Phone Matches Success Stories: Melinda & Tom Balsamo

ITALIAN, 31, single. Hi ladies, I'm just a nice guy seeking a woman to treat like a lady! Honesty, communication a must. Offer you can't refuse!

Ton: I would advertise in spurts, depending on whether I was dating someone or not. This ad got three responses.

Melinda: Answering the ad was all my roommate's idea. She said. "This is the way you meet nice professional men." So we'd go through the paper together and pick out the good ones. I liked Tom's ad because I've always found Italian men romantic.

Tom: We met outside of Trophy's and I had a rose waiting for her under my front seat. Then we drove over to Seaport Village, walked around for a while, and had a couple of drinks on top of the Hyatt. That night we talked about a lot of different things.

Melinda: He told me he was a Dallas Cowboys fan. My family's from that part of Texas, so that was acceptable.

Tom: We went out the very next night to see Carlito's Way. Melinda: A nice romantic movie. He also gave me a little stuffed bear we had seen the night before in Seaport Village.

Tom: The thing that I like the most about Melinda is her little girl innocence. She's such a beautiful person, and so easy to get along with. But we came very close to breaking up a month after we met.

Melinda: Tom was overwhelming at first. I was afraid he was just trying to charm me.

Tom: Melinda was indecisive. She told me she wanted to go out with other guys, and then she said she hoped to find someone else like me. I told her she wouldn't. Melinda: The next week I had a car accident. I think that's the thing that really made Tom: I went to the hospital to pick her up, and did anything I could to help her. She realized I was going to be there when it counts.

Melinda: Then came Valentine's Day, when he taped candy hearts all over the seats of my car and stuffed the inside with balloons.

Tom: The night we got engaged, I told Melinda I had won a dimer/limo package on the radio. We had dinner at The Shores in La Jolla, and then rode over to the cove and walked down to the beach. After I proposed, the first words out of her mouth were, "You lied to me!"

Melinda: We got married on March 25 at the Little Chapel of the Roses and then drove up the Coast Highway to San Francisco.

Tom: I was kind of hesitant at first to tell people how we met, but I think it's a lot better than meeting someone in a bar. As you get older, that scene gets really old.

Melinda: I work with a lot of single women, and when I told them, they said, "0h, I don't know if I'd be as lucky as you." But my roomante — the one I used to look through the Reader ads with — she also found someone through Phone Matches." They got married a month after they met.

I'm Bringing a Special Pair of Panties I Think You'll Like

In spring of 1989 I received a small package from a woman I hadn't seen in 20 years. She was my high school weerheart. Her name was Liz. The package contained a pair of trick sun-glasses — the kind with mitrored uide panels that let you see what; behind you — and a note which was not to be a support of the part of th

It is not so much current an through the circuits for so long they fused abut. By rendering some of these impassioned pleas, declarations and endearments, accusations and raid-endearments, accusations and raid-and fingers as 1 type, maybe some insight will be provided, some empathy or homeopathic magic.

Six years ago, Liz wrote, in part:

Dear John, It's been a while, a little over a month to be almost exact. But you know that. I've missed you and I wished I hadn't gone this long without answering your let-often this past month, it hurs. It's such a fragile thing. I have a first play agames with you. I value your friendship too much, and life is complicated enough on its own. Unfortunately, mine isn't going real well right now, as you are somewhat aware, and I'm not quite myself... I guess I'm not as resilient as I'd like to believe...

I can't remember the circumstances she was refer-ring to — I think it was a divorce from her hus-band, a friend of mine and a drummer in the band I was in years ago. (Sometimes I believe she mar-ried him to spite me.) The point is, I think, she was distancing hereal from any responsibility for these overtures, hedging her bets, mixing messages.

She goes on to write, "You and I are both aware of the obstacles; the distance between is, the changes we both been through, and the possibilities... I can't help feeling concerned at you we already changed your mind or remited with Faye or a dozen other things.

than you were thinking of coming."

Valentine's Day! If that was conscious timing on my part, I neither remember it nor would I admit it. But Valentine's Day comes up again and again in these letters and over the course of several relationships.

