by Schubert, and Beethoven's Quartet in C-sharp Minor will be performed by the Cleveland Quartet when the La Jolla Chamber Music Society's Sherwood Auditorium Series continues on Tuesday, April 12, at 8 p.m. The concert may be heard in Sherwood Auditorium at the Museum of Contemporary Art, San Diego, 700 Prospect Street, in La Jolla. Admission is $27.50 per person. Call 459-3728 for additional information and advance tickets.

A Faculty Recital by pianist David Ward-Steinman and Ron George on percussion is planned in SDSU's Smith Recital Hall on Wednesday, April 13, at noon. Admission is free. Call 594-6031 for further information.

Soprano Jessye Norman performs in San Diego (for the first time in 17 years), with lieder by Strauss, Weil, and Ravel, and arias by Barber and Haydn on the program, on Wednesday, April 13, at 7:30 p.m. Norman will be accompanied by Phillip Moll. Hear the concert at the Civic Theatre, 202 C Street, downtown. Tickets range from $25 to $75. Call 459-3728 for information and advance tickets.

Baritone Eric Wallace presents a senior recital and will be accompanied by Chris Allen on piano and Boris Rafto on flute, in SDSU's Smith Recital Hall on Thursday, April 14, at 7 p.m. Free. For more information, call 594-6031.

"From Holocaust to Hope" is the theme for a program planned at the East County Jewish Community Center next Thursday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. Songs and readings will be presented by Israeli soprano Rava Gonen, tenor Howard Fried, narrator Ethel L. Goodman, and pianist Stewart Simon. Find the ECJCC at 4079 54th Street, in East San Diego. Tickets are $8 general, $6 JCC members, with a $1 discount for seniors and students; for further information, call 583-3300. This concert is being given in conjunction with Yom Hashoah, or the Days of Remembrance.

Alchemy: Turning Worthless Dross into Gold

So little is there, and what is there is so pretentious in its minimalism, and the whole thing is such an insult to the viewer's intelligence...

REVIEW
JONATHAN SAVILLE

As I indicated last week, the quality of the floral arrangements in the San Diego Museum of Art's Art Alive 1994 was so high that any selection I might make among them would necessarily exclude many beautiful and inventive works by accomplished designer-artists. Still, a critic does have to select and exclude — and the principle I've chosen for this second article on the show has to do more with the coherence of my discussion than with any inherent superiority of the individual floral arrangements. There were many designs in Art Alive just as splendid as these particular examples; what the following have in common is that they were all constructed to accompany works in the museum's Frederick R. Weisman gallery of contemporary California art.

Through the years, I have done my best to ignore the Weisman collection, for — as the great sage Thumper once remarked — "If you can't say somethin' good, don't say nothin' at all." But the conjunction, of the Weisman pieces with the floral designs makes it possible to say at least something good about the sights in that gallery, a rare opportunity to be taken advantage of.

The Weisman Collection consists exclusively of weak examples of the silliest contemporary styles (Deborah Butterfield's delightful aluminum horse, although exhibited in the same space, is not part of the Weisman gift). The shallowness, emptiness, lack of imagination, and feebleness of design of these tepid avant-garde derivatives was acutely emphasized by the floral arrangements that, for four days, accompanied them. In virtually every case, the floral design was vastly superior to the original work — in wit, in formal inventiveness, in expressive power, and in the complex patterning of lines, masses, colors, and textures. Enhanced by the floral additions, the Weisman pieces have never looked better; but compared with the artistry of the floral designers, they have never looked worse.

One of the stupidest (and most characteristic) paintings in the collection is Ed Moses's so-called Cubist Painting #1 (titles with series numbers are de rigueur among such works, with their pretentious suggestion that the artist is engaged in a profound and systematic exploration of a richly productive theme). This large acrylic painting on canvas is all bright red, with a faint diagonal crisscross pattern like a textile. It has no events, no objects, no ideas, no structure, nothing but a color and a texture. In any less besotted age, it would be recognized as the inchoate underpainting of a picture, before the artist has gotten around to the real material. It of course has nothing at all to do with Cubism, which it resembles as closely as it does Titian.

Designer Katherine Wilson implicitly acknowledged that the Moses painting is mere background, and she supplied what it lacks: life, beauty, idea, form, emotion. On a grouping of black rectangular boxes (themselves constituting an energetic abstract sculpture of an architectural kind), Wilson poised a grand, dramatic curve of black wooden bough, sweeping upwards and outwards, and then arching back toward the painting. Beneath the suspended initiation of the arc below, and along its length upwards, she assembled huge, white Casablanca lilies, mixed with wispy green fern. About half-way up, the lilies gave way to the lovely, simple textures of the ferns alone, which seemed to enclose the stark curving black bough in a whisper of dark green delicacy.

The arrangement was sheer music, sturdy architecture, and the spirit of life and Spring — all this together, in a single, inspired creation, placed just right (at the lower right corner) to make the red rectangle worth something, as impersonal contrast to Wilson's authentic artistry. But the painting's worth remained minimal (everything is minimal about minimalist art, including talent and value).

Joe Goode, Ocean Blue #22 (arrangement by Sumiko Lahey)

for any large red rectangle would have produced the identical effect: Wilson could easily have provided her own. Furthermore, the contribution any large red rectangle would have made to the composition was of a very minor sort. Wilson's floral design would have been visually and emotionally powerful standing completely on its own — something that could have been said of many of these arrangements yoked to their artistic inferiors in the Weisman galleries.

There was a similar effect in the combination of Joe Goode's Ocean Blue #22 (a huge rectangle of cloudy, variegated, textured blue, like any square inch of a Turner seascape immensely enlarged) and Sumiko Lahey's big, bold Heliconia, with its wide-spreading lady palm and rising sword-like leaves giving a framework to an explosion of pink-and-white-speckled stargazer lilies, white anthurium, pink ginger, purple liatris, and red bougainvillaea. Direct, authoritative, fully assured, Lahey's composition was remarkably powerful, its verticals and horizontals dramatically balanced, its color harmonies beautifully unified, its textures vividly contrasted while at the same time all emphasizing sharp points. Once again, the monochrome, featureless painting provided a pleasing background but nothing else, and once again the flower arrangement could have done perfectly well without it.

Next, in this combined survey of art and silliness, we might visit Robert Irwin's sculptural installation #2221 Untitled, a large white convex acrylic circle (with a silvery band across its equator), suspended out from a white wall, on which its several faint circular shadows intersect. So little is there, and what is there is so pretentious in its minimalism, and the whole thing is such an insult to the viewer's intelligence (like all Irwin's work)! But beneath this dull, cold exercise in simple-minded visual effects, Nirmala Moorthy put together at different levels an elaborate display of smooth white vessels of varying shapes (a bowl, a vase, a cylindrical cache-pot, a sphere, a cup), with pink and red anthurium, white tiger lilies, little white poms, and the light green forms of modest Lennox protea, with their orange-colored centers. On the underlying platform, in and around a white tray and beneath the white-enameled tubular frames supporting the vessels, Moorthy scattered pebbles of various colors, a few white poms, and a piece of ivory-colored driftwood.

It was a wonderful arrangement of objects, a magisterially composed three-dimensional "painting" in white and pastels, mobile in scope, spiritually pure and exalted, like an altar strewn with offerings to the Unknown God. While the connections between the Irwin work and Moorthy's installation did play a part in the total composition (for example: the whiteness, the motif of the circle, the horizontal stripe that was reflected in the low horizontal platform), the contribution of the Irwin piece was essentially trivial. It may have suggested certain ideas for Moorthy to elaborate upon, but the designer's "altar" could easily have stood on its own, casting its own shadows, and making its own statement — which was so much deeper and more meaningful than Irwin's high-tech slickness.

Robert Irwin, #2221 Untitled (arrangement by Nirmala Moorthy)

Martha Ally, White and White #3 (arrangement by Marcia P. Ganeles and Mark Bartechko)

In a different dumb contemporary style (and provoking a different sort of reaction from the floral designer) is Martha Alf's notorious White and White #3, a photographically realistic depiction of an outsize roll of white toilet paper, standing on a white, reflective, surface (bathroom porcelain?), before a white wall (plaster?). The painting is a supreme gesture of contempt by the artist toward meaningful art, art that reflects life, enlightens the spirit, comments on human experience, and evokes feeling. That so much technical skill should be used in service of a vision of nothing may suggest satirical overtones (directed against modern advertising, for example), but such suggestions are far too unspecific to give the picture any notable power as cultural satire. Instead, it is the artist herself who appears to have nothing to say about anything that counts, smugly delighting in her own vacuity.

Floral designers Marcia P. Ganeles and Mark Bartechko obviously were not able to transform this nonsense into a deeply moving masterpiece. But, wittily taking their cue from the bathroom atmosphere, they used as the centerpiece of their installation beneath the painting the bowl of a white porcelain sink (together with chrome fixtures), tilted at an angle, and filled with a profusion of white flowers: carnations, sweet alyssum, Queen Anne's lace, freesia, ceanothus, and lady liberty roses. Next to the sink, a white column supported a brown earthenware pot, out of which exuberant strands and clusters of a green succulent (donkey tail) draped down the sides. These two dramatic objects stood on a stage made of weathered brick, loosely arrayed in rows, between which lemon-scented geraniums, gracile bare branches, and the filigreed or another succulent (string of pearls) sprang out.

Forget the toilet paper — this flower-decorated installation was quite self-sufficient as a charming and evocative work of art. It marginally retained the slight satirical suggestiveness of the painting — but the forms of the objects had a much more interesting variety, the three colors (white, green, and brown) were combined with much greater visual attractiveness, and the lifeless, slick-modern-materialism implications of the detached sink (mirroring those of the toilet-paper roll) were modified and humanized by the earthenware, the brick, the leaves, the branches, and the flowers. What Ganeles and Bartechko gave us was a context of undemanding relaxation in a suburban patio, where a discarded item of bathroom furnishing has been casually naturalized and aestheticized. The artists' deft imagination enabled us to experience the friendly asymmetry, the accidental quality, the mixed fortuitousness of a group of human objects and invading nature in a real-world location, where the occasional falling-apart of civilized order can produce not depressing ugliness but a homely, friendly loveliness. The sensibility behind the Ganeles-Bartechko composition was radically different from that behind the Alf picture, as was the attitude toward human existence and value — and, in this as in every respect, the "supplementary" floral design had it all over the original painting.

It is surely ironic to realize that the Alf painting, and the paintings and sculptures around it, cost their collector a lot of money, while no one paid the floral designers in Art Alive anything (they did not even receive expenses for supplies). It might be claimed that this was only proper, since the floral arrangements lasted for a mere four days, while the Weisman paintings and sculptures will be in the SDMA for very many years. But it would be more sensible to regard both circumstances as an injustice and a misfortune. ■

Regular gallery hours are 9.30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Tuesday through Friday; 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday. The gallery is located at 2644 Adams Avenue in Normal Heights. 291-0402.

"Multiple Originals '94" is an exhibit of printmaking work by San Diego artists on view during the month of April at Fritsch Studios. The gallery is located at 662 North Coast Highway 101, Encinitas. Regular gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Call 753-1222 for more information.

African and Melanesian Art is on exhibit at the International Gallery. More than 75 tribal pieces are included in "Spirits of the Ancestors," which continues through Sunday, May 15. Also on display are contemporary works of the Baule tribe in the Ivory Coast. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Sunday 11:30 to 4:30 p.m. The International Gallery is located at 643 G Street, downtown San Diego; 233-8255.

Distinct Yet Complementary in Style and Content, "Objects and Subjects: Michael Bishop and Lynn Criswell" is the current show at the Athenaeum Music and Arts Library. Bishop creates large-scale public works and smaller, free-standing sculptural pieces in cast metal and mixed media; his pieces are triggered by specific ideas and "ready-made" components he scavenges. Criswell describes her assemblage paintings as "essentially self-portraits that have become a series of personal mythologies"; she employs three-dimensional techniques to her work. Enjoy this exhibit through Saturday, May 21.

Gallery hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., and until 8:30 p.m. on Wednesday. The Athenaeum is located at 1008 Wall Street, in La Jolla. To obtain additional information, call 454-5872.

"The Functional Metaphor" is an exhibition of furniture and photographs by David Fobes on view at the Sunspace Gallery through Saturday, May 21. The show explores furniture that "moves beyond the realm of simple utility", he identifies environmental concerns, biculturalism in the SD/Tijuana region, and personal loss as three basic themes in his work. The gallery is found at 835 G Street, downtown. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. 344-6444.

California Paintings created during the '20s, when the transition from California impressionist style of landscape painting to the "new" paintings of social realism took place, runs through Tuesday, May 31, at the K. Nathan Gallery. Find the gallery at 7723 Fay Avenue, La Jolla. Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. 459-3490.

Hand-Fired Ceramic Paintings by Nan C. Shu and watercolor paintings by Diane K. Smith are on view through May at Donnalee's Coffeehouse. Find the coffeehouse at 987 Lomas Santa Fe, in Solana Beach (in the Ross Center/Lomas Santa Fe Plaza). For information, call 481-8800.

Fauve and Impressionist Influences are evident in the local scenes in oil on canvas by Nobuyuki Tanaka at the Elaine Lewis Gallery. Regular gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and by appointment. Call 234-1231 for further information. Find the gallery at the Studio, 2400 Kettner Boulevard, downtown. View this show through May.

New Work by Patrick Crotty, David Fobes, Chris Jung, Derli Romero, Donald Strandberg, and Peter Stearns is on exhibition at Simayspace Design. The gallery is found at 837 G Street, downtown. Hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday and by appointment, with most of the work visible in the windows at Ninth Avenue and G Street (in the former Java Coffeehouse space). 544-0442.

Co-Op Members of the Many Hands Crafts Gallery have mixed-media paintings, pottery, jewelry, wood boxes, fused and stained glass, and hand-painted silk items on display. Find the gallery at 302 Island Avenue, suite 101, in the Gaslamp District; hours are daily 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. 557-8303.

An Ongoing Show, with works by Ken Goldman, Moshe Rosenthalis, Francoise Gilot, G. Bjorgvinsson, and Fitz Maurice, among others, is on display at the Riggs Galleries. Find the gallery at 7463 Girard Avenue, La Jolla. Hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. 451-3070.

ART MUSEUMS

Mingei International Museum of World Folk Art, "Images of India: Temple Cloths, Terra Cottas, and Ornamental Arts" from the museum's permanent collection are currently on view. The exhibition of approximately 200 pieces includes terra cottas made in India as well as ones made at the museum during an exhibition in 1986. The temple cloths, made to be used as settings for singers, musicians, dancers, and storytellers, are woodblock prints from Ahmedabad. The ornamental arts in the show include saris, jewelry, dowry chests, household shrines, and implements. The show seeks to reveal the diversity and integral relationship of art and daily life in India. This show continues through Sunday, July 3.

The Mingei is located in University Towne Centre, La Jolla. Museum hours are 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Docent tours are offered on Thursday at 1:30 p.m. Admission is $3 for adults, $1 for children. For more details, call 453-5300.

Museum of Contemporary Art, Downtown, Scottish-born artist David Mach has an exhibition of a room-sized installation at the museum; since January 15, Mach has been in residence at the museum creating the site-specific installation, transforming ten tons of surplus newspapers and other objects "into a peculiar consumer wasteland." Mach stacks, spirals, and spills printed matter into a sculptural mass imbedded with familiar objects. Also on display is an installation entitled There Wasn't Much Room in the Pool for Individual Expression (especially if you're a woman). See this show through today, Thursday, April 7.

Artist Larry Sultan's "Pictures from Home" utilizes his own family as a source for exploring the myths of the American culture. Sultan states, "I want to measure how a life was lived against how a life was dreamed." Sultan selected family snapshots and home movie stills and re-photographed them; he then combines them with family memorabilia, creating a scrapbook with a nostalgic view of the model family enacting the American dream. This is presented in contrast with recent photographs of Sultan's parents. See this show through today, Thursday, April 7.

Find the museum at 1001 Kettner Boulevard, directly across from the Santa Fe Railroad Depot (at Broadway Street), adjacent to the America Plaza trolley transfer station. Museum hours are 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, and on Thursday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Admission is $2 for adults, $1 seniors and students, children under 13 free. On Thursday evenings, from 5 to 9 p.m., admission is free. 234-1001.

Museum of Photographic Arts, German forest engineer R. Schilling spent time in Japan at the turn of the century putting together a collection of hand-colored photographs of people, trades, temples and other buildings, landscapes, and scenes of daily life. An exhibition of 85 of these photographs are on display in "Souvenirs from Japan: Japanese Photography at the Turn of the Century" through Sunday, May 22.

Located in the Casa de Balboa in Balboa Park, the museum is open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Docent tours are available on weekends at 2 p.m. and 3 p.m., included in the price of admission (adults: $3). 239-5262.

The San Diego Museum of Art, "Songs of My People" is an exhibition of 150 photographs by 50 black photojournalists (including four Pulitzer Prize recipients), revealing "the national black experience through powerful and penetrating visual images." In the show, African Americans are shown involved in a variety of professions and lifestyles. Enjoy the exhibit through Sunday, May 1.

"San Diego Songs of My People: 100 African-American Role Models" is an exhibition of black-and-white photographs honoring San Diegans who have made an impact on others by contributing their time and talent to their professions and the community. The subjects have been selected from the fields of education, arts, medicine, law, business/finance, civic/government, and religion. See the show through Sunday, April 10. This exhibit was mounted in conjunction with the "Songs of My People" show.

The Asafo warrior groups of the Fante people of Ghana had no written tribal communication, so they used brilliant banners adorned with a spectrum of cultural symbols and proverbs to signal their power, importance, and pride. Through Sunday, May 1 at the museum, enjoy "Asafo! Fante Flags from Africa 1850-1957." Each of the 90 flags in the exhibit measures nearly five by three feet, revealing African folklore and beliefs, along with details of everyday life.

Portrait of a Man by the 16th-Century Venetian artist Giorgione is the focus of an exhibition at the museum through Sunday, April 17. This painting is one of the most important paintings in the museum's collection. When it was recently restored by the J. Paul Getty Museum's Paintings Conservation Department, conservators using infrared reflectography equipment discovered an underdrawing of three figures. Before this revelation, art historians thought Giorgione painted without first drawing his subject. The exhibit shows how new technologies have changed the way paintings are attributed and give a history of the painting and artist.

The museum's permanent collection includes Italian Renaissance paintings, Spanish Old Masters paintings, American art, 19th-century European paintings, Asian art, 20th-century paintings and sculpture, and the Weisman Gallery of contemporary California art.

Find the museum in Balboa Park; it is open from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday. Admission is $5 adults; $2 for children 6–18; free on the third Tuesday of the month (for viewing the museum's collection of permanent paintings, not special exhibitions). 232-7931.

Timken Museum of Art, "The Age of Elegance: France in the 18th Century," featuring 40 objects drawn from the collections of the Fine Arts Museums of San Francisco and the Putnam Foundation, San Diego, explores the years that correspond principally to the reign of Louis XV. Pieces exhibited include rococo commodes executed with a range of techniques; a pair of rare snuff-mills from the Sèvres Manufactory; Japanese and Chinese porcelains; and paintings by Boucher, Fragonard, David, and Largilliere. The show continues through August.

Museum hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., and Sunday from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Free admission. For more information, call 239-5548.

