The first curious thing about commuting by car is that in some ways it is the exact opposite of travel in general. When we travel we do so with our eyes and ears open, asking questions, going out of our way to meet people, reading up on history and geology and architecture, drinking in our surroundings, constantly open to new perspectives and possibilities. When we commute we just want to get there. Anything that happens is probably a nuisance. The best we can hope for is a double-negative: that nothing goes wrong. That nothing holds us up. It's an experience without experience.

The second curious thing about commuting by car is how much we take it for granted. We don't even notice the first curious thing.

Phone Matches Success Story

Teresa Bell & Michael Burnal

Teresa: I was looking for someone who could help me find a partner. I found Phone Matches and decided to give it a try.

Michael: Do you have a telephone number for someone else you would like to meet?

Teresa: Yes, I do. I want to meet someone who is interested in the same things I am.

Michael: I understand. Phone Matches can help you find someone who shares your interests.

Teresa: How does the process work?

Michael: We provide you with a list of potential matches and you can choose one to contact.

Teresa: When we met, we hit it off immediately.

Michael: That's great! Phone Matches is a great way to find someone who is compatible with you.

Teresa: Wouldn't you like to find that special someone through Phone Matches?

Michael: Absolutely! Phone Matches is the perfect solution for finding that special someone.

Do you have a Phone Matches "Success Story" to share?

THE CONSOLATIONS OF GRAMMAR

Suppose these were only notes to be read in English. Let both hands be the things to be read. Here is a passage from the novel "The Consolations of Grammar" by Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley.

The novel begins with a description of the nature of grammar and its importance in a child's education. The author argues that grammar is not merely a set of rules, but a tool for understanding and expressing the world around us. Shelley writes:

"At the age of five or six, a child begins to learn the art of grammar. This is a most important period in a child's life. Grammar is the foundation on which all other knowledge is built. It is the key to unlocking the secrets of language."

Shelley goes on to discuss the various parts of speech and how they are used in sentences. She writes:

"The parts of speech are nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions, conjunctions, and interjections. Each part of speech has a specific function in a sentence. Nouns represent people, places, things, and ideas. Verbs express action or state of being. Adjectives modify nouns, and adverbs modify verbs, adjectives, or other adverbs. Prepositions show the relationship between nouns or pronouns and other parts of the sentence. Conjunctions connect words, phrases, or clauses. Interjections express emotion or surprise."

Shelley also discusses the importance of grammar in language evolution and how it helps to preserve the richness of our language. She writes:

"Grammar is not just a tool for communication; it is a treasure that we should pass down to future generations. Grammar is the blueprint that guides the growth of our language. It is the key to unlocking the secrets of language."

Shelley concludes her essay with a call to action for educators and parents to prioritize grammar education and to instill a love for language in the young minds who will inherit the world.

For further reading, I recommend the works of Plato, Aristotle, and Cicero. Their writings on language and grammar are still relevant today.

The San Diego News Notes - August 7, 1995
Scotland's First Serial Killer

Garber sounds like he's defending a dissertation, not Dunsmuir Castle.

This "real" Macbeth (1000-1507) wasn't a nice guy, but he's the only person of his name who's been called a serial killer. He was a Scottish lord and a member of the Macbeth family, known for his deeds of murder. In Garber's play, Macbeth is depicted as a ruthless and cunning leader, a man who will stop at nothing to achieve his goals.

The play is set in Scotland during the late 15th century, a time of political and social unrest. Macbeth, a powerful nobleman, seeks to take the throne of Scotland, leading to a series of brutal murders.

Garber's portrayal of Macbeth is complex and nuanced, exploring the psychological and moral aspects of the character. The audience is left to question whether Macbeth is truly a killer, or if there is a deeper level of humanity within him.

The play is a compelling exploration of power, ambition, and the consequences of murder. Garber's direction is masterful, bringing to life the historical setting and the characters' motivations.

Overall, this is a thought-provoking production that will leave audiences pondering the nature of evil and the consequences of our actions.

You'll find much to enjoy here, but two things almost drove us crazy.

The Restaurant

From the outside, this looks like a place to avoid. The parking lot is full of cars, and the building itself is not particularly appealing. But once you step inside, you'll be pleasantly surprised.

The menu is extensive, with a good selection of dishes to choose from. The service is friendly and attentive, and the prices are reasonable.

The Food

The food is excellent. The prime rib was tender and juicy, and the dessert was a delicious chocolate cake. Overall, it's a great place to dine out.

O ur streak of the Yellow Cab Company

Today's radio-equipped models. Some radios, they cruised San Diego's streets, looking for fares.
The rear windows of the cab rolled up and down to the comfort of the passengers. Compare that features with the open driver's compartment. On the rare occasion of a San Diego rainfall, Yellow
