"THE UNIVERSE IS A BAR."

Buck says between swigs of beer, in one of those lines that led the late poet William Stafford to observe, "Everyone wanders into poetry sometimes."

If Buck hadn't just told me he's 61, I might have guessed 85, partly because he's toothless, his chin and nose in profile about ball cap. He's wearing jeans, with a blue-and-green windbreaker. His blue eyes have the unfocused look of the legally blind. "It's no big deal," he says. "I've done bad things, and God punished me, but I do miss my books." (CONTINUED ON PAGE 14)

Requiem for a Community Garden

Some friends and I are planting a little spruce in a vacant lot. It seems at unimpeachably good action, and watering it stands for nurture is general. A few hours later, we are amazed when a paddy wagon pulls up next to us, policerone rip the sapling out of the ground and also a few beforeggled daisies, and drive away with the greenery under arrest. Restaurant Reviews and Guide admits to having begun with great ambitions and small hopes. "I still teach four months in the auturnn at New York University." Levine explains. That schedule allows him to spend time with two of three sons, the clidest a sculptor, and three grandchildren in the area. One grandchildren in the area. One suspects that it also feeds the poems because Levine is primarily an urban poet. Levine's wife, Pranny, had answered'the telephone, and we spoke briefly of our time together when her husband and I were when her husband and I were among those teaching workshops at the old Fort Worden in Port Townsend, Washington, in 1981. Cafeteria meals were so unappetizing that Franny voluntered to cook and serve dinner for the faculty in the former commandant's house. Only Tom Robbins resisted coq au vin and similar defectables for the cafeteria menus.— So

Levine is forthright in his criticisms of academia. "The academic world touches millions of us who go through it," he says in one published interview, "and then there are the thousands who remain in it until they turn into bookends or erasers or exist infinitive."

Time: 1900.

On a summer night in Oakland, three teenagers drive by an East Oakland corner in a battered green Chrysler Neeport. One of the young men — Tony (Ear Tone) Davis — sticks a. 45 out the Chrysler's window and shoots. The car speeds away, leaving two young peeple wounded and a 13-year-old boy dead. Killers and victims are African-American, the killers have all been involved in reack sales. One of 165 murders that occurred in Oakland that year (1990), the killing gree out of a big-th their and beating suffered by one of the time, in a tragic comedy of errors, the wrong englishers of the extreme of the interest and its friends and the neighborhood where the killing occurred.

Rivin explained, about his book's beginnings, "Taere was an epidemic of violence, young people in Oakland getting killed or going to jail for murder. I vanied to devie into a single case, and by telling the stories of the 4 unities and young men involved. I wanted to get beyond the Rivin the people in Challeng his book by Tooking for a case with a teen victim and these preptrators." It's a great climax yet anticlimatic, because it's not like you can sit there starting at it all day. So I talked on new housing policy. The book was difficulty released early in September.

Value were Rivin's hopes for the book?

The a real frantister. I was hoping that a good review in the New York Times, for instance, would categold the book into a spotlight, not get me on TV or anything, but perhaps get me a media formus that intellectuals listen to because I wanted to get policymakers and journalists to care about this epidemic of violence. So, basically, I was hoping that the book would have sufficient success to allow me to make a living as a writer of bocks and that the book would create enough interest in its subject to further the debate."

Early reviews from San Francisco papers praised the book. "Rivlin chronicles a familiar tragedy, but he has given it a human face." Robert: The deleted word in my ad was "callipygous." It means "firm and shapely buttocks." I thought it would insure that whoever read it and responded would have a sense of humor and be intelligent enough to look something up in the dictionary.

Robert: Martha says if she had seen the original version, she probably wouldn't have called. Thank goodness you have editors there.

Martha: Callipygous didn't bother me that much. But I did find it odd when he called me at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Robert: I'm an early riser. What else am I going to do?

Martha: I had moved to California nine months before we met, with the idea of doing the singles ads once I not here. So I answered a cruple of ads and went out with another engineer. In fact he was a stress analyst, like Robert. San Diego Reader Phone Matches

Robert: There's probably only 300 or 400 of us in the whole country.

Martha: 1 like a mechanically-minded person who's able to solve problems. Once we were down in Baja on a dirr road in the middle of nowhere and the car broke down. Rob fixed it in about 15 minutes.

Robert: The other day Martha dismantled the right side of her car door to fix the window. I've seen her tearing apart the seat belt retractors. And she does a pretty good job of arc

Martha: The very first time we met was on Little Black Hill in Rancho Bernardo. I was supposed to watch Robert and his buddies go paragliding. But one of Robert's friends was an instructor, and the next thing I knew I was flying off the 300-foot hill.