Dangerous Curves Ahead

JEFF SMITH

There's a heat wave in L.A. — a bad one. For the fortunate, air-conditioning will attend their every move, fanning their chic apparel. For the less fortunate, like the five women working in Estela's East L.A. sewing factory, the word "sweatshop" is taking on new meaning. It's 1987. Although her four employees gained "documented" status the year before (the Simpson-Rodino Act of 1986 was an amnesty that gave legal status to anyone living illegally in the U.S. before 1982), Estela didn't qualify. So the windows must stay shut, the front door locked, and the women must maintain an all-points alert for the green vans of la migra, officials of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, who storm-troop the streets in search of undocumented residents. The heat — quadrupled by the steambath conditions inside, the wimos, drug pushers, and la migra outside — isn't all that's closing in on the five women. They've also got a killer deadline to turn out 100 pink satin cocktail dresses — or lose all. The dresses cost $13 to make, will sell at Bloomies for $200, and will bask in air-conditioned comfort forevermore.

Of the five women, only Estela and Rosali could wear the petite dresses they sew — Estela naturally, Rosali by design. To become a size seven is Rosali's life-work, even if it requires an addiction to diet pills. The others, as the play's title claims, "have curves." Like their inherited roles in society, the dresses don't fit. Their "full figures" have made them as alienated as their labor. But young Ana, who has been reading Susan Faludi's Backlash and who aspires to be a writer, has an instinctive dislike of prescribed molds — for Latinas and women in general. In a culturally diverse world, one size can't fit all. Ana will see that changes come about, even if it means shedding old skin in the process.

Real Women Have Curves, to use Harry Crews's phrase, is actually "the biography of a place." It's based on a true story of breakthrough success and has been produced all over the U.S. As a play, it's a mix of very impressive strengths and some glaring weaknesses. Lopez, who wrote it at age 19, doesn't care a whit for the Aristotelian laws of dramatic structure (i.e., now that I'm on the downside of Freytag's Pyramid, I'll need some Falling Action before I hop to my Denouement). The play is extremely episodic. The first act, in particular, rambles toward a weak curtain. Like its characters, however, who reject the cookie-cutter approach to form, the play is at its best when it leaves its expository, developmental requirements (and Ana's long, overly explanatory monologues) and simply is. Lopez has a wonderful knack for the feel of the place, which she conjures to life with naturalistic detail and vividly realized dialogue. As an ongoing action, Real Women is a bumpy ride. But when it goes sightseeing (as when the women drop everything and dance to the Champs' old hit "Tequila"), it can be a real treat. So Real Women has all the stumblings of a play by a young playwright. At the same time, that Lopez is just a young playwright, with so much still ahead, is cause for celebration.

Real Women Have Curves, by Josefina López, is a bumpy ride. But when it goes sightseeing (as when the women drop everything and dance to the Champs' old hit "Tequila"), it can be a real treat. So Real Women has all the stumblings of a play by a young playwright. At the same time, that López is just a young playwright, with so much still ahead, is cause for celebration.

Real Women Have Curves, which is both a title and a slogan, has much to say about social conditions, cultures, and the assertion of individuality. The play is consistently funny and very serious, often at the same time. The San Diego Rep's production, however, is high on entertainment value and low on thematic import. I am a rooted fan of director William Alejandro Virchis's work, especially his trademark of uninhibited artistic passion. But here, too often Virchis has toned down the dangers surrounding the women. The heat feels oppressive. But the wimos and pushers are pushovers, and the sightings of la migra, which send the five women scurrying, are treated as an oft-repeated joke (this glosses over the telling irony that four of the five women are now "legal" and still cower in fear). Virchis has given the piece an easy-to-take staging. Missing is the shroud of persecution that should hover over the women. As a result, their achievements, which could be heroic under the circumstances, lose import amidst all the comic shenanigans.

You'd probably rather not count the times you were in a bizarre situation and heard the bromide, "You'll laugh about it someday." The overall tone of the production has this quality. Virchis and company have coaxed abundant laughter from the text. Real Women is a very, very funny show. But it's a look back from the point of view of success — that "someday" has arrived — rather than a struggle forward through hair-raising horrors eventually overcome. John Iacovelli's scenic design, by contrast, has a Gorkyesque, lower-depths look. The factory, beneath street level, is claustrophobic, the heat palpable, and Iacovelli's realistic details most impressive (Eric Hansen's myriad props, in particular, far exceed his always stellar efforts and qualify him as one of the Seven Unsung Wonders of San Diego Theater). Brenda Berry's lighting and Dione Lebhar's costumes, the gregariously pink dresses punctuating their antithetical surroundings, provide stark contrasts. And Debby Van Poucke's sound design helps to unify the evening with the fluid feel of a musical.

On opening night, the cast had some rocky passages but gave indications that cohesion would come soon. As Ana's mother Carmen, Lupe Ontiveros owned the audience. She could generate big laughs whenever she pleased. And given the rare opportunity, Ontiveros could also reveal sorrows behind the smile — an adept piece of work. Coral Thuet, Roxane Carrasco, and Lucy Rodriguez showed good moments but also room for improvement. And Josefina López is making her theatrical debut as Ana. She has an annoying habit of scrunching up her face just before delivering a line. But playing a woman much like herself has obvious benefits as well. López is 24 and already has an impressive distinction: she's a playwright performing in her own play. The percentage of playwrights who have is quite small. The company López has joined, however — Shakespeare, Molière, Lope, Coward, among others — is quite august indeed. ■

Action
The RUSE/Marquis Public Theaters presents a late-night production of Sam Shepard's mystical tale of two men and two women trying to hold on to a world torn from them.
RUSE/Marquis Public Theater, through May 28; Friday and Saturday at 10:30 p.m.

Angel City
In spite of its high-falluting rhetoric, in which the movie industry is compared to a drug pusher, Angel City isn't one of Sam Shepard's top efforts. Beneath its many linguistic riffs is a tired old tale about corruption and greed in Hollywood. It is also one of Shepard's least physically active dramas, with the performers having to stand around and discuss what they should do next. What gives the play abundant interest, though, is that Shepard was after a very different notion of "character." He wanted his actors to become "fractured wholes, with bits and pieces of character flying off the central theme." The enemy is consistent, unified, explainable behavior easily reduced to tidy categories. Shepard wanted to drive theater past such convenient labelings. In effect, he wanted his actors to "jam" like jazz musicians. Each character has a musical key, so to speak, but the notes within that key aren't written down. They should be free-form, spontaneous eruptions allowing the actors to "make a kind of music...without having to feel the need to completely answer intellectually for the character's behavior." At one point in the play, Wheeler sums up Shepard's aesthetic in two sentences. "Don't explain it. Make it work!" In the RUSE/Marquis Public Theater's Angel City, however, only Vincent J. Baca as Wheeler and Paul Jackson-Miles as Tympani — and they only occasionally — heed Wheeler and Shepard's advice. Rather than bebop soloists and quirky-daring acting choices, the Christopher R.-directed production rumbles dully through the motions, holding back when Shepard's "score" shouts "Do As Thou Will!" The acting is too tentative. No one is grounded enough in the text (or the "key" of the character) to sustain the musical nature of the piece. Sonny Raccioppi's Lanx is a control freak who should drift in and out of stability but doesn't. Kimberly J. Wind's Miss Scoons, aspiring starlet and later a nun, merely turns up the volume, often too shrilly, to indicate changes. And Doug Chancey's Rabbit Brown was a full beat and a half behind everyone else, the night I caught the show. Saxophonists Ed Raines and Zopilote excelled in the background, but there should have been much more music than that on the RUSE/Marquis stage.
RUSE/Marquis Theater, through April 16; Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m.

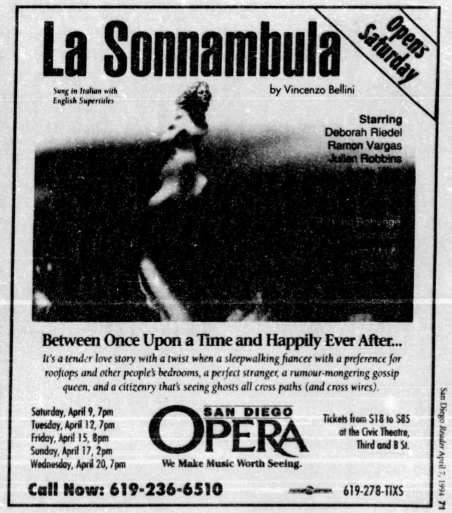

Animal Crackers
The Marx Brothers are in San Diego, Sort of. The Lawrence Welk Resort Theatre is offering a revival of the 1928 Broadway musical (book by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, music and lyrics by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby) that was so outlandish, one critic said, "Someone never seeing the Marx brothers would wonder if it was humor at all." It is, but it functions like a slippery dream in which all attempts at order wander hastily astray. Everything that can go wrong will, but — and here's the rub — with originality. The social event of the Long Island season is the perfect venue for Captain Jeffrey T. Spalding (Groucho) to undetect the mysterious disappearance of a painting. Clues become anti-clues, leads lead nowhere. Comic anarchy wins the day, and solves the puzzle. If Animal Crackers were a world premiere at the Welk, the numerous problems with timing, with un-crisp unfolding of scenes, and an unevenness of acting and singing would be easier to overlook in favor of the glimmers of genius in the piece. But the opposite is the case. The show offers, at best, only glimmers of its predecessor. Buddy Powell comes real close to Harpo Marx (especially with tear-away clothing), and there are times when Scott K. Ratner approximates the Great Groucho (the delivery isn't completely there, yet, and Ratner waits for the joke to land, even if it doesn't, rather than move on to the next 500 queuing up like New York taxis). It would help the Frank Wayne-directed production a great deal if the whole environment were more of a deliberate set-up for the comic schtick. The more formal, proper, and pretentious everyone else is, the funnier Groucho and the Marxists can be. Only Brenda Cox's Mrs. Rittenhouse (the Margaret Dumont role in the musical and 1930 movie) and Rudy Wissler, as the butler Hives, fully understand the virtues of being a straight-person for the show.
Lawrence Welk Resort Theatre, through April 30; Tuesday, and Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Tuesday through Thursday, and Sunday, at 1:45 p.m.

The Baltimore Waltz
Paula Vogel's 90-minute, intermissionless drama is a danse macabre and a valse triste. It is also a very funny fantasy, I believe it or not, about terminal illness. If you don't count Baltimore, Anna has never been abroad. Then she is diagnosed with ATD — acquired toilet disease, a fatal new virus. A certain Dr. Todesrochelin of Vienna may have a cure, so Anna and brother Carl flee to Europe to find him. If the doc's a quack, Anna will conclude her Grand Tour in a blaze of sexual glory. As in Craig Lucas's Reckless, which the Fritz Theatre also staged recently, Anna and Carl step through a looking glass and find themselves in a surrealistic Europe peopled by, among other things, white rabbits. Amid its complex tonalities and bizarre doings, Vogel's script nods, on occasion, at times tripping over the verbal cleverness of its language lessons. But not the Fritz's production. Under Christina Courtenay's expert direction, no note of the play bar been slighted, diluted, or overvalued. And her use of the Fritz's quirky space — aided by Daniel Morris's minimalist set, Jim Johnston's apt sound design, and Douglas Gabrielle's stunning lighting — ranks among the more savvy to date. Beverly Delventhal's hybrid costumes (Carl wears a sport-coat and pajamas throughout, for example) provide subtle reminders that what looks like Oz may just be black-and-white Kansas after all. Delventhal has also succeeded with the challenge of dressing Ron Choularton appropriately. He plays 11 different characters, with 11 different accents, and turns in one of the most delightful comedic tours de force in memory. Duane Daniels, as expected, does solid work as Carl. And Claudia Orenstein, new in town from Stanford, shines in a role that may look easy from the house seats but that's anything but. Anna is a mercurial maze, inhabiting several worlds and moods at once. Flanked by the likes of Choularton and Daniels, whoever plays her had better be good. Orenstein is much more than that. She's outstanding.

Worth a try.

Fritz Theatre through April 10; Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Sunday at 7:00 p.m.

Boomers

The Lamb's Players Theatre has extended the run of its very popular musical about the Baby Boomer Generation, written by Vanda Eggington and Kerry Meads. Hahn Cosmopolitan Theatre, through April 10; Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Friday and saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

Dirt

The Old Globe has given Bruce Gooch's family farm drama almost everything. It's got an amazing set by Ralph Funicello: a weathered barn, farmhouse, and yard, and just when you think the details couldn't be more exact, someone will open a door and Funicello's precise realism really begins. It has a symphony of bucolic noises by sound designer Jeff Ladman (when that dog barks, seemingly from the next county, you'd swear you were in the heart of the heartland). And Robert Peterson's lighting conjures up new moons, cool mornings, and the heat of the day on call. Ably directed by Andrew J. Traiser, the production boasts James Whitmore. He plays Sonny Hardman (he of the grattingly symbolic name), an aging farmer in whom senility or Alzheimers is taking a huge toll. Making full use of his bushy white eyebrows, a cantanker ous waddle, and an archive of theatrical savvy — and thanks as well to Deborah M. Dryden's wonderful costuming — Whitmore looks and acts the part of a homegrown,

The Supporting Cast

Wordsworthian rustic whose mind has begun to mosey down unhappy trails. Dirt also has John Dennis Johnston, an always capable actor, and Annette Helde, as Sonny's son Zac and Eleanor Martin, a waitress from t.wn. The production almost has everything — everything but a play! The "story" is merely a series of contrived situations rather than something that develops through believable stages to a conclusion (and you can predict the ending, even anticipate the aureate stage glow, from the getgo). Gooch gives his characters one word sentences — "lonesome"; "sometimes" — and unmotivated, rhapsodic forays about the majesty of the land. But the characters and the "story" are trough deep, and the father-son tangle that emerges has less than nothing new to say on the subject. Dirt, it turns out, is merely a vehicle for Whitmore (the play's fillings would ring even more hollow were a lesser actor to play Sonny). Whitmore and the Old Globe's terrific assemblage of designers deserve better. Hey, it's a great parade, but the Emperor is buck naked.
Old Globe Theatre, Simon Edison Centre for the Performing Arts, through May 1; Tuesday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Sunday at 7:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

An Evening with Clarence Darrow

Sweetooth Theater presents Joe Nesnow in the one-act play about the charismatic American lawyer who defended a Tennessee schoolteacher accused of teaching evolution illegally.
Sweetooth Theater, Friday, April 8, through April 16; Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m.

An Evening with Michael York

UCSD's University Events Office presents, for one night only, actor Michael York in a "full-length performance reading."
Mandeville Auditorium, UCSD, Wednesday, April 13, at 8:00 p.m.

Gimme Hollywood

The Checkers Showroom is hosting Patricia Harris Smith's new audience participation musical comedy that spoofs awards shows with "wannabes and couldabeens" from the glamour days of Hollywood. Smith has also directed.

I Do, or Die...The Mother-in-Law of All Weddings

Until now, the Mystery Cafe has imported scripts for its interactive dinner theater. But with I Do, or Die, written by San Diegans James Pascarella and Will Roberson, the Mystery Cafe not only has a home grown product, it also has one of its best — the best balance between written and ad-libbed materials, the best array of credible suspects and clues, and also the funnest of the ones I've seen at the Imperial House. Patrizia "Patti" Peccarino, heir to the Peccarino cheese fortune ("The Cheese Stands Alone!"), is about to marry Wilhelm "Willie" Schmeterlinck, last of the Schmeterlincks (whom some allege really invented Cheese Whiz) and a lad given to quoting Shakespeare. There's a death. Then another. Was the murderer Gretchen "The Bavarian Battleaxe" Schmeterlinck? Or Patti's mother Theresa Rodham Peccarino? Both brim with insidious motives. Was it the lactose-intolerant Patti, who lost 17 minutes of her life at age nine? Or was it one of several other candidates, each eager to make a hostile takeover — of anything! — and each living proof that "cousins shouldn't marry." Pascarella, who stars as a variety of hilarious boors, and Roberson, who has also directed, have set the piece in the 1930s (that is somehow able to make numerous topical references about 1993). It's a consistently fun evening, made so by Pascarella. Patricia Harris-Smith — who plays several characters and who has assumed many of the MC duties to good effect — by Stephanie Britton as the bride (with an aversion to the sound of animal balloons being squeaked that gives her the shimmy-shakes), Ehren Ziegler as the Hamlet-quoting groom ("To wed...or not to wed..."), and Carol Mackintosh and Sandra Dubow as the Mothers-in-law-to-be From Hell. Were the murders their "letsaccomplish"? Dione Labhar's costumes play comical havoc with both the '50s and proper attire for nuptials, and John-Bryan Davis's wigs — explosions of cascading hair sprayed to within a millimeter of its life — are a hoot. So is this show.
Worth a try.

Mystery Cafe, Imperial House Restaurant, 505 Kalmia Street, San Diego, open-ended run; Friday at 8:00 p.m. Saturday at 5:00 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. For information call 544-1600.

Isn't It Romantic

In the early '80s, Wendy Wasserstein's comedy served as an antidote to Helen Gurley Brown's contention that women must "have it all." As an alternative, Wasserstein suggests that women should discover themselves first and then honor their choices — even, Wasserstein said in an interview, if the decisions prove ultimately to be wrong. Some suspect casting choices have marred the North Coast Repertory Theatre's staging of this popular play. The protagonist, Janie Jiff Blumberg, should be zaftig ("I have very fat thighs," she confesses, "and I want very badly to be someone else without going through the effort of actually changing myself"). Director Nonnie Vishner has cast the comparatively svelte Gayle Feldman as Janie. And even some tinkering with Valerie Honea's costumes — pseudo-enlargements here and there — don't bulk her up sufficiently. Feldman has many good moments (and should have more once she internalizes Janie's idiosyncratic way of talking). There's less hope for Nancy Cuthbert's Lillian Cornwall, though. Along with being barely off the book on opening night, and thus throwing off the timing of the other actors, Cornwall plays the self-made executive as ice cream rather than as an ics individualist. All her scenes suffer as a result. Tracey McNeil does acceptable work as Harriet Cornsall, the Colgate employee who oops out in the end — a sacrificial lamb to the play's theme of facing oneself honestly. As Janie and Harriet's male interests, who make the play's title a rhetorical question, Rick Stevens and Kendall March needn't make Marty Sterling and Paul Stuart more evil, just less neutral. Best of show are: George Flint and Trina Kaplan as Janie's parents Simon and Tasha (the most liberated woman in the play); and Marty Burnett's set, a New York skyline, brownstone walls, and various levels with realistic detail, all on the small NCRT stage. And even with some casting problems (and an overlooked piece of business at the end) Janie should finally unpack her boxes since her apartment is now her home). Vishner is a director to watch.
Worth a try.

