It's campaign season. Guess who's back in business?

Mr. Fat Cat.

He's the corporate CEO, the special interest lobbyist, the behind-the-scenes bigwig: He's the gay (and it usually is a gay) who gives the candidates all the money they need to run uninformative negative campaign ads on TV.

Fat Cat's campaign cash comprises an incredible 97% of all the money candidates raise in Catifornia. This spells influence for hum and bad news for the rest of us. It pretty much guarantees what the politicians will do once they're in office: keep rolling back environmental laws, cutting safety-net programs, defunding higher education and a zillion other things that matter, and all the while giving tax breaks to the special interests.

Just so Mr. Fat Cat can stay fat, while the rest of us get, well, kitty litter.

That's why CALPIRG is sponsoring Proposition 212. It will limit campaign contribution to $100. It will require that donations come from lado pooler right in a politician's district, not basinesses or outside interests. 212 is supported by ex Governo Jerry Brown, the United Form Workers, the Rainbow Coalition, the California Teachers Association, and S00 other groups and activists.

Needless to say, establishment types are not too happy about Prop. 212. Which is why we need your help. Please volunteer. It's time to put the cat out.

BLUE

Once I thought there was no blue in nature except the sky — I thought Nature couldn't make a blue flower, or tree, or creature. I was young and hadn't looked at anything - that was before I knew delphiniums and morning glories, before I'd heard the blue jays, or recognized the steadfast spruce trees, or knew about Nabokov's butterflies.

Before my blue cat, I didn't know color has its own vocabulary in every language: his mother was a Russian Blue, and often, when I'd been out a while, the delirious syllables of his blueness would amaze me at the door —

it's always so hard to remember color exactly... His coat couldn't be described by any synonyms or tropes for gray, not mist or fog, not colorless, not ash — although I've buried his ashes in the pitch-dark shade of our yard where hot summer days he loved to lie, happy to be cool yet close to me, and I'm going to plant a juniper nearby, not really to remind me, but that every autumn the place where he lay might be lit by the electric-blue of its leaf.

after all. Cycle parcels out meticulous documentation of a way off life, a stra-tum of life, albeit a way and a stratum more in line with what the newspa-per reader might espect of a portrait of Vietnam, a Vietnam much more familiar to the informed foreigner: poverty, violence, extme, prostitution. The details, however, are in their dif-ferent way as wey-er gabling as before:
