YOU AGAINST THE TABLE

FATS AT NIGHT

BY PETER GRIFFIN / PHOTOGRAPHS BY ROBERT BURROUGHS

When I was a kid growing up in the late '50s, there was a push to make pool a family game. I remember ads showing "Mom" — permed blond, high heels, and in a chemise — demonstrating for Junior — red-headed, freckly-faced, about 11 — the correct stance for the break. Dad stood by, usually with Sis, anxious to participate, observing good, clean family fun. But it didn't work. And you don't need Freud to tell you why. Pool is not just a game. Pool is a sexy game. And sex is always there, below the surface, when people play. (CONTINUED ON PAGE 18)

Hat Tip To Manson

Congratulations on your cover article about Palestinians in San Diego ("Jesus Christ Walked By Right Outside My House," August 18). It is great to see the Reader leading the way to the truth about the Palestinians. "Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter." Isaiah 26:2

I read your paper during my frequent business visits to San Diego. Please allow me to tip my hat to Bill Manson, who took the time to develop such a wonderful story about the Palestinians, their humanity, and their suffering.

Issam Nashashibi
Newport Beach

Congratulations!

Congratulations! You have won the Saddam Hussein journalism award for being co-opted without thought or verification in spreading Arab propaganda ("Jesus Christ Walked By Right Outside My House," August 18).

In 1948, as the British abandoned their mandate over Palestine, all surrounding Arab countries joined the peace-loving Palestinian Arabs in what was to be a concerted massacre of the Jews. Only the Jews won and the Palestinian Arabs ran, some to San Diego.

L.J. Kamm
Ocean Beach

One Of The Greatest

The article on the Palestinians is probably one of the greatest stories you have ever done, and I think you ought to be congratulated ("Jesus Walked By Right Outside My House," August 18). The Palestinian people have been driven out and have been exiled all over the world, and I'm glad to see this story printed.

Michael Praetorius
San Diego

Inappropriate And Inaccurate

While reading Bill Manson's article entitled "Jesus Christ Walked By Right Outside My House" (August 18), it becomes obvious how myth, memory, and an extreme political agenda all serve to create a scenario which paints Israel and Israelis as devils. How ironic the very stereotypes that the Palestinians interviewed in the article fought against are the very ones they use to smear their opponents. How sad that such hyperbole, exaggeration, and opposition to the peace movement is articulated at a time when peace between Israel and her Arab neighbors appears to be on the verge of reality.

Of course, human nature being what it is, such commentary is neither unusual nor should come as any surprise to anyone aware of Middle Eastern history. I am writing, however, to correct one item of misinformation which dealt with the ADL (not the Anti-Discrimination League but the Anti-Defamation League) and dealt with a textbook considered for adoption by the San Diego Unified School District.

The Anti-Defamation League, as well as other organizations and individuals, both Christian and Jewish, protested the book as unbalanced in a number of important areas. What your article fails to point out, given the limited scope of your interviews, is that the Anti-Defamation League not only worked with the publisher of the textbook, but also with the author, who was accurately identified in your article as a professor of Arab descent. The changes in the book were agreed to not only by the publisher but by the author as well.

What is lost in the discussion is that we, as an American organization, have the same rights to protest that which we believe to be unbalanced, biased, or flawed, as do any other individuals or groups, including Arab organizations. There were no threats made to either the publisher or the school district and, to the best of my knowledge, the conclusion of the controversy was amicable and was acceptable to the parties involved.

It is both inappropriate and inaccurate to suggest that the end result of the process came about because of ADL pressure on the publishers.

Morris S. Casuto
Director
Anti-Defamation League

I Love This Paper

I'm calling to give you a compliment and make a suggestion. I picked up the Reader for the first time, being new in the area, and I saw the "Animal Deaths" column with all the stories about the animals and then the one about "Swim Here Often" about the dolphins ("City Lights," August 18). I thought it was such great reporting. I called up and found that these were old stories that were run because someone's on vacation. These are such excellent columns. I was just hoping you would have an animal column from now on because there is stuff all the time, and as an animal lover myself, the journalism really gives so much respect to the facts, and it's not biased one side or the other. I would get your paper every week and read it. I just think it's wonderful. Thank you very much

GAY ISSUES

Dead Calm

Irked by media preoccupation with the Gulf War, members of militant AIDS activist group

ACT UP last week chained themselves to an office desk at PBS's MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour, hogged CBS anchor Dan Rather's camera time, and accused us all via a full-page ad in the Village Voice of murder by lassitude. Also recently, activists from both ACT UP and Queer Nation, another gay rights group with chapters nationwide, demonstrated at Pete Wilson's inauguration.... While these two groups have been proving their robustness elsewhere, gay activism in San Diego has remained, if not nonexistent, at least sickly. ACT UP's most recent San Diego chapter died last summer. It had been the second attempt made at sustaining a local membership. Now San Diego gay activists have begun to meet weekly under the banner of Queer Nation.

"But," as a source at the San Diego Gay Times notes, "the jury's still out on whether Queer Nation will survive locally."...

Max Stalheim worked with ACT UP in Los Angeles before he moved here a year and a half ago.... Stalheim explains that what he found upon his arrival here was a lack of motivation on the part of local gays and a lack of respect for ACT UP within the gay community. "We had a couple of demonstrations, but after several months of trying to stimulate interest, it fell apart."...

By late last summer, Stalheim was thoroughly disillusioned. The group was disbanded. He blames ACT UP's local failure on San Diegans' laziness and conservatism. "When it comes to associating with a militant organization, people just don't want to be seen....

"What," he demands, "is it gonna take to stir this town up?"

The Death of Dave Adams

In the photograph hanging on the living room wall, Dave Adams casts a coy, sidelong smile at the camera. He's sipping champagne from a red high-heeled slipper. He looks young, fresh-faced, buttoned-down and pressed, unburdened.... The photo was taken in June of 1986 as Adams celebrated his graduation from the UCSD School of Medicine. His prospects were ablaze. People sometimes asked Bob Warlick, Adams's lover for four years, if he felt as though he walked in Adams's shadow. Dave Adams was more than a promising anesthesiologist; he had formed a company to market his own inventions, which included an inexpensive battery charger for pleasure boats; he was a scuba diver, a licensed sail plane pilot, a runner of marathons, a walking encyclopedia. But Warlick certainly did not feel cheated. After all, he had Adams, the great love of his life, didn't he?

But in March of this year, less than two years after sipping bubbly from a slipper, the 28-year-old Adams warily approached the pharmacy in Mercy Hospital in search of poison.... Adams had been vomiting all his meals in the past several weeks; it was becoming difficult to hold even water down. His white blood cell count was severely low. He'd lost weight. He was always a scrawny-looking kid, but now he looked shrunken, aged.... He was wasting away from AIDS-related infections. But Adams was able to purchase plenty of morphine, enough to kill 20 people, says Warlick.

A few weeks later, on the evening of Thursday, March 31, Warlick, Adams's parents, and four other family members and friends gathered around Adams for the last time.... The relatives and friends each spent about ten minutes alone with him. Then Adams killed himself with ten milliliters of morphine sulfate.

"When the time came, he pushed the syringe plunger and injected the morphine," recalls Warlick while seated in his apartment in a three-unit building he and Adams owned in Normal Heights. "I had my arms around him. I just kept whispering to him, telling him I loved him as he was dying. I felt him gradually relaxing. It was over, more or less, in 30 seconds, one minute."...

The Contribution

Terrific timing: in the middle of the AIDS epidemic, a plush new gay bathhouse opened last week in the former Jack La Lanne's European Health Spa at the corner of University Avenue and Mississippi Street. And, just coincidentally, the owner of the facility, Greg Vasic, pledged a $5000 contribution to the AIDS Project....

Vasic, who runs the F Street erotica bookstores, said through an employee that he didn't wish to talk about his new venture. That may have something to do with criticism among gays that the...contribution was "blood money," since, after all, promiscuous sex in bathhouses has been identified as a prime perpetrator of AIDS.

"I've heard that, too," says Dr. Hal Frank, chairman of the board and leader of the AIDS Project. "But I don't see any difference between taking money from bathhouses and taking it from certain bars, where a lot of sex takes place. People are going to have sex, in or out of bathhouses. Vasic has been very generous in the past. I'm grateful that he's going to be giving safe-sex seminars and providing prophylactics.... My brothers need to be educated, and wherever the money comes from, I'm going to go work with them."

Harassment in Hillcrest

A chunk of concrete had no trouble getting a table at the Crest Cafe last week. It arrived, through a closed window, shortly after 9:00 p.m. on Tuesday night. The Hillcrest restaurant was filled with people when the rock crashed through the window and landed on the table of two diners. Shards of glass flew, but no one was hurt....

The Crest may be the latest victim of gay bashing, a summer pastime that has apparently fallen into favor with yahoos in pickup trucks.... One such incident happened on May 11, when two men in the back of a white pickup truck poured acid on Branch Hastings as he was walking along Robinson Street in Hillcrest. It was 8:15 on a Sunday night when the truck pulled over and a young man in the front seat asked for directions. The passenger then threw a half-full bottle of beer at Hastings, while the guys in the back of the truck dumped a container of hydrochloric acid on him. They also called him a faggot and yelled other insults at him. ...

The Gay Bloc

An auto tour through Hillcrest and North Park with Charles McKain is like reading an annotated classic: obscure cultural subtext lurks around each street corner, and cozy white frame cottages harbor the promise of audacious political change. "It's a quiet neighborhood, very convenient to get to and close to downtown," McKain says as he maneuvers his car through the narrow streets just east of Balboa Park.... But McKain is not a real estate agent, he is a lawyer and a Democratic activist. He's also an avowed homosexual who has carefully studied each census tract of these placid neighborhoods, attempting to create a city council district with the maximum possible numbers of gay men and women.

"There is some data to show that gays and lesbians turn out in good numbers to vote," notes McKain. "People take it seriously, it really makes a difference in their lives. Especially with AIDS, the government makes a lot of decisions about life and death, and I think that's increased the level of political awareness and dedication." McKain claims that there may be as many as 100,000 homosexual men and women living in San Diego. He estimates that his map of the new Third City Council District includes about 40,000 of them, which would represent about 20 percent of all registered voters in the area....

He proceeds south on 30th Street about four blocks east of the park. "There are a lot of charming old San Diego–style houses here." A moment later he points out two young men engaged in a Saturday garage sale on the sidewalk in front of their house. "You could tell by looking at those two that they are gay," he notes. "There are a lot of gay and lesbian people in zip code 92104."...

Gay Parade Takes Wrong Route

It was an hour-long debate over the virtues of red T-shirts versus pink ones that prompted John Pfingsten to quit his key role in Saturday's Gay Pride Parade. In past years, parade marshals always wore red shirts "because they command attention," Pfingsten explains, but this year one volunteer argued for pink shirts "because they're less aggressive."

Because organizers of the 14th annual Hillcrest parade instituted an extremely democratic decision-making process this year, the T-shirt choice wasn't put to a quick vote; instead, it was patiently discussed until the dissenter relented. That was too much for Pfingsten, a former parade vice president who feels the current group has "wasted much more time squabbling than they've spent working together."

The debates continued after Pfingsten's departure. A suggestion that a "spiritual celebration" be held at the post-parade festival was opposed by three parade volunteers, including a self-described pagan who "abhors" the invocation of monotheism and a radical feminist who said she'd be offended by "any reference to Jesus Christ, or Our Savior, or God … as a 'He.'"…

Past in Motion

The motion to remove Nicole Ramirez Murray from the presidency of the AIDS Assistance Fund of San Diego County was neither seconded nor discussed during last Thursday's meeting by the fund's 11-member board of directors. As a result, board chairman Garrett Dettling, who had made the motion, was unable to present his argument that Murray should be dismissed because of a series of ads he had been running in Friends and Lovers, a local swingers' magazine. The ads, which appeared as recently as last month, depict Murray in seminude drag and describe him as a "sensuous she-male [with] small breasts" who was available for "transvestite and transsexual consultation and counseling." Dettling had learned of the ads from a friend and, had he been given the chance to speak, would have argued that the fund's ability to continue raising money for San Diego AIDS sufferers, particularly from potential non-gay benefactors, would be irreparably damaged once its president's activities were made public….

The Gay Question

Ken Overstreet has been dead for three weeks, but his life is still being talked about by San Diego's gay activists. The 51-year-old Overstreet ran the local Youth for Christ ministry, raised money for the San Diego Symphony, and was a trustee of the Grossmont Union High School District. In July of 1988, he catapulted himself into the headlines by telling a group of fellow Rotary Club members that he was suffering from AIDS. A subsequent San Diego Union story repeated Overstreet's statement that he'd probably contracted the deadly disease from a blood transfusion and noted that "he is married and has two children."

A different version of the Overstreet tragedy was being discussed in gay bars, where Overstreet had been spotted several times in the company of Richard Neff, a young dancer/athlete who has been featured on the cover of Bravo!, a local gay weekly paper. Among gays with whom he felt comfortable, Overstreet made no secret of his relationship with Neff. He accompanied Neff to an interview at Bravo!'s Hillcrest offices, where he was introduced to one of the paper's staffers as "Richard's lover."…

Overstreet's apparently conflicting lifestyles did provoke a bitter response from a columnist for the gay weekly Update. "If Ken Overstreet could not come out and admit that he has AIDS and also is gay, he should have done himself and the community a favor and stayed in his closet rather than granting an interview that ended up being one big lie and doing the gay community and the issue of AIDS a huge disservice." …

CORRUPTION, SCANDAL & EXCESS

Peasant Mayor

Mayor O'Connor is happy. Joan Kroc is tickled. The 37 members of the advisory committee, having rubbed elbows with Malcolm Forbes, are ecstatic. Everyone connected with the Soviet Arts Festival is happy, happy, happy. Everyone except the local Russian community.

More than a few of San Diego's 3000 Russians are leveling charges of grandstanding, cultural ignorance, and downright rudeness against O'Connor and her handpicked group of advisers — advisers the Russians say know little about diplomacy and even less about Russian culture. Worse, they maintain, is the recent about-face by festival organizers who, having previously ignored them, are now seeking the Russians' services as non-paid interpreters.

A local Georgian immigrant, requesting anonymity: "I was excited in the beginning…so much so, I offered my help. It was rejected immediately. The mayor wanted to do it all by herself, obviously." He sneers at the festival agenda. "These things are outdated, low quality. Except for the Maly Theatre and the Tbilisi Marionettes, the rest is bullshit. The eggs are bullshit. Forbes owns more of them than Moscow! That's representative of Russian culture?" He laughs….

The Owners in Question

Who really owns the stately Hotel del Coronado? For years, M. Larry Lawrence has been portrayed in glowing media accounts as having exclusive title. "[Lawrence] bought San Diego's grand oceanfront Hotel del Coronado for $10 million [in] 1963," recounted Forbes magazine in last fall's listing of the richest 400 people in America. "Now [the hotel is] worth at least $400 million." Three years ago, Lawrence himself reportedly told the San Diego Business Journal: "Most of my business is finance [although] a lot of people identify me with the Hotel del Coronado, which is one-sixth of my enterprises."

But two weeks ago, longtime Lawrence business associate Leonard Friedman, 73, recorded a five-page document that declared, among other things, that Friedman "holds a majority interest in certain real property…commonly described and hereafter referred to as the 'Hotel del Coronado.'" More than a year ago, in April of 1988, the document says, Friedman sent Lawrence a notice that "rescinded and canceled Lawrence's option to purchase Friedman's interests in certain entities owning the Hotel del Coronado and terminated Lawrence's management power with respect to those entities…."

"He's got some problems and some claims he's making without any foundation," rebuts Lawrence. "Anyone can record anything against anyone on any piece of property…. Anyone can claim anything. I can claim ownership of your newspaper or magazine. What does that prove? Any madman can go out and record anything they want. There's nothing you can do about it."

Friedman, who makes his home in beachfront quarters at the hotel, is keeping his counsel. "I'm not going to interpret it for you," he says of the document now lodged in official county records. "All I can tell you is what you've seen at the recorder's." Asked what his next move might be, he replies: "I don't know."

Judges Dine at Public Trough

With the recent advent of a host of state tax increases, eating out has become more expensive for the average Californian. But, so far at least, San Diego judges aren't cutting back on their own lavish rounds of dining at taxpayer expense.

According to county records, many local judges on both the Municipal and Superior Court benches make it a regular practice to step out together for dinner or lunch, ostensibly to discuss official business. The cost of such events sometimes exceeds limits imposed on other county workers, and at least one judge has used the county tab to host politicians from other jurisdictions while lobbying for new court space.

Take the example of Municipal Court presiding Judge Patricia A.Y. Cowett. Last October, she and fellow judge MacAmos, along with court functionary E. Kent Pedersen, took San Diego councilman John Hartley and volunteer advisor Howard Wayne, a deputy state attorney general, to lunch at Salvatore's, a classy Italian restaurant downtown. The tab came to $75.15, which Cowett justified on her expense report by saying that the location was "most convenient" for "the limited amount of time for elected officials to get together." The topic of the day, she reported, was "court space discussion."

A month after the huddle with Hartley and company, Cowett also used her county expense account to pay for a $34.50 lunch at Salvatore's with San Diego councilwoman Abbe Wolfsheimer. Cowett said on her expense report that the subject was "court space cooperation" and she justified the high-priced venue on the grounds that she and Wolfsheimer had busy schedules....

In addition to Cowett's lunchtime forays, she and fellow presiding judges from the county's other three Municipal Court districts conduct monthly dinner meetings at some of the area's finest eateries. The most recent reports on file show that in June, a group of 11 judges and court clerks rang up a tab of $162.10 at China Camp, which has been their frequent choice. But over the past year, the same group has also dined at such diverse locales as the Rusty Pelican in Mission Valley and Nancaro's Restaurant and Elephant Bar in Rancho Bernardo....

dicial dining habits is not a simple undertaking, because the judges and their chief clerks rotate the responsibility for claiming the expenses among themselves, a practice that obscures the ultimate tab. Since money to pay the cost is not explicitly reported in the county budget, the public never sees a grand total....

In addition to trips to restaurants, the judges have also begun billing taxpayers for large banquets at the county bar association's new headquarters downtown, formerly the University Club. For instance, three weeks ago a group of 39 Superior Court judges and three court functionaries got together for a "court coordination dinner meeting" and racked up a $740.75 tab.

According to the expense claim, each dinner cost $17.00, 50 cents shy of the county maximum. Besides the food, the judges reported that they spent $25 for "audio-visual" and an unusually low $1.75 for "tax."...

Maybe She Meant Rubles

Whatever other legacy she leaves, Mayor Maureen O'Connor can claim a record for creative semantics. Take the mayor's recent state-of-the-city message, in which she announced that the Soviet Arts Festival was a financial success. "For a $500,000 investment by the city of tourist tax dollars," she declared, "the festival had "generated nearly $2.5 million more for our children's programs — all without dipping into the tax pockets of San Diegans."

The Los Angeles Times followed up with a story proclaiming that the well-touted cultural mishmash "may have netted as much as $2.5 million, more than twice the amount that O'Connor predicted when she lobbied the San Diego City Council to support the event." The article reported that although some final accounting remained to be done, the city's arts and cultural commission is already eager to parcel out the spoils as generous subsidies to local arts groups.

Had skeptics of the festival's ability to make money finally been put in their place? Well, not quite. When the books are closed sometime next month, the famous event may actually post as much as a $1.5 million loss for taxpayers. Even the most optimistic estimate now has the city $500,000 in the red, according to festival director Bruce Herring. "Arts and cultural projects don't make money," he says.

Growth Behind the Scenes

This is pledge week for local public television station KPBS, during which an array of station employees and volunteers go before the cameras and implore viewers for money. Last year, such appeals for new memberships brought the nonprofit station more than $3.5 million, a healthy increase of 10 percent over the year before. By this June, the close of its fiscal year, KPBS hopes to collect about $4 million from a total of 74,000 members, well over half of the $7.6 million that it now costs to operate TV channel 15 and its sister radio station, KPBS FM.

What most members probably don't know, however, is that they have no official say in how the stations are run. For example, while KPBS takes to the air this week to solicit viewers for operating funds, the station has also been busy behind the scenes raising additional monies to build an $8.5 million headquarters complex. Although more than $2 million has already been collected from or pledged by wealthy donors whom the station refuses to identify, KPBS general manager Paul Steen isn't eager to see the project publicized....

In addition to the new KPBS studios, the project would include high-rise dormitories, 21 fraternity houses, a shopping district, a hotel and conference center, movie theaters, and added parking for more than 12,000 cars. Along with a separate university plan to build a sports and concert arena in the area, the redevelopment proposals have triggered bitter protests from neighbors, some of whom have already gone to court....

The Long Arm and The Quick Ankle

When prosecutor Charles Gorder urged a federal court judge last month to keep convicted financier Richard Silberman in prison,Gorder emphasized the pitfalls of placing Silberman on electronically-monitored house arrest. If Silberman clipped off the electronic "bracelet" strapped to his ankle and drove south to Tijuana, argued Gorder, Silberman would be just five minutes from the border before federal agents reached his La Jolla home. Though the judge agreed to keep Silberman in jail pending retrial, Gorder could make an even stronger case against electronic monitoring if he disclosed the contents of a confidential memo written last month by Silberman's probation officer.

Harry Cooper Puts Out

If a new sports arena could be built with newspaper clippings, San Diego would already have the world's finest. Beginning in February of 1989, when Harry Cooper bought the dilapidated San Diego Sports Arena and announced he wanted to replace it with a $125 million "sports and cultural palace" to feature surround-sound stereo, laser lighting, and luxury sky boxes, local newspapers piled on with frenzied coverage. In the first week alone, no fewer than five photographs of Cooper appeared in as many days to hype Cooper, his business career, and his reputedly hedonistic lifestyle ("Here's Harry," February 23, 1989).

Tribune sports editor Tom Cushman led the charge, hailing Cooper as "the Ross Perot of San Diego." A reporter for the Los Angeles Times added that the entrepreneur had founded a company grossing "more than $845 million" and strongly implied that the would-be arena mogul possessed boundless wealth. The Daily Transcript noted that Cooper "drives a Porsche" and ran a nonprofit foundation with a $2.5 million yearly gross, "all of which it put back into producing" college catalogues on microfilm.

None of that first round of daily newspaper coverage disclosed that Cooper himself drew a $262,000 yearly salary from the foundation, which also provided Cooper with his sports car. He had sold his computer company 20 years before (well before it had grossed anything like the amount reported by the Times) and gone into early retirement.

Much of his net worth was derived from a 38-acre parcel of vacant industrial land in Sorrento Hills which he said was worth about $23 million. He borrowed $8 million against that property to come up with cash to buy the old arena lease....

help. Despite the hoopla surrounding the release of the so-called secret document, almost everything Neeper told the mayor and city council had already been reported in the local press: how planning director Robert Spaulding had a sexual relationship with planner Susan Bray; how Bray later claimed sexual harassment; how former city manager John Lockwood agreed to settle Bray's claim for $100,000; and how Lockwood and other high-ranking city officials conspired to keep the payoff a secret.

All true enough, but much more happened than that. Behind the scenes, insiders at the planning department, city manager's office, and city council are talking about a story that Neeper apparently never knew. This account began when a reporter for the Los Angeles Times called the mayor at home to ask about the Spaulding-Bray relationship. The mayor assured the reporter it was not true or else she would have known about it. Based on the mayor's confident assurances, the reporter walked away from what turned out to be the biggest city hall story of the year. The following day, a Friday, almost as an afterthought, O'Connor called assistant city attorney Curtis Fitzpatrick, the second-ranking person in the department behind John Witt. "She didn't believe it, but she decided to call the city attorney's office anyway," said a friend of the mayor's. "She called Fitzpatrick and said, 'Curtis, tell me this isn't true about Spaulding.' Fitzpatrick told her, 'I can't talk about it. You'll have to call Witt.'"

Personal Best

When Mayor Maureen O'Connor nominated Al Best to become the first openly gay member of San Diego's Civil Service Commission this January, no coverage of the historic event appeared in the daily newspapers. "It excites the living daylights out of me," observes Best. "We may be growing up as a society in the fact that we don't have to make a big deal out of it." One city hall source, however, claims that some members of the mayor's staff might have intentionally downplayed Best's appointment, going so far as to submit the nomination under Harry A. Best, his full legal name, in order to minimize publicity during his city council confirmation hearing. Such allegations draw a sharp rebuke from mayoral chief of staff Ben Dillingham, one of Best's strongest supporters at city hall. "That's absolute crap," says Dillingham....

According to Dillingham's personal financial disclosure statement, he and Best frequently meet together, with Best picking up the tab for various breakfasts, lunches, and dinners. For instance, last year Dillingham reported receiving 28 meals totaling $585 "from the new civil service commissioner." Other gifts from Best reported by Dillingham included a porcelain box valued at $20, a box of candy worth $15, a $30 miniature picture, and sewing and utensil kits worth $4....

About the same time the mayor was talking to Fitzpatrick, Spaulding got word that Pat Flynn of the San Diego Union was preparing a story about the liaison for Saturday's paper. Spaulding then called the mayor to set up an appointment to talk about the allegations, and the rest — some of it anyway — is history. That weekend, reporters chasing Flynn's story tried to reach Fitzpatrick at home. According to Neeper's report, Fitzpatrick had been instrumental in structuring the deal. But Fitzpatrick was nowhere to be found. According to three sources who know Fitzpatrick, he had recently moved out of the downtown condominium he shared with his wife after starting an affair — similar to Spaulding's — with a deputy city attorney....

Forged Signature Boots Kitty, She Sues

The San Diego Union-Tribune is a civic-minded organization. Staffers take great pride in philanthropic gestures like the annual Union-Trib 10, a 10-kilometer run and 5-kilometer walk that last year raised nearly $40,000 for the San Diego Council on Literacy, a favorite charity of Helen K. Copley, the newspaper's publisher.

But to Kathleen K. Miller, who as director of community relations and educational services was charged with getting sponsorship dollars from the San Diego Unified Port District, last year's race was fraught with bad memories of chauvinistic superiors, a patronizing county supervisor and, ultimately, Miller's termination — for allegedly forging two signatures on a grant proposal.

Miller is now suing her former employer in Superior Court, accusing the newspaper's management of sex discrimination, wrongful termination, breach of contract, defamation and intentional infliction of emotional distress. She claims the real reason for her termination was her gender — and her refusal to bow to the old-boys' network at Copley. During her six years of employment, the suit claims, Miller was consistently paid less than her male counterparts for more work, excluded from top management meetings, denied annual bonuses routinely paid to male department heads, implicitly threatened with termination when she complained about not getting bonuses, deprived of management perks, and ignored by management when her department was eliminated....

At the time of her promotion, the suit alleges, Miller was promised an annual salary of $50,000 by her boss, former San Diego police chief Bill Kolender. Union-Tribune general manager John Curley grudgingly consented, the suit says, although he told Miller, "Where I come from, $50,000 is a hell of a lot of money for a woman."...

Who's Who in Mayor's Datebook

December 7, 1990: Jack McGrory was about to become the anointed successor to City Manager John Lockwood, who would announce his "unexpected" retirement in four days. Among the first stops on McGrory's confirmation quest, even before the city council, was the Whaling Bar in La Jolla's posh La Valencia Hotel. There McGrory had lunch with Mayor O'Connor, publishing executive David Copley, and a mysterious woman the mayor's appointment book repeatedly refers to only as "Mrs. C." The meeting must have gone well; McGrory soon got the job. The mayor did not meet with any of the other likely replacements, her calendar shows.

The mayor's appointment schedule, obtained from her office by request, is full of other revealing details of her official, and sometimes unofficial, life. The cryptic "Mrs. C" turns out to be Helen Copley, publisher of the San Diego Union-Tribune and one of Mayor O'Connor's closest friends. According to some reports, the two women lived together in a house in the mid-1980s, when O'Connor moved out of the home she shared with Jack In The Box millionaire Robert O. Peterson.

Relations between O'Connor and Peterson had soured after the former hamburger magnate took a shine to then-Senator Pete Wilson's ex-wife Betty. Although Peterson filed for divorce, the couple eventually reconciled. Both the Petersons and Copley later became partners in a gourmet restaurant venture in La Jolla called Gustaf Anders. Although the eatery got frequent plugs in both the Union and Tribune — which once included a laudatory, full-page "exclusive" interview with Peterson — it folded after only a few years in business.

But the O'Connor-Copley friendship apparently endures. The Copley newspapers have been O'Connor's most reliable political allies, usually treating her kindly on both editorial and news pages. By coincidence or not, the mayor's calendar reveals that, except for city staff, Helen Copley has been the mayor's most frequent visitor and companion over the last two years. O'Connor has met with Copley at least ten times since January 1990.

Most of O'Connor's visits with Copley took place outside city hall. Borrego Springs, site of the Copley-owned resort Casa del Zorro, was a favorite venue, as was La Valencia's Whaling Bar, where Copley, Kroc, and O'Connor met on the Ides of March in 1990. Kroc and the mayor were occasionally joined by Academy Award–winning actress Mercedes McCambridge, known as "Mercy" in the calendar and to her close buddies.

An Old Mo

"Every home, even if only in a modest way, is a kind of museum," muses Professor Witold Rybczynski in July's issue of ever-relevant House Beautiful magazine. And nowhere is this truism truer than on the 2900 block of Owen Street in Point Loma, where our mayor's former multimillion-dollar "trophy home" is, once again, up for grabs. Purchased in 1979 by O'Connor's extremely spry husband, R.O. Peterson, the 5800-square-foot, four-bedroom Spanish-style house was remodeled with that distinctive Peterson-O'Connor flair by local architect Bruce Damann. And although the home was subsequently resold in 1987 for $2.1 million — after a discreet but rigorously thorough background check — to Mexican zillionaire Constantino Canelo to serve as a kind of part-time bayside cabana, many traces, even artifacts, of the home's former owners still remain.

The very best awaits the visitor on the inside of this veritable Fabergé egg of a home. The understated eight-foot-high, electronically-monitored stucco wall that surrounds the estate does not so much as hint at the suavely modest luxury that runs rampant throughout the home's interior. The rustic red brick drive that leads to the home, and the four-car garage beside it, is guarded by a terra cotta pair of ferocious-looking Chinese temple dragons — a wondrously playful architectural reference to the mayor's longtime mentors and champions, Joan Kroc and Helen Copley.

The personalized nature of the interior's appointments and redesign make the home a textbook of our mayor's passions and distractions: O'Connor's iconoclastic love of things Russian is a theme Damann carried from room to room in subtle virtuoso fashion. Recalling the kremlins and dachas of Tsarinas of yore, the Owen Street estate boasts no fewer than eight fireplaces, three in the master bedroom alone. The frigid clime of the mayor's adopted homeland is also echoed in the snow-white marble used on the landing of the stairs leading to the second floor and in the choice of icy, dusky marble in the living room, master bath, and kitchen. The tragic slaughter of the Russian imperial family at the hands of vodka-sodden Bolsheviks is quietly evoked by the blood-red fabric used on the walls of the downstairs study/den....

At my first pool room, Bacchi's in New Bedford, Massachusetts, sex was macho, two men betting their money and their pride. A man beaten at pool — Eight Ball hurt; Nine Ball hurt more; Straight Pool hurt worst of all — was beaten bad. Women hung out at the room. But as spectators, as trophies, really, to be picked up by the men who won.

Bacchi's presented money matches every night. But "presented" is the wrong word. Bacchi's supplied the table, the balls, a 100-watt lamp, and a cue tapered thin by 20 years of use. Young guys played Nine Ball; veterans played Straight. Hundreds of dollars would be won and lost. Pool was, then, as much as anything else, stamina. After four or five hours of Nine Ball, at $20 a game, shooters staggered to the table drunk with fatigue. At Bacchi's no liquor was served. Not even beer. A city ordinance forbade it. The city fathers considered a mix of pool and booze dangerous. Of course they were right, and of course everyone drank surreptitiously, from hip flasks or pints in brown bags, and seemed to prefer it that way.

Bacchi's functioned on the caste system. People who counted, the accomplished players, got tables one through five, those closest to the entrance where "anyone dropping in" — meaning other accomplished players — could see the "quality" of the room. You could determine your rank easily. Just come in early Saturday morning, when a black kid named Sammy Grace was dusting up, and ask for a rack of balls. If you could run 30 regularly, like a 180 average in bowling, you'd get table three.

Bacchi's was black and white. And various shades of gray. The only color in the place: the red Coke sign, the green felt, and blue cubes of chalk. There were a few stale candy bars, a few packages of Wrigley's spearmint, all dust-covered, displayed in the glass case beside the National cash register. Every Saturday morning, two old men in shabby business suits played three-cushion billiards for a sawbuck a game.

But Bacchi's was Massachusetts, 1960, the year Paul Newman made The Hustler. Thirty-four years later, and a continent away, there's Fats Billiards.

Fats Billiards sits at the corner of Fourth and J streets, bordered by Dick's Last Resort and the Grand Pacific Hotel. Dick's, a nightclub, features ribs, crabs, Dixieland, and a sawdust floor. The hotel, shabbily genteel, hasn't been grand for years. Across J Street lies Goodwill.

But Fats is beautiful. (My guess, the building was once a factory; and all that's left of the factory are weathered brick walls.) Fats now is glass: huge storefront windows all around — and colors: blue awnings impressed with Fats's gobs of yellow logo, brass-fixture doors pegged open, and a red welcome carpet out a couple feet onto the scoured brick sidewalk.

Naturally I wondered about the name. Why call a place Fats, especially in this age of slim? Then I remembered: Minnesota Fats, the code hero of The Hustler, played by that dear man Jackie Gleason and created entirely by the author, Walter Tevis. (A well-worn hustler named Rudolph Wanderone, quite fat himself, has usurped the name, claims he was the model for the character, and has made a career with the lie.) Come to think of it, the name seemed right. Didn't Fats ignore conventional wisdom, in a physically pleasing way? The message: This is the place to be mellow. To indulge a bit. To feel, again, at ease.

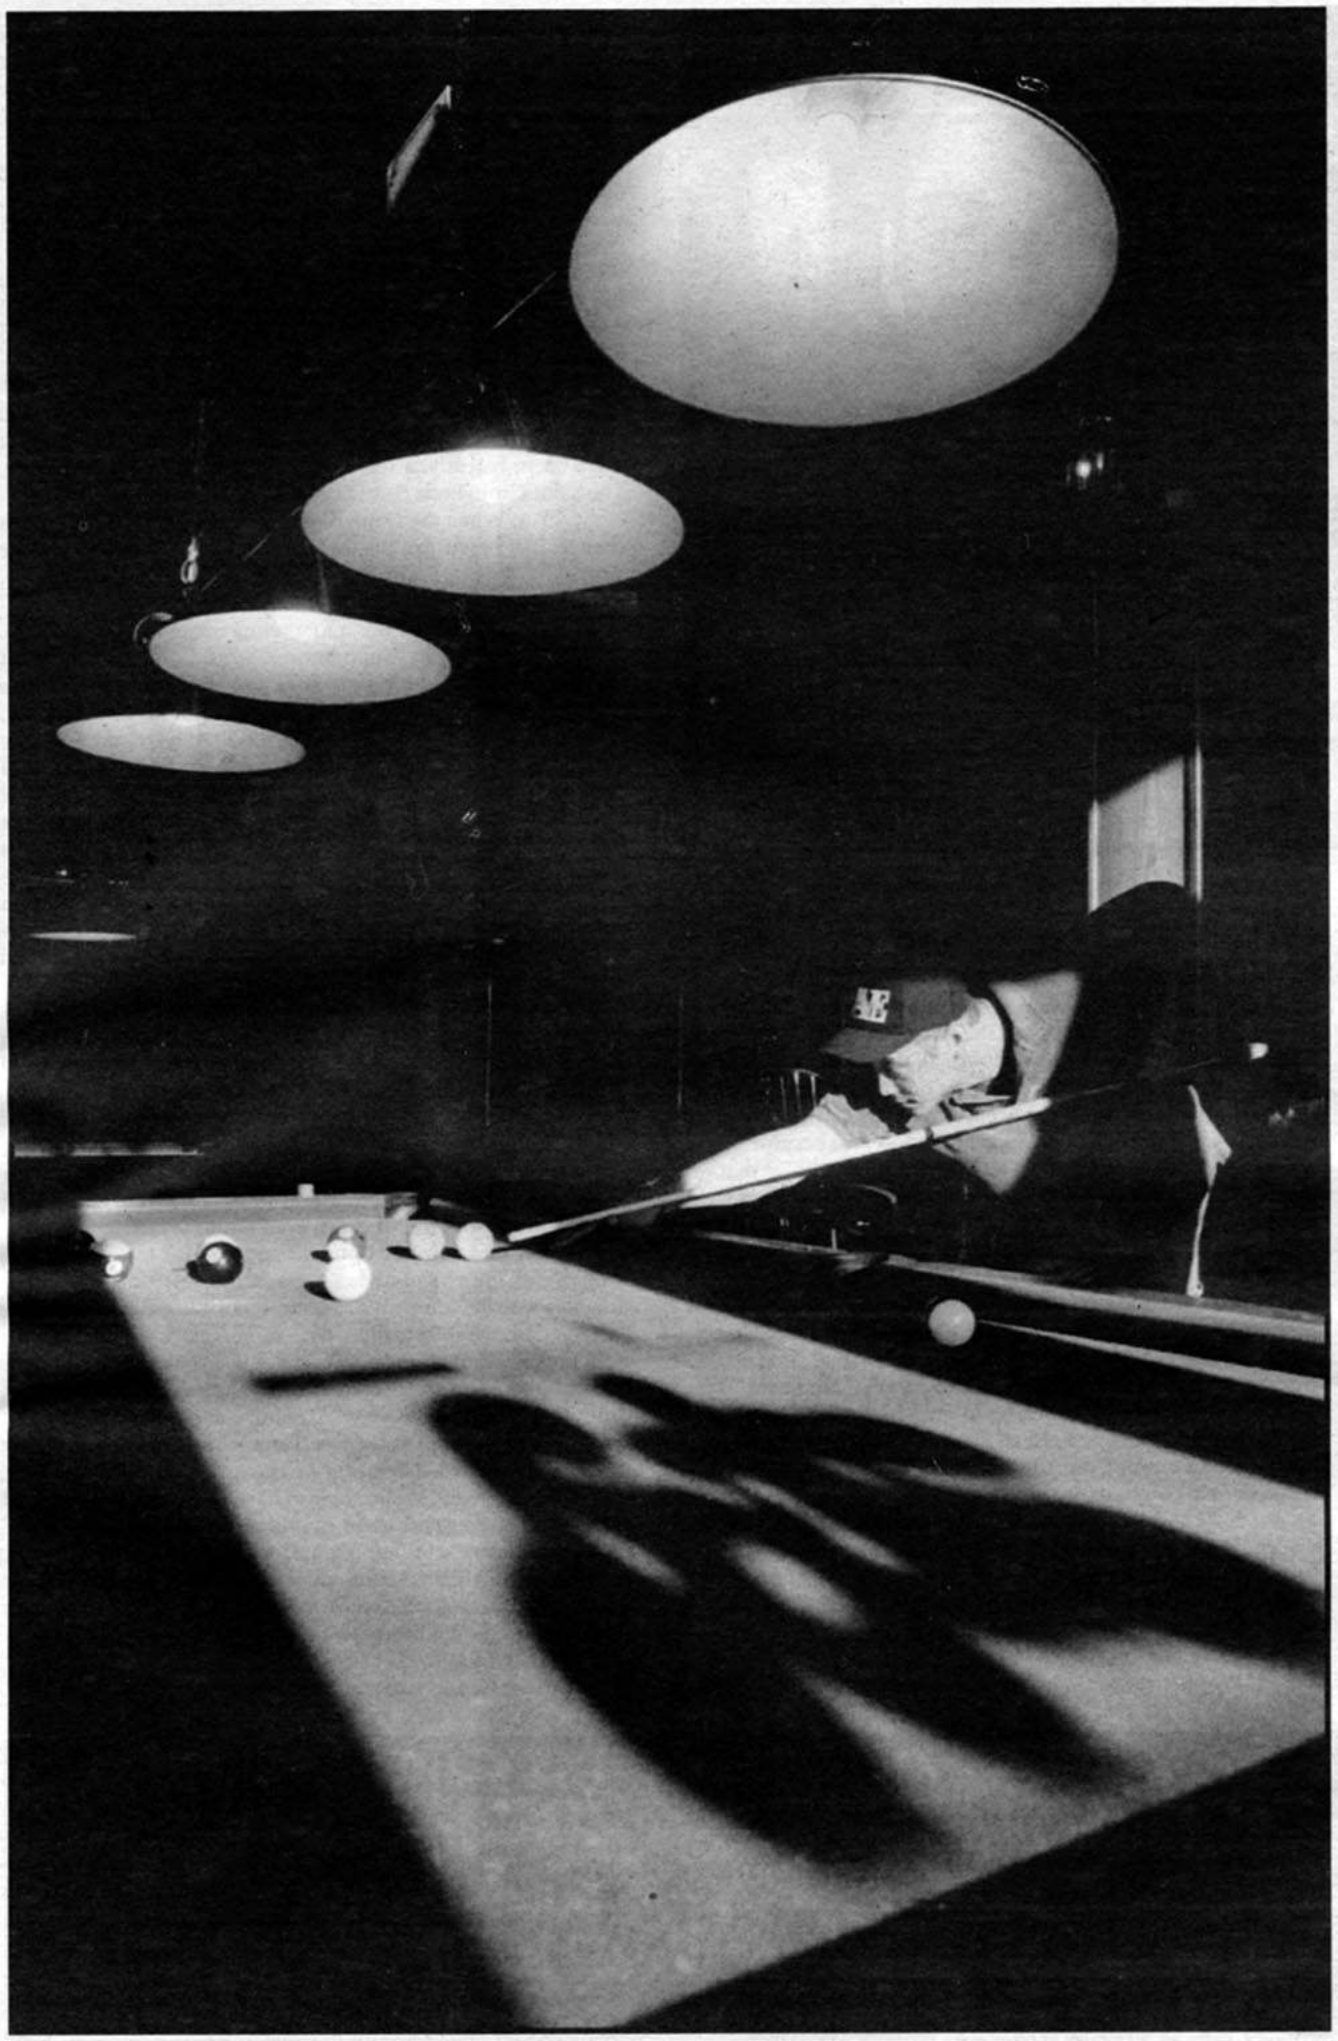
I first got to Fats Billiards one Sunday afternoon in late May. My wife and I met a charmingly distracted lady at the desk. She'd just been hired, she told us. Her first week, she said. (Maybe she said her first day!) Oddly enough, she was the wife of the manager of the nightclub next door. A Jaclyn Smith look-alike, she might have behaved with the utmost aplomb. But she wanted to help. "I'll call Peter," she said. Peter managed Fats.

Unfortunately, Peter the manager hadn't heard of me. I didn't know what to say. Richard Hoag, who, with Mark Rosenberg and Pat Murphy, had started the Fats billiard chain with a club in Riverside in 1992, had told me, when I'd called corporate headquarters in Sacramento, that he'd be delighted by the story. He'd said he'd encourage all his employees to cooperate, but Peter, over the phone, had actually warned the young woman, "Don't answer any questions." He'd have to check with ownership. Of course I was irritated, but in a way I appreciated the caution. Apparently, Mr. Hoag and company were protective in the best sense of that word. The next evening Peter had gotten permission, and our introduction to Fats began.

The first member of the Fats organization we met, officially, was the doorman. The I.D. checker. The appearance checker. To a couple of would-be clients he said, "No hats; no tattered jeans." I've seen bouncers before: big, tattooed, T-shirt muscles. Ready and anxious to work their trade. But this guy was a gymnast in a tuxedo. He folded his arms when he talked to me. And he was polite.

He'd been working at Fats for three months — the place had been open only six, had, in fact, opened last New Year's Day. He'd lived out on Coronado for 20 years. He was 23.

"I'm staying on Coronado myself. It's beautiful," I said, and mentioned the scent of jasmine my wife and I had noticed carrying in our luggage the night before. (We'd flown nonstop from JFK.)



