Craig Adams, conservation coordinator with the San Diego chapter of the Sierra Club, was surprised to learn of Filner's investment. "I don't think we can tell Bob Filvs. "but we would hope he would carefully consider his investments."

The Sierra Club endorsed Filner in both his races for Congress, Adams says, "and nationally, he has had a very strong record as an environmentalist." Last year, Filner voted against opening parts of the CaliforService utility. On the same day, he sold be-tween $15,001 and $50,000 worth of com-mon stock in KU Energy Company, which own: Kentucky Utility. He reported income from each transaction of between $201 and

"We like as, many people to come as an many people to come out and enjoy the park, so we don't want to deny people the op-portunity. But on the other hand, if we get too many peo-ple in the park, the resources might suffer — like the tidepools. It's a balancing act, which the park service has had to face since it was founded, so people can enjoy parks and keep coming back to parks."

Over the past five years, the park ser-Over the past five years, DiMattio says, the park ser-vice has been studying the impact that humans have on the tidepools. "We have no-ticed a decline in certain species of animals — mus-sels, for one, and sea stars, and abalone, which have vir-tually disappeared from the tidepools," DiMattio says. "Part of the impact might be due to the people who go to the tidepools and take these things, white another part might be the amount of use itself. The tidepools are one of the most popular areas of the park, but they are also one of the most fragile. And while plants and animals can survive, being exposed to dry air and sun and the driving, surf, they cannot withstand, strappling, people nicking trampling, people picking them up, and, of course, peo-ple taking them home." Indeed, according to the General Management Plan, the National Park Service is the National Park Service is gravely concerned about the tidepools. The plan stresses the need "to limit peak visitor use" and "to reduce visitor impacts (trampling, rock turning, and collecting) through limiting visitor be-havior," Io accomplish this To accomplish this the plan says, charging ad-mission may not be enough; other options include "designating paths in tidepools, ro-tating tidepool access to al-low recovery, limiting use to Kids like him, they want the teacher to tell them what to do. They wait for the teacher. If someone hits them, they tell the teacher. French kids just hit back or wait for the teacher to ask them something. I think it's the same with the parents. American parents need to be told what to do, what the rules are. Conformity is important here. But French people, they want to stand out of long.

Today the class is mixed, the kindergarten, first grade, and some second. The tables and chairs are tiny, the walls filled with pages in French. Big numbers, un, deux, trois, quatre, share makes them work harder. A lot depends on the family at home. If the family makes a game of learning French at none — like sciking labels in Frenca around her rooms — the curtains, the sofas, the windows, doors, drawers, knives, forks — then the Lids pick it up. It helps if a parent speaks French too, of course. Where kds sometimes have difficulties is if they don't see why hey're having to learn this second language or finding one parent such was the sofast of the child here and the other resents it recent the control of the child here and the other resents it recent ment up or the child here and the other resents are the child here and the other resents and the child here and the other resents are the child here and the child here and the day of the family at the control of the child here and the child here and the day of the family and the child here and because they're afraid of the adult. I do believe that American idd's contact with adults is more spontaneous." André feets parents are getting a good scholastic deal with his school. Our teachers all have a four-year diploma from a French teaching university, and our school is accredined by the French Ministry of National Education in Paris. A superimedent of schools from the ministry comes once a year to check that we are maintaining our standards. We register with Californ's we superintendent of schools, Also, we make a great effort to coordinate with the California school agenda. In history, for example, we emphasite more of a world wew than California schools, but we do try to focus on events our two countries have in common. Our revolutions, the Bill of Rights, the influence of Thomas Jefferson in France.

Of the proper of the problem of different levels of language proficiency should be noted out next year when they institute a two-tier system.

Of course, it costs. Parents will pay about $5000 per year in the elementary grades, $5300 for sixth and seventh grades. For that you do get two teachers per child and two countries to the state of th lunch tables.

For a moment I let all the sounds of French and English conversations wash over me. Waves of nostalgia for my own school days in France, struggling with the same upfull battles and daily brain strain these kids must be dealing with, learning to think again in order to communicate, like having to learn to walk again. Everything spontaneous has to be worked out, preplanned. Just learning what the subjects mean, redaction, orthographe, explication de textest. The frustration and the fattee can be, as I remember it, overwhelming.

