WHEN BRIDGES FALL DOWN

ENGINEERS LIE AWAKE AT NIGHT

...
Venue for Mentally Challenged Squeezed for Cash

By Jeff Milchin

The voice on the phone is blustery. "The government," she says. "It can't be bothered. It gets worse every week. That is why I have acted."

We are on speakerphone, standing in the entrance of a large, nondescript building. It is a typical Thursday morning for the City of San Diego's largest provider of mental health services. The business is normal, but there's a sense of urgency in the air. The voice on the phone is getting agitated. "We need to find a way to fix this," she says. "We need to find a way to make sure the mentally challenged get the support they need."

Presz's Rubber Chicken Circuit Runs Straight Through La Jolla

By Melanie Probst

San Diego is fast becoming one of the hot spots for the 1996 presidential campaign — even though the election is more than two years away. Republican presidential candidates including John Anderson, Ross Perot, Pat Buchanan and Richard Kinder have all made appearances in the area. But one candidate, a surprise name, has made a strong impression on the San Diego political scene: Alphonse Presz.

Presz is a 26-year-old browser who lives in La Jolla. He is known for his古怪 ideas and his ability to make people laugh. Some have referred to him as the "rubber chicken king of La Jolla."

Presz's campaign is built around the idea of using rubber chickens to draw attention to his various campaign platforms. He has already started his campaign with a series of rubber chicken-themed events around the city. His most recent event was a rubber chicken race at the San Diego Zoo, where he offered to donate all the proceeds to charity.

"I'm running for president," Presz said during the race. "And my first order of business will be to bring rubber chickens back to the White House."

Will Presz's rubber chicken campaign catch on? Only time will tell. But one thing is for sure: San Diego is definitely a hot spot for the 1996 presidential campaign.

To Shop Or Not to Shop: Vocational Training Hits Political Skids

By Bill Almonte

Stephen Serna remembers him today, 20 years later. "This kid, he was no hoper. Kid could barely read or write. But Serna tells him to stay in school, go to college, and he finally did. He told him he didn't know what to study. Serna said, 'Try political science.' He did, and he's been in politics ever since.""

Phone Matches Success Stories:

Clint & Kerstin Crowe

Clint: We traveled a lot that first year — Germany, Austria, Utah and a short trip to Mexico. Then Kerstin got deployed. That's when I met up with my mind that I didn't want to lose her.

Kerstin: My visa expired and I went down to the INS office to renew it, but they said I had been in the United States long enough. They sent me over the border to Mexico with nothing — only the clothes I was wearing. I called Clint from a pay phone, crying. "Can you pick me up?"

Clint: I had to sneak her back across the border. Then we got an immigration attorney, and she had to return to Germany and come back again.

Kerstin: I said, "Oh, yah." The INS said we had to get married in three months. So I had to make some quick wedding plans.

Clint: We've been married for a year and a half now. I keep running into other married couples like us, people who found each other in the "Phone Matches." Even my doctor met his wife through the Reader.

Kerstin: You have a much bigger pool of people to choose from, than you would in a bar. I tell people not to give up if they don't meet someone right away. It's like the lottery: if you don't try, you can never win.

Beneath the Pale, White Veil

From the beginning of time, it is believed that the beverage known as wine was discovered by accident when a wild grapevine was left behind by a farmer. The juice from the grapes was left in a vessel and it began to ferment, creating a new beverage. It is said that the ancient Egyptians were the first to recognize the potential of this beverage and began to cultivate grapes specifically for wine production.

Now let's focus on the process of making wine. The process begins with the selection of the grapes. The best grapes are those that are fully ripened and have a good balance of sugar and acidity. Once the grapes are harvested, they are crushed and the juice is extracted. This juice, known as "must," is then fermented with yeast, which converts the sugar in the grapes into alcohol.

