I would love to meet the author of that article. We author of that article. We could swap some serious memories — I was a braces laden, training-bra-wearing, John Taylor-lover growing up in Florida at the time. I remember the fights I had with a seventh grader named Stephanie, who actually had the nerve to think that Nick was finer than John! And I spent my allowance money or the serious ser spent my allowance money or the 45 single "New Religion" just because it came with a poster inside the jacket. And beyond all the books and magazine articles he produced, Gardner shouldered other demands that sprang from his creation of Perry Mason. The fictional lawyer had taken his cases to the radio airwaves in 1943 and solved mysteries there every week through 1955. Then, as Raymond Burr, he first appeared on American television sets in 1957. Although Gardner appeared on American television sets in 1957. Although Gardner didn't write the hour-long weekly TV programs, he exercised

Both lean and Pegg Downs, he sister, were "accustomed to setting up portable typewriters on a faller log or an up-ended sunksea and batting out notes," Gardner later

With the appearance of Muñoz to shuttle Gardner back to attend to urgent work demands, Gardner finally had the means to combine his work and play. Before the whale-watching trip ended. Gardner would fly north of the border one more tir ended, cardiner would fly north of the border one more time for another work-jammed evening, with Muñoz transporting him the next morning to Bahia de los Augeles, where Gardner's party had proceeded. The trip that spawned Hunting the Desert Whale ended soon afterward, but two more Baja adventuresand books - followed in quick succession, with Mañoz playing roles in each.

For one thing, Gardner credits Muñoz for directing his attention away from the coastal areas "to some of the other country which was completely unknown as far as the tourist was concerned." Flying with Munoz, Gardner in a few hours could survey pristine sections of the Baja interior that would have required weeks or months to penetrate from the ground

Among movie stars who called upon Muñoz were Fred Astaire, Leo Carillo, James Arness, Chuck Connors, and Desi Arnaz.

Before long Gardner realized that helicopters would expand his exploration further, and he conganized several grandiose helicopter assisted Baja forays. One of these would yield his dramatic "discovery" of the huge and mysterious cave paintings in the San Francisco mountains north of San Ignacio. Although Gardner was not the first outsider to lay eyes on these, few knew

But Gardner's delight in the helicopters didn't diminish his need for Munoz. In Gardner's subsequent Baja books

(Hovering Over Baja and The Hidden Heart of Baja), the Mexica pilot seems ubiquitous: shuttling scripts, mail, and secretaria replacements between Gardner's Temeenda ranch and his liquid campaistee, plasing an airborne monther hen to the vulnerable choppers, at times greasing wheels of Mexican bureau, rank pleases Gardner's expeditions worked "so rappled against time and had no facilities for cooking other than with a triving pan," the writer even occasionally arranged for his Temee also staff to cook roasts and rush them by car to Figuran, where Munor would he still war must to the explorers. Beyond reliable service, the money also bought Gardner moments that were "thrilling beyond description," he states in Host with the Big Hat. "There was, for instance, the time when we took off from Tijuana in one of Muñoz's most prized possession, a twin-Hiotoard plane which held ten passengers." The passengers-included the writter and three close associates. When asky note of from Tijuana it was ranning, so Muñoz began

When they note off from Tipana it were raining, so Martoo began climbing in the hope of brecking out above the room. By the time these were 100 miles or so south of the border, they had rached 12,000 feer, jet still they churred through a steel gasy thickness that pressed against the arcraft windows. The arcraft deopped fast, and at about 2000 feet above see level, the country of the plane was could be the place of 111 bitting the tail. Munor says, adding that he made for a landing spot soon thereafter.