"Yeah," he said, "got the beach right there. Nice town.... Not too much crime."

I asked him about school. Yes, he was going. "Southwestern J.C."

"J.C.?"

"Junior College," he said. He was taking "G.E." I waited. "General education. I'm planning to transfer to S.D. State."

"Major?" I asked.

"Psychology. Criminal psychology."

"Why?"

"Because I want to be a cop."

"You got your own place?"

"Nah," he said. "I live with my parents, just now."

I wanted to know about Fats's clientele. How old were they?

"At night," he said, "about 23." But some were "40, even 50." I winced; I'm 51.

"Do the older people come in at night or in the afternoon?" I asked, hoping it would be with the hip nighttime crowd.

"Yeah," he said. "Mostly in the afternoon; a few late at night." From "10:00 p.m. on it's mostly late 20s, mid-20s."

"How about women? Do you get a lot of women coming in?"

"Not a lot. But, ah, probably 30 percent."

"Is this a good place to pick up girls?"

"Nah. Usually they come with their boyfriends, you know. Not many girls want to come here, just packs of girls."

"Do you have any trouble with the booze? I mean, people getting loaded, causing fights."

"Nah. Since I've been working here, we haven't had any fights."

"No kidding! Nobody losing control of himself, throwing pool balls around, busting cues?"

"Nah. Nothing like that."

"Do guys play for money?"

"Huh?"

"Do guys play for money?"

"No. Can't allow that. No gambling. If we see money on the table then a — they're out of here. It's illegal, so can't let that happen."

Just then two John Belushis strolled up, got acknowledged, and began to joke around. It was 10–10:30. I told my friend the doorman I was going in.

Fats in the afternoon is neat; Fats at night is lustrous. No pool room, it's a pool parlor. Whoever designed Fats knows what lamps do. And brass shades and railings. Each partition in Fats is its own clean, well-lighted place. The tables, new World of Leisure wood, are right from the 1920s, with pockets of crossed-hatched leather strips and legs that look like legs. At the downstairs bar, the customers sit on brass stools, blue cushioned, lean against polished maple, and drink under the same style lamps that light the tables. The best beers on draft: Pale Ale, Moosehead, Wicked Ale, Bass Ale, Guinness, Riptide, Samuel Adams. (I thought, "This place has Boston-brewed Samuel Adams on draft. I can't get Samuel Adams on draft in my hometown, 50 miles south of Boston.") The liquors, arranged on shelves around the spigots, looking more for decoration than drinking, were those beautiful bottles with exotic names: Tia Maria, Kahlúa, Corbelle, Cointreau, Bacardi, Drambuie, Grand Marnier.

I noticed a waitress at the far end of the bar, between the brass rails of her station. A tall, slender blond she was, early 20s, wearing a jersey, shorts, stockings — all black — and suede leather boots. She had the look of composure lovely women have no matter what their age. (I know all about lovely blondes; my wife is a full-blooded Swede.) The bartender asked, "Can I get you something, sir?" I yearned to settle at that bar, to share a pitcher of Samuel Adams. But an "Excuse me" got my attention. Peter Herlan, the club manager, introduced himself, and held out his hand.

Dressed in the same formal attire as his employees, Peter Herlan looked dapper, young, self-assured. We would do business, his cheerful smile said. He would sell me the club. For the next hour Peter presented a dissertation on Fats Billiards — from the company philosophy, to the advertising agenda, to the details of daily operation.

My first question concerned the computers: one at the cashing-out station near the J Street door, the other behind the bar. The monitors were color, with tables displayed.

Peter explained, "Tables one through eight on the left side of the screen signify the eight tables down here on the bottom level. The red means the tables are occupied. There's two other colors. The white and the green. The white means it's an eight-foot table; the green signifies a nine-foot table. The room directly above us is located in the center of the screen. That's the Blue Room, meaning [the color of] the felt on the table. Originally it was designed to house the under-21 crowd. However, we don't pull that clientele here."

Then, pointing at the screen, he said, "And the tables begin. The two occupied are red, the rest are eight- and nine-foot tables. If the customer says I want a nine-foot regulation table, I'll know exactly where to send him."

I asked Peter about the family angle. That old '50s approach to popularizing the game. "The downtown area," he said, "being the hottest nightclub area in San Diego, by far, will attract, definitely, a 21-and-older crowd. Very seldom do we pull family clientele. However, we're more than gracious. Obviously, I have a good time meeting children, and we have a good time with them. But we just don't get a lot of under-21 people here."

Peter seemed especially proud of his second-floor Green Room.

"The Green Room, which is by far our most popular room, is beautiful. It's got an outdoor dining area and a huge bar, probably twice the size of the bottom one here. It has another 15 or so tables, and two of the side private ones are very similar to number five and number six downstairs. [Numbers five and six downstairs were each set apart, for more intimate games.] They're very private for big crowds. They've become very popular on a Friday or Saturday night for people coming in in big groups."

Peter asked if I would like to see his Green Room. "Of course," I said. There was a stairwell, carpeted, with railings, well lighted, leading to the second floor. But we took an elevator.

Peter continued, "This room is located directly above Dick's Last Resort. It does have an outdoor patio with about seven or eight hundred square feet in it. Maybe, somewhere around that. Definitely the largest bar of the house, and uh, certainly because of the amount of tables, and the popularity, and the view of the room, [it] tends to attract bigger crowds than the downstairs bar. I understand when the club first opened not many people knew about the upstairs part, so the downstairs was always busy, and one of the better bartenders that works here was downstairs all the time. Well, once it, this room, was discovered (I was a customer at the time), I eventually always came up here along with everybody else. So this is definitely the place where we attract the crowds."

"We're starting a new promotion," Peter volunteered. "It's our happy-hour party promotion. You probably saw the fishbowl downstairs. [I did and remembered, "Win a half-hour party — for 12, including food and pool."] This is the room that I'm really happy about opening up at four o'clock in the afternoon. Typically it's 7:00 p.m. when we open it, and there are some disappointed people that come by in the daytime and want to be in this room. Unfortunately, we don't have enough business to keep both bars open during the daytime. So at four o'clock now we have our happy-hour parties and we're doing that with a big blastoff. We'll be open pretty much every day at four o'clock here. As long as we have the parties.

"Whenever we have a private party or a big promotion, they use this area. In fact, one of the local radio stations had a setup here when they had an auction. It was called Break for Life. It was for the San Diego Blood Bank and the American Heart Association. This is where we had all the auctions; all the donations were up here on display, and it serves us quite a purpose. I'd like to see us eventually go into the cabaret license. Where we can do more of a dance style, more of a nightclub style in this area because of the uniqueness of this room. There's so many different ideas that we have for the future that we'd like to see happen here. And we'll just have to see where the future takes us. But we're definitely pleased with the setup."

The Green Room, spacious and chic, with a brass-trimmed fireplace, a splendid bar, attractive table settings below colorful Budweiser and Miller Lite neon signs, had plenty of tables free.

Peter Herlan started out in nightclubs at 19, in Tucson, where he "really learned how to talk to people." He knew, "You eat a lot of humble pie working in a nightclub as a manager. You've got to be the first to clean up messes. You've got to be the first to set an example for the rest of the employees. Whereas I feel if it's a big corporation, somebody coming in new doesn't have to, you don't have to prove to the mail carriers in a big corporation that you're the top. You are. It's understood. It's accepted. Whereas here I need to set an example, and I try to use some of my ideas. I'll try to do whatever it takes to make my employees more money and obviously happier."

"Which means?"

"People tend to tip on the amount that they drink or the food that they order. If we're a really busy club consistently, the employees, the cocktail waitresses are happier, the bartenders are happier. That's pretty much the bottom line. Obviously the ownership is happier, which is definitely going to make the management happier."

Then Peter escorted me across the hall, past swinging maple doors with windows, into the Blue Room.

"The Blue Room was designed to house our under-21 crowd. We don't allow any under-21s after 9:00 p.m. However, if somebody's here with their family, they can hang out here in the upstairs. Real simple design. Eight nine-foot tables, straight down in two rows. It seems to be our least popular room. Compared to our downstairs where the bar is, and upstairs where the bar is. Obviously our clientele, they want to be right where the bar is."

I had heard about the Blue Room, and from pool professional Dawn Meurin, currently ranked number 13 in the world. Hadn't there been, recently, a tournament played here? I asked Peter. The Saint Croix Press San Diego Classic?

"Yes. When the women were here it went through quite a change. Just because of the tournament itself. It was about three days of hard work. Setting up the bleachers and everything else. But we got our room back, our Blue Room."

Peter told me he was a marketing major at Mesa College. I asked him what year. "Sophomore," he said, suddenly diffident and shy. He reflected for a moment and said, "You get all kinds of people in here. I was surprised. I went up to La Jolla one day, up to the Torrey Pines area. Went to the Sheraton Grande Torrey Pines, and I introduced myself. I gave them some passes, told them about our hospitality night. It's called Fats Tuesday. [Nice allusion, I thought.] Tuesday night there were about 20 people from that hotel that came down as employees. I think that's special."

I asked Peter for a little bit about himself. He was born in Reno, he said, but had lived in East County all his life. He'd gone to three different high schools, ending up at Grossmont. He'd tutored children while in high school, in a program called AVID, designed for low-income and minority students. Peter said that AVID pays high school students and college students to come in and tutor minority and low-income students. People who would "otherwise get lost in the crowd."

I had a thought, remembering the women's national class tournament played at Fats in March. "How about," I asked Peter, "how about hiring a professional pool player to teach at your room and to represent your room in national tournaments? I mean, golfers work out of clubs, even tennis pros."

Peter said, "Ariane Gaudet," and nodded toward a young woman wearing a handmade sweater, white jeans, and obviously delighted with the company of a fellow I took for a college professor. "The person we're actually trying to negotiate a contract with right now is Ariane Gaudet." I had not heard of Ms. Gaudet. But I asked Peter for an introduction. What a name! Peter had pronounced it beautifully — "Areeann Gauday."

Before he brought me over, Peter told me of his plans. "The three things that we'll be using Ariane for, just to start off with, is on Thursday night. We're going to have a women's instructional group, and she's going to be in charge of that. And it's ladies' night, so all ladies get to shoot pool for free. I think it's important to allow a sport that's definitely dominated by men so far, for women to have a good opportunity to learn and compete with their boyfriends and brothers."

"Okay," I said. "Let's go."

Ariane Gaudet was young and wholesome. Another blond, with bright blue, innocent eyes, perfect teeth, and a voice that meant what it said. She introduced her escort, a Britisher, met my wife, and bought us a drink.

For starters, I gave her a long, too long, résumé. All about my schooling and my books and my experience with pool. She listened politely. Then, in response to my "Well, enough about me," she said, "Exactly."

"Okay, give me your background," I said.

"I am 28. I just turned 28 May 18. I've been shooting pool approximately 11 to 13 years, about 6 years very seriously. The man that taught me most of the things I know, and that was back in Atlanta, was Mark Jones, a black guy in a wheelchair, and he has phenomenal talent. He taught me composure, he taught me..."

"Composure?"

"Discipline."

"How'd he teach you composure?"

"Basically, he taught me discipline."

"What kind of discipline?"

"Because seeing as he's in a wheelchair he's had to overcome a lot, and he's really had to experience life to its fullest from a deficiency. He just taught me a whole new realm, a whole new area of life, and taught me to appreciate things, and he really got me into pool because he was very into pool."

Ariane continued, "I started out in Busch League Pool. Which is now Bud Lite League. And I played in Bud Lite League for five years. And so I've had years and years of experience. I had my first pro tournament — a year ago in Atlanta, and the Green Room, which is a pool hall in Atlanta, sponsored me in that tournament. I ended up getting knocked out. I won my first match against Pat Upchurch, 9–1, and then lost my next two matches. I did not end up in the money. I've played in four pro tournaments since then and ended up in the San Diego tournament 17 through 24. So I ended up placing in the tournament. So I've come a long way. My problem is probably getting over a lot of mental obstacles. But once I get past that I'm on my way."

"You mentioned composure," I said. "Dawn Meurin told me a lot about composure and how she thought it was one of her strengths. She was into Zen for some..."

"Absolutely."

"She said she thought it was a great help. In fact, she's making a videotape about how Zen helps your game. It seems that in pool players two things come together. There's a need for acquiring composure and an ability to acquire it."

"Yes."

"And somehow pool becomes the means for doing it. How does that work?"

"To me there's a fire that's burning inside of you. That always says, 'Pool, pool, pool.' You live it. You need it."

"Okay. But why not, 'Darts, darts, darts'?"

"Because there's something in you that clicks; there's something in the game of pool."

"What do you think that is?"

"I think it is a basic love for the game. I think it's a basic.... It has a lot to do with chess. It has a lot to do with conquering and succeeding and eventual conquest."

"Against your opponent?"

"No, not against my opponent. Against the table. The table is what you're looking at. It's not the opponent. The opponent is there to throw obstacles in front of you. And to throw little flares at you. And once you get to the table, the opponent has nothing to do with your game. He shouldn't have. Mentally or physically. It's you against the table. And what you can execute and how smart you can play. That's my philosophy of the game."

Ariane paused, and her escort, charmed and impressed, said in all sincerity, "That was beautifully put."

I told Ariane that I'd first met the pros — most of the top names in the men's game — at the Eastern States Nine Ball Championships in 1989. "I was looking around to write another book, and I was talking to some people who didn't have a, you know, didn't have a high school education. And yet there was an understanding of human nature and this composure, and this sense of self-discipline..."

"Exactly."

"...that gave them a dignity that I found lacking in myself.

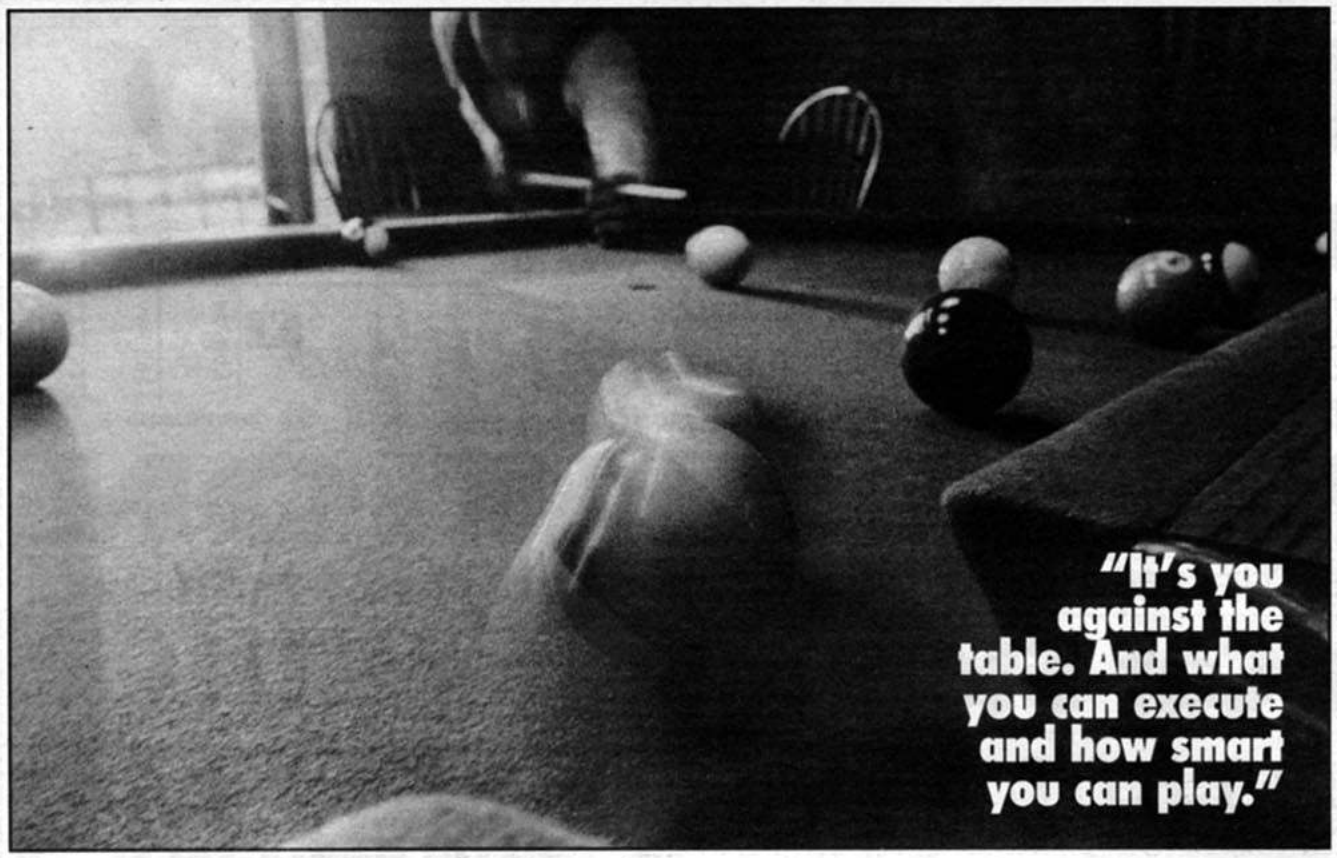
El Cajon has never sounded better...



And I thought, my God. I've got three degrees. I've written two books on Ernest Hemingway. And yet I haven't a tenth of their confidence when I put it on the line. Hemingway loved the kind of inner silence true artists have..."

"Absolutely."

"...that allows them to perform — to perform with grace under pressure." I had made another speech.

"When I am in a tight match, when I am in a very intense match, the whole building can fall down around me and I would not notice it. That's how focused...."

"The guy who's number one in New England, Tom McGonagle, is a friend of mine. Tommy has a beautiful stroke."

"What's his name?"

"Tom McGonagle. He's played a couple of close matches with Steve Mizerak. But Tommy's got this hydraulic stroke. It's just wonderful. One match he was shooting the nine ball for real money, and a ball from another table rolled right between his legs, and he didn't know it."

"All right. I mean, that's how focused you are," Ariane said.

"And he didn't even know it."

"Absolutely."

I asked Ariane about luck. Surely luck plays a big role in pool. Your ball rattles and doesn't drop. And then his does.

She said, "Don't you realize that every time you think, 'That's the cue ball shape for my next position,' and execute the position, but you miss, you hook the other fellow? Or you leave him really bad. Because the object ball is supposed to be in the pocket. Supposed to be gone. Off the table. So when he comes up to the table and says, 'God, you're so lucky,' it's not luck because the ball's supposed to be down. And I screwed up. I should have made the shot, and I would be out."

I asked Ariane about how your personal life affects your game. I knew from experience that when mine went sour, my personal life that is, I couldn't make a ball.

"For me it's not necessarily wise to let your personal life get involved in your game. 'Cause it's not. But yet it always does. Mentally, it's always there. Always at the back of your mind. Kicking at you and hitting at you. 'This is wrong with my life. Am I going to make this shot?' You just have to pay attention. Play pool. Just do it. Go for it."

I told Ariane that my life once got to the point where I had to close my eyes to shoot. I feared a miss so much, I couldn't shoot with my eyes open.

"You've got to stand up," she said. "That's what I do. When I see there's an infraction. Because if you think about it, your brain says it first; then your body reacts. You have to visualize the shot first. And if you see yourself missing the shot, you say, this doesn't look right; it doesn't fall right. You stand up and regroup. Because your body is not doing what your brain says. Your brain is saying, 'I'm going to make the six ball.' Your body is saying, 'I don't think I will.' There's something that's wrong there. So you stand up and regroup. You look at the shot again. You line it up again; you walk around the table; you take a chokehold; you get back down and you focus and shoot. That's what I do. I have to, or else I'll ruin the shot. Once you have that lack of concentration, you're going to ruin it. I'd say 95 percent of the time."

I told Ariane about my suggestion to Peter Herlan, Fats's manager, that a big-time billiard club needed a pro on staff. "That's in the works here," she said.

"What kind of plans would you have? What would you do with a place like this?"

Green Room

"Basically, I would like to start leagues, which would bring in the money, but also would bring the interest from people who are not normally pool shooters and get them into the game. Once you get that, when pro tournaments come around, come into town, then people would come in and watch and say, 'I shoot that game. And these pros are really good. They're probably better than me, so why don't we go watch.' And it would really ignite the flame. Get the ball rolling in the pool industry. Get people to come watch and support the game."

"How do you overcome," I asked, "how do you overcome it when people have no idea what's going on on the table. I remember one time I dumped the balls and ran them. This was on a table at the clubhouse where I live. And I heard an old guy say, 'He just sunk 15 balls. But he had all easy shots.' "

"They don't understand what you're doing with the cue ball. But I think that when these people actually do come to a match to watch pros shoot, they're sitting next to somebody who actually knows what's going on, who'll say, 'Did you see that. He put right-hand bottom english on that shot. To draw it back and get shape for the two,' or the three, whatever. And I think it's by word of mouth. I mean, they don't know what's bottom english. And then they find somebody who knows what they're doing. It's by word of mouth. And then once that interest starts, they might read up on it. Or they might get somebody who knows what they're doing. Maybe a friend of theirs, and say, 'What is bottom; what is top? What is a kill shot, a forced follow?' "

"That's why I thought a pro would be so important in a place like this," I said to Ariane. "Not only would people admire you for your game and like to watch you and like to know you because you'd be a celebrity, but also because once they started to understand what you did on the table, they'd get really interested in the game."

"Absolutely."

"When people are just banging balls, who gives a damn? It gets boring really fast. But it's the execution."

"Exactly. That happens once you get into the realm of pool, once you get past the point of just banging balls around. Like, Mark took me from nothing. I couldn't make a ball two inches from the pocket. Six years ago. Actually, I could do it. But I didn't know what I was doing and how it was happening. I just boinked them. But then Mark taught me the philosophy of bottom, top, cue ball control, left, right, draw, anything — he taught me all of that. Listen. I got it. It clicked, and I got it. I have a natural stroke. I have a natural talent and a good eye. And it all fell into place. And I might not be the best pool shooter in the world, but I have a really good time doing it. And it makes my heart feel good."

"It's funny. Tommy McGonagle said, 'You know something, Pete? Don't tell anybody. But sometimes it's better than sex.' "

"Exactly. It is. Really it is. If I have a choice between a date and pool, I'd probably choose pool. I would."

While I'd stood outside Fats Billiards talking to the doorman, Ariane had been shooting with a fellow from Dallas–Fort Worth. He was one of five, playing at the "party" table, number five, the set-off one close by the door. Ariane suggested I meet these people. They were typical, she said, of the nighttime clientele. "Twenties and 30s, you know."

I don't know how you feel about names. Mine, "Peter Griffin," equals "Joe Average." But have you noticed that good-looking people so often have nice-sounding names? I met Gina Visser, Michele Pelletier, Jack Harvey, Peter Whipple, Anthony Matchus.

As far as looks go: Gina Visser, very early 20s, tall (maybe five-ten), slim, blond, tanned. A Christie Brinkley face, but thoughtful. Then, Michele Pelletier. Small, delicate, black hair and slacks, with heels and, well, an attitude. The guys: Whipple, Harvey, Matchus. Stylish, educated, and, well, handsome. We shook hands all around.

Somebody kidded Peter Whipple. Tell him [me] about the greeting we got, at the airport. (Texan Jack Harvey had, a few days before, graduated from San Diego State University. He'd invited up two of his Texas friends for the celebration.) With a little encouragement, Peter began: "So we got off the plane and walked up the ramp. There was this pretty blond girl standing at the top of the ramp with this Dr. Golicowitz sign, as in the limo driver from the Bud Lite commercial — have you seen it? So we're walking up and I go, 'Tony, isn't that so funny. I mean, somebody's getting a limousine and it's a joke.' Well, the girl, as we approach, flips the sign and has both our last names on the back of it. She's a friend of Jack. She embarrassed the heck out of us in front of all those people at the airport."

"Great story," I said. And it was.

First choice for my Panasonic, Gina Visser:

"How old are you?" I asked.

"Uh, 21."

"Do you like to shoot pool?"

"I like to shoot pool."

"Do you do it seriously?"

"I don't do it very seriously. I'm better when I'm not drinking. When I drink a little more, then I'm not as good."

"Do you go to school?"

"I'm in college. I go to Point Loma Nazarene College."

"What's your major?"

"I'm a...blah [she stumbles over a word] liberal studies."

"What do you figure you're going to do?"

"I want to be a teacher."

"No you don't."

"Yes I do. Yes I do. I want to be a teacher for little kids. 'Cause I think that's something. And I want to marry a rich man who can support me for the rest of my life, and I don't have to do anything except take care of his kids. Okay?"

Somebody from the bar area hollers, "Last call."

"How often do you play?" I asked.

"I play at least five times a month."

"Really? That much? Is it usually on dates?"

"Usually I go for dates."

Michele, the dark one, remarks to no one in particular, "No, it's not last call."

"What do you think of this place?" I asked Gina.

"Oh, this is a great place. They have tables upstairs. There's tons of tables upstairs. There's always a table. Have you been upstairs?"

"Yes, I have. It's a beautiful place."

"The raddest place in San Diego to go."

"The what?"

"The raddest place in San Diego to go. If I want to play pool, I would definitely come here."

It was Gina's shot, for at least the third time. I'd taken up a lot of her evening already. I thanked her and moved on to Michele.

My first question, "Do you play seriously or just recreational?" hung in the air while we all turned our attention to the table. Jack Harvey, stretched out for an uptable corner pocket shot on the nine, a foot of cue past his open bridge, faced an obstacle. Gina had placed the butt of her cue in the pocket, and she stood there, swaying to Garth Brooks, while Jack took his stroke. I've noticed that people drinking, out for a good time, tend to apologize for the quality of their game. To make excuses before almost every shot. But Jack said nothing. Nor did he stand up and regroup. He just made the shot, the nine rolling around the cue butt like a golf ball around the flag. Gina removed her cue and pouted. But she was clearly impressed.

Back to Michele: "Do you play seriously?" I asked again.

"I play for fun."

"Fun?"

"Yes, definitely."

Set to thinking by the "definitely," I asked a foolish question. "Do you have your own cue?"

"No."

"How many times do you play in a week?"

"Sometimes once. Sometimes more than once."

"Do you like anything about the game? Or is it just something to do?"

"It goes along good with music."

"That's interesting. Tell me why."

"I don't know. You get into the music and the alcohol with it and it kind of lets you go free and you kind of play better that way. You do, don't you?"

"There's a rhythm to pool..." I began.

"A lot of Eagles. The Eagles are good. They're good to play for. Those are who I learned with."

"There's an old-time movie when I was a kid called The Hustler with Paul Newman," I said.

"Uh-huh."

"And Jackie Gleason."

"And one of the lines in the movie...when Newman is watching Fats go around the table, Newman says, 'Look at him. He moves like a dancer.' "

"Uh-huh. To music."

"And I thought of that when you said that about music." But then I thought to myself, "Where was the music coming from that Fats danced to?"

"It's all in the setting," Michele said. "It's all in the setting, you know."

"When I was a kid in a pool room," I said, "if you made a sound, everybody would go —" and I opened my eyes wide and stared.

"No. It's not like that anymore."

"And there was gambling," I said. "Gambling was an essential part of it. Everybody gambled. And they thought it was necessary. To show you were a man. That you could make a ball with money on it." I asked Michele, "When you play, do you feel any pressure about performing? Do you feel embarrassed? I mean, if you don't play well."

"No. I feel pretty much easygoing about it. You know. If I make it, I do. If I don't, I don't."

"Are you going to college now?" I asked.

"Uh-huh. At Point Loma Nazarene College."

"Same place as Gina."

"Same place. We're together."

"Are you in liberal studies, too?"

"Oh, no. Nursing."

"Oh, really. That's funny, because I teach at a little community college back East, and I've got a lot of nursing students. That's because there's jobs in nursing."

"Actually, there's not anymore. In San Diego there's no nursing jobs right now."

"You figure you're going to marry a rich guy, like she [Gina] is, and settle down and have kids?"

"There are requirements I have. But they're not appropriate. So. Basically, physical things. You know." This was a determined woman. And I wished her well.

Peter Whipple, six-two, long hair, scruffy beginnings of a beard, intelligent, observant eyes, looked anxious to talk. I figured he'd have something to say about his game with Ariane. And would say it with originality.

Peter spoke enthusiastically. "This is Peter again. I'm from Fort Worth, Texas. I came out here because a buddy of mine was graduating college. I came out to visit him. And I've been shooting pool, God, I think I pretty much supported my college career with shooting pool. I had a really good time when I was at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. I went to Drake University first. Then got accepted at TCU. And I shot pool all through college. I grew up with a pool table in my house. My dad was from New Jersey originally. And my mother's from Chicago. Actually he's from Montclair, New Jersey, she's from Wilmette, Illinois, which is a suburb of Chicago. After they eloped in college...."

At this point, Gina began an awkwardly graceful dance with her pool cue, passing the cue over her shoulders, spiraling it around her waist and hips, then down to her ankles. I took this as her version of the dance Tom Cruise did in The Color of Money. But Peter saw it another way. "Look at the majorette go." Then he said, "Hold it. Time-out. We're going to laugh too hard." But laughter was the last thing anybody had in mind. Gina stopped, giggled, said something neither Peter nor I could hear.

The interview continued. Peter: "My folks met at the University of Colorado at Boulder and eloped. When school was out at the end of the year, they announced to everybody they'd gone off April 8 and had gotten married. Ann and Jay Whipple of Fort Worth, Texas, by the way.

"When they moved up to Chicago, my dad worked for my mother's father, my grandfather, and had a table built by a billiards company up in Chicago. Then when we moved to Texas, four years after I was born, in 1963, the table came with us and Mother didn't get her breakfast room. It became a pool table hall right next to Mom's kitchen."

There's something about being familiar with a sport, knowing it in a way that requires attention only for the essential moves, where the rest is natural. I saw that Peter Whipple had this knowledge of pool. His stance was comfortable, balanced. His cue, held lightly, three fingers and thumb. His finger bridge, shifting when needed from open to closed. Peter had an artist's tendency to admire his work. And after every shot, he massaged the cue tip with chalk.

"I just been kinda shooting pool all my life," Peter said. "With my dad, and always loved it. And did real well in college. Made a lot of money at it. Terrible to say on air, but a...." (Gina, uptable, about to make the seven ball in the corner, says, "He's lying.")

Peter collected himself. "I enjoyed playing with the young lady [Ariane]. She kind of gave us a little challenge there for Nine Ball. I like a member of the opposite sex that comes in and likes to challenge me on a pool table."

"How is it playing with women?" I asked.

"I love playing with women. I love women. I love women. Some of the ladies are not great pool players. But they're fun to have around. But it's also fun to find a gal who wants to whip your butt in pool, and some of them can, I tell you. They're very good. And they'll take your money from you real quick. They'll surprise you. It's fun to see a cute gal come in and shoot pool well. Like Gina. She's not an expert. But she's having a good time."

"Are Michele and Gina dates?" I asked.

"We just walked up to the bar and said would you all like to, uh, I need a partner. Would any of you ladies like to play? We'll buy you a cocktail. One gal, Michele, said, 'I don't know how to play, but,' she said, 'Gina, you get over there. You know how to play, and we'll have a drink.' Nice way to meet people."

I told Peter what Michele had said, about pool going well with music.

"Well, it's great to hear some of the old classics. I like to hear Tenille. It takes me back years. But they're good memories."

"How old are you?"

"I'm 35 years old. Just turned 35 May 3. But it's neat to come in and listen to some of the old tunes. I was talking with the young lady over there — Gina — about some old Van Morrison tapes."

We both heard, "Peter, did you tell him about my name?" It's Gina. Peter did not tell me about her name. What he said was, "She's a hot shot. I'm crazy about her."

Gina wanted to show us something. Her grip. Most players wrap their hand around the butt of the cue. The good ones caress it between their thumb and first three fingers. Gina held that cue tight in her right hand, her index finger pointing straight toward the tip. "You've got quite a grip," I said.

"Yeh. The guys make fun of me because I go like this. [She stroked a little.] And the guys will tell me, 'I'll try to show you how to do it the right way.' And, no, I want to do it my way."

Peter joked, "They're like in golf. They try to show you the right way. [He gestures out the cliché pose of the man, arms around the woman, holding her hands onto the shaft, teaching her to swing.] Those animals," Peter said.

But Gina was serious. "I mean, I know it's wrong. I point my thumb up like this. [It sticks straight up, as if she's hitching a ride.] And I put this foot up. [She raised the heel of her forward foot, her left one, off the floor.] And they go, 'No.' And so I say to myself, 'Ugh.' I want to do it on my own."

"You're right," Peter said. "Go with the most comfortable way to shoot."

I was sorely tempted to tell Gina that with her grip, she'll never develop a stroke; she'll never achieve cue ball control; she'll be lucky to make a five-ball run. But this isn't Bacchi's. And 1960 is a long time ago.

The focus of this night's celebration, Jack Harvey, the height and build of a middleweight slugger, and what used to be called "clean-cut," had drunk plenty of beer. Yet he was a model of self-control. "Tell me a little about yourself," I suggested.

"I'm 32," Jack said. "I was born in Austin, Texas. I've lived in Texas most of my life. Started at the University of Texas at Austin. But I didn't finish until just this last semester, at San Diego State."

"What's your major?"

"Political science and economics."

"What are you going to do with that?"

"I was in sales for 13 years. I was a wine consultant for a wholesale company in Texas. And a sales manager. It's a lot of fun. It's a fun industry. It's always on the change. I mean, it's not as boring as selling straight booze. There's always a new vintage or a new winemaker, and there's new things that are happening technology-wise in producing wine."

"Now that you've finished the degree, are you going to do something different?"

"Well, actually, I've finished this degree, but I've decided that since I'm such an old guy I'm going to stay in school for another year and a half and I'm going for a master's in international business at USD. I start in the fall."

"I'm curious. How are you going to support yourself while you're doing it? Part-time work?"

"Fortunately, I made a lot of money in the wine business. And I am fortunate enough to have some other income. I do work part-time with a friend of mine's company — it's conference calling, and I sell the airtime for conference calls. Between that and what I've done in the past, and part from my family, I've got enough to provide for me."

"How long have you been playing pool?"

"Ever since I was a real young kid."

"Have you had your own table?"

"Yes. You couldn't tell it right now. But that could be because of the four days that I've been with my friends."

"But I saw you make a ball in the corner pocket with the girl's cue stick in there, which is not as easy as it looks. What's your favorite game, by the way? Nine Ball, Eight Ball, Straight?"

"I think I like Eight Ball just because you can play with partners. A few more people involved. It's kind of like, this is a relaxing game for me. I don't come and play for money. But when I want to play against myself and have some competition, I play golf."

When I asked him about the presence of women in a pool room, do they make a difference in how the men behave, I hit a nerve.

"I think that's a bunch of crap," he said.

"What is?"

"You know. People have to take responsibility for their own actions. And whether there's women here or not, if they're going to get into fights, they're probably going to get into a fight anyway. I guess my viewpoint on life in general is that you have to take responsibility for your own actions. It's always been that way. I've been very conservative. All my life. And it's not because of my upbringing. In my family."

"Well, you've got a good steady stroke, and a good eye."

"No, not right now. We were shooting last night. And I was playing well."

The last but not least member of our group was Anthony Matchus. Apparently, in an effort to introduce himself to the young ladies that evening, Anthony had spelled out his last name — u as in ukelele, s as in saxophone — and this had become a running joke. Anthony is 28, from Austin, Texas, attending the University of Texas there.

"Good school," I said, "great school."

"That is an excellent school. I'm a bartender."

"What's your major?"

"Speech."

"I taught speech for three years," I said. "I didn't know what the hell I was doing. I had a Ph.D. from Brown in American literature, but I needed a job."

"Well, my concentration is in organizational communication. I have developed a fondness for interpersonal communication through the classes I have taken. That's some very interesting courses. But back to the topic. I'm a bartender there. Putting myself through school. I love to play pool."

"How long have you been playing?"

"I'm 28 now. I've probably been playing 15 years."

"Really?"

"I know it doesn't show. It's a recreational thing, a hobby. It goes with partying and having a good time. Pool is something I would much rather do than go to a dance club and dance. I think women are coming in pool halls more these days because it's not as threatening as a dance club."

"Why?"

"Well, most dance clubs there's a real connotation about being a meat market. It's a pickup place. You go to a dance hall and try to pick up women. Pool halls are more intimate."

"That's an insight."

"And they are. You're able to communicate over pool. You go to a dance hall the music's so loud — not that the music isn't good — but it's at a listening level where you can't enjoy the music and actually enjoy what you're doing at the same time. That's why I kinda prefer going to pool halls instead of dance halls, because I can pick up chicks, so to speak, because I can't talk to them when the music's so loud and we're dancing and sweating on the floor, you know, with a hundred other people. It's just too intense a situation."

I was surprised, and said so. The idea of a pool room being less "intense" than a club.

Anthony went on. "I'll tell you a little bit about my feelings towards Fats, because it is the first time I've been here. And first impressions are very important."

"Damn right they are."

"Fats is a very nice pool hall. Thirty-eight tables on two floors. All regulation-sized tables. They've got a nine-by-four-foot here. I believe it's a nine-by-four."

"Actually, it's nine by four and a half," I said.

"That's why I'm off. And upstairs, they've got some eight-by-fours. I've not been here in any type of competitive atmosphere, except the competitive atmosphere that you and your peers and other people in the bar drinking together would be involved in. And as far as competitions go, I couldn't tell you much about that, but just coming here and being in several pool halls for the past ten years, since I've been of a legal drinking age, [I'd say] Fats is a standout place. Very nice. From what I've seen tonight. Beautiful tables. And they sell sticks here. Which is unusual. And coming from Texas, there's a few franchise places in Texas. One named Speed's Billiards and another named Click's. And they're not even comparable.

"This establishment here is much better than each of those establishments. Those are the places I usually frequent and play. Just because of the quality of the sticks and the tables. I'm not particularly a pool player or as good as to own my own stick and take it with me and go play. Those are the kind of guys I like to beat. The jokers that come in with their own stick. And you know I could grab a bar stick, slightly warped and rounded out a little bit. I just want to say one more thing. I don't know if your article is about this particular pool hall."

"It is."

"It's not just necessarily the pool tables or the playing atmosphere. But what creates that overall atmosphere is the staff. The bar. I may be a little biased here because I'm a bartender. But I think they have about ten beers on tap. The waitress, Michele, has been very wonderful. Great service. And I would definitely come back if I was to spend more time in San Diego."

This time there was no need for a "last call" announcement. We all knew the night was over. I noticed Ariane talking to Peter Whipple. A waitress, perhaps the "Michele" Anthony had referred to, volunteered to be interviewed. She'd call the next day. My wife and I looked at each other, tired and pleased.

"So you're doing something for the Reader," said a fellow I had honest-to-God not noticed though he sat at the table right in front of me. Crew-cut tough, young, he introduced himself as the cook at Fats. Tall draft in hand, and a plate of fries, he wanted to talk. What a surprise, I thought. One night, three hours, in fact, and I'm so comfortable, feeling so familiar with the place, I'm ready for an insider's conversation with the cook.

Early the next afternoon, just before heading for Lindbergh Field, my wife and I returned to Fats. The day bartender, articulate, clearly a member of the Fats team, spoke with knowledge and enthusiasm of the operation. In 1991 he had helped open Dick's Last Resort. He'd seen the area around Fats blossom, he said, from "bums sleeping in every doorway" to a "growing concern." He said Fats's "nighttime clientele spent a little money on what they wear. They're not here to start fights." Since he'd been there, he'd seen "one little scuffle." Women, he said, were not "hit on constantly" at Fats. "If we've got somebody out there who's asking every woman in the place for a date, they're out the door." This bartender knew a lot about "moving product." But he also refused to "sell up" when somebody bought a cue. Unlike most of the Fats people, he had played serious pool, for 20 years.

I asked him for a rack of balls. I'd play on table five, the one my last-night friends played on. I'd shoot for just a little while, my wife on a stool, watching. It was too early, but I bought a beer. The bar cue was straight, the table smooth and clean. I'd started running balls, getting into the feel of things, when a family — father, mother, two kids (boy and girl) came in from a Jeep Cherokee. I think a grandfather was with them, too. The girl stood by, watching me. Then asked if she could play. ■

Nobody's Baby But My Own

A Middle-Class White Girl Considers Extinction

The following story was submitted with a request from the author for anonymity.

The ugliness of babies — bare, untraceable fact, in my book — isn't often admitted. One doesn't want to be lynched. And since the circumstances in which one is called upon to admire a baby often include proximity to the infant's mother, to not feign delight over the tiny, waxlike features, alien eyes, fascist mouth, is tantamount to a face-slap. This is understandable. An infant's mother suffers, has suffered, a lot. She needs to feel it's worth it. Why be rude?

To find babies repellent is considered mean, especially in a woman. A woman who dislikes babies may be considered, literally, antisocial. But notice when people peer open-mouthed at the little tyke, they coo, "Oh, isn't he precious!" in the same overdone, gasping tone, no matter how many babies they've viewed. It is a tone of exaggerated awe rarely heard outside of faked orgasms.

More points of baby repulsion: the expression in their eyes, eagerly nonjudgmental. Their up-curling, saliva'd lips. Their blank, milky scent. Likewise the trappings — I use the word advisedly — of babyhood: tinkling chimes, quilted diaper bags, gurgling noises, pastel colors, the smell of talcum powder. Perhaps it is a question of taste, like wrinkling one's nose at eggs or the color orange. It has always been this way for me. Perhaps distaste is the outgrowth of unpleasant associations: an infant's vulnerability, a mother's loss of control over her own body. My distaste for babies, however, is increasingly beside the point.

It is beside the point because I am 31 years old. Perhaps, more specifically, because I am a 31-year-old heterosexual woman.

I still do not fantasize about a warm bundle at my breast, at feeling rubbery, mobile limbs flailing in my arms, tiny wet fists grasping strands of my hair. Those images occasion disgust. And babies' much-lauded smell, evoking for some purity, incorruptibility, in me provokes a spine-tightening and panic I have no desire to explore further.

What has changed, what has crept upon me in the last five years, is a physical pang, as unconsciously precipitated as a breath, at the sight of children.

This is, presumably, what people refer to as "hearing the biological clock ticking." It happens when I walk into a doctor's waiting room and see a child sitting cross-legged on the floor, pushing a stuffed bear around the carpet and making car noises; when I drive past an elementary school where children run in wide arcs on the dirt outfield. My eyes take the image in, my chest constricts; I am overwhelmed by a sudden, visceral tenderness.

Worst yet, an incidental scene in a film: a woman kneels at the edge of a bathtub, washing her son's feet. The nine-year-old boy is telling her a story, prattling on in a piping voice. He has slid down and stuck his legs out over the tub's edge toward her, playful and trusting. Water trickles between the woman's fingers, over the tender objects she holds, which are small and lumpy. She works up a lather of soap between her hands, encases one foot in it. Her hands rub in circles; she asks the boy a question about his story in a tone of amused interest. The boy is calm, does not squirm or pull his foot away. One senses the ease between them, of a ritual many times repeated. A dullness bordering on pain runs quick down from my heart, right through my womb.

My mother married at 18, had her first child at 20, gave birth to me just short of her 23rd birthday. She was a young mother, even by the standards of the '50s, when the average woman married at age 20, and two-thirds of those had a baby within four years. Mother had just the two of us, me without planning it, and stopped there; the typical woman of her era had three kids.

By the time I was 21, fewer than half of women around my age were married, and many of those were childless. It is said that we were waiting longer for these things because we wanted to complete our educations and establish ourselves in careers. I, however, was working nights, doing a gram of speed a week, and living with an alcoholic.

My main preoccupations were grooming and dressing, watching movies, reading books, and having sex. My involvement with other human beings was as limited as I could make it: even my long-standing friendships bear empty gaps during that time in my life. The boyfriend was a good choice for that reason, because he spent most of our hours together passed out on the couch in front of the television.

