Bust Along the Border
By John Brizziola

"We can't tell you the most common places to hide contraband," says 38-year-old Terry Fox, a senior inspector with United States Customs at the San Diego Thomas Del Mar Intermodal Terminal, "but they're usually under a car, a truck, in the back of a pickup, or in a hollow tree. They're usually tied up, a lot of times you can see them." Fox says that the most common items smuggled into the United States are drugs, but other items such as weapons and electronics are also transported. "We don't want to give away our methods," Fox says, "but we're always looking for new ways to catch people." The Border Patrol is always on the lookout for new smuggling routes and methods.

Why Nobody Messes with Susan
By Thomas K. Arnold

With less than a year to go before San Diego voters decide whether to extend Mayor Susan Golding's stay in office, the city is in turmoil. A new service candidate had emerged, and the incumbent mayor, Susan Golding, had received a barrage of criticism. Some critics have called her a "rubber stamp" mayor who is more interested in politics than in governing. Others have accused her of being too soft on crime. A recent poll showed that only 39% of voters support Golding, while 58% oppose her. The campaign is heating up, and the race is wide open. The future of the city is in the hands of the voters. Will Susan Golding continue to lead San Diego, or will a new mayor take the reins? Time will tell.
Gloria's Glories

In other parts of the world, she would be called a shartner. Pronounced pretty much as you see it written, shartner is a Valhalla word from the German short running strong, to the world of leatheryothers. It is very much like a kind of girlie mask, but for men. It is also a very popular outfit in parts of the world where other suits and ties reign, a shartner is a "shade of black,"-

A shartner is a shartner. Technically, it's a name more common to the East Coast than the West, but a good many people in the West wear them as well.

In this area, a shartner is a "shade of black,"- a black suit with a black tie. It is often worn with a white dress shirt and a white vest.

Blind Among Enemies

BY PETER GRIFFIN

David had not been able to walk for several weeks. He was recovering from surgery to remove a tumor from his leg. Even though he could not walk, he continued to attend meetings of the support group for people with visual impairments. He felt a sense of solidarity with others who had faced similar challenges.

David's wife, Linda, was with him at the meeting. They had met at the hospital, where David was receiving treatment for his leg cancer. Linda had been a constant source of support for David throughout his ordeal.

As the meeting ended, David thanked Linda for her help. "I couldn't do this without you," he said. "You're my rock." Linda smiled and nodded in agreement.

"Thank you," she said. "I'll always be here for you."

Phone Matches Success Stories:
Daniel and Monica Munn

CHRISTIAN MAN looking for a woman with the right heart. Looks important.

Daniel: My friend and I were talking about this ad because the others woman's matching. I just wasn't interested in the right person. I thought I was going to have to go to another ad, maybe Australia.

Monica: I presented a few ads over several months but then I gave up for a while. I thought to myself, 'I'm a 35-year-old woman living in the U.S. In the words of a Christian ad and found the words... with the right heart.'

Daniel: The message Monica left was perfect. She said she was looking for a Christian who would settle down to be a husband and father. I thought it was a perfect match.

Monica: Our first date was three days before Christmas. We met at a park, and she was wearing a Santa hat. I had to bring my own white Christmas music. She asked, 'If you were married, would you buy your wife for Christmas?'

Daniel: I wanted to ask Monica out on a few occasions, but she didn't seem interested. When we went out, it was like she was looking for two kids. Everyone got along well.

Art-Lovers in a State of Crisis

Nowhere in the world will you find works of art with greater organic unity, aura, and presence than the paintings of Ross Blecker.

The renowned former sculptor Ross Blecker's paintings of the USA's mystical landscapes capture the essence of the American wilderness in a way that few others have ever achieved. Blecker's paintings are celebrated for their ability to transport the viewer to the heart of the natural world, a feat that is seldom replicated in contemporary art. Between 1979 and 1993, Blecker produced a series of paintings that have come to be known as the "Serene Landscape" series, which are renowned for their evocative use of light and shadow, and their ability to create a sense of the sublime.

These paintings are truly a work of art in every sense of the word. They do not strive to be realistic, but rather to evoke a feeling of serenity and awe in the viewer. This approach is known as "serenism," and it has become one of the defining characteristics of Blecker's art.

A simple line can start a whole new series. The Still Night Paintings series, which is one of the most beloved of Blecker's works, is a perfect example of this approach. The paintings are meticulously crafted, with each stroke of the brush carefully planned and executed. The result is a series of works that are both beautiful and thought-provoking, a testament to Blecker's dedication to his craft.

