Be More Polite

About The Mayor's I do appreciate your paper. I particularly enjoy the movie section of it, but I believe the ection of it, but I believe the fact that your paper is free doesn't give you a license to attack people personally, and I'm specifically referring to your attitude toward the mayor. You may have political dis-agreements with her. Fine. agreements with ner. Fric. That could be expressed in a more polite way. This morn-ing's caricature of her refer-ring to her body is absolutely ring to her body is absolutely disgusting (1,5). Crowe, Inn-disgusting (1,5). Crowe, Inn-uary 15). It's unprofessional, and I think in fact it's libel. You could be set up for law-sims, I don't think it's fair. You should stop these practices. You're actually attacking all the fat people by doing this. I don't think this is professional. I hope you would think about your obligations at press and media. You should be responsible.

Mean And Vicious

I have long been a fan of car-toonist J.D. Crowe's work. whether with the Reader, the whether with the Redder, the old Tribune, or now the L.A. Times. However, I write to register my disgust with his re-cent cartoon (January 15) cent cartoon (January 15) mocking Mayor Suan Gold-ing as morbidly obse. It's one thing to make fun of the policies and politics in a cartoon; it's quite another to make her physical appearance the sole subject of a lampoon. That is subject of a lampoon. That is not just having fun at her expense— it's mean and victous. I May Re Altruistic

I'm not a sporis fan, but I usu-ally read the "Sporting Box" The mention in the January 15 column of the plastic surgeons wanting to tour a local facil-ity while in town for the Stu-por Bore is in reality a ploy by these doctors to justify th deduction of their expenses as legitimate husiness expenses. As payment of taxes avoided by one are ultimately paid by As payment of taxes avoided by one are ultimately paid by another, I see this as — Super Bowl as screw-the-taxpayer opportunity. You can add this to the long list of frauds per-petrated on the American public by medical-care pro-viders. We already know that Filipino women are solicited by the agents of plastic sur-geons to get their eyelids Americanized and that the doctors bill the insurance companies for other more le-companies for other more con-gitimate procedures, and now the taxpaying public is helping to pay their way to the Super Bowl. Prostitution made money for their temples, it is true; but more importantly, sex with a priestess of the goddess Ishtar was thought to increase fertility in agricultural cycles. Selling sex for commercial profit in the marketplace was proface. We owe our less "superstitions view in part to the Hebre prophets, who, though they condemned harlotry outright, condemned harlotry outright, reserved special wrath for its practice in the Jerusalem tem-ple. It is said that some of the desert fathers of the early Chris-tian Church, who had fled the debauchery of Alexandria to save their souls in ascetic communion with God, occasionally succumbed to horrific inner succumbed to horrific inner temptation and ran wildly back to the city to indulge their pas-sions "just once more." No doubt there were those among them who never made it back to God in the Egyptian desert and lost their souls and heaver too. So be careful at the Super Bowl parties, for you too could lose the heaven for which you are working so hard, whatever that is.

Now, maybe you're one of Now, maybe you're one of those other organization men, who do lots of the dirty work for which the corporate Brah-mans don't recognize you, and you can't afford one of those girls at a Super Bowl party, even if you do attend one. A final objection is that Utilitarianism pays no heed to the motives from which an to the motives from which an action is performed. Take the case of the good Samaritan. We normally describe the assistance he gave to the traveler on the roadside as good because we imagine it to have been done for "good" motives. But what if we learned that the Samaritan to arned that the Samaritan had crossed the road only out. Linda, Paul, and I main-tained contact and frequently discussed what might have hap-pened. It was Linda's theory clues, the killer knew what he chies, the faller knew what he was doing and had likely done this before. In December o 1994, I decided I would like to interview Amanda's mother. had no idea if she would be willing to talk to the press anymore, but I thought it might draw attention to the case, which seemed to be languishing in the horse latitudes of an expiring stigation. Marlene Price Fad moved to El Cajon and remarried. Her ex-husband, Fred Gaeke, was in Donovan state prison on drug charges.

Price sat in shadow on the Price ast in studion on the late December afternoon when I met her. She wore a purple togging suit and neaders. Her Christmas tree, half decorated and haltharstely covered with spray flocking, stood in one corner, the light hung at odd angles and had not been plugged in. Price turned on no fights in the living room as the sun went down. She was drinking what looked like orange juice and oce.

The case remained in limbo and would for more than four years. Sergeatt Robert Furtak still headed up the investigation, and Carl Smith was still not the case, working with intel and often on this own time — but there were no new cluer. Supects were exhausted one by one. Meanwhite, the killer still level in North Fart, just block away from where he had left Amanda's bedy after cortaining.

He seemed happy to talk to me and said, yes, he could tell me a couple of things about the neighborhood and the case. I told him I would call back and make an appointment to meet him. I never did.