At the time, I did not contemplate what my mother's path would have meant; it was, like most of the world, unreal to me. I did not believe early marriage and children were any longer an option for women. I wasn't raised to idealize that way of life; I had, in fact, developed scorn for it. I thought women who married early and had children were trapped, unfulfilled, dominated by others, and hiding from the real world. Instead, ten years later, I have realized those perceptions perfectly described me.

My beer-loving boyfriend was, I considered, a move up, an emblem of maturity — he was, after all, 11 years older than I was. After teendom, when furtive tumbles were always laced with a stinging fear of pregnancy, my affection or gratitude or neurotic attachment to this older man, with whom I shared an apartment, with whom I bought groceries, came to manifest itself in a desire to, as I put it to myself, "have his baby."

I was surprised by the sentiment in myself. I explained to my sister, "This is the first man I've been with whom I admire enough to want to duplicate." A good-sounding lie, isn't it? What was true was that, at the time, he looked like stability. I was during my two years with him in a position of relative safety: he had a car, a checking account, credit cards, had lived in the same place for a decade. When I let a parking ticket lapse into a warrant, he paid it off. When I broke my arm, he drove me to the emergency room. When we went to pick up our little packets of coke or speed from his connection, he always saw to it I had a comfortable place to sit, out of public view, while the deal went down. As deeply immersed in fantasy as I was, the logical progression was to motherhood.

So I lay there with him, on those nights when he woke up, stumbled in from couch to bed, did not turn away from me growling and hugging his pillow, imagining the journey of his sperm inside me, the blind penetration one of them would force on my glistening egg, wondering: would I feel it? I was not, as I did later, imagining the fat sleekness that would overtake my body, not thinking about that fabled glow. Just imagining the announcement. "I want to have your baby." Not that I ever discussed this with him.

"This is the first man I've been with whom I admire enough to want to duplicate." A good-sounding lie, isn't it?

I did not grow up with pregnant women or with babies. We sometimes had big-bellied neighbors, but we moved from place to place too often to make friends of them. My schoolmates' mothers were all through with childbearing, were educated, were professionals — an attorney who did pro bono work with unwed mothers, for example. We weren't in touch with any relatives. I never babysat an infant. I saw only pregnant women at their worst: trudging heavy-limbed down the street or collapsed on bus benches, badly dressed, sweating, blotchy-skinned.

I saw my first baby at the age of two. I had wandered. I had wandered several blocks, mid-morning, then turned up someone's front walk and approached a screen door. In the dim room behind it a voice invited me in. A woman sat in a chair facing the door. She had brown hair, was young, like my mother. It seems to me she was a babysitter of mine, or somehow acquainted with my parents — she was familiar, but maybe to a young child all adults seem familiar. It seems, anyway, she was able to call my mother to come get me. While we waited, the woman sat in a chair facing the door with a baby on her shoulder. She supported the baby with one hand, and it was clinging to her upper arm, and sucking on her shoulder. Rather, it was sucking on a raised, round area of flesh on her shoulder, some kind of booster shot or inoculation mark. I do not know if the disgust I feel at the picture of that tiny mouth fastened onto the angry, puffy flesh is something a two-year-old would feel or if it came later.

By the time I was a conscious child, the sentimental stereotype of little girl mothering dollies, fumblingly diapering them, gently chiding, was out of favor. I never dressed in mommy's shoes, hat, pearls, and conducted a tea party. When playing "house" with friends, I remember arguing over who got to be the baby. It was the role I wanted most. I had a talking baby doll, Chatty Cathy, to whom I fed bottles, though I remember the acrid taste and sharp edge of the doll bottle's pink plastic nipple in my own mouth. She and other dolls served most memorably as models for hair experimentation, at least until I was old enough for a Barbie, who reigned supreme for years, capable as she was of backyard adventures, nights on the town, seductions of Ken.

When I, lying there in the dark beside the boyfriend, considered "having his baby," I imagined these cinematic moments. The boyfriend's flustered catering to my comfort, admonitions not to exert myself, seats offered on public buses, cravings for pickles, sly giggles welling up in me as I placed his hand on my perfect, basketball-shaped abdomen.

Instead, what happened was, we noticed the landlady's stomach growing. We speculated, my boyfriend and I, in snickering, contemptuous whispers. The landlady was a worn-out, leathery blonde in her late 30s and drank a lot of beer. She had a violent, on-again, off-again relationship with one of the other tenants. Some nights we'd hear screaming and shouts, bodies slamming the walls. Sometimes the Filipino couple next door did that, too, and sometimes both couples argued on the same night. We would lie in bed laughingly trying to figure who was bashing whom. Yes, laughing over it.

At first I thought the landlady's extra weight was a beer belly. The boyfriend maintained she was "preggers." One day she was out watering the strip of lawn by the parking spaces when I walked past. She was wearing a tent-like T-shirt with the words "Baby on Board" and an arrow pointing downward.

A while after that I saw a cardboard box in the dumpster labeled voiture d'enfant on its side, under a picture of a stroller. Then one day the landlady was gone to the hospital, and the baby's father, the violent tenant, sat on the patio in a lawn chair offering cans of beer from an ice chest, beneath a garland of waxy cutout letters reading "It's A Boy." Given the discretion with which the pregnancy had been handled, the father's coming-out was somehow embarrassing. I felt worried for the landlady, worried that the father would balk and she would be left alone. I wondered how she had told him she was pregnant and if one of the violent arguments jarring the apartment walls had taken place after she'd sprung it on him.

I never had such news to spring on my boyfriend. Instead, one day he called me at work and said he had a surprise for me. When I came home, he held a finger to his lips to keep me from speaking and gestured me to the bedroom. There, wedged between two pillows and asleep, was a small gray cat. "Look. It's our new little daughter," the boyfriend said.

We named her, the two of us sitting on the couch holding hands. We invented extravagant, heroic names, thinking of her future possibilities. But the boyfriend preferred to call her "our little daughter." Like a baby, I could sit with a book and her cradled to my chest, warm and thrumming with affection, content. He fed her Mexican take-out from his own plate, tossed beer bottle caps for her to fetch. When he passed out in front of the TV, she walked up his legs to his chest and slept there.

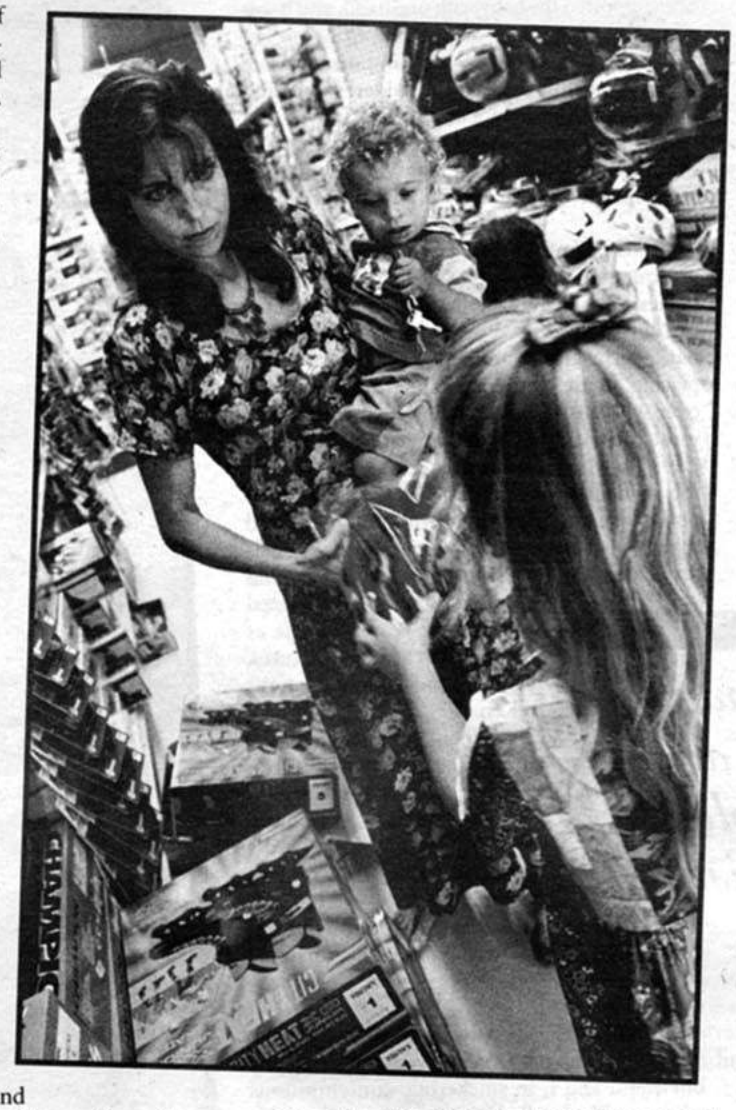
This was neither the first nor the last cat-baby in my life. As a little girl, my sister and I had often forced clothing on a large and tolerant tom, so that he could play the role of infant prince that we, rival fairy princesses, could battle over the possession of. In adulthood I have more than once faced him-or-me dilemmas, when boyfriends whose legs were cat-bodied in place in bed once too often demanded feline exile. The cats usually lasted longer than the boyfriends did.

And I, like the spoiled, aging child-woman of cliché, the beribboned, chocolate-eating, bedridden hypochondriac, hysterically indulgent of lap dogs or Persian cats, hugged my baby-pet and murmured my love to it in a saccharine voice.

After two years, the boredom and stagnation of my pseudo-parenthood had me worrying for my sanity. I thought if I came home to that snoring figure on the couch one more night, I'd scream. I moved out. I lived alone for a long time. My feline infant-substitutes continued in a long succession. By age 27, I felt even closer to unpleasant clichés of spinsterhood. Which is not to say I believe a woman alone necessarily becomes an ugly cliché. I could have made more of myself, been more self-empowered, more engaged in the world, had I the skills. I didn't.

I began to worry about turning into a lonely, selfish old woman — I was already a lonely, selfish young one. When you live alone you become set in your ways. You are not required to accommodate anyone. As an antidote, I considered, and rejected, single motherhood. My next boyfriend had a son from a previous marriage. It did not, could not have, lasted long. Instead of discovering in myself reserves of generosity and maternal instinct, I found myself jealous and competitive, vying with a seven-year-old for his father's attention.

I was not imagining the fat sleekness that would overtake my body, not thinking about that fabled glow.



I often found myself thinking of where my mother was at my age: two small children, divorced, finishing a college degree, running a household, casting about for other, more promising men. I remembered the nights my mother spent crying behind her locked bedroom door, her tearful arguments over the phone with our father, her woundedness that the child-support check was late again.

We sit, my women friends and I, trying to puzzle it out. We could not be, we reason, those things that a mother must be. To be a mother one gives up control. Pregnancy takes a body over, to your detriment — you are cannibalized from the inside by a life that is other than you. After a grueling marathon of physical agony, the beast slouches into the world and becomes its center. All the little attentions, the considerations, that you were accorded while it was inside you are transferred to baby. Then, for years, you must accept whatever the unschooled little creature dishes out: spittle on your silk blouse, feces and urine, ear-splitting wails at 2:00 a.m., fangs tearing at your nipples. Although you outsize the creature many times over, its most impulsive wail or coo brings it your attention, causes you to perform an impressive range of actions for the tiny beast's benefit that it could not possibly actuate on its own.

And we agree, my women friends and I, that in a world as sexualized as this, the mere fact of having to handle another human being's genitals in a nonsexual context is jarring, impossible. We can imagine ourselves coping with a baby girl, whose equipment is familiar, associated with mundane monthly routines. But touching a penis without the intent to arouse it?

We agree that we are selfish, jealous of our time to ourselves, unwilling to relinquish our own places of priority in our lives.

It is a sign of the times, of my times, my class, my culture. None of us withering-ovaried white girls wants kids. We talk about it over dinner in one of our houses, a funky, beautifully decorated old place in a marginal neighborhood, the kind of rickety, precariously balanced place you couldn't have if you had a kid, in the kind of neighborhood you wouldn't risk living in if you had a kid. At least not if you didn't have to. Being middle-class white girls, we can't conceive of having to.

Children, we agree, would require for all of us a mate and marriage, filled as we are with horror stories of single motherhood, Murphy Brown notwithstanding. We are not high-powered television news executives, anyway. We are not fictional characters either. And although we all fantasize about finding and marrying him — grow rapturous and misty-eyed at the prospect — we are all, at the moment, celibate. One of us has been celibate for five years. And none of us are trying to do anything about it. It's too damned scary.

A friend says (leaning back in her chair, foot braced against the dinner table, working dental floss between her teeth with slow satisfaction, like a postprandial cigar), "I've always known that I'll never have a child. No question! Maybe because I'm so much of a child myself." She says this laughing. Then her voice drops. "It took me so long to learn how to take care of this child," she stabs an index finger at her sternum. "I'll be damned if I'm going to jeopardize her welfare by taking on the responsibility of a baby and jeopardize the welfare of a baby, too, with my conflicting priorities."

We have this in common, me and my women friends: years of resentment of being neglected children ourselves. Distant fathers, childlike mothers. Emotional instability. Cats.

A friend, a woman who has had her kids and moved on, planted a flea in my ear: a marriage and a baby would ground me, give me stability. I was gripped, briefly, by an obsessive fantasy of marriage and children. The man was much older than I, and felt, perhaps, the weight of mortality on him. One night after sex I just came out with it.

"Why don't we get married? Have children? I think we could make a good life together." This stunning pronouncement was just what he wanted to hear, in a way, though not really from me.

I was dizzy, distracted for weeks. I made him dinner a lot, feeling what I assume is the pride wives feel in serving their husbands good meals. I arrived one night at his creaky, dusty house — all done up, as I usually was; this time, in delicate sandals and a pleated skirt and my hair up; feeling graceful and feminine; feeling, in short, like a bride — to find him in an attentive mood, quietly pleasant.

He produced a bottle of champagne, asked me to sit down. He popped and poured. He proposed a toast. "To our children, as yet unborn."

I recall that I could not breathe properly then. The dizziness was terror, wonder. Here he was, saying these things. I could almost imagine it was real. That this was a man who would stay.

The subtext to every conversation was the unasked question, "Could this work?" I slipped into imagining myself as married to him, carrying a child mixing him and me, at odd moments: lying side by side on our backs in bed, walking through a supermarket, driving somewhere in the car — it was like, "Here I am, the missus in the passenger seat, hands folded in lap, being conducted by my husband to a dinner party." "Here I am, the wifey, thoughtfully selecting her menu preparations for a week of tasty, nutritious meals."

Public, televised, fictionalized moments are the only ones of family life I have seen. Once, before the last surviving commune in Mission Valley was condemned, I saw some family life. I saw a woman pull a tit out of her paisley-patterned dashiki and fit it in her infant's mouth, as she was telling us she would not accept money for the clothing she was to sew us, only barter. On her dirty bare feet there were rings on her toes. She was cross-legged on the floor when we came in the house and remained seated there until we left. A solid, immobile unit, like an idol.

This man, willing to marry me, desperate, at age 50, for children, did not feel his future was secure, had, in fact, employment problems. He called me once excited about a job interview that had gone well. The salary, he hurried to say, was a good enough one. "If I get this job," he said then, "tomorrow we can start fucking for real."

"For real?"

"For children."

It was breath-stopping. Even remembering it, I feel the pulse in my wrists. For real. My womb lept with enthusiasm.

The obsession took root, flowered. I fantasized a maternity wardrobe based on early renaissance paintings, no sailor suits, no Peter Pan collars or grosgrain ribbon bows. I fantasized beatific smiles to bestow on everyone, months of walking in quiet mystery, public deference. Every woman, contemplating pregnancy, fancies herself a Madonna. Every newborn might be the Second Coming.

I imagined myself sitting composed in a rocker by a window through which dappled sunlight would spill on my gently inclined head, hair rippling just so over my shoulder. The tiny rubbery mouth and fingers palpating my swollen breast.

(I would not be a gingham-and-pastel mom. My diaper bag would be made of black leather. I would dress my baby in softest bunny suits, elaborate costumes, furs. Then it would be a toddler and wear red corduroy overalls and striped turtlenecks. It would be a sunny, brilliant child, uncannily wise, preternaturally obedient. A Christ.)

But I really couldn't handle it. Marriage and children sounded terrifying, and the man, well, that was a whole other ball of wax. My shrink suggested, "You hate him. Because you hate yourself, so any man who'd stay with you must be contemptible."

For a long time I avoided writing this story. When I sat down to write it, I would begin to feel very, very sleepy. Later I realized this was because it is a depressing story. It is depressing because it forces me to remember depressing aspects of the past. I mentioned this to a friend. "It makes sense that you'd find it depressing," he said. "Because if you don't have children, you are condemned to living in the past." ■

How To Mash A Buried Pleasure ❦ By Judith Moore

Photographs by Byron Pepper

The Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis burial came at a time when I was thinking about potatoes. Potatoes and death, burial and resurrection, rising from the dead and returning to life, for me seem linked. To think of that homely edible tuber that swells at the end of an underground stem of the green plant Solanum tuberosum is also to think of all my beloved dead and my hope for our eternal life.

This connection may seem bizarre, even macabre, if the way you see the world does not include belief in life after death, as resurrection or reincarnation. But even the most apparently rational view will admit that when you bury a potato in the earth, you are burying hope for the future.

Potatoes are one of the most dependable crops a home gardener can grow. Buy a bag of seed potatoes from your garden center, choose a planting method, pop the potato into soil, and three to four months later, your one seed potato may yield ten or more pounds of potatoes.

Planting potatoes does not necessarily demand digging deep trenches or holes that go through to China. If your soil is loose and loamy, set your seed potato atop the ground and cover it with five or six inches of compost, hay, or even old autumn leaves. As weeks pass, this blanketing will settle and more hay, compost, whatever, will have to be added. When harvest time comes in fall, pull away the mulch and pick potatoes.

In the southern United States I have seen gardeners plant potatoes in old car tires for support. As the potato plant grows, more tires are added. I've seen as many as four bald Michelins surrounding one potato plant.

Even if all you have is a patio, you can grow at least one potato plant. Fill a whiskey barrel or pressed-paper pot the approximate size of a whiskey barrel with potting soil. Wet down the soil. Bury your potato six inches beneath the soil in the middle of the pot. Keep the soil moist but not soggy. Depending on weather, a green sprout should rise within a few weeks. Above ground, the bushy potato plant's dark green leaves will provide a foliage display. Down in the pot's dark interior the tubers will quietly lead their own genetically encoded potato lives. Blessed by stubborn and powerful instinct, they push aside soil to make room for themselves; they grow and grow, filling themselves with what later will be our digestible sour-cream topped, buttery joy.

PLANTING POTATOES does not demand digging holes that go through to China.

A seed potato, or mother tuber, doesn't look much different than potatoes you buy at Ralphs. There's nothing to keep you from planting a Ralphs potato. The problem with a grocery store potato is that it may have been given a bath in sprout retardant and therefore won't put out the sprouts you need to get your plant growing. Too, the seed potato will have been dusted with fungicide to prevent the rot and diseases to which potatoes are responsive, whereas the grocery store potato won't.

Home gardeners and commercial potato producers rarely plant potato from seed. Dr. Herman Timms, a retired UC-Davis professor, whose entire professional life concentrated on the potato, explains that the potato plant can be reproduced either sexually, by planting potato seeds, or through vegetative, or asexual, means, by planting the seed potato, or mother tuber. The seed potato will reproduce the same plant that grew one year or even 100 years ago, depending on the age of the variety.

Potato flowers appear near stem's end in among the plant's coarse green leaves. The wind-pollinated potato flower is a pretty little yellow, pink, or white blossom, depending on potato variety. The fruits that develop from the flowers resemble tiny green tomatoes and are poisonous. The seeds within these fruits, says Dr. Timms, do not "always breed true. You can have 10 to 15 thousand variations within one seed ball. So many different combinations of genetic material are in one ball that each seed in that pod likely will produce a different potato. Because the potato tends to revert to its wild ancestors, the offspring that come from a sexual union might go back a thousand years to potatoes growing wild then in Peru. You might get a potato plant that would set a tuber that weighs three pounds and has yellow flesh or a plant that would set a tuber that is long like a snake and has purple flesh. You are rolling the dice. You don't know what you're getting. The advantage, however, with seed is that you eliminate viruses carried by the mother tubers."

Your potato flower may not get around to producing a seed pod, says Dr. Timms. "In California the temperature sometimes rises so high that the flowers are aborted. Along the coast where the temperature is lower, you are more likely to get flowers that stay on the plant."

Should the flower produce seed and should a gardener want to plant out these seeds the next season, harvesting the seed is fairly simple. When the seed ball begins to soften and seems ready to fall off the plant, pick it. Bring it indoors and break up the pod into a pan of cool water. The seeds will sink to the bottom of the pan, and the pulpy mess will float. Skim off the pulp, lay the seeds out on a paper towel to dry, and when dry, store in a closed jar. Along in January you can plant the seeds indoors in a seed-flat filled with moist potting soil. When the seeds germinate and the plants sprout three or four leaves, put out the plant into your garden and grow as you would any potato. Likely the result will be at least one terrifying monster potato, perhaps, as Dr. Timms says, a throwback to one of the Peruvian originals.

The potato, taxonomically a member of the nightshade family and relative of tobacco and tomato, first grew wild as many as 8000 years ago from the southern United States to the tip of Chile. More than 90 wild species still grow there, together with several hundred cultivated varieties. Although food historians disagree by as many as 4000 years as to when the potato was first domesticated, certainly by the time Plato was memorializing Socrates' chit-chat, the Incas in Peru, Ecuador, and northern Chile had lined up the wild potato into rows and tamed it.

"I think," says Dr. Timms, "that someone stumbled on the potato tuber and asked themselves, 'I wonder if this is good to eat?' or someone saw an animal eating a tuber and decided, 'Well, I'll try a bite of that. If the animal can eat it, I can sure as heck eat it too.' That's usually how plant domestication first happens."

The potato became a staple of the Inca diet and so central to Incan life that the Quechua language has a thousand words for different kinds of potatoes. The Incas measured time by how long it takes potatoes to cook and used potatoes for divination. An even number of potatoes was a good omen and an odd number a sign of trouble ahead.

From the Andes, after Spain's conquest there in the 1530s, potatoes were packed onboard returning conquistadors' ships as food for sailors. Thus, potatoes made their way to ports where the Spanish ships stopped.

Europeans initially regarded potato with suspicion, even terror, in part because of poisonous alkaloids present in many nightshades, including belladonna, potato, and tomato. "You don't want to make yourself a salad," says Dr. Timms, "from potato and tomato leaves."

This poisonous alkaloid, solanin, is present throughout the plant. Dr. Timms suggests that solanin protects the potato greenery and underground tuber from insects, who when they chew a leaf or potato tuber, find the alkaloid's bitter taste disagreeable. Potato tubers exposed to light develop solanin, which gives a green tinge to the tuber's skin and its flesh directly beneath the skin. Potatoes should be stored in a dark place, and if green portions develop on a tuber, they should be pared away. Solanin is destroyed by cooking, but it can turn a potato bitter. Sprouts that form on stored potatoes also contain solanin and should be cut off before cooking.

Legend has it that Sir Walter Raleigh tried to tempt Queen Elizabeth I with potatoes, managing on one occasion actually to get a dish of boiled potatoes placed before her at the royal table. Apparently, she refused them.

EUROPEANS initially regarded potato with suspicion, even terror.

Louis XVI of France, to encourage potato-growing at a time when wheat suffered repeated crop failures, ordered royal fields planted in potato. He set his troops to guard the royal potato fields, hoping that the guard would both provoke public interest and make the crop seem particularly valuable. He sported a potato flower in his buttonhole and served banquets in which potatoes featured prominently. But Louis's efforts on behalf of the potato did little to overcome French resistance to the tuber.

Not until the mid-18th Century was potato regularly planted as a food crop on the continent and in England and Ireland. In the latter country, the potato quickly became the most important crop. Henry Hobhouse's Seeds of Change: Five Plants That Transformed Mankind (quinine, sugar cane, cotton, tea, potato) explains that Ireland's mild, damp climate and "the lazybed" encouraged increase in potato acreage. To prepare the lazybed, the farmer had merely to spread his potato plot with manure, seaweed, rotted turf, or dry peat, dig a ditch on either side of the plot for drainage, throw dirt from the ditch atop his plot, tuck in seed potatoes, and when fall arrived, dig up his tubers. (Good books on potatoes and their history as a crop include the Hobhouse; Cecil Woodham-Smith's Great Hunger; E.J. Kahn Jr.'s Staffs of Life [corn, potatoes, wheat, rice, soybeans]; and Redcliffe Salaman's History and Social Influence of the Potato.)

By the early 1800s potato and milk were the principal food of more than 40 percent of the Irish population, who ate an average of seven pounds of potatoes each day. The fungus Phytophthora infestans struck Ireland's 1845–1847 potato crops, causing what came to be called the Great Hunger, the worst European disaster since the Black Death of 1348–50. In 1840, with 8.5 million people, Ireland was one of the world's most densely populated countries. During the famine that figure fell, through death and emigration, by 2.5 million. The Great Hunger brought a million Irish to the U.S., among them Patrick Kennedy, the 35th president's great-grandfather.

Potato was first grown as a commercial crop in fields around Londonderry, New Hampshire, in 1719. Like Europeans, the colonists were suspicious of potatoes. They fed them to cattle and sold them to West Indian planters, who bought them as inexpensive food for slaves. This suspicion held until the second half of the 19th Century, ending when the Irish arrived in great numbers in America.

After the Irish and Phytophthora infestans, the next important actor in the history of the potato in America is Luther Burbank (1849–1926). Born in Massachusetts, Burbank was an indifferent student who through his mother became interested in plants. When Burbank's father's death left his mother a dependent widow, Burbank gave up plans to attend medical school and took up truck gardening. Market success, Burbank realized, depended upon his producing earlier, bigger and more attractive vegetables and berries than did his older commercial rivals. Without training and only slight understanding of scientific theory, Burbank taught himself plant crossing, selection, and hybridization.

While cultivating bigger, earlier Hubbard squash and tomatoes, Burbank also turned his attention to potato. During the 1850s, Phytophthora infestans had begun to turn American potato crops to slime in the fields. Horticulturists believed, correctly, that sexual rather than asexual propagation might well keep America's potato crop from the fate of Ireland's.

Dr. Timms explains. "You can carry any number of diseases with seed potato. All seed potatoes are loaded with viruses. The viruses are latent, sitting there, benign, really not doing any damage. But, just as we carry bacteria and fungi around with us in our bodies and don't die from them, so does the seed potato. But, as with the human body, all the seed potato needs is some environmental factor to trigger the bacteria or fungi and damage can then ensue."

During the 1860s a New York farmer, with wild potato plants acquired from Panama, developed through crossing a potato he named the Early Rose. Although the Early Rose appeared resistant to Phytophthora infestans, the tubers the plant produced were smaller than most housewives preferred and they stored poorly, not lasting over winters.

"It required no genius to know," Burbank would later reflect in his autobiography, "that if a large, white, fine-grained potato could be produced, it would displace the other varieties and give its discoverer a great advantage over his competitors." In the summer of 1872 Burbank's Early Rose potato plant produced a seed pod, a rare event. Every morning when Burbank went to his 17 acres, he checked the pod for readiness. And then one morning the pod had disappeared. "Day after day," Burbank later wrote, "I returned and took up the search again." When Burbank finally found the missing pod, only a few feet from its parent plant, he preserved its 23 seeds for planting. Next season he carefully planted all 23 seeds, one foot apart. All 23 seeds produced plants and tubers, but only two of these plants produced tubers that Burbank believed were a genuine improvement over Early Rose. "These," he wrote, "were as different from the Early Rose as modern beef cattle were from the old Texas Longhorns."

The next year, 1874, Burbank planted the seed from his two plants. "It was from the potatoes of these two plants, carefully raised, carefully dug, jealously guarded, and painstakingly planted the next year," wrote Burbank, "that I built the Burbank potato."

THE BEST USE FOR POTATO FLAKES is to drizzle them over Christmas tree branches and pretend they're snow.

In 1875 Burbank sold for $150 all but ten of the tubers from his new potato to J.H. Gregory, a Marblehead, Massachusetts, seedsman. Gregory named Burbank's potato Burbank's Seedling.

"Perhaps one of the first words I ever heard was California," wrote Burbank, going on to add what his biographer Peter Dreyer, in A Gardener Touched with Genius, describes as a "somewhat rambling dissertation of the whys and wherefores of his move west." According to Dreyer, it was unrequited love more than longing for the California El Dorado that sent Burbank to California. With his $150 plus $500 from his inheritance, ten mother tubers and a broken heart, Burbank headed to Santa Rosa, California, to make his fortune. The ten tubers provided for the Burbank potato's introduction to the West Coast.

Although Burbank for the rest of his life continued to experiment with potatoes, he never had another success with them. He did, however, go on to develop the Shasta daisy, Santa Rosa and Satsuma plums, the plumcot (a plum-apricot cross), the July Elberta peach, the thornless blackberry, spineless cactus, white blackberry, and made improvements on various tomatoes, corn, squash, and peas.

When I ask Dr. Timms about Burbank, he replies enthusiastically, "Oh, he was spectacular! No one has ever been able to duplicate what he did with the potato. He went out there and made sexual crosses by transferring pollen from one flower to another. But no one to this date has ever been able to duplicate what he did to get the Burbank Russet.

"He did it by chance alone. If you try to put this on a computer and figure out what the chances are, it's astronomical. We've never been able to find a potato that's better than the Burbank Russet for the general purposes we want. No one has been able to duplicate it. I've had requests from all over the world, from China and India, for seed with which they could do again what Burbank did. But no one knows. He either had a Midas touch with plants or he had a secret no one else has ever been able to uncover."

Potato now is the fourth most important food crop in the world, after wheat, maize, and rice. Potato, which yields more energy per acre than do cereal crops, grows well in all temperate climates and in many parts of the tropics.

Dr. Timms says that when he arrived in Davis in 1955, some 120,000 acres of potatoes were in production throughout the state. "We had potatoes going in the ground and being harvested every day of the year. When I retired, two and a half years ago, there were only about 65,000 acres growing statewide.

"Three things brought about the demise of potato in California. First is that the shipment costs from West Coast to East have gone up phenomenally. Second is the use of sprout inhibitors in storage. The California crop went primarily to the fresh market. When sprout inhibitors began to be widely used, the quality of potatoes, year-round, coming out of storage, improved. So that California now has to compete with storage potatoes. Third reason for loss of potato acreage in the state, of course, is that the cost of water and land has gone up disproportionately to the value of the crop. To raise potatoes it takes a lot of water and a lot of land, maybe not as much water as strawberries or celery, but a lot.

"Nowadays the biggest potato state by acreage is Idaho, and by tonnage it's a tossup between Washington and Idaho. We used to be number two in total yield and now we are fifth. It's too bad, but we can't compete with other states who offer cheaper water and cheaper land."

Because the potato tuber grows underground, says Dr. Timms, potato tends to be considered, like carrot or beet or turnip, a root vegetable, which, technically, it's not. The potato tuber is the swollen tip of an underground stem that serves as a reserve for excess products of photosynthesis and stores those products as starch. A large portion of the photosynthetic product is used in respiration and photosynthesis itself, the activities required to keep the plant factory operating. The excess that goes into the tuber is for the most part acquired in the evening and night, when temperatures go down and the rate of respiration diminishes somewhat. "Then," Dr. Timms says, "the excess carbohydrates are translocated down, in sugar form, and enter the tuber where they are converted into starch."

A potato tuber is not just a potato, says Dr. Timms. Potatoes come in hundreds of varieties, classified into four basic types. Until recently potatoes in grocery produce sections tended to be identified by the place where they were grown rather than by variety. Some 75 percent of the U.S.'s annual potato crop can be traced back to the Burbank Russet. The russet is distinguished by a thick brown skin, oval shape, white flesh and high starch content. ten identify this potato as the "Idaho," even though other states grow them. Russets are the ideal baking potato, although they can also be used for mashing, frying, or potato soup. Among popular varieties are Russet Arcadia, Centennial, Lemhi, Norgold, and Norkotah, all closely related to Burbank's original.

Second is the round white, with a light-tan skin and round shape, white flesh, and a medium starch content. This is an all-purpose potato, good for cooking in any way. Popular varieties include Chippewa, Irish Cobble, Kennebec, Katahdin, Monona, Norchip, Ontario, Sebago, Shepody, and Superior.

Third is the round red, with red skin and white flesh, a medium to low starch content, best used for steaming, salad, and fried potatoes. Popular varieties include La Rouge, Norland, Red La Soda, Red McClure, and Red Pontiac.

Fourth is the long white, with thin tan skins, white flesh, oval shape and a medium to low starch content. They are recommended for salad and scalloped potatoes. A popular variety, grown in California, is the White Rose.

The high-starch potato is spoken of by chefs as "floury" or "mealy" and advised for baking or mashing. The lower-starch potato is classified as "waxy" and suggested for salad or scalloped potatoes and is used by potato chip makers. Harold McGee in On Food and Cooking suggests as a method of determining which is which that one mix a brine from 1 part salt to 11 parts water. In this solution, a waxy potato will float, while the denser mealy or floury potato will sink.

Among horrors World War II brought us are boxes of instant mashed potatoes. Developed during the war, reconstituted potatoes were served in K-ration meals. The best use I know to make of potato flakes is to drizzle them over Christmas tree branches and pretend they're snow. They're not fit to eat.

MASHED POTATOES SAY home cooking even if you never had much of a home.

If you don't want to go to any trouble and you want to eat potatoes, buy a clutch of small red-skinned potatoes. Scrub them clean, pop them into a pot of cold water, bring water to a boil, turn down the flame, and let the potatoes simmer. When you stick a fork gently into one of the potatoes and the flesh gives no resistance, the potatoes are cooked. These red-jacketed potatoes remind me of a choir of homely grade-school boys singing slightly off-key. Serve them in their red jackets and, if you wish, sprinkle them with finely chopped fresh parsley, chive, or cilantro. When you spoon one or two of these potatoes onto your own plate, you can break the potato apart with your fork and mash in a little unsalted butter. Some words give off taste in my mouth. The word "earth" tastes sepia brown, deep, serious. When the first forkful of a boiled potato arrives in my empty mouth, the taste of that potato is the taste I associate with "earth."

Mashed potatoes say home cooking even if you never had much of a home and your mom couldn't boil water without scorching the pan. To make good mashed potatoes, you've got to "take pains."

When you make mashed potatoes from scratch, you want to begin with a floury or mealy potato. Dr. Timms explains why. Potatoes are 80 percent water. Of the remaining 20 percent, 85 percent is starch, 5 percent sugar, and the rest fiber, mineral salts, and vitamins. Potato tuber's starch is in the form of granules, which are contained in starch cells. Some varieties of potato have inside these cells one big starch granule while others have many starch granules. As example, Dr. Timms cites the Kennebec, the potato often used for potato chips. The Kennebec has one large starch granule per cell. The Burbank Russet and its near relations have within each cell anywhere from 5 to 30 starch granules per cell. The more starch granules per cell, the more floury or mealy the potato will be.

What you want to avoid, when preparing mashed potatoes, is breaking the cell walls that contain the starch granules and, says Dr. Timms, "getting that loose gelatinizing starch all over the place."

Therefore, you first want not to overcook your potatoes; overcooking will break down these walls. Cooks disagree as to whether potatoes should be cooked whole, in quarters or in two-inch cubes. I prefer working with potatoes peeled

Bring Your Sight into Focus Safely and Affordably with Radial Keratotomy

A ten-year study of 435 RK patients evaluatied by the National Eye Institute found that 100% of the patients improved their vision with RK surgery. Eighty-five percent of the patients had improvement to 20/40 or better (unaided driving vision) while others were able to wear thinner, more attractive glasses.

Dr M. Jay Berman, one of San Diego's most experienced RK eye surgeons, has been helping people improve their vision with this procedure since 1982. Dr Berman invites you to attend one of our free seminars to find out more about radial keratotomy.

and cut into quarters, put into a large saucepan, and covered with cold water. Bring the water to a boil, then lower the flame and cook over medium heat until the potatoes are tender when poked with a fork, about 15 to 20 minutes.

With what one mashes potatoes — butter, margarine, milk, cream, half-and-half — is a matter of taste and will depend, too, on with what one is serving the potatoes. For mashed potatoes that will be sluiced with gravy, I use no salt and little butter. For mashed potatoes served without gravy, I depend on unsalted butter and plenty of it. The French think nothing of adding one-quarter pound of butter for every two to three pounds of potatoes. I am with the French, here.

By the time your potatoes are tender, you want to have your milk or cream warmed. Butter or margarine, ideally, will be at room temperature and cut into small bits. Some cooks melt butter in the milk or cream. The only reason I don't do this is that I enjoy watching butter melt into the hot potatoes.

Drain the cooked potatoes in a colander. Return them to the pan. You are ready, now, to mash. Remembering that what you want to avoid is breaking the cell walls that contain the starch granules, mash carefully. "What you want to do," says Dr. Timms, "is fluff up, not break down. You want as much as possible to keep those cell walls intact."

James Beard recommended using an electric mixer to mash potatoes. But an electric mixer is too rough on the cell walls. For the same reason, don't toss potatoes into the food processor; the sharp, rapidly turning blades will atomize cell walls. Use what your grandmother used, the old-fashioned heavy wire potato masher. (My grandmother's biceps bulged when she mashed a huge vat of potatoes for her hired hands' dinner, in those days, the noon meal.) And mash using an up-and-down motion. Howard Hillman advises in Kitchen Science that mashed potatoes will be airier if you mash them in a vertical, up-and-down rather than stirring, circular motion.

Because you don't want mashed potatoes to cool before serving, plan your meal in such a way that mashing potatoes is one of your last acts before putting dinner on the table. You can keep mashed potatoes warm for a few minutes over a very low, low, low flame. The likelihood of their scorching scares me so much that I never do this.

Although mashed potatoes need nothing more than themselves, they take happily to additions. Before adding milk and butter, you can include, at a ratio of no more than half and half, other cooked vegetables: carrots, turnips, parsnip, rutabaga, onion. You can toss in minced fresh herbs — chives, parsley, savory, or tarragon — or dashes of chili powder. For a garlicky flavor, toss peeled cloves of garlic into the water when cooking potatoes.

Dinnertime wasn't far away when Dr. Timms and I chatted about potatoes. We talked about meals our mothers and grandmothers made with which they served mashed potatoes. Fried chicken, of course, we talked about that, served with Kentucky Wonder green beans, snapped and simmered all day with fatback and onion, bright yellow roasting ears bathed in sweet butter, huge meaty slices of a big tomato like Mortgage Lifter, and then the meal's crown, gravy made with milk, flour, and the crunchy drippings the frying chicken left behind in the high-sided black iron skillet. You took your teaspoon and made a crater in the miniature mountain of mashed potatoes on your plate. You carefully filled the crater with gravy. What you had was a gravy lake, calm surface speckled with gold chicken fat. Sunday summer sunshine, streaming through polished dining room windows, might catch at a speck of that fat and make it glimmer. You wanted to keep that lake for as long as you could, so you picked with your fork at the potato mountain's base. When you took your first bite, you savored the earthy potato flavor, but you also tasted mountain. "It was," I said, "like eating scenery." ■ for this. I love this paper and I'm going to read it every week. It's really a great paper. I just wish they had had something like this in Laguna Niguel.

Rande Ross
Laguna Niguel

Argument Number 90,783,831

The measure of unbridled chicanery your newspaper uses in referring to itself as "alternative" is amazing. Rather than issue argument number 90,783,831 as to why Steve Esmedina, Gina Arnold, and Duncan Shepherd should be put out of their misery post-haste, my grudge, however reactionary it may be, has to deal with the likes of one John Peter Applebranch in his write-up of the Intersection Gallery's exhibit "Suspended Animation" and forthcoming lecture by Frederik L. Schodt, author of Manga! Manga! ("Highlights," August 18.)

It would seem Applebranch, ever the erudite social critic, had to tack on the following excerpt toward the end of the article: "The most amazing traits of Japanese comics, however, are the extreme degree of violence to be found in both printed comics and animated films, and the often horrifyingly grotesque treatment of sex. ...It makes you want to get back to Kansas. But with the ever-spreading cultural influence of Japan, you will probably find an outlet for Japanese comics and animated films even there."

The nerve of those people! First it was the cars! Then it was the video equipment! Then the sushi! Now the comic books! Egad! Won't de good White folk of de United States of America be left in peace?

What is it with people like Applebranch that they get all fired up to read the riot act to someone or a group of someones who don't fit within their cutesy-sweetsy "moral" parameters? (Especially people who have a knack for mass-producing cars, stereos, and video equipment and comic books, all of which were invented in America.)

Lest the vice squad be dispatched to the Wikiup to save the good folks of San Diego from the great yellow peril, a few things have to be pointed out, the least of which is that while Japanese comic books and animated films are violent, on the average, it's nothing you wouldn't see in an R-rated movie, and what Applebranch neglected to mention is that Japan has a lower rate of violent assaults per capita than — you guessed it — the U.S.A. Gee, we've got that neat and nifty movie rating system and the Comics Code, but, I'm willing to speculate that because the Japanese spend far more time and money with their education, they've got the intellectual wherewithal to know the difference between a goddamn comic book, a movie, and reality. (Which isn't to say that I don't think Americans don't have the intellectual wherewithal to know the difference between a comic book and real life, but hey, John's here to save us from ourselves, God bless 'im!)

Why that seemingly unimportant tidbit was left out is beyond me. Maybe Applebranch wants to appear as astute as the aforementioned writers with their agendas: burnt-out, jaded, aging, boomer reactionary close-mindedness; PC milquetoast on white bread rebellion; and, "I know I'm a film critic because I can write a mile and a half about the movies even if I'm too lily-livered to risk a rejection letter on a screenplay," respectively.

To each his own, or words to that extent.

I'm A Dancer

I am calling about an article from June 28, 1990, called "Get Your Feet Off the Table" [reprinted] in "City Lights" August 11. The first paragraph describes a table dancer's typical attire, and it's basically correct, although the tights were omitted. We all have to wear opaque tights. It doesn't matter what club you work at, you all have to wear opaque tights. I think it's very important for people to know that, that we are not just bare-skinned up that close to the men.

Also, it says that there is a minimum charge of $5 a song and the dancer keeps it all, which is very incorrect. There is a charge at most every single club that is approximately $5 an hour, or, at some clubs, one house dance an hour which goes to them, which still means $5 an hour goes to the club. Some clubs charge a flat fee of $25 an evening. Dirty Dan's Pure Platinum does do no-charge during the daytime because days usually are slower. The only club I know of for sure that does not charge you to work there or does not charge you for your house dances is Star and Garter.

Other than that, the article was all right. It has not made us dancers richer. In fact, it probably has hurt our money because the gentlemen don't tip as well around the stage as they used to do.

I'm a dancer who wishes the public was better informed. Thank you very much, and I hope that something is put in to let people realize that there is a little more to the table dancing than they think and that it isn't that great of a business anymore. People have become very stingy. Like the article said, "the entertainers at Dirty Dan's all seem to agree on one thing: the money ain't what it used to be," and that is definitely the truth.

Dilatations No Problem

I received a copy of one of your issues of July 7 entitled "Inside Out: For Ostomates Detour Is the Cure" by Mary Lang. Some concern is expressed there related to the repeated anal dilatations in children after surgery for the repair of anorectal malformations.

We have been following over 830 patients operated on in our hospital. When the operation has been done properly, dilatations have not been a problem. Very difficult dilatations may be a reflection of vascular damage of the pulled rectum. We have not seen specific psychological sequela from those anal dilatations. In addition, at the present time, we are trying to repair these defects as early as possible. As a consequence, usually, by the time that the baby is four or five months old, the process of dilatations has been finished and the colostomy is closed. These children have no memory of that stage in their lives.

Annoyed

I am extremely annoyed by Don Stevens's letter of July 28. His blanket indictment of white people is as racist as my saying that all blacks are drug-dealing pimps or all Hispanics are lazy illegal aliens.

While I am not naive enough to believe that there are no racial problems in this country, can we really solve anything when attitudes such as Mr. Stevens's permeate both sides of the issue? The politics of confrontation that ensue when people take fixed and immovable positions like Mr. Stevens's are messy. What we usually end up with is a lot of self-serving rhetoric which only clouds the issue and further hardens positions on both sides.

