Ramona Then, Ramona Now

By Sharon Douliage

He's nice to me — you never know — pulling the key from his shorts. "Go ahead!"

Palm fronds littering the streets, the San Diego, the Santa Monica dust in my eyes.

Ventura's third-floor apartment is in an old place a block off Sunset, his living-writing space. He says what everyone from Ramona bears all their lives, "Ramona! That's near Hemet, right?"

He says, "Memory is a record not of events but of their imprint on the soul ... an imprint that may bear little relation to what really happened." I say, "That's where we differ as writers. My soul seeks to know what really happened."

He says, "History is the record of what happened. The recording. I say, "To record, reconsider, to remember, to pass back through the heart, but is there not a word for what actually happened, recorded or not?"

Neither of us can think of it.
Mental-Health Hotel Called Crazy By Critics

By Jane Reynolds

Last month, the Centre City Development Corporation made a move that has some local real estate experts shaking their heads. The CDC, with the help of the San Diego Housing Commission, invested more than $60 million in two hotels to be built near the civic campus. The hotels will house about 400 rooms, with the majority of the rooms set aside for low-income tenants.

But not everyone is happy with the decision. Some experts believe the hotels will be too expensive for the residents they are intended to serve.

The hotels are being built on the site of the old Municipal Auditorium, which was razed in 2001. The project is expected to be completed by 2025.

Filer Stirs Sewage Pot

By Melinda Pimentel and Nancy Wenzler

Congressman Bob Filner claims the Environmental Protection Agency has had a change of heart. Instead of fighting with the City of San Diego to upgrade the city's sewer system, the EPA has agreed to work with the city to improve the system.

In a letter to city officials, Filner wrote, "I have received assurances that the EPA is willing to work with the City of San Diego to upgrade the city's sewer system." The letter was sent after city officials met with EPA officials to discuss the issue.

Filner's statement comes as the EPA has been under pressure to meet its deadlines for upgrading the city's sewer system. The system is currently not meeting federal standards.

The City of San Diego has proposed a $2.5 billion upgrade project, which would be funded by a combination of federal and local grants.

In response, the EPA has agreed to work with the city on the project, but has not yet committed to funding any portion of the project. The city is currently in the process of developing a plan for how the project will be funded.

The EPA's decision comes as the city faces increasing pressure to improve its sewer system. In recent years, the city has experienced several spills, which have contaminated local waterways.

The City Council is expected to vote on a resolution later this month, which would authorize the city to enter into a memorandum of understanding with the EPA. The resolution would allow the city to begin the process of developing a plan for the project.

The city has been working on the project for several years, and has already invested millions of dollars in preliminary work.

Will Union-Tribune’s Gory Cocoon Coverage Net a Pulitzer?

By Thomas E. Arnold

Joe Holley, who until the summer of 1990 was editorial-page editor of the Tribune, is stirring things up among the ranks of his ex-Union-Tribune colleagues. Now a Saigon-based War Correspondent, Holley wrote a lengthy article on his month's stay in Saigon as a guest of the Vietnamese government for the Los Angeles Times. Holley's work was reprinted in the San Francisco Chronicle, whose editor praised it as being of sufficient quality to have been distributed to major news services and published in national newspapers. Holley's writing on Vietnam has also been syndicated by the Los Angeles Times and the San Francisco Chronicle.

The dramatic opening paragraph of Holley's article read: "Holley could not be stopped. He was a man on a mission, determined to take on the Union-Tribune over the past six months, a battle that has been raging in the San Diego Union-Tribune, and is reaching its climax. Holley's reporting is the most comprehensive and insightful coverage of the Vietnam War and the US military presence in Vietnam in the past decade. His reporting has been praised by the Los Angeles Times and the San Francisco Chronicle for its depth and accuracy. Holley's work has been distributed to major news services and published in national newspapers."
Ramona Then, Ramona Now

Sometimes, the past is not just a memory, but a living, breathing entity. It is woven into the fabric of our present, shaping the future. This story is about one such entity: Ramona. A name that has been synonymous with California, with its unique charm and spirit. It's a story of change, of evolution, but also of nostalgia. Let's journey back to the early 1900s, when Ramona was a popular tourist destination. It was a place of beauty, a place of adventure. The town was bustling with activity, with visitors from all over the country coming to experience the natural wonders of the area. It was a time when Ramona was everything:

- A place where people could escape the rigors of daily life. The town was known for its warm climate, its beautiful beaches, and its lush forests.
- A place where people could experience nature. The town was surrounded by mountains, rivers, and lakes, offering opportunities for hiking, fishing, and boating.
- A place where people could enjoy the arts. The town had a thriving arts community, with galleries, museums, and theaters. It was a place where people could appreciate the beauty of the natural world, and the beauty of the human spirit.