Robert: Then I discovered that she can outski me in her bedroom slippers.

Martha: We continued to paraglide and ski and fiddle around with boats. Although a lot of our dates were at Home Depot.

Robert: We even thought about getting married there. Instead we put some grass in the backyard and got married overlooking the ocean. It was pretty dramatic. Especially when a friend of ours paraglided off one of the cliffs.

Martha: The wedding was on November 11. We still have leftovers in the freezer. Neither of us had been married before, and now we're newlyweds.

Robert: We've encouraged some of our single friends to advertise in Phone Matches', and several of them are at various stages of trying it. I started out by looking at the various stages of trying it. I started out by looking at the bay an engine lathe through the newspaper; it would shay be gone by the time I called. So I took out my own at and wound up with two lathes. I kept one and sold the other. The rest is history.

Phone Matches Success Stories:

Martha Mellor & Robert Bryson

OUTDOORSY AND INTELLIGENT, yet honestly and truly [deleted]; to ski, fly,

Robert: The deleted word in my ad was "callipygous." It means "firm and shapely buttocks." I thought it would insure that whoever read it and responded would have a sense of humor and be intelligent enough to look something up in the dictionary.

Martha: Callipygous didn't bother me that much. But I did find it odd when he called me at 7 o'clock in the morning.

Robert: I'm an early riser. What else am I going to do?

Martha: I had moved to California nine months before we met, with the idea of doing the singles ads once I got here. So I answered a couple of ads and went out with another engineer. In fact he was a stress analysit, like Robert. San Diego Reader Phone Matches

Robert: There's probably only 300 or 400 of us in the whole country.

Martha: I like a mechanically-minded person who's able to solve problems. Once we were down in Baja on a dirt road in the middle of nowhere and the car broke down. Rob fixed it in about 15 minutes.

Robert: The other day Martha dismantled the right side of her car door to fix the window I've seen her tearing apart the seat belt retractors. And she does a pretty good job of arc

Martha: The very first time we met was on Little Black Hill in Rancho Bernardo. I was supposed to watch Robert and his buddies go paragliding. But one of Robert's friends was an insurencer, and the next thing I knew I was flying off the 300-foot hill.

Robert: Then I discovered that she can outski me in her bedroom slippers.

Martha: We continued to paraglide and ski and fiddle around with boats. Although a lot of our dates were at Home Depot.

Robert: We even thought about getting married there. Instead we put some grass in the backyard and got married overlooking the ocean. It was pretty dramatic. Especially when a friend of ours paraglided off one of the cliffs.

Martha: The wedding was on November 11. We still have leftovers in the freezer. Neither of us had been married before, and now we're newlyweds.

Robert: We've encouraged some of our single friends to advertise in Phone Matches", and several of them are at various stages of trying it. I started on by looking at the women's ads, but then I remembered the trune I tried to buy an engine faile through the newspaper; it would always be gone by the time I called. So I took out my own and and wound on you'll two buy and and wound on you'll two buy and and wound on you'll two buy.

I have always hated the Red Hot Chill Pep-pers. To me, their punk/funk hybrid always seemed calculated for suburban jocks who wanted funk without African Americans and punk without politics. Musically, they struck me as unfunky. I thought it was no accident that the period when the Chill Peppers started to become a flexific among college students coincided with the period when Issues. To dispense with the negatives, service was excruciatingly slow. Every dish at El Embarc-dero was crafted rather than cooked, but what would they have done if the house had been filled? We got there at 8:50 and left shortly before $200 p.m. So that's one area in which improvement was needed.

The other has to do with prices, the least expensive entrées cost $18.00. These were gulf snapper steamed in parchment and breast of chicken with vegetables. Both were low fat and least a steam engine and three passenger cars of the National City & Otay Railroad Apause on a trestle near the Sweetwater Dam in this 1888 photo. Owned by the San Diego Land & Town Company (which, in turn, was a subsidiary of the Santa Fe Railroad), the NC&O Railroad operated on some 29 miles of track built for its use in the South Bay region. (At the turn of the century, the railroad hauled millions of pounds of citrus - lemons and oranges - to the piers of San Diego.)

These cars are being pulled by what was commonly referred to as a steam "dummy": a small, boxlike steam engine suitable for short trips. The passengers in this photo may be headed to the April 19, 1888, "Water Festival" in National City that heralded the opening of the Sweetwater Dam (also built by the Land & Town Company); then again, they may be land speculators out for the day, ferried around the South Bay and Tijuana area to view one of the Land & Town Company's many promotional
