When an Indian Language Is Gone...
Why Is Spanos Such a Heavy Hitter?

By Mark Potter

Last March, a mysterious last-minute political attack appeared in mailboxes throughout the Northern California senate districts being canvassed by spanos and Sen. John Burton, the Sacramento Democrat. The attack was a thinly veiled attempt to undermine spanos' candidacy for governor. The attack was made by a group of spanos supporters who had formed a political action committee to fight back against the incumbent senator. The group was led by a former spanos' term, who had been actively involved in spanos' campaign efforts.

The moment leaves started to turn

By Laura McNeil

When I was six or seven years old, I wanted to be translated. On Sunday mornings in the Mormon church I'd hear the choir sing, and I'd wish I could sing too. I'd listen to the words of the hymns, and I'd want to be able to sing them. I'd feel a sense of excitement and wonder as I listened to the choir.

Dream big

By Tom Hatten

I'm not a dreamer, and I don't have a dream. But I do have a vision. A vision of a world where everyone has access to the things they need to live a fulfilling life. A world where everyone has the opportunity to pursue their dreams and reach their full potential.

For the record

By Dave Williams

I want to clarify some of the things that have been said about me in the past. There have been some inaccuracies and misunderstandings. I would like to set the record straight and correct any misrepresentations.

Pathfinder

The strange saga of the Tennessee and Bayless. Bayless died in her 82nd year, and the Tennessee was the 16-year-old girl who was her caretaker. The two were found dead in their apartment in a suspicious manner. The Tennessee had been murdered by Bayless, who then killed herself.

The Nano

The Nano was a tiny car that was produced by a company called Nano, Ltd. It was popular among people who wanted a small, efficient vehicle. The Nano was available in both gasoline and electric models.

The English lavender

The English lavender had its roots in the wild, and it was the original species of lavender. The lavender was used in various ways, including as a medicine and as a source of perfume.

The 100-year-old woman

The 100-year-old woman had been living in the same house for over 100 years. She was known for her longevity and her wisdom.

The 10-inch-long fish

The 10-inch-long fish was found by a group of fishermen who were on a fishing trip. The fish was unusual because it was so small and it was found in deep water.

The white peacock

The white peacock was a rare and beautiful bird that was found in the wild. It was known for its all-white feathers and its stunning appearance.

When an Indian Language Is Gone

MARGARET LANGDON HITS DOWN OUR NATIVE TONGUES

Scattered atop Margaret Langdon's desk at her office in the Bureau of Indian Education is a small sign: ?When an Indian Language Is Gone, Our Native Tongues Die.? She's been working at the Bureau for a decade, helping to coordinate efforts to keep Native American languages alive.

She has a sense of urgency. Language is the bedrock of culture. Languages are not just a means of communication; they are a way of thinking, a way of understanding the world. They carry the history, the traditions, the values of a people. When a language dies, a piece of the world's heritage is lost.

Langdon points out that there are over 500 Native American languages in the United States. But many of these languages are at risk. Some are spoken by just a few elderly people, while others are extinct. There is an urgent need to preserve and revitalize these languages.

"I say, 'What do you mean your language is backwards?' Maybe English is," Langdon reflects. "In fact, the largest number of languages of the world have the verb in final position... And they laugh and laugh and think it's really funny."

Non-Surgical Vision Correction FOR NEARSIGHTEDNESS

There is now a non-surgical treatment for long-lasting correction of nearsightedness (myopia) and astigmatism that is quick, less costly, and without risk.

This vision-correcting procedure was first utilized in a method of improving vision in the early 90s but now vision can be restored with an accelerated program, in a matter of weeks.

Orthokeratology is designed to quickly reduce the patient’s myopic condition and to improve vision with a combination of specially fitted therapeutic contact lenses which gently reshape the curvature of the cornea.

Advanced techniques and new technology in specialized contact lenses have revolutionized care in the field of vision correction.

Special stabilizing contact lenses are also available to prevent or retard the gradual increase of nearsightedness.