Iar the Floor

According to Chiori Miyagawa, "matrophobia" is the fear not of motherhood but of daughters becoming just like their mothers. For those with the condition, "happiness means being diametrically opposed to their mothers." In Cheryl L. West's Jar the Floor, four generations of women from an African American family have all the symptoms. In this family — and, the playwright suggests, in real life — traits skip a generation (if the mother values order and dedication, the daughter craves fun and games). Each of the four is so determined to escape her mother's influence that her identity has been formed, in large measure, as a reaction to that influence. What they overlook, and what Iar the Floor drives home in a first-rate production at the Cassius Carter, is a commonality they are reluctant to acknowledge. West's arrangement of differences among mothers and daughters is on the schematic side. But she conceals it, for the most part, with five richly detailed characterizations. And one reason the production works so well is that everyone in the cast, and its very impressive director Tazewell Thompson, has done the play before, often more than once. Joseph P. Tilford's immaculate set is the opposite of lived-in, appropriately. But the characters feel lived-in — for life. Irma P. Hall heads the cast as MaDear, a masterful portrait of what 90 hard years can do to a human being. As MaDear's daughter Lola, Crystal Laws Green resists aging so fervently she dresses younger than her daughter, has twice the energy of everyone else and most of the funny lines, which she delivers with unabashed spunk. The elegant Brenda Pressley has the least juicy role as MayDee, the uptight prof who sublimates emotion through compulsive cleaning. Pressley plays the straight person so well, the others succeed as a result. Susan Payne's Vennie and Jirian Hughes's Raisa give full vent to the instinctive anarchy of youth. All have been jarring MayDee's gleaming floors throughout. But when they do it in unison, she'll feel no need to polish all the scuff marks.

Nooses, Knives, and Lovers

Somebody hung Mr. Magoo. Not the cartoon character. Kurt's cat. The culprit just might be that serial killer terrorizing the city. Kurt? Unlikely. He loved Mr. Magoo. Although he knew each of the victims. It could be Chas. the new apple of Kurt's eye. or Kurt's friend Enid (she of the drop-dead one-liners), or even the ubiquitous Office Snow. Someone dunnit, and in Robert Joseph's comedy-thriller the truth will out, though the path to it is occasionally rambling and strewn with exposition. Noises is a world premiere. The script still has needless bulk in spots, as well as so few characters/suspects it suffers from the Small World Syndrome. It is often funny, however, and sus penseful in the end, and it turns out to be a useful vehicle to inaugurate Diversionary Theatre's new playing space in University Heights — which is the real star of the show: an intimate, 100-plus-seat house with a wide, modified proscenium stage that looks near ideal for the kind of small-cast productions Diversionary stages. In effect, the theater is offering a double world premiere. Having to break in a new play and a new space is quite an enterprise. Technical glitches (some unlocated lights, for example) were evident alongside the problems in the script. Joseph's direction served the strengths of his writing, for the most part. And with the exception of Steven J. Kehrli as a slow-on-the-uptake Chas (Kehrli has yet to learn that in theater, as in life, it is more blessed to give than receive), the cast performs capably. Richard Rottman does passable work as the policeman, Beth McKinley emanates Enid's dour worldview with admirable timing, and young Danny Leclair shows a lot of promise as Kurt. Noises is a mix of plusses and minuses, but the handsome — plush, even — new space is a major addition to the local theater scene and it, too, shows a great deal of promise.

Worth a try.

Sexual Perversity in Chicago
Anyone on the lookout for a hot late-night comedy should go to the Fritz Theater — at its new location on Third Avenue — and check out David Mamet's expose of the singles scene. The "sexual perversity" of the title isn't what you think. It's actually about the ways veterans of the scene erect barriers to prevent them from intimacy. Danny and Deborah have met and are headed toward love. His friend Bernie and her roommate Joan, however, are determined to prevent it from happening. Between Bernie's deep-seated hatred of women and Joan's of men, there's no room for anything like optimism. In the hour long comedy-drama, they function like evil angels at the ears of Danny and Deborah, filling them with overflowings of their own negativity. They must rank as two of the least supportive "friends" on the planet. In a series of quick, often hilariously funny scenes, Mamet traces the slow rise and precipitous fall of Danny and Deborah's relationship. At the Fritz, thanks to some fine work by director Duane Daniels, the show moves at a briskly Mametian clip. Daniel Morris's set — four chairs and a black background lit nicely by Douglas Gabrielle — makes up in unpretentious scene changes what it lacks in detail. The latter is supplied by Allen Ogden's costumes and Marty Eldridge's sound design, part of which is mid-'70s disco music that catches the period (Chicago 1976) and causes cringes of musical memories at the same time. The acting is solid. In particular, Brian Bevell's Danny is just right: moving from a form of singles-scene innocence to the bitterness of losses. Watkins's Bernie is believable stages. Lisa Viertel's Deborah, caught in the switches like Danny, is often most eloquent when she doesn't say a word and simply shows us how repulsive Bernie is and how, were it not for two very angry singles soloists (and boy, this is an angry play, in the characters and in Mamet's anger at the condition), she and Danny might have turned out together just fine. (Note: Several cast changes have occurred since the show opened in April 1992.)

The Proper Funereal Note

When one well-oiled member bellowed in my recoiling ear, "You don't get out till you GET SOME SOUL!" it was difficult not to dwell on Buñuel's vision of the afterlife in Simon of the Desert.

REVIEW
STEPHEN ESMEDINA

Not many things can sink a decent song into the pit of mediocrity as to have it become the unintended progenitor of a torturous community sing-along. What a dreadful surprise it was, then, when as a third or fourth encore to a very long set at the Belly Up last Thursday, John Hiatt found that the chorus and random bits of verse from his wry, sarcastic, somewhat elegiac "Perfectly Good Guitar" had taken on the anthemic, democratic characteristics of "We Are the World" or "My Ding-a-Ling." I could not tell if the impromptu choir that warbled loudly as they stomped imaginary bugs also shared Hiatt's presumed antipathy for the haughty belligerence of grunge rockers, but when one well-oiled member bellowed in my recoiling ear, "You don't get out till you GET SOME SOUL!" it was difficult not to dwell on Buñuel's vision of the afterlife in Simon of the Desert.

Such discomfort would usually be intolerable, the sort of images you let perish along with other mood-deflating memories. But coming as it did after a painfully perfunctory set on which Hiatt steered away from committing anything that might be construed as novel or inspirational, that disheartening finale at least left me with an impression. Not the sort I had anticipated, but these things can never be planned for. It also left me befuddled about the arc of Hiatt's career. He is becoming almost self-congratulatory about evolving into a contented rock-and-roll journeyman, settling placidly into midlife sobriety and sanity, and gently scouring, not pushing, the proverbial envelope. Nobody would begrudge Hiatt his show-and-tell escape from controlling demons, but neither should anyone believe that this liberation has made his songwriting and performing much more vital or even interesting than when only he had to concern himself with his personal affairs. If anything, Hiatt has become dependable, to the point of seeming complacent, predictable, dull.

The near-unanimous praise accorded his recent Perfectly Good Guitar has been predicated on the confident, all-electric glimmer that sustains it. While a fine enough record, balanced on Hiatt's typical bittersweet reveries of lost love, wasted youth, and the magic of domesticity, it all seems overly familiar, and more than a shade too didactic. His mordant wit is all but gone except for "The Wreck of the Barbie Ferrari," a novelty song with a bizarre-enough premise ruined by its dreary, moralistic denouement: black comedy made tragic by a Harry Chapin admirer. The remainder of the album does not register any more forcefully than as a series of blues-rock folk ditties, thicker textured but with no more spine than what the average smarmy singer-songwriter could have done. The songs that work — the title cut, with its mix of nostalgia and acrimony, and "Loving a Hurricane" — do so less because of Hiatt's lyrics than his full-throttle vocal delivery and Michael Ward's melismatic, Neil Young-styled guitar work.

In person, this time around, the transcendence was nonexistent, replaced by a monotonous sense of chugging along, getting by, and doing nothing to upset the currency or fake out the won-over audience, which must have done its part in making Hiatt's latest album his best selling to date. This corresponds to his decision to stay exclusively with material from the records that brought him to this safety zone: Bring the Family, Slow Turning, Stolen Moments, and the current not-bad-seller.

Unfortunately, Hiatt has gotten less interesting every time out. (Not that he has become an unregenerate hack all his records, like John Fogerty's and, to a lesser degree, Neil Young's, have at least moments of genre-exploding ecstasy.) At the Belly Up, the only stretching he did was in the concert's length. He played nothing from such better works as Riding with the King or his soul-man experiment Warming Up to the Ice Age. Perhaps that was too much to ask, considering his band's obvious rhythmic deficiencies. These guys, the Guilty Dogs, were four-on-the-floor, without any subtlety or nuance whatsoever. No alternate currents, nothing sleek or clever in the way of dropped accents to allow any exchange between Ward and Hiatt beyond the formula call-and-response jests. Put simply, for a man whose stuff depends on integrating strong R&B flavors into even the most honkified folk treacle, his cohorts were, rhythmically at least, only an average white band.

A couple of years ago, Hiatt had a brief fling in a so-called supergroup, Little Village, featuring Ry Cooder, Jim Keltner, and Nick Lowe. For reasons that no critic and none of these musicians have made clear, their only album was dismissed and did not sell well. But it was the best band Hiatt ever worked with (they also girded Bring the Family). Never a consistent writer, despite his many songs that have been covered, Hiatt would again benefit from such expert support on two counts: it would hone his material to the requisite degree, and more importantly, it would provide, onstage, a band that could allow his songs to move, breathe, have life. Last week, the off-key amateur chanteurs who helped usher Hiatt out only ended his concert on the proper funereal note. ■

the NOTE

By Stephen Esmedina

BUDDY BLUE BAND

Fidelity to a cherished inspiration is mentable in the abstract, but there is always the trap that assimilation will become stolid preservation. It is irksome, to say the least, to see and hear a band aping images and clichés that are interesting only for campy, condescending reasons. Retro-roots ready-maders work only if the level of playing goes beyond what can be easily copped from records or AMC reruns. The Buddy Blue Band is working a gambit that limns the subtle wire separating promise from parody. Guitarist Blue is an expert at adapting what he aims for: with this band, something akin to the nascent jukebox R&B of Louis Jordan and Joe Turner and the jazz licks of Chick Webb's orchestra. Compared to most neo-resuscitations, the band's Bizarre/Planet debut disc succeeds by not giving in to the temptation to display a humble generation's removed sense of noblesse oblige.

The band is tight, properly enthusiastic, and approximate in their sound-like originals. Blue is a limited but soulful singer and a plaintive guitarist who writes in the neon, swizzle-stick, three-for-a-quarter fashion endemic to the genre, but his facility with word revels, alliteration, coy period allusions, and time-spun cross-references makes this project seem more personal than affected. There is less the feel of a Joe Jackson-Scott Hamilton tributary and more of a determined pastiche updating, much as the long-gone Electric Flag were up to before Mike Bloomfield and Buddy Miles got into chigazos. The Buddy Blue Band will play on Sunday afternoon, one of many performers in the Friday-to-Sunday Adams Avenue Roots Festival.

BUDDY BLUE BAND, Adams Avenue Roots Festival, Sunday, April 10, 3 pm, 282-7833. Free.

411 ON NOTE

By Gina Arnold

Some may recall that, when a national fashion magazine (for men) recently took notice of San Diego in a scene roundup, it described recently signed local band rust as sounding like "a cross between Soundgarden and Jane's Addiction." This dismissive description (not, incidentally, the article writer's words) does not do the band justice, but it's not entirely without foundation: although rust sounds nothing like Jane's, singer John Hogan does sound a little like a much less resonant Chris Cornell, and the band at its best, on songs like "Pills" and "Everyone except for Me," cooks along with that specially nice, scary, rumbly, Soundgarden-esque bottom. There's no defending Details's wanton disregard of its author's actual opinion, but on the other hand, it would be mendacious to deny that rust is at least cut from the same cloth as many another alternative act.

That said, it must be added that rust has strengths of its own. The band's bass runs are a lot more fun than Helmet's, and their words, though steeped in that Grownups Suck/Man's Inhumanity to Man philosophy that goes over so well, are simple and clear, particularly on "Ask the Judge," with its chorus of "God is war," and on "Frustration," with its heavy-handed irony: "I get so angry at my workplace/ I've been told that women are evil!" etc. (here they're reminiscent of current comers Toos, with whom they toured last year). Derivative? Maybe, though it's more likely that the kinds of subjects and metal-based rhythms that rust deals in strike a universal chord in today's youth and, as such, are being legitimately and simultaneously explored by groups like rust in every major metropolitan area.

Anyway, what's so great about originality? The bottom line is, if you enjoy bands like Soundgarden and Tool, you'll like rust. And since, at least this time around, you'll get to see them at Bodie's instead of the Sports Arena or Golden Hall, so much the better for you. Opening will be Donald Wilson.

OF NOTE

By David Stampone

DAS EFX

There's a prevalent take amongst music critics and a wide swath of the concertgoing public that rap shows, by definition, suck dirt. Of course, a little demographic analysis shows most of the denigrators to be white, yet their stated problem with hip-hop performance rides not (overtly, at least) along racial lines, but rather the live-versus-canned-music issue, with flesh-and-blood players sweating out the jams favored over a deejay mechanically working the "wheels of steel." The latter situation, the thinking goes, puts an unmanageable burden on the MC ("microphone controller") to come through with skills alluring enough to offset the excitement lost without "real" music being made onstage. And this can be true enough when the rapper(s) are lacking in live fundamentals, something anybody who witnessed De La Soul bomb at Aztec Bowl a few years back quickly became aware of, intensified in the context of a stadium bill including the animated Sugarcubes, PIL, and even the semi-rote New Order.

However, anybody around here who caught the better sets of the many Def Jam tours that rolled through the Sports Arena during the last decade or felt Public Enemy electrify those remaining at Tijuana's glitzy Baby Rock disco for over an hour after finally taking the stage at 2:30 a.m. in early '92, or checked out Cypress Hill hummin' a half-hour of their ganja-gangsta "Latin Lingo" into the heart of Hillcrest once upon a time . . . well, you know this shit can work just fine. And the sight of dreadlocked hip-hop duo Das EFX spellbinding the crowd with their vertical-vocal riffs a while back on TV's Uptown Comedy Club bodes well for their gig tomorrow night at SDSU's Montezuma Hall.

Das should feel right at home on campus; it was at another state university, Virginia's, that English majors Dreyz and Brooks first combined their skills at college talent shows. The rappers' style, though, is decidedly street-hard — the title of their second LP, late last year's Straight Up Sewaside, is a nod to anti-crossover allegiance to the hip-hop underground — and the pair have become favorably known for their undiluted, dancehall-influenced "staggedy-stuttering" flow, even guesting on Ice Cube's "Check Yo Self." Black Moon and Twice As Nice will open.

DAS EFX, Montezuma Hall, Friday, April 8, 7:30 pm, 220-TIXS. $18.50.

The Offspring's working at Lou's on Monday night.
Meet The Offspring and be one of the first to get their totally new release "Smash." They're gonna be working the counter at Lou's Records from 7 til 9 on Monday night, April 11.
They'll be selling their "Smash" cd's for just $10.99 and their cassette or LP for $5.99. And since The Offspring will be ringing you up, maybe you should bring exact change - Lou goes nuts if the till doesn't balance at the end of the night.

REVIEW
DUNCAN SHEPHERD

My current acid test for new movies is this: am I just as glad I saw it or would I have rather, while I still have the chance on the big screen, seen Tombstone for the fourth time? One out of four movies this week, much better than the one-out-of-ten average for the entire month of March, passed the test.

Jimmy Hollywood, the passee, is a better movie the less seriously you take it. Better if you laugh off, or shrug off, the happily-ever-after ending. Better if you do not brood too much on the overt theme of what has happened to Tinsel Town since the time of John Garfield. (That happily-ever-after ending, with a guest-star cameo by Harrison Ford, not unlike the Bruce Willis and Julia Roberts cameos at the end of The Player, speaks volumes on what's happened.) I would even run the risk of being badly misunderstood and say that it is the best Barry Levinson movie since, or outside of, or possibly even including, Rain Man. Like that movie, it offers us an unforgettable character and not a lot to go with him.

The character in this one is a Hollywood hopeless called Jimmy Alto (Jimmy Hollywood to his friends back East, where he worked as an aluminum-siding salesman — an inside joke from the maker of Tin Men), who has never actually landed a single solitary part — "It's all politics" — but who has never stopped angling for one. His latest angle: an advertisement touting himself as "Actor Extraordinaire" on a bus-stop bench in a "big traffic-flow area" on Sunset Boulevard. Plainly, we are well beyond the fringes of show biz and all the way out in the delusional zone of The King of Comedy. Lorne Greene, turning up on Bonanza with white hair, provides the never-too-late role model for this dumpy middle-aged man with shoulder-length dyed-yellow hair and floral-print shirt — though his image of Greene as an overnight success exposes a blind spot in his seemingly encyclopedic knowledge of Hollywood Past. When we first encounter him, he is strolling along Hollywood Boulevard, in the company of his puppylike sidekick (puppy-like in loyalty but also in mental capacity), and reciting by heart the names on the Walk of Fame: "Rex Harrison...Burgess Meredith ...blank" — and it's nice once again to see Richard Widmark come in for special attention so soon after he was brought up in Twenty Bucks. (Was it? Or was it in Reality Bites?)

These two, with nothing better to do, and armed only with a prop pistol and a camcorder, take up the pastime of capturing a neighborhood vandal and delivering him to the police, together with the videotaped evidence of his crimes and an explanatory note cryptically signed S.O.S. The initials are selected by the dim-bulb pal in tribute to the producer of his favorite movie, Gone with the Wind. "David O. Selznick?" says his partner. "I thought it was Steven," says the dim bulb. (That's typical of the jokes in the movie: modest in size, with maximum time to sink in. Or again: the running joke in which the two are sunning themselves beside the apartment pool, a telephone is heard ringing in the distance, the actor wonders aloud whether it's his, and the dim bulb invariably assures him — with variable accuracy — that it's not.) Ah, well. The initials quickly come to stand for Save Our Streets (a fanciful secret society fashioned after the Symbionese Liberation Army), and the aspiring film star finally has his once-in-a-lifetime role, that of a Death Wish-type vigilante (code name: Jericho) — and never mind that he is photographed exclusively in silhouette, that his artistic medium is the local TV news, and that his "good reviews" are public-opinion polls. The zone of self-delusion knows no bounds. Joe Pesci, in his own sort of once-in-a-lifetime role, never loses sight of the character's looniness even as he advances himself, and entrenches himself, as our mouthpiece. (Those of us, at any rate, who can remember who John Garfield is, and can identify One-Eyed Jacks on the tube, and would join in tipping our figurative hats to John Ford.) And Christian Slater, slower on the uptake than Laurel or Hardy, plays a very subdued, a very muted second fiddle — a contented and noncompetitive second fiddle, but even so a more tuneful second fiddle than that of Tom Cruise in Rain Man.

The crimefighting drift of the plot — the all-purpose urban complaint about the spread of violence in America — is not of much use as a metaphor for the filmmaking community, per se. It keeps the focus on the external Hollywood, and doesn't pry behind the studio gates. And perhaps that's just as well. To ask for more from Barry Levinson would be to ask for hypocrisy. (See, here again, that happily-ever-after ending: complete contradiction of everything that comes before it.) We might be tempted to ask, nevertheless, for a little more attentiveness to the look of the movie. Just because it's all character is no excuse for it to be all drab, all muddy, all ugly. But then we might need to remind ourselves that this is after all the same moviemaker who presided over Toys. We can't ask a blind man to show a little sensitivity to color.

Clifford is a very bad movie, from a very bad idea, about a very bad little boy. The bad idea is to have the bad little boy portrayed by Martin Short — shorter than usual, and with shaved arms and legs, but still with postpubertal voice and beard-pattern. Maybe, though, it's not so much that it's a bad idea as that the idea is all there is to it, and that it is stretched out torturously to feature-length and to an overwrought finale involving a malfunctioning amusement-park dinosaur. As with so many of the movies made by alumni of Saturday Night Live, SCTV, et al., it feels like no more than a skit. A skit that doesn't know when to quit. Worse, a skit that doesn't know when not to get started.

