The "race card" was finally played. A predominantly black jury (9 out of 12) was watched by predominantly white America to see the upshot of the ac-cusations of bias leveled by the prosecution and the defense at each other. In his closing ar-gument, Christopher Darden frankly spoke of "deep reluc-tance on the part of the African-American community African-American community to allow a black icon to be brought down by a white criminal justice system," while defense attorney Johnnie Cochran, scolding ex-detective

In his comings and go-ings, Cochran was flanked by bodyguards — from the Na-tion of Islam! commentator last Thursday, "because of Fuhrman's racial slurs, O.J. should be acquit-ted." Cochran's full defense of Simpson was racial, in spite of defense attorney Shapiro's pious announcement on August 19, 1994, that the Simpson trial would be categorically free of any racial content. In his summation, Cochran used rhyming slang — "If the cap don't fit / You gotta acquit" —

It may flaunt the terminology of exaggeration, but in its mindlessness what this trial became, in ignoring logic and reason, was not justice but hope. Prosecutor Marcia Clark

Prosecutor Marcia Clark logistically stepped aside in or-der to allow Christopher Dar-den, a black lawyer, to drive in for the emotional force of it all, while, unbelievably, Johnall, while, unbelievably, Johnnie Cochran on September 23

Who on earth is ever solid-ly or definitively one color? Significantly, no human being is black or white. "And moreover we, whites, are not white at all," asserts the poet John Shade in Vladimir Nabokov's novel Pale Fire, "We are mau novel Pale Fire, "We are mauve at birth, then tea-rose, and later all kinds of repulsive col-ors." Agreement should be fairly universal. Black is no more a color, as such, than is white. Semel began these appearances when she was president of Calfornia Attorneys for Criminal Justice. As president, Semel wanted to educate the public about criminal defense issues, and it was in this spirit that on four occasions she climbed the scaffold in Camp O.J. Semel believes lawyers can't safely ignore the trial, which powed at least two legal dilem-mas." Day 105 concerns hair evidence. The witness on the stand is Douglas Derdrick, director of the BB1 sHair and Fiber Division. Through the countroom cameras, every color seems mixed with brown. The light is yellow-beige and deadly. In the shuffling silence, Marcia Clark poses a series of questions about forcibly removed hairs. about forcibly removed hairs. The last thing we hear her ask is, "How many of the hairs consistent with Ron Goldman did you find on the Rocking-

m glove?" "There were three," Deedrick says.

We return to the breezy scaffold, where Klieman says scaffold, where Klieman says confidently. This avery grue-some image, if you think it through. It fits in with the through, to fits in with the O.J. Simpson put his arm around Nicole Brown's neck, reach back, pull her head back, reach hack, pull her head back, reach hack, pull her head back, reach thack, pull her head back, reach thack, pull her head the head of the pull her head of the pury to remember, and it's one the prosecution wants the jury to remember, and it's a cutton's part. Now and then, Semel does get a chance to note aberrations. Of the vast defense and prosecution teams, she says, "I think that perhaps if there's one message that comes across to the American public as they watch this case, it's that this is almost sur energis — that is, it's almost sur energis — that is, it's almost stu generis — that is, it's unheard of, unprecedented, the way in which this case has been way in which this case has been tried by both sides." Later, an excited announ-cer in a pink jacket relates that juror 320 has been dismissed bet face. Klieman says, "This must be the most investigated jury of all time." Sernel con-curs, saying that jurors aren't usually scrutinized in this way. But the cameras must.

like milk. Deedrick estimates that we shed, on the average day, 100 strands of hair. Court TV, Semel says in her office, may make people over-confident about what they know, and what, as a conse-quence, jurors should decide.

"Perhaps the greatest danger of televised trials," she says, "is that people get the idea they are that people get the loca they are surrogate jurors, and they are not. They're watching another program altogether. Jurors are given certain admonitions and instructions by the judge that place upon them a moral and regai responsibility for now they listen and how they de-cide. No one watching the trial or reading about the trial can ever put themselves in the place of the jurors — can ever do that."

