From outside it sounded like a Santeria initiation. I heard the call of the batá drums, then the lead voice, followed by the chorus to Eleggua, the trickster onsha and the spirit of the crossroads:

Moguha o moguba orsha

Sungin Lucumi, the Yoruban language spoken in Cuba, the song came floating out onto Ray Street in North Park from what looked like an old storefront. Inside, I saw three seated bataleros, all of them white, with their twosided, hounglassshaped drums strapped horizontally on their laps. When the lead drummer played a call on the iyá, the largest batá, the second drummer itotele, as a third drummer held down a repeating rhythm on the okonkolo, the smallest batá. The interlocking rhythms, played with six hands, formed a choppy, syncopated conversation, in open and closed tones, that sounded like human speech. And it was, albeit in the African Yoruban dialect. When the iya sounded 'Ogun, the itotele answered with "la topa"; and when the iya spoke "abu," the itotele came back with "kenke."

eanwhile, various bells strung around the mouth of the iyá set off waves of jingling. Two ozen dancers moved across a floor covered with soft mats. A shirtless black youth with skin the color of café latte danced near a 20-ish sylph with long blond hair and a nose ring. A lean, boyish woman with sullen lips and a zebra tattoo across her shoulder danced alongside a tall, full-figured black woman with dreadlocks and a traditional African dress. Sweating in the early-afternoon heat, they gracefully arched and dipped, approximating the movements of Eleggua, a god known to use a hooked branch to push underbrush out of the way.

But this wasn't some toque or possession ritual. No babalaos, the high priests of the Santeria religion, were present. There were no burning candles, no sacrificial animals, and no believers ready to surrender their spirits so that the orishas, the powerful gods and goddesses in the Yoruban religion, could inhabit them. This was an Afro-Cuban drumming and dance class at the Baraka Center for Drum and Dance. And on the grand opening weekend, people were getting a taste of Afro-Caribbean magic as embodied in batá drums.

Less than five minutes away, other San Diegans were pounding on drums. Paulo Mattioli, a diembe teacher and drum builder who grew up in Encinitas but now lives in Los Angeles, was conducting a class in West African percussion. As Mattioli, an Italian-American, played the djembe, a powerful drum that originated in Guinea, his students learned the various hand movements and tones of the instrument. Still farther away, at San Dieguito Park, a gathering of drummers, some of them from men's groups throughout the area, formed a large drum circle and started playing their djembes and other drums. A few were skilled, but most were novices.

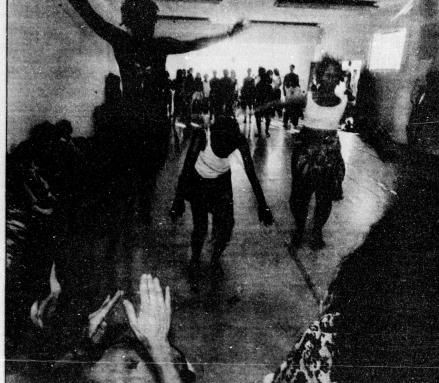

A few hours later, I went to Croce's and heard Gene Perry, a black conga player, lead his Latin band, Afro Rumba, through a set of tropical funk laced with plena and bomba, traditional African rhythms that took root during colonial days in Puerto Rico, where Perry grew up. Afterwards, I stopped off at the U.S. Grant Hotel and caught a late-night set by Equinox, a mediocre Latin jazz band powered by Tommy Aros, a great Mexican-American percussionist who played wickedly funky mambos and rumbas.

And that's the catch, Much of the growing interest in hand percussion features African or African-influenced drumming. But the African drum is a supremely charged icon. The control of their control

There was a time when women drummed. The goddess cults that flourished in places like the Neolithic city of Catal Huyuk, it located in southern Turkey, revolved around sacred drumming and dancing. Painted on the walls of the temples are pictures of primordial percussion instruments: concussion sixtles, clappers and bulleoarers, and stone cylinders that were probably drums.