Before condemning an entire race of people with a flippant remark as Mr. Stevens does, perhaps he should consider the words of Dr. Martin Luther King. After all, didn't he tell us that we should judge a man "not by the color of his skin, but by the contents of his character"? I believe that is a lesson that Mr. Stevens, and the rest of us, would do well to remember.

Pseudo-Liberal Fascists

To Cari Bennett: Your rebuttal (Letters, July 14) to my criticism of your hysterical first letter is well-taken, and you make several poignant points in light of the fast-changing gender roles in our society and how, ideally, we could achieve harmony and fulfillment within them. However, I stand by my original argument for all the sociobiological reasons stated therein, but ultimately for this one:

Your position on topless/bottomless clubs, pornography, etc., is, at its core, based on the premise that nudity should be covered up, hidden, not seen. I do not share this view. Whether one has the old, ingrained thinking that it's "dirty" and shameful, or the new P.C. dogma that it's dehumanizing objectification, is irrelevant. If one wants to disrobe, I say let them.

You may think I'm being harsh or that I'm some right-wing male chauvinist dick (I assure you, I despise close-minded right-wingers as much as I do party-line–toeing liberals like you), but people like you who make themselves the self-appointed thought police for us all (including quite-willing strippers) are the bane of humankind. You crusade for your warped vision of justice but end up destroying careers, psyches, lives. Feminism is no different than any other movement; it becomes bloated, drunk on itself, ruthlessly driven to increase its own power and agenda. The Moral Majority has the same agenda as you do on this, Cari, doesn't that tell you what you are? It is not incumbent upon people (porno readers like myself, to cite just one small example) to live their lives the way you see fit, nor does Cari Bennett have to feel obligated to live up to any ideal of femininity other than her own. I say live and let live. Why can't the peasant-dress, ponytail-wearing, pseudo-liberal fascists do the same?

Long-Winded

I've become addicted to the Reader. Every Thursday night, on my way to work, I make a special stop just to pick up a copy. And then I usually reproach myself for doing so, once I scan it. It's a love-hate relationship: so many alluring things, so many repulsive things.

The subject matter of the main article is often garbage. Don't you feel a responsibility to your readers? You know the saying, garbage in, garbage out. You're polluting their minds. On top of that, the articles are insanely long-winded and convoluted. Three or four short, concise pieces would be more interesting than one epic.

Actually, now I often skip the main articles entirely. (Dahmer's Diner? No thanks!) It's the regular features that are so habituating. "Tin Fork," "Off the Cuff," the little blurbs in the TV section, "Sporting

Box," I read them all every week, without fail. (The Daugherty column about Dallas going 0-5 at the beginning of last season was a classic of invective. Not that I admire invective unconditionally. But it's probably not possible to be too harsh on the likes of the NFL. Or professional boxing. Or Tonya Harding. Worthy targets, all. Unfortunately, not all of your writers are so discriminating with their sarcasm.) "Roam-O-Rama" is good sometimes, other times not. Too many mountain and desert hikes. (Reagan was right about one thing: a tree's a tree, you've seen one, you've seen 'em all.) Sometimes I even read the art and theater reviews. I'm a working-class guy and I'm not usually much interested in that sort of thing, but your reviewers sometimes give very lucid and informative reviews. (What I hate is a lot of highfalutin aesthetic theorizing. That's just extremely articulate B.S.)

Finally, can you do something about the letters from the readers? Do you deliberately print the worst each week? If you're going to publish illiterates, can't you at least edit them?

Duncan Shepherd should be fired. Deported. He can't be trusted. Duncan Shepherd's a moron. A snob. A jerk. A schmuck. A schmo. I hate Duncan Shepherd. He's effete. Out of line. A waste of newsprint. Bad for business. Another frustrated artist. Smug. Too big for his britches. An insult. A one-note cynic. Out of touch with modern realities. Duncan Shepherd's a constant threat to my self-esteem. A slap in my taste. Uncouth. He's just another controversy hound. He likes to see his name in print. He wishes he could direct. Duncan Shepherd hates new movies. He only likes old movies. Dead movies. Tough-guy movies. He's unhappy. Unfit. Over-the-hill. Kaput. Duncan Shepherd can go to hell. He's a professional masturbator. A card-carrying Francophile with sesquipedalian tendencies. Duncan Shepherd voodoo dolls available in the lobby. He should be fired. Deported. He can't be trusted. He's a moron. A snob. A jerk. A schmuck. A schmo. I hate Duncan Shepherd.

Verdict Is In

After consulting with a lot of friends, the verdict is in. Duncan Shepherd should be given a major prize for his movie reviewing. Though we are slightly inconvenienced by having to do the opposite of what he recommends, we find his reviews to be an uncanny source of consistency in taste. Take, for example, the well-known classic The Shining. Another couple we were with one night hadn't seen it and wasn't sure about going. So we pulled out Duncan's review, found something written along the lines of "putrid," and off we went to enjoy. Just this past weekend we were confused again, because even though most people said Forrest Gump was fantastic, a few thought it was merely "very good." Was putting up with all the popcorn chompers, talking toddlers, and legs-on-chair goobers at UTC worth it? Again, Duncan's review resolved the dilemma; we were delighted by the film. Sometimes we already know what to do when, say, a long-time favorite like Lina Wertmuller comes out with a new smash (Ciao, Professore), but we're sure glad Duncan is there in case we need him.

In thanking Duncan, I can't help but also applaud his writing style. We find it both fun and a valuable learning experience to work our way through his reviews, trying to understand the long, complicated sentences, the esoteric wording, and the oh-so-clever wit. Sometimes we get stumped, but we figure it's because we haven't yet graduated to his skill level. Anyway, just let us know when Duncan Shepherd, hero to the movie-going masses, needs a new thesaurus, and we'll send him a big one with laminated pages right away!

Soup Fixin's with Elephant-Like Legs

San Diego Turtle and Tortoise Society's Annual Show

EVERYTHING YOU EVER WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT TURTLES AND TORTOISES — AND MORE.

What is a turtle, and why should we be interested?

LOCAL EVENTS

A turtle is a toothless, slow-moving, unaggressive, omnivorous, long-lived, mild-mannered reptile whose body is encased in a protective bony shell, consisting of a carapace on top and a plastron underneath. We should be interested because turtles have been around for some 225 million years, which is a lot longer than O.J. Simpson, and we are certainly interested in him.

What is the difference between a turtle and a tortoise?

These differences are chiefly of importance to turtles and tortoises themselves. But if you insist on a definition, tortoises are land-dwelling, vegetarian turtles with high-domed shells and elephant-like legs.

What good are these clammy-skinned creatures?

We can eat them, make soup out of them, or turn them into elegant combs perched in the lustrous dark hair of Spanish beauties. There are also some people, such as irresponsible children who have been given turtles as supposedly low-maintenance birthday presents, who keep them in terrariums as pets for a few weeks until they retreat into their shells and die. The best thing to do with turtles, however, is to protect them from exploitation and to educate nature-lovers about them. That is what members of the nonprofit San Diego Turtle and Tortoise Society do (as well as raising turtles as a hobby).

This is beginning to get exciting! I don't have room in my condo for a dog, so maybe a turtle would serve my need to be adored without reservation by a living being that will never need orthodonture. Do you recommend this?

Let's be frank. Turtles are not affectionate. They are not cuddly. They do not come when called. They ordinarily will not respond to you at all, except when you are offering them food, and then only grudgingly. They do not like to be picked up. If held, they tend to urinate or defecate, especially if you are dressed to go to a diplomatic reception. They cannot be taught to fetch, give you a paw, jump through a hoop, or kiss you on the nose. If you want a dog, you had better get a dog.

Why, then, would anyone want to have a turtle?

We turtle-fanciers just like them. We enjoy watching them do their turtly things, such as eating, walking around, mating, and sleeping. They can also provide some unforgettable experiences. If you've ever had your finger slammed in a turtle's shell, you'll always remember that!

All right, you've convinced me. I really would like to watch a turtle eat and sleep, day in and day out. Shall I go to that pet store in the mall and buy one?

That would be risky, and it probably would be ecologically immoral. Almost without exception, turtles and tortoises for sale commercially have been taken from the wild. They have probably been shipped in crammed crates where the majority of them die, while those who survive the lack of food, water, and sunlight arrive at the pet store sick and stressed. If you insist on buying a turtle from a commercial source, insist on written certification that the animal is both captive-bred and in good health. Better yet, adopt a turtle from the Turtle and Tortoise Society, where we take in abandoned, lost, injured, and maltreated turtles, and find good homes for them.

Are turtles easy to care for?

Yes, so long as you devote a good part of your waking hours to the task. Pet turtles must have sufficient heat (to be measured with a thermometer at the turtle's level); direct sunlight (not filtered through glass); a large yard with a two-foot-high wood or brick enclosure topped by an overhang (so that they cannot climb over it and escape); clean water no deeper than three inches (so that they will not drown); leaf piles and clumping grass; a well-insulated turtle house kept year-round at 80 to 85 degrees Fahrenheit; attentive oversight to protect against murderous dogs, raccoons, foxes, opossums, skunks, gophers, crows, and hawks; a diet of dog food plus bananas, mangoes, papayas, cantaloupes, apples, melons (except watermelon), cherries, grapes, squash, yams, sweet potatoes, peas, mushrooms, and raw corn-on-the-cob, with occasional special treats of earthworms, meal-worms, night crawlers, sow bugs, beetles, crickets, caterpillars, grasshoppers, scrambled eggs, ground beef heart, and beef liver (but never snails or slugs). Turtle eggs must be carefully incubated, and turtle hatchlings require special food, living accommodations, sunny excursions, and respect for their privacy, for they are very shy, secretive, picky, and temperamental, and will probably starve to death if not provided with numerous hidden nooks in which to eat. Aside from these few requirements, pet turtles should not prove a burden.

How can I know if my turtle is sick?

If your turtle has runny or clogged nostrils, swollen, runny, or filmy eyes, large lumps or swollen areas near the ear, or a white or black tongue or mouth, and does not eat for a week, it seems likely that something is wrong.

Oh my God! What shall I do?

Read the Turtle and Tortoise Society's numerous publications, such as their Turtle Ailment Recognition Sheet, and call the society for the name of an experienced turtle veterinarian.

You have profoundly moved and intrigued me. I would like to dedicate the rest of my life to turtles. What should I do?

You might begin by attending the society's annual show, where you may observe (but not buy) different types of turtles and tortoises, from hatchlings to huge fellows older than you are; acquire turtle-care items; buy prints of wonderful Chinese brush paintings of turtles and tortoises; meet seasoned turtle-lovers; and learn more about this harmless, useful, and not quite totally crazy obsession.

One more question: Is the story true about the race between the tortoise and the hare?

Of course it's true. Otherwise, we would be members of the Hare and Rabbit Society!

Un-American Activity

Taco Shop Poetry Reading

If you really want to irritate people, develop a serious interest in poetry. Poetry gets on people's nerves. This is because, I think, poetry, called the "most useless art," cuts against the American grain. Poetry is all image, rhythm, pure thought; poetry is abstract. And abstract, if you think about it, is....un-American. The West was not won through abstraction. Wall Street, the Federal Reserve, or, for that matter, the NFL, don't have much truck with beautiful imagery. We are Calvinist at heart.

Whenever I've nattered on a little too long about some poem I've read in the Norton Anthology, folks who claim to love me assume a wan smile and direct their gaze at some distant point. "There, there," they seem to say. "In a few moments this will pass. He really can't help it."

It's precisely this attitude toward poetry that many feel has driven American poets around the bend. In Mexico or Russia, for example, poets are national treasures. Here, poetry and poets are tolerated only insofar as they serve a purpose. In the United States, our poet laureate gets a job at the not-too-terribly exciting Library of Congress, a job no serious poet seems to want. The executive branch acknowledges a poet only when he or she serves a function; Maya Angelou's "On the Pulse of Morning," written for the Clinton Inaugural, wedged into civic-minded blank verse each plank of the Democrat's platform.

The absence of popular or official support for poetry has produced in American poets a resourceful hardiness. American poets have not shied away from creating environments and contexts in which their work may attain importance. In the past this has been achieved through formidable cults of personality and mafia-like schools of style. American poets retreated to academia, where they fabricated a subculture, complete with its own economy, fiefdoms, and castes. And only last week, on National Public Radio, I heard mention of a young poet whose stated mission is to bring poetry to large corporations in order to "humanize the workplace."

American poets will stop at nothing to make their work relevant.

An interesting tack in this drive for relevancy is the current popularity of coffeehouse poetry readings, a trend that has, in several ways, capitalized upon poetry's un-American status. This trend seems to have gotten its initial push in New York in the late 1980s when a wave of black and Puerto Rican (or Newyorican) poets gained attention through readings of their work at cafes and nightclubs. Now, in most major cities, you can find members of any group even marginally construed as un-American — angry teenagers, angry feminists, angry gay men — reading verse to espresso-sipping listeners.

This being Southern California, it was only a matter of time before our poets put their twist on coffeehouse reading. Adolfo Guzman, curator for Centro Cultural de la Raza in Balboa Park, organized a series of readings entitled "Chorizo Tonguefire" that have been held at taco shops in San Diego and Tijuana. Guzman has a complex theoretical explanation for the series, involving absence of class boundaries at taco shops, socio-dynamics of taco shops, and taco shop culture in general. Guzman says that many of the poems presented at these readings have been composed for the taco shops that have hosted them. So, if you attend the final reading of the "Chorizo Tonguefire" series, which will be held at the Golden Hill location of Roberto's on Friday, you will hear poems that address the shop's clientele and neighborhood. In addition to white, African-American, and Chicano poets, Guzman will be on hand to read a poem that follows Broadway, block-by-block, from the bay to Roberto's Taco Shop.

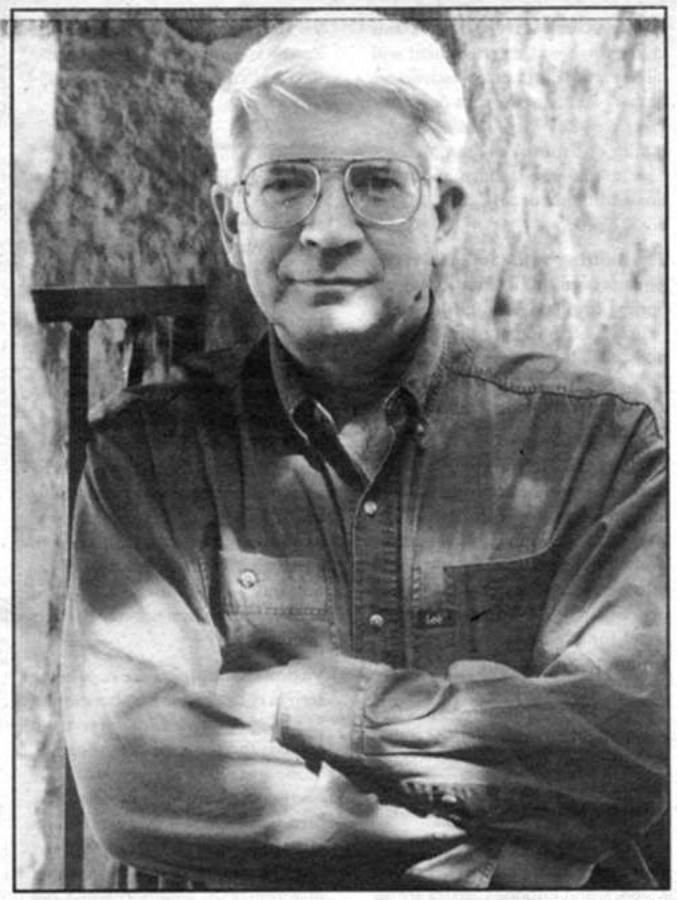
Rick DeMarinis Reading and Booksigning



Rick DeMarinis

Rick DeMarinis's last novel, The Year of the Zinc Penny (1989), was a portrait of wartime California, circa 1943, as seen by a bright ten-year-old boy. DeMarinis's newest book, The Mortician's Apprentice, leaps ahead ten years to 1953. The novel's place is in and around San Diego.

Narrator Ozzie Santee is graduating from Melville High School.

> Half the seniors were already engaged, a month shy of graduation. There was a kind of frantic desperation in the air, you could almost taste it. Graduation and marriage were linked topics in a lot of people's minds. I danced three dances with Colleen.... We went to the beach in her MG roadster.... I dug a pit with a little beach shovel she kept in the car. I got into it, arms folded across my chest. She covered me up with cool sand, then flopped down on top of me.... "Oh, Ozzie," she said, her voice honeyed with confidence. "If we ever have children — or should I say when? — I think they will be significant additions to the human race, don't you?... Peter, William, Rosemary and Dierdre," she said, rubbing the air with a matriarchal finger, as if counting little hands. "I've named them already. I mean, subject to your approval. We shall have four. Oh darling! We'll be so happy!"

Ozzie's not so sure.

The most immediate aspect of Ozzie's dilemma — how to fit into the adult world — is whether to marry his girlfriend, Colleen, an undertaker's daughter, or do something else. We follow Ozzie from high school graduation (where there's an earthquake), through fights in bars, a drunken weekend in Mexico, a menial job, some bodysurfing, to college for a week or so, then to another job, this one selling coffins (at which he is surprisingly good). Along the way, we meet a host of subsidiary characters: there's the di Coca family, in which the father's a wild, hard-partying communist music-lover, the son a brooding cynic seeking normalcy. There's Elizabeth Urquiza, runner-up for Miss San Diego, who had danced downtown at the Hollywood Burlesque Theater. Max finally gets a date with her, when her stupid husband leaves her for a job in Pittsburg. Max is a brainy, hip, progressive jazz fan who dutifully, with heroic patience, cares for his senile mother.

DeMarinis has got a few years on me, but few enough so that I'll certify his faithfulness to the time and place. We ate in the same Mexican dives, cruised the same drive-ins and beaches. We listened to the same rhythm-and-blues radio out of L.A. — the Johnny Otis Show.

On the phone from some hotel on his book tour, DeMarinis says Ozzie's adventures are taken from his own times at Hussong's Cantina, the Rosarito Beach Hotel, beach parties at La Jolla Shores, Oscar's Drive-in on El Cajon Boulevard. DeMarinis attended San Diego State as a student in the early '50s. Rick was a wild boy, tearing around on a BSA motorcycle.

The book's premise also came to DeMarinis from his own experience. "I was with some girl at a beach party in La Jolla. She started talking marriage and children. It scared the hell out of me. It was, after all, only our second date."

DeMarinis did have a friend whose girlfriend was the daughter of a mortician. "And I was thinking about naming the mortuary Goodbody," he says, "but nobody would have believed it."

After a stint in the Air Force, Rick returned to San Diego State, where he taught creative writing from 1969 to 1975. I was taking night classes there. He must've been teaching days. Regrettably, I missed him.

I read somewhere that of all professions, college professors live the longest. Once a professor friend asked me, "What is it they're paying us for? I forget." The job is hard to beat. Hence, only the brave, visionary, or foolish give up a tenured professorship unless they've found another one or struck it rich. When Rick quit SDSU in 1975, he and his family moved to Missoula, Montana, where they survived until 1988. Now they live in El Paso. He's back teaching, this time at UTEP.

It's summer. DeMarinis is driving around the West, like Ozzie did in 1953. Ozzie was looking for paradise. Rick's visiting bookstores, reading from and signing The Mortician's Apprentice. You could meet him at one. He's a first-rate author, honest and funny, and a congenial guy. Besides, signed first editions are worth plenty.

OUTDOORS

Warm Water Temperatures, which have been hovering near 70 degrees over the past several weeks, won't last much longer. As fall approaches, shorter days and increasingly oblique solar radiation will mean that less and less energy will be supplied to the ocean waters offshore. These waters will soon be shedding more thermal energy than they receive, thereby keeping the coastal area comfortably balmy for several weeks after the end of the summer-vacation season. Don't give up on the beach after Labor Day — the water's only a bit cooler, and the beaches are relatively uncrowded.

Various Sandpipers are now being seen in considerable numbers within San Diego County's coastal wetland habitats and along the ocean beaches. Some have just arrived from the north; others are juveniles that have bred locally. You'll find sanderlings and willets scurrying along the wet sand on the beaches. Several other members of the sandpiper family can be found in mudflat areas such as the Tijuana River Estuary, the south end of San Diego Bay, the San Diego River flood channel near Sea World, and the margins of most North County lagoons.

Jasmine's Thick, Sweet Odor wafts on the night breezes this time of year, especially throughout the older, well-landscaped neighborhoods of San Diego. The exotic odor is produced by the flowers of true jasmines (genus Jasminum), as opposed to the so-called "star jasmine" (genus Trachelospermum), which blooms in the late spring and early summer.

PRIVATE PAST

By Abe Opincar

Very soon in our minds what we call the "past" will be synonymous with privacy. We are zooming toward a future in which the public will be indistinguishable from the private. We are zooming toward a future in which it might not be unusual to get a phone call from your insurance carrier after an electronic survey of your shopping habits reveals that you're buying a lot of booze, cigarettes, and fatty foods at Vons.

"Oh, I was buying that stuff for some French people," you could try stuttering into the phone. "I have friends visiting me from France!"

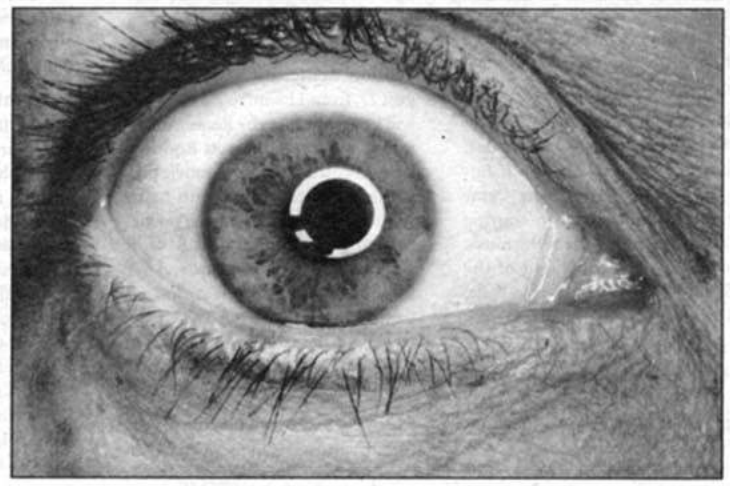
But it would do you no good. A simple review of your credit card and phone records would tell your insurance carrier if and when you'd ever had contact with France and whether or not you were likely to have butter-eating, wine-guzzling, chain-smoking French friends.

In short order everything about you will be linked and imminently accessible through a vast and efficient electronic information web.

Go ahead and laugh. (You'll have plenty of time to cry in the future.) If you think this sounds like some paranoiac fantasy, you'd do well to watch Off Limits, PBS's upcoming documentary on employee privacy. As Off Limits explains, a San Diego woman has already become snared in the electronic information web in an especially nasty way. Hers is the saddest of the several stories examined in the program. Without giving too much away, the scene in which this San Diego woman confronts the information about her that's humming on the information web is sickening and ominous. She cups her hand over her mouth and starts to cry.



You are being watched

It's actually worse than it sounds. Off Limits isn't about credit reports, or subscription lists, or the other forms of information-swapping with which you're probably familiar. Off Limits tracks the ways your privacy is being redefined to suit the needs of your employers and medical insurance carriers. You may have thought that what you did in the privacy of your own home was nobody's business but your own. Many Americans are starting to learn, though, that the business of America is literally everybody's business.

Off Limits doesn't fear-monger. In fact, it seems to downplay the shocking info it has to offer. But its weakest point is that it explains neither how our privacy became so compromised, nor what steps we might take to prevent its further deterioration. Off Limits does give a little historical background, tells us, for example, how in the 1920s Henry Ford was already snooping into his employees' drinking habits and domestic life. Off Limits leaves us, however, stranded in anxiety.

One thing to keep in mind if you tune in to the program, which you should, is that your friendly television may soon aid and abet the kind of crimes against privacy that Off Limits details. Worker bees are already stringing together the miles of fiber-optic cable that will bring a million and one helpful diversions into your home. And the same powerful technology that will allow you to keep tabs on the big wide world from the privacy of your home will also allow the big wide world to keep tabs on what goes on in the privacy of your home.

Off Limits airs Saturday, August 28, at noon.

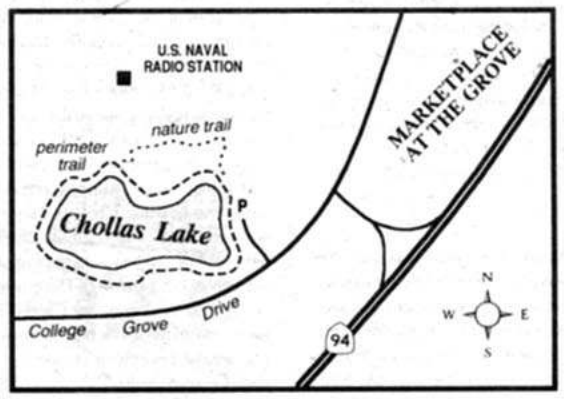
A Guide to Unexpected San Diego • By Jerry Schad

Tucked beneath the landmark Naval Radio Station towers in the College Grove area, a dense grove of eucalyptus trees conceals one of the more pleasant oases of parkland in San Diego's inner city: Chollas Lake. On any warm summer evening, as the sun's coppery rays and a cooling breeze sifts through the aromatic leaves, dozens of people of all ages are making their way on foot and bikes around the curving, unpaved trackway following the lake's perimeter.

Chollas refers to the native coastal cholla cactus that grows in sometimes-dense clusters on undisturbed hillsides from here through parts of East and Southeast San Diego toward San Diego Bay. Not nearly so fearsome as some varieties of desert ("jumping") cholla, our local variety is nonetheless the bane of careless hikers and free-running dogs. Chollas Lake Park's landscape is largely artificial, but many good specimens of coast cholla can be seen on the short nature trail just north of the lake.

For the exercise-minded, the lake's perimeter trail measures 0.8 mile and includes a parcourse (another, newer parcourse lies atop Gloria Mesa, a new 11-acre addition to the park on the southwest corner). Most people circle the perimeter trail in the counterclockwise direction. Run a few clockwise miles, and you'll soon have a nodding acquaintance with nearly every other visitor. The wide, smooth, nearly flat dirt surface is fine for bikes of all sorts and perfect for kids just learning how to balance on two wheels.



Chollas Lake is open from 6:30 a.m. to sunset daily. Kids 15 and under are allowed to fish (no permit required), and there's duck and goose feeding for all. Dogs on leash are allowed, but swimming isn't. The lake's entrance is located at 6350 College Grove Drive, just west of the Marketplace at the Grove shopping center.

Reuben H. Fleet Science Center, "About Faces" is an exhibition of 14 components, most of which use visitor's faces to demonstrate the broad range of information communicated by that part of the human anatomy. The exhibits help participants use their faces to answer such questions as "When does a visual pattern become recognized as a face?"; "What would I look like with Jane Fonda's lips and Frankenstein's eyes?"; and "Is it easier to mask an expression of anger or surprise?" Enjoy the exhibition through August.

The aircraft just underwent extensive restoration and was found to be approximately 98 percent original, a discovery that makes the Spad the most rare aircraft in the museum's collection. It remains on permanent display. The museum's latest acquisition (pedestal-mounted in front of the museum) is the Blackbird, a forerunner of the airplane that held the world's altitude and speed records for more than 28 years.

Age of Russia* is a 73-foot IACC boat that was flown here in 1992 for competition but never raced. The vessel was built at a Russian missile factory near Moscow in 1991; see it here through September 1995.

Trephination, the practice of opening the skull for therapeutic or ritual purposes, has been practiced in many parts of the world. The ancient Peruvians used obsidian blades, abrasive stone drills, and the tumi, a bronze knife with a curved blade; some patients did not survive, but many skulls show partial or complete healing. Visitors may observe the skulls and try to determine why cranial surgery was performed. See this exhibit through December.

There's a lot of talk these days about a "second North American Revolution." Indianapolis civil-rights attorney Linda Thompson, who commands a following on shortwave radio and electronic bulletin boards, declared war on the New World Order. Populist presidential candidate Bo Gritz has started construction on a Christian Patriot commune called "Almost Heaven" in the Aryan homeland of Kalima, Idaho. South Pasadena's "Bullet Box" BBS is a haven for patriots who are forming "unorganized but well-regulated militias" to stand ground against enemies of the Constitution, foreign and domestic.

It is only a matter of time until the militias duke it out with the hated federales. Until then, they can amuse themselves with hypothetical scenarios, such as the strangely laconic Battle for California, excerpted below:

"The federal troops having done their business, began their retreat back towards the airport. This was conducted with expedition, for the adjacent residents had assembled with all manner of arms and began to attack them in every direction. In their return to Manhattan Beach they were exceedingly annoyed, both by those who pressed on their rear and others who, pouring in from all sides, fired from buildings, and such like coverts, which supplied the place of lines and redoubts.

"There were never more than 400 residents engaged at one time, and often not so many. As some tired and gave out, others came up and took their places. There was scarcely any discipline observed among them. Residents fired when they saw an army uniform without waiting for a word of command. Their knowledge of the city streets enabled them to gain opportunities by taking back roads and to act as flanking parties against the federal troops who kept to Sepulveda Boulevard. Units dispatched for flank security from the main force of paratroops were threatened with defeat in detail so that Lieutenant Colonel Smith had no choice but to suffer the incessant sniping upon his main force during the long retreat.

"The paratroops had 65 killed, 180 wounded, and 28 made prisoner. Of the residents 50 were killed, and 38 wounded and missing.

"Even as President Clinton appeared on television that night to declare Los Angeles ungovernable and to order all non-military federal employees to leave the city, the battalion net was still crackling with cries for assistance from units which had become separated from the main force, and trapped, during the long retreat...."

Singer Same at 60 As She Was at 35

That lower, alien, belting timbre is always there, no matter what the role.

REVIEW
JONATHAN SAVILLE

The summer concerts of the San Diego Symphony's Great Performers Series, sponsored by First Interstate Bank, concluded with a recital by mezzo-soprano Marilyn Horne.

Or at least a semi-recital, for Horne's five arias (plus encores) were separated by orchestral selections of considerable length. These consisted of overtures to Rossini operas, a suite from Strauss's Der Rosenkavalier, and the Bacchanale from Saint-Saëns's Samson et Dalila, music which, in lackluster performances such as these, served for little more than to give the singer a rest. The orchestra played with the skill and authority the audiences in Copley Symphony Hall have come to expect, but the conducting — by Horne's former husband and frequent collaborator, Henry Lewis — seemed to consist of mere time-beating, with no effort to achieve measurable levels of interpretive energy. It was virtually impossible to pay any attention to these uninspired run-throughs.

But of course no one had come to hear the William Tell Overture, whether played brilliantly (as it was not) or in a relative coma (as it was). Marilyn Horne was the reason the audience was there, motivated not only by a desire to hear so eminent an opera singer, but also by a suspicion that this might be their last chance, for Horne has been threatening to retire within a few years, and she has already given up singing Rossini (perhaps the composer most responsible for her reputation) on stage, if not in concert.

Not in this concert, certainly, for she included three big Rossini arias or scenes in the first half of the program. Of these, only one is the sort of thing other singers might ordinarily offer in recital: Cruda sorte! Amore tiranno! from L'Italiana in Algeri, a Rossini opera that is performed with some frequency. The others — a scene and aria from Tancredi and the willow song and prayer from Rossini's Otello — came from operas that Horne's mastery of bel canto had helped to bring out of obscurity, and although she does not have exclusive ownership of them, in a deep sense they belong to her.

In this repertoire, as in everything she has sung, Horne has demonstrated a consummately secure vocal technique, the kind of technique that not only makes all things possible to the voice but also guards it from damage. She is now 60, but there were no detectable signs of decline in her singing at Symphony Hall. The voice remains a powerful instrument, firmly supported and precisely focused. The agility that has made these Rossini display pieces so coruscating in Horne's performances is unimpaired. So is the long-breathed bel canto line, with its utterly smooth production of waves or cascades of articulated tone.

Over Horne's long and immensely successful career, nothing has changed in this voice or in the style with which it is deployed. This includes certain features that I have never liked, and that I liked just as little at her recent concert. I recognize that my criticisms of a singer who has given so many people so much pleasure for such a long time are bound to strike a Horne fan as offensively wide of the mark, like a high note that cracks. Nevertheless, here they are — and let the boos fly.

Horne's upper-middle range and her own high notes (which never crack) are of a lovely, limpid quality. But below that, her voice takes on a brassy, honking, trombone-like resonance that is ugly in itself, and that regularly dislocates the sense and mood of what is being sung by the radical and shocking switch of timbre. The lowest range, as the chest tones overpower what is left of the head tones, often sounds like a baritone bray, seemingly the voice of another singer entirely. There is no audible break between the two registers, as is sometimes the case with mezzos: Horne's technical control is so great that her chest voice is progressively blended in as she goes down the scale, and this is so even when — to achieve an effect — she deliberately drives the chest resonances up as far as she can. But however smoothly it may be integrated into the vocal line, that lower, alien, belting timbre is just awful to hear. It might vividly express the character of a murderous, vengeful, demented gypsy like Azucena. But it is always there, no matter what the role: a male hero, a perky soubrette, a dangerous seductress, or the gentle and innocent Desdemona.

This brings us to the matter of interpretation. Marilyn Horne, if one may judge by her interviews or her commentaries from the stage, is a warm, engaging, delightful person. But her singing strikes me as deficient in emotion. The tones come out with sturdy assurance, but I never hear any real pathos there — which is to say, any sense of a living, yearning, suffering, or rejoicing dramatic character, as opposed to a magisterially efficient vocal technician. In this respect, she reminds me of Ethel Merman — a singer in a different genre, who also got by splendidly on her belting power and with a minimum of vocal characterization.

All these objections to Horne's singing were called up by her concert, which illustrated her strengths and weaknesses quite thoroughly. But, even if I am about to contradict myself, I must recall a performance of Rossini's Semiramide at the San Francisco Opera many years ago, with Montserrat Caballé as Semiramide and Horne in the trouser role of Arsace. At the end of a sensational duet between the two, the audience was caught up in one of those insatiable frenzies that now and then erupt in opera houses. They applauded to bring the roof down. The stage director had apparently forbidden the singers to take bows during the performance, so that the two ladies stood frozen in place as the applause went on and on and on. Finally, by mutual assent, they allowed themselves to break the illusion — but in as small a way as possible, with the slightest turn of both their heads toward their delirious public and an almost imperceptible inclination.

The audience, aware that it was present at a great musical moment, clapped and shouted all the more strongly. And in spite of my reservations about Marilyn Horne, I was carried away by all the things she (not to mention Caballé) had done right, so that you could have heard me clapping and shouting as loudly as anyone.

How Can You Tell a Dream from a Mistake?

We necessarily look at these pictures with a different — and enlarged — capacity for aesthetic experience.

JONATHAN SAVILLE

Why devote so much space to Ammi Phillips? A legitimate question. No one would contend that this itinerant American portrait-painter of the 19th Century (1788-1865) is a great artist, or even a major artist, or even a significant artist, or even a good artist (although he is certainly competent at portraying vivid, distinctive faces). The exhibit of Phillips's paintings at the San Diego Museum of Art is far from being a world-shaking cultural event. And yet...and yet, there is something fascinating about Phillips's art, and the show (which consists of slightly varied repetitions of the artist's small repertoire of devices) is curiously revelatory of certain aesthetic issues that go to the very heart of painting.

Last week, I wrote about Phillips's realism — which turns out to be the skillful application of formulas, with the addition of a few unique facial traits to give the subject individuality. That Phillips worked this way is an interesting fact belonging to the social history of art: the formulas (pose, clothing, head shape, stereotyped mouths and noses, and so on) facilitated the portraitist's work and helped him to make a living. But it also brings up the undeniable truth that God or Nature, too, has shaped human faces according to a formula, and that every portrait painter — including the greatest — has to deal with constantly repeated material (the eyes are always separated by the nose, the nose is always above the mouth, the lower outline of a face always involves a chin and a jaw), on the road toward discovering the specific qualities of the sitter's identity. What Phillips does is what all portrait painters do. The difference is that he is so obvious about it. (There is also, admittedly, a considerable difference in talent between Phillips and — say — Rembrandt.)

This aspect of Phillips's work implies two crucial factors. His aim is to convey the actual look of the visual world (or at least of the faces in it); and he is thoroughly aware of the techniques he employs to achieve that end (such as the application of formulas). These are the aesthetic issues of realism and intentionality. They are issues because a great deal of art does not aim at showing what the world actually looks like, and because the role of the artist's intentions in what his hand produces is a matter of controversy.

These two issues have been raised explicitly over the last 100 years, and no one at the end of the 20th Century looking at art can be unaware of them. They are inextricable components of our aesthetic awareness, even when we are looking at art produced well before the onset of Modernism (for example, the art of Ammi Phillips). Cubism reminded us that art can do other things than attempt to reproduce external reality — that, in fact, the vast majority of art works in the history of the world have been motivated by non-realistic (or anti-realistic) concerns. Symbolism and Expressionism relished those elements in art that are beyond the artist's conscious control, and Surrealism made this non-intentionality (that is, the renunciation of conscious intention) an explicit aesthetic goal.

In the 20th Century, we are used to seeing painted faces distorted for expressive or formal purposes, and we are used to encountering fantasies, visions, and dreams (and nightmares) in our art, rather than an accurate rendering of what an objective scientist would observe. Ammi Phillips certainly was not used to seeing such things, nor were his great predecessors in the mode of art he practiced. If Raphael had looked at a picture by Phillips, he would no doubt have assumed (correctly) that Phillips was trying to do just what Raphael himself did in his portraits, and that the American painter was — in many respects — simply inept. But both Raphael and Phillips would have recoiled in horror at the sight of paintings by Picasso or Max Ernst, which they would have found not only ugly, crude, and badly drawn, but essentially antithetical to what art really is.

"Revisiting Ammi Phillips: Fifty Years of American Portraiture"

Through September 4

We, however, living in the century of Picasso and Ernst, have become much more broad-minded. We can see the artistry in a New Guinea mask, in the paintings of a child, or in the drawings of a schizophrenic, and we are not compelled to compare these negatively to the magnificent idealized realism of a Raphael. Consequently, in looking at some of Ammi Phillips's less than successful efforts to paint like Raphael (or like Raphaelle Peale), we may be able to find certain artistic values that the most astute critics in Phillips's own time would have been utterly blind to. If there had been a Phillips retrospective show during the artist's lifetime, made up of exactly the same pictures that are at the SDMA (or in the accompanying catalogue by the Museum of American Folk Art), that show would have looked very different from the one we can currently see. We necessarily look at these pictures with different eyes, and with a different — and enlarged — capacity for aesthetic experience.

If you are not quite sure what the relevance of all this is to Ammi Phillips, take a look at the portrait of Dr. Peter Guernsey that Phillips painted in the 1820s. The figure of the doctor is in the vein of all Phillips's portraits: the same facile exploitation of formulas, the same detailed focus on the face and relative neglect of the rest, the same amazingly characterful personality that emerges from the artist's assiduous commercial brush. There is also the often repeated formula of books as theatrical props, their legible titles placing the sitter socially and revealing his interests.

But Phillips evidently wanted to do more to indicate Guernsey's profession (or perhaps the doctor himself asked for this). Was he an eye doctor? That would account for the introduction of a patient, whose eye the physician is supposedly examining. At the right of the picture, a face appears in profile, above summary references to a high white collar and a dark jacket front. The doctor's left hand is pulling down the lower lid of the patient's eye, while an otherwise unexplained hand (probably that of an assistant) pulls up the upper lid. In the doctor's dreadfully drawn right hand, a pointed instrument lies ready to do something to the eye thus bared.

Judged in terms of its own professed realism, this picture — aside from the doctor's face — is a laughable botch. The inert bulge that constitutes the patient's face (it has all the animation of a corpse in a dissection laboratory), the artist's total lack of interest in giving a convincing reality to the way the eyelids are being pulled back or to the hand coming out of nowhere, the absurd contradiction between the doctor's manipulation of the patient's eye and his steady gaze focused not on this delicate operation but on the audience — well, it's wretched stuff, the work of an artist who couldn't be bothered with learning more than 50 percent of his craft.

Yet, in the century of Salvador Dalí, this picture takes on other overtones. The grotesqueness of the scene, the not-quite-human or not-quite-living quality of the patient's face, the distressing sharpness of the medical instrument held at the ready, the extra hand, the highly detailed realism of certain sections (Dr. Guernsey's physiognomy, his shirt front, his books) in the service of a situation fraught with unreality and potential anguish — the atmosphere is that of a nightmare, made all the more uncanny by the conviction almost every-one looking at the picture must have that the artist consciously intended none of this. It is accidental Surrealism — art that gives you the willies the way Dalí's or Ernst's does, but by means of naiveté and ineptitude rather than through a sophisticated theory and technique.

Is this a legitimate way to look at Phillips's paintings? It is, of course, unhistorical. In their own period, the pictures did not have this valence. Nor does the nightmarish, Surrealistic quality have any relationship to the artist's own unconscious wishes and fears. Nothing about Ammi Phillips suggests that he had any notable psychological problems, that he had any real access to his unconscious life, or that he in any way associated painting with dreaming. He was not a Bosch or a Goya. The strangeness of much of his art — and once you have noticed it, you cannot get away from it — has a very different flavor from the strangeness of those authentic Surrealists-before-the-fact. But the very idiosyncrasy of Phillips's pseudo-Surrealism makes it aesthetically interesting — and, paradoxically, intensifies its effect of disconcerting irra-tionality.

This principle in mind, you may discover Phillips's weirdness for yourself. It ought to be one of the leitmotifs of your tour of the collection. Look at the bizarre futuristic spectacles of Deacon Benjamin Benedict. Look at the immensely tall conical figure, enigmatic belle-dame-sans-merci expression, pipe-like arms, and peculiarly post-Impressionist umbrella and purse of Harriet Leavens (all these bland yet queasy features applied formulaically, for they appear identically in the contemporaneous portrait of Harriet Campbell).

Look at all the pictures of children: the small, round-headed mannikins in their identical two-dimensional red dresses, accompanied by identical unliving dogs and cats like creatures from an obsessively repeated dream, the rats of the Ratman, the wolves of the Wolfman; or little Jane Ann Campbell, sitting in the midst of bright Matisse-like or Bonnard-like patterns with her zombie-like doll (its face identical with hers, and just as alive) on her lap; or the identical, identically clothed, symmetrically arranged Ten Broeck Twins, with their blankly alert faces, their peculiar hands, their floating bowl of pears and peaches without solidity; and many other paralytically preserved young folk, each unreal or Surreal or beyond-Surreal — or just poorly painted — in his or her own way.

Ammi Phillips obviously cannot be held to the highest standards of drawing, painting, or portraiture. But you would make a mistake to let high standards interfere with the special kind of pleasure this collection of his pictures can provide. Seen from our modern point of view, Phillips is willy-nilly an intriguing — and even unforgettable — artist. And thinking about his work may give you unexpected insights into the nature of the art he practiced so skillfully and so bumblingly. ■

What is the Purpose of Prayer?

We believe that worship can be viewed as both quotation and affirmation. Quotation means reciting the prayers of the past in order to appreciate the traditional hopes, insights and ideals of our ancestors. Through their words, we link ourselves to them and to our fellow Jews across the world as only an ancient and transnational people can. Affirmation means expressing our own contemporary beliefs and values in new ways – through readings, poetry, stories, drama, dance, music and discussion. In Reconstructionist prayer, we combine quotation and affirmation, because for us, God is the power within us and in the universe that helps us strive for goodness and fulfillment. We want our prayers to be humanistic, egalitarian, authentic and honest so that through them we may experience gratitude, love, self-worth and joy.

Weird World in a Cramped Christmas Card

The play is a lot wiser — and a lost less wiseacre — than the production.