Major League II comes along five years after Major League nothing, but takes place the very next summer. Accordingly, several hasty backward steps must be taken in order to re-establish the Indians as underdogs. As, in other words, someone to root for. The team speculator (Omar Epps, formerly Wesley Snipes) has sprained his knee while shooting an action film in the off season (parody opportunity), and has taken it into his head to become a power hitter (fly balls to the warning track). The resident power hitter (Dennis Haysbert) has converted from voodoo to nonviolent Buddhism. The flame-thrower on the pitching staff (Charlie Sheen) has reinvented himself as a cutie. The glamorous third baseman (Corbin Bernsen, reduced to fewer lines than Randy Quaid's loudmouthed bleecher bum) has moved on to the front office. And the gimpy-kneed catcher (Tom Berenger), now a coach, has been replaced by a rookie hayseed: "Women! You can't live with 'em, and they can't pee standing up." The baseball fan will find as much to grouse about as the movie fan: bottom of the ninth, two out, runners on first and second, home team ahead by one run, and the pitcher intentionally walks the batter in order to set up a confrontation with the stubbly-chinned bad guy. (If I need say more, you're no baseball fan.) Both types of fans might feel some trepidation about the future. The first installment followed the team only as far as the divisional pennant; this second, having revealed they were then knocked out of the League Championship Series, follows them through that round but not into the World Series. Major League III, anyone?

The House of the Spirits looked on the face of it to be the week's biggest movie, but proved to be only its biggest bore. Bille August's treatment of the Isabel Allende novel (with, so I'm told, most of the "magical realism" weeded out) might almost be a treatment of a Danielle Steel or Sidney Sheldon novel: a glob of sentimental (i.e., universally accessible) Leftism about love across the class divide, the belated enlightenment of a stick-in-the-mud, hope for a brighter tomorrow. It evinces little feeling for place (a mythical South American country modelled on Chile but actually re-created in Portugal and Denmark) or for period (the middle two-fourths of the 20th Century); there's an unrehearsed cacophony of accents; different characters age at startlingly different rates; and the viewer is transported to no world beyond the dollars-and-cents one of the International Co-Production with an All-Star Cast: Jeremy Irons (a wad of chewing gum, or something, wedged behind his upper lip), Meryl Streep, Glenn Close (black clothes, black hair, black eyes, looking possibly like a native of the planet Uranus), Winona Ryder, Antonio Banderas, Maria Conchita Alonso (kneeling in front of Jeremy Irons and unbuttoning his trousers in each of her first two scenes: she only has one other), Vanessa Redgrave, Armin Mueller-Stahl (dubbed by another). Lei those who admired August's Pelle the Conqueror and Best Intentions grapple with the questions of where and how he went wrong. I thought both of those were bores, too.

Can't I say nothing about the Oscar ceremony without it being misinterpreted? The correspondent who sent me a postcard to gloat over the success of Schindler's List just doesn't get it. Unforgiven winning the Best Picture award was unsettling to me. (Exciting, but unsettling.) Schindler's List winning Best Picture restores order. ■ spastic, rictus-afflicted, ducktailed rejectee from a Grease audition, whose mouth (and sometimes even voice) resembles Dan Aykroyd doing Dick Nixon. The physical comedy is quite inventive, or at least quite hard-working; the simple act of crossing a railed terrace, to the beat of the Mission Impossible theme, is transformed into a private little cliffhanging melodrama (quite child-like, too). The ending is severely taxing, but it doesn't cancel all earlier tickles. With Sean Young, Courteney Cox, and professional footballer Dan Marino (as himself); directed by Tom Shadyac. 1994.

Above the Rim — A jump-ball for the soul of a high-school hoopster: bright prospects on one side, dark influences on the other. Stupifyingly unimaginative and amateurishly directed (Jeff Pollack), but Leon — just Leon, no last name — makes a good impression as the Strong Silent Type. With Duane Martin, Tupac Shakur, Marlon Wayans, Tonya Pinkins. 1994.

Angie — One woman's story, more traditionalist than feminist, more concerned with responsibilities than freedoms. The director is the impeccably credentialed Martha Coolidge (Not a Pretty Picture, Rambling Rose), so that's all right, then. The story as such, although not lacking in particulars, is also not lacking in banalities: the brassy ethnicity (Italian Catholics in Bensonhurst), the awkwardly alien (i.e., non-Italian Protestant) stepmother, the thick-ish blue-collar boyfriend, the Irish charmer who comes from outside "the neighborhood," who talks of Degas and of Massenet, who seems altogether too good to be true, and who, when the illegitimate baby arrives, proves to be very false indeed. (And without even having to hear about the birth defect.) The mutual rejection of mother and infant is an interesting stretch, but just a short stretch, before the return to banalities: the heroine hitting the road in search of her long-lost biological mother, and taking the time in a bus-station restroom for that banal rite-of-passage of snipping off her hair (and doing a thoroughly professional job of it, too). Geena Davis goes a long way, not the whole way, toward making all this palatable. Even slightly savory. With Stephen Rea, James Gandolfini, Philip Bosco. 1994.
★ (HAZARD CENTER 7)

Baby, It's You — John Sayles has done the inevitable and has upped his standards of professionalism. This accomplishes nothing so much as to make his movie look more ordinary — less needy, in other words, of the critical charity that so benefited The Return of the Seacucus 5/ten and (less so) Lianna. The very ordinary storyline tells of a "nice girl"/"bad boy" dalliance between a pampered Jewish princess accustomed to having anything she wants, including the plum role in the high school production of The Time of Your Life, and an Italian "greaser" who is a sort of better-dressed, soft-and-tie version of the TV-sitcom characters portrayed by Henry Winkler and John Travolta. The re-creation of high-school life in the 1960s is tied almost entirely to the two principal players, Rosanna Arquette and Vincent Spano, and is thus on a very short tether. Both of them, but particularly Arquette, come across as young adults — old enough, that is, to have graduated from college and then acting school — pretending to be kids again and overplaying the innocence, self-consciousness, bravado, etc., to the point of parody. 1983.

The Hudsucker Proxy

Bobo Epoque — Spanish romantic romp (and part-time political romp) about a Republican Army deserter, circa 1931, who hides out in a household of four nubile daughters — lesbian, widow, fiancée, virgin — and who cozies up to each in turn before finding the one right for him. The first cozying-up is the most interesting, post-costume party, with the lesbian dressed up as a mustachioed soldier and the soldier dressed up as a housemaid. After that — after the itinerary becomes apparent — it's more of a grind. Renoir has been brought up as a point of reference, and the high-boil style of performance perhaps justifies it. (Why else? The French tilde? The shotgunned rabbit?) There again, the lesbian, Ariadna Gil, is the most interesting, cooler, calmer, quieter than the rest. With Jorge Sanz, Fernando Fernan Gomez, Penelope Cruz, Maribel Verdu, and Miriam Diaz-Aroca; directed by Fernando Trueba. 1993.
★ (DEL MAR HEIGHTS; HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Bitter Moon — A minor embarrassment from a minor master. Polanski directing his plump, sleepy-eyed wife, Emmanuelle Seigner, as a megaton Sex Bomb. The setting is shipboard, but any comparison to the same director's Knife in the Water goes out the porthole with the endless narrated flashbacks to a sadomasochistic interlude in Paris. (The wheelchair-bound narrator, bending the reddened ear of a fellow passenger, is a would-be writer, a would-be Hemingway or Henry Miller, so — "My nerve ends were jangling like bells," etc.) It's all, or mostly, supposed to be slyly humorous ("I loved her, but our credit was running out. We were headed for sexual bankruptcy"), but that only adds to the embarrassment. Peter Coyote, Hugh Grant, Kristin Scott-Thomas. 1993.
● (GUILD, FROM 4/8)

Blank Check — An inflationary Home Alone. Our flowering youth this time out is a millionaire home owner — the million isn't real/ his, but the home is — and the beleaguering bad guys are big league (Miguel Ferrer, Tone Loc, who deserve a better nemesis). Coincidence runs wild, but not as wild as avarice and self-gratification. With Brian Bonsall, Karen Duffy, Michael Lerner; directed by Rupert Wainwright. 1994.
● (NICKELODEON 10)

Blue Chips — Worth seeing for the face-reddening, throat-constricting, vein-popping performance of Nick Nolte as a college basketball coach fashioned after Indiana U.'s Bobby Knight (who appears as himself in the climactic game, opposite Nolte on the sideline). At any rate he is fashioned after Knight up until he forges a Faustian pact with an alumni booster and accomplished money launderer (J.T. Walsh), who is photographed with the sort of horrification — jack-o'-lantern closeups, low angles, tilted camera — that Eisenstein reserved for czarist fat cats. The on-court action and coaching sessions, dilizing such advanced — yet still passably young — students of the game as Shaquille O'Neal, Anfernee Hardaway, Matt Nover, Bobby Hurley, et al., has an in-the-thick-of-it authenticity. Though, with William Friedkin's hand-held camerawork and rapid-fire montages, it lacks a little something in drama: a little something in development and strategy and what TV analysts refer to as "game situations." It lacks, in short, all the things that make a good basketball game into a richer aesthetic experience than most movies. Mary McDonnell, Ed O'Neill, Bob Cousy, Larry Bird. 1994.
★★ (CENTURY TWIN)

Clifford — Reviewed this issue. With Martin Short, Charles Grodin, and Mary Steenburgen; directed by Paul Flaherty.

D2: The Mighty Ducks — D-minus. The Pee-Wee pucksters, having overcome the odds to win the local championship, are ready to take on the world and overcome steeper odds, at the Junior Goodwill Games in L.A. The villain: Iceland. Iceland! Yes, Iceland. (A bold move, inviting protests from the Icelander Anti-Defamation League and virtually wiping off potential Icelandic box office.) Oh, and also American commercialism, Hollywood phoney-baloney, nothing but sitting ducks. With Emilio Estevez, Michael Tucker, Ian Rubes, Kathryn Erbe; directed by Sam Weisman. 1994.

8 Seconds — Bio of bull rider and youngest-ever inductee into the Pro Rodeo Hall of Fame, Lane Frost. It's sincere; it's direct; it's, more than anything else, narrowly focused: parents, a couple of bad rides, a wife, that's it. The epilogue of documentary footage, home movies, and family album photos persuades us that the casting was pretty good — Luke Perry, Cynthia Geary, Carrie Snodgress, James Rebhorn, Stephen Baldwin. The last-named manages especially well with the light burden of the sidekick role; you'd hardly know he had a life of his own until after the hero gets gored to death. Directed by John G. Avildsen. 1994.
★ (SANTEE VILLAGE 8)

Erendira — A young girl (Claudia Ohana, who has a beneficial resemblance to Barbara Steele) is forced into prostitution to repay a million-peso debt to her grandmother (Irene Papas, not so much matriarchal as monarchical, wearing imperial robes, sitting in throne-like postures, brandishing a scepter). The script is by Gabriel Garcia Marquez, and he would appear to be calling the tune, though not the actual shots. Ruy Guerra, the Brazilian director of this French-German-Mexican co-production, shows a good eye for color and light, but that facility is severely overstrained here. After the introductory sequence, with a hot wind licking at candle flames, and finally blowing highly flammable curtains into the latter, the problem soon becomes what to do for an encore! The lead character's first sale as a prostitute — the haggling over price; the two, lying of her on a produce sale, the torrential rainfall, the slow-motion slap, and the illusory colored fish swarming across the wall — will do well enough, perhaps. But what then? A diamond in the center of an orange? A magic touch, like Michael Jackson's in his "Billie Jean" video, that causes glass to light up? Nuns slitting a pig's throat? Footprints filling with blood? The portable-like plotline establishes little reality against which to test the irreality. And if the movie can't transport you all the way to dreamland, it may at least take you very near to sleep. 1983.
★ (SAN DIEGO PUBLIC LIBRARY, 4/22, 6 P.M.)

Four Weddings and a Funeral — A cinematic concerto grosso, with a fixed group of friends passing through four distinct high-spirited movements and one grave one. There's a lot we don't learn about these people, and crude and overdone comic writing mingles freely, but not spoilingly, with deft and funny stuff. "When you work in a money market, what good are the novels of Wordsworth?" And Hugh Grant, looser, less stuffy, more flexible than usual, handles the assorted predicaments (e.g., stuck at a table of his ex-girlfriends at a wedding reception) with inexhaustible resource and nuance. Andie MacDowell, Kristin Scott-Thomas, Simon Callow, Rowan Atkinson; written by Richard Curtis; directed by Mike Newell. 1994.
★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; COVE; FLOWER HILL CINEMAS; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; HILLCREST CINEMAS; MIRA MESA 7; NICKELODEON GALAXY 6; FROM 4/8; OCEANSIDE 6; FROM 4/8; POWAY 10; SAN MARCOS CINEMAS; UA CHULA VISTA 6; FROM, 4/8; WEGAND PLAZA)

Galaxies Are Colliding — Shoestring comedy from American independent filmmaker John Ryman, with Dwier Brown and Kelsey Grammer.
(UCSD, MANDEVILLE AUDITORIUM, 4/12, 8 P.M.)

Groody — How low will the relatives sink in order to get their hands on Uncle Joe's millions? In the case of Michael J. Fox, who starts out on the high road, at least as low as a Jimmy Durante impression ("Ink a dink a doo." In other words, pretty low. A mortifying comedy that, near the end, changes into a sentimentalizing and self-contradicting one: unpleasanter and unpleasanter. Kirk Douglas, crafty and craftsmanly as the sadistic old s.o.b., keeps his head above water. With Nancy Travis, Bob Balaban, Phil Hartman, and Ed Begley, Jr.; directed by Jonathan Lynn. 1994.
● (HAZARD CENTER 7; POWAY THEATER, FROM 4/8; UA GLASSHOUSE 6; VOGUE, FROM 4/8)

Grief — One week behind the scenes of a daytime TV series, The Love Judge. "Campy trash," proclaims the show's producer in assessment of a script on circus lesbians. (The script goes in front of the cameras, anyway.) The description applies to the low-low-low-budget movie, too, notwithstanding some pit stops to ruminate on AIDS and its toll. Sample piece of over-writing: one of the straight women on the staff says of a prospective date, "He wants to take me to a movie, but he doesn't even know who Edgar Ulmer is." It would still be overwriting if she said Robert Siodmak and if it was a man who said it. With Craig Chester, Jackie Beat, Illeana Douglas, Alexis Arquette; written and directed by Richard Glatzer. 1993.
● (KEN, THROUGH 4/14)

Grumpy Old Men — Not so much a title as a "pitch." Lemmon, Matthau, together again, as a couple of post-retirement Minnesota ice fishermen who have been wrangling with one another for fifty-five years ("Moron!" "Prick!") and are wrangling now over the new widow on their block (Ann-Margret, not acting her age, but, in a bathing suit, looking it). The two stars are not a unit, of course, as if it's only fair to report that Lemmon puts more into this one (more feeling, more shading) than does Matthau. (more imitation). The "So what?" routine belongs in an, highlight reel of the two-some; the rest of it can be conscientiously filed with the orange peels and the melon rinds. It says quite a lot about the movie that the best part of it is the collection of outtakes tacked on at the end, in the much-copied manner of Cannonball Run. With Daryl Hannah, Burgess Meredith, Ossie Davis; directed by Donald Petrie. 1993.
● (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; CENTURY TWIN, FROM 4/8; POWAY THEATER, FROM 4/8; VINE YARD TWIN; VOGUE, FROM 4/8)

Guarding Tess — Very mild comedy-drama (first one, then the other) about a former First Lady and current Prima Donna — capricious, temperamental, a handful — and the by-the-book Secret Service cream assigned to bodyguard her. Nicolas Cage's natural oddness is somewhat straitjacketed in the part — Nicolas Caged, you might say — and the humor in general (what there is of it) is muffled by a milky white film over the film. A serious turn near the end is a total surrender. With Shirley MacLaine, Austin Pendleton, Richard Griffiths, James Rebhorn; directed by Hugh Wilson. 1994.

The Hudsucker Proxy — Though this is as different from previous Coen brothers movies as all of those are different from each other, it nonetheless picks up the interest of Barton Fink in the issues of commercialism, success, popularity — the whole American, and particularly Hollywooden, ethos. That earlier movie confused a lot of people because, among other things, the anti-Hollywood hero was not anti-Hollywood in the same way or from the same angle of attack as the Coens. "Once no one to root for. (No one but the Coens themselves.) Likewise in Hudsucker, it would be easy to find Hollywood counterparts to the undereducated, inexperienced, unworldly bumpkin who is plucked from the basement mailroom and lofted to the vacant President's chair on the forty-fifth floor ("counting the mezzanine") of the Hudsucker Building. The scheme, unbeknownst to him, is to ruin the company so that the board members can buy up the stock cheap when it goes public. But the Coens, devious as ever, are careful to give the starry-eyed rube credit for a certain naivete and naive kind of genius. Touted to the press as an "idea man" (equivalent to the Hollywood "high concept"), he invents the Hula-Hoop (equivalent to Star Wars, Raiders of the Lost Ark, Batman, take your pick. And of course there will have to be a sequel to it: "Hula-Hoop Frisbee"). His constant refrain in the pitch stage, and the actual ad copy in the promotion stage, mixes just the right amounts of enthusiasm and apology: "You know ... for kids!" That kind of genius, as ought to be obvious, is not unlike the kind in the old Hollywood movies on which The Hudsucker Proxy is modelled: the sentimental "Little Man" allegories of Frank Capra, the boisterous satires of Preston Sturges. And it is not unlike the kind that Barton Fink, the engagé Broadway playwright, was incapable of duplicating. And it is not in the least like the Coen brothers' kind. Theirs — distanced and distancing, cool and cooling — is another kind altogether. You know ... for grownups! With Tim Robbins, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Paul Newman. 1994.
★★★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

In the Name of the Father — An open-and-shut case of miscarriage of justice, based on fact. (It might better be named In High Dudgeon.) A petty thief from Northern Ireland just happens to be in the wrong place at the wrong time: Guildford, England, 1974, when a no-warning IRA bomb* goes off in a crowded pub, killing five. Because we've been stuck to the man like glue, we know full well he had nothing to do with it, and we're expected to resent the police having any opinion on the matter. The thief (Daniel Day-Lewis, life-sized); along with friends and family, is hastily railroaded into prison, where he passes fifteen years before his new lawyer (Emma Thompson, emanating empathy) comes onto a new piece of evidence through the greatest stroke of luck, or laziest stroke

CRITICS AROUND THE COUNTRY ARE RAVING ABOUT THE YEAR'S MOST PASSIONATE LOVE STORY!

THE NEW YORK TIMES, Janet Maslin

"A HANDSOME, RAVISHING FILM FILLED WITH UNDERSTANDING MIRACLES!

It takes daring chances with a book that could not have been adapted otherwise. It's star quotient is truly staggering! Meryl Streep handles her character with remarkable grace. Winona Ryder is captivating and makes yet another radiant impression. Glenn Close is an especially powerful presence. And Antonio Banderas works his matinee-idol magic!

Director Bille August has clearly been galvinized by the passion and colorfulness of this story!"

LOS ANGELES DAILY NEWS, Yoshua Rav

"A FIRST-RATE FILM FILLED WITH LARGER-THAN-LIFE PASSIONS!