In exhibit K-1, Deedrick points to what he calls "dark medulla." It looks like marrow in a sliced bone, and the word are, Deedrick informs us, the hairs of Ron Goldman magni-fied 250 times. Above the chart, it's possible to see O.J. Simp-son. He looks at the witness stand, then at the chart, which faces away from him. We zoom

At times this endless slog through the swampy alphabet is so tedious, so bemired, that it's a wonder to me that the children don't revolt. But LeAnn, unflagging in her energies, cajoles them

For good humor evaporates when the inentions to me that the class will be acquiring yet another student, bringing the total o. 33. "It is just too many, kidd "in getting really fivursited." The new child, moreover, is from Sweden and speaks no English. He's also almost seven, making him the oldest child in the class by far Yet Le'un has been advised by the boy's father that Bjorn him to go to the bathroom. She, in turn, pointed out that the bathrooms are at the back of the classroom, and the children are all accustomed to getting up and going without asking and accounted to getting up and going without asking the students. "He said that wouldn't be sufficient," Le'Ann recounts mos Sao the countered. Well, are you saying I should remind him. "No. He will say no. You will have to order him," the father insisted.

Wednesday, January II — In a class full of blond children, Bjorn stands out as the blondest. He wears a pair of beige corduroy overalls and a long-sleved turthence that I can tell didn't come from Mervyn's or Target or Sears. His mother, dressed in slacks and a houndstooth jacket, squate next to him on the rug as the class goes through its morning drill.

As this morning's rotation begins, Bjorn's father tags along with his son, who 's in Group E, together with the Spanish spealers. When they make on to their next activity, LeAm tells me in a low, irrustanct voice, "I've never seen a kid who knows how to manipulate like he does. He's in total control. Never seen anything like it." More than just the Swedish colloquies are contributing to the new seen when the seen and the se any one culprit.

Part of the problem may be that the Fart of the problem may be that the children up in from with her have so much to think about these days. Thursday, February 16 — They are making progress, Group K, the slowest English speakers, are now working with the charts, reading semences made of simple words and rebuses (picture substitutes for words as yet unlearned). It will go to a swing. Martin reads, slow but steedy? I will mit go to a terele stoffer. Says Jorge. They still thalt, contounded, at times, for a long, apontizing speels that wat me had. The Spanish-speaking kids have moved into that sere, barren territory. When LeAnn asks Hector to point out all the Ms on the chart, I brace myself for more mind-lock. But he does it, and

LeAnn says, "Good job, Hector!" She's right in his face, beaming sincerity at him. "I am so proud of you."

When quiet Juan correctly identifies all the Ss on the page, several of the children break into applause. It's less for Juan's achievement than an expression of the rush they feel at getting through the letter page.

Friday, March 10 - LeAnn is back, after nearly a two-week absence for jury duty. She seems to have enjoyed it and tells me how she halped lead her group to convict an obvious punk accused of robbery.

She no longer has to listen to the quiet chatter of Bjorn and his father. They've gone for good, the father having decided that Bjorn needed to "play more," according to LeAnn, and transferred the boy to a private school. The truth is, he just didn't like me," LeAnn tells me. truth is, he just didn't like me. LeAnn tells me. "I didn't let Bjorn manipulate me the way he's used to doing with his father. One day I said to him, 'He thinks that he's in charge.' And his dad said, 'That's right.' I said, 'Well, I'm sorry. I'm the adult in this classroom.' "

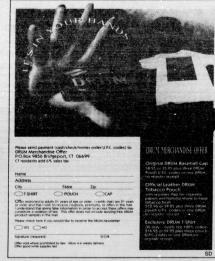

Wednesday, March 15 — Bjorn may be gone, but K-2 has acquired yet another young blond newcomer. Andrew sfamily, however, has lived in the neighborhood before; they moved out only while their house was undergoing some construction. Now LeAnn places the boy in the slowest English-Janguage group, where the drills seem to throw him. LeAnn is reassuring him. You just didn't learn thee skills at your other school:

just didn't learn these skills at your other school.

Once again, the most interesting interchanges this morning occur in Group E, among the Spanish speakers. "What makes you fee

replies. "When my mommy's not there." offers Susanne. "What makes you feel scared?" the teacher probes. "The sound in the night, when it was raining," answers Claudia. ("Do you believe this girl's English!" LeAnn exclaims to me. "It's just phenomenal.")

In answer to yet another question, Juan claims he sleeps in a reclining chair at night. Hector says he shares a bed with his mother and father, and Luis declares that his mother and father sleep in a fower bunk bed, while he and his baby sister take the top bunk.
Later that afternoon, when the children are gone. I return to ask LeAnn if she believes that Luis and his whole family share a bunk bed. "They live in a trailer," she replies. She's been out here at Christmakine, distributing food donations. "They don't have a bedroom." She adds that she's seen cnough of their homes not to be surprised by any of their answers; the other day several of the Bus Kids told her that they had never been

Thursday, March 30 — Something amazing has transpired in Group E. Frantic, inarticulate Hector has begun speaking in sentences. Before he would say, "Nrk. Keller" — shoe. "acompanied by a grunt. "Two or three words only," LeAnn says. "Now he can say, "Would you tie my shoe?"

I see the evidence of this when LeAnn leads a discussion with the Spansh Language kids about bediroon turniture." Luis, why do we put a lamp me. "So you won't get dark on yourself."

Asked the same question. Hector says you might need to turn on the light so you could call the police if a bad person were

A moment later, he's relling and the LeAnn diumises the group, he can't seem to stop talking but reappears at the teacher's side to show her the picture he drew of a ball and a soccer field.

Group L tasks the floor. LeAnn has begun teaching them about vowel sounds, a dismal morassi if ever there was one, yet out an't tell that from her demonent, will jubblin as she is, over Hector's breakhrough, she offers downish hand gestures to underscore the different sounders each vowel makes. She leads the contraction of the starting them called Ballows, and such childen open bert books. Hector appears once again at LeAnn's side. "Mrs. Kelley, can't do puzzled!" Other children interrupt with questions from time to

of the children up in front with the. Even without any direct interruptions, the noise in other parts of the room makes a hard to focus. You can hear the greaps murmur of the computer in the far distant corner. A tangle of competing voices rise from the back of the room, where children are working with one of the volunteer parents. The activities section breeds other out of the room.

The frequent visits here have changed my mind, made me agree that having 30-plus kindergartners in the room generates ioling currents of disarray and tension—at least with all these competing activities in progress. Now that I think of it, my Catholic grade school classnates and I spent most of our time sitting in rows, all doing the same thing under the nuns' hawk-reed services.

Thursday, April 27 — Easter vacation is over, and the children finally seem to have made the de-relupmental leap that LeAnn had hoped to see over Christmas. They know the routines so well that she barely has to explain the worksheets she hands out daily. With each rotation, they move with the assurance of commuters. surging through a suburban train station. There are times, when cAnn is reading to them as a group, that they sit motionless, every eve fixed upon her face.

So they try again, and it's obvious they want to be fluent; they're straining for it. But the words still atump them at times. During the slow spells, I can always amuse myself by observing the diversity in the children's bodies. Kirk stands a full head taller than Luis. One little girl still has such unformed, infantile features that can imagine slavng her down and diapering her. That she will grow into a woman seems almost unthinkable. Other children I can project forward in time. I can see longs, perhaps the handsomest child in the class, striding through already got the muculature, the classic facial bone arrecture; he only needs to grow. Sleepy Kirk too will break hearts. He has his sarent'i lanks, hear greac and crareny coloring. I can imagine

Hector has a different sort of man's body. that of a dedicated beer drinker's. But I can only see future selves in some of the children. Karlie and Elliot, for example, only look rsday, May 4 — I arrive to find the children at their desks Thursday, May 4—1 arrive to find the children at their desks, bent over toyor-colored construction paper. LeAnn has brought an incubator into the room and filled it with a dozen chicken eggs, and now she's told the kids to draw a picture and write something about it. The scene is teetering on the edge of chaos; six or seven children have their hands in the air, stymied by spellings. I jump children have their hands in the air, stymied by spellings. I jump in to help answer questions and in the process see some of the tremendous variation in their achievement. Juan, in contrast, has written "TH," then crossed that out and is staring, berefit, at the otherwise blank page. Later this morning, after LeAnn finishes with the first group, she has to call out step-by-step directions to Hector to get him to join Group E. "Just put the puzzle down on the floor. Put the pieces on top. Then come over here, Good, you can finish it Once settled in the group, his newfound zest for participating is still evident. He has his hand in the air most of the time, gasping for attention and woggling his fingers. When LeAnn ask him which pictures depict words starting with the M sound, he only gets "monkey" (and not "meat" or "mop" or "mirror"). But he is able to approach the chart and match big to small letters. "I match big M to little M," he says. "I match big P to little P. LeAnn gives his head a firm pat, grits her teeth with exhilaration and says, "Hector! Yes, my friend!"