Yet, hope is in the making because of the many positive aspects of Virchis and others like him. As a student at San Diego rligh involved in rigorous Spanish courses, I have attended many Chicano activities around town, among ities around town, among them some of those described in Brown's article like Teatro Campesino and Teatro Más-cara Mágica. These activities are culturally important, just as important as any of the other mainstream plays that people view with the utmost regard.

This article reeks of an ad-dled, drug-induced fantasy, woven by an individual so consumed by his own self-ha-tred and self-pity that his vengeance for the world must be spewed out in fountains of green literary vomit under the would drive them to the Pacific, just before sundown and the long steaming L.A. night. In that silver Packard reeking of cigar, the children laughed and shouted, sang with him, never understanding the words, China nights, a soldier somewhere in Asia, swimming in his solitude, the girl from home. Soon he shuttled them out beneath the night sky, and he talked on the beach of his boyhood in Shingu, his father, going back to Japan for omiyai, their mother. Told them again they'd been born here, this was their homeland, but someday he'd go back to die, rich as an emperor Nonsense, says his wife, as they clamber back, and he opens the door like a chauffeur, tipping his cap. The children giggle. And none of them knows this life is condemned, even as they fall asleep to his humming, syllables that flash and vanish in their dreams years later in Chicago, Stamford, Miami, cities of their small diaspora. They wake, groping, to find the song vanished, a faint wind searing their faces, still scented with sea, cigar smoke, this sadness they cannot name. And each hears only the breathing of a companion, blue shadows of morning betraying a normalcy none of them imagines, sleeping in the back of a Packard in 1930, '36 or '40. These are the years of expectation, elation when he is unbroken, she not yet dream as in the fall of '41, of flames soaring, exploding off the sea, some divine wind raining damnation, disintegration, war.

Remember when banks did not act as for-profit herincine which coals du not act as for-journ harbinger; of doom? Does Wells Fargo know something I don't? There are several things that bother me about this letter, not the least of which is the sketchy use of the word "accident" in the third paragraph: "...in the U.S. an accident occurs every half second...." What does that mean? Car accidents? Ferris wheel mishaps? People choking on meat? Or do they mean some-thing as simple as opening your mail from Wells Fargo? (There's also in the same paragraph the use of the phrase "loved ones" — a phrase that resonates for Mr. Opincar with a wistful, ironic bitterness so profound as to be forever beyond Wells Fargo's understanding. But that's Wells Fargo's understanding. But that's another story, in st. I feel, a question of taste. (Cy perhaps one of pride: I'd like to think it would take more than $1000 to console where the story devastated loved ones over my accidental loss. But I could be wrong. Either way, I resent Wells Fargo the bringing up the question in the first price. While opening my mail from Wells Fargo, the television was on. And coll promotion in the Schotler of th as I read the incredible letter, a commer-cial promoting the Spamburge rappeared on my TV screen. Hence the question of taste, rather, the question of questionable taste, was Late 20th-century America is a society that idly permits its banking institutions to send off willy-milly intimations of mortality to their cus-tomers, a society that advocates, moreover, some-thing called the 'pumburger to fing tallier public. It does not be a society of the comments of the control of the the meaning.

is a society in which the word 'taste' can have lit-die meaning. On more clondy at this Spamburger, commercial, or at as much of it as I can allow myself to remember. There was some fast paced, perky jingle — people actually singing about the Spamburger. There were, I believe, shots of an attractive blond demonstrating in an excited, even Spam when perparing Spamburger. Gerlinning madly, the pert blond held aloft a can of Spam in one hand and made abstract "Oroping" motions at it with the other while an off-screen chorus shots of Spamburgers sizzing above a hibach; 'to wailed "And you slice it like THIS") There were shots of Spamburgers sizzling above a hibach; so glowing charcoal briquettes. (These sizzling Spamburgers even hat the little black grill lines eiched onto their fatty, pink surfaces.) I could be wrong about this but I seem to remember shots of people eating Spamburgers with obvious gusto. With the odor of Spamburgers a sizzlin' in the summer air — death, where is thy sting?