Compelling and powerful! The star power is encouraging! Jeremy Irons is superb and Meryl Streep is wonderfully radiant! Antonio Banderas reaffirms his heart-throb status"

NEW YORK POST, Thelma Adams

"I WAS SEDUCED!

"The House of The Spirits' has an old-fashioned sweep that's rare in contemporary movies! The cast is nothing short of magnificent! The masterful pairing of Meryl Streep and Glenn Close is one of the movies greatest gifts!"

KCOP-TV, Gary Franklin

"AMAZING! A 10!

A powerful love story with a stellar cast and amazing performances!"

WNBC-TV, Pat Lenkinson

"THE HOUSE OF THE SPIRITS SOARS!

Continuously fascinating, gloriously photographed and sublimely acted! Glenn Close is brilliant!"

of plotting, in the annals of courtroom drama. The re-creation of the period in hairstyles, costumes, hippie commune (sostuo "No property, no law, just love"), etc., is well done. And the relationship between shiftless son and hard-toiling father (Pete Postlethwaite) has a high and palpable level of tension. At least it starts out that way. The development of it into something closer and warmer is less interesting in itself than in the mere fact that the two of them are allowed to share the same prison cell. Evidently the pitiless British justice system has a soft spot after all. Directed by Jim Sheridan. 1993.

Lightning Jack — Molasses Jack, more like it. A moseying Western comedy about an Aussie outlaw, last survivor of the Younger Gang, and his mute (but not deaf) hostage and then partner. Paul Hogan, who also authored the script, loses the Mr. Congeniality Award to his co-star, Cuba Gooding, Jr., in an anachronistic black performance, an eye-popping, ear-to-ear-grinning, foot-shuffling performance, almost a Buckwheat performance — and very deft for that type of thing. Monkey Trouble — The monkey's no trouble; is on the contrary as fun as your average hurtful. This capuchin, trained as a pickpocket and (excuse the expression) cat burglar, runs away from his nasty master (Harvey Keitel with a kerchief on his head and a come-and-go gypsy accent) and attaches himself to a lonely little girl who has to "distreach" him his bad habits. Unobjectionable kiddiuff. With Thora Birch, Mimi Rogers, Christopher McDonald; directed by Franco Amurri. 1994.
★ (AERO DRIVE IN; AZTEC; CARMEL MOUNTAIN; CLAIREMONT; GROVE 9; HAZARD CENTER 7; NICKELODEON 10; OCEANSIDE 8; UA GLASSHOUSE 6; VINEYARD TWIN)

Mrs. Doubtfire — Robin Williams, that thickset, hirsute Peter Pan, has hit upon another way not to grow up. He's an out-of-work actor and specialist in "voices" (Porky Pig, James Bond, Nicholson, Reagan, etc.), whose life-is-a-party antics finally get old with his wife of fourteen years, and who's booted out of the house. In order to see his three children — he doesn't so much miss the company of his wife — he dons a granny wig, a latex mask, a padded body suit, and a British accent, and obtains a position as housekeeper, in his own former household. This requires the spectator to suspend disbelief at about the altitude of the moon. Or Mars. The fictitious Mrs. Doubtfire doesn't look much like Mr. Williams, but neither does she look much like anything human. All spectators ought to be able to find something to laugh at; the sophisticate will limit themselves to the "heartfelt" moments. With Sally Field and Pierce Brosnan, directed by Chris Columbus. 1993.
● (GROVE 9; NICKELODEON 10)

Naked Gun 33⅓: The Final Insult — A parody of Brian De Palma's parody of Eisenstein in The Untouchables gets things off to a hopeful start. But it's only a dream, and Lt. Frank Drebin (ret.) soon wakes up, and then it's back to the grind: gags on the assembly line. With Leslie Nielsen, Priscilla Presley, Fred Ward, and Anna Nicole Smith; directed by Peter Segal. 1994.
● (CAROUSEL CINEMA 6; CENTER 3 CINEMAS; DEL MAR HEIGHTS; GROSSMONT MALL; GROVE 9; LA COSTA 6; LA JOLLA VILLAGE; MIRA MESA 7; NICKELODEON 8; NICKELODEON GALAXY 6; PLAZA BONITA; PLAZA CINEMAS; POWAY 10; RANCHO BERNARDO 6; SAN MARCOS CINEMAS; SANTEE DRIVE IN; SOUTH BAY DRIVE IN; SPORTS ARENA 6; UA HORTON PLAZA 7; VALLEY DRIVE IN; VILLAGE; FROM 4/8)

On Deadly Ground — Steven Seagal expands his responsibilities from those of the mere star to those of the star-director (like Clint Eastwood, like Jerry Lewis), and it hasn't expanded his humility: his initial entrance on screen is heralded by the line, "Oh, thank God," and the camera there-upon kisses his boots and caresses its way up the length of his entire body to his trademark ponytail. He'd only have wanted to put on the director's hat, he is quoted in the press notes, for a project he could "care deeply about" — namely something to do with the pollution of Mother Earth by oil companies. He cares about this so deeply, in fact, that he would just like to get his hands on the polluters and break their fingers, arms, knees; hit them with lead pipes; stick knives in their heads; shoot them; blow them up; and most poetically, fry them in oil. All this he does, and much, much, much, much, much more

With Joan Chen and Michael Caine. 1994.
● (GROVE 9; HAZARD CENTER 7; NICKELODEON 10; SOUTH BAY DRIVE IN)

The Paper — Director Ron Howard continues to toss and turn and sweat profusely in the grips of bestselleritis: one of those multi-character Arthur Hailey–type things, set this time in the exciting world of newspaper publishing (the fictitious New York Sun; "It Shines for All"), where every day brings a new deadline, a new quest for truth and justice, a new chance to clear the innocent and smear the guilty. Lighter in tone than Howard's earlier bouts with the all-ment, Backdraft and Far and Away — but that simply means overgreased and overstressed dialogue ("I got a prostate the size of a bagel"), and it means that when the Managing Editor (Glenn Close) takes a kick at the hindquarters of the Metro Editor (Michael Keaton), she will land flat on her back like one or all of the Three Stooges. Alongside this, any episode of Lou Grant stands as a monument of artistic integrity. With Robert Duvall, Randy Quaid, Marisa Tomei. 1994.

Philadelphia — For an encore to his Silence of the Lambs, Jonathan Demme offers an olive branch to the homosexual protesters of his depiction therein of a serial killer. His atonement takes the form of a courtroom drama about the wrongful-termination suit of an AIDS-afflicted yuppie lawyer and closet gay: a talking-heads movie with dribblets of consciousness-raising strewn throughout. (Our point of identification is the ambulence-chaser who agrees squeamishly to take the case — Denzel Washington, highly ingratiating — and ultimately attains enlightenment.) Every now and then Demme lets himself from the TV closeups to do some antsy and energetic direction, e.g., the circling camera and changing light during Tom Hanks's exegesis of a Callas aria on the stereo. He continues to flaunt his hipness in other areas, too, with original songs solicited from Bruce Springsteen and Neil Young, and bit-parts assigned to grade-Z movie icons Roger Corman and Charles Napier. Also with Mary Steenburgen and Jason Robards (from Demme's Melvin and Howard). 1993.
★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; FLOWER HILL CINEMAS; HAZARD CENTER 7; MIRA MESA 4; PLAZA CINEMAS; SPORTS ARENA 6; UA CHULA VISTA 6; UA ESCONDIDO 8; WIEGAND PLAZA)

The Piano — Jane Campion (Sweetie, An Angel at My Table) continues to pursue an interest in the tricky cinematic subject of inward states: namely those of a mute-by-choice Victorian Scotswoman and the white-man-gone-native (Maori facial tattoos, Maori bedmates) with whom she has an extramarital affair in far-off New Zealand. At some point the 19th-century Gothic romantic ambience is overrun by a more modern, knowing, unbuttoned brand of eroticism — the Brontë sisters, if you will, elbowed aside by Nancy Friday's perverse, "creative," fetishistic Pouching a spot of flesh through a hole in a stocking, sniffing the bodice of a dress), and, for both the viewer and the slow-on-the-uptake cuckold, voyeurists. Holly Hunter certainly has the metabolic fervor to convince you that a great deal is going on within, but her self-expression through the vehicle of her piano is highly dubious: folk-tinged New Age-y stuff, watery, repetitive, rhythmically monotonous. (The composer is the British minimalist Michael Nyman, best known to moviegoers for his "mesmerizing" — or torturing, according to taste — musical scores for Peter Greenaway.) When this is to be the heroine's sole "voice," it seems crucial that you be able to listen to it without a curled lip. And for a film about the inner life, the characters are significantly lacking in depth. The passions may be all very grand and twisted and mysterious, but the plotting is thin and impatient and facile. With Harvey Keitel and Sam Neill. 1993.
★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; FLOWER HILL CINEMAS; HILLCREST CINEMAS; MIRA MESA 4; NICKELODEON 10; PLAZA CINEMAS; UA ESCONDIDO 8)

Reality Bites — Young love in and for the Nineties — which apparently entails a preoccupation with the Seventies: TV reruns, goldie oldies, wall posters (Saturday Night Fever, Love Story), memorabilia (Charlie's Angels lunchbox). The script, Sum "It Shines for All"), where every day brings a new deadline, a new quest for truth and justice, a new chance to clear the innocent and smear the guilty. Lighter in tone than Howard's earlier bouts with the all-ment, Backdraft and Far and Away — but that simply means overgreased and overstressed dialogue ("I got a prostate the size of a bagel"), and it means that when the Managing Editor (Glenn Close) takes a kick at the hindquarters of the Metro Editor (Michael Keaton), she will land flat on her back like one or all of the Three Stooges. The Scent of Green Papaya — Though its title may sound like some middle-to-lowbrow parody of an Asian art film (no less than Ozu's The Flavor of Green Tea over Rice or Mizoguchi's The Story of the Last Chrysanthemums), and its air of quietude may in many ways live up to that same brow's dimmest and direst imaginings, this is the real deal. The story it tells — of a servant girl in a bourgeois home in the Saigon of 1951, and then in a different home after a ten-year time jump — is simplicity itself. Far more to the point is its overall narrative method, which might be described as one of selective intimacy balanced off against selective reticence. The intimacy, wherever it asserts itself, is little short of microscopic: a slow drip of milky sap on a leaf, an ant carrying off a crumb four times his size, the skinning, shaving, and slicing-open of the titular fruit, and so forth. But it is also impressionistic — discriminatory, discretionary. And it creates an odd sense of emphasis whereby events of major importance are passed over quickly and obliquely while ones of seemingly no importance are dawdled over and examined in minute detail. This of course is deliberate and calculated, and it shifts the focus of the narrative from the conventionally "dramatic" occurrence to the daily one, from individual events to their grander context, from the fleeting moment to the continuous timeline, from one life in specific to life in general. The first feature film of (at the time) twenty-nine-year-old Tran Anh Hung, an expatriate Vietnamese residing in France, fulfills the stiffest requirements of a piece of imaginative fiction. It plunges us deeply into an enclosed world, a particular and particularized place and time and set of characters. (If the place had to be re-created on Parisian studio sets rather than on locations, so much the better. So much the more imaginative. So much the more fictitious.) And it brings this place thoroughly alive, from ants to plants to human occupants to the house itself: a richly textured environment of railings and balusters, of window frames and symmetrical painted grilles, of diaphanous curtains and netting, of flora and fauna — never piled on too much at once, but appreciatively sorted out in closely focused and firmly clamped-down images. It might sound paradoxical to say that by plunging us so deeply into a particular life, the movie opens out onto life in general. But there it is. If we see deep enough, we attain distance. 1993.

Stereo

★★★★ (GUILD; LA PALOMA; FROM 4/8)

Schindler's List — Steven Spielberg's (mostly) black-and-white, three-and-a-third-hour Holocaust film. And the nearest thing to a feel-good Holocaust film that a Holocaust film can be. (The real life hero — a gentile businessman who spared over a thousand Jews by keeping them employed in his pots-and-pans plant — is a reassuring figure for American audiences: a prosperous capitalist, a hedonist, partygoer, womanizer, but also a man of conscience when it comes to the crunch, a philanthropist, a samaritan, a savior. Someone, in sum, to identify with, without too much personal discomfort.) The photography throughout switches willy-nilly between a harsh, sooty, often overexposed documentary style, accompanied at times by a floaty, hand-held camera, and on the other hand a frilly, arty, chiaroscuro style partial to pretty-pretty oozing, dry-icy light; backlit cigarette smoke; out-of-focus raindrops that transform a car window into a hobnail glass — that kind of thing. The sensation is somewhat as if a non-elist were to shift back and forth between the prose styles of Ernest Hemingway and Edgar Allan Poe. The contrasting styles proclaim, and loudly, nothing so much as an absence of style. Worse, an absence of vision. Spielberg has here put together a sort of portfolio of black-and-white, much as he put together a portfolio of dinosaurs in Jurassic Park, a portfolio of artist documenting (in vertiginous camera-work) her generation's quest "to find their identity without having any real role models or heroes." We're intended to take this seriously and sympathetically. Easier seen than done. With Winona Ryder, Ethan Hawke, Janeane Garofalo, and Steve Zahn. 1994.
★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; CLAIREMONT; GROVE 9; STAR; FROM 4/8; UA GLASSHOUSE 6)

Shadowlands — Stuffy film about the airing-out of a stuffy man: namely C.S. Lewis, Oxford don, Christian philosopher, fantasy novelist, and a bachelor shy of "contact." (Anthony Hopkins could play this part in his sleep, and very nearly does.) The airer-out (Debra Winger, as "different" as ever) is his American fan, and ← poet in her own right, and eventually his wife. The worst of the movie's conventionality — given its estimable protagonist — is its anti-intellectualism: as emotion blossoms, it crowds out and diminishes the life of the mind. And the heady talk of the early going ("One can always be so much more friendly with people who can't stay long") gives way to Love Story slushiness. Adapted by William Nicholson from his own stage play; directed by Richard Attenborough. 1993.
★ (HAZARD CENTER 7)

Sirens — A revival of the ever-popular sport of cheek-tweaking the uptight frits, or uptight anybodies. The playing field this time is wild, savage, hurly Australia of the 1930s, where a "progressive" Oxford clergyman (Hugh Grant, a good sport indeed) has been dispatched in hopes of prevailing upon painter Norman Lindsay — no longer infamous, simply not famous — to withdraw his blasphemous Crucified Venus from a travelling art show. Shades of Andres Serano's Pro Christ, Jesse Helms, all that. The lopsided polemic is fleshed out, so to speak, on about the level of a supermarket paperback pastiche of D.H. Lawrence, with the clergyman's repressed wife (Tara Fitzgerald) goaded ineluctably from timid voyeurism to torrid daydreams (stark naked in church, etc.) to actual touchie-feelie with a swarthy stallion-riding Adonis. There is a great deal of good-cause bodybaring, and supermodel — to use the official epithet — Elle MacPherson shows off a bit more of herself than she has shown in any Sports Illustrated "Swimsuit Issue." But liberation, of which she's the most belligerent voice, would be so much more attractive a state, not to mention believable a state, unaccompanied by so much bragging and bullying. With Sam Neill; directed by John Duigan. 1994.
● (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; DEL MAR HEIGHTS; HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA COSTA 6)

Sugar Hill — Drug lord wants out. "I'm consumed by chaos, consumed by guilt, consumed by grief," he confides to us in voice-over. A sensitive, pensive drug lord, not your normal one. And not your normal movie about one. Mopey when it wants to be broodingly inaudible when it wants to be deeply feeling (the black-and-white flash-backs do not get us any deeper); though of course unerringly brutal when it wants to be brutal. Still, any movie that's set in the Harlem of the 1940s and takes its musical cue from a crawling, creeping jazz trumpet (Terence Blanchard's) instead of from rappers and hip-hoppers deserves credit for trying something different. With Wesley Snipes, Michael Wright, Theresa Randle, Ernie Hudson, Clarence Williams III; directed by Leon Ichaso. 1994.

Thumbelina.

Tombstone — A useful fusion of the two finest films on the Earp-Clanton feud, John Sturges's Gunfight at the O.K. Corral and — fancy that — John Sturges's Hour of the Gun. (The most simple measure of the fusion is that the titular gunfight in the first one comes at the very end, and the rest of the movie is buildup; in the second one the gunfight comes at the very outset, and the rest of the movie is aftermath; in the present one it comes just past the halfway point, with roughly equal parts buildup and aftermath.) That Tombstone is fundamentally a remake of a remake of a remake, etc., with plenty of recognizable markers along the way (Boot Hill, Doc Holliday's consumptive cough, Wyatt Earp's Cyrano-nosed Bundling Special), only underscores the pattern and ritual of the Western form. From the start, the movie shows an appreciation of its place in the scheme of things: the expository prologue in black-and-white, narrated by that old cowhand Robert Mitchum, blends scratchy pseudo-newsreel footage (doctored images from the movie to come) together with clips from Edwin S. Porter's granddaddy Western, The Great Train Robbery, and in so doing it creates an inextricable, and quite proper, mix of fact and fiction, Old West history and Hollywood history. In the broadest view, another account of this particular legend may look less imaginative than a purely fictional and original work, but a closer inspection will find multiple cracks and crevices, gorges and gullies of imagination within it. Kurt Russell handles his duties as Wyatt Earp with total command and conviction; and Val Kilmer's Doc Holliday, with the degeneracy of the character veiled behind a foppish façade of Southern-gent dialect, cultivation, and wit, is reminiful of Brando's complete overhaul of Fletcher Christian in Mutiny on the Bounty. The costumes — the Mexican-vaquero motif of the outlaws, the country-parson motif of the Earps — are marvelous. The photography by William Fraker, doubling as Associate Producer, is warm, rich, burnished. And the screenplay by Kevin Jarre serves up some delectable American language: "I'm your huckleberry" and "You're an oak" and "Skin that smoke wagon" and on and on. With Dana Delany, Michael Biehn, Bill Paxton, Sam Elliott, Stephen Lang, Powers Boothe; directed by George P. Cosmatos. 1993.
★★★★ (HAZARD CENTER 7; VINEYARD TWIN)

What's Eating Gilbert Grape — The sort of title that seems highly unlikely to precede a good movie. What follows in this instance does not lower the odds. As a slice of family life in small-town America, the movie is so hell-bent on being "different" as to be unrecognizable as small-town America or as family life or even as a slice. (Lasse Hallstrom, the Swedish director of My Life As a Dog, ought to have felt right at home.) Within its own skewed guidelines, it delivers a couple of emotional payoffs, when the walrus-sized matriarch squeezes herself through the front door in order to rescue her younger son from jail ("My boy! Gimme my boy!"); and again when the older son stops being Prince Myshkin for a moment and tries to slap some sense into his retarded brother. With Johnny Depp, Leonardo DiCaprio, Juliette Lewis, and Mary Steenburgen. 1993.

Beaneries That Strike Nerves and the People Who Love Them

REVIEW
ELEANOR WIDMER

During the past six months, I've encountered a number of restaurants operated by families for families, where the cooking is a few notches above fast food and take-out business rivals sit-down service. The first under discussion is Oscars, which opened on Carmel Mountain Road last year and soon had long lines outside its doors. This response led to a second location, one that I visited in Encinitas. All the way there, my friend raved about the large amount of food at low costs. When we arrived, we discovered an oversized room done in black and white, reminiscent of old-style cafeterias — noisy and full of children. Diners acted as though they were in their own homes.

