I recalled John Berger's aesthetic distinctions.

"To be nude is to be seen naked by others and yet not rec-ognized for oneself. A naked body has to be seen as an object in order to become a nude. (The sight of it as an object stimulates the use of it as an object.) Nakedness reveals itself. Nudity is placed

"To be naked is to be without disguise.

"To be on display is to have the surface of one's own skin, the hairs of one's own body, turned into a disguise which, in that situation, can never be discarded. The mude is condemned to never being naked. Nutly is a form of dress.

"To most people," said Karen, "I'm telling you, it's about sex."

"Which means exhibitionism," I said. "And so shame. Don't they go together?'

Every year, in our small college in Spokane, I had watched one or wo sisters return from their studies and take up eaching. Then, just as I had done, they seemed teaching. Then, just as I had done, they seemed to be so deeply reabsorbed by their duties that their vitality began to burn out. My doctor had been right: I needed time away from the college. But adapting to my new environment was hard. Here in this landlocked jungle, I felt utterly iso-lated except for the rhythms that sustained me. I had already found Berryman's "A Sympathy, A Welcome," which he had recited in the first meeting, and had committed it to memory, complete with his inflections and intonations:

Fitzgerald's words came back to me "John is something of a sadist." But in a matter so trivial D issappointed, I turned to head back upstairs. Then I heard a sight scuffling behind me and turned to see the student at the end of the line, a Coke in each hand, trying to catch up. He extended the can on the right. "Mr. Berryman said to give you this."

IN ANOTHER CLASS, Berryman was giving us his version of Dylan Thomas's "Refusal to Mourn the Death, by Fire, of a Child in London." But first, he had to give the details of Thomas's death amid the horrors of alcoholic withdrawal. Berryman in the company of the amid the norrors of acconolic withdrawal. Berry-man had kept vigil in the hospital at the time: "You could hear him breathe all the way down the corridor," he said. "It was horrible!" The reenactment struck us as pre-monitory of a fate Berry-man himself hoped to avoid. For the present, he went on to quarred with us over the opening lines of Thomas's poem: Never until the mankind making Bird besat and flower Fathering and all humbling darkness Tells with selence the lat light breaking. At the next Wednesday night forum, Berry-man was to speak on Shakespeare. High school

"Anyone who is unable to stay that long may wish to leave now." Berryman paused for the exodus. No one stirred. Then, adjusting his glasses, he placed a thick sheaf of papers on the lectern and began a ponderous marathon of poly-syllables. Soon there was a rustling in the audi-

THERE WAS ANOTHER DEAD BODY on the dissecting table in the seminar room. This time it was Robert Lowell's "Mary Winslow," and Berryman was residing over the autopsy. He had called on Elizabeth Sewell, author of The Structure of Poetry, as a consultant. "She uses Boolean algebra in her approach," Berryman announced gleefully. I was more impressed with Sewell's notion of the poem as mediation between extreme states of order and disorder, all the way from

"Yes. On the other hand, if he hadn't seen that book, he might have been fixed on Harvard. Or, had he read Fitzgerald, he might have decided I should go to Frinceton. But certainly it was that book he had on his mind."

"Yes, it's amazing, I didn't know anybody else's father who hadn't been to college who thought his son was going to Yale. I certainly grew up in an era and among people who had ambitions for their children. Everybody my parents knew had been port at one point and from an immigrant background and almost all of them, I am sure, had feelings that their children should have opportunities that they didn't have. But that's different than having a focused part of the properties of the properties of the properties. The store of the properties of the prop

MOMENT OF VAULTED CHAMBERS

He was nude, but for the tear gland of bathing trunks and a profile of Mars on his middle finger, his belly laughing at the blue training mission. I foilowed him under the high tiled ceilings of the Turkish bath, steaming into the calloused grip of the masseuse, worried, at thirteen, about getting a hard-on. Out of the showers, into the grill, we shared the freedom of that laugh, the high gloss of his teeth and the knotted towel that never fell from his waist. Like a flock of crows warehouse stacks of mahogany, ash and wormy chestnut. Mother left his body that he knew he wasn't safe, collecting jade or relaxing in the coconut shade, his ox-wife still bringing him to his off-white knees before the bench, he who once made a miraculous landing and lived long enough to disinherit the narrator. You know how it is: you try to write the field guide to dangerous fathers staring over spectacles at your own little ones trying to figure you, sitting up all day in bed, a bearded heartbeat surrounded by a no-man's land of crumpled bone white paper, and you pull one then the other up over the stillborn mess and confess to the weevil gnawing on the muscle pumping life through your nearly forty-year-old skin that you need to know how a father — before the High Holy Days trade sin and guilt for prayer and hunger — how a father, possibly in need himself of even this daydreamy variation on the theme of son to forgive, could crumple you like a parking ticket, drive over it and pull away. Young and old from both sides try hard to help. One of them left this message on the machine: If the son of Abraham held a razor to his father's balls, would God himself step in and pull his wrist back?

stress wor't bean big, who way.
I home, or while I'm at work, I'm thinking about it. Maybe while I'm on my breaks or my hunch break. I watch some TV or maybe listen to the radio, soft music, you know, and think about my problem. If the solu-tion comes up, good. So the stress will be minor. So the trick is just to think about it calmly, find three or four solutions, and choose the best one for that problem. That way the stress will go away, if not completely then mostly.

I deal with stress one step at a time.

You take it easy, you take a deep breath, and you deal with it. If you have a major problem, you deal with it a little bit at a time, not all at once. If you do it all at once, it's too hard.

And death with stress differently. The main thing I do to deal with stress is I try to keep myself happy. I try not to let myself get down because that just makes things worse. Another thing I do to deal with stress is I try to stay active, I try to keep myself going. The main thing is just getting out and keeping myself myself as active as possible. That how I deal with my stress.

How do you cope with day-to-day stress?

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Priedhof's Diner on the northeast corner of Pacific Highway and Laurel, circa 1939. Operated by the husband-and-wife team of Samuel and Fannie Friedhof, the diner/coffee shop at 2521 then-Pacific Boulevard was a popular lunchtime spot with workers from the nearby aircraft plants.

At the time, San Diego's population was approaching the 200,000 mark; the burgeoning aircraft industry had attracted workers from the Midwest and back East with promises of wages as high as $135 a month - plus overtime. (At the time, the standard workweek was still 44 hours long.) Longer hours - and World War II — were just around the corner.