JEFF SMITH

For his birthday, Hank Tater's father gave him $4000 worth of totem poles. Dumped 'em on the front lawn of Hank's home in Fryeburg, Maine, and said they'll provide protection. The totem poles — and those evil ferns he cleared away that just invaded his car — are the least of Hank's worries, though. He and wife Muriel have yet to name their seven-week-old daughter, and they haven't made love (doctor's orders) since she was born. Things have gotten so lonely, Hank says their home's like a time-share condo: no two people are ever there together. Plus which, Muriel keeps having these "reality attacks." Even Hank's lover, Trudi, who uses married men as a "resource," feels no attachment to Hank. He's merely a dot on her "time-line." So Hank's in a quandary. All the poor guy wants is some "sweetness" in his life.

If you take Hank's perspective, in Wendy MacLeod's Apocalyptic Butterflies, the world is strange indeed. His father Dick (yep, Dick Tater — the playwright feareth not the Cute) wears a yellow rainslick all year round so that Maine's tourists, who expect to see weathered locals, won't be disappointed (Dick isn't just a vegetarian either; lately he's been apologizing to the vegetables). Hank's mother says Dick's a "man of vision." Hank thinks he's a "fruitcake." Same with Muriel, who Hank says is living a "pitiful existence." I mean, after all, now she wants help with the chores — as if his putting in eight hours a day at a discount shoe store weren't breadwinning enough. Okay, so he left coffee grounds in the sink, should they be "grounds" for divorce (the playwright shyeth not from the Clever)? To Hank, the world's gone nuts, and he's the only one able to recall when things were "normal."

To Hank, practically everyone's an eccentric, what with all those vegetarians and totem poles (not to mention the huge butterflies Dick plastered on his mobile home — and why won't Hank's parents live in a house like regular people?), and uninterested lovers, and wives making hubbies do housework. From Hank's perspective, xenophobia reigns, and Apocalyptic Butterflies is just a '50s sitcom in which he is beleaguered by an idiotic world. But what if Hank is actually a modern-day Rip Van Winkle who still expects life to behave like a '50s sitcom — only the world has long since moved on? From this perspective, Hank is a whiny adolescent trapped (as his father says) in antiquated thought patterns. He's the joke, not the world, and the comedy isn't a sitcom but a very funny critique of old-fashioned sitcom attitudes. Since it's set in Maine, you could retitle the play Northeastern Exposure. Either that or Hank Tater Finally Grows Up.

At the North Coast Repertory Theatre, director Vinny Ferrelli took the tack of least resistance and staged Apocalyptic Butterflies from Hank's perspective. Played on Marty Burnett's first mediocre set in years (it looks and functions like a cramped Christmas card), the show is a '50s sitcom in which the World Is Weird Yet Our Hero Bumbles Through. The production gets laughs — usually at the expense of the other characters — but has erased all the subtexts in the process. This isn't to say that MacLeod's script has Pinteresque potential. Not so. She often becomes so enamored of the genre she's satirizing that she adopts many of its habits. But the play is a lot wiser — and a lot less wiseacre — than the NCRT production.

A glaring example is Hank's lover Trudi. On the surface, she seems like a braindead bimbette with the IQ of a turnip. But the playwright loves to punch through stereotypes in unexpected ways, and Trudi, it turns out, is downright sage — and funny. To overcome crooked teeth, she learned to "adopt a melancholy attitude to get out of smiling." And when it comes to possible commitment with Hank, she asks the question: "Who wants to marry a guy who cheats on his wife?"

Trudi's a fount of dearly earned wisdom, and yet — obviously as directed by Ferrelli — Annette Murphy plays her as a dim bulb who magically comes up with all these keeper one-liners. The rest of the cast performs similarly: they play stereotypes and roles rather than the contradictions MacLeod has built into them. Another example is Jack Becker's Dick Tater, he of the seeming eccentricities. Here's a guy fully aware of stereotypes (he even wears a rainslick to uphold one). Surely he can rise above all the labeling. Nope. Becker gives Jack a passel of bumpkin traits — a calculated twitch, a pipe bouncing up and down between his teeth as if on a diving board — all of which discourage subtlety. Pat DiMeo's Francine, Hank's mother, comes closest to credibility, but even she could up the ante when it's time to show that Hank's the only weirdo and that, even in Fryeburg, Maine, the real fruitcakes are those who stereotype others.

The relationship hurt most by the director's choice, of course, is Hank and Muriel's. While Mark Taylor's Hank complains centerstage ad infinitum, Tracy McNeil's Muriel is shoved off to the side, even though Muriel's going through just as much grief, if not more, than her husband. Taylor plays Hank as the puzzled protagonist. Becoming more of a mixed-up antagonist, however, would serve the play better. It would also help if McNeil's lines had more stage-weight. And more hurt. When she says, "The one person on this earth supposed to love me more than life itself has called me ugly — by your actions," the line merits more than a simple yuk. A better balance between Muriel and Hank would improve a relationship that, on opening night, was just a tedious skirmish that got un-funny fast. ■

Beau Jest
Sarah Goldman's "beau," Chris, is a gentile. Fearing her Jewish parents will object, Sarah hires Bob Schroeder from the Heaven Sent Escort Agency to play her boyfriend, Dr. David Sterling, at a family dinner. It all sounds simple enough. But Bob, an aspiring actor, finds himself in the Actor's Nightmare. He must play the doctor without a script and figure out his role as he goes along. James Sherman's light comedy has a déjà vu, "speak for yourself, John Alden" quality. The motif of the substitute lover has taken many guises over the years. Here it's a modest assertion-training seminar for the skittish Sarah, who begins to fall for Bob and who learns that standing up for oneself doesn't necessitate stepping on someone else. Beau Jest is undemanding summer fare, a comedy of situation with some good lines but not much more. The Lamb's Players Theatre, currently on one heck of a roll, is staging the play for all it's worth. Director Kerry Meads keeps the pace lively and knows how to frame the jokes for best effect. As Miriam and Abe, Sarah's parents, Trina Kaplan and Daniel Mann keep the show from dwindling into stereotypes (the jokes are on Bob, fumbling with the unfamiliar, not on them). Cynthia Peters gives whole musical scales to the mega-fretting Sarah, essentially a one-note role. Peters and Mike Buckley — who also deserves credit for a nicely detailed set: Sarah's living and dining room in the small Lamb's space — work well together. Steve Gallion's Joel, who has zip to say for most of the evening and then becomes the voice of reason, is capably done as well. Lighting designer Rick Mittleider and costume designer Monica Helzer, both relatively new to Lamb's, make useful contributions to the show.
Worth a try.
Lamb's Players Theatre, through September 4; Wednesday, Thursday, and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m.

Bye Bye Birdie
The Fallbrook Players open their summer season with Charles Strouse, Mike Steward, and Lee Adams's musical comedy about rock star Conrad Birdie going in the Army. Diane Felthous has directed. Mission Theatre, 231 N. Main Street, Fallbrook, through August 28; Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Sunday at 2:00 p.m. For information call 728-0998.

Carousel
The Christian Community Theater is offering the popular Rodgers and Hammerstein musical. Paul Russell has directed.

C'est la Guerre
This modest, hour-long musical revue is about a battle without bullets: the war against AIDS. Michael Osborn wrote the music and lyrics, the former mostly forgettable, the latter with some biting one-liners ("red ribbons cut from years of red tape"; "too many people today trying to be the straightest gay"). The most moving line in the show, however, comes from the director's notes in the program. "The saddest thing to me," says Gary Holt, "is that C'est la Guerre has to be updated." Lyrics that sung of a 10 year struggle now must say 14. Produced by Loge Trash Productions, Finest City Productions and the Gay Men's Chorus of San Diego, the show is competently done, if uninspired. Osborn said in an interview that he wanted to demonstrate how those who have passed away rejuvenate the lives of those who loved them. And the production is positive and life-affirming. But at times these aims blunt the potential for anger in the piece. The title says there's a war — and the uncredited costumes have olive drab and military accessories — and yet no one gets fighting mad in any of the 12 songs. There are opportunities, as in the "New Solider's Song," "Advice to the Front Lines," and "Soldiers in the Sky," though each is more performed as a musical number in a show than a call to arms in the world. The revue's best songs are the humorous "Vaccine," in which Jojo Martinez awaits innoculation against AIDS, and "Sister's Will," a eulogy for a drag queen sung only passably by Ross Adams. Susan Hammons and Russ Lorenson perform consistently well, and Ric Shaffer's piano work is solid, though Gary R. Lewis's lighting is hyperactive; it's got too much of what this show lacks.
Diversionary Playhouse, through September 11; Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Sunday at 7:00 p.m.

Don't Dress for Dinner
The Pine Hills Dinner Theater presents Robin Hawdon's adaptation of this French farce by Marc Camoletti in which "domestic deception" reigns. Scott Kinney has directed. Pine Hills Dinner Theater, through September 10; Friday and Saturday, dinner at 7:00 p.m., curtain at 8:00 p.m.

Friends of Dorothy
This new musical comedy, by Ruff Yeager and John Martin, is based loosely on The Wizard of Oz and follows the travels of Dotto, a "naive bumpkin who discovers the triumphs and tribulations of being gay."

The Fritz Blitz:
The Well of Happiness
The first Fritz Blitz, a six-week series of new works by San Diego dramatists, continues with Stuart Ostfeld's drama about a single advertising executive and her troubled teenage son. Beverly Delventhal has directed. Note: If the opening-night entries for the Fritz Blitz are any indication, the series is in capable hands. Of course it helps to have a director with the talent of Matthew Wilder, who pulled all the stops for Karl Gajdusek's feisty (if a bit academic) Dr. F's in the Terminal Ward, and a strong performance by Christine Nicholson in Luther Hanson's mostly negligible Waiting for Gounod. If the other stagings offer such quality, the Fritz Blitz could become an annual showcase for local authors.
The Fritz Theater, through September 18; Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Sunday at 7:00 p.m. For a complete schedule of the Fritz Blitz, call the theater at 233-7505.

Godspell
The Lamb's Players Theatre is offering its third staging of Godspell — the others were in 1982 and 1987 — and the third one's a charmer. This Robert Smyth-directed production is not only Lamb's best version of the Stephen Schwartz/John Michael Tebelak musical to date, it's one of the best shows Lamb's has ever done. In much the way that dreams compose nocturnal mysteries with bits of things from daily life, the show uses present-day pop culture to clarify the meanings of Jesus' parables (one of the people refusing to help the Good Samaritan, for example, is Dana Carvey's "Church Lady"). Smyth's aim, stated in a program note, is to "shake off the layers of accumulated propriety to reveal" the "radical center of Jesus' message," and part of the fun is the show's unbridled assault on that propriety, even to offending the spiritually squeamish when an actor reacts loudly with "Oh, Jee-zuss!" All the skills of the company have gone into this fresh, witty, ceaselessly imaginative show. Smyth's direction is often kaleidoscopic in its blockings, and Pamela Turner's inventive choreography includes dance numbers with the nine-person cast on their knees. Just as the production gives the familiar Gospel of Matthew a new telling, the cast has both Lamb's regulars and new faces. Ria Carey, Kathi Gibbs, Sarah Zimmerman, and Mark DeVille Jobson, game veterans of previous Lamb's shows, perform with admirable assurrance, while newcomers Jody Ashworth, Fernando Flores Vega, the instinctively funny David Kamatoy (who also juggles par excellence), and the multi-talented Tajma Soleil have earned many a callback for future shows at Lamb's. Compared to other versions of the New Testament, Godspell is deceptively simple. As is Harry Waters, Jr.'s, remarkable portrayal of Jesus. Waters gives the role the least preachy reading imagineable. Jesus's followers aren't fallen sinners, they're potentially saved, and he's here to show them what that means. Waters is an "ensemble" Jesus and the engaging center of a show guaranteed to revive your spirits even if you don't have the Spirit.
Outstanding.
Lyceum Space, 79 Horton Plaza, downtown, through September 4; Wednesday, Thursday, and Sunday at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday and Sunday at 2:00 p.m. For information call 474-4542.

The Good Person of Setzuan
Tony Kushner's new translation is the highlight of the La Jolla Playhouse's current show. It's faithful to Bertolt Brecht's original, is packed with theatrical savvy, and encompasses both the Brecht of V-Effects and the Brecht of 1948, who argued in his Short Organum that the real secret of the theater is to have fun. Lisa Peterson's direction also opts for an eclectic approach. The production is funny, confrontationally didactic, and even emotionally (i.e. Naturalistically) old fashioned. With a multi-ethnic cast, Peterson has re-located the play somewhere near here. Music by David Hidalgo and Louis Perez of Los Lobos enhances this sense of nearness. Neither Kushner nor Peterson can overcome the play's length: with a three-hour-plus running time, Good Person is one of the world's longest "parables" (also, some of the incidents are too thin to merit the amount of time the playwright gives them). Although Peterson has an obvious affinity for the big Mandell Weiss stage, parts of the show lacked focus, as various tones and techniques at times blurred the clarity Brecht prized above all else. So there are quibbles. But this Good Person is a gigantic enterprise, and what worked on opening night not only outweighed what didn't, it created a sense that, once the show settles in, it could get a lot better. A key reason is Charlayne Woodard as Shen Te/Shui Ta. She sings beautifully, and when the script says fly, she soars. Lou Diamond Phillips, Gedde Watanabe, Diane Rodriguez, and Ching Valles-Aran provide solid support. And Chris De Oni's a hoot as the barber, Mr. Shu Fu. Robert Brill's set, corrugated tin and iron catwalks, gives the stage the epic spaciousness the play requires. What Brill's got hanging on the rear wall, however, may be too arresting.s It's a mean-looking, prehistoric lizard, maybe 15 feet long. An inflated iguana? Nope, not evil enough. Speculation about that surly reptile, like some of the show's other elements, threatens to steal too much focus. Clearly it's a Rorschach. But then again, so is Brecht's study of beseiged goodness in a corrupt world, and your time is much better spent examining your response to it.
Worth a try.

THE MUSICAL THAT ROCKED THE WORLD

Missed Woodstock? Come to The Bowl!

Five Nights Only!
August 31, September 1-4 – 8 pm Curtain

The dawning of the first Age of Aquarius, Hair exploded onto the stage in the '60s. No musical had ever dared so much – it was the first tribal love-rock musical. And today, recharged and revitalized, it remains as potent as ever. Hair is today – and tomorrow. Today we should simply understand that its message and its music are infinite.

Five Nights Only!
September 21-25, 8 pm Curtain
Music by Scot Singer – Lyrics by Martha Davis, former lead singer of the Motels!

"The Enchanted Cottage" is a brand-new musical making its debut in San Diego. The musical tells the story of a young, dashing officer who returns from the war disfigured and feeling that he will live a solitary life. He meets a young woman who considers herself plain, and they fall in love in an enchanted cottage, finding the meaning of true beauty. This romantic and touching story has a glorious musical score. See it with someone you love.

I Do, or Die ... The Mother-in-Law of All Weddings
Until now, the Mystery Cafe has imported scripts for its interactive dinner theater. But with I Do, or Die, written by San Diegans James Pascarella and Will Roberson, the Mystery Cafe not only has a homegrown product, it also has one of its best — the best balance between written and ad-libbed materials, the best array of credible suspects and clues, and also the funniest of the ones I've seen at the Imperial House. Patrizia "Patti" Peccarino, heir to the Peccarino cheese fortune ("The Cheese Stands Alone!"), is about to marry Wilhelm "Willie" Schmeterlinck, last of the Schmeterlincks (whom some allege really invented Cheese Whiz) and a lad given to quoting Shakespeare. There's a death. Then another. Was the murderer Gretchen "The Bavarian Battleaxe" Schmeterlinck? Or Patti's mother Theresa Rodham Peccarino? Both brim with insidious motives. Was it the lactose-intolerant Patti, who lost 17 minutes of her life at age nine? Or was it one of several other candidates, each eager to make a hostile takeover — of anything! — and each living proof that "cousins shouldn't marry." Pascarella, who stars as a variety of hilarious boors, and Roberson, who has also directed, have set the piece in the 1950s (that is somehow able to make numerous topical references about 1993). It's a consistently fun evening, made so by Pascarella, Patricia Harris-Smith — who plays several characters and who has assumed many of the MC duties to good effect — by Stephanie Britton as the bride (with an aversion to the sound of animal balloons being squeaked that gives her the shimmy-shakes), Ehren Ziegler as the Hamlet-quoting groom ("To wed...or not to wed..."), and Carol Mackintosh and Sandra Dubow as the Mothers-in-law-to-be From Hell. Were the murders their "feta-accompli"? Dione Labhar's costumes play comical havoc with both the '50s and proper attire for nuptials, and John-Bryan Davis's wigs — explosions of cascading hair sprayed to within a millimeter of its life — are a hoot. So's this show.

Love Letters
It's hard to "review" the Sweetooth Comedy Theatre's current production, because the cast will change every week. Sweetooth is staging A.R. Gurney's immensely popular two character play as a benefit, with one-third of the proceeds for each evening going to charities chosen by the participants. So how can a show change performers every week? By design. Gurney wrote Love Letters to be read, not acted. It is a "sort of a play," he said, "which needs no theater, no lengthy rehearsal...no memorization of lines, and no commitment from its two actors beyond the night of performance." In effect, the approximately 90-minute piece is simply a reading of letters between Andrew Makepeace Ladd III and his childhood friend, Melissa Gardner. And the aims are to keep the show from becoming too polished, to preserve the rough-hewn look of a staged reading, and to sustain the spontaneous feel of letter-writing itself — 50 years of letters, everything from the Annual Christmas Letter to queries about one's whereabouts and health (i.e., are you still in Detox?). Though they are rarely together (their lives are a series of near-misses), and though they are opposites temperamentally, something links the "stalwart," "upright" — okay, "stuffy" — Andrew with the "lascivious," "cynical," "self-destructive" Melissa. One is leftbrain dominant, the other right-. As he rises ever higher in the Eastern WASP Establishment, trailing clouds of self-denial in his path, the artistic Melissa expresses every impulse in a life that is forever vowing to restart anew. All of this makes the play's title appear a misnomer. The letters aren't about love, small l, but instead trace the growth, change, and evolution — the whole zodiac of love's many ways. Love Letters is a deceptively simple, ultimately moving show. And with a new cast each week at Sweetooth, composed of theater artists and local celebrities, the piece has a persistent way of coaxing unrehearsed, genuine feeling from its participants. This week's performers: Friday, August 26, and Saturday, August 27, Kris Wackerli and Myles Mayfield (charity: FOCAS, Friends of County Animal Shelter).
Worth a try.
Sweetooth Comedy Theatre, through August 27, Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Call the theater at 544-9079 for a list of the participants.

A Midsummer Night's Dream
When the lovers go into the woods in Octad-Orie's 14th annual summer production of Shakespeare-by-the-Lake, they lose their way amid actual trees as the sun fades in the west. The real sun. Staging A Midsummer Night's Dream outdoors, on a mid-summer evening, is a natural. And, after a slow start, the Octad production is a pleaser. They have trimmed the script to a 90-minute sprint (one can rue some of the omissions, especially when Theseus and Hippolyta don't debate whether dreams are just "airy nothing" or "something of great constancy"). The cast has been trimmed as well. They make up in vitality what they lack in polish and experience, though. Credit must go to director Betty Matthews. While her staging of Measure for Measure in 1992 left much to be desired, here she's much more assured, painting with more sweeping strokes and filling the amphitheater with activity and a sure comic touch. Help comes from many quarters. James Gary Byrd's Bottom — who's instinctive mugging seeks out the camera even before it was invented — is a delight. Michael Williams's manic Puck gets the laughs but also shows that Puck hasn't a moral clue and could be quite dangerous if left to his own devices. As in Peter Brook's deathless staging of Dream which, some say, began this tradition, the same actors play Theseus/Oberon and Hippolyta/Titania, rulers of the city and the fairy kingdom, and Doug Reger and Elizabeth Howorth fare well as the agents of excessive control and bucolic anarchy. Jorge Rubio, Julie McKee, Chinami Leath, Adam Goodie, and Josh Harwell also have good moments. Donal Pugh's sounds enhance the atmosphere, and Bonnie Carson's useful costumes help us keep who's who among the lovers clear, even when they get confused.
Worth a try.
Outdoor Amphitheatre, East County Performing Arts Center, 210 East Main Street, El Cajon, through August 28; Saturday and Sunday at 6:00 p.m. For information call 583-2418.

Peter Pan
"It's a bird. It's a plane." No. Actually it's a green-clad lass, cross-dressed as a lad who refuses to grow up (or even be touched) and who lives where young and old remain cozily ensconced in pre-adolescence. At the Lawrence Welk Resort Theatre, it's also the multi-talented Amy Griffin (terrific in the Welk's 1992 Unsinkable Molly Brown and even better here). She's Peter Pan, soaring about as if born with wings and turning the musical by Charlap, Styne, Leigh, Comden, and Green into an entertaining re-entry into the Never-Again Land of Youth. Griffin is so good she makes one wonder: how many performers can sing and fly at the same time? She spears through the air thanks to "Flying by Foy," human puppeteers who enable Peter, Wendy, and her brothers to hover, glide, and even make tight bank turns with the greatest of ease. One could want a bit more menace from the Pirates, who seem like a pack of fun guys headed for a Halloween lark rather than bounding main marauders irked by anyone having a better time than they. And Tiger Lily's Indians seem more native to Broadway than nature. But Bill Mullikin's Captain Hook (a cautionary caricature of what you may become if you don't grow up) is appropriately bumbling and capable of some sincere, bug-eyed evil. As is that rather lengthy crocodile (Lloyd "Skypp" Cabanas), whose feeding-time's an around-the-clock gig. Frank Wayne's direction and Judy Ann Bassing's choreography keep the Welk stage animated. Scott Joseph's sets, in Dick Tracy colors, solve most (but not all) of the major locale problems posed by the script. And Justin Gray's "orchestra" does capable work, highlighted by Tinkerbell's xylophone dialogue. Tink is a flitting, red squiggle and, yes, I clapped for her recovery. Loudly.

Worth a try.

Lawrence Welk Resort Theatre, through September 3; Tuesday, and Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Tuesday through Thursday, and Sunday, at 1:45 p.m.

Pump Boys and Dinettes
The Lamb's Players Theatre is reproducing its very popular version of the down-home rockabilly musical revue. The production's a natural pleaser, and it could run forever. Set at a gas station and diner off Highway 57, between Smyrna and Frog Level, Pump Boys functions like its location: a rest area from cares, concerns, and life's frenetic freeways. You've pulled over for a fill-up and a bite to eat, and the musical takes it from there with simple country songs about universal troubles, which seem less insurmountable by show's end. No song is unforgettable, but the combination of the ballads and uptempo rockers (plus the carefree, always forgiving attitude of the locals) is contagious. Director/choreographer Deborah Gilmour Smyth has cast the show splendidly and, aided by musical director Rick Meads, has orchestrated a seamless flow of moods and music. Having Linda Libby and Kerry Meads play Rhetta and Prudie, the waitresses at the diner, is a real bonus (especially when Libby growls "Be Good or Be Gone" and when Meads croons "The Best Man I Never Had"). Another fine tandem is guitarist Jim Mooney, as the somewhat withdrawn L.M. ("I may be a retread, but I ain't no spare") and keyboardist David Heikkila as the extroverted Jackson. Both enliven all they do. Clay Rider, on guitar, and Oliver Shirley, on bass, aren't slouches either. In great detail, Mike Buckley's set recreates L.M. & Jim's Service Station (where gas costs 18¢ a gallon) and the Double Cupp Diner (where it is wise, for the show and one's waistline, to avert one's eyes from THOSE PIES!). The Lamb's production is a pleasant, undemanding pit stop. It slows down the pace of the outside world and sends you back down the road refreshed.
Worth a try.

Sexual Perversity in Chicago
Anyone on the lookout for a hot late-night comedy should go to the Fritz Theater — at its new location on Third Avenue — and check out David Mamet's exposé of the singles scene. The "sexual perversity" of the title isn't what you think. It's actually about the ways veterans of the scene erect barriers to prevent them from intimacy. Danny and Deborah have met and are headed toward love. His friend Bernie and her roommate Joan, however, are determined to prevent it from happening. Between Bernie's deep-seated hatred of women and Joan's of men, there's no room for anything like optimism. In the hour-long comedy-drama, they function like evil angels at the ears of Danny and Deborah, filling them with overflowings of their own negativity. They must rank as two of the least supportive "friends" on the planet. In a series of quick, often hilariously funny scenes, Mamet traces the slow rise and precipitous fall of Danny and Deborah's relationship. At the Fritz, thanks to some fine work by director Duane Daniels, the show moves at a briskly Mametian clip. Daniel Morris's set — four chairs and a black background lit nicely by Douglas Gabrielle — makes up in instantaneous scene changes what it lacks in detail. The latter is supplied by Allen Ogden's costumes and Marty Eldridge's sound design, part of which is mid'70s disco music that catches the period (Chicago, 1976) and causes cringes of musical memories at the same time. The acting is solid. In particular, Bryan Bevell's Danny is just right, moving from a form of singles-scene innocence to the bitterness of James Watkins's Bernie in believable stages. Lisa Viertel's Deborah, caught in the switches like Danny, is often most eloquent when she doesn't say a word and simply shows us how repulsive Bernie is and how, were it not for two very angry singles soloists (and boy, this is an angry play, in the characters and in Mamet's anger at the condition), she and Danny might have turned out together just fine. (Note: Several cast changes have occurred since the show opened in April 1992.)
Worth a try.

Twelfth Night
Shakespeare subtitled his final romantic comedy What You Will, and director Laird Williamson has taken it literally at the Old Globe. He has pared a fascinating, multi-layered, thoroughly funny script down to practically nothing. The whole play becomes merely a preparation for Viola's high school prom (yep, her prom; I'm not making this up). It's her pre-prom dream, and Williamson takes us on a Through-the-Looking-Glass jaunt to a Disney-ized Moroccan carnival full of balloons and cotton candy, a flying Feste, a peripatetic jukebox for Sir Toby Belch, and soft pastels aplenty (hardly the Illyria clogged with mourning and melancholy that you might expect, but after a while you weary of saying, "But wait ..."). Andrew V. Yelusich's costumes treat the characters as if they're other people: Malvolio is an Elvis wannabe, Aguecheek's a Mad Hatter. The trouble with the production — well, one of them at least — is that we never get past these reductive surfaces. We never get back to Twelfth Night. The result is a brainless, albeit buoyant, bagatelle that prompts one to ask: why focus on Viola's rise to adulthood when she and Feste are the most grown-up of the whole crowd? Everyone else is a child stuck in emotional gridlock, and it's up to her and Feste to get them to shape up and face life with some measure of maturity. Amid endlessly infuriating choices, the production has two remarkable features. Ralph Funicello's set — flowing curtains surrounding wood planks that ascend to a pyramid-shaped, cresting wave — is a work of art. And while the rest of the cast sprint through their lines as if they were annoying accessories and do exercises in efforting to make the comedy go, only Jefrey Alan Chandler gives a performance worthy of the scenic design. His Feste is funny, harsh, wise, and absolutely wonderful. It's incomplete, however. Feste's final ballad, which poet Peter Levi says has a "shattering sadness," has been artificially sweetened beyond belief. But then again, by the time Chandler gets to sing it, you expect such a sweeping under the rug from a show that rivals Watergate for covering up the truth.

You Must Be One of the Voices of the Homeless, Huh?

I would giggle myself to sleep that night, alone again, naturally.

REVIEW
STEPHEN ESMEDINA

By this point, it would seem the organizers and perpetrators of the San Diego Music Awards had grown immune to anything resembling mock coverage of this fourth-annual deal that prevented me from watching Steve Young and Jerry Rice toy with our beloved bolts. But knowing the master, Mr. Kevin Hellman, as I do not, I am sure he will have an instant retort to any suggestion that the thing is jive. All awards gigs — an unappreciated, indigenous American conception — are jive. The Ahscahs, the Grammas, the Emmas, the Pro Bowl: who gives a futz. But I like itemizing; so, as a member of the San Diego Music Academy, an amorphous conglomeration one magically finds oneself a part of, I voted. And when the venue was switched to the Fox Theatre (chinga tu madre, "Copley Symphony Hall"), the magnificent movie palace where at the age of 5 I saw El Cid, the best movie ever conceived (and at 19 saw the second-best, Badlands), I deemed the occasion auspicious enough to do what I ordinarily don't work hard to do: look presentable.

More's the shitty pity, as my fine friend Ernesto Echaves, percussionist and ham for Creed, was quite vocal about letting everyone in the will-call line know that his group WAS NOMINATED FOR BEST NEW ARTIST. One woman looked at Ernie in his dashiki-pillowcase garb and sincerely asked, "Oh, you must be one of the Voices of the Homeless, huh?" Before "Airto" could express his mortification, yours truly had fallen against a crummy lithograph on the wall, laughing my considerable arse off and thereby diminishing my academy-member prestige. I knew at least I would giggle myself to sleep that night, alone again, naturally.

Oh, the thing itself: a fucking dud. Some good guys (guitarist Dan Papaila, bandleader Benny Holman, the funny-for-now Rugburns, and the Arthur Brown–Blue Cheer amalgam Voodoo) took home their plastic squibs, destined someday to make good housewarming gifts. But many who got awarded didn't show, and the local "media" are woefully fucked up when it comes to ad-libbing their butts out of a soggy sack. Except Rene Sandoval. This tio was not remotely funny, and he didn't care. If everyone was going to be stiff and to posture like they were Old Blue Eyes reading a caveat to the audience and Warren Beatty stinging him with "You old Republican you," well, El Jefe was going to make a mockery.

"My" band, Creed, lost to some groovy Melanie–cum–Marsha Brady babe named Jewel. Got a pretty Susanna Hoffs voice, but if this is Dago's next big thing, I may have to get cynical. Ernie threw his acceptance speech into the wind, blamed his ruin on misandristic rectitude, and was not consoled to hear of Pacino's many snubbings prior to Scent of a Woman. I went home, cursed the Chargers' secondary, threw an old Green Hornet into the VCR, and thanked the Big Man that some things in our little slice of Southwest heaven are sacred: radio people's endless self-referential schmoozing, musicians practicing to say, "It's a thrill to be nominated," and the charity driblets that Mr. Hellman nobly distributes. ■

Wipeout

The suspicion that this is going to be a very long night for music-lovers begins to creep up on me like a bad pair of surf trunks.

REVIEW
TIM RYLAND

At the stroke of midnight I finally snap, fight my way across the floor through a sea of bruising humanity — sweaty shoulders, arms muscular from surfing, firm breasts hugged by Spandex — shove some dude in a Billabong T-shirt who won't move fast enough. "Hey!" Billabong shoves back. I snarl, break my beer bottle across my knee, brandish the jagged longneck. Suddenly between me and the stage it's like Moses and the Red Sea. I clamber up and strangle feedback out of a microphone stand. "Attention!" I scream into the mike. "All professional surfers who are even thinking of dropping your boards and taking up the guitar — ax the ax! Stick with the stick! Give us all a fuckin' break!"

The mosh pit is suddenly a forest of pumping fists. "Ax the ax!" the crowd chants as I prance along the stage's edge and lead them in the new mantra. "Stick to the stick!" Bouncers are converging on me like sharks on blood. I throw myself spread-eagled into the sea of my new disciples — "Ax the ax! Stick to the stick!" — and body-surf their eager hands all the way out the front door.

At the stroke of midnight plus one, I snap back to reality. Take a brackish swig from my still-intact beer bottle. Deep into the fourth hour at the Belly Up Tavern and I've heard less than two hours of music from four bands, most of it awful. Pro surfers are heavily to blame. Now we're into another excruciating break between sets. The pinball machines have devoured all my quarters. The pool tables are overrun. As I retreat to my stool in the balcony, the conflagration of heat and smoke rises from the floor and cozies in around me. Guys mill around the stage moving equipment to no observable effect.

The occasion is a benefit concert for Ecosurf, the Surfrider Foundation's tenth anniversary celebration. It feels unsportsmanlike to rag on a concert that's for a cause like Surfrider, which lobbies for beach access and clean oceans. (Tonight's show will raise $7000.) Besides, curiosity bordering on morbidness has drawn me: the prospect of seeing Tom Curren, Brad Gerlach, and Woody Harrelson play music. The last one you know — a likable Hollywood goober who has recently achieved sex-symboldom by playing chew-face with Bruce Willis's wife in a bad movie. The other two you may not: Curren and Gerlach are two of the world's best surfers. Being one of the world's average surfers and having kicked around in my share of garage bands, I was doubly curious about their musical ability. So, what, did I expect good music?

My first clue as to the garage-jam quality of the acts should have been the scene that confronts me outside the Belly Up. The sunset is going off — crimson and orange clouds flame out across a bruise-colored sky. The record-hot day is slipping into twilight like a sweaty fat man into a cool bath. Groups of guys, their clothes emblazoned with surf logos, wander around looking lost, like they had expected a giant fire-ring party — "Yeah, we're just going to show up and party with Tommy and Brad, man!"

"Sold out?" one particularly bummed-out dude repeats as he bends to peer in the window.

"Yeah, sorry," says the nice blond ticket girl.

"Like, there's no way to get in?"

"Sorry."

"What about later, maybe? Like, if people don't show?"

"Sorry."

"How many times have you used the word 'sorry' tonight?" I ask her when I get to the window.

"What else can you say?" she asks. "Guys come up and say, 'Hey, I was in the movie with him; can't you just let me slide in?'"

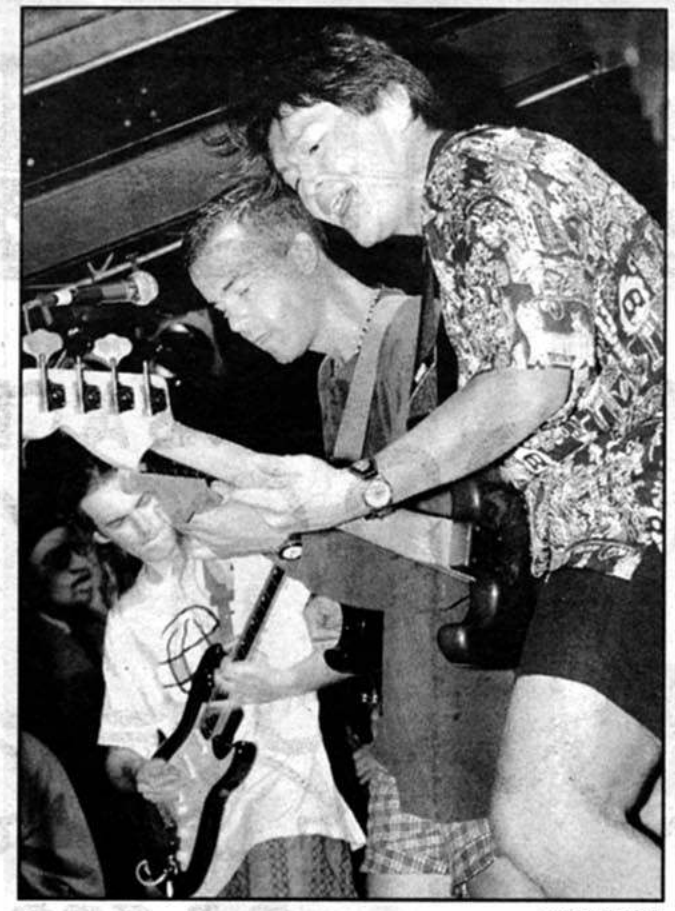
It's 8 p.m. as I slide in. Ads for the concert had promised the world première of Sonny Miller's movie Lost Search Files. Miller is a surf photographer of some repute. The last time I ran into him was three years ago at Ehukai Beach on the North Shore of Oahu. In between focusing his giant lens on the set waves at Pipeline and belching, he was checking out my new bride's tan lines. A surf movie is playing on the video monitors as the first act, a throwaway band called Swing This, thrashes its way through its first song. (The band's claim to fame is winning this year's MTV Beach House band search. There's your problem right there — looking on the beach for a decent band.) If this collection of uninspired surf shots is Miller's film, maybe the search files should have stayed lost.

At the end of Swing This's half-hour set to an unresponsive crowd, the place is starting to fill up. After another 30 minutes, Surf City Rebels take the stage. The suspicion that this is going to be a very long night for music lovers begins to creep up on me like a bad pair of surf trunks. The refrain of Surf City Rebels's first number tells you all you need to know about them: "Go, surfer, go." This six-piece band grinds through their post-grunge version of surf music without a trace of irony. Their original songs are full of phrases like the sun on my board and still chasin' the endless summer, in dutiful three-part harmony. Band members exhort the crowd to dance. The crowd declines.

History is not on these guys' side. Five band members are too young to have been alive before the Beach Boys became an embarrassment. Thirty years later, music that overtly proclaims itself "surf" music is relegated a priori to the realm of parody. The true surf music of today is Pearl Jam, Pennywise, RHCP, Bad Religion, even Led Zep — anything that cranks you up and gets you into the water amping. A real surfer wouldn't be caught dead with this crap in his tape deck. Only balding keyboardist Ken Wallman, who looks like the Boy Scout troop leader here, is old enough to remember the era of Brian Wilson and Dick Dale. His sax solos almost spark a flame, but the Scouts snuff it out with their dank seriousness. Back to the shaping room, fellas.

People start dancing immediately, less a credit to Sunchild's skill than a sign of the musical ineptness that has preceded.

During the next half-hour break, the skinny on the Belly Up floor is that Brad Gerlach has cold feet and isn't going to show. "Gerlach hasn't been playing that long," a guy who should know tells me. "He's worried about playing in front of a crowd." It's easy to see that most of the sellout audience, packed in now, has come to see Gerlach and Curren. You could start a surfwear supply company with the Rusty and Quiksilver clothing in the building.



Suf City Rebels

Gerlach is a local hero of sorts. I was at the 1986 Stubbies contest in Oceanside when the 19-year-old Encinitas local won his first pro contest in a manic, pure-adrenaline performance over then–world champ Tom Carroll of Australia. Gerlach went on to have a solid pro career, then surprised the surfing world by bagging the tour last year to become a bona fide soul surfer. This man who drops effortlessly into the pit at Sunset Beach, however, is apparently scared shitless by the prospect of playing guitar before several hundred people.

What was supposed to be Gerlach's band finally takes the stage ("Please welcome — Sunchild!") with wall-of-sound, straight-ahead, 4/4 blues rock. People start dancing immediately, less a credit to Sunchild's skill than a sign of the musical ineptness that has preceded. The long-haired lead guitarist, who looks like an escapee from 1969 Yasgur's Farm, is Donovan Frankenreiter, a lower-echelon pro surfer who is best buds with Gerlach. It was Frankenreiter who inspired his friend to pick up the guitar in the first place. When a guitar is as loud and distorted as Frankenreiter's old Gibson, fine technique matters less than the ability to keep the beat. Frankenreiter can keep the beat.

As Sunchild cranks through Hendrix's version of "All Along the Watchtower" — geez, could they pick a staler chestnut? — lead singer Brian Philpott's singing ability starts to peek through his power-posing antics. Hell, he's the first guy onstage tonight with any charisma. It glints from his eyes as he plays to the whole house, singing first to the floor crowd, then to the balcony. I'm not the only one he starts to win over. Some of the uninterested surf chicks (most in de rigueur white or black Spandex) start to pay attention. The stage-crush increases in intensity.

After "Watchtower" Philpott explains Gerlach's absence with a quick sermon to the choir. "Okay, Brad got sick surfing Newport Beach," he says. "Let's cut the bullshit, man! Quit polluting the water!" As

MUSIC SCENE

Sunchild finishes its short duty after a couple more tunes with a crowd-pleasing rendition of "Gloria" — "Yes," in answer to that earlier question about "Watchtower" — I'm thinking Gerlach should have shown up. He wouldn't even have had to plug in to make the audience happy. Frankenreiter's workmanlike riffs would have carried him through.

The Belly Up faithful must suffer through yet another interminable break before the payoff. At 11:30 p.m. the bartenders are doing a booming business as Tommy Curren — three-time world champ, product of Santa Barbara, arguably the best and most admired surfer in the world — strolls out with a National guitar. His presence, both onstage and on the beach, is as unassuming as his surfing is mind-blowing. His four-man band false-starts a couple of times before chugging into a blues number. Nondescript is the politest way to describe Curren's singing. Can't understand a word of it. No polite way to describe his original songs, though — meandering, pointless things.

As I snake my way up to the stage, Curren trades his acoustic guitar for a Fender electric and drones out two more numbers. Then he displaces drummer Kofi Baker (who must forever live under the deadly weight of the moniker "son of Ginger Baker") for the fourth and final song, an almost amusical jam that allows lead guitarist Arno Kimsey and bassist Chris Swann to flail their considerable talent. Curren seems happier, and sounds better, ensconced behind the drum set. Kimsey rains down beads of sweat from his sopping hair onto the first rows of fans as he burns through his epileptic-faced solos.

Brian Philpott of Sunchild

When it's over the crowd goes nuts. Curren comes to the edge of the stage to shake the frenzy of hands waving at him. The fact that it's been bad music doesn't matter. Upturned faces shine in the stage lights. Hands reach out. Tommy Curren is God.

When Woody Harrelson's band Urban Masaya comes on at 12:30 a.m. it's anti-climax, even though they sound like — ohmigod — a real band! Some Hollywood weasels have been sitting in the reserved seats off stage left the whole night waiting for this. I take the grubby satisfaction of the great unwashed from knowing that Danny DeVito, Rhea Perlman, and Steve Guttenberg have had to sit through the whole execrable evening to see their buddy massage his ego. Surrounding himself with crack musicians and strapping on a guitar he plays as though afraid it's going to give him a nasty electrical shock, Harrelson is a genial rock star. He's an adequate singer, and the songs he has written and cowritten are catchy, mainstream rock and roll fluff.

Why did I come to see guys I know as great surfers try to play music? I ponder this question on the drive home. What if they had been good — would I have been more impressed with them as human beings? Seeing pro athletes or movie stars out of their own milieu subjects them to a humanizing effect. For a moment they cease to be larger-than-life. It may even allow us to think, "Hey, I could do that." Until we grow older enough to know better, most of us (males at least) have occasional dreams of power-chording our way into rock-and-roll heaven. The difference is, famous people have the ability to indulge this fantasy. And we — no one to blame but ourselves — seem happy to allow them. ■

Poet in a Black Leather Vest

"All across the starry poles / Words save lives / Words save souls."

These words are a guide
Over to the other side
New day blushes rosy red
Sun rising from evening bed
Morning between the seam
Rolling into dream

Encircling a lovely day
Breezes begin to play
Moving soft and slow
Then they … begin to blow!

These lines are from a rock/poetry collaboration between Wilson Sherman and L.A. hard rock guitarist Darrell Fields. The piece is called "My Word." Wilson Sherman — who prefers to be called Willie, since his first name sounds like a last name and vice versa — speaks the lyrics slowly, dreamily, in a manner reminiscent of Jim Morrison at his most stoned. Beneath his voice are tumbling bass lines and drums, and electric guitar riffing that ranges from ZZ Top–like chunga-ka-chung-chung to Stevie Ray Vaughan– or Hendrix-like use of wah-wah pedal, soaring, high, echoing triplets or dive-bombing, vibrato-bar lowings. The guitarist is tireless and has an impressive repertoire of difficult if familiar tricks — flamboyant clichés, in fact, but well executed.

LOCALS
JOHN BRIZZOLARA

Still, it is the begged comparison to Morrison that draws the ear, a comparison that points up the fact that, whatever you thought of him, Morrison could at least sing when he wanted to. However, Willie does not identify himself as a singer. A member of ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors, and Publishers), he once wrote lyrics for songs used on the soap opera Days of Our Lives and for a few years fronted the L.A. rock group Willie and the Poorboys. He spends much of his time in San Diego and advertises in local classifieds: "Poet seeks to collaborate with all kinds of musicians." He says about his musical ventures, "I like to do these recordings live, so that it is like a ritual, a ceremony."

