Dear Mathew Alice: Heaven to Betty! This may not be the most interesting question you've ever had, but it may be one of the most difficult. Actually, I find it hard to believe you could dig up an answer to this one. Where did the saying in my first sentence come from?

- Steve Dver, San Dicco

Oh, heck, I could answer this with one brain hemisphere tied behind my back... Anyway, I can tell you what the word watchers say about "Betsy," though sometimes I think those folks are not wired up the right way. This is case in point. Remember the old cowboy movies where some graziled codger stands on his creaky porth and waves his rifle at the bad gurs, awing if they come back and try to take over his faid, he and betsy will take care of hem? "Betsy" is a traditional name for a frontiernam's rifle, so the gal in the expression is a gun. After that, the word gays haven't much more to say, probably not warning to appear any more foolish. Niles, I don't think that you should be so eager to transfer to L.A.; the music scene there to LA, the music scene there doesn't need you (Music Scene, May 23). Please don't say that 91X promotes local music. Your station, when asked why they won't play local music during regular hours of the day by bands that have been signed to major labels, their answer has been: songs are too long, too avant-gurde, or the record label isn't spending enough money to promote mental to the control of the control o or the record label isn't spending enough money to promote the band. Then you say that S.D. bands are indifferent (to be popular!). You continue, how unfortunate it is that they how unfortunate it is that they how unfortunate it is that they could they? Your station has refused to play S.D. massic unless it is "mellow yellow." You are happy that S.D. hasn't become another Seattle: well, keep wearing gout cool rhades, but have the seat of the present the seat of the program of the horizon.

CHRISTIAN MAN looking for a woman with the right heart. Looks

Daniel: My friend and his wife helped me write this ad because the weren't working. I just wasn't meeting the right woman. I thought I was going to have to go to another state, or maybe Australia.

Monica: I answered a few ads over several months but then I gave up for a while. I thought to myself, "I'm a 42-year-old woman living in the '90s. Is this what I'm supposed to be doing" "But then I saw Daniel's ad and liked the words "with the right heart."

Daniel: The message Monica left was perfect: she said she was looking for a friend. I kept calling back to hear her recording. I must have listened to it ten times.

Monica: Our first date was three days before Christmas. We met at a Pizza Hut but ended up eating at Acapulco's. I had to bring my eight-year-old son because I couldn't get a babysitter. He tried to pay for the meal.

Daniel: I wanted to ask Monica a lot of questions but she started firing away first. She asked, "If you were married, what would you buy your wife for Christmas?"

Monica: Later, my son said, "Oh, he's nice. He'd make a nice Daddy." On our next date I brought both my boys and he brought his two kids.

Everyone got along well.

Daniel: After that, we started seeing each other every day. We had a lot of "couch" dates. We spent hours on Monica's couch, talking.

Monica: We would start at five o'clock in the evening and then look up at the Daniel: We hit it off so well it scared me. I finally kissed her on New Year's Eve, at midnight. By then, we both knew.

Monica: We got married last February in Las Vegas. Three months later, we had a big wedding in San Diego, and then a honeymoon in the Caribbean.

Daniel: We like to hang out together at every spare moment. There aren't too many things we disagree over, although right now we're fighting about the landscaping in the front yard.

Monica: I'm very organized and like to do things right away. Daniel's more easy-going. I'm Type A and he's Type C. But we help each other Daniel: If anyone tries to hurt me she'll rip their throat out.

Menica: I feel like I married my best friend.

Daniel: This time, I got a girl whom I can love just as she is. I wouldn't change a thing. We both thank God for each other.

Mule Deer by the hundreds are roaming throughout Cuyamaca Ran-cho State Park, where they are procho Nate rank, where they are pro-tected year round from hunting. Take an early-morning drive or bi-cycle ride down Highway 79 through the park, and you'll likely spot them on or near the road. To really study them, you position yourself — preferably in the early morning or near sunset — on the edge of any of the several large meadows accessible via park trails. Watch carefully—and also keep an eye cocked for predatory mountain lions, which of late have been threatening humans as well as the deer.

The Needle

Grandmother, you are as pale as Christ's hands on the wall above you. When you close your eyes you are all white — hair, skin, gown, i blind to find you again in the bed.

I remember once you told me you weighed a hundred and twenty-three, the day you married Grandfather. You had handsome legs. He watched you working at the sink.

The soft ring is loose on your hand.
I hated coming here.
I know you can't understand me.
Pill try again,
like the young nurse with the needle.

The Sick Wife

The sick wife stayed in the car while he bought a few groceries. Not yet fifty, she had learned what it's like not to be able to button a button.

It was the middle of the day — and so only mothers with small children or retired couples stepped through the muddy parking lot.

Dry cleaning swung and gleamed on hangers in the cars of the prosperous.

How easily they moved — with such freedom, when the delegant administration is a second to the contract of the cars. even the old and relatively infirm.

The windows began to steam up. The cars on either side of her pulled away so briskly that it made her sick at heart.

Who are T's listeners?
"I got young people from Pacific Beach, T've got people who plan their Saturday night fish fries around the show. I got this one old guy, pushing 60, the Blue Frog. He came clown once with this alorminum suitcase full of cassettes. He tapes the show every tweek. Like, five cassettes a night. If I ever need to refer back to ashow, I call up

yeah, I taped it."

Bringing up the subject of white Disap phyers as opposed to Black, I sake I' if he can really tell the difference. "Well, you can't tell the players, but you can't tell the players, but you can't tell the supers. Probably eight out of I real times. Not all white people have really good me so much, I have to whittle down the playist. The blues is really popular in several areas of the country. Especially in Southern California — you have to say if ye certy damned popular. So you get a lot of what they do, they cut a CD, and they sand it to me. Well," he signs, shrups, "it's nice, it's...it's nice, I appreciate what

This entails some highly curious effects of wind and speed, the only notable elements of originality in the movie, devalued a little, nevertheless, by their out-of-this world cartonishness. Brian

De Palma's side-tilted and up-angled cameras are sometimes frivolously di-certing. (While it would seem that the director of The Bonfire of the Vantities ought to count himself lucky to be asked into such a high-stakes under-taking, he is plantly not very personally engaged by it.) And it is invariably fun whenever — very infrequently — the Wild-and-woolly Ramona, circa 1912. Even past the turn of the century, rural Ramona thrived on its Wild West image; here, one of the town's occasional "match races" is held right in the middle of Main Street. (The winning horse reportedly was "Pando," owned by August Veroni.) Most likely these two competitors raced past businesses such as Creelman's blacksmith shop, Abel's Shoe & Harness Shop, and the Ramona Hotel.

Within a decade, the 20th Century began to catch up with Ramona. This dusty thoroughfare was paved over, electric lines were strung throughout the town, and water and school districts were formed to serve Ramona's burgeoning (700 souls!) population. (From the San Diego Historical Society, Photograph Collection,