Do you remember the other night I told you about a note I had saved from this priest at St. Mark's, Father Michael? He was responding to my reaction over the fact that our relationship (yours and mine) was coming to an end. I was feeling quite shattered. This is what he wrote:

Here's a bit from "Flamingo Feather" that came to mind while we were talking. I guess it came to mind more in response to what I read in your face than what you were

The next day I called back to apologize, feeling I might have been a bit on the sleazy side. She said I had told her nothing she hadn't thought about herself but was very disappointed that I felt I had to call and "take it all back." I didn't understand. She bung up the

You know, it's really too bad you felt compelled to call me Sunday to apologize for the night before. Just the fact that you felt like you needed to explain that you had said things in a drunken stupor seemed so sophomoric; something a teenaged boy would tell a girl so there wouldn't be any misunderding about the romp in the back seat the night before. ...Please don't misread this — I'm not

You see what I mean about Fave. I edited the possibly obscene or of that, believe it or not, but here was a beauty with the passion of the truly "touched," as they used to say. I haven't seen Faye for over five years now, but I ran into her brother last year in a bookshop in La Jolla. I asked him how she was doing and he said, "Don't was all he said.

"She needs help. Hopefully she's getting it where she is now"

"Was it...?"

"You? No. Drugs mostly." He left, embarrassed. I wondered if he hated me for what my role in her undoing might have been.

if he hated me for what my role in her undoing might have been. I've been "in love" four times, maybe five. That's entirely too high a figure. I would distrust anyone's sensibilities if they told me they'd been "in love" more than once or twice in their lives. I now consider it neurotic behavior on my part — compulsive roman-ticism, a combination of lunacy and idiocy. Too late, the damage done, I believe I am cured. Any vestings of romance I may have let' courage stir me but love scenes seem a personal insult. I don't write love scenes anymore. I write sex scenes, but they tend to be aborted, awkward, haunted by a middle-aged man trying to hide that he's crying.

about to, anima, that he's crying.

I loved Faye. I loved them all. It's not enough; in fact, it means less than you think — it seems to mean almost nothing. Men who have slaughtered their families with shotguns say, "I loved 'em. They're

My first novel was coming out, and I had to sign copies in New York, Boston, and Philadelphia the following month. She wrote:

You're right, Ilive in outer space where dreams and visions have the universe as their playground and my heart flew into "low" with you.

You eyes were my sun, and I worshiped every glint, thying further into their fire. Your words and music pierced my soul with joy and desire — hope.

In the process of setting this down it is becoming more apparent that love letters, no matter how many, cannot constitute any history of the heart. I am reduced, at the moment, to tossing them all in the air, picking at each of them randomly. By sheer odds, volume alone, it is always Faye's letters that flutter to the keyboard.

Cass and I were off and on for two and a half years. She could not let go of the security Anthony offered, and she wal-fled back and forth between the two of us. After not seeing her for almost a year, a card was forwarded by my publisher. Oddly, I was living only a few miles from Cass. She had drawn hearts along the borders and wrote:

Happy Valentine's Day, John! Are you in Timbuktu? I still think of you. I'm free now to love you. and I feel so very much for you! Love, Cass

That night, while Jack slept. Ilay awake and thought about what had happened that after-noon. That I'd committed adultery, and with a man I knew only to speak with in the most banal social manner, did not then seem as outlandish as in fact it was. Peter fels familiar, out as it I'd Lewone him without the seem as the second of the fact if was. Peter felt familiar, not as if I'd known him since childhood, but rather as if all these years I'd been expecting him, that he had been promised to me; and so I was not so much surprised, perhaps, as I was relieved that the promise had been fulfilled. He for whom I

John Markoff at the UCSD John Markoff at the UCSD Bookstore, Price Center, Fri-day, January 26, Abe Opincar was allowed to do a great dis-service. His coverage was as an agent provocateur with a puz-zling passion for the perceived underdog Kevin Mitnick, the computer criminal who'd been tracked down primarily by Shimomura's expertise in 1995. From the gist of Opin-car's article I wasn't aware that the had any inkling of what the book Takedown revealed about book Takadown revealed about the authors or their subject. Having read the book, I found it quite fascinating in terms of the human characters that were written about and the de-scription of the sources from which computer detectives are able to get information. In his bizarre attack on authors Shi-momura and Markoff, Mr. Opincar showed contempt for the ability of the Reader's pubthe ability of the Reader's pub-lic to make up their own, minds regarding the authors' being Kevin Mintick's victims. I feel unclear as to why Mr. Opincar was given the privi-lege of expressing an opinion on a subject like safeguarding computer privacy, when he seems to have no moral posi-tion that is recognizable. For one human being to love another human being that is perhaps the most difficult task that has been entrusted to us, the ultimate task, the final test and proof, the work for which all other works is merely prepared with another person — it is a high inducement for the individual to ripe to become sometimenting in himself; to become words to become sometiment probe them. If it is a rest, demanding claim on himself for the sake of another person; it is a great, demanding claim on hims. something in the chooses him and calls him to vast distances.

