You have to remember that while Kansan had been a free state, it wann't a Northern state. A slave-concer moving to Kansan could keep his slaves, he just couldn't enslave any blacks or Native Americans in Kansas, Obening slaves wasn't illegal."

Conley's attitude changed in the 1970s when he began to appreciate the denomination's doc-trine and especially its intense emphasis on mis-sionary work. When he took control of Encanto Southern Baptist in 1981, the church was "almost dead."

"From the time the church was founded in the 1980s to the '70s, it had been a white church. By the time 1g but her, most all the white people had moved away. There was a small, loyal, mixed congregation here, mostly black, a few white. And now the neighborhood is changing again: A tox of blacks are moving north to Tierrasanta, Mirz Mesa, or south, down near Chys. The neigh-Mita Mesa, of south, down near Uniy. The neigh-borhood is becoming more and more Hispanic. But Southern Baptists don't tend to pick up and move their churches when things change. We tend to stay put and serve the community around

And when Boswell asked him whether he

And when Boswell asked him whough reopel naturally felt pity for their fellows, lohnson replied. Pity is not natural to man. Children are always cruel. Savages are always cruel. Pity is acquired and improved only by the cultivation of reason. Tohonson's answers reflect a commonly held, hardheaded view of the hard bear and the commonly held, hardheaded view of the hard headed view of the hardheaded view of the commonly held, hardheaded view of what human beings are naturally like: essentially selfish and out for themselves. Of course, this doesn't mean to say that everyone will always cat selfishly, will always leave their partners and feel no pity. It is simply that, when they do behave incity that, when they do behave incity, or and accidentally always leave their partners and feel no great their partners and feel not provide the property of the partners and feel not provide the partners and seclarized, trught to upperss their naturally greedy and aggressive institutes. Without constraint and positive encouragement. straint and positive encouragement, there could be only barbarism.

This egoistic view of human nature has had much support among philoso-phers and was most strikingly articphers and was most strikingly articulated in the 17th Century by Thomas Hobbes in his Leviathan (1651). The life of man in a natural state — with-out laws or government — would, for Hobbes, be "solitary, goor, nasty, burtish, and shore" because men were at heart aggressive, self-serv-ing, unsociable, and obsessed with a "desire for present profit."

The origin of their good behavior lies in their selfulaness two prehistoris men discover that they can best fall a suber-tooth tiger without injury if they help each other, the optimatic outcome of a very pessimistic premise that they would initially have tried to all both the tiger and each other.

(1776), a wonderful fedure of modern society and the financial market underprinning it is that it leads people to behave well toward one another by appealing to their gread, which is by far the most reliable feature of human psychology. It is not from browner of the control of

We address ougselves not to their humanity, but to their self-low, and never talk to them of our necessities but of their advantage. *Which is not to say that we would never get our dinner from the butcher if we were starving and came begging to his door, just that we couldn't count on it.

Philosophical egoim received its strongest boost from the publi-cation in 1859 of Charles Darwin's Origin of Species. Darwin explained that the only way an inherited char-acteristic could become more widespread way an inherited char-acteristic could become more preded an enaming that any traits in personal gain would be eradicated over time.

There would be no evolutionary reason, for a hard-line Darwinst, in doing anything for anyone cibe. It would be pure madness to jump into a river in the hope of rescuing a stranger. Yet a glance a how the world actually works is enough to show that psychological egoism, though often persuasive, cannot be the whole hough often persuasive, cannot be the whole

Back on the 26th floor, Daves questioned the wisdom of such accessories. "Once again, I think these thangs can came hurdles that you might have to overcome. Dave remembered the first suit he owned as a lawyer. "I was just graduated from law school," he reminisced. "I bought a dark charcoal-gray suit that I could wear with both black and brown accessories. I dish't have a lot of money. I might have worn accessories. I didn't have a lot of money. I might have worn that suit several times a week until I get ecough money to get another one and mix ir in. Over a period of time, I've acquired more than that in number. You cang to a store, and if they've got the right peop-ly, they can tell you what looks right on you and what weshes you out."

While Davee may dress down for a trial, he doesn't hesitate to wear his best clothes to a settle-ment conference. "If I'm going to a settlement conference before to a stillement conference before a judge, and I've got a big case, and I want a lot of money. I don't go looking like some putper. There is, for example, a display case concerning the death of pets. A headstone, just like a human's but in miniature, is inscribed "165-4673, Parlee Trout." And beneath that "miscours publy doll." But that trout had a good eight-plus years. — I'm not sure how long they live in the wild. The museum——it has tings to fold-fashioned freak shows, its displays are sometimes meant to tweak conservatives 'nose—but it is also a place of historical record, an arciave of cruelty and madness.