It's not unreasonable to think there were great female mers in those ancient days. But then came a 5000-year reign

Commonly, and unless I have misunderstood, disparagingly. It should perhaps be said imme-diately, as much in my defense as in theirs, in case? Grombione done is not exculpatory, that the last two of the three showed every intention and ex-pectation of being more than merely the private property of critics (hig bud-gets, hig stars), and that when I first saw them and reviewed them I could not have known for certain that the public would stay away in droves. There were no special perrequisite for admission. No written test had to be passed. No diploma had to be pre-sented at the box-office. The same number of dollars that got you into Acc Ventura: Pet Detective or Interview-with the Vampire could have gotten you into either of these. Concededly, their outward appeal (what's a proxy? who's Ed Wood?) was somewhat less democratic and catholic than, for a recent good example, Dumb and CALVIN AND HOBBES, New Orleans, theater, romance, chocolate, animais, walks on the beach and Gaslamp, 50s rock and roll, dancing, etoulee, hugs, Chardonnay, New York pizza, travel; sursets, Diveland, La Fonda, etimic restaurants, laughter, surny weather, 40+, sensual, cosmoplian professional seeks confident man (40-55) with passion for living!

Harry: I wasn't that interested in getting into a relationship, but her ad was so intriguing. I live and work in the Gaslamp, and La Fonda is one of my favorite places for breakfast.

Jennette: We met on New Year's Eve of 1990, at 4:30 in the afternoon. Within the hour, I went back to his studio to see his pictures of Copper Canyon. I trusted him that much. Then he walked me to Hotton Plaza, where I was meeting some friends.

Harry: Jennette comes from the East Coast, and I'm from the West. She sees the world very differently than I do. That makes it all new and exciting.

Jennette: One of the first things he asked me was, "Are you a typical New Yorker?" I said, "Well, I'm direct."

Harry: We've been able to discuss everything under the sun.

Harry: We just got back from New Mexico, where we found a place we really like. Someday, we'd like to go back and live there, maybe go into the travel business

San Diego Reader Phone Matches

Harry: We're 180 degrees apart on that.

Jennette: At the beginning of this year, that's the last thing I would have thought of, I've been teaching first grade for 27 years! But now I feel that anything's possible.

Harry: If you have to struggle to be in a relationship, it's not worth it. I've always wanted someone who was easy to be with And now I've found her.

ette: We both love to travel, and our first trip was to Morocco, after knowing each other for six month

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Spalding and his second wife, Elizabeth Churchill (Mayer) Spalding, show off one of San Diego's first "horseless carriages" in this circa 1910 photo, probably shot atop Point Loma. Spalding arrived in San Diego in 1900, having made his fortune in the sporting goods business he first opened in Chicago. His wife Elizabeth was the director of music at Madame Katherine Tingley's Point Loma Theosophical Institute. The Spaldings lived in a home adjacent to the institute.

When Spalding died in 1915, a legal battle ensued over the bulk of the estate he had left to Eiizabeth. Heirs from Spalding's previous marriage claimed the will was a result of a conspiracy between his widow and Madame Tingley to benefit the institute. Eventually tiring of the accusations, Elizabeth Spalding settled out of court, keeping only $700,000 of a $1.2 million bequeathment. When Elizabeth died several years later, her will seemed to refute the conspiracy rumors; she left nothing to Tingley and the institute but some old clothes.

Picture Yourself with a Stronger Chin

If you'd like to see yourself with a stronge nin, call Dr. Ronald Hecker and Dr. Craig

Dever of La Jolla Oral & Maxillofacial Surgery.
Using computer imaging software, Doctors Hecker and Dever can give you a clear image of how their new chin augmentation procedure will give you the strong, confident looking chin you've always wanted.

This outpatient procedure leaves no visible scars, is performed in the comfort of their office and is more affordable than you may think.

See how terrific you'll look with a stronger chin! Call 459-0862 for an initial consultation