Reasons I told myself over the next few weeks were these. The guy sounded too eager to meet, get his name in the paper. He struck me as one of those people who will happily talk to you for hours about informa-tion you already have, and nothtion you already have, and noth-ing new. I could have been wrong, but I had a dead-end hunch about C.P. He may be a dozen kinds of creep, but some-thing didn't add up about him being the killer of Amanda Gaeke. The guy seemed to like boys, for one thing, if what like boys, for one thing, if what look me was true, and not girls. Alto, the police now had at least as much information or allega-tions against the guy as I had. If they were true, the cops must have quire a file on C.P., yet Fortak seemed never to have heard of him. Later Detective Carl Smith would allow that he knew who C.P. was. Still, I

That never happens outside of pulp fiction and the screen. It was a little over a year later, on May 28, 1996, that police received a tip that led them to Amanda Gaeke's killer, His Amanda Gaeke's killer. His name is David Allan Webb-Kim. He is a little pudding ball of a man, a panda bear with doughy face and arms and short black hair. His eyes hardly flash with intelligence, but they look no more like those of a psychastic kills through the prechotic killer than the button eyes of a stuffed toy.

Webb-Kim, aged 21, was arrested as he was about to sign up for the U.S. Army. He was 16 when he abducted and tortured Gacke, gave her alcohol and cocaine while he kept her under his bed like a doll, and then asphysiated her to death prob-ably two days afterward. His age at the time of the crime pre-sented a problem as to whether he would be tried as an adult or On May 31, 1996, Webb

On May 31, 1996, Webb-Kim pleaded not guilty in juve-nile court and Amanda Gacke's father Frederick, recently released from prison, looked as if he might kill the defendant had he not been restrained. The builiff stood next to him and said, "Just hang on. Don't make any mistakes. He's not worth it, the defendant tortured, raped, orally copulated, and sociom-ized a young girl."

One person in attendance shouted, "Rill him?" and was warned to be silent.

Webb-Kim, or Webb as he calls himself when it suits him, pleaded out and agreed to be tried as an adult. On March. In August of that same year the defendant entered a plea of not guilty by reason of instity in San Diego Municipal Court as onlookers groaned and protested. Sulzberg's Moth-Eaten Views

Moth-Eaten Views
Art Salzberg complains that Councilwoman Chris kehoe is "an unequal employer of Hispanics" (Letters, January 15).
To justify his complaint, he says 20 percent of San Diego's population are Hispanic. Much of this demographic, however, is the result of illegal aliens who've crossed over our unprotected border and made themselves at home at no. themselves at home at no body's invitation but their own. Salzberg then asserts that Loretta Sanchez beat Con-Loretta Sanchez heat Con-gressman Robert Dornan be-cause of Hispanic voting "clout." This denies the fact that over 2000 moncitizen voters may have voted in this Orange County contest. Enough to de-cide its overcome. Salzberg claims Dornan was "aleep at the political switch." It ap-pears, however, that incompe-tent county registrars were the ones dozing off. Finally, the awarding of city contracts based on race, since the pas based on race, since the pas-sage of Prop 209; is of dabious merit. Despite the wailing of liberals like Salzberg, affirma-tive action is dead in this town. The newly awakened political Hispanic giant may have awakened too late to satisfy Salzbers' moth octen views. I Think They Deserve Better

This is Deidra Cooper | calling| from Hey Saylor Salon. The whole salon would like to state a complaint against the gus Richard Meltzer that did a rewiew on the B. Side Players ("Of Note," January 8). We want to know the even knows how to play a musical instrument. Because we were at the opening of the CD-release of the C view on the B-Side Play ble of Wee Wee in the Great Pacific, "which we interpret as a piece of piss in the ocean, But, it's a very talented band, and if he wanted to know what "B-Side Players" means he should probably ask. It means "Brownside," because all the guys in the band are Mexican and from Chula Vista. He should probably set another should probably get another job and stop working for you because you guys could find someone much more talented someone much more talented than he is. In fact, the B-Side Players are much more tal-ented than he is. Okay, so I'm passing this