But as time passed, things changed. The town began to lose its luster. The tourism declined, and the population began to dwindle. The once-bustling town became quiet, isolated, and forgotten. It was a time when Ramona was everything:

- A place where people could escape the past. The town was known for its history, its stories, and its legends. It was a place where people could forget about the future, and just enjoy the present.
- A place where people could experience the past. The town had a thriving history community, with museums, historic sites, and events. It was a place where people could learn about the past, and the lessons it taught.
- A place where people could enjoy the present. The town had a thriving arts community, with galleries, museums, and theaters. It was a place where people could appreciate the beauty of the natural world, and the beauty of the human spirit.

But then, something happened. The town began to change again. The tourism started to increase, and the population began to grow. The once-quiet town became alive, vibrant, and full of life. It was a time when Ramona was everything:

- A place where people could escape the past. The town was known for its history, its stories, and its legends. It was a place where people could forget about the future, and just enjoy the present.
- A place where people could experience the past. The town had a thriving history community, with museums, historic sites, and events. It was a place where people could learn about the past, and the lessons it taught.
- A place where people could enjoy the present. The town had a thriving arts community, with galleries, museums, and theaters. It was a place where people could appreciate the beauty of the natural world, and the beauty of the human spirit.

And so, Ramona continues to evolve, to change, and to grow. It is a place where people can find something for everyone. It is a place where people can escape, experience, and enjoy. It is a place where people can find beauty, in the natural world, and in each other.

But no matter how much things may change, one thing will always remain the same: Ramona is a place of beauty, a place of adventure, a place of history, a place of art. It is a place where people can find something for everyone, and a place where people can find something that is unique to the town. And that will always be Ramona.

In 1984 I was considering the combination of what I was doing at 10:00 p.m. — that I'd promised not to answer the phone. Suddenly the phone rang. I had to hear a message, I had nothing to do but stand there and answer the phone. I saw a bright light through the door, went down the stairs. I should have been alert about how easy it was to turn on the oven in the kitchen if you didn't close the door. I heard the sound in the kitchen and ran in. I saw a bright light through the door, went down the stairs. I should have been alert about how easy it was to turn on the oven in the kitchen if you didn't close the door. I heard the sound in the kitchen and ran in.

From the dictionary I have bright the possibility that I've had a bad memory for not wanting to understand. I'm not sure if the phone rang. I had to hear a message, I had nothing to do but stand there and answer the phone. I saw a bright light through the door, went down the stairs. I should have been alert about how easy it was to turn on the oven in the kitchen if you didn't close the door. I heard the sound in the kitchen and ran in. I saw a bright light through the door, went down the stairs. I should have been alert about how easy it was to turn on the oven in the kitchen if you didn't close the door. I heard the sound in the kitchen and ran in.

The Electrical 2012. I was living in Car and Carl. At 10:00 p.m., I called one of the two rooms in the apartment. I saw a bright light through the door, went down the stairs. I should have been alert about how easy it was to turn on the oven in the kitchen if you didn't close the door. I heard the sound in the kitchen and ran in. For Mama, being able to drive was her most important accomplishment. She learned to drive while she was pregnant with my sister, and she had her license when she was 20 years old. Her parents, who were both in their 90s, were very proud of her. Mama's driving license was her most prized possession. She had a brown leather purse with a small key ring and a metal frame that held her license. She showed it to everyone she knew and was very proud of her ability to drive. She even showed it to her doctor when she visited him. Mama was a very strong and independent woman, and her driving license was a symbol of her independence.

Jennifer and Dean Sipes

I LOVE BAJA, camping, SCUBA, 4-wheeler beaches and the mountains. ’M 33, 29 with brown hair and green eyes. Hs. 30-40 professionalさんが活動している。

Jennifer: I moved back to San Diego after graduating from UC Davis, and I didn’t really know anybody. Some friends told me that the Phone Matches™ was a good way to meet people.

Dean: About a year and a half ago, I was a couple of ads myself. I met some nice people and made some friends, but nothing more.

Jennifer: I got about 10 responses to my ad. Dean stood out because we’re both in medical professions - he’s a paramedic, and I’m a veterinarian.

Dean: When we met I already had a trip planned to Mexico with a group of friends. Jennifer and I called the lady at the desk and she liked camping - I asked her to come along.

Jennifer: One whole week on a beach in Mexico to the showers. We saw each other at our grandparents.

Dean: We went out one day on a sailboat that captured. It took us three hours to go back over. This was Jennifer’s first sailing trip and she handled it fantastically. I thought, “If she can make it through sailing.”

Jennifer: As we were floating in the water he said, “See, I told you there’d never be a dull moment with me.”

Dean: We’ve been married about a year and a half now, on January 15.

Dean: We were planning a big wedding that cost thousands of dollars, but one rainy afternoon we decided to use the money to buy a house instead.

Jennifer: So we called our families and our friends and said, “Can you meet us in Las Vegas tomorrow?”

Dean: Everybody dropped what they were doing and went. They spent the whole weekend with us.

