The plan, which calls for the The plan, which calls for the construction of an 11-story, 304,000-square-foot federal building, comes at a time when the U.S. General Services Administration (GSA) is under fire for spending lavish amounts of money on federal paid for by U.S. taxpayers.

The preferred site for San isting one. That way, there wouldn't be the space crunch federal officials cite as the reason they need more court space here in San Diego. "It's ludicrous to build a Taj Mahal that's going to be used six hours a day, four days a week," worked very well — for a while. The defense attorneys liked it, the prosecutors liked it, and the jurors liked it. But the problem was the judges. They didn't like shifts, so they refused to send shifts, so they refused to send cases to the evening sessions, and they sabotaged the whole system. Now, they re in the process of moving away from it, simply because the politi-cians didn't have the guts to tell the judges the way it should be." hours day, four days a week," Rider says, "If it's like the county courthouse, you could fire a cannon down the hallway at 2:00 p.m. on a Friday and not hit a soul. Local preservationists, too, are railing against the new courthouse — and wondering why the federal government is so bent on a site that happens to house one of downtown San Diego's few remaining historic landmarks.

"I could think of about a million other places that are nothing more than empty parking lots already," says Alex Bevil. a member and former director of the Save Our Heritage Organization (SOHO).

"This building was ordered built by J.D. Spreckels, and it's one of the few remaining etc." one of the few remaining ex-amples from that time era, when San Diego was a one-man town. It was designed by a noted architect, Harrison Alnoted architect, Harrison Al-bright, who also designed the Spreckels Organ Pavilion. We have lost more historic build-ings in downtown than we have saved, often to things as mun-dane as parking loss. Bewi is particularly miffed that the environmental site as-sessment for the courthouse was conducted not by a local firm, but rather by Fugro West of Roseville, was up in North-en. These neoule are out-of-Kenk and co-director Marjo Kenk and co-director Marjo Davidson-Wingrove started the Parrot Rehabilitation Society in July 1994. According to Kenk, San Diego can be a hazardous place for a parrot. "We have a lot of wild parrots thying free in Point Loma, Sometimes they get into trouble. Right now I have a baby Amazon whose nest was attacked by ravens. He fell from the nest and are no bad birds. Just birds that haven't been brought up correctly." When a bird is ready for adoption, prospective parents fill out a three-page adoption application. "We ask people to list the characteristics they're looking for in the order of importance to them — things like intelligence, color, talking, cuddliness. Then we ask Zoos organized.

To celebrate their first anniversary

To celebrate their first anniversary the Parrot Rehabilitation Society will sponsor an "old-time Country Social Picnic and Fundraiser." All members, bird lovers, and interested parties are bird lovers, and interested parties are encouraged to come in Victorian garb, bring their caged or nonflighted birds, and meet other like-minded bird enthusiasts. Kenk will bring her Orange-Winged Amazon, Honey, and her Jardine's Parrot, Mischa. Davidson-Wingrove plans to bring her Yellow-Nape Amazon, Shane.

One of the most fashionable male genital piercings now available, the Prince Albert, takes its name from the Prince Consort of Queen Victoria, who sported one (along with nipple rings). The P.A. involves the insertion of a "receiving tube" into the urethra, and of a needle through the head of the penis. A ring is then pushed through the hole, exiting the urethra, an tweaked into place with a pair of pliers, often shaped around a tiny gemstone of some sort. There was extraordinary censorship. During the 1920s Emily Dickmon's niece censored the passionate letters Dickinson wrote to her sister in law See Gilbert because the niece considered the letters too effusive. We have been under-interpreted the second of the past they we have not the control of the past they we have not conserved by her leablant friend, lournaint Lorena Hickock. I'm 1933, Hick, as she was called, wrote to Mrs. Roosevelt, 'Mout clearly I remember your eyes, with a kind of teating mile in them, and the feeling of that soft spot just northeast of the corner of your mouth against my lips' actually alludes to a lyric of a song popular then. But people don't write that to their friends, even to infiniture friends, do they, unless there's more going out but then, who known? So that kind of thing presents a problem in the constructing any history, and it is a problem that doesn't exist only in age history, is that the paper trail is moutly left by literary and upper, class people. These people had the conomic resources and were better educated, had more independence and were less susceptible to social scrutiny. We tend to get a distorted view of what it was like to be gay in the past, because these paper trails tend to come from middle-and upper-class sources.