In response to my inquiry, Willie mailed me the recording of "My Word," which was done locally at Cloud Nine Studio. Along with the tape, he sent a page from William Blake:

> Weaving the winding sheet … by means of sounds of spiritual music and its accompanying expressions of articulate speech is a bold, and daring, and most masterly conception, that the public have embraced and approved with avidity.

Later, seated at a La Jolla Cove picnic table, Willie would not give his age but appeared to be somewhere in his mid-30s to early 40s. His black hair fell nearly to his shoulders, and he was clean shaven. He wore Wayfarer-style sunglasses and a black leather vest over a white T-shirt. His mouth seemed pinched as he spoke.

"I am primarily a poet. It's hard to separate good lyrics in music from poetry. It's kind of like psalms in the Bible: psalms/songs. I started collaborating with a guitar player when I was 13."

Willie indeed cited both Jim Morrison and William Blake. "Morrison was an influence. I thought he was a terrific singer, a great baritone. As far as the actual poetry though, I'm far more impressed with William Blake."

The opening verse to Willie's "My Word":

Under blue dome
Where I like to roam
Found me a home
In a new poem

About the movie The Doors, Willie said, "I'm certainly glad they brought up the fact that [Morrison] was a poet and actually wrote poetry books. It maybe sets a good example for rock and roll in general in regards to — well, I wonder how many of those people [typical rock stars] even read a book. In other words, you can be intelligent and sing a rock and roll song as well."

Any other poetical influences?

"Well, the Bible. I like visionary work. Musically I like Jimi Hendrix and Mozart, but as far as poets, there have not been that many who've impressed me all that much. Milton is someone I like. I kind of come up empty on the American poets. I like Dylan Thomas to some degree; that's not the visionary thing particularly, but it is very enjoyable.

"In all art, as far as I'm concerned, the highest echelon is visionary stuff. Michelangelo for painting, as opposed to abstract painting or something like that. In poetry it would be someone like William Blake."

Willie has written three books of verse — Not of the World, Hell, and Vision. "I haven't published them because I've been writing them for the sake of myself as an artist. I haven't even made an effort to get them published. The best way to get a poetry book published is to be famous; otherwise there's just not a buck in it for the publishers."

During the day, Willie occupies himself as founder and president of the Automobile Safety Foundation in La Jolla, an organization about which he would only say, "We're addressing an international safety hazard. That's about all we should talk about concerning that, because otherwise we'll get into shark-infested waters.

"But let me share with you a line from my new poem, 'Celeste,' which reflects my philosophy of poetry: 'All across the starry poles / Words save lives / Words save souls.' That is, i.e., Jesus Christ."

Does he consider himself a Christian poet?

"Yeah, I am a Christian. But the common thoughts summoned up when you say 'Christian' or 'poet' give a bad name to the real thing, you know? I'm simply a Christian in terms of sharing the belief in the words I've read in the Bible. I'm in total accord with what Jesus said in his parables and all that. When I think of that supreme wisdom, it's not hard for me to understand that he's the son of God. He spoke so intelligently.

"At the close of 'My Word,' I say, 'Now we fade / From yesterday din / Heaven / Is within.' That, of course, is a quote from Jesus, that last part. William Blake was a devout Christian in the same sense that I am. He said, 'Imagination is eternal.' He said, 'One power alone makes the true poet — imagination, divine vision.' It's the same as saying, 'Heaven is within.' The early artists were all spiritual: visionaries imagining heaven. I can't buy 'Imagine there's no heaven' [from John Lennon's song 'Imagine']. Total mistake — let's imagine heaven."

"William Blake was a devout Christian in the same sense that I am."

Asked for his own evaluation of his vocal abilities, Willie looked off into the distance behind his Jack Nicholson sunglasses. "Well, you mean am I reciting or am I singing? That's kind of like the fine line between lyrics and poetry. I start singing the beginning of 'My Word'; then it definitely goes into this strict recitation. I have done singing, lead and backup, but I'm not pursuing any kind of career as a professional singer. I just blend elements together."

In the late '70s Willie met the producer for Days of Our Lives, and together they wrote songs for the show's soundtrack. Willie later composed the lyrics for "LA CA," a song used in the 1984 Debra Winger film Mike's Murder, which featured music by Joe Jackson and John Barry, among others. He joined ASCAP around that time.

What kind of response has he received from his local ad?

"I got our drummer for our last session from that ad. The bass player is a guy named Ernie, who's a cab driver. He gave us a ride one night and we got to talking, and the next thing you know he's playing with us on that tape."

From "My Word":

Golden song does entice
Luminous windows …
paradise

Words on wing
Words on wheel
Words unfold …
and reveal....

Stage is set
Everywhere
Lustrous hue

Light is a
Golden robe
Caressing
Crystal globe

"I have a song, I have a book, I have a poem," Willie said, "called 'Machination.' What's that word from? It comes from machine. I'll give you a quote: 'Machination / My oh my / Machine gonna get ya / By and by.' The word means 'machine' and 'plot to do harm.' It's very revelatory about the state of the world now. The ozone layer's going, the air's not fit to breathe, the waters are despoiled, there's big wars for oil. Machination. The book I wrote by that title is self-published by the Automobile Safety Foundation, but that's another topic altogether. Since the book is a true story, it interweaves my song lyrics and poetry with a shocking exposé of an international auto-safety hazard.

"My plans are to write more poetry books, God willing, and I plan on continuing with this particular genre of poetry and music. I would like to expand in terms of orchestration. I welcome musicians to contact me. I'd like to add strings, woodwinds, and horns. That could be a wonderful experience."

Willie will provide the poetry, possibly such koan-like bits of visionary insight as this passage from his book Hell: "Few words that say a lot / Rather than the many that say not." ■

OF NOTE

By Gina Arnold

Just as 1992 was spiritually dominated by the Seattle label Sub Pop, 1994 is fast becoming a year defined by Epitaph, the label founded by Bad Religion guitarists Brett Gurewitz and Greg Hetson. That band has gone on to sign with a major, and its Orange County farm team the Offspring recently broke big with the songs "Come Out and Play" and "Self-Esteem," becoming the first hardcore indie band to bust out of the underground ghetto. (I'd have said it would be Fugazi, but I guess the timing wasn't right.) As neat as the Offspring's rampant success has been, it still surprises me. It seems like it coulda and maybe shoulda happened to Rancid, another Epitaph band with just as much chops and a lot more punk rock history behind it. Made up of former members of Bay Area punk legends like Operation Ivy, Isocracy, and MDC, Rancid has long been part of an enlightened local scene, along with their neighbors Green Day, whose singer Billie Joe co-wrote a song on Rancid's latest LP. Unlike the Greenies, Rancid has opted to remain independent, though they are no less accessible. Let's Go, their second release, is poppier than last year's self-titled effort, with much more acoustic guitar, but tempos are still up-up-up, and singer Tim Armstrong's voice has become more effective. If you like Green Day but are sick of "Longview" and don't have Lollapalooza tickets, go see Rancid at SOMA on Saturday, before you have to catch them at the Sports Arena. After the bizarre sight of Green Day slaying (and, alas, slain at) Woodstock '94, don't say it couldn't happen.

Openers are Sick of It All, Wax, and Everready.

RANCID, SOMA Live, Saturday, August 27, 7:30 pm, 239-SOMA. $8.

By David Stampone

Earthbound would be one of the better words to describe the recent Woodstock '94 affair. The mud, of course, made for most of what few defining images the festival produced, the common ingredient as different generations wallowed in a sequel that never really got off the ground. At least Nine Inch Nails, delivering an unexpectedly rich performance while caked in the brown goo, managed some transcendence in pursuing their usual themes of soiled souls and grimy psyches; most other artists stayed mired in figurative if not literal muck. Nobody seemed daring enough to genuinely "take you higher," and obviously, there was no Jimi Hendrix (the video memorials and ROM displays didn't cut it) to "excuse" while he "kissed the sky" before ferrying ecstatic listeners up into the musical ether.

Today's Lollapalooza '94 lineup out at Aztec Bowl, though, offers various artists more eager to dabble in space-y tropes than to "get back to the land," from main-stage headliners Smashing Pumpkins (song titles like "Spaceboy" and certainly the current sci-fi video for "Rocket" would indicate as much) to their order-of-appearance counterparts on the second stage, Shonen Knife (whose "Riding the Rocket" has them waving sugar-punk–sweet "hello-hellos" back to Earth). However, with the downright unearthily brilliant Boredoms finished as main-stage openers after the first half of the tour (we get the oft-seen Green Day instead — a definite raw deal, critically speaking), the remaining Lolla band leaning heaviest on the "Outer Accelerator" would be the second-stage act responsible for said song: the English sextet Stereolab.

Record titles like the earlier Space Age Bachelor Pad Music (not to be confused with the older classic by Esquivel) and their two domestic releases on Elektra (last year's Transient Random-Noise Bursts With Announcements and new LP Mars Audiac Quintet) may reveal Stereolab's inclinations, yet they may also be misleading. The band's sound is actually quite warm and human, a sort of spacier Velvet Underground (or better put, a more musically adventurous Modern Lovers) embellished by effects and much Moog, Vox, and Farfisa organ, with stately/dreamy female-only vocals woven in, some in French (and lyrics often more political than celestial). Along with the enchanting pop melodies poking out of their sweeping analog jams, it all adds up to a transporting lift, making the semi-obscure Stereolab's gig today a likely sleeper, standout performance.

STEREOLAB, Lollapalooza, Aztec Bowl, today, Thursday, August 25, 1 pm, 220-TIXS. $27.50 plus $1 for charity.

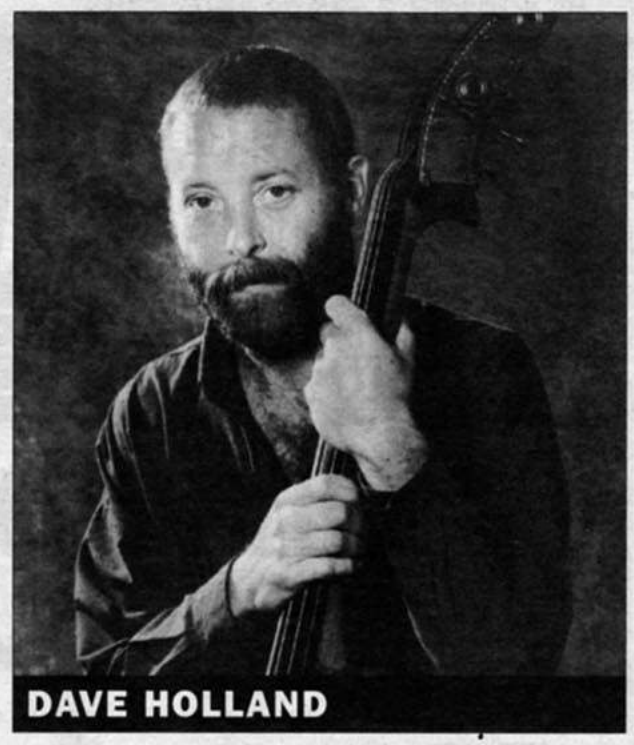
By Stephen Esmedina



When in the presence of a musical virtuoso — that rare bird — you are left wondering if any words could describe how infinitesimal you will feel upon exiting from the engagement. I first heard Dave Holland in my fledgling years as a genius, when at SDSU he duetted with Anthony Braxton on "You Stepped Out of a Dream," "A Blossom Fell," and "Miss Ann." Holland not only complemented Braxton's every circular-breath gestation but advanced the rhythm as if he were the drummer in a brass band. I found the words then: baddest motherfucker on the bass.

Certainly there are antecedents and scions (Dresser, Favors, Sirone, Magnusson even) who can match him in technique, but none has that subtle melodic, harmonic sense that seems necessary in any bassist who endured the tortures of the ultimate arbiter of good bassists: Miles. Although not credited with such at the time, Holland's modified electric Fender provided an acoustic, wooden bridge from old-style contrapuntal bass playing and helped make In a Silent Way and Bitches Brew the landmarks they are. His Conference of the Birds ranks with Mingus's Pre-Bird as a seminal work showing the development of this most crucial instrument as an orchestral pivot.

Even if Holland were to play alone, top dollar would be a bargain. But he is coming with a quartet, of the utmost caliber, I presume. This shy ex–nancy boy is one of the few musicians I require you to see and hear — or else risk my eternal disfavor and derision.

DAVE HOLLAND QUARTET, Horton Grand Hotel, Friday and Saturday, August 26 and 27, 8:30 and 10:15 pm, 544-1886. $15.

ROVING EYE MUSIC REPORTS:

August 12th – Method: they got to be practicing 'cause they're starting to sound like a real big band. Crime of the Century: south of the border never sounded so good. Dark Haven: like a full assault on Iwo Jima, the Marines have landed and boy look out, they fly. When Broken Toys broke in that Kiss anthem, "I Like to Rock 'n' roll and Party All Night Long," pretty much summed up the night, which offered a wonderful summer night of music. When you have a hard time getting the people out at 2 am, you know you've had a good night.

August 13th – Dave's Rhythm Slaves: at last their friends came and why not, they're a fun bunch of music that's pleasant to the ear. Raptus: anti-devil grinders with the sting of a wasp. Durango 95: I keep writing good things about them and every club in SD wants 'em, better say they suck and keep 'em to myself. Christoverhead: the guitar player turned down and I told Joel their sound was this month's best mixed band. You could close your eyes and float. B.O.G. entered, then disappeared and came back as the Violent Femmes. Too bad you weren't here. Thanks All!!

DUNCAN SHEPHERD

Color of Night

Regular readers of this column — if any — will have some awareness of how I feel about the evanescent Kathleen Wilhoite. So they can imagine my surprise and delight when she proved to be the first and only person on screen during the opening credits of Color of Night (the ads had gone only seven names deep into the cast); imagine again my tension and relief when, after applying lipstick to the entire lower half of her face including teeth, she opts not to pull the trigger of the gun she has put in her mouth; imagine then my horror and despair when, very soon into the immediate post-credits scene, she jumps out the window of her psychoanalyst's high-rise office. Ah, well. Nice seeing you again, Kathleen. And by the way, the heavy layers of cosmetics and the doll-like coiffure, not at all her normal look, which more often tends toward smudged cheek and stringy mop, were brilliant bits of shorthand characterization for the role of a self-loather.

The movie as a whole is all downhill after that. Or rather, in the exact trajectory of my heroine, is out the window and splat on the sidewalk. (Liz Smith, lickspit to the stars, did not even see fit to identify her by name: "Film's luckiest actor is the woman who leaps to her death minutes after the opening credits roll.") The pool of blood that spreads, in a Christmassy sort of spirit, around the suicide's green dress (one overly tricky shot, from nobody's point of view, looking upward through the pavement as though the Manhattan street were a glass-top coffee table) has two significant aftereffects. It sends the shocked therapist into indefinite retirement, and it causes him to "go colorblind": red thenceforth appears as gray.

Bruce Willis, with his wry, drawstring facial expressions and his high-on-something voice, is impossibly miscast as a man in whom others would wish to confide their darkest secrets, so the retirement sounds a good idea. It doesn't last. And you might expect in an advertised thriller that the hero's hysterical colorblindness, like the rubiphobia of the title character of Marnie, would figure in some way in the plot: some misidentification or failure of identification; some obliviousness to some clue; some imperviousness to some ruse; something. It doesn't happen. The car that tries to nudge the therapist off the freeway is red, but what of it? Ignorance of its color does not retard his realization of his peril nor hamper his reactions to the attack. Its color merely gives new and literal meaning to the detective-fiction concept of red herring.

Mystery writing, as bears repeating, requires a particular brand of genius. Just being a writer is no qualification for it, any more than every basketball star is equipped as a playmaker or every trumpeter can blow jazz. The chief overreacher here would appear to be one Billy Ray, who gets credit for the original story as well as co-credit with "Milk Money" opens Wednesday, August 31.

Matthew Chapman for the screenplay. The essential plot situation is sufficiently classical. Our traumatized therapist repairs to Los Angeles for some R&R with an old therapist buddy (and best-selling author of Way to Go, with license plates to match), who prevails on him to make a sixth patient and/or a second doctor in the latter's Monday-night group-therapy session. Quite soon the buddy-therapist, who has been receiving anonymous death threats, turns up murdered, and the retired-therapist takes on the Monday-night clients and, from that handful of mixed nuts, tries to smoke out the killer. Fair enough.

But why, when there's an ex-wife, a mentioned but unmet new girlfriend, and presumably plenty of other clients past and present, is there such a limited list of suspects? The victim had been certain that his enemy was one of the Monday-night five — certain, he had said sweepingly, for "a dozen reasons." Well then it shouldn't have been too difficult for him, or for any self-respecting mystery writer, to specify one or two. But no. We have to take it on faith.

Another symptomatic plot point demands more than faith, more even than gullibility, something nearer feeble-mindedness. Moments before his death, the doctor hides his clinical journal inside the Van Gogh jacket on his office bookshelves. We wait (and wait) (and wait) for someone to notice that there now appear to be two Van Gogh tomes on the shelves, one jacketed and one naked, and to draw the appropriate inference. Instead, the obsessive-compulsive personality in the group, who makes a weekly habit of counting the spines on the shelves, announces that the number of them has gone down by one, then back up again, which prompts another patient, under no pressure and out of the blue, to confess to taking the jacketed Van Gogh home and returning it unread. (Evidently the truth, because the revelatory photograph tucked between the pages is an equal surprise to everyone.) But then, why take it home in the first place? And why not read it? And why return it? Was the culprit honestly only interested in Vincent Van Gogh? This is lazy, as well as, paradoxically, a long way around.

The bigger, biggest, problem with the plot, however, is that any halfway attentive viewer will very early be able to solve the mystery for himself. All he will need to go on are a couple of too-long-dangling questions (where is the dead man's girlfriend? what is the sexual orientation of the patient called Richie?) and a pair of functioning eyes. The big problem for the critic is that he is honor-bound to go no further, no matter how obvious the solution may be. (We have the overemphatic musical score by Dominic Frontiere to assure us we're expected to be astonished at the moment of unmasking.) For most, the obviousness will make the routine business of interviewing suspects, gathering clues, etc., a good deal more than averagely tedious. If you choose to go further on your own, at least you've been warned.

Director Richard Rush, whom we've not heard from since the much-overrated The Stuntman fourteen years ago, may have hoped that the standard-issue sex scenes (aquabatics in the swimming pool, saxophone on the soundtrack, dreamy dissolves, and so on) would paralyze the spectator's faculty of reason, reduce him to putty in the artist's hands. That theory might be lent more credibility once we've seen the inevitable video release of the "Unrated Director's Cut." (Few editing-room squabbles have become more public than this one.) I say might, but I think not. I say once we've seen, but I don't mean me.

Don't skip: Eat Drink Man Woman, Ang Lee's tantalizing, toothsome, pungent, succulent, nutritious, well-balanced, filling (am I in the swing or what?) comedy about a Taiwanese widower and master chef and his three grown daughters still living at home. This is the sort of material that Yasujiro Ozu used to take to the depths of profundity, while always maintaining a bravely cheerful surface. Notwithstanding the last nostalgic visit to the soon-to-be-vacated family home, Lee never reaches so deep, and yet for all its shallowness, all its conventional closed-endedness and overcompression, his new movie is filled to capacity with the wonderment of human relations and emotions. It matches the complication of his prior effort, The Wedding Banquet, though without the farcical contrivance, and it extends and expands what was best about that one: the scrupulous monitoring and honoring of a wide range of personalities and attitudes. The food preparation and presentation, neither more nor less attractively photographed than everything else in the movie, are almost a detachable aesthetic issue, awaiting treatment in some MFA thesis titled "Optical Epicurism in the Modern Cinema," clustered together with the food stuff of the aforementioned The Wedding Banquet, and Babette's Feast, Like Water for Chocolate, The Age of Innocence, The Scent of Green Papaya, Tampopo, The Cook, the Thief, His Wife, and Her Lover, and (possible progenitor) Jeanne Dielman, 23 Quai du Commerce, 1080 Bruxelles. Take it away, anyone.

Don't shun: Spanking the Monkey, David O. Russell's offbeat, or if you prefer, beat-off (syn. for spank-the-monkey) comedy about a severely dysfunctional suburban family: the depressive vodka-swilling mother immobilized by a broken leg; the travelling-salesman father, on the road with his nightly hookers while bemoaning his inability to continue to fund his son's education; and the self-abusing (until interrupted by the nosy family dog) pre-med son, who, on his summer break, has to wait hand and foot on his mother, prop her up in the shower, apply skin lotion to her feet and thighs, and generally stoke the fires of incest. The capable players, Alberta Watson, Benjamin Hendrickson, and Jeremy Davies in the order of the characters cited, never let on that they know they are in a comedy. A sign of taste in addition to an airtight alibi. ■

Clear and Present Danger

An American Tail — "In America," little Fievel Mousekewitz learns while growing up in Russia in 1885, "there are no cats. And the streets are paved with cheese." This establishes, immediately and neverendingly, the monotonous pattern of rodentized clichés and stereotypes: especially ethnic clichés and stereotypes, Jewish, Irish, French, Italian. There has been no reduction in the fearful sentimentality customary under the aegis of Steven Spielberg, and there has been an addition of shameless flag-waving. But the worst the movie can do is to foster the impression that Spielberg, among his innumerable other manifestations of genius, is also quite handy with a paintbrush. He is really only one of four executive producers here. Director Don Bluth, on the other hand, formerly of the Disney team, is a fine animator, as witness the storm at sea (cliché though it may be), with its anthropomorphized waves and its whirlpoolish sense of space and motion. 1986.

★ (FASHION VALLEY, 8/29 THROUGH 9/2 MATINEES)

Andre — Dick-and-Jane narrative about a girl and her seal. (See the seal. See the girl. See the seal and the girl.) And her Saint Francis father, comfortably played by Keith Carradine. With Tina Majorino and Tory the Sea Lion; directed by George Miller (no, not the Mad Max one, silly). 1994.

● (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; CINERAMA 6; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; HAZARD CENTER 7; LA COSTA 6; MIRA MESA 7; NICKELODEON GALAXY 6; NICKELODEON 10; OCEANSIDE 8; PLAZA BONITA; POWAY 10; SPORTS ARENA 6; UA ESCONDIDO 8; UNIVERSITY TOWNE CENTRE)

Angels in the Outfield — And on the pitcher's mound, and in the batter's box, and on the base paths, aiding the California Angels on their drive to the pennant. The (lower-case) angels, excluding the maniacally mugging Christopher Lloyd, are impressive — glowing, shimmering, streaking things in the sky. But only the very young and indiscriminate will not consider themselves above the low comedy (squirted mustard, spilled soda) and the lower sentimentality. With Joseph Gordon-Levitt, Danny Glover, Brenda Fricker; directed by William Dear. 1994.

● (CENTURY TWIN; RANCHO BERNARDO 6; FROM 8/26)

Baby's Day Out — If Home Alone, or more relevantly Home Alone 2, was a riot, wouldn't it be twice as riotous with a smaller fry? (And three stooges instead of two?) A big if. And the smaller fry — a crawler fry — adds mainly impossibility. Joe Mantegna, Lara Flynn Boyle, Joe Pantoliano; written by John Hughes; directed by Patrick Read Johnson. 1994.

● (CENTURY TWIN; STUDIO 3 CINEMAS; VOGUE, FROM 8/26)

Barcelona — Whit Stillman's idiosyncratic social comedy on a pair of sniffish, self-absorbed, fatuous young Americans abroad: male cousins, more exactly, in the sexually liberated, politically volatile Barcelona of the declining days of the Cold War. (Cousins, loosely speaking, of the preppies and debs of Stillman's first outing, Metropolitan.) It's no good trying to argue that the affectedness and artificiality of these people are properties shared by the ones in the works of Jane Austen or Henry James or Ivy Compton-Burnett. Those writers of dialogue were never so prone to fall into the rhythms and structures of TV sitcoms: "Shootings, yes. But that doesn't mean Americans are more violent than other people. [Pause.] We're just better shots." [Cue laugh track.] And the not quite perfect deadpans of Taylor Nichols and Chris Eigeman, the occasionally still twitching pans and winking pans and arching-eyebrowed pans, only accentuate the sitcom ambience. But at the same time, these people, in their actual sentiments, in their readiness to prod their sluggish brains to their philosophical limits, talk like nobody else in movies or on earth. And as characters (not as anyone you might want to have over for dinner), the sincere long-term-relationship seeker is greatly enriched by a strain of old-time religiosity, and the flippant wild-oats-sowing one is similarly enriched by a strain of priggish ROTC patriotism. The director's somewhat stiff, pedestrian visual style is nothing much to speak of, but then again the simple sight of a young man studying his Bible while shuffling his feet to Glenn Miller's "Pennsylvania 6-5000" on the phonograph is not something you are ever going to see anywhere else. And the visuals, however little may be said of them, never do anything to disrupt the smooth, even tone of the writing and acting. 1994.

Batman: Mask of the Phantasm — Seventy-some-minute cartoon. The square-jawed, trapezoid-torsoed hero is more credible, certainly, than Michael Keaton, and the graphic style throughout is convincingly comic-bookish. But the animation is not really all that animated, and the story is slowed by flashbacks and romance. Voices by Kevin Conroy, Dana Delany, Mark Hamill. 1993.

★ (FASHION VALLEY, 8/29 THROUGH 9/2 MATINEES)

Blankman — Superhero spoof about a nerdy black man who only seems mentally retarded, even (or especially) in his "secret identity" as a masked and caped "crime-fighter," but who's actually an electronics wizard with the s-f gadgetry to prove it. The humor infrequently rises to silliness (the hero humming "background music" to himself as he goes into action), more often sinks to smuttiness, most often settles for stupidness. With Damon Wayans, David Alan Grier, Robin Givens; directed by Mike Binder. 1994.

Blown Away — Stephen Hopkins's ostensible salute to the Boston P.D. Bomb Squad frankly (and a tad hypocritically) hopes to hold its audience in their seats only with the promise of a forthcoming explosion. And another and another and another. Five major ones in all, padded a little by flashback replays. The bomber is a Northern Irish terrorist (Tommy Lee Jones, with a brogue several sizes too large) out to avenge himself on a former cohort and traitor-to-the-cause (Jeff Bridges, not a trace of a lilt) who has been expiating past sins by defusing bombs for a living. (The Irish element is pervasive and exclusive: U2 on the stereo, Kelly-green shutters and window trim, lines like "Oh, sweet Jesus!") The lone bomber, a freelancer with no affiliations to known groups, turns up in a janitor's uniform to eavesdrop on strategy sessions at police headquarters; and when the hero's new bride and stepdaughter go into hiding (after the murder of the hero's dog, Boomer), the bomber finds them, not by any followable trail, but simply materializing as though by teleportation — it's that kind of movie. And his final "masterpiece," a planned display of Fourth-of-July fireworks, is given a triggering mechanism of Rube Goldberg whimsicality, for the private amusement of himself and the privileged spectator. More probably just himself. With Suzy Amis, Forest Whitaker, Lloyd Bridges. 1994.

The Chase — A distinguished name in movies: Arthur Ripley's The Chase, 1946; Arthur Penn's The Chase, 1966. Until now. The chase itself — cop cars after a hijacked BMW — wastes no time getting started; and the quick zooming, panning, cutting visual style is designed to encourage the viewer to follow the example of the hostage, and throw up. With Charlie Sheen, Kristy Swanson; written and directed by Adam Rifkin. 1994.

Ciao, Professore — Lina Wertmuller returns from oblivion, not with a vengeance, but with a peace overture: a make-nice comedy about a meeting of the minds in a third-grade classroom in an impoverished village in Southern Italy. Filmed predominantly in chin-chucking closeups. With Paolo Villaggio. 1994.

Clear and Present Danger — Slow-to-start and long-to-end espionage thriller (or the further adventures of Dr. Jack Ryan, Tom Clancy's CIA guy from Patriot Games), detailing a covert and illicit military action against the Colombian drug cartels. There's a well-staged ambush at around the hour mark (sole survivor: Harrison Ford), and an exciting rescue near the finish, and strong supporting parts for Willem Dafoe, James Earl Jones, Harris Yulin, Donald Moffat (President of the United States), and Ann Magnuson, but not for Anne Archer: very much farther in the wings as the Woman Who Waits. There's also a large dose of bottled cynicism out of the medicine cabinet of John le Carré, and its frequent buffer, cherry-flavored self-righteousness. Directed by Phillip Noyce. 1994.

The Client — Formulaic John Grisham legal thriller (a little bit of lawyering, a lot of dashing about), in which the author adopts an underdog or two, and throws them a steady diet of bones, biscuits, hamburger, filet mignon, as they dodge and run circles round the powerful and the baleful. The latter, in this case, are the New Orleans Mafia and assorted overzealous prosecutors; the underdogs are an eleven-year-old boy (or Little Man, as you prefer) who has witnessed a suicide, and the "unfit mother" whom he hires for one dollar as his attorney. Vivid portrayals by newcomer Brad Renfro, Susan Sarandon, Mary-Louise Parker, Tommy Lee Jones (too vivid: out-Southerning everybody), Ossie Davis, Will Patton, and Anthony Edwards (if vivid can describe a meek and mild legal secretary); directed by Joel Schumacher. 1994.

Corrina, Corrina — A little girl, traumatized by her mother's death, comes out of her shell to nudge her father and their black housekeeper (jazz lovers both) into romance. The writer-director, Jessie Nelson, does a lot of nudging also, making double sure we know precisely how we're supposed to feel about everything and everybody (the parade of prospective housekeepers in the interview montage, the middle-class divorcee on the make, etc.). The action is set in the 1950s, and the production values drive the point home with more than an occasional nudge; more like a constant barrage. Whoopi Goldberg, Ray Liotta, Tina Majorino, Wendy Crewson, Joan Cusack. 1994.

The Cowboy Way — A plotline copied from straight-faced action films like Coogan's Bluff and Trackdown (a bit more Trackdown, but in the setting of Coogan's Bluff); a trendy soirée appropriated from Midnight Cowboy; a standard collection of hicks-in-the-city jokes: ordering a meal at the Waldorf ("You got any Popsicles?") and causing the cellist in the classical chamber ensemble to grow faint from obscene tongue gestures. The climactic chase scene in which our rodeo-rider heroes run down a rush-hour commuter train on stolen police horses has a definite melodramatic flair. But throughout, Kiefer Sutherland's tight-lipped straight arrow unfortunately takes a back seat to Woody Harrelson's crowing-cock yahoo. And the always likable Ernie Hudson is practically back of the bus as an NYPD mountie who has a soft spot for the lore of the Wild West ("Round up a posse, boys!"). So soft, in fact, that he only smiles benignly when Harrelson crashes a pickup truck through the front window of a crowded nightclub ("It's the cowboy way"). Nor does he frown even once over the knightly quest of our heroes: to rescue an illegal (repeat: illegal) Cuban immigrant from the clutches of modern-day slave traders, and then to send her off into the welcoming arms of the American West. What world are these filmmakers living in? With Dylan McDermott; directed by Gregg Champion. 1994.
● (STUDIO 3 CINEMAS)

Dazed and Confused — Richard Linklater, maker of Slacker, drifts into the mainstream with a multi-character comedy about the last day of school, 1976, and the long night of celebration: beer, weed, bad music, bad hair, bad pants, etc. The writer-director maintains his air of detachment, and even of universal disdain, but he has nevertheless fashioned a serviceable youth movie in the mold of Fast Times at Ridgemont High. A little more than average sympathy attaches to the androgynous freshman (Wiley Wiggins, looking like a young Kristy McNichol) who takes his painful initiation like a man — well, not so much like a man as like a cool dude. And a little more than average humor attaches to the inseparable high-school highbrows nicknamed "Woodward and Bernstein" (Anthony Rapp, Adam Goldberg). But it just goes on and on and nowhere. Jason London, Joey Lauren Adams, Milla Jovovich, Rory Cochrane. 1993.

The Flintstones — Live-action (and Industrial Light and Magic) blow-up of the crudely drawn TV cartoon show, from Hanna-Barbera, set in suburbia, 2,000,000 B.C. The actors affect a 1950s sitcom, or 1930s vaudeville, style of performance: purposely primitive. And the dialogue strives for the cheerfully cornball: "What's his name?" "Bamm-Bamm." "Is that short for something?" "Bamm-Bamm-Bamm." Or again: "When I think of the sacrifices your father made for you! Lambs, oxen, your brother Jerry...." And the dinosaurs and such are nearer to Jim Henson than to Ray Harryhausen. You can see the sense of the creative decisions, except maybe the decision to make the movie in the first place. You cannot, though, see the sense of the storyline. An embezzler at the Slate & Co. rock quarry needs a fall guy, so he administers an aptitude test to the manual laborers. Barney Rubble, to repay a debt to his best friend Fred, switches tests with him, and Fred, getting the highest score, gets the promotion. "Finally it all makes sense!" exclaims Mrs. Betty Rubble at one point. No, it doesn't. With John Goodman, Rick Moranis, Elizabeth Perkins, Rosie O'Donnell, Elizabeth Taylor; directed by Brian Levant. 1994.

Forrest Gump — Three decades in the life of a mental midget (I.Q., 75) who leaves giant footprints on his twisting path, in rather sharp contradiction of the feather-on-the-wind visual motif at movie's beginning and end. The traversal of so much history permits the filmmaker, Robert Zemeckis, to resume his wrong-end-of-the-telescope examination of past absurdities and archaisms, in the vein of his Back to the Future, Who Framed Roger Rabbit, I Wanna Hold Your Hand. But his is essentially a flippant, a cold-blooded sensibility, and his efforts here to deepen it and warm it ought by rights to arouse less in the way of support than in the way of suspicion. His sentimentality over the holy-fool type (same family tree as in Rain Man, Regarding Henry, Awakenings), his "concern" about the cycle of abused-child-battered-woman (Robin Wright, not so much a character as a makeup-and-hairstyles model), his "awareness" of the great events of recent times — all these give off a scented air of insincerity. What's more (what's worse), the changes in tone begin to approximate the personality profile of the certified psychopath. A firefight in Vietnam will be as harrowing as anything in Platoon, but this will follow directly on a stretch of service comedy in the mode of, albeit better written and acted than, Gomer Pyle. The tear-jerking bits are mere technical exercises — strenuous, but more productive of sweat than of tears. And the centerpiece performance of Tom Hanks (with a Southern drawl compounded by Jerry Lewis glissandi) and the sporadic special effects (the Birth of a Nation pastiche to illustrate the Ku Klux Klan activities of the hero's forebear and namesake, the computer-doctored newsreel footage that puts the present-day actor in the company of JFK, LBJ, Nixon), no matter how diverting on their own, occupy a separate plane from the unspooling storyline. Hanks in particular, although able to fatten up his thespian portfolio, always seems more an actor than a character; and the events of the narrative take a very long time to catch up to his evident age. By then, the movie has grown disfiguringly overlong and overlarge. With Gary Sinese, Sally Field. 1994.

The Lion King

Household Saints — Long-winded, high-colored family chronicle about the Italian-American wife who is "won" in a pinochle game, and the daughter who throws herself into religion without any encouragement from her parents: "Nuns are sick women," instructs Papa. The movie loses a lot, around the halfway point, with the death of the superstitious, disapproving mother-in-law ("Your husband's breakfast dishes have been in the sink for two hours"), although it thereafter goes into more original material: the adolescent mystic. Lili Taylor, who picks up the role at age fourteen and carries it to eighteen, looks much too old for it — old enough, certainly, to know her own mind — and this undercuts some of the potential pathos and humor. (There gets to be less and less of the latter, anyway.) Tracey Ullman, undergoing a metamorphosis from Woman of the Forties to Fifties to Sixties, plays it admirably straight. With Vincent D'Onofrio and Judith Malina; directed by Nancy Savoca. 1993.

★★ (SAN DIEGO PUBLIC LIBRARY, 8/29, 6 P.M.)

I Love Trouble — Star vehicle. More precisely, a bicycle built for two, and pedaled across two types of terrain, George Cukor's and Alfred Hitchcock's. To put it as dauntingly as possible: Nick Nolte and Julia Roberts, in the roles of rival reporters on a train-wreck story, are required to be Tracy and Hepburn and at the same time, or alternating times, Grant and Kelly. They come up a bit short. Nolte, for the occasion, has fluffed-up hair and smokes cigars; Roberts has legs (same length as always) and picks pockets. Among the things they lack are a Cukor and a Hitchcock. Their actual director, Charles Shyer, and his producer and co-writer, Nancy Meyers, reveal a reverence for old cinematic forms (cf. Ryan O'Neal's lecture on Lubitsch in their Irreconcilable Differences) without revealing any mastery of them. The result is really more suitable as a sitcom pilot. 1994.

● (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; NICKELODEON GALAXY 6; NICKELODEON 10; PLAZA CINEMAS; SAN MARCOS CINEMAS; SANTEE VILLAGE 8; SWEETWATER 6; WIEGAND PLAZA)

It Could Happen to You — A New York beat cop, having just spent his last dollar on his weekly Lotto ticket, and not wanting to stiff a waitress on her fifteen percent of two coffees, disdains the standard line ("Catch you later") and, in order to underscore his earnestness, goes through some laboriously written dialogue to the effect that half of his lottery winnings are earmarked for her. When these turn out to be four million dollars, he resolves to be true to his word — "A promise is a promise" — despite the hurricane-force attempts of his wife to alter his course. It is somehow not surprising that a self-professed fairy tale about finding the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow (waitress to cop: "What you did was like a fairy tale") would be susceptible to bouts of indolence. Our two winners are set up to be models of virtue (a truer title: It Couldn't Happen to Nicer Guys), but the movie can't come up with much for them to do, aside from a few showy gestures such as giving away subway tokens to rush-hour commuters or reserving one table for paupers at the waitress's coffee shop — that is, the coffee shop that she now owns as well as in which she still waits tables. More damagingly, this romantic comedy relieves its hero and heroine, or its fairy-tale prince and princess, from any and all of the comedic chores. The notion that goodness, modesty, honesty, generosity, etc., could be fodder for comedy, rather than just for gold-medal commendation, never crosses the filmmakers' minds. One wonders what Preston Sturges might have made of the premise. (Something in the nature of Christmas in July, one would suppose.) One wonders, even, what the present director, Andrew Bergman, of The Freshman and Honeymoon in Vegas, might have made of it if he had written the screenplay himself instead of accepted the pile of mush handed in from Jane Anderson. With Nicolas Cage, Bridget Fonda, Rosie Perez. 1994.

Jurassic Park — Spielberg. Dinosaurs. What more need be said? You get what you expect. Or in blurb-ese: "It delivers the goods." But it nowhere exceeds or confounds expectations. The premise, from the Michael Crichton novel, is essentially that of Crichton's Westworld with dinosaurs in lieu of robots: amusement park gone haywire. And the kind of sensation peddled in it, like the kind in the same director's Jaws, is the rudimentary fear of sharp objects. Or more accurately, graphically, and literal-mindedly, fear of being punctured, severed, minced by same: My, what big teeth you have, Grandma! (Fear of blunt objects, or fear of being swiped, stomped, scrunched by same, hardly enters into it.) It is a sensation long on bodily discomfort, short on wonder — a questionable balance in a movie that bridges the sixty-five-million-year gap between man and dinosaur. With Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Jeff Goldblum, and Richard Attenborough. 1993.
★★ (GROVE 9; LA COSTA 6; OCEANSIDE 8; POWAY 10; RANCHO BERNARDO 6; SANTEE VILLAGE 8; SWEETWATER 6; UA ESCONDIDO 8; VINEYARD TWIN; FROM 8/26)

The Lion King — Predigested heroic myth to do with a lion cub called Simba, rightful heir to the paradisiacal pridelands, dispossessed by a Machiavellian uncle, and — no need to go on. The apotheosis of Joseph Campbell into a household name has not been a boon to the fictional imagination. The prince in exile, the army of occupation (goose-stepping hyenas, so as to drive the point home), the supernatural intervention, the enlightenment, the return, the redemption — it's all here. All, and little else. What brings the thing partway to life is of course the famous anthropomorphism of the Disney animation team. And what brings it farther, farthest, to life is a villain of almost Shakespearean stature (with suitable elocution by Jeremy Irons). We are well accustomed to seeing Disney villains going in for a lot of Grand Guignol snarl and glower without ever doing any actual harm to anyone. The act of fratricide and regicide on the part of Scar (same name as the rampaging Comanche from The Searchers) is strong stuff, and his physical weakness, his cowardice, his bumbling comic-relief accomplices, make it all the stronger. They don't deserve to do anybody any harm. The morbidity isn't lingered on for long, but that's not so much a measure of squeamishness as of the uniformly nimble pacing. Even the obligatory songs (Elton John, music; Tim Rice, lyrics) don't slow things down as much, or stop things as cold, as sometimes. Directed by Roger Allers and Rob Minkoff. 1994.

Little Buddha — Big bore. Reincarnation is notoriously unfilmable as a "straight" subject, though it can sometimes be smuggled through under cover of fantasy. Dead Again was no more than laughable, but Audrey Rose was legitimate fun, and Exorcist II was great, glorious, delirious fun and a lot else besides. Fun, however, is the farthest thing from Bernardo Bertolucci's mind, and the solemn demeanor of his Little Buddha, enveloped in pomp and pageantry and piety, is not apt to win any converts. Nor, in the key phrase for a work of the imagination, to suspend any disbelief. The quest of exiled Tibetan monks to track down the new housing of their deceased teacher, Lama Dorje, gets off to a decent start: the cut from the ancient-world sanctuary of Bhutan to the freeways and skyscrapers of Seattle is in the same direction, if not quite of the same distance, as the one from the bone to the spaceship in 2001. But this effect loses potency through repetition, as Bertolucci shuttles back and forth, on a sort of commuter-train schedule, from the present-day quest to a didactic re-enactment of the spiritual transmutation of Prince Siddhartha into Lord Buddha. (Keanu Reeves, at first almost unrecognizable in his eyeliner, pencilled brows, etc., comes to look more and more like himself as he draws nearer and nearer to enlightenment — as glaring a case of thespian hubris as ever was.) The overall atmosphere feels suspiciously like that of a classroom, and a very quiet, orderly, autocratic classroom at that. With Chris Isaak, Bridget Fonda, Alex Wiesendanger. 1994.

The Little Rascals — All the old gang — beanie, derby, cowlick, bowtie, overalls, and all — living in a time warp in contemporary Los Angeles. Director Penelope Spheeris regularly speeds up the physical action, but there's nothing she can do about the draggy voices, or their piercing pitch. (The spectator, of course, can exit screaming.) If there were any great demand for this kind of thing, or any desire to pay tribute to the real thing, why not a compilation of a half-dozen or so of the original shorts? 1994.

The Mask — Comic-book fantasy about a nebbishy bank clerk who fishes a 4th- or 5th-century Scandinavian mask out of the bay, and is transformed by it into the pea-headed embodiment — pea-like in color, that is, not size, and canned not frozen — of his wildest dreams. There's no stinting on the special effects: something like Clay-mation renderings of Roger Rabbit & Co., with full Toontown elasticity and resiliency. The form adopted by the hero is "explained" by his fondness for old cartoons, but no explanation is forthcoming for why, when he can conjure up clothes, guns, whatever his imagination can picture, he must resort to bank robbery when he desires cash. reaction to him, or lack of same, from the mere mortals around him: if a man, even an odd-looking one with a green head and a yellow zoot suit, were seen at a nightclub to pop his eyeballs a good foot out of their sockets, to drop his jaw all the way to the table top, and to roll out his tongue like a red carpet, the spectacle would be at least as astonishing, among other things, as, say, the arrival of the aliens from space at the end of Close Encounters or the appearance of living dinosaurs in Jurassic Park. And for all the hard work, and sometimes even humorous work, of the effects themselves, they are never less than ugly. Very often more: tasteless, garish, overstated, out of control. Jim Carrey, who from inside his disguise gets to broadcast vocal impressions of Clint Eastwood, Clark Gable, James Cagney, Edward G. Robinson, et al., seems to be an agile and an ingratiating funny-man, but he is herein demoted to second banana by the special effects. Directed by Charles Russell. 1994.

