HILLCREST DENTIST DAVID KENNEDY

recently posed the following question to several friends with whom he was dining: What would you do if you knew that a toxic substance was going to be added to San Diego's water supply — a substance that would lower children's IQs, increase the cancer incidence, double the rate of hip fractures among the elderly? Kennedy has become convinced that fluoride causes all those ills and more. But the consensus of his affluent, well-educated dinner companions "was that they would buy bottled water," the dentist relates. "That hurts my heart."

No one is yet adding fluoride to the city's drinking water. But two years ago, the state legislature passed a law ordering California communities with 10,000 or more households to start doing so on January 1, 1997. The lawmakers didn't provide money to pay for this, so compliance has been slow. Its imminence. however, has driven the local dentist to charge into the latest battle of a war that's now more than 50 years old. Kennedy has filed a petition to place a measure on a statewide ballot that would prohibit fluoridation everywhere in California. October 15 is the deadline for collecting the roughly 750,000 signatures he needs. Should the measure qualify, a monstrous fight will unfold. Should the petition drive fail and fluoridated water begin to flow through the taps of San Diego households, what then?

The full senate passed the bill 22 to 10, and Governor Pete Wilson signed in on October 9, 1995. Since then, unfluoridated communities have been responding in a variety of ways. In Los Angeles, the city sha decided to pay for the costs of fluoridating (even though L.A. residents) passed a law bunning fluoridation in 1973. Here in San Disgo, the books, the city attorney's the books, the city attorney's office has issued a report con-cluding that it would be illegal to spend local funds to carry out the mandate. But "they're going to find a way around that," Kennedy says. "It's a temporary roabblock."

He says he decided that an initiative was the only hope of averting a statewide catastro-phe. He also concluded that his proposition should ask voters to but fluorictation outright.

(since allowing communities to decide for themselves still might force fluoridation on individ-uals such as infants and the elderly who are particularly sus-ceptible to fluoride's toxic effects). In the hope of getting the mea-sure on the November 1996 ballot. Kennedy filed the necessar paperwork in January of that year. He was preparing to orga-nize a statewide grassroots sig-nature-collection effort when he learned that the attorney gen-eral's office was estimating that banning fluoridation would cost California taxpayers "about $15 million per year after five years." A summary of this estimate $45 million to buy the equipment and up to $15 million to buy the chemicals. So my initiative should save $60 million, right? No, it's going to cost $15 mil-tion because we're going to have all this added tooth decay that's going to immediately skyrocket up."

Around this time, Kennedy ned an ally in the form of Jeff

The Undertaking collects ten essays that range from a sexy piece about a poet friend who woos with artichokes to Lynch's bittersweet memories of childhood a philosophical query provoked by Jack Evrovisan's assisted suicides. Lynch also describes and reflects upon the funeral trade. Unforgettable is the essay "Cladstone," which Lynch recounts his and his botther's emballiming of their

When Mr. Lynch and I talked recently, he was at home in Michigan. I asked if he'd done a funeral recently.

"Sure. We had a funeral yesterday and we have a funeral tomorrow.

Sure." When, I asked, did you first figure out that you really wanted to write?
"I don't recall ever not wanting to write things down. I've alv-ays enjoyed reading, and writing seems to be about the same enterprise. It's just holding up your end of the conversation. In 1980 I started sending poems out to be published. Nowadays, for better or worse, when I write I think in terms of

TWO POEMS BY MARK HALPERIN

MORNING RUN
Isn't this morning's light over the valley like thread, you said, and we set out early, you with the dog, me ten minutes behind, trucks digging the clumped, white sand-stone from the roadside ditches and the lights still on in some of the cars headed to work. The river shone. A heron flapped to one side-the sky behind like the roar of the diesel in the loader or the truck starting to move off under its cargo. Stirrings of wind fluttered and the ridge we'd turned our backs on stacked gray clouds like breakers. Keeping to the road was hard, and heading back and heating up.

Even the brush of the envelope of air we were part of would seem rare as that light, thickened before we were home, as though obsacles, unnoticed in passing, already had changed us.

QUAIL IN FEBRUARY
The heads of the quail ark mechanically across the ice-crusted snow, abourd crests bobbing, feet speeding, like a movie ri, a too fast, when the covey, each bird inflating it, collected now, stops short on a patch of hear ground.
Under a guarted sign-branch bey covert solemnly turning around and around, then dip, pecking at anything resembling food, gray, faded feather-bulls, and at once are gone, having heard above them a ratting at the altitude of harm. As if struck, they explode, abundou of narm. As if struck, they explode, abundous ground, fired off like barrages of arrows, rigid, whistling, gliding to the next hawk proof thicket, strutting below a hatchwork of branches in folded wings.

which is characterized by shuffling hythms: the guitar's emphasis on the atterbeat rather than the downbeat; and plenty of horns, drums, and bass.

The vital upbeats and rythms of ska originated in early 1960 Jamaica, It was a celebratory music that shuffly on the shuffly of and a dance music meant to shake the butts of the island's working class. Along with many West Indians, the style emigrated to England, where it was transformed by such bands as the Beat (known in the U.S. as the English Beat). In recent years, ska has become popular for a third time and scombined with pop. rock, world beat, and by bands such as Operation by with punk, to form the hybrid ska-core.

To advertise their allegiance to earlier ska, Diack hat with a white band.
Originally, this two-tone logo signified harmony during a time of racial disintegration, but even though they sing a song about a racist cop, Skanic is not a statement band.

(Brief digression: my editor remembers — I do not, but I believe it — that when he showed me samples of the sort of thing that would be requirted of me, presumably a page out of the Chicago Reader from which he had independently split off, my response was along the lines of, "I don't know if I can write that short.")

So, a short one... Shorter... Short-ers. Slaughter. Fine. The text in full: "New Jim Brown, who makes 'em do what they orter." Because no one else was present when I read this, I can-not be sure that I blushed. Who makes em do what they orter! Could I have written that! Could I have been drunk at the time? Could it have been drunk at the time? Could it have been a typo? If so, for what? Do what they oughter?

We concluded with a pear tart. Fresh pears and caramel syrup were put at the bottom of the pan with pastry on top. After baking, the pan was inverted and the pears were served face up. Not to be missed. And neither is the Moonstruck Cafe.

I rarely attend guest chef dinners, but I seed to Mixx the other night to sample the work of Amey Shaw from Alta Plaza Restaurant in San Farnaicco. Shaw mot manerful dish was the lamb shank, which was cooked "for hours" after being braised until the meats was glossy brown. and four kinds of romatoes that had been "melted" in the over were added at the end. The lamb shank was served with papparedle noodles. During October, Deborah Heim will fleature this into shark preparation at Mixx Firshays and Saturdays. PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

DOOM! December 13, 1945, a Navy Bammunition truck exploded on Coast Highway in Rose Canyon. An article in the La Jolla Journal nine days later didn't mention if anyone died but lauded the Red Cross for its readiness with coffee and sandwiches while road repairs were made. Four months after World War II ended, the writer reminded readers "that the Red Cross continues to operate in incidents during normal civil life as well as in wartime.... When you are asked to help finance the Red Cross for its next year, remember its workers take care of just the type of situation which occurred in La Jolla only last week."

NEW LASER TREATMENT

Surfer's ear, swimmer's ear, and diver's ear can result in frequent ear infections and hearing loss. They are caused by bony growth in the ear called exostosis. (No, you can't feel the bony growth with your finger.)

Now these problems can be treated with high-tech laser technology. To introduce this cool procedure, we are taking a dive on our prices with a deep discount until October 31, 1997. To have your ears checked out, check us out. Don't miss it!