The menu is listed on the wall — barbecue, pizzas, sandwiches, salads. You place your order with the person behind the counter, and soon your food is brought to you. The top price is $18.95 for a full slab of baby-back ribs accompanied by salad and breadsticks. The least expensive dish is $3.95 for lemon chicken wings with salad and bread. We had the barbecue dinner for two, a half-chicken, a half-slab of ribs, plus Mediterranean salad and hot bread sticks ($15.95).

We took our seats (you select any table that's free), and as we waited we saw a huge pizza sailing toward a nearby table. Without realizing that you may order pizza by the slice, I gave my neighbors a dollar for a taste of theirs. The pizza had a thick crust — it was all rather doughy. I tend to judge pizzas by their crust and prefer the crunchy kind found at Pizza Bozza in Encinitas or the New York style at Sorrentino's in Claremont. At Oscar's, a medium-sized pizza with eight slices costs $7.95, and that's what impressed our neighbors. "We take the rest home and have a snack later," they told me.

Everyone seems to share this philosophy. Most patrons take home the leftover Mediterranean salad, which comes to your table heaped in a large bowl, as well as the breadsticks, hardly sticks at all, but long, soft, doughy rolls; brushed with olive oil and oven-warmed. Since Oscar's is such a success, I can say with freedom that while the chicken, ribs, and salad were plentiful and wholesome, there was nothing distinctive about them. If I were in the vicinity, I might drop in, but I doubt I'd drive a distance for this bargain restaurant. Yet the format at Oscar's strikes a nerve; tons of food, low costs, no frills, and rapid take-out service.

Which brings me to Aladdin, located in a strip mall on Clairemont Mesa Boulevard. It's a coffee shop that serves every beverage from Turkish coffee to Italian sodas to espresso. It offers a full line of bakery goods, breads, and French pastries and has a brightly lit gourmet market with packaged Middle Eastern goods and frozen products. It's also a restaurant with an enormous open kitchen, polished wood tables, and a snack bar surrounded by high stools. The day I visited, one of the waitresses was dressed in a genie costume, the other in a long, embroidered dress.

Food consists of Middle Eastern appetizers, salads, pita sandwiches, hot dishes, and crossover pizzas. Pepperoni pizza is served alongside Sultan's pizza, prepared with lamb, grape leaves, feta cheese, fresh mint, and chili oil. Aladdin is one of the few places that makes its own shawerma (similar to gyros), and if you like snacking — or as it's now called, grazing — Aladdin may be the spot for you.

The hot entrées range in price from $8.95 to $12.95. We ordered the Aladdin platter ($12.95), which held small dishes of hummus, tabouleh, three tiny stuffed grape leaves (dolmas), slices of sausage, three small balls of falafel (ground garbanzo beans, deep-fried), pickles and olives, garlic and tahini sauces, and a disappointing offering of shawerma — bits and pieces of lamb and beef that were overcooked and flavorless. When you gaze upon all these little dishes, you think you're getting a lot to eat. But much of it is salty, and a few items are not especially well prepared when compared to some other Middle Eastern restaurants.

We also selected one order of rotisserie chicken served with basmati rice, a salad, and pita bread. The chicken and rice were comparable to what you'd make at home — good tasting, but not the least exciting or interesting ($8.95). Tika kabob, lamb chunks on a skewer (with salad and hummus), was $11.95, but the portions here are dainty and not filling. Our meal of appetizers and one chicken entrée plus one iced tea came to $24.95 without tip. For dinner at Fairouz Cafe (3166 Midway Drive, 225-0308), an all-you-can-eat vegetarian buffet with soup and dessert is $8.95; the buffet with chicken and meat is $10.95. I always order à la carte at Fairouz and make a meal from tabouleh, hummus, and stuffed grape leaves. The portions at Fairouz Cafe are generous to a fault. Recently, Khayyam Restaurant (437 S. Highway 101, Solana Beach, 755-6343) established a $9.95 dinner consisting of soup plus any entrée on the menu, every night except Saturday. Manal, the chef at Khayyam, was recently chosen by several New York chefs to provide four recipes for an upcoming chef's cookbook. So where does this leave Aladdin?

It's a Mediterranean "nosherie" (snack place) rather than a full-blown dining room. If you order a broiled-chicken sandwich on pita bread for $3.95, you'll be ahead of the game. ■

RESTAURANT LISTINGS

The Reader's Guide to Restaurants is compiled by Eleanor Widmer and represents a selective listing of recommended San Diego County and Tijuana dining establishments. Individual restaurants will appear once or twice a month. Price estimates are based on the latest information available for a complete meal per person, exclusive of drinks and tip. Low: below $8; moderate: $8 to $15; expensive: more than $15. Please call restaurants in advance for operating hours, reservations, and other specific information.

NORTH COASTAL

THE ARMENIAN CAFE 3126 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 720-2235. Both the menu and the physical setting have been expanded — you may now sit on the deck and watch the sunset. Don't overlook potcave (eggplant, beef, and potatoes topped with cheese), the prepared-on-the-premises gyros, and a variety of combination plates. The soups and desserts are terrific. Closed Monday and Tuesday. Lunch and dinner. Wednesday through Sunday. Unique breakfasts that include omelettes with shish kebabs served Saturday and Sunday from 8 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Low to moderate.

THE BRASSERIE La Costa Resort & Spa, Costa Del Mar Road off El Camino Real, Carlsbad, 438-9111, ext.4500. This hotel dining room offers breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Of particular interest is the all-you-can-eat fish and seafood buffet which is served Friday night only, costs $27.50, and includes hot and cold dishes. The cold fish and salads were excellent and so was the smoked salmon. The buffet is very substantial and includes King crab; lobster available upon occasion. Service is outstanding. Continental and American dinners are served other nights of the week. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner: Tuesday through Sunday; lunch only Monday. Expensive.

CHUNG KING LOH 932 Stevens Avenue, Solana Beach, 481-0184. Hong Kong food at its best is served here by an efficient, sophisticated management. White tablecloths and art objects add to your dining pleasure. Be sure to try the onion pancakes, lobster in black bean sauce, lemon chicken and any mu-shu dish. The vegetarian menu offers appetizers, soups, and an extensive list of vegetarian entrées. Deliveries available in the North County area. Chung King Loh may be a bit more expensive than most, but it's worth it. Open daily. Lunch and dinner continuous service Monday through Saturday; dinners only Sunday. Moderate to expensive.

CHANTRO'S RESTAURANT AND MARKETPLACE 3702 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 259-8777. This Southwestern dining room offers a constantly expanding and changing menu. Among the staples are a full range of tapas, wonderful tortilla soup, skewers of chicken and spit-roasted chicken. Very sensuous desserts. Open daily. Continuous service, lunch and dinner. Low to expensive.

FIDEL'S CARLSBAD 3003 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 729-0303. A sister restaurant to the venerable establishment in Del Mar, the stars here are carnitas, quesadilla with chicken, beef or pork, tostada supreme, and breast of chicken Milanese. Open daily lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

JAKE'S DEL MAR 1660 Coast Boulevard, Del Mar, 755-2002. Jake's is the archetype of what people visualize when they say "Southern California." Most of the tables have an ocean view and everyone has a good time, which counts as much as the food. Fresh fish is the best bet here and is accompanied by rice or pasta. Steak lovers won't be disappointed. Nothing fancy, but high spirited. Open daily. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner nightly. Sunday brunch from the menu. Moderate to expensive.

OSCAR'S 1305 Encinitas Boulevard, Encinitas, 632-0222. Here's a good place to take children or to enjoy a low-cost, unpretentious meal. The menu consists of pizza, barbecue chicken and ribs, sandwiches, salads. The best bet is the chicken rib combination for two with salad in a bowl large enough for four, hot bread sticks, and oven-baked thick slices of potatoes. This place is unpretentious and without frills — you place your order at the counter and a waiter brings it to your table — no muss, no fuss. It's a few notches above fast food but fun for a casual meal. Same menu lunch and dinner, continuous service. Open daily. Low.

OVERSEAS RESTAURANT 2818 Roosevelt Street, Carlsbad, 729-0348. This superior Chinese restaurant offers specialties from Hong Kong and Singapore as well as Mandarin and Szechuan dishes. Some of the best appear on a menu printed in Chinese; ask the owner to translate the offerings from that list. Some of the best in the house include Overseas Supreme (chicken, shrimp, beef and cashews placed in a ring of deep-fried mashed potatoes) and shark's fin served with lettuce cups. Satay preparations are also interesting. Gorgeous presentation includes carved vegetables. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Moderate.

RED TRACTON'S 550 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 755-6600. If you like truly mammoth portions of prime rib, steak, chicken, or fish that's fresh, plain, and unadorned, served in a lovely surrounding, try this former L.A. family restaurant. Dinners come with corn on the cob (when in season) or baked potatoes or vegetables — salads are à la carte. Each portion is enough for two people, especially the salads and broccoli. The pan-broiled chicken is a best bet. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Saturday; dinners nightly. Moderate to expensive.

NORTH INLAND

DANTE'S 9379 Mira Mesa Boulevard, 693-3252. Well-prepared Italian and Continental dinners include soup or salad, entrée, vegetables, pasta, or rice. The best buys here are the outstanding early bird dinners, served Monday through Thursday, 5:00 to 7:00 p.m.; includes soup or salad, choice of ten entrées plus vegetables, pasta or potato for $8.95. Soothing interior; piano bar and congenial host. You get your money's worth here. Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinners Monday through Friday, start at 4:30 p.m.; Saturday, start at 5:00 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

DELICIAS 6106 Paseo Delicias, Rancho Santa Fe, 756-8000. This restaurant serves excellent pastas and very thin crusted pizzas a la Spago in Los Angeles. Menu includes fresh fish, salads, daily specials. The room is smashing, but the service and entrées bear improvement. Closed Monday. Lunch and dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Expensive.

HERNANDEZ' HIDE-AWAY Rancho and Lake Drives, Del Dios, Lake Hodges, 746-1444. Noted for its authentic Mexican cooking and very large portions, its followers remain so steadfast that weekends are inevitably crowded. That's because the breakfast/brunch served both Saturday and Sunday until 2:00 p.m. offers outstanding value: steak and eggs, chilaquiles, sausage, beans, and omelets. Fine entrées are chicken enchiladas with spicy sour cream, stuffed quesadillas, tamales, and chiles rellenos. Because it's not easy to find, call for driving instructions. Closed Monday. Breakfast/brunch, Saturday and Sunday. Dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Low to moderate.

MANDARIN GARDEN RESTAURANT 8242 Mira Mesa Boulevard, Mira Mesa, 566-4720. From the dim sum served Saturday and Sunday to its variety of exotic dishes, this restaurant is worth seeking out, especially at dinner. Located in the Mira Mesa Mall, it offers many unusual and hard-to-find appetizers. The noteworthy main dishes are steamed whole fish, twice-cooked pork (spicy), eel served in brown sauce. The extensive menu includes standard dishes favored by Americans. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low to low-moderate.

MIIKI JAPANESE RESTAURANT AND SUSHI BAR 8023 Carroll Canyon Road, Eucalyptus Square, Scripps Ranch, 566-0206. You'll find a first-rate sushi bar tucked away in this tiny shopping center. The fresh yellowtail, scallops in spicy sauce (hotategai), or the special order of baked salmon roll are all wonderful. Forty-two items appear on the sushi list, all prepared by a master chef. The cooked combination plates are also fine. If you sit at the sushi bar, you may be disappointed because chairs, not stools, are used and you can't watch the chef. If you're in the area, don't miss this one. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

150 GRAND CAFE 150 West Grand Avenue, Escondido, 738-6868. This is one of the few gourmet restaurants in Escondido. It's beautifully decorated, offers a large and separate bar, and the top price for entrées is $14.00. Try one of the tempting salads or a pasta dish. The best bet, however, is the filet mignon in port wine sauce. Excellent dill rolls. If you're in the neighborhood, drop in. Closed Sunday. Lunch Monday through Saturday. Same menu lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

ORIGINAL PANCAKE HOUSE 14905 Pomerado Road, Poway, 679-0188. Everything you loved and adored at the Convoy Street address is available here, such as apple pancakes, Swedish pancakes, omelets, coffee with real cream. Open from 7:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. daily. If you love pancakes, this is not to be missed. Open daily. Low.

REAL TEXAS BBQ 6904 Miramar Road, 566-5235. Texas barbecue consists of meat, chicken, and links that are smoked rather than cooked over a fire. Ribs are covered with sauce but for the rest of the items, the sauce is served on the side. The best bet is the half- and-half sandwich, half pork and half brisket served with two side dishes plus a drink (ice tea, lemonade, coffee). This meal is filling and low-cost. All-you-can-eat barbecue dinner served from 4:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m. weekdays and from opening to closing weekends costs $12.75 and also includes side dishes and drink. The food here is fresh and good, the room is unadorned but very clean; and the barbecue meats are succulent. Same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily. Continuous service. Low. Branch at 3755 Murphy Canyon Road, 467-9074.

STELLA'S HIDEAWAY POLISH RESTAURANT Peñasquitos Village Shopping Center, 14723 Peñasquitos Drive, Rancho Peñasquitos, 672-5604. This mom-and-pop Polish dining room serves home-style sauerkraut or dill pickle soup and 18 pungent entrées. Among the best are beef roll-up (roulades), the Polish plate combination, and the boneless chicken breasts. The pierogi are a bit doughy, but all dishes are prepared from scratch. The food is robust, the portions large, the atmosphere induces you to order more than you can eat. Soup or salad and dessert are included with dinner. Closed Monday. Dinners Tuesday through Sunday. Moderate.

LA JOLLA

AESOP'S TABLES 8650 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde Shopping Center, #106, 455-1535. The chief attributes of this Greek and Mediterranean restaurant are fresh food, tasty preparation, and low cost. You may have dinner here for $10.00 or less if you select a "pitza" — hot pita bread covered with chicken, lamb, or vegetables, plus a salad. The salads, one of which is charbroiled vegetables, are outstanding. Entrees are large enough for two. The Moroccan-style chicken pie is slightly sweet and makes a good last course. Reservations for five or more only. Arrive early.

Calendar
RESTAURANTS

All items available for take-out. Lunch and dinner, Monday through Saturday; dinner only Sunday. Low to low-moderate.

AVANTI'S ITALIAN RESTAURANT 875 Prospect Street, 454-4288. You won't be disappointed with the Northern Italian food here. Try the early bird four-course dinner served between 5:30 p.m. and 7:00 p.m. daily for $12.95. Fresh fish and pastas do especially well here. Apart from the fine food there is dancing Tuesday through Saturday and opera singers every other Sunday. Dinner only. Sunday through Thursday 5:00 p.m. to midnight and to 1:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday. Moderate to expensive.

BAKED BY ETTA 7523 Fay Avenue (Vons Shopping Mall), 551-8107. "Just like mother used to bake — only better" would be a perfect description for the lemon poppy seed cake and the chocolate chip coffee cake. During the summer try the fresh fruit, virtually sugarless pies. Cookies and fruit tarts are lovely and many non-fat cookies and cakes are available. You may have dessert on the premises with gourmet tea and coffee. Open daily, Monday through Friday, 7:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m., Saturday to 5:00 p.m.; Sunday to 3:00 p.m. Low.

BONFIRES 8008 Girard Avenue, 551-8200. As its name implies, Bonfires offers wood-fired pizzas as well as salads and pasta — those are the only three types of food on the menu. The atmosphere is casual, the service attentive and if you want a light meal with an ocean view at low cost, Bonfires should please you. It's one flight up but an elevator exists on the left-hand side of the restaurant. Open daily. Same menu lunch and dinner. Continuous service. Low.

CHANG CUISINE OF CHINA 8670 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde Shopping Center, 558-2288. The palatial setting and beautiful art carry this restaurant. The best dishes here are crispy beef, minced chicken in lettuce cups, and honey chicken. The Mandarin and Szechuan dishes are all of average competence. Dinners start at 2:30 p.m. and are served to 11:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday nights. Separate dining rooms available. Low to Moderate.

CINDY BLACK'S 8721 La Jolla Boulevard, 456-6299. Cindy Black prepares excellent French provincial dishes. Her entrees are fresh, innovative, and provide good value. Those on a budget may limit themselves to pasta, rice, or chicken dishes. And on Sunday between 3:00 and 8:00 p.m., a fixed-price dinner is offered starting at $15.95. Fixed-price lunch for $12.95 offers three courses (Friday only). Some outstanding entrees are the Norwegian salmon and the duck with ginger and leeks. Superb service. Open nightly for dinner and Friday for lunch. Moderate to expensive.

KHATOON PERSIAN CUISINE 639 Pearl Street, 459-4916. This Persian cuisine is very healthy, non-fat or low-fat, and the menu consists mostly of meat, fish, and skinless chicken kabobs served with basmati rice and broiled tomatoes. Lamb shanks are available Saturday and Sunday, but sell out quickly. Best bets are the chicken kabobs or the ground beef and filet combinations. Same menu of larger portions is available for lunch and dinner. Families with children frequent this home-style restaurant. Good tasting fresh food, but not too exotic. Open daily. Low to moderate.

MILAGRO BEAN COMPANY 4150 Regents Park Row, 450-2128. Here's a treasure that serves gourmet food at bargain rates. The soups, pastas, and focaccia pizza are all delectable and available for $6.00 or less. While the menu is basically California cuisine, some lowish specialties are prepared Thursday and Friday, among them matzo ball soup. The angel hair pasta and the penne tossed with fresh salmon are outstanding (when available). Or you can make a meal from their bean soup. This place is worth the drive. Open daily. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner, 6:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Low.

MILLIGAN'S BAR & GRILL 5786 La Jolla Boulevard, 459-7311. Old-style American food is at its best here, especially the fried chicken dinner, baby back ribs, and fresh fish. Complete chicken dinners cost $9.95 on Thursday and Sunday. The mashed potatoes are terrific. The upstairs dining room offers an ocean view and is a fine spot for Sunday à la carte brunch. Open daily. Lunch, brunch, dinner. Moderate to expensive.

RUSTY PELICAN 4340 La Jolla Village Drive, 587-1886. Prices are affordable for almost everyone. The fish and seafood are fresh and the preparations innovative. However, the best bet is the sunset dinner served daily between 4:00 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. It offers salad or soup, fish with potato, vegetables, bread, dessert, and beverage for $9.95. Setting is lovely (try to get a table overlooking the man-made lagoon) and service swift. Open daily, lunch Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Low moderate to moderate.

SANTI RISTORANTE 7811 Herschel Avenue, 454-1313. Though this northern Italian restaurant is pricey, the room is soothing and quiet and the pasta dishes outstanding. Tony Buonomotte will prepare any pasta you like in any manner you prefer, but don't overlook broad white noodles with shiitake mushrooms and sautéed mushrooms. Lunch is a best bet and shouldn't be missed if you are entertaining visitors. Lunch Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

SOUP EXCHANGE 7777 Fay Avenue, 459-0712. Does La Jolla offer bargains? It does indeed at the Soup Exchange, an all-you-can-eat soup-and-salad bar where the items (including pasta salads) are fresh, tasty, and inexpensive. Price includes muffins and dessert. Very attractive surroundings and a charming dining patio. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low.