Just A Few Facts, Mr. Meltzer

Mr. Mestreer
Self-disparagement has northing to do with the name of the local Latin jazz band the Bide Place. After reading Richard Mieltzer's "Of Note January 8,1 was arrazed at just how many words Mr. Meltzer was able to bleed our of a topic. was able to trace out of a topic be obviously knows nothing about. Did the Reader actu-ally pay Richard Meltrer for this? From the article there was no indication that he had ever heard the B-Side Players, or that he did any research to that he did any research to write the article — except, of course, for calling upon a vir-nual library of useless informa-tion Mr. Melizer undoubtedly stores in his egocentric brain. As be yammered on about the various B-sides of what must be an extensive 45 record collection, the only time he ever adosed the B-Side Players, the band, was with an insulti-about their name. Surely there's more to say about the band than their name. There was a picture of them, Richard, You could have badgered them about their lack of costumes, or the fact that not everyone wore hats, and still never lin-tened to a single note. Having written several mulection, the only time he ever Having written several mu-sic pieces for the Reader in the sic pieces for the Keader in the past, including an "Of Note," I know the kind of detail editors look for. writing the column. Last Friday I went to the CD-release party for the B-Side Players at the Casbah. They played to a packed house of B-Side followers, 20-some-thing hipsters to a couple at one table in their 70s. The band is composed of ten musicians— the majority of which haven't reached the age of 30. Sometimes their sound is distinctly Latin, sometimes pure jazz, and sometimes resonates Afri-can rhythms. Percussion and horns make B-Side's sound

These are just a few facts that Mr. Meltzer overlooked. Maybe he should change his name to "A Thimble of Wee Wee in the Great Pacific." Claudia Lopez

POETRY INTERNATIONAL

Last fall, San Diego State University's Department of English and Comparative Literature in content

English and Comparative Literature in conjunction with SDSU Press published the first of what will be an annual journal of contemporary poetry. This new journal's editor, SDSU professor Fred Mozamarco, when we chatted one morning, said, "Gioen that San Diego State since the mid-1960, has published Franciscon International — the journal actually begin publication in 1973, but was published initially at Mootimiero came west for graduate school, graduating in 1969 from the University of Utah in Salt Labe City. "While there I also became managing agarterly journal. I developed my editorial skills a bir more and wanted to continue. But when I graduated from Utah I came to San Diego State, this was in 1969. I began teaching various literature courses, including courses in contemporary postry, and kind of moved away from editing. But I have always aspect in teach with the contemporary poetry scene for literal ways had a desire to continue working on a lineary magazine.

Continue working on a lineary magazine. From the denit's office who said that there was an alumenas who was a very old gay in his 80s. His name was Edwin Warkins. He had no family, no not to leave his money to. So he wanted to leave part of his money to State and he wanted that money currantered to put out a poetry journal, I met with the dean and with this fellow's lawyers, and we drew up a little agreement that when he passed sway, the money from his extar our poetry journal. 56000 or $7000. But it's enough for us to pay most of the expenses on this journal. The first printing, said Moramaros, was of about 1000 issues; the cust of printing. This first issue includes new poems by Diane Ackerman, Stephen Berg, Billy Collins, Mary Crow, Jim Daniels, Toil Derricotte, Ed Hirsch, Iane Hirshified, Sasan Luzzao, Bon Koertye, Ethelbert Miller, Chaeles Simic, Cary Soto, Diane Wakoki, Charles Wolch. The issue also estures a goven by the late Larry Levis and an easy on his work by Christophe Buckley, as well as not large.

Think," said Moramarco. "that there's a need in America for a journal that both represents American poetry internationally and introduces contemporary world poetry to readers in the United States. For each issue it want to collect a representative cross-contemporary world poetry to readers in the United States. For each issue it want to collect a representative cross-contemporary world poetry to readers in the United States. For each issue it want to collect a representative cross-contemporary world poetry to readers in the United States. For each issue it want to collect a representative cross-contemporary world poetry in the introduced contemporary merchanisms. Moramarco reported that the journal already has received many submissions. "Every day we get manuscripts. You know how poetry is. Everybody thinks they're poets. Looks cancer you sit down and write a few lines, you know. William Burnough used to say, "Poets are just largy prose writers. They write a few little lines and call it a poem instead of a short story or a novel." And for some people, that is what it is."

ADDRESS BOOK

Last night, cleaning out the desk I found an old address book the cover a mottled that, stained with ink, wine, coffee, who knows what else?

It had been there in the corner of a drawer for years now. I opened it with care half-imagining that small, exotic birds would fly out of it, chirp for a moment, and fall dead at my feet. I fixed on a name: "Biancamaria Tedeschini-Lalli" and suddenly Italy, 1972 is present in the room: faces of students, scenes in streets, the decor of pensiones, the clock tower in Venice, my son Stephen, then 4, in awe of it.

and "Ben Santoli," my old sidekick, dealing cards in Vegas for decades, out of touch with him since the '70s. I can't flip through much more of this — closing the book, I think about throwing it away, but put it back instead in the corner of the drawer where it came from, carefully, like a rabbi returning the Torah to its sacred place A scripture reminding me who I am.

play, we have to feel that, otherwise we cannot bring our that feeling in others."