Married Love

You and I Have so much love That it Burns like a fire.

In which we bake a lump of clay Moided into a figure of you And a figure of me. Then we take both of them, I hen we take both of them.
And break them into pieces,
And mix the pieces with water,
And mold again a figure of you.
And a figure of me.
I am in your clay.
You are in my clay.

- Kuan Tao-Sheng translated by Kenneth Rexroth and Ling Chung

Without neglecting their "entertainment" value, the two series will promote the art of "reading" or analyzing films. Dr. Renee R. Curry, Associate Professor of Literature and Writing and Chair of the Film Studies Working Group at California State University San Marcos, will introduce each film and will facilitate discussion after each showing.

Due to the mature nature of all these films, minors cannot be admitted and are strictly prohibited from attending either series. Proof that viewers are at least 18 years old is required.

These films are being shown in 16 mm format and may not exactly match the experience of 35 mm film in movie theaters.

Irin 1665 marked the end of Time, so there was no escape. Clarvoe suggests that an inner call motivated Graunt, the Mayor (Sir John Lawrence), and others to come together, literally in the face of death, and defy their urge for isolation. They became 'loose-ends,' joining. The play has some slow spots.—it is almost, but not quite, dialogue beavy. It's funnier than the opening, night performance gave it cents fit better than others (one heard imitations of famous English actors). But overall the Fritz opens the new year with an intelligent, ultimately moving production. Under Christina Courtenay's savvy disection, the and does excluded work, with the weakful Debraid work, with the standish Debraid to such execution of the standish plague re-lated belong, all debrends with the standish plague re-lated belong, all debrends with the standish plague re-lated belong, all debrends with the standish plague and and trees to sing thread into book land the standish plague and with the same of that Depts in most with the same of that Depts in most with the same of the Depts in most with the same plague. Asking Danelli about Felix Cavaliere, he quickly answers,
"I have no idea what he's doing.
I heard he was in some defunct Ringo band or something."
(Cavaliere was billed as key-boardist in Ringo Starr's All-Star Band and was slated All-Star Band and was slated to play Humphrey's in San Diego last August, but the tour was canceled allegedly due to health problems in Ringo's family, "But somethin' hap-pened, I don't know." Danelli seems uneager to pursue the subject.

"Any particular reason why you guys don't come to San Diego more often?"
"We don't come out here enough, man. For some reason we don't get booked out here."
When asked why the group did not perform "I Ain't Gonna Ear Out My Heart Anymore," Danelli answers:

DUNCAN SHEPHERD death, no effortless roundup of read-ily available titles on the repertory circuit. (Ray died in April of 1992, shortly after receiving one of those honorary life-achievement Oscars by which the Motion Picture Academy transparently attempts to demonstrate Hollywood's cosmopolitanism and to disprove its provincialism.) This is in-stead a sort of travelling exhibition of works of Satyajit Ray."

Each of the nine pieces in it gets a week to itself, another difference from the Malle eight, subdivided as they ted one night apiece. And only the first in line — Pather Panchali, 1955, the chronological first of the thirty-seven items in Ray's filmography — will play at the Ken. The rest will appear in conscutive weeks at the Hillicrest. (I can't say why, Maybe some sort of elementary intelligence test to weed out

Any personal preferences expressed above, I should be quick to add, are strictly provisional, insofar as they are founded on fading memory rather than on fresh observation. Accordthan on fresh observation. Accord-ingly, the best litting about this series from my own selfish perspective is that it gives me the chance to change my opinions. The worst thing about it of the change are de-thought of Ray's complete cred-ists in the press note previously seem; are de-thought of Ray's complete cred-ists in the press note previously seem; are distributed on the change of the change are still plenty of those. Inevitably in the course of his career there arose charges in some sectors of a restricted vision, misguided priorities, bourgeosisfication. Should it be mandatory at this point to summon up the likes of Jane Austern and Henry James as specimens of first-rate artists in social binders? (Not that Ray was as narrowly bindered as all that!). Nearer at hand, we need no more expect a full portrait of Indian society from Ray than we expect (or get) of Swedish society, as an example, from Ingmar Bergman. Of course Sweden lacks that compelling Third Worldi-ness that automatically transforms so many outsiders into Nosy Parkers and Mr. Fix its Regrence would forecer. Mr. Fix-its.