Blecker's art has been exhibited in galleries and museums around the world, and has been featured in numerous books and articles. His paintings are highly sought after by collectors, and his work continues to inspire artists and art lovers alike.

But Blecker's art is not just about the paintings themselves. It is about the experience of looking at them, of being transported to the natural world in a way that few other artists have ever been able to achieve. This is what sets Blecker's art apart from the rest. It is a true work of art in every sense of the word.

He enjoyed bitching, moaning, and grumbling about having to get up any time before noon or checkout time.

Wednesday morning, November 28th, I hooked up with about 8 a.m. to get over to Club Bocca for the grand opening. I was supposed to get there about 9:30 a.m. to help a friend of mine, but I had to get to the studio at 9 a.m. So, I decided to drop by the club before heading over to the studio. I was supposed to meet up with my friend at 10 a.m., but I had to get there earlier to help with setting up for the opening.

I called my friend to see if she was still at the club. She said she was, but she was waiting for me to arrive. I told her I was on my way and that I would meet her there. We decided to meet at the club around 10 a.m. to help with the setup for the opening.

We arrived at the club around 10 a.m. and started helping with the setup. We worked for about an hour and then we had to go back to the studio to get some more gear. We returned to the club around 2 p.m. to help with the final touches before the opening.

The club was completely remodeling and it looked great. The walls were painted white and the floors were made of wood. The lighting was fantastic and the layout was perfect. We worked for about another hour and then we had to leave to get back to the studio.

I was watching Dick, not for his performance, but for possible equipment failure with his drum kit—the same drum kit for 13-plus years.

It was almost 6:30 p.m. when we walked into the space that looked like a warehouse. The venue, Tower 360, was an old参加凤凰城的活动并注册的场地方name. From the outside, it looked like an industrial building, but inside, it was a spacious and intimate venue.

The stage was set with a drum kit that had been with Dick since the beginning. The drums were well-worn, with the old finish peeling off in places. Dick was dressed in his usual black shirt and jeans, and he was focused on his playing.

As Dick started to play, I noticed that the snare drum was slightly askew. I wondered if it was the equipment failing, or if it was just part of his style.

I decided to ask Dick about the drums after the show. He told me that the snare drum was his favorite, and he had used it for many years. He said that the slight tilt was actually a part of the drum's character. He laughed and said, "You can't beat a drum that's been around a while."

I walked towards Dick, and as I talked, I noticed a slight tremble in his left hand. I asked him if he was okay, and he nodded yes.

Dick told me that he had been having some trouble with his left arm, and he was considering getting a new drum kit. I asked if he had thought about retiring, but he shook his head and said, "No way. I love this stuff too much to give it up."

Dick continued playing, and I was struck by his passion and dedication to his craft. Despite his physical challenges, he continued to perform with grace and skill. I left the show feeling grateful for the opportunity to witness such a talented musician at work.

NOMINATIONS

For the cooking book of the year, the judges have selected three finalists:

2. Rollerblading Cookbook by Jane Smith (Published by Random House, 1995)
3. Rollerblading Delights by Alex Johnson (Published by HarperCollins, 1995)

FULL REVIEW

Rollerblading Recipes by Mary Berridge is a unique culinary project that takes cooking to a new level. The book is a collection of recipes that can be cooked while rollerblading. The judges were impressed by the creativity and feasibility of the recipes, which include things like banana split smoothies and chocolate-covered strawberry pizzas. The book also includes tips on rollerblading safety and nutrition. Overall, it's a fun and innovative addition to the cookbook genre.

Gutsy and Rich Flavor

"Now this is real Mexican. You don't get it at Taco Bell."

It really pays to stretch your culinary imagination and explore new avenues. Trying out the menu at El Compadre Mexican Restaurant was one such culinary adventure. I was pleasantly surprised by the rich flavors and authentic dishes that this restaurant offers.

The decor is simple yet inviting, with wooden tables and comfortable seating. The menu lists a variety of dishes, from appetizers to desserts. I started with the enchiladas, which were filled with beans and cheese and smothered in a spicy tomato sauce. The enchiladas were served with a side of rice and beans, and both were very satisfying.

For my main course, I chose the carne asada, which is a popular Mexican dish made from grilled beef. It was cooked to perfection, tender and juicy, and the flavor was outstanding. The dish came with a side of Spanish rice and beans, which complemented the meat perfectly.

I also tried the tres leches cake for dessert, which was a delicious treat. The cake was moist and light, with a sweet and creamy filling.

Overall, El Compadre Mexican Restaurant offers a great dining experience with delicious food and reasonable prices. It's definitely a place worth revisiting!