Jennifer: Now we’re working on the house together. We’ve planned, painted, sanded, etc. We’ve both ambitious. We’re doing it ourselves. Some day, we’d like to retire and sail the world. Some day soon.

ART

(From the 17th century on, in the late 18th century, in the 19th century, and in the second half of the 20th century, there are many examples of this phenomenon. In the 18th century, the influence of Baroque and Rococo styles became prevalent, leading to a more ornate and decorative approach in art, particularly in the decorative arts and architecture. This period saw the rise of neoclassicism, which sought to revive the classical ideals of antiquity, resulting in a more simplified and idealized aesthetic. In the 19th century, Romanticism emerged, emphasizing emotion, individualism, and the sublime, leading to a more expressive and dynamic approach in art. The 20th century witnessed a diverse range of movements, including modernism, which sought to break away from traditional forms and embrace new artistic paradigms, and postmodernism, which challenged the norms and structures of modernism, leading to a more eclectic and diverse approach in art.)

Sensory Response

The essence of art is not just in the visual or the auditory elements, but in the overall sensory experience it provides. Art can evoke emotions, stimulate thoughts, and challenge our perceptions. By engaging our senses, art can transport us to different worlds, offer new perspectives, and inspire us to see things in a new light. Through this sensory response, art becomes an integral part of our lives, enriching our experiences and expanding our horizons.

The Experience of Art

Art, in its various forms, has the power to transform and enrich our lives. It provides a medium through which we can express ourselves, explore our emotions, and connect with others. Art allows us to see the world from different perspectives, challenging our assumptions and broadening our understanding. By engaging with art, we can develop a deeper appreciation for the beauty and complexity of the human experience.

Art, the Universal Language

Art transcends cultural and linguistic boundaries, providing a common language through which people from different backgrounds can connect and communicate. It has the power to bridge divides, fostering understanding and empathy. Through art, we can learn about the diverse experiences of others, celebrate cultural differences, and promote unity. Art is a UNIVERSAL force that brings people together, creating a shared humanity.

Art, Education, and Innovation

Art education is essential, as it provides the tools and inspiration for creativity and innovation. Through exposure to a wide range of artistic expressions, students can develop critical thinking skills, problem-solving abilities, and a deeper understanding of the world. Art education encourages students to think outside the box, embrace new ideas, and explore possibilities, preparing them for a future of constant change and innovation.

At the heart of the art world, there is a perpetual cycle of creation and destruction, reconstruction and reinvention. This is a natural part of the process, as art evolves to reflect the changing times and the shifting perspectives of its audience. Through this cyclic nature, art remains relevant and meaningful, serving as a constant reminder of our capacity for innovation and the power of imagination.

Hey, Dude, Can I Interview Ya?

I couldn't have any losers, druggies, drunks representing my publication.

A building journalist at Mesa College, I was looking at more than just interviews. I was looking for people who wanted to spread the word about the school's improving reputation. I was looking for people who wanted to be part of the change. The problem was, I had to find someone who had the time, the energy, and the enthusiasm to be interviewed. That's when I thought of you. You've always been a reader, a writer, and a thinker. You've always had a passion for the school and for its future. And you've always been willing to share that passion with others.

We could talk about the school's history, its traditions, its future. We could talk about the students, the faculty, the administration. We could talk about the challenges the school faces, and the opportunities it presents. We could talk about the school's impact on the community, and the community's impact on the school. We could talk about anything you want. As long as we can do it in a way that's respectful, informative, and engaging.

I know you're busy, so I'll keep this brief. Just tell me when you're available, and we'll make it happen. It doesn't have to be a big deal. It doesn't have to be perfect. It just has to be real. Real about the school, real about the community, real about the future. And if you're willing, I'll make it happen.

Thank you for your time. I look forward to hearing from you soon.

NEW GROWING WOMEN

PICTURE STORY
by the San Diego Historical Society

LITTLE LANDERS bell pavilion, circa 1912. Incorporated in 1908, the "Little Landers" area in south San Diego was once the Bolker Ranch by visionary William Smythe. He was an orator and journalist who envisioned a California utopia where all that was required for living was "an ace and a willing heart." Smythe formed a corporation that purchased 700 acres of land in the Tia Juana Valley adjacent to the Mexican border and subdivided it among middle-class "landers" doctors, artists, working-class people, all of whom desired a simpler, more affordable life. No hired labor was to be allowed in the colony — its inhabitants planned on reaping only what they sound, with the surplus used to purchase what they couldn't be grown.

The Little Landers folk story is that in 1917 the Tia Juana valley "San Ysidro," in honor of the so-called "Flowman Saint" who was the patron saint of farmers in Old Spain. Although the colony managed to survive from 1908 to around 1916, flash floods, influenza and the outbreak of World War I led to its ultimate closure. (Also mentioned as a factor in its demise were the spotty results the neophyte Landers had with their agriculture; although many boasted of being self-sufficient, apparently they were not, being unsuccessful at selling their surplus produce outside of the colony.)
