City Hall's New Poll: Don't Worry, Be Happy

By Thomas K. Arnold and Melinda Powelson

For months, residents of San Diego have lined up at city hall to complain about the rotten condition of city streets, problems with emergency medical service, and the inadequacy of the downtown li-brary. City officials have routinely said there isn't enough money in the city's coffers to address these and other is-

"What's great about Falstaff is that he's so self-deluding. The character develops throughout the rehearsal, and I'm finding new stuff ever day. Maybe I'll find something else humorous about Falstaff later on. Maybe he's issus a great big fat guy that people love to laugh at."

It seemed that each person in the production had a different idea of Falstaff. Director Jack O'Brien, for instance, must determine how Falstaff interacts with the other characters. How does Falstaff make his peculiar guy. Several of the arguments he utes are based on Roman writers. This is a gur who quoted pixtoperry. How did he get the knighbandod! He was probably the only son of an elderly couple. The several pixtoper was probably the only son of an elderly couple. Creases we led who saw wild and hast dissipated like crazy. Christine played the first female major-league pitching star. That's when I por to know John, and I thought he was spectacious; even at the time. He was like a 51st state: Jie's a very smart yay, very good person. I don't mean that he doesn't have faults, and I think he would blanch at the idea of anybody calling him good, but he have values and he has integrity and he lives his about coming down to San Diego and doing something. He said he'd like to but the schedule was difficult.

We had a great time talking and getting in touch. And I realized that his desire to get back into the harness and act again was not the usual Hollywood babble. He really has a hunger to act on the stage. And I said, 'You should do Falstaff,' and he said, 'I'd love to.'

Fabatif; and he said. "I'd love to."
Well, that conversation drifted away, but a couple of years later I thought the production might be possible. It was one of those parts where you don't want to announce the play and then go looking for an actor to play it. You want to know who the hell is playing the part before you announce It. I called John and asked if there was any way he could do a baktaff and less said. "I don't hink! can do it this year, but

I might be able to do it next. So I delayed but finally I couldn't delay any longer. I called him, and said that we had announced the play with him and canceled it, and now I had to do it for the 60th anniversary of the Old Globe, because I had promised everybody that I would, and what did he think. "And John said, 'I think I might be able

Because John has such great equipment, he can make the text dance, he's also, a priori, funny, he's a funny guy, and Falstaff has to be a funny guy. It's a great piece of casting and almost everybody knows it. You talk about doing Henry IV. O'Brien sighed and chuckled to himself.
The room was silent for a moment.

"This is inevitably a great personality performance," O'Brien continued, "no matter performance. "O Brien continued," no matter who plays it, John has a fantastic voice. He's got a vocal range like you cannot believe. It's big, it's orotund, it's rich, it's flexible, and because he's been doing so much thinking on his feet as an actor in the Rosamne series, he has complete and adapter, his version of Henry IV. Parts 1 & 2 has been over 25 years in the making. Matthews first combined the two plays into one play for a production in the 1960s. The Old Globe production is the fifth time he has done it, and each time Matthews has recut and done it, and each time Matthews has recut and cearranged the play. The last time he did it was in Los Gatos, where he himself played Falstaff. Matthews is a large, distinguished, gray-haired man who looks as if he was born to play Shakespeare. We talked in a rehearsal hall at San Diego State University, sitting at a long table littered with scripts and coffee 24ps as actors ambled through.

"Part Two of Henry IV is not nearly as good a play as Part One. I've only seen Henry IV, Part Two once in my entire life and it didn't work, but there are some wonderful seenes that need to be based. The final learn between the need to be heard. The final scene between Hal and his father on his deathbed is an amazing scene, as is the rejection of Falstaff. So there are about six or eight things that ought to be seen and never will be without seeing all of Part seen and never will be without seeing all of Part Two 1 tried to take those things and mesh them into the bulk of Henry IV. Part One, not just by takeking them on at the end but by interweaving them and moving them earlier into the play. If you don't really see Hal being crowned at the end. If you don't really see the king dying and being reconciled with his son, If you don't see Falstaff being truly rejected to his face, then you don't really see the see falstaff being truly rejected to his face, then you don't get a complete sense of satisfaction For Matthews, Falstaff is a primari intellectual problem: an aspect of human nature - the appetite - set against the head and the heart