Thursday, May 25 — The classroom's crawling with insects. LeAnn has been introducing them for weeks now. Books about insects, butterflies, and moths, as well as spiders and lizards cover the big round table in the front of the room, as do plastic and wooden busg and plastic anske. Peper bugs that march along one wall carry representations of the numbers i through 15 Butterflies mark the passage of the days on the calendar. Up in front, with the entire class before her, LeAnn spends often deather than the desired of the conditions of the counds, long and some defining the children on the coverl counds, long and

"Mark, did you learn the words I sent home with you?" "No," he declares, placidly. "But guess what? When you were gone [to a seminar], I was really good."

Santa Monica Boulevard has several small theaters where actors compete for a shrinking market of theatergoers. Last year, one of my friends, Pat Hume, was performing in a show called Head Shop. Pat's character. Dr. Sam, had just bid farewell to another character, Willy, Dr. Sam began doing some "business" downstage. ("Business" can mean dialogue, pastoming, movement, a idea, anything. pantomime, movement, a joke, anything... including doing nothing at all.) The lead and Dr. Sam was running out of things to keep him busy. As Dr. Sam piddled with props and murmured to the audience, Pat the actor contemplated what he'd do to this actress he thought was undermining his performance.

Pat finally realized that perhaps the delay was not the actress's fault. Willy was supposed to have made his exit, scurried down the alley, and helped the actress with a quick change. When the actress came onstage half dressed, with one breast exposed, Dr. Sam was certain

Willy was responsible. Or was he? Willy should have been onstage by this point, and now he was more than ten minutes late. Dr. Sam and the actress couldn't hang out indefinitely, so the actress left the stage in search of Willy, while Dr. Sam tried to keep up the charade of a professional show.

My partner Steve had just My partner Steve had just picked up a bunch of happy campers in the Tetons, and six of us were headed for Rocky Mountain National Park when we stopped at 3:00 a.m. on Interstate 80 near Rawlins, Wyoming, to pick up a motorist standing next to a disabled car. He turned out to be a driller on an olf rig who was going home early, as all of his hands were too drunk to work that night, and he wasn't walk-ing too steady either. We took him home, and he woke up his me to be took in the home of the all. Some of us sai in the living room of his trailer while he perched on a saddle in the perched on a saddle in the middle of the floor and explained the fine points of odeo. The rest of us sat in the kitchen with his sober half and learned about the job situation in the oil patch. Come 10:00 a.m. we crawled back into the bus and headed south, most of us sleeping. A little north of Fort Collins someone woke Sure enough, one of the pollu-tion-control hoses had come tiating those oil lease service roads. But with remperatures reaching 20 below 0, the heater left something to be desired. Later the bus went with me to Boston, and then after the third engine breakdown, it was put out to pasture in Plympton. Massachusetts, where it does doubte duty as a wood-shed and an eld transmission repository. Incidentally, here in the Northeast, old Volkswagens never die, they just rust loose and we had cracked the cylinder head with a lean mix-ture and hard driving. The local VW dealer wanted $800 to rebuild the engine. A private outfit in Boulder, advertising in the local equivalent of the San Diego Rearder, said they'd do it for $250 plus $50 towing. Well, market forces being what they are, we outful for, what loose and we had cracked the they are, we opted to go to Boulder. We slept on the hill sides above the city at night and came into town during the day. The three-day, $250 re-build stretched into ten days and $800. One of these carriers recently resolved her problem, and I thought your readers might be interested in what transited.

After years of suffering so-called "anxiety attacks," she called "anxiety attacks," she was granted a disability retirement from the postal service. She will now receive $900 monthly from the USPS, $1000 from Social Security, and $900 for two dependent children (who spend most of the time with their grandmother while Mom tries to be-come a rock star). I know from where I speak. I worked next to this woman for almost ten years, when she decided to come to work, that is. Let's see, $2800 monthly (nontawhile for life while nontaxable) for life. The universe created by the God-like painter is a conduit for emotion. It is not the subject represented in the painting that is its chief means of expressing feeling, but rather the abstract components, such as abstract components, such as line, shape, and — especially — color. Color's emotional expressiveness far outweighs its function of describing the ect. Consequently, the painter may freely exaggerate his col-ors or use them contrary to nature — as Gauguin does in the bright red Breton field of Vision After the Sermon, one of the boldest of his Pont-Aven pictures. (Symbolist poets use pictures. (Symbolist poets use words in much the same way: "The virgin, the lively, and the beautiful today, is it going to rip us with a drunken wing's blow?").