It took more than hair-raising encounters with bad weather to drive Gardner from Baja, but Muhoz was also present for the turn of events that did so, at least temporarily. In 1964 Gardne'r had been invited to view some new cave paintings and fish-fossil beds near Santiago, so Munoz flew him, Jean Bethell, and Gardner's ranch manager, Sam Hicks, to

By the early 1930s, Gardner was earning more than $20,000 from his writing, and he had set himself a production quota: "1,200,000 words a year, or a 10,000-word novelette every 3 days, 365 days a year."

and frendship, and we all were working on something we were proud of. Rex Edhlund, our editor in chief, supported Shifty in his own house for several months in the early days. We all helped distribute the magazine out of our cars. If a truck needed to be unloaded, we all pitched in. If walls needed to be built, in. If walls needed to be built, we built 'em. When I was told Shifty's credit card was maxed out. I was fool enough to put magazine expenses on my card (which I'we still yet to be paid for, although to his credit Hypno's David Jenisen assures that new partner Randy McDowell is aware of this debt. and has promised to pay by the end of September). None the end of September). None of us minded doing these things because we felt it was our magazine. We were encouraged to think of it as our magazine. It seems now we were encouraged to think of this as our magazine in lieu of pay.

where I sit it seems more like Rex's ouster was a cynical and callous power grab. I do know that the magazine, not an easy thing to make a go of, under Rex's stewardship had enioved both artistic growth and rev-enue growth. I do know too, that Randy McDowell has cer-tainly been callous, maybe brutal is a better word, in dis-posing of those of us who are responsible for the very exis-tence of the magazine he pay.

Larry Harmon had a daunting task in writing the Reader article on this fiasco. He had to sort between David Jenisen's parroting of the company line and Rex's rightenable indianant fuming In eously indignant fuming. In journalistic fashion he wound cously indignant fuming. In journalistic fashion he wound up giving equal weight to both sides. And, of course, got nowhere near the real meat and potatoes. Even his opening line, "Depending on who you ask, most of the staff at Hypno magazine have been laid off or fired" is a moot point. When they told us what the new program was, as tence of the magazine he bought for himself. I don't think he has done so mali-ciously or deceitfully. He's more like a bull in a china more like a bull in a china shop charging in, doing what he wants utterly without re-garders of the complishments and to what personal situations and hard-ships would result from his ac-tions. It's Shifty I'm most dis-appointed by, Even with all of his weird idiosyncrasies, I ba-sically liked the gov. I guess I was naive. Certainly, I was easy to take advantage of, I'll leave the new program was, we walked. Nearly en masse. Our staff positions no longer ex-isted. Our percentage points in the mag, which had been dan-gled in front of us like a cargled in front of us like a car-rot on a stick for four years, no longer existed. Okay, that's bad enough, But then, along with that betrayal came what I thought to be very stopid edi-torial decisions. as an "empire of Philistines" because we do not worship at the temple of Patti Smith is in-consistent with the movement that Smith helped found. Arnold's implied desire that we submit to the mindless devotion of an aging icon and follow the trends set by San Francisco and (even worse) Seattle is antithetical to the very concept of punk. Who cares how fast the citizens of these cities can be taken to the cleaners? The Belly Up's pro-motion of Smith's appearance as a "spoken-word event" evoked in me (and probably many others) a sense of im-pending boredom. Other Indignant Readers Gina Arnold, in her commen-tary on the death of Jerry Gar-cia (Pop Music, August 17), noted that she has lived two blocks from Haight Street in San Francisco for over a decade, Don't your readers' objections to her residens' objections to her reviews over the years include the claim that Gina "must not have seen the concert I saw"?

Other indignant readers have eloquently illuminated Gina Arnold's incompetence as a music critic and human being, so I needn't say any more about that. I didn't listen to the acts she wrote about anyway. So, I quit reading her anyway. So, I quit reading her years ago. But this time, Jerry Garcia had just died of natural causes, and Gina had once written that Garcia should be stabbed to death, Well, even though I've never liked the Grateful Dead, I couldn't help being curious over what he being curious over what she would say. It turns out she doesn't even live in San Diego.

MEETING CHEEVER

Iowa City, 1973

Above a half pizza and double gin, his proffered hand trembled in the dark as if, polished and slapped with cologne, he had ridden a jackhammer from New York that broke up everything inside but politesse, which dangled like a hook: informed you had just won a prize, he said, "Ah yes, I loved your book."