"Shakespeare identifies the centers of human activity as the head, the heart, and the loins. A man learns good self-government by learning how to balance those three energy centers within himself. And so a state learns to

So Prince Hal needs Faltstift, needs the presence of the belts in order to know how to live, just as we all do. But these are historical characters, inhabitants of the 15th Century. Why is O'Brien starting the play with the actors in regular artest clothes? He explained that instead of beginning with historical figures who must draw from that when he becomes the ruler So i makes it difficult to identify with the prince, which is almost the point of the play. Of course, you can't identify with the prince because as king he has burdens to bear that you can't bear. I never ask a Falstaff to be unattractive. THE TESTIMONY OF LIGHT

Our life is a fire dampened, or a fire shut up in stone.

— Jacob Boehme, De Incarnatione Verbi

Outside everything visible and invisible a blazing maple.
Daybreak: a seam at the curve of the world. The trousered legs of the women shimmered. They held their arms in front of them like ghosts.

The coal bones of the house clinked in a kimono of smoke, An attention hovered over the dream where the world had been.

For if Hiroshima in the morning, after the bomb has fallen, is like a dream, one must ask whose dream it is.

Must understand how not to speak would carry it with us. With bones put into rice bowls. While the baby crawled over its dead mother seeking milk.

Muga-muchu: without self, without center. Thrown up in the sky by a wind.

The way back is lost, the one obsession. The worst is over. The worst is yet to come.

The luminous sky is reflected in the water that appears in most of the pictures: narrow streams and inlets, articulating the dark land with a pattern of tarnished silver.

Hoefer's composition, like Claude's, is Baroque, with the streams or river valleys re-

There is less to Hoefer's nature, which is an object rather han presence, it is less also—or at lesst different—in its exclusion of humanity. Claude's immense scene of the Roman Campagas regularly include distant castles. Gregoround herdmen, bridges, ravelers, signs of the activity of conscious beings within the attract context. Hoefer's landscape are solitary and untouched by human hands no figures, no structures. Vet at the same time, they do not show us the stupendows, choolic witherness are stids, static orderly, almost altered —but without any indication of a culture that has allowed them to soil its needs, or of a mind that tailored them to suit its needs, or of a mind tha has projected its internal order on them and given them human focus and meaning. There is also a sense of exclusion in the lack of local details. In Claude, or Ruisdael, or Cole, or Constable, or Bierstadt, or Monet, the artist or constante, or Bierstadt, or Monet, the artist continually enlivens the scene with specific in-stances of Nature's vitality and variety. alized, almost blank, as though the artist's (and the viewer's) attention were di-rected elsewhere. The question is "Where?" I would suggest that Hoefer's aim, as a landscape painter, is fundamentally different from that of Claude or of any of the other artists. I have of the other artists I have listed. It is not Nature that interests him, but something beyond Nature - a mystical essence, undefined but intuired, that does not inhere in streams and hills and trees but that is suggested by the dreamlike visual experience of these natural objects, in the halflights of the intermediate moments between night and day, when the materiality of the world scenes as illusion. Some greater truth — not an invigorating fullness but a great, calm, impersonal ited, that does not inhere in emptiness — hovers behind the horizon, a light that lets us know it is there but never re-veals its shape or meaning. If Hoteris is to be compared with Hoteris is to be compared with Albert Pinkham Ryder, with whom he share; his mysti-cism, his uncanniness, his blurred contours, his dark tonalities, his leeched colors, his dense textures, his neglect of details, his impulse not to depict Nature but to me it as depict Nature but to me it as Hotefer's landscapes ap-pear in three diverse forms in

This device tends to depress the color in-tensities even further, and to show with special prominence how little Hoefer has (or how little Hoefer has (or wants to have) in common with an artist like Claude Lor-rain. Vesperi I. in fact, with its colors almost totally drained of identity, its blurriness, its vagueness, its scraped and reticulated sur-face, its frontal composition its indifference to spatial perspective, its general mini malism, and even its prefer ence for wood rather than canvas, is the painting in the exhibit that most closely re-sembles Ryder's strangely

But it would be well to re-member that at the time of Belle de Jour she was still an ingénue, and a somewhat gawky one, and touside of Polanski's ingenious use of her in Re-pulsion? not a terribly interesting one — not as interesting for instance

And, although the actress' in increasing stature in the interval can be seen to-day as a bount, the move it et is surely less interesting as an example of early Deneuve than of blae Bounce.