Dr. Michael Satterfield is highly qualified in this procedure, and holds a fellowship certificate from the International Orthokeratology section of the National Eye Research Foundation, with over 25 years work in the field.

The Truth About Hair Transplants

Even notice a bad hair transplant...well, the baldies look like a corn field! Now, we've seen a good hair transplant! Well, you probably have, but isn't it a shame? Why is it that the baldies are so obvious and the natural looking ones are so subtle?

Here's the unvarnished truth, the real facts about hair transplants. Hair transplants are more about how much money you can make from a patient than about how much you can help them. The natural-looking ones are the ones that are most expensive and require the most time and effort to achieve.

Even the most expensive and elaborate hair transplant procedures cannot guarantee a perfect result. There is always the risk of complications such as infection, scarring, and poor healing.

When choosing a hair transplant surgeon, it's important to do your research and find one who is experienced and has a good track record.

WE USE YOUR OWN HAIR

The term "autograft hair transplant" means using your own hair which comes from the back of the patient's head. This type of transplant is affordable and can last for years. The procedure involves harvesting hair from the back of the head, where it is most dense and thick, and then carefully placing these hair follicles into the areas that need coverage.

The success rate of an autograft hair transplant is highly dependent on the expertise of the surgeon and the technical skill involved. At Satterfield Plastic Surgery, we use the latest techniques to ensure the best possible outcome.

However, the decision to undergo a hair transplant is a significant one, and it's important to consider all factors before making a decision. If you're interested in learning more about hair transplants or would like to discuss your options with a qualified professional, please don't hesitate to contact us.

"Our duty to the patient is to create an authentic head of hair...one that grows and feels natural. There is a caring act in an understandable transplant."

-William Rand, M.D.
HEAT AND THE GIDDY

WHEN I WAS THIRTEEN, I practiced cheers as I walked around the house. I was a figure in a twin clock, a wind-up toy, a yard bird. I never needed to make a sound. I was in the doorway, in parking lot, in the kitchen — whenever I felt myself unobserved — I held my arm out straight, then pulled them back to my chest for a swirl and down to the side. First in one, do it again. I glanced in my head, so ignorant of the rules of football that I didn't realize until years later that the words, to make sense, must be "four and ten." Sometimes my brother caught me, putting his arm across my face. "You can't do that, you idiot," he said. "You're not a girl." Sometimes my mother caught me, miming the air and saying, "That's not how you do it."

I tried to be as good as the girls in the same high school. I lived for the excitement of watching football games on TV. I loved the thrill of the crowd and the noise of the players. I wanted to be a cheerleader, but I was too afraid to try. I was always too afraid to try anything new. I was too afraid to be different. I was too afraid to be alone.

We watched Carl Sagan demonstrate on TV what would happen if a person went forward in time on a rocket at the speed of light. The idea is that, if you could travel at the speed of light, you would eventually come back to the present. The idea was so huge and so mind-bending that it made me think about the nature of time itself.

I Have Been Drowning in Acidic Balsamic Vinegar

These two men taught me more about cooking techniques than anyone in Paris.

I often go to open a restaurant or new hotel. When I meet a chef or a kitchen staff, I want to know how they cook and what kind of ingredients they use.

I usually start by asking them about their daily routine. They always tell me a story about how they prepare their meals.

One day, I met Chef Jean-Pierre in his kitchen. He showed me how he made his own balsamic vinegar.

First, he takes fresh grape leaves and puts them in boiling water for about five minutes. Then, he removes them and lets them cool.

Next, he takes the cooled grape leaves and puts them in a pot with sugar and vinegar. He let them steep for three days.

Finally, he filters the vinegar through a cheesecloth and puts it in a bottle. He told me that this is the best way to make balsamic vinegar.

I was impressed by his knowledge and expertise. I learned so much from him.

In conclusion, I think that cooking is an art, and I am always willing to learn from the best. I hope to meet more chefs like Chef Jean-Pierre in the future.
