I say to Gerstler that it seems to me that people I say to Gerstler that it seems to me that people who don't write often imagine that a poet goes to her desk and says to herself. "Ah-hal Today! shall write about the nature of suffering." I think we could say that with "The Nature of Suffering it's certainly unlikely that you toddled into your work-room in your nightie, and said, 'Aha, this morning I will write about the nature of suffering.' When you're thinking about a problem, there isn't always one say to sable it. Sometime, you have a brainstorm in the middle of the times you have a brainstorm in the middle of the night and make a connection about a different way to look at something to solve a problem. "Another way to explain this is to talk about conversation. Perhaps you say to yourself, 'Okay, now,' have to have this important talk with my boss

Friendship Home in National City is easy to miss. On a raised section of I-805 sunlight glints off passing cars and trucks. At Euclid and Eighth Street, the backside of Paradise Valley Hospital, miles of preframed windows and salmon-colored stucco dominate the landscape. In that unremarkable moment between the freeway and the hospital, Friendship Home fits perfectly. Built in 1983, Friendship Home is a single-story building that wraps around itself to face away from the street, its boxy lack of distinction covered with a beige and brown paint job. For a staterun institution that currently houses 99 men and women with severe physical, mental, and emotional developmental disabilities, its invisibility appears intentional. As one who's "been there and done that," Billye offers peer support to par nts; she knows the bureaucratic labyrinth parents face; she also knows the er pitfalls that come with having a disabled child.

After speaking for a while, Billye and I agreed on a day and time to meet a Friendship Home where her daughter was in residence. She promised to bring a few etters she'd written over the past 25 years, a correspondence her daughter will never

She told Alan that was what she wanted to do. "And thus began a process of abandon-ing you for my sake," she wrote the stuff awards are made for. The musical itself is slight. It's com-posed of outsikes from Sondheim's other shows, song that missed the cut. They're pleasant enough and offer Sondheim's bouncy pseudo-wisdom about now beastly life can be. Of interest is the Alan Ayck-bourn-like movement. A Man and a Worman inhibit the same apart-ness, though the program says they're in 2C and 3C. As they they're in 2C and 3C. As they spend a lonely Sturday night at home, their paths never intersect, and we get the impression they blew it some way — lack of courage, fear of commitment (whatever it wears thin soon). Marry Me a Little is a modest, two character musical, but it is by no means easy, as demonstrated by the

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Baugust 28, 1965 (the Beatles first and only SD appearance). Local photographer/rock eatles press conference, Balboa Stadium, historian Randy Hoffman, then 15, was "more of a Stones fan than a Beatles fan back then - vou couldn't be both," he says. But when Hoffman's pal broke up with his girlfriend (for whom he'd bought a ticket), Hoffman got the ticket (a $5 value) and went.

"The stage was set up around the 20-yardline," says Hoffman. "As soon as the armored car pulled up on the field, kids started jumping the fence and running toward the stage. Cops tackled kids, stopping some of them. It was like a Chargers game. I remember one guy made it to the stage. There were cops surrounding the stage and this guy took a flying leap over them and grabbed the stage, but that was as far as he got....

The Beatles only played for 20 minutes — no more than 30. That's how they did it in those days."