Further reconsideration: I took the time last week, three hours of it counting travel, to revisit The Bridges of Madison County, And despite the gender of a massed chorus of cooler voices, I am not budging an inch, I still have every confidence that the full worth of this movie will emerge when I can be sized in the steel. when I can be viewed in the context of the total care of one of the tow-ering figures — towering actors and, increasingly, towering directs and, increasingly, towering directs and problem with a much of the more problem with a much of the most coverage in the mass media is that litted to view a movie in the context of the current week or, at its most expansive, current season. Hence the principal take on Bridges seems to be then It can be viewed in the context how unusual it is for a movie to be goined to the 'oldster' audience in the head of summer. (As if there were any time of year when this would be usual.) On that score, the accomplishment of the movie may be narrowed down to the moment when fastwood reveals at the water pump that his pectorals are not in the shape they used to be —— and to in the shape they used to be —— and the water pump that all the shape they are they are the shape they are the shape they are they are the shape they are the are they are the are they are they are they are the are they are the are the are the ar moment of personal candor somewhat akin to the handless WWII vectoran, Harold Russell, strepping with the second of the second o it really counts: for when it makes its effect by its contrast. See, for example, the camera lurching behind Streep as she runs from the kitchen to the as me runs from the kitchen to the front porch after saying her final farewell to her lover: the camera roughly enacts the Titanic colliding with the iceberg. Or see the Hitch-cockian precision with subjective viewpoints in the silent farewell in the rain.

Even without all that (and more), I would hold my saled position on the movie for Eartwood's performance alone the Lone Gun completely unarmed and disarming, the Old Westerner reformed and reborn. ("What were you like when you were young?" "Trouble.") My wite, who apart from Honkyrork Man has apart from Honkytonk Man has avoided Eastwood's movies out of aversion to what I call action and the calls violence, put up no resistance to Eastwood's manifold charms. But she did have problems with Streep and Streep's character. What did this man ser in this woman' Well, although the first sentence of this paragraph reduces the question moot. I have three does the question moot. I have three responses to that. Firstly, Streep does hold up her end of the conversation, even if she does not say such interest, ang things. (Major exception: she becomes suddenly quite eloquent when hotly pointing out how be needs and his needs don't match:— and it would be interesting to each other. would be interesting to watch this scene alongside Streep's very similar scene in Out of Africa.) Secondly, a scene in Out of Africa. Secontly, a complicated earling technique can past to some degree as a complicated personality. Such is the nature of the medium. Thirdly, and most importantly, I don't know what he sees in her. That I just the point. He sees in her, that I just the point. He sees in her, that I just the point. He sees in her, that I just the point of the sees of the output of the sees of the output of the sees of the output of the sees of Final reconsideration left home-bound, though not a little loath, to re-see Bad Company when it was re-leased recently no video. In in is the movie, you may need be reminded, that I had to go to a drive-in to see, struggling throughout with the audio exception on my car radio. Now that I have understood every word off, it, as opposed to two out of every three, I can be pretty certain that none of the one of the pretty certain that none of the use the first tilm, and that I need mod-ulate none of my earlier cruthussem. Sure, sure, the color scheme is a little chi-ch, but I don't find that that gets in the way of the expressiveness of the cni-cni, but I don't find that that gets in the way of the expressiveness of the camerawork (by Jack Green, of The Bridges of Madison County, coinci-dentally), nor in the way of the grander vision. This remains, sorry to say, a re-markable Hollywood movie in its raino. This remains, sorry to say, a remarkable Hollywood movie in its complete trust in the audience's mental activity and its moral compass.

It's too bad, because O'Neill is a gifted raconteur. She is blessed with an easy wit, a disarming style, and the cool that comes with living in New York — but not taking the experience too sernously.

Her new coukbook is A Well-Sranoucd Appenie (Viking, $23-95). The three dozen peowhen she referred to San Diego as 'the Garden of Eden' for its natural beauty and the food products that are available the year long. worrisome."

A Well-Sessoned Appetite is studded with short essays about the history of food. O'Neill read us one concerning pears. But Japreciated her written remarks about spring menus: "I don't forage Manhattan parks for salad makings, stalk the East River for shad, or keep pews on my terrace for River for shad, or keep yews on my terrace spring. A few spring ago, I was sitting, in a cafe in Paris. My companions were black-draped sphinxes wearing Ray Bans...none of us spring chickens. in which the tenderest chicken is no longer limited to spring.