Natural Born Killers

Maverick — Facetious Western travels through the familiar landscape of the genre, albeit with the figures in the landscape masked in inexplicable shade under bright sunshine and in mushy, brownish photography. It bypasses, meanwhile, the familiar moods, attitudes, emotions ("Amazing Grace" will get sung at a graveside, but only in jest), en route to a far-afield climax at a poker tournament aboard a riverboat. From there, it chugs through an endless ending of double, triple, and quadruple twists, before it lingers at the last exit as if begging to be called back for an encore. More precisely and profitably, a sequel. James Garner, the original Bret Maverick of the late-Fifties TV series, has been hired on (not for the role of Bret Maverick) to add a degree of validation, but all he adds instead is a degree of venality. With Mel Gibson, Jodie Foster, James Coburn, and a mob of cameo performers; directed by Richard Donner. 1994.

Natural Born Killers — Oliver Stone's examination of violence and the American media, with Woody Harrelson, Juliette Lewis, and Tommy Lee Jones.

On Deadly Ground — Steven Seagal expands his responsibilities from those of the mere star to those of the star-director (like Clint Eastwood, like Jerry Lewis), and it hasn't expanded his humility: his initial entrance on screen is heralded by the line, "Oh, thank God," and the camera thereupon kisses his boots and caresses its way up the length of his entire body to his trademark ponytail. He'd only have wanted to put on the director's hat, he is quoted in the press notes, for a project he could "care deeply about" — namely something to do with the pollution of Mother Earth by oil companies. He cares about this so deeply, in fact, that he would just like to get his hands on the polluters and break their fingers, arms, knees; hit them with lead pipes; stick knives in their heads; shoot them; blow them up; and most poetically, fry them in oil. All this he does, and much, much, much, much, much more. With Joan Chen and Michael Caine. 1994.
● (SOUTH BAY DRIVE IN; VALLEY DRIVE IN; FROM 8/26)

La Scorta — Italian political thriller, fact-based, in the mode of Francesco Rosi, though without his documentary eye. Under Ricky Tognazzi's direction, it's all faces, faces, faces, and talk, talk, talk: the human concern is undoubted. Tognazzi displays a high-minded reluctance to juice up the proceedings — centered around a determined magistrate, with a private addiction to the grim Allegretto of Beethoven's Seventh, and his loyal team of Sicilian bodyguards — and the result is dry and savorless. Howsoever high-minded. 1994.
★ (GUILD, FROM 8/26; HILLCREST CINEMAS, 8/25)

Spanking the Monkey — Reviewed this issue. With Jeremy Davies, Alberta Watson, Benjamin Hendrickson, and Rene Gallo; directed by David O. Russell.
★★ (KEN, 8/26 THROUGH 9/1)

Speed — Die Hard on wheels, Under Siege on land, Passenger 57 on the ground. It must have been an easy "pitch," belt-high fastball, down the middle of the plate, "hit" written all over it. The twenty-minute prelude is actually pretty gripping. In fact the opening credits sequence alone is gripping: a long, slow elevator descent through an almost abstract crosshatch of girders, tube lights, perfect horizontals and verticals, with the credits slanted into the space at about a thirty-degree angle. This sets the scene for a SWAT team's attempted rescue of a crowded elevator suspended at the mercy of a remote-control bomber cum extortionist. But what would seem impossibly grandiose in any old-style action film is here just a light appetizer. The movie barely takes time to catch its breath before it boards a city bus armed with an explosive device set to be activated as soon as the vehicle exceeds fifty miles per hour, and detonated as soon as it falls below fifty again. The bus situation gets spun out for roughly an hour, roughly three times as long as the elevator crisis. And at that length the interest is hard to sustain, the illusion even harder: the speedometer needle is shown to be hovering just above fifty when the bus begins scraping along a row of stationary cars, colliding flush with another car, and, if that were not enough, looking to the naked eye to be travelling more like thirty. The complications are self-refuting: overlarge, overabundant, unconnected, disengaging. And the ones aboard, under, and around the bus are not even the last of them. After those, it's on to a runaway subway train with a dead man at the throttle — but enough; more than enough; much too much. Keanu Reeves, Dennis Hopper, Sandra Bullock; directed by Jan De Bont. 1994.

● (CENTURY TWIN; RANCHO BERNARDO 6; STAR, FROM 8/26; STUDIO 3 CINEMAS, FROM 8/26; VALLEY DRIVE IN; VOGUE, FROM 8/26)

Swimming to Cambodia — Spalding Gray, a performance artist with the delivery of a highly skilled snake-oil salesman, sits at a small wooden table, with microphone, notebook, and glass of water, and a couple of roll-down maps within arm's reach, and a cloudscape projected intermittently on a screen in the rear. And for an hour and a half he monologizes on his experiences in Thailand as a bit-player in The Killing Fields, and on related matters. And Jonathan Demme records it on film. Every now and then the light fades or the camera position changes, but the results of all this do little to boost Demme's stature as a maker of movies. What's boosted, and what seems to be more important to him, is his stature as a man of hipness. Laurie Anderson (who better?) supplies the music. 1987.
● (HILLCREST CINEMAS, 8/26 AND 27 MIDNIGHT)

True Lies — It is fitting that James Cameron would get around (sooner than later) to doing a James Bond spoof, since the creative corner into which he had painted himself is the same as that of the Bond films: the self-imposed obligation, the necessity, the pressure of "topping" whatever has come before. (Terminator 2, The Abyss, Aliens, in reverse chronology.) Whether or not this effort is successful on its own terms, or on the Bond films' terms, is a matter of taste. But the long detour into marital and domestic matters throughout the paunchy middle of the movie — if not exactly "topping" what has come before, at least "stretching" beyond it, "expanding" it — is a total disaster, starting with the top-billed actor. Arnold Schwarzenegger, the proverbial sore thumb, is not fit for much in the dramatic repertoire (the Terminator, sure; Conan, okay; Mickey Hargitay, perfect); and, if not unfitted here by his accent, he is surely unfitted by his physique for the role of a U.S. secret agent who for fifteen years has been passing himself off as a commonplace computer sales representative with a cozy home in the suburbs. He's additionally and painfully unfit for the cutesy comedy of fretting over his wayward teenager and the apparent infidelity of his wife. Not actual infidelity: Schwarzenegger's manly ego, never mind his acting abilities, will not countenance that. Jamie Lee Curtis, Tia Carrere, Tom Arnold, Bill Paxton. 1994.

The Wedding Gift — Human-spirit booster ("based on a true story," too) about being brave and chipper and witty and selfless in the face of a nameless crippling illness. Julie Walters as the afflicted wife, Jim Broadbent as her devoted husband, Thora Hird as his dotty mother, Sian Thomas as the blind novelist with separate connections to both halves of the troubled couple — all help keep it lifesized and swallowable. They, and that fabled British reserve. Directed by Richard Loncraine. 1994.
★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Zero Patience — A musical-comedy lead balloon. The premise is this: Sir Richard Francis Burton, Victorian translator, explorer, sexologist, still alive in the late 20th Century, and employed as head taxidermist at the Toronto Natural History Museum, undertakes an exhibit for the Hall of Contagion on the Canadian flight attendant designated as Patient Zero in the AIDS epidemic. The latter wanders around as a ghost, invisible to all but the remarkably well preserved Burton. Abundance of ambition (or gall) is matched by meagerness of means. Written, directed by John Greyson. 1994.

How Do You Say "Needs Improvement" in Italian?

ELEANOR WIDMER

For a moment I thought I was in New York City. The sidewalks were full of pedestrians who spilled out into the streets. Drivers honked their horns; valet attendants appeared frantic. Every outdoor and indoor dining room was filled. Many waited patiently at restaurant entrances. This was a recent Thursday night on lower Fifth Avenue. I predict that the summer of 1994 will go down as one of the most lucrative in local restaurant history.

That three Italian restaurants now sit side by side seems to surprise no one. La Strada, on the corner of Fifth and G, is beside Panevino, which is beside the new Asti, named after a town in the Piedmont region of northern Italy. Piedmont is known for its polenta dishes (boiled or baked cornmeal, served plain or topped with gravy, tomatoes, sausage) and roasted or boiled meats. Legend has it that people there love desserts because they need sugar for the hard work they do. The restaurant Asti reflects the Piedmont influence, but its food categories are familiar: appetizers, salads, pastas, entrées, pizzas, and the ubiquitous tiramisu for dessert.

The owner is not Italian, yet he instituted a wise gimmick: the waiters address you in Italian. Some can't speak English, and those who can have strong accents. But when a group of young people who looked like tourists arrived, an English-speaking waiter was sent to them immediately. Still, the restaurant feels very Italian because the native tongue is always in the air.

The dining room has been extensively remodeled (this site was formerly occupied by Lux Cafe). One wall displays a massive map of the Piedmont area; another shows exposed brick. A small bar and high stools break up the long, narrow space. But the best addition is the open hearth for the wood-fired pizzas. It sheds a wonderful glow — superfluous, of course, during this heat wave, but an asset when winter comes. The attractive room seats about 50, with long banks of tables close together along the walls.

Our first two courses, from the appetizer list, were knockouts. As I tasted them I thought, "These will give the other Italian restaurants a run for their money." Grilled polenta, crowned with a variety of mushrooms and surrounded by arugula, was perfection ($8.95). The polenta melted in my mouth, and the arugula and mushrooms lent sophistication to a peasant dish.

We were also terrifically impressed with a salad containing strips of grilled filet mignon; this could serve as a light meal ($7.95). The salad consisted of Belgian endive, arugula, radicchio, and avocado tossed in Italian dressing. The meat was buttery soft, a pleasure for both the tongue and the eye.

However, everything that came thereafter was mildly disappointing. On our waiter's advice, we ordered the cheese-filled ravioli, with sauce prepared from meat stock and porcini mushrooms. The pasta dough was so thick I couldn't get beyond one forkful. The sauce's meat base was a mistake — it didn't blend with cheese. Our second pasta, pappardelle, small flat noodles, had the same porcini sauce with bits of ground meat ($9.95). The chicken entrée, which looked spectacular surrounded by colorful fresh vegetables, again used the basic porcini sauce with a splash of marsala ($12.75). I say splash because the marsala was not given a chance to caramelize, or burn off, and I tasted the alcohol immediately. A light menu is also available, and perhaps we would have fared better with those dishes.

We were told the chef came from Antonello's in Santa Ana, where I've had some glorious meals. Therefore, I felt I should return once more. I'm very fond of an ancient Italian fish preparation, salmon with raisins and almonds, so I asked for it on my second visit ($12.95). The fish was fresh and delicate, but it lay in a pool of oil. My conclusion is that the chef has to rethink the way he dresses his entrées.

This brings me to the service. The charm of hearing Italian gives way when you have to wait 30 minutes or more for courses. Since this occurred both during a busy evening as well as at 5:00 p.m., the start of the dinner hour, the management must endeavor to speed things up in the kitchen.

Then there's the matter of the chocolate soufflé. Three times in Italian I repeated, "chocolate soufflé." Three times the waiter replied in Italian that he understood and there was no reason for concern. What did I get after a long wait? A Grand Marnier soufflé!

Asti has great potential; if they concentrate on Piedmontese dishes, they could make a true contribution to our Italian dining scene. They are on the right track, but only the chef and staff can bring them into the station. ■

NORTH COASTAL

BULLY'S NORTH 1404 Camino del Mar, Del Mar, 755-1660. Especially during summer, this branch is the most colorful and is jammed with the sporting crowd, which makes the place exciting. Food is the same as at other Bully's, but the high intensity carries it. Service is continuous and breakfast and lunch are served until 4:00 p.m. Breakfast includes steak and eggs, prime rib and eggs, wonderful omelets (one with real crab), and Saturday and Sunday breakfast specials. Steak, prime rib, hamburgers, and fries are favorites. Open daily 10:00 a.m. to midnight. Moderate.

CALIFORNIA PIZZA KITCHEN 437 S. Highway 101, Suite 601, Solana Beach, 793-0999. Here's a good family restaurant where you can take your children and grandchildren for salads, pasta, pizza. There are 28 pizzas from which to choose (individual size), including barbecued chicken pizza, and "world famous" chicken tequila with spinach fettuccine. Very tasty vegetarian sandwiches. The place is open daily, so you can drop by for a light meal in casual but contemporary surroundings any time. Same menu, lunch and dinner. Open daily, 11:30 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Sunday through Thursday; Friday and Saturday to 11:00 p.m. Low to low moderate.

THE ENCINITAS CAFE 531 First Street, Encinitas, 632-0919. If you are searching for a place that serves American breakfasts from opening to closing, try this low-cost café which is open from 5:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m. The Encinitas Special offers oatmeal pancakes and two eggs, plus either bacon, sausage, or ham, for $4.95. Egg dishes are served with biscuits and gravy. Low-cost children's menus. Sandwiches and salads (as well as breakfast) for lunch; American entrées for dinner. Fast, excellent service. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low to low moderate.

THE FISH MARKET 640 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 755-2277. From the moment it opens until closing, there's scarcely a lull. The reason: lots of fresh food, on-the-run service, and a choice of 15 to 20 fresh fish items, accompanied by sourdough bread, choice of potatoes or rice, cole slaw or cottage cheese. Fish, which may include salmon, swordfish, or orange roughie, is grilled over mesquite. Fine value, but not a place for the three C's: calm, conversation, and contemplation. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Continuous service. Low to expensive.

IL FORNAIO CUCINA ITALIANA 1555 Camino Del Mar, Del Mar Plaza, 755-8876. Il Fornaio offers a stunning unobstructed view and its outdoor and indoor seating are gorgeous. The grilled items tend to be uneven, but the stuffed focaccia, angel hair pasta, soups and salads are always good. Same menu lunch and dinner. Always crowded. Lunch and dinner daily. To midnight Friday and Saturday. Sunday brunch à la carte from the menu from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Moderate to low expensive.

KHAYYAM CUISINE RESTAURANT 437 Highway 101, upstairs in the mall, Solana Beach, 755-6343. The best Middle Eastern cuisine is to be found here, prepared by a woman chef who combines Jordanian recipes with French sauces. Every item here is sensational, but don't leave without trying the bourak, ground beef wrapped in filo dough; the grilled eggplant; the stuffed vegetables with date sauce; and the chicken and rice presented as a "cake" and surrounded by raspberry sauce. Many entrées $8.95 to $9.95. Not to be missed. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tues-

SAMURAI JAPANESE RESTAURANT 979 Lomas Santa Fe Drive, Lomas Santa Fe Plaza, Solana Beach, 481-0032. This restaurant boasts "the largest California sushi bar," as well as a menu of over 100 items. Lunch Monday through Friday; dinner nightly, Friday and Saturday to 10:30 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

SCALINI 3790 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 259-9944. A handsome dining room has been built on what was once flatland on the road to Rancho Santa Fe. Offering northern Italian specialties, the à la carte menu is tempting for its pasta dishes, mesquite-grilled entrées, and traditional veal, chicken, and seafood, some in rich sauces. While the antipasti looks tempting, it's best to start with a gourmet pizza (shared), a Caesar salad, and one of ten pasta dishes, especially pasta stuffed with ricotta and spinach, and penne with hot peppers. Fresh fish and seafood fare well here. Imposing surroundings and excellent service. Open daily, lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner nightly. High moderate to expensive.

TARYN'S AT THE TRACK 514 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 481-8300. This charming fish, seafood, and beef restaurant offers California-style cuisine marked by individual service. The best bet is the sunset dinner served Tuesday through Sunday 5:30 p.m. to 7:00 p.m. It offers salad plus choice of King salmon, filet steak, baby back ribs, shrimp, pasta dishes, chicken, and fresh fish, all with vegetables. Worth seeking out. Open Tuesday through Sunday, dinners only. Low to moderate.

TOURLAS L'AUBERGE Del Mar Hotel, 1540 Camino del Mar, Del Mar, 259-1515. The new chef has completely revamped the menu which offers California specialties with French influence. The best entrées are filet of halibut with scallops and thyme sauce, tenderloin of beef in wine truffle sauce, rack of lamb with white bean cassoulet. The Sunday all-you-can-eat buffet brunch offers fresh seafood bar (shrimp, oysters, sushi, smoked salmon), omelet and waffle stations, carving stations. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner; Sunday brunch. Moderate to expensive.

WHEN IN ROME 1108 First Street, Encinitas, 944-1771. Though the wide-ranging menu offers such Roman specialties as fish and veal, the glory of the house lies in its pastas: the best manicotti to be found anywhere and outstanding ravioli. The grilled chicken is not to be missed. All entrées include salad. Lovely dining room, excellent service, great desserts. Open daily, lunch Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

NORTH INLAND

ANTHONY'S RANCHO BERNARDO 11666 Avena Place (off Bernardo Center Drive), Rancho Bernardo, 451-2070. One of the best features of this handsome branch of Anthony's is that it accepts reservations. This relieves you of the necessity of waiting around until your name is called. The dining room also tends to be less frantic than the downtown branches. Good fish and chips, seafood salads, broiled fish. Fast service. Hours, 11:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. nightly. Low to low moderate.

ASHOKA THE GREAT 9474 Black Mountain Road (off Miramar Road), 695-9749. Seek out this splendid Indian restaurant. The setting is lovely, the service is excellent, and the food is first-rate. Don't overlook the tandoori dishes, baked in a tandoor oven, or the rogan josh lamb stew. Ten vegetable platters and six rice dishes are available for vegetarians. However, you can't miss the excellent desserts, especially the crêpe stuffed with pears. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tuesday through Saturday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Patio dining available. Low to moderate.

Lounge below. Open nightly for dinner; fine all-you-can-eat buffet Sunday brunch. Wine-tasting dinners served every two months. Expensive.

LA PALOMA 116 Escondido Avenue, Vista, 758-7140. This outstanding gourmet Mexican restaurant deserves applause for its preparation, presentation, large portions, and modest prices. The lobster-shrimp fajitas made Gourmet magazine. However, the shrimp and chicken cilantro and the chiles rellenos are also noteworthy, as are the Cuban-style black beans and the albondigas soup. Turkey carnitas are outstanding. Everything is made from scratch and tastes marvelous. The best paella in North County is prepared here. Don't miss La Paloma. Lunch Monday through Friday; dinner daily. Low to moderate.

MANDARIN SHOGUN 600 East Vista Way, Vista, 758-8288. A menu of over 60 Japanese items is available that offers both sushi and cooked items. You can make a meal from the extensive hot appetizer list or the combination plate. Huge portions and pleasant food. Closed Mondays; lunch Tuesday through Friday and Sunday; dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Low to expensive.

MONGOLIAN PALACE 1856 E. Valley Parkway, Escondido, 747-8621. If you enjoy barbecuing at your own table, you'll like Mongolian Palace, where you may cook all the fish, chicken, pork, beef, and assorted combination skewers that you can eat. The price of $8.95 also includes a Chinese buffet of which the best item is the honey sesame chicken. You may remember this place as the Mongolian Beef House. It's all spruced up, interior and hibachi cookers. Sushi costs extra. All other items are all-you-can-eat. Open daily. Lunch from the menu, Monday through Friday. Dinner buffet daily, lunch buffet Saturday and Sunday. Low.

SANDCRAB CAFE 2229 Micro Place, Escondido, 480-2722. Crab, lobster, and seafood are boiled with potatoes and corn and served on butcher paper. A mallet and board are provided, but no utensils or picks. The food is cooked in Cajun spices. If you want your seafood without spices, New England–style, call an hour in advance. Maryland crab is not available. Good fun, but not inexpensive. Call for directions, because the café is located in an industrial area. Open daily, continuous service, same menu lunch and dinner. Low (for appetizers) to expensive.

VALENTINO'S 11828 Rancho Bernardo Road, New Mercado, Rancho Bernardo, 451-3200. Located in a shopping center that will remind you of Beverly Hills, Valentino's has a lovely interior, good salads and pastas, and a fine chicken dish called Chicken Vesuvio that's the highlight in terms of price, preparation, and presentation. Excellent breads, especially focaccia, are served in loving, lavish portions. Another fine dish is homemade cannelloni. Five dollar lunch served Monday through Friday includes salad and choice of one of nine pastas. Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Monday through Saturday. Moderate to expensive.

LA JOLLA

ALFONSO'S OF LA JOLLA 1251 Prospect Street, 454-2232. Both the outdoor patio and inside dining room are lively, crowded, noisy, and festive. The house specialty is carne asada, but the steak picado (beef sautéed with Mexican sausage), the Guadalajara-style baked chicken (available only on Friday and Saturday nights), and the quesadilla with chicken are all fresh and picante. Shrimp Mercedes (shrimp over a quesadilla) are outstanding. Extensive menu offers combination plates, chiles rellenos, sopes, and flautas. Very crowded on weekends. Open daily. Continuous service lunch and dinner. To 11:00 p.m. weeknights, to midnight Friday and Saturday. Low to moderate.

GEORGE'S AT THE COVE 1250 Prospect Street, 454-4244. The always excellent George's, with its first-rate fish and meat menu, now boasts three dining levels on its ocean-view site. The first is its central dining room with a full menu and gourmet lunch and dinners. Above it is the Café, with limited budget offerings. To top it off is The Terrace, which has no ceiling, is romantic on balmy nights and provides excellent light entrées, sandwiches and snacks. The same menu at The Terrace is available from opening to closing. All three rooms are open daily for lunch and dinner. Call for exact hours. Expensive, George's gourmet room; low to moderate, other rooms.

HARRY'S CAFE GALLERY 7545 Girard Avenue, 454-7381. This landmark coffee shop is noted for its breakfasts, served from opening to closing. The buttermilk pancakes, varieties of waffles made from scratch, and egg combinations are all generous and well prepared. One of the few places where you can still get hot oatmeal or cream of wheat, Harry's also serves freshly squeezed orange juice and entire carafes of freshly ground Kona coffee, as well as specialty coffee drinks. Open daily, breakfast and lunch, from 5:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday, to 2:00 p.m. on Sunday. Low.

IMPERIAL WOK 5771 La Jolla Boulevard, 454-8625. This family restaurant offers an attractive room, a very caring staff, and Mandarin and Cantonese specialties. The three types of chicken on one plate and the egg foo young are good choices. Imperial Wok is a good place to take children, as they are welcomed here. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate.

LA JOLLA SPICE CO. 5737 La Jolla Boulevard, 456-2272. If you've been searching for chef Pierre Lustrat, formerly of L'Escargot, he can be found every night preparing light French meals at this café. The setting is quite charming and among the best bets are the fresh fish dinners which change nightly and include soup or salad. The bouillabaisse is also delightful and so is the wiener schnitzel. Best of all is Pierre's famous La Tarte Tatin, but please call an hour in advance to pre-order. It's not L'Escargot but you won't be disappointed here. Open daily breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Pierre prepares dinner only. Low to upper moderate.

LA TERRAZZA 8008 Girard Avenue, 459-9750. The expansion of this pleasant Italian café provides more room and a more festive atmosphere. The pastas are delightful and so are the salads. Very friendly owners who will be glad to accommodate you in any way. This is a good place for casual dining. Same menu lunch and dinner except for regular specials. Open daily, lunch Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, and dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

MANHATTAN OF LA JOLLA 7766 Fay Avenue, Empress Hotel, 554-1444. If you're searching for a restaurant that provides a sense of gaiety as well as good New York–style Italian food, then try Manhattan of La Jolla. Presided over by Peter Joseph Macaluso, known to everyone as P.J., the room reverberates with his storytelling, his exchange of recipes, and his inimitable style. Of the many tantalizing à la carte dishes, some of the best are rack of lamb, superb steaks, clam soup, and "Seafood Mediterranean." Cannelloni and gnocchi are outstanding. Posh surroundings and very New York atmosphere. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, nightly. Moderate to expensive.

THE MEDITERRANEAN ROOM La Valencia Hotel, 1132 Prospect Street, 454-0771. Noted for the excellence of its copious Sunday brunch, this lovely view-room also offers a fixed-price "sundowner" early bird dinner for $15.50 to $16.50 Monday through Saturday, 5:00 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., with such plain, home-style entrées as veal shanks, short ribs, and small steaks. These dinners, which include soup or salad, beverage, and dessert, attract many seniors, but the brunch is a family affair. Reservations a must for brunch; allow 24 hours. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Moderate to expensive.

OCEAN KITCHEN 5525 La Jolla Boulevard, 459-3993. The dishes at this Mandarin and Cantonese restaurant contain no MSG nor are there starches in the sauce. Be sure to try the shrimp toast for appetizer and the crispy shrimp served with their shells; both are new on the menu. Shaw San Tung, a vegetable dish with black mushrooms, is outstanding as are the shrimp in black bean sauce and any of the chicken dishes. The dinner menu is available from opening to closing. Luncheon specials can be had from 11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Monday through Saturday. This remains one of our best natural Chinese food restaurants. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Saturday. Dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

PANNIKIN'S BROCKTON VILLA RESTAURANT 1235 Coast Boulevard, 454-7393. This is the ultimate coffeehouse as well as a restaurant, located in an old hillside house overlooking the Pacific. This place is jammed for breakfast (served to 3:00 p.m.) weekends. During the summer, dinners available Wednesday through Sunday. Dinner items include steamed mussels, barbecued beef with black beans, roasted Shelton chicken with barbecue sauce, and sautéed shrimp on fettuccine. It's worth visiting just to experience one of the oldest beach houses in La Jolla which has not been altered. Outdoor dining is available on several levels adjacent to the steps. Open daily to 5:00 p.m. Monday and Tuesday, till 10:00 p.m. Wednesday through Sunday. Please call about hours. Low to low moderate.

PIATTI RISTORANTE 2182 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla Shores, 454-1589. This country-style Italian restaurant serves admirable Italian dishes with light sauces and moderate prices. Not-to-be-missed items are the daily soups, rotisserie chicken and roasted potatoes, vegetarian lasagne with zucchini, and ravioli with lemon sauce. Saturday and Sunday à la carte brunch offers 14 items that include pizza. Patio dining for all meals. Superb service. Arrive early for more leisurely dining. Very crowded weekends. Open daily, lunch and dinner; brunch on weekends. Moderate.

SADAF RESTAURANT 613 Pearl Street, 551-0643. If you've never experienced Persian food, try this restaurant. The setting is romantic and the food is first-rate. Persian food is noted for its low-fat, low-calorie items. Most of the chicken, meat, or fish are charbroiled without skin or fat. The best are chicken kabob barg and the filet mignon. Do try the stuffed grape leaves and the eggplant for appetizers, and select more than one type of rice. My favorite is the dill and lima bean. Mammoth portions. Open daily for lunch and dinner, same menu. Luncheon specials Monday through Friday. Low moderate.

SU CASA RESTAURANTE 6738 La Jolla Boulevard, 454-0369. Old favorites such as Mexican specialties and fresh fish sautéed, broiled, or cooked over mesquite are still available. Su Casa has returned to regional Mexican cooking: homemade corn tamale stuffed with crab and shrimp, deluxe fish tacos, shrimp fajitas and carnitas Michoacan. Sunday buffet brunch, all you can eat for $8.95, includes complimentary champagne. It offers Mexican-style specialties and roasted turkey. Beans are prepared without lard. Appealing fireplace and outdoor patio. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Lunch, low. Dinner, low to moderate.

TSING TAO 7660 Fay Avenue, 456-6666. The owner has combined gourmet Hong Kong–style dishes with those standards you are likely to find elsewhere. Your best bet is to order from the list of chef specialties, especially the vinegar chicken, the scallops, and the prawns. Vegetable preparations are especially fine — I like the spinach with crystal noodles. A free dessert is included in the price of the meal. Lunch and dinner daily. Low to upper moderate.

THE WHALING BAR La Valencia Hotel, 1132 Prospect Street, 454-0771. The only nonview restaurant of the three located here, the Whaling Bar has a wide range of à la carte dishes for both lunch and dinner. The best, available for both meals, are fresh fish and a superb paella. Low calorie meals are available at lunch and dinner. The bar itself is lively and attractive, the room cloistered. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low to moderate for lunch; dinner, moderate to expensive.

CLAIREMONT & KEARNY MESA

ANDRES PATIO RESTAURANT 1235 Morena Boulevard, Bay Park, 275-4114. This low-priced Cuban café provides authentic specialties, of which the best are shredded beef in wine sauce, roast pork with yuca and moros, chicken and rice, or top sirloin, Cuban-style. Don't overlook the appetizers, including Cuban tamal and fried plantains. Select the soup over the salad, and if entrées are served with black beans, be sure to pour them over the main course instead of eating them separately. Swift service, unpretentious but clean premises. Excellent Cuban sandwiches (roast pork and baked ham served steaming hot) are available for lunch and dinner. Only Cuban sandwiches in the city. Extensive line of Latin groceries next door at 1249 Morena Boulevard. Closed Sunday and Monday; open for lunch and dinner, Tuesday through Saturday. Reservations suggested. Low to moderate.

THE GODFATHER 7878 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Kearny Mesa, 560-1747. The best bets here are the combination dinners accompanied by large salads. Not supergourmet, but you get your money's worth from the extensive menu that includes veal, steak, seafood, chicken, and cioppino. Cheerful, bustling atmosphere, home-style preparation, and a piano player Wednesday through Saturday nights. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinners, nightly. Moderate.

HOUSE OF CHINESE GOURMET 4957 Diane Avenue, Clairemont, 279-2520. The menu includes some of the house's best dishes: chef's chicken, crispy beef, snow cabbage beef, minced chicken in lettuce. The Hunan pork chops and pot stickers (on the menu) and the string beans with meat sauce are not to be missed. The preparation is excellent, but you have to return often as a food archaeologist to dig out the unlisted items. Pleasing room, fast service. Open daily. Continuous service, lunch (served 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.) and dinner. Individual dishes low to moderate.

KOREA HOUSE 4620 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 560-0080. This remains one of the best Korean restaurants in the city. Three types of seating are available, of which the most popular is at a table with a cooking unit where diners may barbecue their own food. Apart from the barbecue, dumpling soup, short ribs, and noodle dishes are recommended. The menu is extensive and includes a sushi bar. Interesting decor. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

THE ORIGINAL PANCAKE HOUSE 3906 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 565-1740. If it hasn't already, the "apple pancake," which is really an enormous, puffy soufflé prepared with cinnamon sugar and apples, should win a prize. Its ability to satisfy all that is soft, sweet, and wonderful can't be duplicated anywhere. The recipes for the apple pancake, the Swedish pancakes, and the flapjacks are from the original restaurant in Oregon. Omelets that cover the entire plate are accompanied by pancakes, coffee is served with whipping cream, and you'll need someone to help you out the door if you let your instincts go wild. Dream breakfast food includes fresh seasonal fruit with cream. Open daily but closes early. Low.

PHUONG TRANG 4170 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 565-6750. Don't miss this excellent Vietnamese restaurant where 232 items are offered. The cuisine is healthy, offers great variety and is pleasing to the eye as well as the palate. Best bets are egg rolls, char-grilled shrimp on sugarcane, ground beef wrapped in grape leaves, prawn salad, rice in earthenware pot, grilled whole fish, spring rolls. Service is swift, the food very tasty—it's low-fat and wonderful. Open daily, breakfast, lunch and dinner, continuous service, 9:30 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. Low to moderate.

SAN CHOY SEAFOOD AND BARBEQUE DELI 4444 Convoy Street, 560-8188. Open daily and serving dim sum from 10:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. daily, this Cantonese restaurant offers many exotic dishes as they are prepared in China. The fish and seafood are highly recommended, especially the whole fish, clams or crab in ginger sauce and scallops with greens. The barbecued pork is excellent, and takeout is available. Menu includes many vegetable dishes. Low-cost luncheon specials Monday through Friday (not on weekends). Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

SAVOY RESTAURANT 4690 Convoy Street, 495-9139. Though the room is plain and the decor nonexistent, the Chinese and Vietnamese food could grace a more opulent stage. Some items are not listed on the menu but are prepared upon request, among them string beans or asparagus with meat. Don't overlook Vietnamese egg rolls, pot stickers, sesame chicken, garlic shrimp (in a mildly sweet sauce) or the list of exotic soups. Fresh lobster or fresh crab at low cost may appear seasonally. Delightful service. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low.

THE BEACHES

THE BELGIAN LION 2265 Bacon Street, Ocean Beach, 223-2700. Without a doubt the best Belgian food in San Diego is served in this charming provincial-style dining room. The cassoulet, the confit of duck, the vegetables, which include a turnip soufflé, and the fresh fish specialties are not to be missed. This venerable dining room is in a class by itself. Please note that the Belgian Lion is open just Thursday, Friday, and Saturday for dinner only. Moderate to expensive.

CHINA INN 877 Hornblend Street (between Garnet and Grand streets), Pacific Beach, 483-6680. At least 118 items appear on the menu, which offers Mandarin and Szechuan specialties and includes sweet and pungent shrimp, barbecued pork chops, duck in orange sauce, shrimp in wine sauce. Simple setting; outstanding food. The dinner is always preferable when Andy Kam, the chef/owner, is there. Ask his advice about dishes. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Moderate.

RESTAURANTS

This small, charming family-operated restaurant serves very tasty Italian food at low cost. The lasagne Florentine is especially good and so are the chicken dishes and the individual pizzas. Since the restaurant is always offering low-cost specials you'll get very fine value here. The setting is attractive, the food plentiful and well prepared. Cucina Fresca is a pleasant neighborhood restaurant that deserves your attention. Open daily. Lunch Tuesday through Sunday, dinner nightly. To 11:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Low to low moderate.

DI ROMA 1845 Quivira Way, Mission Bay, 222-1189. Two dining rooms are available here; the one that's an enclosed porch tends to be noisy. Stay with low-cost pastas served with soup or salad. The best bet here is the pizza, especially the one with a top and bottom crust. It's terrific. Closed Monday; open Tuesday through Friday for lunch, Tuesday through Sunday for dinner. Low to moderate.

D'LISH PIZZA AND PASTA 4150 Mission Boulevard, Promenade Shopping Center, upstairs, 483-4949. If you like casual dining at the beach where you may arrive in your shorts, try D'Lish. The salads are huge and fresh — one salad is enough for two people. The pizza and pastas are tasty, the food low-cost. You get your money's worth here. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Price low.

FRENCH GOURMET 960 Turquoise Street, Pacific Beach, 488-1725. This airy, pleasant dining room serves French food with California influences. It's light, good-tasting, and easy on your purse. Breakfast items and lunch are served simultaneously. For dinner you have a choice of soup or salad and entrée with vegetable. Try the Dijon chicken or the daily fresh fish. Ravishing desserts and bakery at one end of the restaurant. Open daily, breakfast and lunch (served simultaneously) and dinner. Low to moderate.

HELL'S KITCHEN 825 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 274-8084. If you like your food spicy, this will be heaven for you — chiles, cayenne, and Jamaican spices inhabit almost every dish, including the "blazing salads." Best bets for not too spicy food: corn tamales, rotisserie chicken, and baby back ribs. Food is served swiftly and prices are low. Open daily, lunch and dinner, to 11:00 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Low.

KARINYA THAI RESTAURANT 4475 Mission Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 270-5050. The impressive menu boasts 70 items, of which 21 are appetizers. There's also a room with floor seating and a few tables that's a knockout. Best bets here are firecracker shrimp, spicy fish cakes, stuffed chicken wings and any items from the list of house specialties. Especially recommended are scallops in three sauces and marinated beef strips with broccoli. Stunning presentation and excellent preparation. On weekends arrive early to avoid waiting for tables. Open daily. Lunch Tuesday through Friday; dinner nightly. Moderate.

KOLBEH RESTAURANT 4501 E. Mission Bay Drive, Pacific Beach, 273-8171. Persian food is low in calories, good-tasting, non-fat and many of the dishes are charbroiled. The two best, served with enormous amounts of basmati rice, are the filet mignon and the chicken barg (as distinct from kabobs). To accompany any charbroiled dish, you should order yogurt with cucumbers and mint plus the puréed eggplant (borani). Any of the kabob dishes are well prepared, but you might also consider the stews and daily specials. Dishes should be shared as if you were eating Chinese food to provide you with the greatest variety. Same menu served from opening to closing. Open daily, Sunday through Thursday to 9:30 p.m.; Friday and Saturday to approximately 10:30 p.m. Low to low moderate.

MICHELANGELO 1878 Rosecrans Street, Point Loma, 224-9478. It's best to order the full Italian dinner that includes soup or salad, or you may try the evening pasta special. The scampi entrée and chicken with eggplant are wonderful. Good value here and therefore always crowded. Open daily, lunch Monday through Saturday, dinner nightly. Low to low moderate.

SANTA CLARA GRILL 3704 Mission Boulevard, Mission Beach, 488-9484. Here's a nice, new, well-decorated casual dining room with a lovely outdoor patio. The best bets here are breakfasts and lunch. Sandwiches are sensational: fresh, low-cost, accompanied by salad or potatoes, and one is enough for two people. Three-cheese meatloaf with mashed potatoes for $5.95. Faque burgers (pronounced fake) are meatless, are made from soy beans, and are very flavorable. They are only 80 calories. You'll love the service, the low cost, the huge portions. Open daily for all meals. Closing, approximately 10:00 p.m. Low.

MIDWAY, OLD TOWN & MISSION VALLEY

BERTA'S LATIN AMERICAN RESTAURANT 3928 Twigg Street, Old Town, 295-2343. You'll find preparations from all Latin American countries, from Argentina and Brazil to Peru. However, with few exceptions, the food is very spicy, and this includes the potato appetizer with a fiery red sauce. If you enjoy hot seasoning you'll like the meat, pork, chicken, fish. But it's not for those who enjoy what's smooth and subtle. The top price for entrée plus salad at dinner is $12.95. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Low to low moderate.

The menu is limited to beef, lamb, chicken, and vegetables, and the food is very spicy. No utensils are offered. You pick up the food with injera, a spongy bread. College students frequent this place and like it because it's different. Try the turnovers, chicken with hard-boiled egg, lamb cubes, and vegetable platter. To September 1, lunch Saturday and Sunday, dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Low.

CHANG CUISINE OF CHINA Grossmont Shopping Center, 5500 Grossmont Center Drive, La Mesa, 464-2288. The setting is very beautiful with lots of Chinese art, and the dishes are subtle rather than fiery. Try pungent shrimp and crispy beef. The twin delights (pork and chicken) may be special ordered. The string beans are excellent. Open daily. Continuous service, lunch and dinner. Low to moderate.

COLLEGE RESTAURANT 6695 El Cajon Boulevard, State College area, 469-1140. The new owners have spruced up the place and added new items to the menu. It still remains a haven for those on a budget and is noted for its fried chicken dinner, with choice of soup or salad, potatoes, corn fritters, and hot rolls. Not fancy, but plentiful and fresh. Chicken-fried steak is another house staple. Breakfast specials for $3.99 include country-fried steak, top sirloin steak, or pork chops, all with eggs. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low.

D.Z. AKIN'S Alvarado Plaza, 6930 Alvarado Road, State College area, 265-0218. Surely the best Jewish delicatessen in San Diego. Don't overlook breakfasts and the smoked fish and lox plate. Excellent, fully stocked bakery also. Open daily. Continuous service, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Late closing on Friday and Saturday. Low to moderate.

dumplings, soup, salad, dessert) and Thursday, which is Family Night: ribs, pizza, spaghetti, fried fish, roast beef, banana splits. Massive amounts of food that's fresh but not low-cal/low-cholesterol. The Sunday breakfast, with many courses, is $5.69. Lunch, $5.39; dinner, $6.99. Not for gourmet diners, but fun. Open daily. Another branch is located at 651 Palomar Street, Chula Vista, 426-0505, and a third is at 1135 Highland Avenue, National City, 477-7990. Both have identical menu and prices. Low.

HOUSE OF CANTON 8015 Broadway, Lemon Grove, 469-4757. If you should be anywhere in the vicinity, seek out this Cantonese and Hunan restaurant for its Hunan scallops, Yu-Hsiang eggplant with pork, and pan-fried noodles. Be sure to request Mongolian pork chops, if you like pork. Peking duck and whole, steamed fish are also good bets. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Low to moderate.

J-K'S GREEK CAFE 7749 University Avenue, La Mesa, 464-1915. A find for tasty, fresh, home-style Greek cooking, this family-owned café is equally good to the pocketbook. The marinated half-chicken, the moussaka, the pastitsio, and the souvlaki are authentically prepared. Combination dinner plates are inexpensive enough to double as appetizers if divided between two or more. Desserts — baklava, kataifi, and custard pie — are prepared on the premises. Takeouts available. Lunch and dinner, Monday through Saturday. Closed Sunday. Low.

KAMON 6523 University Avenue, State College area, 287-6140. If you long for simple Japanese food some middle-of-the-night, don't despair. This low-priced family restaurant is open until midnight midweek and until 2:00 a.m. on Friday and Saturday. In addition to a whopping fresh sushi bar, you may elect to order Japanese standards, such as chicken or beef teriyaki, or a variety of combination dinners. After 9:00 p.m., live karaoke singing to taped music rocks the room. Offbeat and good-humored, it's hard to believe that such spontaneous goings-on take place in the heart of East San Diego. Closed Monday. Dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Early closing on Sunday. Low to moderate.

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

A DONG 3874 Fairmount Avenue, East San Diego. 298-4420. Since the Vietnamese menu runs to 200 items, you may eat here several times a week for a month and still not exhaust the variety. But you won't be disappointed in the spring rolls, ground shrimp on sugar cane, the charbroiled, stuffed grape leaves, chicken lemon grass with red chiles, fried rice in earthenware pot, or the ancient hot pot, in which you cook shrimp, chicken, or beef in a hot broth at your table. Extensive vegetarian selection. Dishes may not arrive in the order in which you requested them, so relax and enjoy the surprise. Crowded weekends. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low to moderate.

JYOTI BIHANGA 3351 Adams Avenue, Normal Heights, 282-4116. Low-cost, tasty, and fresh vegetarian dishes with international influences. The mildly Indian ones include a different curry every other day. Soups, salads, and nightly specials are good bets. Simple dining room. Saturday and Sunday brunch, all-you-can-eat, for $5.95 served three weekends per month. (Call to find out dates.) Open every night for dinner except Wednesday and Sunday. Hours change often, so phone before you go there. Low.

LITTLE ITALY 4367 University Avenue (at Fairmount Avenue), East San Diego, 281-4949. Spirited calzone and pizzas (old-fashioned style with lots of stuffing and toppings), as well as a bargain dinner for two ($10.99) that includes salad, cheese pizza, lasagne, spaghetti, and garlic bread, make this long-established restaurant worth noting. Simple surroundings, hearty portions. Please note the late closing: 2:00 a.m. daily, which permits insomniacs to have pizza in the middle of the night. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Low.

UPTOWN

CAFE BEIGNET 3865 Fifth Avenue, Hillcrest, 293-0884. This much-needed café and coffeehouse offers New Orleans specialties with a top price of $7.25. Apart from the beignets (ben-yay), their signature deep-fried pastries, the café offers crab cakes, catfish, soft-shell crab, muffuletta sandwiches (on huge rolls baked on the premises), and "popcorn" — fish, gator, shrimp, and crawdads deep-fried in batter. Don't miss Cajun popcorn in basket or crab-cake sandwich. Highly palatable food at low costs. Open daily, 7:00 a.m. to 10:00 p.m. Sunday through Thursday, to midnight Friday and Saturday. Same menu all hours; continuous service. Low.

CALIFORNIA CUISINE 1027 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 543-0790. The cooking at this café has never been better. The presentation is ravishing and every dish is fresh, innovative, and wonderful to the palate. Menus change often so when these items are available do try them: pork tenderloin scaloppine (layers of wild rice, pork tenderloin, shiitake mushrooms), baked chicken breast with feta cheese and jalapeño yogurt, warm chicken salad, Alaskan halibut with passion fruit. Over 100 wines from which to choose. Every Tuesday California Cuisine offers a three-course meal for $12.95. Don't miss it. Fully enclosed heated patio. Closed Monday. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Moderate to expensive.

CHICKEN PIE SHOPS OF SAN DIEGO 2633 El Cajon Boulevard, 295-0156. You'll get lots of fried chicken, chicken and turkey pies, mashed potatoes, and desserts for prices that don't seem to have changed much since the shop opened over 50 years ago. It's like the Fourth of July in a small town, and a great bargain. Steaks also available at low cost. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, dinner. Low.