The effect of imaginatively handled color is potent but mysterious. Like all the abstract codes of painting, it is not subject to rational interpretation.
"Color, being itself enigmatic in the sensations it gives us, can...be employed only enig-matically. [We use it] to give the musical sensations that flow from itself, from its own na-ture, from its mysterious and enigmatic interior force." Note

Do you realize Anheuser-Busch uses over 5,000 workers to turn out more than 300,000 barrels of beer a day, while Portland Brewing Co. uses millions of workers to turn out just 140 barrels A day?

Here's the new beer that's causing a lot of talk. Brewed with a touch of Oregon clover honey, not so much for sweetness as for crispness. A delicious success. In bottles and on arduous, smoothly paved and graded.

The accessed data is illuminating but not glaring, instructive but not dogmatic.

With this workmanlike adaptation of the first installment in the series, writer and director Carl Franklin grad-uates from low-budget independence (One False Move) to the major-studio mainstream, and with no loss of mod-esty. The selection of period clothes and cars is excellent without ever being excessive. The camera, for the most part, elects to shun scenery and spectacle and to cozy up to the actors (Franklin is himself a former actor), maintaining a sense both of humanity and of humility, 25 well as a sense of obliviousness to the Big Picture. In other words, a sense of identification with the protagonist. The broader views of the residen-tial black neighborhood at the end—

the American Dream embodied in boxy bungalows, pridefully washed and polished cars, a private-enterprise

Note And userd — are as moving as the mean rank like the second of the three three rank like the second of the sec ochromed, dulled color. The ollow-the-leads, connect-the-dots plottine, uncluttered by any flash and crash, has no real snage ors narfs, but no real pull either. And the casting of lemnitry Beals, even if immune from accusations of "cheating," tends to give away a major revelation. The film-maker seems in some ways too honest, too modest, for his own good. Franklin certainly retains from the Mosley prose the distinctively and in tructively black voice, and protects it om the braggadocio and selfaggrandszement of the "blasplota-tion truliers of the not too distant-pact (Black Grum, Black Eye, etc.). Easy kassims, a nonprofessional PL in this substitute of the normal plant of the common Man than Mythic Hero: made plain enough, early on, in a vaguette of squalid see on the living-strosm couch with the girlfriend of a passed-out pal in the bedroom. And Oenzel Washington, one of our most attractive and able leading men, stays ruer to the times in this role — truer ue to the times in this role — truer the character's powerlessness and duerability — than he stayed, for ex-imple, in the role of the precocious chand in Glary. And even as Easy is no paragon of eaction hero, his confederate — the did-toothed, itchy-trigger-fingered ouse (a high, profile part for the low-offle Don Cheadle) — is a paragon nothing less than the psychopathic othing less than the psychopathic the forefather, if you please, of hetto gangbanger: "Easy, if you twant him killed, why'd you leave In twant him killed, why'd you leave with me?" Vet Mouse is just the mount on your side when you st creep up to a secluded moun-cabin with gun drawn. That sort moral ambiguity is part and parcel what was meant earlier by "tradi-tional and private-eve study and the second of the dear the second of the second of the dear the second of the world be difficult to imagine a stemporary black sensibility ommodated in the case-files of the social Holmesian super-sleuth. cal Holmesian super-sleuth.

of his new, little soul and the passing of Beth's nausea.

Beth and Andrew celebrated another passage yesterday. Andrew started preschool. I called Beth today to see how the day went. "I didn't know how he would be," Beth told have been a wreck. We did the orientation last week. On Friday over the weekend was to decorate the bucket. Andrew and I yent to Target and bought some spaceship stickers and he stack them on. Over the weekend Dan and I really built it up. I would tell Andrew, I don't get to ge to school. Katie [Andrew's two-year-old sister] doesn't get to go to school. I would pretend to cry, and Andrew Sould June. Andrew would laugh.

After several tries, the Duval County Conservation & Reclamation District board of directors has decided to apply for a $1.1 million toan from the Farmers Home.
 Administration to build and repair water storage facilities in San Diego and Benavides. The action will require an increase in water rates.

Duval County Conservation & Reclamation District president Ruben Lopez did not take well the board's decision to grant its manager, Rodolfo Bazan, "hiring and firing" authority. Lopez pointed out that the board could still fire Bazan.

It was San Diego's misfortune to be on Refugio's schedule the week after they lost to Odem. The state's number o' ranked 2-AA football team exacted revenge on the Va₁ueros with a 53-0 thrashing on Friday, September 22.

An Alice man was killed in a two-car collision in Southern Duval County on