How did we corse to this? How did we arrive at this unfortunate juncture where a bank takes time out of its busy schedule to tell is customer, the could die at any moment and where decent Americans are urged to grill squares of pork-type product as a form of entertainment?

Some people might blaume the moral laxity of the late 1960s. Others might recall the first ugly rattle out of the box coming a senty as the 18th control of the contro know how I missed it until now. I really don't. The advertising trade publications tell me the Spamburger campaign spiked Hormel's profits significantly.)

significantly.]
In this tasteless age, 3.8 cans of Spum are devoured by more than 60 million Americans every second. (Given the statistics provided by Wells Fargo, one would assume that thes folks are among the happy few who mange to avoid catatrophic accidents, no doubt staying safely out of harm's way by stiting still and quietly eating harm's way by sitting still and quietly eating Spam.) Spam's propagandiss also enioy pointing out that enough cans of Spam have been sold to provide a family of four with three melas day for 4.5 million years. As if this weren't enough, each year 100 million pounds of Spam are sold around the globe.

It's a Spamhurger world. Enjoy! Remeinber, you could die any second.

fashion, it combines the disci-plined Classical structures of Beethoven with the Romantic Beethoven with the Romantic spontaneity and expressiveness of Schumann, along with the composer's own unmistakable turns of thematic and har-monic thought, the deep meditative inwardness, the lil-ing dance quality, the noble serenity touched with melan-choly, the sturdy playfulness of mind. The music's inner dramatic program — oothing dramatic program — aothing literal, but intuitively present throughout — is broadly defined by the unusual feature that the Trio begins in B Major and ends in B Minor, whereas the usual procedure. or and ends in B Minor, whereas the usual procedure, when there is a change in mode, is to move from minor-key tragedy to major-key affirmation, as in Brahms's own C Minor Symphony (another example of the rare major-to-minor structure is — curiously — Mendelssohn's "Italian" Symphony).

The Preucil-Thomas-

The Preucil-Thomas-Donohoe performance of the Brahms Opus 8 constituted one of those moments that concert-goes look forward to: an experience of the perfect in-tegration of the musicians' temperaments, the particular nature of the music, and the unpredictable spirit of the ocunpredictable spirit of the oc casion, so that everything seems as right, as deep, as vivid, as meaningful, and as fully alive as either the composer or any listener could ever have imagined. You felt yourself imagined. You felt yourself completely carried away — and the musicians, while as-siduously and attentively doin their jobs, seemed to be in the same exalted state. Chamber music playing does not get better than this.

Woodruff used a technique known as "defamiliarization." Early in this consury the Russian scholar Victor Shdowdys coined the expression ortranente (defamiliarization). Art exists, be wrote, "to make one feel things, to make the stone stone;" Most of un just see the stone. We view the world through a "film of familiarity." Defamil-"film of familiarity." Defami-iarization attempts to dissolve that film. Bertolt Brecht, who stole the concept and called it his "altenation effect," says de-familiarization involves the climination of a single view-point. We see as if through someone clas's eyes. The emotional high points are the guitar solos, screaming, crying, calling out to God, but very part of the song (even or especially the long repetitive vamps) is parts. long repetitive vamps) is para-doxically rich in musical and sonic embellishment even as i constantly gives the impression of stark, spare simplicity. Cindy says the driverless cart gives her says the driverless cart gives her a feeling of spooly manimate ness, no people here, while Christ's small mark is a contrary image of the divine and distant becoming human. I also note the gentleness and poignance of a small mark where one is expecting stigmata. The song veers into self-parody (but consciousless) and effectively, the author breaking his own spell only to imnove a greater one) when the wo images are combined us that the cart roll past the Handy Mart to the Savier's fort, conjuring an image perhaps of a big plastic Jesus out among the theory of the Savier's plastic Jesus out among the bey marke it's Bob's Big Boy. The main thing anyway is how amazingly graceful the entire sound sculpture is, portrait of the urban moment or whatever of the saviety of the saviety one-hour reunion with a close friend who has cll thees stories to abare about what's going on in his life.

It was a stories of the stories o

the "Nutcracker" Suite or a Shirley Temple film. It's an un-usual sound, lilting and magically still both at once, cre-ated by the harpsischord (if that's what it is) and the way it's played and also by the vo-cal phrasing and the delicate, deliberate stops and starts of the melody, the arrangement. It works very consciously as an introduction, an invocation, announcement that we are deannouncement that we are de-parting on a journey together. The final track of the album, "A Dream that Can Last," brings back the instrumenta-bers, and the summer of the control of the performance, benediction and completion, this time punctu-ated by a slow, powerful drumbeat that somehow in-corporates much of the musical topic properties and the control of the since the record began. Now the lead instruments sounds like hammer dulcimer. Whatever. The resonances between the two tracks, and the more sub-ass a whole, are wonderfully ef-fective. The album hangs together as mysteriously and as a whose, are soonerumy effective. The album hange freedings of the soonerably (all one distinct flavor, even with all this splendid variety) as "After the Gold Rush." In addition to the strong sonik links between these bookend songs, notice the themstic bridgings. When dreams come I know I would be a drawn that can last, spooly image and a spooly simulated the songs of the distinct songs of the songs of the distinct songs of the dist

And again. Crazy Horse is a fabulous band. Songs that seemed unremarkable at first, like "Prime of Life," just grow on me, and the groove has everything to do with it. Wow. That rhythm section. The verner I have done. with it. Wow, That rhythm sec-tion. The rumor I heard was that this album was recorded as a kind of continuous re-heural or jam, Just get together day after day and play, no takes, just live recording, and maybe listen to the tapes late to see if you got anything. Long stretches in the studio, in-terrupted because of Kurt Cobain's death, finally back in the mood and then another in-te mood and then another inthe mood and then another in-terruption when someone close to the band was killed in a to the band was killed in a drively shooting. Anyway, if you go through Nell Young's catalog, you'll find how much off is really Crazy Horse's cat-alog as well. What freedom they've attained together. The unselfoonscious musicality of this album is stunning. It creates an environment in which it is possible to imagine greater human community linked by shared values, even as so much external evidence (the elections, the news) seems to say other-size. What music communicates above all else is immediacy of feeling. Barriers and defenses dissolve. When monally, Every emotion is actually a constellation of feeling, and so it is not use as the same and the sam actually a constellation of feel-ings, and so it's not so easy to put what we feel into words. But words and music, in the motion-structure of a song, a performance, do the job very well. They allow for ambiguity. And they also speak eloquently the specifics of the emotional moment the music arises from. with Bruce Berry's was exor-cised on Tonight's the Night

The freshness of the riff is exactly freshness of the riff is exactly what rock and roll at its bes; has always been about. The boldness of the sound sculpture is breatthaking, and the risk pays off beyond any possible expectations. For those of us who thought the digital age might mean the end of such perfect impreferitions, wrong the support of the reference of the property of the reference of t might mean the end of such perfect imperfections, wrong again. How about the tone of that guitar after town to town? This is the whole movie in less than three minutes. A different sort of heartbreaker. Sympathy for our own devils. The song also captures the intensity of the news. With compassion for the who is the survivor, who is the other confused one, who is us, living at this tempo, who is everyman.

It was pointed out to me, after I'd been listening to this album for a little while, that "Western Hero" (fifth song) has exactly the same backing track (different vocals, of course, and different vocals, of course, and different guitar overdubs in sposs) as "Train of Love" (song nine). As soon as it's pointed to it's obvious, but it's pointed to it's obvious, but I on't know howling it might have taken me to notice on my own. Despite all the similarities, the songs don't sound the same, and even now I can't essaily impose "Train" lyrics on "Hero." or vice versa. This is fascinating, It's like a little essay on what gives a song its identity. The low vibrating guitar in "Western Hero" does give a ran "Western Hero" does give it a different mood than the lyrical. Alightly generic. Train of Love," but I think what really Love," but I think what really keeps the songs from sounding alike is the difference in where the title phrase falls in the melodic line western hero at the end of the line (sure enough, he was a western hero) and train of love at the beginning (train of love, racing from heart to heart), so that when we think of or hear each tune the notes/beat/what-ever that we first think of are different, unrelated. Another song pairing within the album, and a delightful mindfusk. This many years into the rock and roll era, how can there still be dumb little bally ricks like this that no one (in my admittedly limited memory) has ever played on su before? > so simplistically outrageous? It's his power, his nature, and he's never lost it. Western Hero' comes closer to being a Nell' Young clicke than anything dee on the album ("Train of lowe" is not fire behind), but it's saved I think by its lack of irony. The measage is refreshingly unclear. The Marilboro Man image (and self-image) of America has changed, the black and white Cattriy for seeming. and white clarity (or seeming clarity) of the frontier or World clarity of the frontier or World War II is gone and how should we feel about this? The singer's not sure. The itener's not sure. The there is most use. The there is most use. The there is most use. The there is most use the single we open fire on him? Wouldn't that be cowardly on our part, now that his ske gun and fron hand are gone. More pairings reveal them-selves. This time we're never exime hast? This time is never.

it comes at the start of the al-bum) assertion in "My Hear". This time I will take the lead somehow. Sleeps with Angle, like so many of Young's al-bums, is about marriage—to hums, is about marriage—to his wife and fam-ily, and his marriage to his work. When shadows climb up the game woll and the first leef fall in Prime of 186", these was it comes at the start of the alwall and the first leaf falls in "Prime of Life," these signs of autumn can be felt as cultural (what's going on out there in the world that he releases al-bums into) as well as personal (he and his wife are getting older). And the message of the song (the mirror shows both ways) seems to me to have to do with the I Ching's advice on how to lead in such a circumstance (even though a sage might feel sad in view of the decline that must follow), Be not sad. Be like the sun at midday. Not surprisingly the theme of nostaigia (personal and cultural) that runs throughout Young's ocu-vre ("Sugar Mountain," "Mansion on the Hill") shows Mansion on the Hill) shows up here as well: When I first saw your face, it took my breath away. But the way Young locates this statement within this song (he speaks of the past but specifically as a gift in the present form the king to the specifically as a gift in the pre-sent from the king to his queen — and to his people too, perhaps) makes it too an act of conscious leadership (do as I do) and generosity of spirit, an act of non-sadness, of renewal. act of non-sadness, of renewal.

Meanwhile, the musical spell the song creates, during the singing of these words and the singing of these words. In the singing of these words and sages between words, is mesmerizing. Firster are several ten-minute songs on Regged Glory, and they're also obviously, invigoratingly long, but "Change dispersional to the support of the series o ferent model.)

When 1 say the album is about marriage, I'm thinking of course of "Change Your Mind." When you take this 14-minute, 40-second song. 14-minute, 40-second songe, and add to it its 6-minute, 20-second coda, "Blue Eden," you get a 21-minute epic pretty much smack in the middle of this (surprisingly listenable). 63-minute extravagana, and it certainly asserts its presence by sheer size (well-balanced, however, by the other major songs, which assert their presence where the presence where songs, which assert their presence through their beauty of their subject matter or both (and then at least four of the lesser songs gain strength by their location within the record and the way they make pairs with each other — an extraor-dinarily well-structured al-bum). So the unambiguous message of "Change Your Mind" — one of Neil Young's earnest, exhortative works, like "Don't Be Denied" or "Don't Let Il Bring You Down" or "Don't Be Denied" or "Don't Let It Bring You Down" or "Last Dance" (you could live your own life) or "Tired Eyes" (please take myalvicy or "Love to Bun" — is powerfully felt throughout this CD and necessarily colors how we listen and respond to every song. In "Sleeps with Angels" the impact of the suicide is described not in terms of a generation or who let it become their some-thing, as he also lets it become their something, so that finally it's this fabulous creation with endless twists and turns and musical subdicties to please us indefinitely that they have built logether.

And perhaps to entphasize the point, which is that "Change Your Mind" is not a jam (it's more like a jazz composition), "Blue Eden," which I regard as the dark side of relationship beaven, a little blues in the night, is credited as a joint composition among the four composition among the four composition among the result of the property of the

The unarmhiguous message of the epic is, you need love. Nell's great, great gift in its phenomenally good at find-ing the right guitar sound(s) and chord sequences to bring home the feeling. He is also very, very good at working with home the feeling. He is also very, very good at working with other musicians, especially if they happen to be Crazy Horse. Enough Already wrestling match. So winkingly, blink-ingly visualized as to take place only in your imagination ingly visualized as to take place only in your imagination. A busy, a crowded, a frantic production design that swallows up anything that moves. A musical score that feels like a headlock. That sort of thing.