TRIANGLES 4370 La Jolla Village Drive, Golden Triangle, 453-6650. If you're looking for low-calorie, low-fat food at its gourmet best, try this restaurant. The chef-owner is from The Main Chance Spa in Arizona and every dish is gorgeous to behold, marvelous in texture and flavor, and low in cost. The same menu is served from opening to closing so you may have a light meal or a large one depending on your mood. Menus change weekly. We are fortunate to have cuisine of such caliber in San Diego. Closed Sunday. Continuous service: lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Monday through Saturday. Low to moderate.

CLAIREMONT & KEARNY MESA

BACTS 1953 West Morena Boulevard, Bay Park, 275-2064. A full bar, three well-appointed rooms, excellent service, and an interesting menu characterize Bacts. Pastas, chicken stuffed with cheese, seafood are well prepared, though the pastas carry the day. Soup, salad and appetizers are a la carte. Closed Sunday. Lunch Monday through Friday, dinner Monday to Saturday. Moderate to expensive.

EMERALD CHINESE SEAFOOD RESTAURANT 3709 Convoy Street, Pacific Gateway Plaza, Kearny Mesa, 565-6888. This is possibly the best Chinese restaurant for fresh seafood and fish. The chef is from the famous Mandarin Hotel in Hong Kong. Fresh fish, prawns and lobsters are kept in tanks and prepared within minutes after you order. Not to be missed are the lobster, scallops, honey-walnut shrimp and steamed chicken with vegetables. The food here is superb, but it's the most expensive Chinese restaurant in the city. Dim sum served daily, but it's especially fine on Sunday when 100 items are available as well as your special requests. Call for hours. Open daily, dim sum and lunch; dinner to midnight Sunday through Thursday, to 1:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Upper moderate to expensive.

THE GOOD EGG 7947 Balboa Avenue, Kearny Mesa, 565-4244. The three-page menu offers eggs in a skillet, omelets, gourmet pancakes, waffles, and several different kinds of frittatas including vegetarian. Freshly squeezed fruit juices are available and for lunch there's a long list of sandwiches. Good value here. Open approximately 6:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Low.

HSU'S SZECHUAN CUISINE Hazard Village, 9350 F-G Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Kearny Mesa, 279-9799. This restaurant is noted for its hot and spicy Hunan-style dishes as well as for its Szechuan and Mandarin specialties. For Mongolian Barbeque, prepared at a steam table, you have a choice of beef, pork, lamb, or turkey with stir-fried vegetables. Extensive menu with many unusual dishes. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate.

KATZRA 4229 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 279-3430. Lunch here provides extraordinary value because the top price is $5.95, either for the daily special or for combination plates. At dinner, the Katzra special offers chicken teriyaki and tempura, sukiyaki and broiled fish. The sushi bar, housed in a special room, is especially fine with 65 offerings. Open daily; lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

KOBE MISONE 5451 Kearny Villa Road, Kearny Mesa, 560-7399. American prime rib and prime steaks done Japanese-style, either by themselves or in combination with lobster, shrimp, or scallops. All entrées are served with soup, salad, hibachi shrimp, and Japanese-style vegetables. Essentially a Japanese steak house, you sit communally at the teppan tables. Food tends to be well seasoned. Attractive, well-stocked sushi bar. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Low to expensive.

MANDARIN WOK 4227 Balboa Avenue, Clairemont, 272-3972. The chef, born in mainland China, has spent years in Korea, Taiwan, and Japan. The fusion of these cuisines provides some interesting accents to basic Mandarin and Szechuan cooking. Try the wan wan tsu soup (with egg whites), crispy beef in hot sauce, tung ting shrimp with barbecued pork, and lemon chicken. If you fancy noodles, don't fail to order the combination of soft and hard noodles heaped with shrimp, beef, and chicken. Huge portions, all visually attractive (two dishes will serve three handily), and impeccable table settings. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Low to moderate.

THE BEACHES

GUAVA BEACH BAR AND GRILL 3714 Mission Boulevard, Mission Beach, 488-6688. This attractive restaurant serves old-fashioned delights such as meat loaf with mashed potatoes and macaroni and cheese in large amounts at low costs. Many items are under $7.00, so it's possible to eat inexpensively but well here. Try happy hour for bargain items. Dinners only, nightly. Low.

ISLANDIA BAR AND GRILL Hyatt Islandia Hotel, 1441 Quivera Basin, Mission Beach, 224-1234. Although this American and Continental dining room with its view of the bay is noted for its overwhelming Sunday brunch, the à la carte dinners prepared by the chef are excellent in appearance, taste, and high quality. Fresh fish entrees are especially recommended and are beautiful in appearance and taste. You'll have a pleasant evening here. Closed Monday. Dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Copious Sunday brunch, fixed-price, all-you-can-eat buffet. Moderate to expensive.

LAMONT STREET GRILL 4663 Lamont Street, Pacific Beach, 270-3060. The best bets here are the entrees, which range from $11.95 to $14.95 and include salad or soup. Most of these are chicken preparations — the Dijon chicken is a signature dish — and are accompanied by potatoes and vegetables. Other entrees may be scarce compared to the going rates. Fresh fruit dipped in chocolate is included with the meal. This restaurant boasts an outstanding physical feature: a real fireplace and fire in the heated outdoor patio. It's really romantic. Dinners only, nightly. Moderate.

LITTLE ITALY 4204 Voltaire, Ocean Beach/Point Loma, 225-9900. At this branch of Little Italy (the other is on University Avenue) you may eat in the restaurant or take out any item on the menu. This includes pizza, calzone, and pasta. The Italian food, which is for two, consists of salad, cheese pizza, lasagne, spaghetti, and garlic bread for approximately $10.00 to eat there or to go. Old-fashioned Italian recipes have been wedded to take-outs. Open daily. The hours are a distinct advantage, 11:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., to midnight Friday and Saturday. Low.

PACIFIC BEACH BREW COMPANY 4475 Mission Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 274-2537. The menu offers Tuscany-style pizzas (served in oblongs) as well as appetizers and salads. Watch for the Sunday afternoon specials which may include pizza for $5.00. Open daily,

Calendar RESTAURANTS

11:30 a.m. to approximately 10:00 p.m. Low.

PALENQUE 3673 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 272-7816. If you adore La Fonda Roberto's in Tijuana, you'll love Palenque. It serves regional dishes from Puebla, Guerrero, Nuevo León, and Mexico City. All the dishes are quite spicy, so if you prefer fewer chiles, say so before ordering. The best preparations are tortilla soup, pozole (spicy broth with hominy topped with fresh lettuce), tinga poblana (shredded pork with sausage and salsa), machaca (an unusual grilled preparation of sun-dried beef and eggs), and chile relleno topped with fresh tomato sauce. For authentic regional cooking, it's not to be missed. Open daily, lunch Tuesday through Sunday, dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

PIZZERIA UNO 4465 Mission Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 483-4143. The menu has been expanded and you will now find lots of salads and low-calorie items as well as pizzas. The chili has been to healthier offerings which include pastas with light sauces. Try it. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Low to low-moderate.

SHELDON'S CAFE 4711 Mission Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 273-3833. Although the old favorites are still on hand — chicken-fried steak, fried chicken, old-fashioned croquettes (on occasion) and liver and onions — the menu has been revised toward healthier dining. All vegetables are fresh, more fresh fish appears daily, and the breakfast buffet offers lots of fresh fruit. Menu includes light Mexican items. Breakfast buffet every day. Open daily, 24 hours. Branch at 412 Washington Street, 298-1724. Low.

MIDWAY, OLD TOWN & MISSION VALLEY

BUCCANEER'S CLUB 2375 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 296-6572. Seek out this small and eclectic dining room that seats about 30. Every item is made from scratch and while you are in the dining room you can hear them pounding chicken breasts in the kitchen. The soups are Polish, the entrées are French, and you may have Russian pancakes (blinis) with sour cream and caviar. The cooking is homestyle and delicious and the dessert soufflés are the best in the city. Closed Sunday. Lunch and dinner, Monday through Saturday. Low to moderate.

GREAT WALL CAFE 2343 Congress Street, Old Town, 291-9478. The premises as well as the owners are lovely, but much of the menu is standard fare. Do try the scallop and shrimp combination, a vegetable dish called Buddha's Fan, and the aromatic chicken. The tossed noodles (with your choice of beef, shrimp, or chicken) are also good. Please specify if you want them to cut down on salt. Open daily, lunch and dinner, continuous service. Early bird specials 3:00 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Low to moderate.

JACK AND GIULIO'S SPAGHETTI WESTERN 2391 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 294-2074. The restaurant named Giulio's that you know and loved for 30 years in Pacific Beach is now Jack and Giulio's. The top price for any entrée with salad is $9.95. Best bets are angel hair pasta, minestrone soup, their famous wraps, and the pasta and chili. Pizza and giant hero sandwiches are available. Outdoor patio is one of the strong features. This is a low-cost family restaurant with fresh, casual food. Open daily, lunch and dinner, continuous service weekends. Low.

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

DANSK RESTAURANT 8425 La Mesa Boulevard, La Mesa, 463-0640. This is a charming spot for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. The breakfast and lunch menus include first-rate waffles, Swedish pancakes, omelets, and open-faced sandwiches. Dinner offers Danish and American specialties beautifully prepared and served. Service is devoted and the food is highly satisfying. Closed Monday. Breakfast and lunch Tuesday through Sunday, dinner Tuesday and Saturday nights. Low to moderate.

EUROPEAN GOURMET 6126 Lake Murray Boulevard, 697-4848. Slavic dinners are prepared to go. Excellent Balkan groceries are available. Set-down dinners are available next door in Little Russia. Best items to go are stuffed cabbage, hunter's stew, and shish kebab, known as shashlik. Low to low moderate.

KOOTER'S BAR-B-QUE 70 Towne Center Parkway (left off Mission Gorge Road), Santee, 562-7302. You'll love the immaculate, cheerful premises, the friendly service, but most of all the barbecue which is great. You place your order at a counter and the food is handed to you very quickly. The only problem is deciding what to choose from a long list of goodies. You won't go wrong with the barbecued beef sandwich, the onion ring loaf, the giant baked potato, and the baby back ribs or chicken. An additional bar offers salsa, pickles, relish, bread. There's even a trough for washing your hands. Good fun, low prices, same menu opening to closing. Open daily, continuous service lunch and dinner. Low.

LADER'S ITALIAN-CALIFORNIAN RESTAURANT 5654 Lake Murray Boulevard, 463-9919. This charming dining room offers unusual, innovative dishes with hearty recipes from southern Italy and elegant ones from the north. All entrées include soup or salad. Excellent pasta and chicken dishes. Pizza available for takeout only. Closed Monday. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinners Tuesday through Sunday; served very early on Saturday and Sunday. Low to moderate.

LY'S GARDEN 6011 El Cajon Boulevard, 265-1885. Although the extensive menu offers Chinese as well as Cambodian specials, it's best to order the Cambodian food — many of the recipes come from Mr. Ly's family. Be sure to ask Mr. Ly for suggestions, but the following are sure hits: fire pot soup where you cook a variety of ingredients in little baskets plunged into broth; salted shrimp; clams with ginger sauce; hot and sour shrimp; chicken with lemon grass; and beef with sour vegetables. You may also obtain live crab and lobster as well as fresh oysters and shrimp. Daily specials for parties of four or more are great bargains. Don't miss this delightful cuisine. Continuous service, open daily for lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

JYOTI BHANGA 3351 Adams Avenue, Normal Heights, 282-4116. Low-cost, tasty, and fresh vegetarian dishes with international influences. The mildly Indian ones include a different curry every other day. Soups, salads, and nightly specials are good bets. Simple dining room. Saturday brunch, all-you-can-eat, for $5.95 served 7:30 a.m. to noon. Call to find out if Sunday brunch is being served. Open every night for dinner except Wednesday and Sunday. Hours change often, so phone before you go there. Low.

MAMA'S BAKERY AND LEBANESE DELICATESSEN 4227 Alabama Street, Normal Heights (south of El Cajon Boulevard), 688-0717. If you're searching for an unusual light meal or takeout, try the Lebanese sandwiches here. Handmade whole wheat dough is rolled to the size of a small pizza and then filled with the ingredients of your choice: cheese, herbs, chicken, or beef. Sandwiches are served hot and are cooked in a dome-shaped Lebanese oven. Excellent Middle Eastern salads. The food is fresh, unusual, and very low in cost. Dining in the patio only. Closed Monday. Open Tuesday to Saturday, 10:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.; Sunday 8:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Low.

RED SEA RESTAURANT 4717 University Avenue, East San Diego, 285-9722. This Ethiopian restaurant offers a charming bar and authentic Ethiopian cooking. All preparations are served over injera, a sponge-like bread which sops up the gravies and is considered one of the best parts of the meal.

UPTOWN

BUSALACCHI'S RISTORANTE 3683 Fifth Avenue, 298-0119. If you like old-fashioned Sicilian-style cooking — tons of tomato sauce, olive oil, and garlic — then try this converted cottage which serves it. Tomato sauce is so prevalent, even the bean and pasta soup is flavored with it. Sauces tend to be heavy and rich. Lots of pasta dishes, veal, chicken, and fish. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday, 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.; dinners nightly, Sunday through Thursday, 5:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m., Friday and Saturday to 11:00 p.m. Moderate.

CHILANGO'S MEXICAN CITY GRILL 142 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 294-8646. Looking for a bargain restaurant with very low costs and tasty food? Try Chilango's. The same menu is available from opening to closing, daily specials are posted on a board and the food is served on paper plates with plastic utensils. But every item is tasty, original, satisfying. The soups are especially good and so are the charro beans. Try the chicken quesadilla for a light meal. Every item available for takeout. There are only six tables at this storefront, so try to eat at odd hours. Closed Sunday. Open daily, continuous service, same menu day and night, plus specials. Monday through Saturday. Phone about hours. Low.

CITY DELICATESSEN 535 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 295-2747. Jewish specialties are available here which include brisket of beef, chicken-in-the-pot, as well as chopped liver and a wide variety of sandwiches. The great advantage of City Deli is that it's open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner, to midnight during the week and to 2:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Low to moderate.

CREST CAFE 425 Robinson Avenue, 295-2510. Onion rings served in a loaf, homemade potato chips, chicken, steak, pasta, and a variety of extra-lean charbroiled hamburgers, plus the continuous service from breakfast to late night keep this café crowded. The California chicken salad, the sandwiches, and the daily breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low.

EL INDIO SHOP 3695 India Street, 299-0333. The shop has an indoor dining area, or you may brave the elements (such as they are in San Diego) on benches across the street. You won't be disappointed by the pungent, mouth-watering specialties. The entire menu is available for takeout, as are huge bags of tortilla chips. A good value and very good, inexpensive food. Open daily 7:00 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. Low.

GELATO VERO CAFFE 3753 India Street, 295-9269. A fine spot for Italian sorbettos and ice creams, pastries of all kinds, and coffees. Some flavors of gelatos change frequently. Diners may sit and read undisturbed indoors or, weather permitting, outside. Sunday breakfast à la carte includes scrambled eggs, bagels, and salad. Open Sunday through Thursday to midnight; to 1:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Low.

KUNG FOOD VEGETARIAN RESTAURANT 2949 Fifth Avenue, 298-7302. At breakfast, lunch, and dinner, vegetarian and egg dishes are available that are low in fat, salt, and cholesterol or follow the Pritikin diet. Many entrées contain dairy products. The good dinner menu includes quesadillas, pasta primavera, and spinach/mushroom lasagne. Brunch, Saturday and Sunday, 8:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Lunch and dinner daily. Low to moderate.

TASTE OF SZECHUAN 670 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 291-1668. The Mandarin Szechuan menu offers standards with few surprises. But the three best features are the lovely room, the astonishing friendliness of the management, and the hot teas. The Peking duck is excellent and so is the chopped chicken in lettuce cups. If you have favorite dishes they will be prepared upon request in advance. Open daily. Continuous service, lunch and dinner. Open to 2:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday; to midnight Sunday through Thursday. Low to moderate.

DOWNTOWN

ANTHONY'S STAR OF THE SEA ROOM 1360 North Harbor Drive (at Ash Street), 232-7408. In terms of sheer variety and items brought from all over the U.S., few restaurants can equal this mainly, long-lived gourmet fish and seafood house, where you may obtain hard-to-find specialties. Among its remarkable dishes are bread bill sword-fish, loin of swordfish, and Florida pompano. Its hot and cold appetizers number in the dozens. Of course, the coquille Véronique (lobster with grapes), clams Genovese, or scampi Italiano (with pasta) make vivacious light meals. Magnificent harbor view and special-ized cart service. Reservations a must in the dining room. Dress code. Open nightly. Dinners only. Expensive.

THE CHEESE SHOP 401 G Street, 232-2363. This café is open daily and offers outrageously good sandwiches of which my favorites are the Black Forest ham and the roast pork. Muffins and cookies are baked on the premises. Paper plates for food but real mugs for coffee and tea. All items available from 7:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Open daily. Low. Branch in La Jolla, 2165 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla Shores, 459-3921.

THE FISH MARKET 750 North Harbor Drive, 232-3474. This huge restaurant with its harbor view offers a fresh fish market, a separate room for sushi, an oyster bar, and a moderately priced restaurant downstairs. A gourmet room, Top of the Market, exists upstairs where both the menu and the service are more elaborate and cost more. A great advantage of this enterprise is that it offers great views and both lunch and dinner seven days a week. Menus are extensive and fish and seafood arrive fresh each day. If you like and enjoy the offerings at the sister restaurant in Del Mar, you'll appreciate this one more because of its beautiful setting. Lunch and dinner, continuous service daily. Top of the Market serves as a la carte brunch Sunday 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Downstairs dining room, moderate; gourmet Top of the Market, moderate to expensive.

PACHANGA MEXICAN BAR AND GRILL 314 Fifth Avenue (corner of K), Gaslamp District, 235-4543. The name means "happy times," and you'll enjoy this lively restaurant for its dancing instructors mid-week and dancing weekends as well as for the food. The menu runs to five pages and offers Mexican standards that are fresh, well-prepared, and fairly priced. Among the best bets are albondigas soup with meatballs, vegetarian fajitas, chicken tamales, carnitas (pork, with all the trimmings). Very crowded weekends. Open daily; lunch, 11:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.; dinner nightly. Food served to midnight weekends; dancing to 2:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Low to moderate.

PANEVINO 722 Fifth Avenue (Fifth and G), 595-7959. You really can't miss this Tuscany-style Italian restaurant. The pastas are as close to heaven as you can get and so are the first courses which include grilled vegetables. The stuffed focaccias are simply incredible. Also available are fresh fish and chicken. My favorites are the spinach ravioli, the gnocchi (potato dumplings) in a two-cheese sauce, and trenette, a pasta with basil, spinach, and string beans. The exposed brick walls enhance the European feeling. Open daily, lunch and dinner. M.-derate.

RAINWATER'S 1202 Kettner Boulevard, 233-5757. Though this attractive restaurant is noted for its fine steaks and chops, five Maine lobster and fresh fish, especially the salmon in parchment are outstanding here. For lunch try meat loaf and creamy mashed potatoes and on Wednesdays, chicken pot pie. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.; dinner seven nights a week. Moderate to expensive.