Anoushka says at this point in her musical career, she finds spirituality in her father's music reduce than through her own playing. "I'm not at the stage we where I can just completely lose myself. If that were to haplose myself. If that were to hap-pen, I kobw it would be very spiritual; that's how it is for my father. He is just completely lost. When I got it in my mind to wander down this particular memory lane, to revisit Ben-jamin Franklin Elementary, I called my mother. She is widcalled my mother. She is wid-owed now, lives in a faraway-city, and my father lies under-ground even farther away in a place where it snows and the leaves change color. My mother and I often miss each other's points, and she has a healthy mutrate of writers in emperal

I suppose you're going to write that I was a failure as a mother. Fine. But be sure to write I did the best I could."

I assured her that I wanted to know only why she made my funches.

"Because I was your

"And because you liked only And occasise you fixed only grilled-cheese sandwiches, and they had to be on whole-wheat bread or you wouldn't touch them. And because I didn't know what they would feed you in the cafeteria or how clean it was. I didn't trust it. I'm sure was I didn't trust it. I'm sure you read those stories a few months ago about all the chil-dren in the Midwest who got sick from Mexican raspberries in their cafeteria innehes. I wasn't crazy, you know." No. She wasn't crazy, Just

No. She wasn't crazy, Just as I can set the 12 or so children who atc with me at my inaugural cafeteria meal, I can still see her in the kitchen making my lunch. Her blue quilted bathrobe. I hear the meired chedskillet. I hear the meited ched-dar sizzle as it runs from between the bread onto the hot skillet. I smell its sharp tang, I feel the apprehension of what it was like to leave her, leave home, for another day at school.

It was an act of faith, really, All those grilled-cheese sand-wiches. The idea that a home-cooked meal could somehow forestall or fend off somehow forestall or fend off the injury the world might do me or that I might do myself. But no quantity of grilled cheese sandwiches, or apple wedges, or Thermoses of Kooi-Aid, could have stayed the trouble brewing outside our kitchen. Armed with her spatula and end intentions, my mether good intentions, my mother was no match for politics or Thirty years later, I wander the halls of the school I'd at-tended as a little boy. My mind tended as a little boy. My mind plays tricks and I catch gimpses of him and hear snatches of playground coorersations he had heard. I both love and leathe that little hoy. I love him in the way we all love, or sen-timentalize, what we think of timentalize, what we think of as the best parts of ourselves. And I loatine him in the way I loathe the parts of myself I think of as weak, as vulnerable. I see him running down the hall-ways, playing in the sandbox, and I want to wring his pale, chubby neck. A retroactive mercy killing.

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

▼n late 1926, the Peteet family of San Diego turned on the gas and went to sleep forever (this picture was taken in a funeral parlor). Earlier that year, in January, sisters Clyde and Audra Peteet accompanied their father, Thomas, to some Tijuana bars for beers. As the afternoon wore into evening, a bartender introduced the Peteets to Zenaido Llanos, Tijuana's chief of police. They started drinking together.

"The last drink," according to Audra's deposition, "chief spoke to bartender and he brought a small drink. Up to that time I knew what I was doing. After that I remember nothing until I woke up, partly undressed. I know I was ravished by chief of police." Audra's sister also had recollections of being raped. Thomas Peteet could not recall being dropped off at his hotel. At the ensuing Tijuana trial, the chief and his alleged accomplices were acquitted of the charges. The Peteets committed suicide later that

Reader Matches Success Story

Marsha DiPaste: I did this on a whim. It was May of 1992 and I had just gotten out was May of 1992 and I had just getten out of a had relationship. I period up a copy of the Reader at Bosney's one days, saw the Phone Matches, and decide to rey it lim was one of about two dation responses. I maily liked his vicious, so I called him retry one evening. He want home. I rend upin mound 9 o'clock, ble was rill out. At I may not little him a new order to be a new up of the period are yea. Dusty you have to get up and go to work in the morning. This is the last time. I really want going to buy sayshing. I was a test.

Jim DiPaula: When I got home around. 11:10 there were three messages on my phote from Marsha. I thought, "Who is this woman." So I called her the near day.

Marsha: We talked about our families, but I didn't tell him I had a 7-year-old son

Jim: I might not have called her if I knew. We met for hanch a week late: at El Torto. After lunch, I wanted to take her to this great place to get dessert.

Him: That right we went to see a friend of Montha's in a part-calipno band. When I told my rwin brother we were going our agon that same right, be said, "Aren't you going to get sick of her."

Marsha: I went out with a few other gays from the Reader ad, but it was only one date each. Kinda like an interview thing and noise worked out. But whenever I had a couple of spate hours, I'd call Jim.

gener place to get desert.

Marshar I called to rell my bubysiter and she said. "Don't get in the car with him."

Jime: That was nice. She'd say, "Do you want to go hear some music." Or, "Woold you like to get something to out." Do you have a Reader Matches "Success Story" to share?