Sure, Val Kilmer, even taking into account the overprocessed reproduction of his speaking voice, and even in the pleadingly or chidningly) whether we all are not getting just a little titred fines from the pleadingly or chidningly) whether we all are not getting just a little titred of this or of thing. Time, instead, to fall them, speaking solely below then, speaking solely below the standard solely sole of the villain who had staughtered ins family. Especially when, as in the preceding sequel, there are two villains: enough to go around. Unlike the Penguin and the Catwoman of that earlier sequel, though, these two are not contrasting villains but duplicatCalendar MOVIES ing ones: comparably and competi-tively strident, comparably and competitively strained, comparably and competitively monotonous. And, in another sense, they duplicate the solo villain of the 1989 Batman film as well: from the Joker, Harvey Two-Face gets his acid-scarred (or raspberry-nce and the Riddler trosted) countenance, and the Riddler gets his sense of — I suppose we must call it — humor ("Was that over the top? I can never tell"). Tommy Lee Jones and Jim Carrey, respectively, can bring nothing to the roles but an absence of inhibition. That, and lung power. And the "creative vision" of the new director, Joel Schumache the new director, Joel Schumacher boils down to a messy hybrid of Bur-ton's Batman and Beatty's Dick Tracy Less gloomy than the one, less cheer-ful than the other, less clear than either France, Giuseppe Tornatore has left his sentimental humanism at home in Italy, and for a change of pace plunges into a Polanski-esque thriller, dark, cramped, cryptic, unreal (or irreal) (or surreal), with Polanski himself on cramped, cryptic, unreal (or irreal) or aureal), with Folamsh himself on hand for wildation, in the part of the control of the several occasions, with varying dis-tances of focus): looking up through the silhouetted typewriter keys, and apparently also through the top of the desk, at the face of the police typist.

Smoke, Droll stories, or droll vigenties, or droll vigenties, or droll sketches, of the walking wounded in the vicinity of a Brooklyn cigar store. A pattern of parallelism emerges, or partially emerges. The philosophical storkeeper addresses his eye-patched cx-wife as "Captain Hook" who by the wayda two eyes), and the black garage mechanic in rural lersey wers raul lersey wers rauly mechanic in rural Jersey wears an ac-tual prosthetic hook. The mechanic's wife was killed in a traffic accident, wife was killed in a traffic accident, and he breads over it; a blocked writer's wife was killed in a random shooting, and he too broods over it. The mechanic's long-iost trenge son, who has just survived an incident similar to the one that killed the writer's wife, saves the writer himself from a potential fatal traffic accident. Okay, are eight million tories in the Naked City, and these are five of them. Or thereabouts, Joccasionally, at least City, and these are five of them. Or thereabouts, Occasionally, at least once anyhow, something polignati cocurs: the grieving novellat, paging ceptual? photo album of identically framed anapshot taken outside his shop at the same time of day for 4000 straight day, comes upon some pre-occasionally something amusing: a jump cut from the heights of passion in a family squabble to the depths of delation in its affermath. For the most part, director Wayne Wang's placed. dle, so to speak, to Paul Auster's stillted, bookish dialogue. Harold Perrineau, F., as the long-lost son, is an engaging new screen presence, but unfortunately for him, and even more for us, he usually has to perform opposite William Hurt, who inverte te standard definition of good acting and makes everything look so damn difficult. My hig regret about my review of The Bridges of Mudison Country was my failure to make anything of the contribution of Annie Corley. That I had never before heard of her is a poor excuse. She, as the grown daugher who follows the trail of bread crumbs into the unknown past, and entire any contribution of what a single dealy of the entire approximation of what ahe is getting herself into, is the main reason why Eastwood can get away with his daring delay of the entrances of the two stars, and his no less daring timeouts from them in mid-action. PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Pigurehead of the windjammer Star of India gazes north toward Point Loma. The Star arrived in San Diego in the late 1920s after a group of local ship lovers, led by maritime historian Gerald "Jerry" MacMullen, purchased her for $9000 from the San Francisco-based Alaska Packers Association. (The association ran a fleet from Northern California to the Alaska salmon fishing grounds each spring, returning with canned "pink gold" in the fall.)

The Star hauled much more than salmon during her lifetime; in the late 1800s, she saw service as a British emigrant ship. Then named the Euterpe, the iron bark carried many an ancestor of today's New Zealand families to that lush isle. After being restored over the course of three decades by MacMullen and his friends, the Star of India sailed out of San Diego Bay on July 4, 1976. She has returned to the sea for (abbreviated) voyages periodically since then. (From the Ticor Collection)

Introducing Reader PHONE MATCHES: a great place to meet San Diego

You are provided with a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds. You also receive a free "voice mailbox"— a phone service that allows you to record and receive messages from any touch-tone phone.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free Phone Matches" ad, fill out the coupon below and mail or fax it (233-7907) to us. (If faxing, please photocopy the coupon first and then fax it.) The deadline for receiving free Phone Matches" ads is Saturday at 7 am. No free ads will be accepted over the phone or in person. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number

(to be printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security code for exclusive access to your responses.

You may also place a late ad until 6 pm Tuesday by phone (235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by fax (233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word. Ads placed by phone or by fax are with Visa, MasterCard or Discover only.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MARLBOX:

After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction and listen to your responses. Call 527-1966, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You must have a touch-tone phone.

QUESTIONS? Call 235-8200, ext. 268.

Melinda: Answering the ad was all my roommate's idea. She said, "This is the way you meet nice professional men." So we'd go through the paper together and pick out the good ones. I liked Tom's ad because I've always found Italian men romantic.

Ton: We met outside of Trophy's and I had a rose waiting for her under my front seat. Then we drove over to Seaport Village, walked around for a while, and had a couple of drinks on top of the Hyatt. That night we talked about a lot of different things.

Melinda: He told me he was a Dallas Cowboys fan. My family's from that part of Texas, so that was acceptable. Tom: We went out the very next night to see Carlito's Way.

ITALIAN, 31, single. Hi ladies, I'm just a nice guy seeking a woman to treat like a lady! Honesty, communication a must. Offer you can't refuse!

Ton: I would advertise in spurts, depending on whether I was dating someone or not. This ad got three responses.

Do you have a Phone Matches"

Melinda: A nice romantic movie. He also gave me a little stuffed bear we had seen the night before in Scaport Village.

Tom: The thing that I like the most about Melinda is her little girl innocence. She's such a beautiful person, and so easy to get along with. But we came very close to breaking up a month after we met.

Melinda: Tom was overwhelming at first. I was afraid he was just trying to charm me.

Melinda: The next week I had a car accident. I think that's the thing that really made our relationship grow.

Tom: I went to the hospital to pick her up, and did anything I could to help her. She realized I was going to be there when it counts. Melinda: Then came Valentine's Day, when he taped candy hearts all over the seats of my car and stuffed the inside with balloons.

Tom: The night we got engaged, I told Melinda I had won a dimer/limo package on the radio. We had dinner at The shores in La Iolla, and then rode over to the cover and walked down to the beach. After I proposed, the first words out of her mouth were, "You lied to me!"

Melinda: We got married on March 25 at the Little Chapel of the Roses and then drove up the Coast Highway to San Francisco.

Tom: I was kind of hesitant at first to tell people how we met, but I think it's a lot better than meeting someone in a bar. As you get older, that scene gets really old.

Melinda: I work with a lot of single women, and when I told them, they said, "Oh, I don't know if I'd be as lucky as you." But my roomnate—the one I used to look through the Reader ads with—she also found someone through Phone Matches". They got married a month after they met.

I didn't see fireworks until I was 18 I didn't see fireworks until I was 18 years old. We lived in small towns that couldn't afford elaborate Fourth of Iuly celebrations. In Pine Valley out in East County, the volunteer fire department sponsored a barbecue but no fireworks. In Mammoth Lakes up in the Eastern Sierras, the fire department put on a small display at Mono Lake 20 miles.

north of town. My parents never wanted to make the drive.

