Who Was Willie the Rat and Why Come Here?

Some hard guys came to town after the war. A big ex-con with the cold eyes of a killer drove in from Kansas City. He parked in front of a white stucco house in Kensington. Three bedrooms, two baths, tile roof, lit tle porch the wife would like. Back vard for the kids

He stands on Lymer Drive, between the two palm trees. The palms cast meager shadows. Maybe a wind comes up and the fronds rattle. Whatever

The Mister and Missus, here they come, right on time, out the door He watches them walk down the steps toward him. He wants to get it over with. Give them the money, sign the papers. Get the wife and kids settled. Get to work

He nods. Says, "Howdy." They seem like howdy people. Missouri is full of howdy people. He and the Mister shake hands. He tells the Mister he's ready. He pops his trunk. He opens a cardboard suitcase. He counts out $25,000. Perhaps he thinks to himself that the Mister and Missus have never seen this much in bills. Maybe he laughs. He was known to laugh.

I wish I knew what he drove that day, I don't. I wish I knew who gave him the $25,000.1 don't.1 wish I knew the bills' denominations. I don't.1 wish I knew who told him to come here. I think I know that, but I'm not sure

Here is what I do know. I know that 42 years later, a buyer paid $190,000 for this same house. I know ouses on Lymer Drive were built between 1927 and 1929. I know this house was built in 1929. I know that in this house somebody nicks amed Momo stuck a .32-caliber pistol behind his right ear, pulled

FAIRY GODMOTHER'S ART

WHEN MY MOTHER TELLS THE STORY OF HER LIFE, SHE SAYS SHE KNEW NOT TO MARRY A MAN LIKE HER BROTHERS. She escaped as women usually do, by marrying a man from out of town. What she e aped from is picturesque, violent, and ordinary, like all lives told in anecdotes. There was the time she cut her head ducking under barbed wire and her hair turned red with blood. Her brother's friend pushed his hand under her sweater, her brothers fought, her Mormon father rolled his own cigarettes. She saw a car wreck once in the canyon, and a dead girl lay like a doll on the rocks. In times of heavy rain, my

TWO BY MILOSZ AND SWIR

Translating Anna Swir on an Island of the Caribbean By banana plants, on a deck chair, by the pool Where Carol, naked, swims her laps Of the crawl and the classical style, I interrupt her Asking for a synonym. And again I am submerged In the nurmuring Polish, in meditation.

Because of the impermanence of the mind and the body, Recause of your tender emiracing of our fate. Though you have written in a mough cyclik. Though you have written in a mough cyclik. Though you have written in a mough cyclik and What a joy there is no rate." What a joy there is no rate." Which reams neither. "I do not exist," Nor, "ken reasts" paus," and is pure Slavic: "More net," Somewhat Oriental.

And, indeed, by praising being: The delight of touch in lovernaking, the delight of running on a beach, of wandering in the mountains, even of raking hay

You were disappearing, in order to be, unpersonally, When I saw you for the last time I understood why they liked neither you Nor your poetry. With that white mane of yours You could ride a broom, have a devil for a lover. And you arroganthy produited Your pilliosopity of the log toe. Of the female spill, of the pulse, of the large intestine.

The definition of that poetry: Whatever we do, Desiring, loving, possessing, suffering, Is always only meanwhile. For there must be something else, true and stable.

Though nobody knows what eternity is. And the body is most mysterious, For, so mortal, it wants to be pure, Liberated from the soul which screams: "II" A metaphysical poet, Anna Swir, Felt best when she was standing on her head. By Czeslaw Milosz from Facing the River; Ecco Press, 1995

The Same Inside Walking to your place for a love feast I saw on a street corner an old beggar woman.

I took her band, kissed her delicate check, we talked, she was the same inside as I am, from the same kind, I sensed this instantly as a dog knows by scent another dog.