The recipes in this book are sophisticated by virtue of their case. You can approach each set of directions without trepidation or the need for hours of marketing and preparation. The essays are gorgoously written. You will be interested to learn that articles for the Times replanned 9 to 12 months absed of publication. So much for faddism. 8 abrillo Bridge under construction, circa Cantilever type bridge was built across 1914 California's first multiple-arched then-Pound Canyon (later renamed Cabrillo Canvon) by Frank P. Allen at a cost of $214,000. Cabrillo Bridge has been the launching site for The structural engineer for the bridge was numerous "jumpers" leaping to their deaths Thomas B. Hunter, an employee of the California Division of Public Works.

"Cantilever" means that the tops of the bridge, over each arch, lock into place from individual "piers" and lean toward each other. Each of the seven piers sustains the weight of one half arch on either side. Over the years, the into the canyon (now Highway 163) below.

WOMEN SEEKING MEN

Introducing Reader PHONE MATCHES: a great place to meet San Diego singles.

You are provided with a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds. You also receive a free "voice mailhox"- a phone service that allows you to record and receive messages from any touch-tone phone.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free Phone Matches" ad fill out the coupon below and mail or fax it (233-7907) to us. (If faxing, please photocopy the coupon first and then fax it.) The deadline for receiving free Phone Matches" ads is Saturday at 7 am. No free ads will be accepted over the phone or in person. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number

(to be printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security code for exclusive access to your responses.

You may also place a late ad until 6 pm Tuesday by phone (235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by fax (233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word. Ads placed by phone or by fax are with Visa, MasterCard or Discover only.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILBOX:

After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction and listen to your responses. Call 527-1966, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You must have a touch-tone phone.

QUESTIONS? Call 235-8200, ext. 268.

MEET YOUR MATCH! Use the form below to place your FREE, 2-week Phone Matches" Ad and get your FREE Voice Mailbox.

TO PURCHASE AN OPTIONAL HEADLINE, use the lines below, keeping in mind the following: 20 characters per line including spaces; the first initial of each word is capitalized approximations and unusual punctuation will not be accepted; the cost of each line is $12. Continue on a separate sheet if necessary; no more than 10 lines. Please print clearly.

When we stopped for dinner in Kramer Junction an hour later, Angela woke up. She slurped up the rice cereal and appleance Jack, showled into her mouth and drank a boutle of junc. She che when he was the source of the start of the ottle of juice. She chewed on the seat belt and cooed to the dome light when I laid her in the driver's seat to change her diaper. In the back seat lack changed Rebecca's diaper and dressed her in her pajamas. I nursed Angela, then strapped both girls back into their respective car seats. Rebecca clutched her beloved Doll-Doll, and Jack covered Rebecca and Doll-Doll with a blanket from home. "Only four and a half more hours," I told Jack as I pulled the car back onto the beach.

I prayed for silence a week later on the drive home. We left Mammuth at 4:30 hoping to get home before midnight, Angela slept for the first 45 minutes but woke up for the first 45 minutes but woke up to the first 45 minutes but woke up for the first 45 min for the first 45 minutes but woke up when we stopped in Bishop for gas. For the next two and a half hours, Angela fused, 5th never wailed. But she was never completely quiet. She attended to the was never completely quiet. She was never completely quiet. She attended then she sucked on a bottle of juice. "Aaaa. attended on a bottle of juice." Angela attended to the property of th aaaaaaaaaaa, Adaa, Adaaaaaaa and fell. In the great stretch of nothing between Olancha and Little lake, a billboard announced, "Burger King Express, 36 ruiles,"

"Rebecca," I asked over the sixth rendition of Beauty and the Beast, "want to have dinner at Burger Kine?"

"want to have dinner at Burger King?"
Rebecca's face lit up as if I'd just told her Santa Claus had decided to ride home with us. "Yes, I do, Momnty." "Aaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaa,"

Angela fussed.

We found the Burger King Express tucked into a Sheil minimart in Pearsonville. Three tables sat illuminated by fluorescent light in . rectangular room off the minimart. A few coin-operated washing machine and a dryer hid around the corner and the bathroom doors had signs, "Showers $3." We were the only patrons with no tattoos. Angela smiled and ate.