FIGARO ITALIAN RESTAURANT 741 West Washington Street, 296-4811. This unpretentious family restaurant has been in business for decades and you may bring children here. It offers home-style meals, many of the recipes coming from Naples, Italy. In addition to pizzas, the restaurant serves fine cannelloni, chicken, and veal dishes; large portions. Modest dining room, swift service. Closed Monday. Lunch Tuesday through Friday; dinner nightly. Low to moderate.

GOLDEN STAR RESTAURANT 3761 Sixth Avenue, Hillcrest, 291-8168. The exuberant presence of Mei Ling, the owner, the menu with its many original dishes, and the low costs make this a Chinese restaurant to frequent regularly. Casserole dishes with lobster, or seafood or fish are unique as is the for wor soup, similar to Vietnamese wedding soup, which contains shrimp, meat, chicken, pork, vegetables, soft noodles, and bean curd. It's a meal in itself and serves four to six people with ease. The best bet is the fresh lobster served with one of three sauces at cost, between $8.95 and $9.95. Not to be missed. Truly delightful dining experience. All items to go. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. On Saturday and Sunday, dinner starts at noon. Low to moderate.

HOB NOB HILL 2271 First Avenue, Banker's Hill, 239-8176. This restaurant has always led a double life. For breakfast during the week it appeals to professionals who make deals and exchange news over endless cups of coffee. At night it serves old-fashioned meals: corned beef and cabbage, fried chicken, beef stew with dumplings, roast pork and lamb, sauerbraten. These specials are accompanied by choice of soup or salad, potatoes, vegetables, small individualized breads, and muffins. For a top price of $9.95, you get more than your money's worth. However, the old-fashioned preparations are not low-calorie. Breakfast is served all day. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Dinner starts at 4:00 p.m. nightly. Low.

IMPERIAL HOUSE 505 Kalmia Street, 234-3525. If you are close to Balboa Park, this is an excellent place for lunch which costs about $7.25 and includes soup or salad, plus hot entrée. In a separate room is the Mystery Dinner Theatre which includes dinner plus theater on Friday and Saturday. (Call for prices.) Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Saturday; dinner theater, Friday and Saturday in separate room. Moderate to expensive.

RESTAURANTS

Here's a good bargain restaurant for dinner: fixed price, three-course California cuisine meals for $10.00. They include appetizer, soup or salad, plus entrée with vegetables and dessert. Dinner items change nightly and are written on a blackboard, which covers one wall. There are two dining rooms with the atmosphere of a casual neighborhood restaurant — nothing fancy, but good value for the money. Closed Monday. Open Tuesday through Sunday. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Breakfast items available throughout the day. Low.

MONTANA'S AMERICAN GRILL 1421 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 297-0722. It's possible to dine at this grill very inexpensively because the excellent soups such as the tomato-and-white-wine soup or the Friday night clam chowder are meals in themselves. Chili and a New Mexican hot stew are also available as well as pasta dishes, all for minimal sums. The chef does excellent work. On a cold night, order smoked sausage with wild rice and black beans, or select the Montana mixed grill which consists of three grilled items that change daily. This platter is more than enough for two. Many dishes have Southwestern influences, but there's a wide variety of smoked or grilled items from which to choose. Pleasant atmosphere. Excellent service. Open daily. Lunch Monday through Friday. Dinners nightly, Friday and Saturday to 11:00 p. m. Low to upper moderate.

PASTA AL DENTE 420 Robinson Avenue, Hillcrest, 295-2727. All sauces, pastas, daily soups, and salads are made from scratch. Thirty pasta dishes are available at this bright, clean, unpretentious restaurant. Sauces are made to order. The costs are low, the portions are huge, and the enterprise is marked by honesty. Not top gourmet but worth noting. Don't miss the house specialty, tortellini alla panna. Every item available for takeout. Pleasant outdoor dining area as well as gleaming dining room. Open for lunch and dinner daily. Lunch specials and early bird dinner specials every day. Low.

PASTA TIME CAFE 1417 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 296-2425. Though the atmosphere is casual — you order at the counter and the food is brought on a tray — all the sauces are made from scratch and pastas include a fresh salad and garlic bread. Lasagne is one of the best in the house and for hungry bargain hunters the meatball is filling and inexpensive. The top price here is $5.75. Don't leave without trying the outrageous carrot cake. Good value for your money but minimalist decor and atmosphere. Immaculate. Open seven days a week, same menu all day. Low.

THE STUDY 401 University Avenue, 296-4847. This is one of my favorite coffeehouses, decorated to look like a study and frequented by students. Immaculate, no smoking and offers coffee drinks, juice, tea and excellent muffins, scones, and cakes. Open 8:00 a.m. to midnight daily.

DOWNTOWN

ANTHONY'S FISH GROTTO 1360 North Harbor Drive (at Ash Street), 232-5103. For its fresh seafood salads, its fish and chips, and its daily fresh fish specials, Anthony's still goes to the head of the class for stability of product, good-sized portions, time-honored preparation, and low cost. Try the squid cutlet for a light meal. Open daily, lunch through dinner. Reservations not accepted. Low to expensive.

ASTI RISTORANTE 728 Fifth Avenue (corner of G), Gaslamp Quarter, 232-8844. The room is very attractive and an open hearth for wood-fired pizzas adds to the festivities. First courses, such as polenta, salads with filet mignon, salads with seafood are first-rate. However, the same meat-porcini mushroom sauce is used on pastas and on chicken. Read the menu carefully so you don't repeat. Food is from Piedmont in northern Italy. Outdoor seating. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Late hours nightly (to midnight or 1:00 a.m.) a plus. A few expensive dishes but mostly moderate.

ATHENS MARKET 109 West F Street, 234-1955. This is the best Greek restaurant in San Diego, and it's ideal before or after a cultural event. The owner, Mary Pappas, will lavish special attention on you. Lentil soup, Greek appetizers, salads, chicken, fish, and lamb dishes are first-rate and so are the desserts. It's festive for late-night dining. Belly dancers Friday and Saturday, call for hours. Open 11:30 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Monday through Saturday, 4:00 p. m. to 11:00 p.m. Sunday. Separate dining rooms for parties. Moderate.

BAYOU BAR AND GRILL 329 Market Street, 696-8747. You'll find the best New Orleans and Cajun food here. The owners are from New Orleans and the cooking is subtle — you won't break out in a sweat from spices. In addition to red beans and rice and seafood gumbo, you'll love the chicken cordon bleu, duck esplanade, two preparations of trout, smoked pork chops with jalapeño stuffing, crawfish etouffée, and bread pudding. You'll save yourself a trip to New Orleans by dining here. Open for lunch Wednesday through Sunday 11:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.; dinners nightly. Moderate to expensive.

BRAVO BISTRO 895 Fourth Avenue, 234-8888. Mediterranean specialties from Portugal, Spain, France, and Italy are featured here. For unusual fare, try chicken Sardinia, prepared with spinach, goat cheese, and pine nuts; lamb loin over couscous with ratatouille; Portuguese pork with clams in a paprika-garlic sauce; two different styles of paella; and cataplan, which is a seafood stew served over saffron rice. Very pleasant food and atmosphere. Small outdoor seating area available. Open daily. Lunch Monday to Friday, dinner nightly. Low to expensive.

BREWSKI'S GASLAMP PUB 310 Fifth Avenue (Fifth and K), 231-7700. If you arrive between 4:00 and 6:00 p.m., beer is a dollar and one of the appetizers is half-price, other appetizers are $1.00 off. The brewery with its stainless steel fermenters and copper brewhouses serves as a backdrop to this lively bar. The menu is multicultural and extensive, but the best bets here are the sandwiches and the burgers. Food is served to midnight Monday through Saturday; closes at 10:00 p.m. on Sunday. Dark beers are the best. Low to low moderate. Call for schedule of live entertainment.

DAKOTA GRILL AND SPIRITS 901 Fifth Avenue, 234-5554. If you enjoy barbecued ribs, rotisserie chicken, or roasted garlic, you'll have a field day here. The restaurant is completely smoke-free; you may dine upstairs and look down on Fifth Avenue, or you may dine at street level. A simple but highly satisfying meal consists of black bean soup plus Caesar salad. And don't overlook the roasted garlic: pizza dough topped with Gorgonzola cheese, sweet onions, and a whole bulb of roasted garlic. It's very rich, but a dandy first course. Open daily, lunch Monday through Friday; dinner nightly; closed weekdays from 3:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. Low to upper moderate.

DOBSON'S 956 Broadway Circle, 231-6771. Best bets here remain the signature soup, mussel bisque with a crust; the nightly fresh fish entrées; and rack of lamb. Monday through Thursday, fixed-price meal for $21.95 includes soup, salad, choice of one of four entrées, dessert. Upstairs seating area preferable. Excellent service. Closed Sunday. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner, Monday through Saturday; late hours on the weekends. Low to expensive.

HARBOR HOUSE 831 W. Harbor Drive, Seaport Village, 232-1141. The two-level building and the view of the harbor are major attractions. Fish and seafood predominate but chicken, pasta, and steak are also available. The dining room seats 250, so don't expect intimacy. Preparations are wholesome but not original. Open daily for lunch; dinners nightly; Sunday brunch à la carte as well as fresh fish menu and lunch. Saturday and Sunday dinners begin at 4:30 p.m. Moderate to expensive.

LA TAZZA 823 Fifth Avenue, 238-8010. This is a café and coffeehouse combined because it has a liquor license and offers wine and beer as well as tea and coffee. The menu consists of lasagne, pasta salads, daily specials and desserts. Urban ambience and charming personnel. Monday through Thursday, 10:00 a.m. to midnight; Friday to 2:00 a.m.; Saturday, 4:00 p.m. to 2:00 a.m.; Sunday, 5:00 p.m. to midnight. Smoking at the front of the café.

MISTER A's 2550 Fifth Avenue, 239-1377. The views of the bay and the city are as dazzling as ever. The cadre of waiters and the luxury dining room have remained constant through the years. If you've dined here recently and enjoy the food, so much the better. But if you have never dined at Mister A's, be aware that the food preparation is average. Fish, chicken, steak, and beef Wellington are featured. Lunch, Monday through Friday, dinner nightly. Expensive.

OLE MADRID CAFE 751-755 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp Quarter, 557-0146. The Spanish restaurant is 7,500 square feet, holds two balconies and a disco where you can dance the night away. The food is well prepared but because of the distance from the kitchen, some dishes may arrive lukewarm. Your best bets are hot and cold tapas (appetizers), soups and salads. I'm especially fond of the tortilla de la casa, a potato, bell pepper, and zucchini egg pie, as well as the bean and sausage soup, fabada. Spanish standards such as paella and zarzuela (fish stew) are also available. Olé Madrid is frequented by the young. It's high energy and very noisy from 9:00 p.m. on but it's fun. Closed Monday. Open Tuesday through Sunday. Food served 11:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, 5:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Dancing and disco to 2:00 a.m. Low to moderate.

SÄRÖ RESTAURANT 926 Broadway Circle (Broadway and Second Avenue), 232-7173. Here's a pleasant, well-lit Swedish restaurant that serves unpretentious but good food in a loving atmosphere. Outdoor seating is congenial for snacks; the dining room makes you feel as if you are in a Swedish home. Best bets: Swedish meatballs, combination cold fish platter, chicken breast in oyster chile sauce. Don't forget the dessert, fresh fruit with white and dark brown chocolate topped with ice cream. Closed all day Sunday. Lunch and dinner, Monday through Friday; dinner only Saturday. Low to low moderate.

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

ANTHONY'S CHULA VISTA 215 West Bay Boulevard, Chula Vista, 425-4200. The only one of the Anthony's to serve candlelight dinners daily in the cocktail lounge. Regular Anthony's menu plus fresh fish market. Open daily, lunch and dinner. No reservations. Low to low moderate.

CHEZ LOMA 1132 Loma Avenue, Coronado, 435-0661. Chez Loma is located in a historical house and serves fine fresh fish, chicken, and duck. The early bird dinner served nightly between 5:30 and 6:30 p.m. is a three-course, fixed-price meal for $15.95. It includes soup or salad, one of three entrées, and dessert. The regular menu offers such entrées as fresh fish, duck, filet of beef, chicken. The Saturday and Sunday sit-down brunch costs $9.95 and offers fruit plate with croissant and a choice of eggs Benedict, steak and egg quiche, and a beverage such as champagne or mimosa (orange juice and champagne). Open for dinner nightly; brunch Saturday and Sunday. Moderate to expensive.

KOTO 651 Palomar Street, Chula Vista, 691-1418. The outstanding features here are kama-meshi rice dinners and the extensive list of unique appetizers. Kama meshi is rice cooked in a kama kettle and topped with seafood, meat, or chicken. Don't overlook the eel or the chicken and shrimp over rice, though all eight rice offerings are delightful. Among the best appetizers are the deep-fried tofu and the eggplant with mustard. Beautiful sushi bar. The combination entrées tend to be expensive and not as exciting as the rice dishes and appetizers. Be patient with the spoken English. Closed Wednesday. Lunch Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday. Dinner every night but Wednesday. Low to moderate.

L'ESCALE Le Meridien Hotel, 2000 Second Street, Coronado, 435-3000. This is the casual dining room that faces the pool at this first-rate hotel. Take advantage of the various fixed-price meals or the all-you-can-eat jazz brunch served Saturday 11:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. or the Sunday brunch which is more extensive and costs more. Try French onion soup, lobster over linguine, grilled swordfish. On Sunday night the cost for dinner for two is $30.00 and includes soup or salad, entrée, dessert, and wine. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low to moderate expensive.

PRIMAVERA RISTORANTE 932 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 435-0454. This excellent northern Italian restaurant, and surely one of the best in Coronado, features fine pasta, seafood, fish, risotto (rice) dishes, and a variety of meat dishes. Be sure to try the gnocchetti (dumplings in a scampi sauce), tortelloni with mushrooms, or the angel-hair pasta with prosciutto and herbs. Outstanding entrées include salmon Piemontese (with shrimp in a lobster sauce), calamari and clams with spinach, grilled lamb chops, or any of the nightly specials. Handsome setting, first-rate service. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

TOMATOES PLUS: A CALIFORNIA BISTRO 4346 Bonita Road, Bonita, 479-8494. Here's a low-cost California-cuisine restaurant with very friendly atmosphere, very good preparations for the money, and a menu that offers 15 entrée salads, 15 pasta entrées, and nightly specials. You can make a meal from chili or homemade soup served in a bowl made from bread, or any of the excellent salads. Pasta dishes arrive with soup or salad. The home-style soup is a knockout. Nonfat or low-fat oils used in cooking. Great fun. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low.

TIJUANA

(The prefix for all Tijuana numbers is 011-52-66. From the United States use the prefix 011-52-66 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's six-digit number.)

BIRRIERIA GUANAJUATO Avenida Abraham González 102, Colonia Francisco Villa, 37-70-70. The amazing aspect of this restaurant high in the Tijuana hills is that the menu, limited to roasted baby goat (cabrito) and melted cheese pancakes (gorditas), is authentic, tasty, fresh, and unbelievably low in cost. No-frills picnic tables and benches and no Americans. It's worth the effort to find this place. Take downtown offramp to Third. Consider Avenida Revolución "A" Street. Count down the streets until you arrive at "H." Turn left at "H," turn right on Fourth and go all the way up the hill to Colonia Altamira, then turn onto Francisco Villa. A true dining adventure. Be sure to arrive as early as possible, before food runs out. Open daily, continuous service, 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. closing. Low.

BUENOS AIRES Paseo de los Héroes 9415, Suites 8 and 9, Plaza Fiesta, Zona Rio, 84-75-02. If you've never sampled Argentinian food you should do so in this charming restaurant next door to La Taberna Española, one flight up. It offers a cold appetizer platter, Plato Argentino, that holds meat stuffed with spinach or grated carrots, tongue, kidneys, and two types of empanadas, pastries filled with ground beef or cheese. Argentinian menus always provide Italian specialties and the cannelloni here is excellent. Should you adore grilled meats, try the parrillada, with the grill brought directly to the table, filled with steak, sausage, and sweetbread. If you'd prefer less exotic fare, try soup, empanadas, a pasta dish, and rolled breast of chicken. The service is excellent, the hostess-owner is delightful, and the prices are low. Menu is printed in Spanish, but the waiter speaks perfect English. Closed Sunday. Open Monday through Saturday, 1:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Low to low moderate.

CAFE LA ESPECIAL 718 Avenida Revolución, between Calle 3 and Calle 4, 85-66-54. Robust tacos, enchiladas, chiles rellenos, tamales, egg dishes, and steak have been prepared at this unpretentious but good café for decades. La Especial is a favorite for families who want to eat at low cost. The stairway leading down to the dining room opens on Revolución, and the covered bazaar that extends beyond is a prime tourist attraction. Open daily. Continuous service, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Low.

EL FARO DE MAZATLAN 9542 Boulevard Sanchez Taboada, Plaza Financiera, Zona Rio, 84-88-82 or 84-88-83. This fish and seafood restaurant offers a gorgeous dining room, an extensive menu with English translations, and fresh fish and seafood items which include abalone, squid, crab, clams, shrimp, and lobster. The atmosphere and service are lovely, but the fish may be too dry. The style of cuisine will appeal to those who prefer simple preparations. The price of the main course includes an appetizer (fried fish plus ceviche), seafood soup, and Mexican rolls. Open daily, 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m., same menu for lunch and dinner, continuous service. Moderate.

LA FONDA ROBERTOS La Sierra Motel, Old Road to Ensenada, 16 Avenida de Septiembre, 86-46-87. Unusual regional specialties are found here. Beef tongue in sesame seed sauce, spicy shredded pork with artichoke seeds, two preparations of chicken, a half dozen of steak. Don't miss the soups or chile en nogada. Portions are small, so two people may order three entrées. Take the Old Ensenada Highway to Agua Caliente Blvd.; the sign there reads, "Blvd. Cuauhtemoc Suroeste." Robertos is in the motel just after the road veers right. Closed Monday. Low to moderate.

LAS CARNES 10471 Paseo de los Héroes, Zona Rio, 34-27-21. The menu at this immaculate restaurant consists of one entrée, thin grilled steak called cubreria, and half a dozen side dishes. One order of steak amply serves two or three, and it's best with a side order of grilled green onions and sautéed white onions. Some may like the enhancement of roasted chiles. Quesadillas and melted cheese are only of marginal interest, but they cost so little that you may order the entire menu, which is served from opening to closing. Don't allow yourself to be talked into too much steak. Very swift, streamlined service. Open daily, 1:00 p.m. to roughly midnight. Low to low moderate.

MR. FISH 6000 Blvd. Agua Caliente, 86-36-03. It's good fun to eat in this restaurant with its thatched roof and its wide variety of fish and seafood. For example, it's possible to have a half-dozen preparations of oysters; an appetizer served in a tall glass that combines ceviche, abalone, oysters, shrimp, and conch; and shrimp may be combined with mango curry in tequila, garlic butter, or cheese. Don't overlook the whole fish, either steamed or fried, the filet in garlic butter, or, for those who'd like a smorgasbord, the "Combination Mr. Fish" supplies fresh lobster, shrimp, squid, and a filet of fish. The half-dozen preparations of crêpes are wild — there's even a Mexican version of blintzes. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Follow Revolución until it bends to the left and becomes Agua Caliente. Continue past the twin high-rise towers. Mr. Fish is on the right-hand side of the road, just before the country club. Moderate.

OFF THE CUFF by Lin Jakary

What did you wait too long to do in your life?

Doris Tottori

Art Student

I wish I had done what I really wanted to do sooner — follow my own instincts. Trust them, really. I wanted to go to art school, but my father kept saying, "What kind of eligible men are you going to meet in art school?" My mother would say, "You're not going to be able to have nice things if you blow it all on art." My brother kept telling me it would be a waste of my brains. I guess just to please everybody I went into a pre-med program, then I did my master's in biology. After that I got a job at a lab. Four years, being couped up in a little room with no windows counting thousands of assays — I hated it! I decided I'd made a terrible mistake and I quit. I'm taking art classes now and I love it. I meet people every day who are more like-minded. The men aren't a bunch of raving lunatics like my dad suggested. My science education isn't all wasted. It really helps to have some perspective on human anatomy and physiology when you're working. You can get very interpretive and your piece still has a basic feeling of movement and form. I really love figurative sculpting. I don't know where this will all lead, but I'm enjoying the heck out of it.

I grew up in a little village of Kettering, north of London where they still had party lines. That's when your telephone was actually linked with a neighbor's line. My parents caught me listening on the party line once and reprimanded me. They had the attitude that the telephone should only be used for emergencies. We just weren't allowed to use the telephone. It wasn't until I went away to school that I realized that people actually conversed by telephone just for pleasure. For the longest time I think people actually thought I was touched. I would never call first because I thought that was rude. I would just drop in on people. Well, to tell you the truth, for the longest time I didn't have a telephone. Finally I got one. At first, when someone called me and it wasn't urgent, I would make up some excuse to get off. Then I grew accustomed to it. Now I'm married and I have a wife and a six-year-old daughter, both of whom love to chat on the telephone. I regret that it took me so bloody long to make my first call.

I hope I don't corrupt some teenager by this answer, but I waited too long to have sex the first time. I grew up in a Catholic family that emphasized abstinence. You know, if you did "it" you were committing a terrible sin. In college I always held out too. I broke up with a very special man in my life over it. My mother always said that if a guy couldn't wait until marriage he didn't respect you. And our teachers used to say things like, "Men don't want spoiled goods." As if we were commodities. Then I met my future husband, who seemed perfect. I thought he respected me. He didn't mind waiting. I was incredibly naive. Unfortunately things didn't change much after we were married. As it turns out, he was gay but he hadn't even admitted it to himself yet. Now he's very happily living with his lover. I felt cheated. When I finally met my second husband, I couldn't believe what I had missed all those years. All those wasted years! I think teaching respect, responsibility, and giving accurate birth control information is the best thing you can give to young people. Give them choices, not ultimatums.

My Auntie Monique was my mother's godmother, and she always came to Rochester to visit us over the holidays. She was a very sweet, full-of-life person who seemed to really like me. I admired her a lot. She always invited me to come up to Montréal to spend some time with her. It's something I always planned on doing but things got in the way. Like in high school I was going to go up there, but I made the cheerleading squad and we had practices for routines that summer. To make a long story short, by the time I got up there to see her, she had leukemia and was very ill, very weak. I only spent three days with her, and I felt bad that I hadn't done this way sooner. This wonderful woman, this wonderful city, I had missed out on because I didn't make the time. Now, when I go to Montreal it's like I feel her presence there. I don't mean this in a spooky way, but it's like she's still there for me. She always encouraged me to really follow my heart.

There's a bunch of things — learning to play an instrument, traveling, learning a second language. Those are things you always plan on doing eventually, then you find yourself almost 30 years old and you wonder what happened. I think breaking up with a long-time girlfriend kind of triggered all of this. I have a friend who's teaching me to play the guitar. I traveled down to Costa Rica this spring. I just recently started taking an adult-ed Spanish course. Knowing Spanish could have really benefited me on the job, with all the people I come in contact with. I had the opportunity to learn at a very young age. Both my grandparents on my mother's side are Hispanic. I spent a lot of time with them as a kid, but it was the old "I'm an American, why do I need another language?" Now it's a lot tougher to learn for me. They say kids naturally pick it up if they're encouraged. I have a nine-year-old niece in Los Angeles who is speaking Japanese. She's in one of those bilingual programs. It's pretty cool. It'll give her an advantage in life.

Phone Matches™ Success Stories:

Alma Stone and Jerry Sleeper

PETITE GEMINI, high energy, adventurous, brunette, enjoys exploring unique places, moonlight walks, dancing, conversation. Incurable romantic seeks special someone with intense eyes, good looking, nice body, strong shoulders, 33-43. ☎

Alma: A friend of mine talked me into placing my Phone•Matches™ ad. I admit I was hesitant at first; I thought personals were just for weirdos.

Jerry: And I just happened to be looking through the Reader for some parts for my drum kit. I'm also a Gemini, so I thought I'd call her voice mail.

Alma: I got over 100 responses. That made me feel really good. I listened to every one, but there was no way I could respond to them all.

Jerry: Then she heard mine.

Alma: His voice hooked me. It's true! Something in Jerry's voice just reached out and grabbed me.

Jerry: We spent six hours on the phone that first night. She came over the next night for dinner.

Alma: I felt real comfortable doing it, too.

Jerry: When Alma walked through the door, I said …

Alma: He said, "Oh god, that's the one for me!" And I felt like I had come home.

Jerry: Whoever says that "love at first sight" doesn't exist, hasn't been there.

Alma: We just connected so well.

Jerry: We haven't missed a day together since that night.

Alma: Jerry's sense of humor just lifts me up and makes me feel warm and happy inside all the time.

Jerry: You've got to keep smiling. We make each other feel younger. A sense of humor is a must!

Alma: Jerry's a poet and a musician. He's sensitive, yet rugged. He makes me feel beautiful and wanted.

Jerry: Alma's everything I've ever wanted in my life. I figure, on this earth, every lady has one man, and every man has one lady. I was lucky enough to meet the one for me — and smart enough to keep her happy.

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

San Diego's Civic Center under construction, circa 1937. First listed on the city's master plan in 1926, the center's harborfront construction was delayed through several years of political infighting; not until the mid-30s and the intercession of the federal Works Progress Administration was the first spadeful of dirt dug. A federal grant paid $1.7 million of the center's cost, while the remainder was paid for with city and county funds. President Franklin D. Roosevelt dedicated the building on July 16, 1938.

Although the building was shared by both city and county interests for many years, in 1963 the city signed over its interest in the then-$66 million center to the county. In return, the county agreed to pay the city $3.3 million in four interest-free installments. The following year, the city moved into its new 14-story city hall in the Community Concourse.

ROOMMATES

READER ROOMMATE TIPS. Finding someone that you like and trust enough to share your home with isn't always easy. However, by following these commonsense tips, the search for a compatible roommate will be easier: 1) Take the time to conduct a phone interview before scheduling a personal meeting. Is the person employed with a reliable source of income? Is the person similar to, or compatible with you? Why is the person seeking a new living situation? 2) When scheduling your initial meeting with a prospective roommate in your home, make sure you have someone else there with you — another roommate, a friend or a family member. If you are answering roommate ads, take along a friend when you go to check out a living situation. 3) Finally, take enough time to make a thoughtful decision on whom to choose, and trust your instincts.

Respond to Roommate Ads Free

Yes, it's free to call ads that list the Roommate Response Line 235-2297. By using the 5-digit extension number included in the ad, you will hear the advertiser's recorded description of his or her roommate needs. You can then leave a message if you like.

Get a jump on your competition. Hear the newest ads before they're printed. Call the Roommate Hotline!

Soon after an advertiser places an ad, his or her spoken introduction goes on the Roommate Hotline. This means you can hear new roommate ads before they appear in the Reader. You can access the Hotline 24 hours, 7 days a week by calling 1-900-844-4663. The cost is just 49¢/minute and you can select the listings by gender, price range and area. Don't wait until the deadline ...

Place your Reader roommate ad today and get responses tomorrow!

Even if it's 2 am on a Friday morning, you can pick up your phone and place your ad on our computer. You could get responses within 24 hours and have a roommate by the end of the weekend! For just $16/week you get the following:

A 25-word printed ad in the Reader

which contains a general description of your roommate situation. You can now place your roommate ad 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, from any touch-tone phone by calling into the Reader Roommate Line at 235-2415.

24-hour voice mailbox service which will allow you to leave a 60-second recorded message describing in detail your available roommate situation. If you're looking for a roommate who shares your passions for Cole Porter tunes, popcorn at midnight and volleyball games at the beach, this is your opportunity to say so and more. We will also use this recording to write your 25-word printed ad.

Respondents who see your ad in the paper will call into the free response line, hear your detailed mailbox message and leave a message for you. At your convenience, you can call 235-2415 day or night, pick up your messages and choose whom to call back.

Get response before your ad appears!

Soon after you record your mailbox message, it will be placed on the Roommate Hotline. Respondents who call the Roommate Hotline will have access to your recorded message before the Reader even hits the streets on Thursday. If you record your message on Monday, you could be interviewing potential roommates on Wednesday and collecting rent on Thursday!

To place your roommate ad, call 235-2415 day or night.

For questions regarding Roommate ads call 235-8200, ext. 265.

1. Pay with Visa, MasterCard, Discover, check or cash.
The cost is $16. However you pay, you must first call 235-2415 to place your ad.

2. Prepare to record your one-minute message (about 125 words) for your voice mailbox. Follow the sample message below:

State your neighborhood first.

We will use the first 25 words of your verbal message as your printed ad in the Reader.

When you are finished recording, press 2.

Please tell us about yourself and don't forget to leave your phone number and the best time to reach you. Thanks!

3. Write your __ mailbox number __ & __ security code __.

4. To retrieve your messages
call 235-2415. You may get responses on the hotline before your ad is printed, so call frequently. Messages are erased after you hear them, so be sure to have a pen and paper ready. Your mailbox will expire at midnight, the Wednesday following publication.

5. The deadline for placing voice mail ads is Monday at 1 pm; however, print ads can be placed until Tuesday at 6 pm by calling 235-8200. All voice mail ads will be placed on the Roommate Hotline within 24 hours. So call today!

No cancellations accepted. Advertisers are responsible for checking their Roommate ads for accuracy and reporting errors by 11 am, Tuesday, following publication.

6. To renew your mailbox
If you don't need to make any changes, you may renew your mailbox by calling 235-2415 and choosing the renewal option. You may renew your mailbox Thursday through Monday 1 pm.

Respond to Roommate Ads Free

Yes, it's free to call ads that list the Roommate Response Line 235-2297. By using the 5-digit extension number included in the ad, you will hear the advertiser's recorded description of his or her roommate needs. You can then leave a message if you like.

Get a jump on your competition. Hear the newest ads before they're printed. Call the Roommate Hotline!

Soon after an advertiser places an ad, his or her spoken introduction goes on the Roommate Hotline. This means you can hear new roommate ads before they appear in the Reader. You can access the Hotline 24 hours, 7 days a week by calling 1-900-844-4663. The cost is just 49¢/minute and you can select the listings by gender, price range and area. Fire in the Belly

By Anne Albright

Kid Stuff

All this heat brings out the white trash in me. Two summers ago, when I was pregnant with Rebecca, I worked in an air-conditioned office. We had a few hot, muggy spells back then, but I didn't suffer much. The worst was coaxing thick, tight support hose up my sweaty, swollen legs. Once I walked into the office, I couldn't have cared less that by noon you could maybe fry eggs on Broadway.

The past week I've had a hard time thinking about anything but How Hot It Is. I am 19 weeks pregnant, one week shy of halfway. Things happen to a woman's body when she's pregnant that make heat hard to take. Your blood volume doubles. You retain water. The extra fluid makes it difficult to cool off. I end up feeling like one of those fat, blowzy women you see lazing around in her housecoat and fanning herself all day in a Tennessee Williams play.

Being pregnant in this heat has made me do things I never imagined I'd do. When I shopped on Monday, I hadn't anticipated the heat and the fact that I wouldn't want to cook in the evenings. Instead of preparing the food I bought for the week's meals, we went out to dinner or ordered something in every night. By Thursday morning I had a refrigerator full of meat going bad. So at 10:00 that morning, sweat soaking my maternity dress, I found myself standing barefoot in the kitchen, simultaneously frying up hamburger and broiling chicken while Rebecca emptied the kitchen cabinets onto the floor.

The rest of Thursday wasn't any cooler. After I got the meat cooked, I dragged Rebecca's wading pool into the shade on the back porch and filled it partway with tepid water from the garden hose. Rebecca and I climbed in, Rebecca in her diaper and I in my shapeless maternity bathing suit. Rebecca sprayed me with the hose and staged horrible shipwrecks of her Noah's ark toy against the mountain of my belly. It was the only time all day I didn't sweat.

By the time Jack got home that night, I was lying on the living room floor with my dress pulled up around my waist and my feet propped up on the couch to keep my ankles from swelling. Poor Rebecca kept climbing onto my legs, hoping for a bounce or two of "This is the way the ladies ride." I tried to distract her with books and toys. I told Jack I'd heat up the already-cooked hamburger or chicken, but he said the house was like a furnace. So we went to the coolest place we could think of, the food court and ice-skating rink at University Towne Centre.

University Towne Centre

It was cool, but not as cool as I thought it would be. Jack wouldn't let me throw myself facedown onto the ice. Instead we ordered pizza and watched the ice-skating lessons. Some of the skaters seemed impossibly young. A group of children, following a cheerful-looking instructor around a corner of the rink, were bundled up in tights, skating skirts and long-sleeved sweaters. I longed to be cold enough to need a sweater.

In contrast to the food court's and our car's air conditioning, the house only felt warmer when we walked back in our door at 7:00. The thermostat read 87 degrees. We gave Rebecca her bath in lukewarm water and let her stand in front of a fan to dry. Each time the warm air cooled the water on her body, she gave us an angelic smile. She went to sleep without complaining. Jack and I should be so good.

I have a hard time sleeping in the heat even when I'm not pregnant. One of the running disputes in our marriage is whether we have enough blankets on the bed. Jack would sleep under only a sheet in the middle of winter. I need the weight and heft of blankets and comforters to feel secure. Lying on a bed with nothing covering me, I feel as though I might fly up in my sleep and find myself pinned to the ceiling.

Some people like a fan's "white noise." Jack told me he had a girlfriend once who needed a fan to fall asleep even in winter. Not me. The incessant whir and periodic clicks as the fan oscillates invade my dreams.

Thursday night we had an awful time falling asleep. I kept waking up thinking I heard people opening doors or sliding glass windows. I lay in the dark straining to hear creaking footsteps over the sound of the fan. If the heat doesn't break soon, I think I may.

Cop Killer Apprehended

By Alfredo Cardenas

SAN DIEGO ★ TEXAS

• Guadalupe "Pico" Guajardo made one telephone call too many and as a result he is now in a prison cell in the Texas Department of Corrections. The escaped cop killer was apprehended on August 10 in Willis, north of Houston.

• The Duval County jail is holding a 29-year-old San Diego man, Frank Garza III, on a $100,000 bond for allegedly "punching and kicking" a 22-year-old local woman on August 12. This is one of two aggravated assault cases being investigated by the San Diego police.

• Alice resident Raul Martinez has entered a guilty plea in Duval County Court in the case involving illegal dumping on property located adjacent to the west San Diego city limits. County Judge Gilberto Uresti fined Martinez $3000 but then suspended the fine in lieu of Martinez performing 1000 hours of community-service restitution.

• It was a day for incumbents in balloting for school-board offices held on August 13. The San Diego school election clearly drew the most interest with over 2000 votes being cast and a number of charges of voting irregularities being made.

• The legal battles for the building of new San Diego schools stepped up a notch on August 17. In a courtroom in Alice, school attorney Mark Paisley asked that the Archer Parr–initiated suit be transferred to Duval County. Another hearing is already scheduled in Duval County's 229th District Court on August 22.

San Diego Chamber of Commerce officials present Pan de Campo checks

• San Diego Chamber of Commerce president Tommy Molina and chamber directors Bibi Casas and Celia Garcia presented checks to organizations who helped with the recent Pan de Campo. Receiving checks were: E.B. Garcia, Rotary Club president; Jose H. Jimenez, Kiwanis Club president; and Sheriff Santiago Barrera Jr., on behalf of the Sheriff's Office Reserves.

Money's Like Rain

By Ed Bedford

TIN FORK

Downtown: "Bunks," says the first sign, "$9.00 a night." "Tom's Special," says the second sign. "Fried chicken and potato wedges, $1.99."

Now that's two great deals. The $9 sleeps are offered at the hotel Capri, one of those low '30s buildings that cower under the shadow of the high-rise jail (the "Downtown Hilton" as its occupants fondly call it; officially the Metropolitan Correctional Center). The food offer is stuck in the window of the Capri Deli, a modest little place that, when you think about it, looks quite like a little French sidewalk cafe with its white wrought-iron grillwork and its white tables on the street and its ivy planters kind of protecting you from passing customers.

That's the thing about this street — it has to be the shortest and quietest and tree-est in 'Diego. It's a bit of E Street that's been cut off by the brown Federal Building at one end and inner-city-renewal apartments at the other. You're in bail-bond land here. "Bail By Linda." "Sherif and Sherif, Abogados En Leyes." Little photo shops to snap your ID. "Fotos A El Mas Bajo Costo." Here you see ladies one flight up lolling in the heat on their window sills reading the afternoon papers, and old gents sitting on the hotel steps below passing the afternoon chatting and smoking and coughing.

I'm hovering, staring at the gastronomic bargains on colored pages Scotch-taped to the window. "Myla's Everyday Special," says a scarlet card. "Taco salad, beef or chicken, w/flour tortilla, beans, cheese, guacamole, sour cream, and salsa: $3.29." Next to it, a green sign says: "Tom's Pizza, 8-inch cheese: $2.99."

Tom and Myla. Myla and Tom.... "Yeah!" says a wild-haired, blond street guy seeing me hesitate. He nods me in with shakes of his head, then lopes on down the sidewalk.

"You Tom?" I say to the guy with the ponytail behind the counter.

"That's me," he says.

"I'll have one of your specials," I say.

"Which one?" he says.

"The chicken leg and potato wedges." This dude has obviously been round the block. He's 40-something. Wears a ponytail. Has handled people before. Yet seems gentled by life, not toughened. I pay over my $1.99 (plus tax), and 75 cents for a small coffee, total $2.88.

I'm sitting outside when a Filipino-looking lady — this has to be Myla — brings the chicken. It's long, red, and spicy, and it comes with lettuce and tomato and a mound of golden-skinned potato wedges slowly drowning in cheese. I start chewing and watching the street-life.

Of course, this ain't no Champs Elysees. No chic mademoiselles walking their poodles. More likely bums hauling their life along in their supermarket carts. But at least the people here talk to you. The wild-haired blond guy comes back, sits down, asks for change, then wants a sip of my coffee. All quite innocently. He's in my space but there's no aggression. I say yes to a greenback, and, uh, no to the coffee-sharing. He looks happy with the deal, and waltzes off down the street. Me, I'm back into my chicken. Yum. It's nice and spicy, and the potatoes are a bread-crumb-encrusted, cheese-soaked triumph. Can't believe it's all for a buck-99.

"I know what people here can afford," says Tom. "I live here at the Capri too." He's a retired Marine, 23 years in the service. "I was in Vietnam, twice. But believe me, this job is more difficult than that." Tom didn't have any permanent job when he started living in the hotel Capri last year. Then the manager asked him if he wanted to run the deli next door.

"I said 'yeah,' even though I'd never cooked before, never been a businessman, didn't know anything about the paperwork involved. Those first few months were tough. For a while here I didn't think I was going to make it. Ordering, bookkeeping, health inspections...." He looks across to Myla cooking a patty on the grilltop. "Fact is I'd have been lost without Myla." He draws a line with his foot across the floor where the kitchen proper starts. "From here on, that's her territory. I cross that line, life's not worth a plug nickel."

Myla and Tom

It turns out Tom and Myla (she's from Luzon and has a husband in the Navy) have taken on much more than running a cheap restaurant. They also supply meals to residents of the Capri. Three meals a day, seven days a week. People, some wards of the state, who need a kind of helping hand. "As a matter of fact that's the thing that means most to me about this place," says Tom. "It's not the money. As Myla says, money's like rain. It comes and it goes. But we're an important part of these people's lives. This is what gives me real pleasure."

"Come back Thursday," says Myla, "when we have Filipino day. Chicken or pork adobo, pancit — noodles and veggies— lumpia and fried rice. Big plate! $3.99."

"Or come back on a Friday," says Tom. "Roast beef dinner. Baked potato, corn and salad, $3.99."

Who can refuse? Nice people, good food — and the best bargain around — and if you start to feel sleepy there's always that $9 bunk next door.

SPORTING BOX

Major league baseball may finally be making money despite reports that all 1324 teams are in Chapter 11. Every day the strike continues, ball teams save that day's players' salaries. What a deal.

Team	Daily Pay Savings
New York Yankees	$225,082
Atlanta Braves	$209,937
San Francisco Giants	$208,896
Cincinnati Reds	$208,284
Toronto Blue Jays	$203,762
San Diego Padres	$69,776*

*The Padres will also save big money in Tide detergent and bathroom tissue, minus the day's take from seven public phone booths.

From the "Tighten up your belts" file: Among those eddies and pools of humanity affected by the baseball strike are food banks, institutions that feed the homeless, and those blessed with a simple palate. Many baseball teams send their greasy, yummy, hot dogs, quarter-inch burgers, and sloppy nachos that you tightwads don't buy to local food banks. The San Francisco Giants send between 2 and 500 pounds of delicious and wholesome food after every game. The Oakland A's do likewise. The Pods, since they draw well over 200 fans for every home ball game, will leave San Diego animal shelters short this month.

I made that last part up.

It's still party time for major league umpires. They'll be paid through the end of the regular season. Their union contract covers them for the first 75 days of a work stoppage. Umpire pay is good, $60,000 to $175,000, and there's no heavy lifting.

From the "Why we miss baseball" file:

I miss the institutionalized boredom
I miss following the exhilarating San Diego Padres
I miss something to watch on TV before Lassie
I miss watching grown men chew gum
I miss watching grown men spit
I miss watching grass grow
I miss counting all the advertisements on the outfield fence
I miss three-dollar warm beer in plastic cups
I miss all the caring, wonderful people who work in baseball
I miss hearing the TV guy say, "5 to 4, 3 to 1, 4 to 3, 3 to 2."

From the "Where is the West in Big West football" file: We've been swamped with requests asking how the Big West football conference is shaping up this year. As readers undoubtedly know, the Big West conference is an assortment of outlaw colleges and colleges where you send your most ungrateful child. Schools like Vegas, Pacific, San Jose, Utah, New Mexico State. Recently the Big West has expanded, thereby bringing even more excitement to the national collegiate gridiron scene.

You saw it here first, the annual Big West preview.

Southwestern Louisiana: a football powerhouse that managed one Division 1-A victory during 1991 and 1992, joined the formidable Big West last year and became co-champions right out of the box. This year, the Ragin' Cajuns return seven starters. Coach Nelson Stokley has the poop, "Our greatest strength is our ability to run the football. Speed is still the name of the game defensively." Look for the same, boring, hack, grind 'em game that has put thousands to sleep.

Northern Illinois: Not one prospective quarterback has played varsity ball.

Arkansas State: Last year 2-8-1. Bye-bye to 1000-yard–running back Marquis Williams, who transferred to Louisiana State. Team will do well to muster two wins.

Louisiana Tech: Last year played the conference schedule plus Tennessee, South Carolina, and Alabama. Against those three teams, they lost 140 to 6.

Check your cable listings for the next, electrifying, BIG WEST conference football game coming to your home-entertainment compound.

Next week, the NFL, another greedy monopoly, but at least one that can manage its business, returns. Regular readers will recall the pigskin format: the Box goes up against two champion handicappers, we each pick three games each week based on the Vegas Line, keep a tote, the winner receives free airplane tickets and worthless trinkets.

For the last two years the winner has not been known until after the Super Bowl. It's been down to the wire, folks. Back again this year is longtime Sporting Box adviser, Nevada Bob, a high-stakes sports gambler, lives in Vegas, one of a hundred people who makes a fat living from sports betting. We're talking a 20-year veteran. The Box will be looking forward to Bob's inside analysis.

And, in this corner, we have the reigning champion, coming back for a second year, the promising rookie, Any Patron at Downtown Johnny Brown's. Yes, fans, every Tuesday the Box calls Downtown Johnny Brown's, a fine eatery and cocktail lounge tucked right across the promenade from the San Diego Civic Center. I call in and Tuesday's bartender asks whoever is sitting at the bar, namely, Any Patron, for his or her three picks. Last year, Any Patron scored an astounding 61 percent winning average and won the Sporting Box crown. Nevada Bob did not speak to me for three months.
