So You're the Student
Doing the Survey
By Thomas K. Arnold

Every year for the past ten years, associate professor Sandy Ehrlich has asked graduate students in his leadership class at San Diego State University to conduct a detailed analysis of a community issue. And every year, the students' findings are used by the San Diego Unified School District, which funds the class. This year, the students focused on the high school freshman dropout rate in the city of San Diego. The study, done under the guidance of Ehrlich, won a national award for its thoroughness and depth.

The study included a survey of 2,000 students from nine high schools, as well as interviews with teachers, administrators, and parents. The results showed that the primary reasons for dropping out were academic and social, with the former being more prevalent. The study also found that students who were involved in extracurricular activities were less likely to drop out.

The study's findings were presented to the school district, which is using them to develop programs to help prevent students from dropping out. The class, which has been widely praised for its impact on the community, is expected to continue its work next year.

Where's the Popular Outrage?
By Bill Hansen

ay goodbye to the last small-leaved rose in the United States. The San Diego native, with its pinkish-red petals, is about to be extinct. The last wild rose on the west coast will have few if any flower buds this year, according to the San Diego Wild Rose Society.

The society, which is working to preserve the rose, says that the population has dropped dramatically in recent years. The cause of the decline is unknown, but it is believed to be due to a combination of factors, including climate change and disease.

The society is planning to plant more roses in an effort to restore the population. They are also working with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to designate the rose as an endangered species.

The society is asking for the public's help in identifying and preserving the remaining roses. They are also asking for donations to support their efforts.

For more information, visit the society's website at www.san-diego-wildrose.org.

Spinal Arthritis

Q. Does Dr. Harvey, I have been suffering from back pain for three months now. I went to see my M.D., who took me to a neurologist. He said it's a herniated disc. What should I do?

Dr. Harvey: It seems you have a herniated disc. These are common and often respond well to conservative treatment, including physical therapy, medication, and possibly surgery if needed. It's important to follow your M.D.'s recommendations and seek further advice if you have any questions or concerns.

Popular Outrage

The issue of gun control continues to spark intense debate in the United States. Many people feel strongly about their right to bear arms, while others advocate for stricter gun laws to reduce violence. It's a complex issue with no easy answers.

When San Diego Was Young and Raw

By EVAN SCHOFIELD
Illustrated by CHARLES HAYES

San Diego was a private school called Chabad School, where the students studied Jewish traditions and culture, as well as Jewish history and the Hebrew language. The school was located in the heart of the city, and the students were from diverse backgrounds.

Concerned that growing up with fewer Jewish children in San Diego was limiting their exposure to Jewish culture and traditions, my grandfather and grandmother decided to start a new school, Chabad School, in 1990.

The school was unique in its approach, focusing on teaching the students about the Jewish faith, culture, and history. The school offered a curriculum that included Jewish studies, as well as general education. The school was located in the heart of the city, and the students were from diverse backgrounds.

When San Diego was young and raw, the school was a beacon of Jewish culture and tradition, providing a safe and welcoming environment for the students.

San Diego was a haven for Jewish students, offering a supportive and inclusive community that helped them feel at home in a city where they were a minority.

Granola, which is a nutritious and filling breakfast cereal, is a staple in Jewish households, and it is often enjoyed with milk, yogurt, or fruits.

San Diego was a city of exploration and adventure, with its beautiful beaches, mild climate, and diverse culture.

It was a time when San Diego was young and raw, and it was a special place to call home.

The school was a place of learning and growth, where the students were encouraged to explore their Jewish identity and to develop a strong sense of community.

San Diego was a city of opportunity, and it provided a platform for the students to grow and thrive.

In conclusion, San Diego was a special place for the students, offering a supportive and inclusive environment where they could pursue their passions and grow as individuals.

\begin{verbatim}
In an old newsreel, woman walks into house and ... man to the garden. He's turned on the sprinkler system and is now standing in the garden. He looks around at the lush green grass and smiles to himself. His wife is standing behind himollection of emotions.

The man rubs his hands together and then raises them up to stretch. He's wearing a light-colored shirt and dark pants. The sun is shining brightly and the air is warm.

As he stretches, he feels the sun's rays warming his skin. He takes a deep breath and inhales the fresh air. The sound of water trickling is soothing and peaceful.