Murray Sidlin, whom I had laboration with Golub had a laboration with Golub had a contained dramatic tension that responded powerfully to the nature of the work. Talmi, in contrast, while suitably deci-sive and forceful, and with an assured sense of orchestral souorities and balances, tended (as he sometimes does) to a generalized elegance, an em-phasis on shapeliness at the exxense of energy, on putting expense of energy, on putting everything beautifully in its place rather than on propelling an unfinished adventure rean unfinished adventure re-lentlessly forward to its destiny. He reminded me, then as he has on other occasions, of Her-bert von Karajan, a conductor of similar splendor and (from my point of view) similar shortcomings.

Talmi fans, please continue.
I haven't finished my comments on him (or on this concert) yet. The conductor's concert) yet. The conductor's treatment of Rechoven's Fifth Symphony (the third of these three works in Brethoven's "tragic-heroic" key of C Minor) struck me at first as much like what he had done in the Third Concerto. Throughout the exquisitely proportioned but somehow overly pictorial and unspontanous first movement (which, after all, needs to be approached as one of the be approached as one of the most tremendous pieces of mu-sic ever conceived), I found sic ever conceived). I found myself once again thinking of von Karajan. But at the opening of the Andante, either Talmi's spirit was invaded by the gad or I found my own dulled senses miraculously cleared, for suddenly the performance took fire, and from that moment on it continued to the control of the c teners in the hall, but for me the atmosphere had radically changed from the competent and (at best) elegant to the cosmic, the titan, the Toscaninian (to muster up some words that may convey the triumphant grandeur of this playing). It was altogether amazing, with a final that sent me and everyone else out into the streets ready to storm Heaven.

one of those at the Getty) whose aesthetic procedures closely resemble those of the paintings. Even when this is the case, the drawing maratably brings us closer to the natural fact, in all its palpable presence. Claude's vast, elegiac, atmosphere-filled panoramas of valleys, mountains, streams, and scaports, with their figures from classical mythology or pastoral poetry, are solemn, luminous, sub-lime, ideal. But when he turns from oil on canvas-to wash, chalk, and pen on paper, and when he sketches en plem aur, rather than polishing his imaginative visions to a supreme degree of re-finement in the studie, he tends to confront us more directly with the vital powers of the natural world as he experienced them in the hills and trees of the Ro-man Campagna. The artist's shaping imagination is always there, enhancing the scene's drama and poetic suggestive-ness; and so is his drive toward ness; and so is his drive toward form, which disposes the visual data according to intuitive de-mands for unity, variety, and balance. Nevertheless, even when the drawing is expressly a preparatory sketch for a much grander work of art, there is a greater impression of apontagreater impression of sponta-neous truthfulness than in the deliberate, systematically fashioned magnificence of the paintings.

Claude's View of Tivoli Claude's View of Tiveli (1640) black chill and brown and reddish brown wash) is ac-tually a relatively finished work, far less rapid and sketchy than many of his drawings, but al-though it shows most of the typical Baroque features of his paintings, those features seen to rise naturally and irresistibly out of the landscape itself (as anyone can testify who has trav-eled to this famous hill turner.) anyone can testify who has rav-eled to this famous hill town near Rome). Still, it is the force of the artist's vision that brings the Barospie characteristics into such prominence, for he is no mere documenter of what he sees, but is bussly at work turn-ing the sight into a picture— and a picture ever much of his and a picture very much of his own kind. His chosen viewpoint here is in the hilly countryside outside and below the town on its massive rock. The low view-point enhances the drama of the scene, which is further intensi-fied by the immensity of the surrounding space and its pow-tonal gradation is equated with distance.