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

BARRIO FIESTA OF MANILA (619) 421-3000 Sweetwater Road, Town & Country Shopping Center, National City, 474-0177. This is the mother of all Filipino restaurants. It serves gourmet preparations in a beautiful, appointed room that resembles a garden. If you like the exotic, try squid in garlic sauce, crispy pata (a deep-fried pig's knuckle) and kare-kare, a meat stew with peanut sauce. Should you want to eat more conservatively, order crispy chicken, beef Tapsilog and possibly milkfish. But don't overlook the noodle and rice dishes and the lumpia eggrolls. Open daily, evening service only, lunch and dinner; same menu all meals. Low to moderate.

CASA SALSA 625 H Street, Chula Vista, 420-3665. The bargain of this well-established, colorful Mexican restaurant is called "taco fiesta" and is served on a lazy Susan that holds crocks of shredded beef, seasoned chicken, carnitas, refried beans, cheese, and all the hot tortillas you can eat. Three can eat heartily from this make-your-own taco dish at minimal prices. The carne asada tacos and the tostada supremas are also worthwhile. Huge portions, cheerful atmosphere, swift service. Open daily. Food to 11:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday, bar to 2:00 a.m. nightly. Continuous service, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low to moderate.

CROWN ROOM, HOTEL DEL CORONADO 1500 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 435-6611, ext. 7240. A sunset dinner, called menu du jour, is served from 5:00 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. for $17.50, Monday through Saturday, and is worth noting. It offers $19.00 for the rest of the evening and includes soup or salad, choice of two entrees, dessert and coffee. The "soup, while not ill-filling, is recommended for those who enjoy plain, straightforward cooking. The regular menu offers Continental specialties. The Crown Room is still noted for its lavish all-you-can-eat Sunday brunch. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Moderate to expensive.

MARTIUS Le Meridien Hotel, 2000 Second Street, Coronado, 435-3000. Open for dinner only, this gourmet room of the hotel offers French provincial cuisine. A fixed-price dinner is offered nightly for $49.00 or $69.00 and includes hors d'oeuvre, appetizer, soup, entree, and dessert. One may choose from the à la carte menu. On Thursday night the regular menu is not available because cooking from the various regions of France is featured. Call to find out what region is highlighted on the Thursday you wish to dine. Closed Sunday and Monday; open Tuesday through Saturday. Expensive.

PRINCE OF WALES ROOM Hotel del Coronado, 1500 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 435-6611. The gourmet dining room of this venerable hotel is located one flight down, boasts an old-fashioned windowless atmosphere and offers fine steaks, fresh fish and seafood.

TIJUANA

(The prefix for all Tijuana numbers is 011-52-66. From the United States use the prefix 011-52-66 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's six-digit number.)

EL TAURINO 7531 Sixth Street (off Revolucion), 85-70-75. Located in the heart of the old section of Tijuana, three blocks west of Revolucion, this restaurant will provide superb value in an excellent setting. Basically a steak house, it also offers fish, seafood, and fowl. The price of the entrée includes grilled quail, soup or salad, and mammoth amounts of the main course. Almost everyone orders cabrera, grilled filet of New York-cut steak. The price covers one end of the platter to another. It's the house specialty for good reason. Another fine dish is empapelado, fish and shrimp cooked in silver foil, or you can try one of several shrimp dishes. Fresh lobsters are another good bet. Superior service. The menu is printed in Spanish and English, and the maitre d' speaks perfect English. First-rate bargain for high quality. Open daily 11:30 a.m. to midnight. Continuous service. Low to moderate except for lobster.

LA CASA DE ALFONSO Esteban Cantu, 2007 Colonia Davila, 81-49-55. Don't miss this outstanding Basque and Spanish restaurant that's physically stunning and has some of the best food in Tijuana. I actually kissed the chef's hand because of the cabrito (roasted baby goat). Try the camarones Costa Brava (shrimp topped with pimentos, chiles, and tomatoes). Bacalao, paella, and fish stew also available. Highly romantic setting and gorgeous food. Closed Sunday. Open Monday through Saturday, 1:00 p.m. to midnight. Take Puerto de los Héroes at the border, driving past the Cultural Center and Plaza Fiesta until you see Avenida Libre. Turn right at this sign, cross two stop lights. When you see the building called Marcos Disco, turn right and at the next corner, turn left. The restaurant is immediately to the left.

LA COSTA (Set Galicia) (Seventh Street between Revolucion and Constitucion), 85-84-94 or 85-31-24. An extensive menu, consistently fresh product, and huge portions have made La Costa the reigning seafood house for Americans. Identical lunch and dinner menus offer lobster, shrimp, grilled fish, fish with sauces, squid, abalone, and oysters, all in a variety of preparations. Inexplicably, the prices here are lower than at the mother restaurant, Adrian Padrin. Price of entrees includes soup, salad, rice, dessert, beverage, and after-dinner drink. Almost always crowded. Open daily, 10:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

LA LENA (560 Blvd. Agua Caliente, 86-29-20. The most fastidious American would feel comfortable here because of the charming room, the open grill, and the tortilla maker who prepares fresh tortillas as the diners are seated. Diners come with an appetizer and lively soup, and some of the entrees are extraordinary. Try the puntas ("fist") prepared from marinated beef that's roasted and combined with ham, pork, large grilled green onions and melted cheese, and served with hot tortillas. It's mouth-watering. Guisarra is also recommended. Meat is pounded thin, stuffed with guacamole, beans or cheese, and presented like a quesadilla. Roasted quail and chicken are also first-rate. Seafood available. Open daily; lunch to late dinner. Low to low-moderate. Take Revolucion to the left-hand bend where it becomes Agua Caliente. Continue past the twin high-rise towers of the Fiesta Americana. A large sign marks the restaurant (on the right side of the road). Moderate.

Free & Paid Classified Ads

Free Classifieds

Free classifieds are available to private parties and to nonprofit organizations that do not charge for their services. Only one ad will be accepted per week. Each ad must be typed on a 3x5 card (mailed inside an envelope) or on a postcard. Free classifieds are limited to 25 words or less. Classifieds of more than 25 words cost 60¢ per extra word, and payment must accompany ad. Roommate ads are no longer free. Please turn to the Roommate category for details.

MAILING DEADLINE Free classifieds must be received by 7am Monday, three days in advance of the intended issue: Reader Classifieds, PO Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803. No free ads will be accepted at the Reader office or over the phone.

LATE CLASSIFIEDS Private parties and nonprofit organizations may place classifieds over the phone or at the Reader office, 1703 India Street (at Date), at the rate of $16 for 25 words or less plus 60¢ per extra word. The deadline is 6pm Tuesday.

DON'T CALL US Due to the large volume of free classifieds, the Reader cannot handle visits or phone inquiries concerning them. Please do not call us to ask how to place free classifieds, to attempt to cancel classifieds, or to request information from free ads seen in past issues. The Reader reserves the right to edit or refuse classified ads due to inappropriate content, space considerations, etc.

Paid Classifieds

Businesses (including paid services or functions, rentals, and ongoing, profit-making enterprises) must pay in advance for classified ads. Rates and discounts will be quoted upon request by calling 235-8200 during the phone hours below. The Reader will not be responsible for failure to run an ad or for errors in an ad except to the extent of the cost of the first insertion of the ad.

PHONE DEADLINE Paid classifieds may be placed over the telephone before 6pm Tuesday, two days prior to the issue. Phone orders are with Visa, MasterCard or Discover. Phone hours are 8:30am-5pm, Monday through Friday, except Tuesday when the hours are 8:30am-6pm. 235-8200

WALK-IN DEADLINE Paid classifieds may be brought to the Reader office, 1703 India Street (at Date), before 6pm Tuesday, two days prior to the issue. Office hours are 9am-5pm, Monday through Friday, except Tuesday when the hours are 9am-6pm.

MAILING DEADLINE Paid classifieds can be mailed to the following address and must be received by 7am Monday, three days prior to the issue: Reader Classifieds, PO Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803.

We teach interior design.
We are designers, architects, artists, historians, environmental psychologists, lighting engineers, and business consultants.
We take your career goals seriously.
We like what we do and are proud to share our professional knowledge.
We seek to identify the present and future needs of the interior design profession so that you will be a prepared professional.
We know the value of a good education based on firm technical and aesthetic foundations. We'll make sure you know "how" and understand "why."
We'll watch your skills develop as your portfolio grows.
We'll welcome you, upon graduation, as our colleague in an exciting profession – interior design.

RULES OF THE GAME

1. The prize for solving the Reader Puzzle will be a Reader T-shirt.
2. All entries in the Reader Puzzle contest must be received by the Reader (addressed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803) by 9:00 a.m., Wednesday, six days following the issue date.
3. All entries must be accompanied by your name, address, and shirt size: S, M, L, XL.
4. Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.
5. In the event of disputes or ties, decisions of the judges will be final and arbitrary. We've only got five prizes each week to give away, so if there are more than five winners, we'll have a lottery.
6. All answers must be entered in the space allowed on the puzzle page. And please, no phone calls or trips to our office.
7. One entry per person.

Answers to and winners of Reader Puzzle #801. Lots of Luck.

If it took you 45 moves to solve "Lots of Luck," you're smarter than many of our readers, which is very smart indeed, but not smart enough. You don't have to move autos 3 and 5 to extricate the black car.

The shortest solution is: 25, 26, 23, 24, 28, 29, 27, 19, 20, 22, 11, 12, 13, 17, 18, 28, 29, 23, 24, 30, 31, 27, 11, 16, 9, 10, 1, 2, 4, 6, 17, 18, 28, 29 16, 11, 27, 30, 31, 25, 26 and 16.

(Some people count the last move twice, but we don't hold that against them.)

Shortest solution: 43 moves

Of the 82 entrants, 19 were correct. The winners are:

1. Brian Cobb, Spring Valley
2. Dennis Vernacchia, San Diego
3. Dennis Hlavaty, Spring Valley
4. Dr. John Urey, San Diego
5. Raui Kristin, Venice, CA

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Padre Dam Aqueduct, circa 1929. The Franciscan fathers of Mission San Diego de Alcalá, together with local Indians, labored on the aqueduct and a companion dam six miles upstream from the mission from 1813 to 1816. The aqueduct ran from the dam down along the right bank of the San Diego River as it flowed through Mission Gorge. At aqueduct's end stretched the padre's farmlands, ripe with wheat, barley, grapes, and figs.

The shovel in this photo isn't a mere prop; it belonged to one of the myriad "souvenir hunters" who over the years pried loose the red adobe tiles that lined the aqueduct's bottom and sides. (The tiles had been laid into a mortar bed made from river sand and and locally-burned lime.) It's said that more than a few San Diego homes have a roof or chimney made from purloined tiles.

Phone Matches™ Success Stories:

Paul & Vicki Freiman & Allegra

LOVE TO HIKE, cycle, orienteer. Soul of adventurer! Simple lifestyle. Calm attitude. Wants feminist who enjoys life. Positive, 40, 6'2", 200 lbs. ☎

Paul: When I took out my Phone Matches™ ad, I was working the p.m. shift in the operating room at U.C. Medical Center. With those kind of hours, it's hard to find someone.

Vicki: Being a single mother, I couldn't get out and around like before. And I wasn't meeting people at my job, either.

Paul: It turns out that we both work in the same place. I'm on the second floor and she's on the ninth.

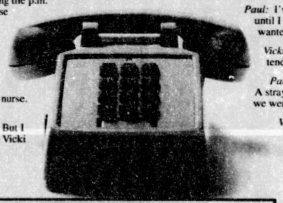

Vicki: Paul is a cardiopulmonary technician and I'm an ICU nurse. But I don't think we would have ever met each other.

Paul: On our first date, we agreed to meet for Chinese food. But I mixed up the restaurants. I went to the Mandarin Plaza while Vicki was waiting at the Mandarin China.

Vicki: I had never been stood up before, and I was thinking, "Well, there's always a first time." Then all of a sudden, boom! There he was, filling the doorway of the restaurant. Right away, I noticed Paul's gentle demeanor. He also had an alertness I liked.

Paul: I was looking for someone intelligent, someone I could talk to. And someone who truly liked the outdoors.

Vicki: Our fourth date was an orienteering meet on Palomar Mountain.

San Diego Reader Phone Matches

Paul: Vicki got lost and I had to come back around to find her.

Vicki: I was not lost. He just finished his course sooner than I did. Things started moving pretty fast after that. On another hike – this one with a group through the desert – Paul waited up for me. That's when I knew it was love.

Paul: I've never been married, and I wasn't going to get married until I found the right person. Vicki matched everything I wanted. I never expected that.

Vicki: He proposed six weeks after we started dating. But I tend to be cautious. I accepted on week ten.

Paul: We went to Flagstaff, Arizona for our honeymoon. A stray cat that was living under our condo gave birth while we were there. Right on our doorstep.

Vicki: We decided to take all of them home.

Paul: I went from being a single bachelor to having a stepdaughter, stepdog and six cats.

Vicki: I wanted a companion, but also a man who had friends and separate interests of his own. I guess you can say we're not the candlelight and hand-holding kind of couple.

Paul: I'm not like most people. I was looking for some unique qualities. On the recorded message I said, "I like to go on six- to ten-hour hikes, I think high heels are ridiculous, and it's silly to paint your nails." I only got one response to my ad. But one response was all I needed.

Respond to Roommate Ads Free

Yes, it's free to call ads that list the Roommate Response Line 235-2297
By using the 5-digit extension number included in the ad, you will hear the advertiser's recorded description of his or her roommate needs.
You can then leave a message if you like.

Get a jump on your competition. Hear the newest ads before they're printed. Call the Roommate Hotline!

Soon after an advertiser places an ad, his or her spoken introduction goes on the Roommate Hotline. This means you can hear new roommate ads before they appear in the Reader. You can access the Hotline 24 hours, 7 days a week by calling 1-900-B44-4663. The cost is just 49¢/minute and you can select the listings by gender, price range and area. New listings are added daily (you'll find the largest selection of listings a few days prior to publication)

• Alleging "fraud" was perpetrated in the recent democratic primary, Duval County Judge Gilberto Uresti has filed a civil lawsuit contesting the results. He has asked the courts to declare him the winner and if they are unable to do so, to call for another election. Uresti's suit reads: "...contestant herein found himself the victim of a massive scheme to defraud the voters of Duval County...." He alleges the scheme involved an "organized group...engaged in a conspiracy to produce illegal votes."

• The San Diego City Council continued to discuss their garbage collection options at a workshop Monday, March 28, and expect to make a final decision tomorrow night at a special meeting to be held at city hall. Mayor Alfredo E. Cardenas proposed that the city buy a truck and do the job itself. "I'm hoping we get participation; from everyone," said Cardenas. "It will be a lot easier for everybody if we do it this way."

• Duval County Attorney José Ramón Falcon has filed misdemeanor charges against Alice resident Raul Martinez for allegedly allowing illegal dumping on property he owned west of San Diego. The charges were filed on Monday, March 28. If convicted, Martinez could face up to one year in jail and a fine of $3000. Martinez has already been assessed a $9200 fine by the Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission over the same incident.

• The San Diego Independent School District Board of Trustees has voted unanimously to extend the contracts for the superintendent, all principals, and administrators. The board also accepted, with little discussion, the final report from the Texas Education Agency's recent accreditation visit. The visit was prompted by the junior high's failure to score more than 20 percent passage in the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills tests.

Sonny Bono Named New Head Coach of Dallas Cowboys

By Patrick Daugherty

SPORTING BOX

Baseball highlights: Darryl Strawberry, gimping along on the last two years of a five-year $20.25 million-dollar contract, celebrated opening day by entering drug rehab. He will continue to be paid by the L.A. Dodgers while on the "disabled" list. Darryl's seven-year romp through the newspapers has included reports of wife beating, threatening his wife with a handgun, fathering a son with a woman not his wife, one previous round of rehab, an arrest for girl-friend beating, and a recent report that he is the subject of an IRS investigation. Barring arrest and conviction for stealing atomic secrets, insiders expect Strawberry to return to the team.

To no one's surprise, the Padres have the lowest payroll in major league baseball: $13,529,333. But how cheap is that? The San Francisco Giants pay out $40,054,300; the L.A. Dodgers pay $37,194,000. The Padres (last year 61–101) have promised that this year will be different, and to show their good faith the team has recently begun loading up for another run at the pennant by signing A.J. Sager and Keith Lockhart, at the major league minimum of $109,000 each.

From the "Now We're Going To Have Some Fun" file: Human wreck and new Dallas Cowboys head coach, Barry Switzer, got a dose of reality when his very first team meeting ran amok. It seems Michael Irvin interrupted Switzer's groveling monologue adoring team owner Jerry Jones to discuss contract difficulties and then, finding no satisfaction, simply walked out.

It's hard to pick one year and call it Barry Switzer's best, but let's try 1989; the year three of Switzer's Oklahoma University players were charged with rape, another shot a teammate, and Charles Thompson — the team's starting quarterback — was indicted on charges of cocaine possession. All this happened within 32 days. This was too much, even for Big Red boosters, even for the OU class of '49 which threatened to cancel its 40th reunion if Switzer wasn't fired. Switzer resigned.

But now, after five years, Switzer's found a job in football and you ask, Are the Cowboys going to be an exciting team to watch? You betcha, football fans. Get this: during 16 seasons as head football coach at the OU, Switzer won 12 Big Eight titles, and three national championships (1974, '75, and '85). Now that's exciting isn't it? Also exciting is the fact that he ran the ball 87 per-cent of the time. One year, he hit near perfection and ran the ball 92 percent of the time.

The exciting question on everyone's mind was, Will he run the ball left, right, or maybe up the middle?

After he resigned in 1989, Switzer continued to run his insurance agency, started a chain of health and fitness centers, brought his business savvy to bingo parlors on Indian reservations, and a lassoed a food marketing corporation. He also had his television show Switzer & Co., and was a radio color man for Arkansas football.

In 1972, Switzer's ex-bootlegger father was shot by his mistress and died in a car crash on the way to the hospital. Earlier, his mother committed suicide, moments after Switzer (then a student at the University of Arkansas) refused to kiss her. Is this a fun guy to be around or what?

Switzer has admitted, during a court case, that he'd had an affair with the wife of one of his assistants. Nowadays, that assistant coach, Larry Lacewell, oversees recruiting for the Dallas Cowboys. Let us all sing the Dallas Cowboys fight song together!

The Cowboys have long-term contracts with Troy Aikman and Emmitt Smith. Aikmen has already fled Switzer once, transferring from OU to UCLA to escape Switzer's exciting offense. but Michael Irvin will be a free agent after this year. And how about, Kevin Gogan, Nate Newton, Mark Stepnoski, Tony Casillas, Ken Norton, and Daryl Johnston? How long will they stay, particularly after Jimmy Johnson begins beckoning from Miami or Charlotte?

Even forgetting, for a moment, Switzer's odious character, the fact is, college coaches bomb in the NFL. The names Bud Wilkinson, John McKay, Dan Devine, Frank Kush, Tommy Prothro, Dick MacPherson, and Darryl Rogers come to mind. Too soon to tell about San Diego's Bobby Ross. The low-rent mind games and sis-boom-bah appeals work on 19-year-old kids who, like actors or writers or musicians, will do anything to break in. It doesn't work on men earning three million dollars a year who can be picked up by a dozen teams the moment they're free.

But none of this is about coaching or winning. It's all about proving that Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is a football man. It's all about the ugly elephantine ego of a team owner who has said that any one of 500 men could coach the Cowboys, including himself. Well, he's picked number 499 and we will shortly see if these two loony tunes can run the show. In the meantime, if Switzer wants to keep his job he better get some thick kneepads. Groveling is hard on the knees.