The process of fermentation is a critical step in the production of wine. It is during this stage that the unique flavor and character of each wine is formed. The type of yeast used, the temperature of the fermentation, and the length of time the wine is left to ferment all play a role in determining the final product.

Once the fermentation is complete, the wine is stored and aged. This allows the flavors to develop and mellow. Some wines are aged in oak barrels, which imparts a unique smoky flavor. Others are aged in stainless steel vats, which preserve the freshness and purity of the wine.

Finally, the wine is bottled and shipped to the consumer. Each bottle of wine is a unique product, shaped by the terroir of the grape-growing region, the skills of the vintner, and the care taken in the production process. Each sip of wine is a journey through time and place, a connection to the history and culture of the region where it was born.
Lynn Alley set about on a search after someone here who made vinegar.

"My first attempt, I just let the fruit flies land in it and then I dug 'em out and it worked pretty well."

"I then go after one who made a lot of vinegar and she would argue."

"You can't get everything you want, but you can get a lot."

Hip-hop was the most important moral and educational force in their lives.

The San Diego Express hip-hop movement made its way through a series of dazzling displays at street fashions and publications like the now-defunct Alternative magazine. It was a time when the streets were alive with the sound of music, when the boundaries between art and life were blurred, and when the power of the people was felt.

When the rhythm and rhyme took hold, the world changed. The beat was infectious, the lyrics were powerful, and the message was clear: It's time to rise up and take control.

I can't understand why one of the city's most beautiful sites has been allowed to deteriorate.

REVIEW
Eleanor Weimer

Q. I came from the East, where good food was never available. Why do the food chores in Los Angeles take so much longer and cost more than in New York?

A. Preparing food in a city as large as Los Angeles can take forever.

Q. What is the best way to cut onions?

A. The best way to cut onions is to use a sharp knife and a cutting board.

Q. How can I prevent food spoilage?

A. To prevent food spoilage, always keep your refrigerator and freezer at the correct temperature and store food properly.

Q. How do I know if food is spoiled?

A. Food is spoiled if it has an off-odor, unusual color, or texture.

Q. How can I tell if food is raw or cooked?

A. Food is raw if it has an off-odor, unusual color, or texture.

Q. How do I know if food is undercooked or overcooked?

A. Food is undercooked if it has an off-odor, unusual color, or texture.

Q. How do I know if food is cooked or uncooked?

A. Food is cooked if it has an off-odor, unusual color, or texture.

I can't understand why one of the city's most beautiful sites has been allowed to deteriorate.

It's beginning to annoy me of our own. The buildings are placed so far apart that they are almost invisible to the average pedestrian.

Q. I come from the East, where good food is not always available. Why are the food choices in San Diego so limited?

A. San Diego has many fine restaurants, but the cost of living is high. The price of food is relatively high, and the quality of the food is not always consistent. It's a challenge to find good food at a reasonable price.

It's sunset jazz at Victor's Restaurant. Little gems of light come alive in the heart of the city at Mission Bay Golf Resort. Victor's patio is a perfect place to enjoy the sunset. The restaurant offers a large selection of wines and spirits. Enjoy our signature dishes, such as the "Joan on the Green" every Thursday. Reservations are recommended. It's the perfect place to enjoy some of the best local wines and cuisine.

Old Number 54, a "California-type" trolley car belonging to the San Diego Electric Railway Company, sits temporarily idle in this photo circa 1911. It ran on the "K Street Line" from Grant Avenue to 30th Street. Car 54 began life as a standard cable car in the 1890s, 1 of 12 such vehicles. In the summer of 1891, the cable company went bankrupt and 4 of the 12 cable cars were converted into electric streetcars.

In 1902, the cars were converted again, this time into the double-ended "California" models associated with the city of San Francisco. (The second of the cars' two end platforms were actually salvaged from other abandoned cable cars.) Here, conductor Elliott stands at the left side of the photo; the middle man is motorman Cunningham. The chap on the right is unidentified.