Also typical is the use of lavers, like a series of theatrical flats, one behind the other. These can be clearly differentiated. First, the nearest low hillock. Next, components are enveloped in light: as so often in this style, the rough, rubble strevm, tree-topped ridge above. Above that, and farther away, the escap-ment on which the town is built-the sher cliffs, the waterfall, the large buildings at the proximate edge (and, as a slightly more dis-tant layer, the smaller structures, reduced by perspective, visible from, behind the top of the es-capponent. Then we see another, carpinent). Then we see another, still farther ridge, with a tower at its height; and beyond that, a huge mountain, rounded in out-line, so far that it is fading into the sky.

These layers are arranged so that there is a line of rec that there is a line of recession moving gently but incovarily from the lower right to the up-per left, further helping to draw the viewer's mind inward. Along the way, our eye encounters birds (each of them made of two finy strokes), soaring in what

Claude has made us feel to be Claude has made us feel to be a vast airy space. The birds mark the unbounded emptiness that constitutes the remote border of the drawing's illusionary space, while on the near sade the boundary is particularized by the two small rastic figures in the foreground. Their smallness makes the landscape seem even larger in contrast. Yet at the same time, we are made as the same time, we are made a of their human purposefuln the active will that drives them and that makes them a focal point of movement in the picture. They are on their way somewhere. One of them, they way somewhere. One of them, the think, since it lies to the right, moves away from the great matural space. Claude's art has evoked, and toward some purch human goal. That (mvisible) destination, given value by the the active will that drives then

The broad own swatch of these grouped figures parallels, in a reduced compass, the slightly humped contour of the foreground hill on which they are working, as on which they are working, as though they gave human voice to the bill's shape. In Claude's paintings (and in the View of Trioli drawing that is so like them), the human herings are subsidary, picture-sque figures in the all encompassing landscape, whose visual structure is thoroughly independent of them. Here, however, the figures are not simply added to a landscape most simply added to a landscape that they would be also the same than the same

John Giambalvo and Cherie Barnes

WHAT WOULD YOU DO with a long-haired. Italian rock-and-roll drummer? This ex-New Yorker is articulate, motivated, witty, 23, 577, 150 lbs. and very interested in finding out.

John: I had placed Phone MatchesTM ads before, with the guitarist in my band. Two rock-and-rollers looking for two rock-and-roll playmates ... or something like that. We went on a couple of double dates, but it did work out. Either I liked one and he didn't like the other, or we both liked the same one. So I decided to try it on my own.

Cherie: My married girlfriend and I used to sit around on Friday nights and drink wine, watch sappy movies and read the personal ads. One night she said, "We're going to find you a husband."

John: I wasn't looking to get married. I was just trying to have some fun. I figured that Phone MatchesTM was the best way to meet a bunch of girls at once. It was easy and it was free.

Cherie: When I first read John's Phone Matches™ ad, I couldn't believe that it contained everything I wanted in a man. And when I met him, it was all true.

John: On our first date she took me jet skiing

Cherie: For both of us. I had to wear a bathing suit in front of him and John had to interact with my friends.

John: Three months later, we moved in together. It's been a fairly simple matter since then, putting a life together. We've had some really good blowouts, of course. But it's not whether you argue or not; it's how you come out the other side Cherie: We have a lot in common, especially music. I go to the studio and to all the rehearsals for John's band, China Lake. They do all original music that sounds like Classic Rock and I really like it.

John: If Cherie was into Country-Western, we could have a big problem.

Cherie: We talked about marriage from the beginning, jokingly. But on the Fourth of July – with fireworks going off in the background – John asked me to marry him.

John: I said. "I'm really serious this time." Cherie: Of course I said, "yes." The date is September 3, at the old San Diego Mission.

John: My parents have been married for 35 years. There's nothing more beautiful to me than the way they still love each other. Cherie and I are in for the long haul.

San Diego Reader Phone Matches Cherie: It just blows me away that I found my husband in the newspaper.

But you don't need cultural enhancement to enjoy the food. Dahlke is a shiftli cook, and a generous one. As a throwback to when he cooked for his family, each portion is enough for several people. His generosity extends to his style of cooking, which sometimes works against him. For example, for dered stuffed salmon baked in parchment paper. The fresh fish was stuffed with crab, shrining, Jack cheese, and bell peppers. Accompanying it was a spinach fettuccine tossed with lemon goat cheese and cream. The past, was innovative, but when paired with the salmon, the combination was too rich. If the fish is elaborate, the pasta should be plain, and Mell, I've watched it but I don't watch it cause! I think it's dumb. Didn't think it was funny at all. I don't like any of the music videos they play on there. I think they're a Stad influence on young greads. Yur mus heney! it seek a stad in the product of the people. Yup, mm-hmm! I watch talk shows, yeah that's it, talk shows. I

Well, actually, now that they have it on at 10 at night, I don't watch it anymore, I'm no, allowed to When they had it on our list, I used to watch it all the time. I didn't really think they were furniare that I those cussing words and such all those cussing words and I didn't really think they were furms, orth all those cussing words and stuff. They're pretty stupid. I liked some of the music that they played on there sometimes; I like Metallica and all that. Some of the things they would do were furns, but most of the time at was part dumb. I mostly watched it just so reake fun of them.

STEVE PERANTEAU & TRACY COHEN

"It's hard to meet men in the teaching profession. And I didn't want to date kids' fathers. So I placed a Phone Matches ad in February of 1990. I got 120 responses.

I thought, "Wow, this is great." —Tracy Cohem

ROSE CANDELORE &
RICHARD WELCH

"Rose and I would never have met if it wasn't for this Phone Matches service."

-Richard Welch

CHERYL & DOUG BEARD

"Phone Matches is a great idea because it gives you a nice, comfortable barrier between you and another person until you're ready to pursue further." —Okryl Rand

JEANNE & LARRY GOODYEAR

"Sometimes, when you're out there trying to meet new people, you run into women who aren't really looking for a relationship. What I liked about Phone Matches is that it eliminated all those cold shoulders."

-Larry Goodyear

ARNE & MAXINE MADRUGA

"I recommend Phone Matches to all of my women friends and daughters and anyone; you can get a much better caliber of gentlemen this way."

-Arne Madruga

MARY ANNE MACLELLAN

"That's one thing I thought was so nice, that Phone Matches appealed to a wide variety, all types of people—and a lot of different ages; something for everyone."

-Mary Anne MacLellan

SUSAN & PHILIP WITT

"Never in my wildest dreams did I imagine I'd place or answer a personal ad, but that is what it took for us to meet, indirectly as it was, and I am glad I did."

-Susan Witt

Ches Work

THOMAS ROGERS & LISA HOLLISTER

"I didn't have time to meet guys because I was always working. You have to separate business from pleasure. Phone Matches allowed me to have a wide variety of choices outside of my job." — Lisa Hollister

SYLVIA & MARK PRYSANT

"Three friends of mine have married because of Phone Matches."

-Sylvia Prysant

FRAN POLITO & CHRIS ALGYA

"I used the Reader to find my home; I thought, why not try Phone Matches, too!"

-Fran Polito

CHRIS & JOANN WRIGHT

I placed an ad because I've always thought that people in bars put up facades. With Phone Matches, we had a chance to talk first and get to know each other. I found the things she said intriguing. —Clinis Wright

Campo, San Diego chamber officials are looking for participants in the various events. The music lineup, featuring some of Teiano music's premier acts, has been filled, with only one opening left. The Pan de Campo is scheduled for August 4 to 6 at Pitzz Akella, as usual. Chamber officials have agreed to relocate the carnival to the plazo's south side to accommodate concerns of west-add neighbors.