And you, inconsolable bell-bottomed cliche

In a booth for four were mashed five whose egos would have cramped the Astrodome. One thriving now, who still tries to disguise his voice answering the phone from decades of throwing bill collectors off, whose wife told everyone her life was hell, whose children had it rough, was living by the week in a seedy motel,

He had killed a quart by noon with a mountainous hard-boiled novelist who thought Chandler "could write circles around

Ungoaded, Cheever smiled at the figure and said he'd love to see that manuscript. Pinned between them, ankle to shoulder, he looked like a sandwiched Siamese triplet twice their age and half their size twice their age and half their size but sharing one bloodstream — alcohol — and one passion beyond themselves: stories wild, precise, and beautiful.

My counterpart in the art of verse was burbling his soda through a straw. "Consciousness is a curse" and "Coke-farts evoke sacred awe" were his night's remarks, not addressed to us. His poems were tiny nests of pain. That Christmas he went to Panama in a VW bus and no one ever saw him again.

And the hard-boiled novelist's new baby and wife. And the hard-boiled novelist's new baby and then unconceived and not-yet-met, that were said to have filled his life with unhappiness and made him considerate.

died together in a crash. Where was this future with its bloody claws Brilliant John Cheever is a handful of ash. I would be finished with what I was.

In my opinion, the best way to overcome those difficulties is to burrow as deeply as possible into a single Gaugini painting. Hope you will agree with such an approach, or at least will give me the benefit of the double. The new style, which was to have immense repercussions on modern art in general, is the notorious "Synthetism," which Gauguin invented at Pont-Aven with his young colleague, Emile Bernard, in the summer of 1888.

Bernard later broke with Gauguin, because any people think of Gauguin as a highly decorative painter with a bold color between a great and a fondines for bare-breated to book at, and the pleasure comes really, without study, learning, or analysis. All this is trace of him — but there is a great deal more. He is, in fact, not only a great painter of immodate understanding of Gauguin's equally great contemporary. est artists of his period (he was not even the best in the brilliant. Bassano family of painters), but he was a minor master, and (the point of choos-ing him) his mastery extended to the newly developed techniques of realistic painting — tech-niques that, frequently deprived of their energy and inspiration, were vail going strong in the 19th Century.

The face of Bassano's lute player looks very much like the real thing. The artist's technical cunning gives us the illusion that we are seeing a solid, living person of flesh and blood, even though in fact we are looking at nothing more than bits of colored oil paint on a flat canvas. The tones resemble those of flesh. Minute details of th physiognomy (the wrinkles on the forehead, the slight bump on the nose's ridgeline, the individ-ual bairs of evebrows, moustache, and beard) are rendered faithfully.

The solidity of the head is made manifest by the way different parts of it reflect the bright light, which is treated as though coming. as though coming from a single, locat-able source beyond the left side of the

The chief illu sionistic result of this modeling in light and shade is the stark contrast between the bright side and the dark side of the face. On the shadowed side, the flesh colors have been darkened have been darkened — just behind the nose to a deep gray brown that is virtually colorles. Because of this difference in the value (degree of lightness or darkness) of the paint, our lute player's nose stands out like a three-dimensional object, appearing to exist not appearing to exist not on a flat surface but on a flat surface but in the same space you and I exist in. The same procedure makes the forehead look like a solid hemisphere.

Meanwhile, applied more delicately and on smaller scale, this device gives a continuous topographical viality to the illuminated half of the face. The intermingling of little highlights and little shadows forces us to see the minute modeling of the contours of the face - its out contours of the face — its out-line, for example — are indi-cated by the meeting of light and dark, by bright or shad-owed areas of varying breadth. In all these respects, the hands are treated in the same fashion. So, for that matter, is the lute, although its shape requires fever flusion-creating cents. Canguin, in Jenne Bretome, has intentionally discarded vir-tually all of this. There is no doubt that we are looking at a

The minute ins and outs of the flesh are simply absent, and consequently the face does not look as though it is made of flesh at all. It is made of flesh at all. It is made of yellowishivory-colored paint, flatly applied, with a few smudges of other colors, also evidently paint. The late player's face is disjuises that fact with consummate virtuosity. Gaugain have found and reproduced a of the face is in shadow

Moreover, the "shadows" used to model the girl's face on the opposite side do not have the hues of real shadows. Their the huse of real shadows. Their color is an unartual olive green (this is a device — even to the greenness — that Gaugain learned from Cézanne). They are painted more or less without modulation — while the lute player's shadows are now lighter, now darker, depending on their distance from the nose and therefore their openness to the ambient light. No plausie that the player is a state of the color of the summate virtuosity. Gaugnin sionistic three-dimensional modeling entirely. According to the formula provided by nature and by the realistic realistic into in painting, the face still has a light half and a dark half, with the most vivid cointast between the bright side of the now and the shadowed cheek behind it. Calendar THEATER Strip the Theater!