He walks over to the fountain and stands there for a moment, admiring the beauty of the water. Then he turns and walks towards the garden entrance.

The gate opens slowly, revealing the yard beyond. He steps through the gate and begins to walk towards the garden's edge. The grass is soft and green underfoot.

As he reaches the edge, he turns around and looks back at the house. He smiles and feels content. This is where he wants to be - in his garden, surrounded by nature.

He walks back towards the house, feeling renewed and refreshed. The man lovers the peace and quiet of his garden. It is his sanctuary.
\end{verbatim}

I have just finished watching Lou and Ollie coming out of Studio 8H, a 16th-floor studio at Kaufman Studios. The exterior is a simulator and is part of a building that houses offices, production offices, and that of the studio's executive. The episode that Lou and Ollie was on is a part of the series. I don't know if it was the first one or the last, but it was good. The episode was shot in a set that was in the middle of the building. The set was well-lit and the actors were dressed in their usual attire. The episode was shot in a single take and was completed in one day. The Hardest Cuts

The Rev wants to reach for Lady Liv's hand, but he can't. So he sings to a statue.

Review

Remember the era of the dining car? The era of the classic diner, with its chrome stools and shiny surfaces, where the food was simple and the service was fast. The Rev is a contemporary diner, with its modern decor and up-to-date technology, where the food is sophisticated and the service is attentive.

The Rev has been in business for over 20 years, and has become a local favorite. The menu is wide-ranging, with options for everyone, from breakfast to dinner. The Rev is located in the heart of the city, and is easily accessible by car or public transportation.

The Rev's kitchen is open from 7am to 9pm, and is run by a team of dedicated chefs. The Rev's menu is seasonal, with dishes that change with the seasons. The Rev's signature dish is the eggs Benedict, which is served with a side of bacon and a hash brown.

The Rev's dining room is spacious and comfortable, with plenty of seating for large groups. The Rev's bar offers a wide selection of cocktails and beers, as well as a full-service menu.

The Rev is a popular choice for both locals and tourists, and is always a great place to go for a meal. The Rev is open 7 days a week, and is a must-visit for anyone visiting the city.
Sometimes the cost of love will surprise you.

I Don't Want to Hear That Word. You Know What It Is. "You are fine now. You never had it."

O ur last interview during the month of October was with a psychologist who was to be interviewed about the effects of stress on physical health. The subject was a woman who had been experiencing depression and anxiety for several years. She had sought help from various sources, including medication, therapy, and self-help groups. However, her symptoms had persisted and were interfering with her daily life. She had been struggling to find a way to manage her stress and was looking for ways to improve her mental health.

The psychologist explained that stress is a normal part of life and is often triggered by external events, such as work, relationships, or financial problems. However, when stress becomes chronic, it can have a significant impact on physical and mental health. She recommended different strategies to manage stress, such as exercise, mindfulness, and time management.

The woman was grateful for the advice and was looking forward to implementing the strategies in her daily life. She expressed her appreciation for the psychologist's guidance and said that she felt more empowered to take control of her stress levels.

Picture Story

Inside the season...for two teams of men, the Julian to haul Yule logs down from the hills in this circa 1800 photo. While today such a sight might seem quaint — and probably staged — in those pre-industrial days, it must have been a hearty and practical form of recreation. In the hills, nothing was as San Diego County.

Julian had its beginnings in 1870, when gold was discovered in the backcountry. The town site was laid out that year by George Davies. His son, Mike Julian, after whom the town was named. Within three years, the town grew so rapidly that attempts were made to locate the San Diego County "out" there. The gold "rush" there reached its zenith in the 1870s, and population grew by 200.

Kid Stuff

I'm looking out the living room window at the kids. I'm not sure if they're happy or not. I see them running around, playing games, and having fun. They seem to be enjoying themselves. The kids are wearing different colored shirts, some are wearing shorts, and others are wearing pants. It looks like they are having a great time.

I wish my kids were like this. I remember when they were younger, they used to play all day long. They would run around, play hide and seek, and have fun. But now they are all grown up and don't have as much energy as they used to.

It's nice to see them happy and having a great time. It makes me feel good to know that they are enjoying themselves.

I can't wait to see what they do next. I'm sure they will come up with something fun to do.
