FLIPPER VICTORIOUS

IN 1960 SAN DIEGO WAS THE MOST ACTIVE TUNA PORT IN THE WORLD. The fleet consisted of about 135 boats. At any given time, 30 or 40 were tied up at the Embarcadero, in port between trips to the tropical grounds, to places as distant as the Galápagos Islands.

There was the familiar sight of cotton bait nets drying after being cured or of the new, large nylon nets just coming into use. And nearby were the canneries that employed hundreds of people. And the steamy, billowing smell of fish processing. (continued on page 16)

Between 1982 and 1984, the canneries finally left California. One reason was the warm-water El Niño of 1981 in the eastern Pecific to decrease greatly. Another was the expense of meeting standards imposed by the EPA; a lot of water was used to clean fish in the can-ning process. But the primary reason was the cost of labor. Cannery workers were getting more than $10 an hour, and ican canneries were competing with Asian labor at 30% to 50%

neries would no longer buy any mature yellowin tuna caught in the eastern tropical Pacific.

This began the dolphin-sale era, another revolution in the San Disgottuna fishery. In the spring of 1990, 35 of the 65 U.S. boats of over 860-10 on capacity were working in the castern tropical Pacific. By the fall of 1990, only 11 boats remained. By 1993 as U.S. boats were working in the Erit Julius Zolezzi, whose family had been in tuna fishing since 1928, owned foor boats in 1990. He sold the smalless to outle the other three for fishing in the west in the mate, which had to be 600 feet deep, because the water was so warm and the titermocline so deep, the tuna were driven for ther down to find cool water. Each net cost about $400,000. Big-ger hydraulic systems were needed to haul them, and each boat required upgrades in its electronic and sonar systems. By 1995, 44 purse scients remained in the Pacific fleet. Of the dor 5 hoast still working in the eastern Pacific, 20 a water enric-cing dolphins and selling their catch to canneries in Costa Sica. And so the question ance, How many other admindi is a dolphin worth!

Though the U.S. flext, for the most part, was no longer fish-

The irony was that though the U.S. fleet had abandoned (or been driven out of) the eastern fishery, the Latin American boats there had participated in th IATTC program, and by 1991 dolphin kills were down to 27,000

In the fight, for the couvarior, anything was fair, the

In 1992 the International

In 1992 the International Dolphin Conservation Act was passed and signed by President Bush, calling for a moratorium on the scining of dolphins — a U.S. quota for zero dolphin kills, with penalties that included boas seizur. A contingency calling for agreement from Mexico and venezue, nowever, dir-mately prevented implemen-tation. And under Mexican ini-tiation, a GATT panel found the U.S. embargo on dolphin-unsafe nations illegal, claiming unafe nations illegal, claiming hat one counsy rouldn't impose environmental standards on another when operating outside its jurisdiction, and recommending a suntilateral program. Then in June 1992, IATTC presented the La Jolla Agreement, a proposal for multilateral procession in the eastern Pacific, with goals of reducing the deaths of dolphins from 19,500 in 1993 to 5000 in 1999

In San Diego, 14 commercial bait boats remain, still going to southern waters, though it's a tricky business with the red tage and licensness with the red tape and licens-ing involved. Those boats recently finished their season, outfitted for trolling, and moved off to Pitcairn Island, near French Polynesia in the Western Pacific, to fish for albacore. After all, albacore has always, been the basis of the California tuna And there are still those 46 boats, off in the western Pacific, with their helicopters and their hundred-fathom nets, and their hundred-fathom nets, catching 200,000 tons of tuna a year, the boats behind the can with the emblem of the dolphin on it, fishing a century after the Portuguese whalers who preceded them.

May: When I first placed the ad, I was just looking for some men to occialize with. Now I think that maybe I did want a partner but didn't want to damil it to myself.

Will: We just celebrated our third anniversary in Baja, at the same place where we had our hoseymon. That was the camping trip where it rainered for 24 hours and everything sastned floating away — including the tent. It was a test, and we survived it.

Mary: We designed our wedding bands to have a mountain range, a desert, and an ocean on them. Different sides turn up at different times. It reminds me of the ebb and flow of a relationship.

Will: We get angry and we fight, but there seems to be an unbreakable connection between us that we never attack or jeopardize.

ATTRACTIVE, TALL, warm-hearted, female professional, 47, spiritually oriented, seeking caring, mellow, responsible male, prefer over 5 10" and nonsmoker. For fun, walks, movies, reading, dinners, camping.

Will: I didn't want a walk-on-the-beach lady — I wanted a camper. There's a difference between loving the outdoors and just visiting it. And Mary's ad was the only one that said she liked camping. To me, it implied simplicity and non-materialism. Which in Mary's case, Jurned out to be true.

Mary: This was the first ad I placed. I tried to be clear about what I was looking for, and to describe myself succinctly. I intentionally put in my age because I didn't want anyone to imagine that I could have more children.

Will: Both of us already have children. Mary described her daughters in her recorded message, and I liked that. It was important to me to have a relationship where our families could fit together.

Mary: I still remember the message Will left. His voice was upbeat but comfortable. Instead of focusing on what he looked like, he talked about his job and his daughters.

Will: The first time we met was at Quiig's, in Ocean Beach. We had some wine and talked for a couple of hours. It was a very revealing conversation. Mary: Will was far and away the most interesting first date I had.

Will: After that, we talked on the phone every day but had trouble getting together again. I'm a management consultant and I travel a lot.

sweaty striving after profundity, is a nice smooth swift shallow genre piece with plenty of rude dialogue and bru-tal action. The nocturnal assault on Home Sweet Home by three dark shapes lugging shotguns and the foot chase across steeply angled roorfops and onto a movine streeticar are essecially well staged. (I thought, though, in the first of those scenes, the hero lost some valuable time by inexplica-bly swimming instead of sprinting back to his besieged cabin; but I also thought his inability, before that, to draw the thunderstorm was terrifically pulse-quickening.) The bare plot isn't much: some simple, elementary, weakly motivated exposition setting up a self-perpetuating program of tit-for-tat, met-tail of white hair on a dome of irk, is competent, certainly not overly infidence-inspiring, in a starring role hich twenty years ago would surely ive gone either to Burs Reynolds or have gone either to Bur. Reynolds or to Charles Bronson — and to say so is not at all to denigrate the role, but to flatter the action in it. Kelly Lynch (first line: "Lunch!") lacks the per-ture of the period of the same of the called and idolated wife, but I liked her reading of the line after the's aked for a description of the ugly mug who had made a threating house call in broad daylight: "I don't know. He (emphasis on "bad"). Many Stuar Marcents in the movie (or rather, ott-access is the movie (or rather, ottcents in the movie (or rather, ott othunun um), is odd casting, also Suthunun um), is odd casting, also, as ausbatance-abusing stripper — so odd, in fact, that no actual stripping shall be called for. Teri Hatcher on the other hand seemed perfectly in her element as the amoral, provocative, manipulative, and overconfident forme featale. But then, I've never seen her as Lois Lane.

Dead Man, in a different genre, is a different matter. Not even the thirstisted of Western fans could work up much enthusiasm over the news that im larmans, ho all people, had made one. And spirits could only sink lower on our first introduction to the hero of the property of the pro a greenhorn named William Blake (Johnny Depp in wire-tim spec, pick) (Johnny Depp in wire-tim spec, pick) said, bow tel, travelling westward from a clackety-clacketing train, in a series of discrete, undramatic "moments" threaded togather with blackouts. Clackety-clack, clack-ty-clack, the point journey such point journey such bound and determined to set a new record for the earliest admittance of an entire movie to a state of utter borecdom.

The comical but wise Indian (Gary Farmer) who befriends the greenhorn and provides guidance in the wild-erness is worldly enough to be acquainted with William Blake the poet ("Every Night & every Morn," he quotes, "Some to Misery are Born"), but not worldly enough to be able to tography, and perhaps for the throt-ting tightness of the directorial reins, perhaps even for a random couple of chuckles, Pead Man is not nothing. As a Western, it's worse than those above-mentioned thirsty Westerr fans, of the canteen in a much-anth-logged Max Brand story, in which, you might recall, the fleeng desperaded discovers too list under the desperaded discovers too list under the third than the story of the control of the winc. #

The two best entrees that we tried were the seared salmon ($19.50) and the sauted Pacific halibut ($23.50). The curry of shrimp, lobster, and scallops with jasmine rice ($22.00) and the seared ahi tuna ($25.00) were less appealing. The salmon, dipped in Japanese panko bread crumbs mixed with grated ginger and cracked

We shared one triple chocolate torte cappucino dessert made from flourless chocolate cake baked in an oversized cappuccino cup, garnished with white chocolate mouses and almond biscotti ($6.50). It proved so rich that one order made do for our table.

Compliments must go to the chef de cuisine, Ionathan Pflueger, to the attentive staff who serve ablesied with great skill, and to Stefan Dean, assistant manager and coordinator of special events. As we left we saw parties of 10 or 15 people arriving from the convention center. The comitation of new menu and conventionners promises success for the new Star, which happily affords the never-changing view of the bays. 8 nion Brick Company, circa 1932. In the background tilts San Diego's own "Leaning Chimney of Rose Canyon": it was built in 1888, just as our once-frantic land boom was dying with a whimper. Designed to supply the "draft" for what was known as a Hoffman Down-Draft brick kiln, the chimney was built for Union's predecessor, the Rose Canyon Brick Company.

The chimney's trademark tilt resulted from the structure's settling out of plumb while being built; a 1916 earthquake was also reputed to have been partly responsible for the out-ofwhack posture. Whatever the cause of its profile, the leaning chimney was never put to much use. It finally toppled over in January of 1962 during a storm.