I watched my first fireworks I watched my first fireworks during freshman orientation at Stanford. Standing on the sandy shore of a dy. 'Lake Iaganita.' I held my breath for 30 minutes while the applied of the sandy breath for 30 minutes while the same properties. The same properties are supplied and standy the same properties of the same properties. The same properties of the same properties of the same properties. I same properties of the same properties of the same properties. I same properties of the same properties of the same properties of the same properties. I same properties of the same properties of the same properties of the same properties of the same properties. I same properties of the same prop

Now that I have two small children, my independence seems as far away as freshman year. When you have on child, you have a false seme that as soon as the child gest through go back to normal. You'll be able to sleep in on Sunday morning and read the paper without interruption. You'll be able to sleep in on Sunday morning and read the paper without interruption. You'll be able to concentrate on one task at a time and actually complete the task without someone waking up from a nap or asking if she can "help." When you have your second child, you realize your life will never again be the way it was. Last night at 9:00 1 discovered we didn't have enough milk for this morning's breakfast. My husband lack has a cold and was lying on the couch in front of the TV. Twoand-a-half-year-old Rebecca and fivemonth-old Angela were asleep in their respective beds. "I'm poing to Vons for some milk." I told Jack. "Can I get you anything?"

Everyone knows a pint of Ben & Jerry's Cherry Garcia cures a cold faster than chicken soup. As I backed taster than chicken soup. As I backed out of the garage and pointed the car toward Vons, I realized I hadn't driven the car alone at night since Angela was born. The car seemed empty and quiet without Rebecca's constant chatter from the back seat and Angela's cooing beside me. I felt a little nervous and made sure all the car doors were locked. "I'm a pathetic creature." I thought. Three years ago I drove everywhere by myself. I didn't think twice about going out at night. I drove myself home at midnight. Sometimes even drink of water.

When I was single, I spent entireweekends doing exactly what was the water. I would eat a quiet brakfast and drink a cup of coffee white reading the paper, go shopping or take a long bike ride, and go out to dimer or a movie with friends. I read books, I went to concerts. Sometimed by well to work the weekend.

The San Diego City Council approved the purchase of a new fire truck on Thursday. They accepted the low bid of $133,733 from Casco Industries. Inc. The city will purchase the truck with funds from a Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs grant. The grant will also provide 30 fire hydrants to the city's northside.

A total of 14 individuals were indicted by the Duval County grand jury during two sessions held June 8 and June 15. The jury also looked into a claim of barratry and allegations of election fisud in the recent Benavides school election.

• It was a labor of love that took eight years, but Rolando Saenz finally completed the tribute to his father on Father's Day this year. On Sunday, June 18, the Saenz family gathered at the Realitos Cemetery to dedicate a life-sizo headstone at the grave of Abdon Saenz, depicting the Last Supper.

The state of Texas will make $170 million available to Texas schools for capital improvement projects over the next two years. Duval County shools, however, will not be able to take advantage of this windfall. Ironically, local schools "have to much weath" — or managed their finances too well — to qualify for the grant funds aimed to assist poor districts.

• The San Diego City Council approved the purchase of a new fire truck on Thurnday. They accepted the low bid of $133,733 from Casco Industries. Inc. the city will purchase the truck with funds from a Texas Department of Housing and Community Affairs grant. The grant will also provide 30 fire hydrants to the city's northide.

A total of 14 individuals were indicted by the Duval County grand jury during two sessions held June 8 and June 15. The jury also looked into a claim of barratry and allegations of election fraud in the recent Benavides school election.

Two San Diego men were wounded in an exchange of gunfire on Wednesday. Charges of aggravated assault have been filed against Juan Villarreal, 34. Villarreal, who remains ho-pitalized from a bullet wound behind his right knee, said he was heading home with his 11-year-old son from a baseball game when he was shot.

San Diego Independent School District trustees continue to review applicants for the posts of superintendent and high school principal decision could come on one or both as early as Thursday of this week. At Al of 10 applications have been received for superintendent and 16 for principal. One individual has applied for both positions.