Meyerhold placed "the Author" between stage and audience. When the Author complained, stagehands dragged him off by the coattails and bound and gagged him ....

Meyerhold loathed realism. When he becare a director in 1902, he inherited a theater with box sets, footlights, haphazard design (performers selected their own costumes), fat, painted scenery, and acting that often resembled reading. His motto became "Strip the theater!" From the outset, Meyerhold insisted on control. During rehearsals he kept the author as far Meyerhold placed a character he called 'the Author" on an open space between stage and au-dience. When the Author complained about the action and made "puerile" remarks, stagehands dragged him off by the coattails and, to the de-light of the "real" audience, bound and gagged him.

Whenever possible he tried to remind audiences that they were in a theater, not eavesdropping on real life. He refused to conceal the source of lighting. This pre-dated Bertolt Brecht's exposure of lighting elements by at least a decade. He loved movie screens. On

The Unexpected Guest
On opening night, only about half of Octad-One's cast was ready for Agatha Christie's whodomit. The other half fumbled with lines and timing and turned Christie's verba drama into a talky affair, The Unthat her husband was "a cruel beast...he drank...! hated him." Book her? Not yet. Danno. By the time Christie's done, you've got at least six candidates for the crime— not counting the mysterious Nurse Warburton, whose name keeps popping up—at Warwick's estate in South Wales. As in all her fic-tion, Christie once again channisporae and four Old Colde Associ-ted Artisis; Jonathan McMurtry, I dilian Garrett-Groug, Katherine McGrath, and Richard Easton. They not only perform Shake-sporae, they do it in the style of their characters: the fustian of Ed-ward Forrest (Easton), the self-of-facing presence of Mrs. Patrick Campbell (McGrath), the egocen-tris coloratura of Surah Bernhardt, and a non-caractured Oliveir (ad-nad non-caractured Oliveir (ad-mitable restraint by McMurtry.

They reverse roles (different ample) and genders and, once the evening finally gets going, weave a thick tapestry from the threads of human experience.

Worth a try.

ing Faust, who didn't want to have anything to do with her. In my version, the devil falls in love with her and gest dumped. I love the side of some young girl fooling him. He's got no reference point. He's kind of shocked by her."

In tandem with the musical's premiere, Reprise is releasing a companion sound-track of 17 Newman songs, secrémend by '750 pop music performed by '70s pop music mafiosi — James Taylor, Elton John, Linda Ronstadt, Bonnie

John, Linda Rootstadt, Bonnie Raitt, None of these tans will appear in the stage production. The songs are virtuge New-man, deadpan and scabrous. 'Gainesville' and 'Happy End-ing' rank among the best work Newman has perined. God de-livers raise—the-roof, halledigh showstoppers like "Glory Train," "How Great Out I Lord, and "Like Has Been Good to Me. "His timble conner storms."

BORRAM DI SOCIETA PRISO PER THEILO WEN CHIEF PRISO POR THEILO PRISO PRIS

he Escondido City Band, circa 1889. Twelve musicians under the leadership of Everett E. Nulton (he's been tentatively identified as second from the left in the light-colored coat) decided in the late 1880s to pool their talents and form Escondido's first "official" band. The photo was snapped at the corner of Grand and Ivy Streets, in front of the Escondido Methodist Church.

Nulton himself was quite a character: considered one of the area's pioneer ranchers, young Everett and several associates are widely credited with jump-starting Escondido's grape industry with an initial planting of 600 acres. Nulton played both the flute and the snare drum (a fact which may cast suspicion on his identification as second from left; the fellow standing second from the right under the bowler hat is holding a snare drum), the same two instruments his father Sylvanus before him played in a Civil War-era band. Nulton died in 1960 at the age of 91. (From the Ticor Collection)

Phone Matches Success Stories:

Paula and Lyle McCapes

LONELY GUY, white, 34, 6°, 240 lbs. Aries, likes rugged Jeep, four-wheeling, camping, movies, 91X, sci-fi. Seeking pretty, full-figured, socere woman of similar likes for relationship.  $\mathbf{r}$

Isle: I gave up on women ten years ago, after a bad experience with a relationship. I said to myself. "That's it. No more. Who meeds them?" But then I got lonely and started looking at women again. I thought it would be nice to have someone to go camping or four-wheeling with.

Paula: At first, I was using Phone Matches" to find facquetball partners. But then I ran across Lyle's ad and thought, "Wow, here's a guy who doesn't think he's perfect. He sounds very honest."

Lyle: I worked on my ad for several days, to get it worded just right. I wanted mine to sound real.

Paula: A friend convinced me to call and leave a messag I was terrified. I just said, "My name is Paula and here's Lyle: I received nine responses and dated five ladies, in the exact order that the calls came in. The San Diego Reader Phone Matches last two were Paula and an 18-year-old.

Paula: He called me from work, while he was on a break. We talked for almost two and a half hours. We spoke every night after that, for about a week, before we met. He came over after work one night.

in his grubby clothes, riding his motorcycle. When he flicked up his face shield and I saw his eyes, I said, "Hey, I like this guy."

Lyle: I was attracted to Paula's smile. And she had the loveliest dark skin I had ever seen. I really didn't know she was black until she told me.

Paula: I had to go away the next day to visit my mother in Virginia. I returned to San Diego a week later and there were 15 messages on my answering machine. Most of them were from Lyle, using different voices. He did Peter Lorre, Yosemite Sam, Mr. T...

Lyle: After the first time we kissed, it was etched in stone. I stopped dating the other women. I guess I'm not a man of the '90s. I believe in "one guy, one girl."

Paula: We met in October of 1991 and were married the following September. The ceremony was: in Petersburg, Virginia, in the old City Hall that served as a headquarters for the Confederate

Do you have a Phone Matches"

"Success Story" to share?

Lyle: It's been two years since we got married but it feels like a lifetime. I guess that's because I didn't really start life until I met Paula.

Paula: People are always in such a hurry, trying to pack so many things into one day. I'm almost 35 years old and I raced through my twenties. It wasn't until after twe were married that I became infatuated with Lyle. I still get butterflies when I see him.

Petition to Relocate Pan de Campo Fiesta Renewed

• Three residents who live across the street it.om Plaza de Alsal appeared before the San Diego City Cound, on September 7, to remes their petition that the Pan de Campo fiesta be moved to another location. They are among some 200 residents who signed a petition last year saking for the event to be relocated. If softling was done by October, said Mrs. and Pan Carcias, they would take offer across they would take offer across they would take offer across.

The Daval County Grand Jury met on Thursday, September 7; but took no action on an investigation into allegations that Previnct Two workers were placing calibe on private property. The investigation was stalled because county attorney losé Ramon Falcon was unavailable to appear before the grand jury.

 On September 6, the February grand jury met with a special prosecutor from the attorney general's office to go over concerns should an investigation into alleged irregularities in the May Benavides school election. The jury did not have time to go into the matter, said foreman Carlos Montemayor, since their extension expired the next day.

It was a poor start for Duval County high school football teams. All three dropped their season openers. In the only home game, San Diego gave up an early lead to go down in defeat to Aransas Pass 35–19.

With the county's fiscal year approaching an end, Duval County comm continued to make line-item changes in the budget. The county's fiscal year ends September 30. Among the changes made on Monday, September 11, was a $2300 transfer from the Freer Civic Center to cover the Sheriff's dispatcher account.

The Texas Department of Criminal Justice has posted signs in its prison commissaries warning the state's 127,000 immates that, come Cktober I, they must spy the state sales axon snack foods just asil other Texans do. The new tax was imposed as a result of a bill introduced by local state representative Richard Raymond (D-Benavides).