The pictures in question show a form of execution by torrue called 'Death by a Thousand Cats.' 1d read about it in accounts of the control of the stair of the death, the pictures worth a few thousand words. I talked with James and Cathee extensively, separately and together. I also spoke, at

We sat outside in a little deck area behind their living quarters. A gallows leaned against the wall. James built it to the exact specifications of Leav-enworth prison's gallows. The iguanas gazed down at us from a shelf on another wall. I asked James how he procured things for the misseasus

IH: Yesh. The reason that we have black-and-white pho-tographs is not to glamorize so much what's going on. Hav-ing a black-and-white photograph keeps it sterile in a sense where it's almost more of an where it's almost more of an oducational phytograph, where a color photo seems to romanticize it and make it more glamorized. It just adds to the misery of what's going on because you have to see the colors of the blood and all these other things. In the black-and-white pho-tographs you see more of an idea, rather than the gruesomeness of that idea.

Scrapping 86.19 has several advantages. It would send a message that San Diego—host of the Republican Convention and the Saper Bood—is a modern, sophisticated city, not a small toom with archaelaclases. It would tell transgendered Citizens (and there are a lot more of us than you may realize; that San Diego is a safe place to live, work, and invest a chart for the control of place to live, work, and invest in. And letting the code die a quiet death would spare many local politicians the embar-rassment of baving to defend a phobic piece of legislation. As transgendered citizens, we're unfortunately an ievisi-ble minority. But we're still en-

And she tells plenty—her sister's prostitution, their mother's nuttiness, her own drug use, her and her sister's love prostution, their mother's nutriness, her ones aring use, ner and her suser s sover affairs with volter and dangerous men. It's here grogeously kint and Secretary and closely and coolly written this memor's that sees it apart from so many others. On the morning that we talked, Maris Flook, and I, I used just fitten to be here. My Sister Life has two narrators, Maria and Karen. Flook alternates between Maria's telling of her story and Karen's telling hers. I asked law she acquired from her sister such detailed material.

"I first approached my sister a few years ago, telling her I wanted to write this story, and did she want to help me by telling me more than I had already gleaned from really just a few conversations we'd had about that time in her life. In our

I added how it fell to Flood to write in her sister i voice,

The sister has an eighth-grade education, except she's very tree educated, and if you talk to her right now she cattaily sounds perty gavey and she has a pretty great ability to say what she vants to say, that at 14, you know, I had only the sister is the sister of the sister is the sister in the sister is the sister is the sister is the sister is the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister is the sister is the sister is the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister in the sister in the sister in the sister is the sister is the sister in the s withheld her comments until she had something stinging to say. Usually, she was pretty quiet. So I had to reinvent that introspective voice of my sister at 14 and make it as true as I could. I really kind of loved reinventing that voice because it brought me closer to my sister. Back at the time it was almost as if I had recreated my siter, and all was stifting right there with me, you know, and I could hear her voice as it was before it was completely turnished by adult trials and dangers. My voice was more feverable and introspective, graphing more with the psychological. Whereas she was more intuitive with the psychological. So it was interesting to write in her voice and have her endure what she endures in that interesting to write in ner voice and naive the endure what size ensures in that voice, with enough information for the reader to be moved and to be convinced, but not letting the other nerrator, who has a great deaf more verbosity, overtake it, I said that Flock's use of the two voices seemed a true technical tour definee.

Thope, she said, that other readers see that because, number one, it's the core story of my life. But on the other hand, it really is a piece of art that I worked on and that I hope is one of the best things Twe ever done. So I like that you notice that it was something that was made. This didn't just happen. "I think that's one difference in this book from other incenoirs or confessional biographies, where what happens is more important than the telling. I think as a writer, what's more important to me is the telling. Because through the telling is how we can illuminate what did happen."

bles. The best training in a program happens on a stage, not in a estaurant.

David has probably heard far oo much pontificating about acor training. Any training program or studio claiming that this-plusthis equals a performance, who this equals a performance, who teach a paint-by-numbers a par-proach to the work, is lying. But Dwidt simplified approach—say my words and don't add any-thing—is equally reliculous. The biggest fallacy in the book. The claims constantly to know solut they "react or find superfluous. He refers to "them" as if the knows each personally. I don't know about you, but he never asked me. Dot he poll the audiences after had all love the first stacction, and roul-less performance! It hink not. I would, however, urge action to read Mannet's book. It might discourage those who think there as a systematic approach to acting.

discourage those who think there is a systematic approach to acting. David singles out "finding an action" at the most important thing an actor has to do (second to learning the lines). Actions are what actors do while they are talking, Mannel's signature action is "to provoke. This book is a performance that will provoke the proportion of the discussion, much agament, a lot of fixtion. We should welcome the challenge.

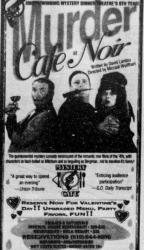

Christina Courtenay, director, actor, member of the board and the artistic committee of the

I haven I always liked Mamet's plays; they tend to be awfully naturalistic. And to make his points in this book, Mamet overaimplifies—that's the "lake" in his 'True and 'Fake. However, some of his points are good about acting inself.
Mamet unksic derogatory statements about professional training schools and MFA programs.

I've worked with terrific actors who graduated from such schools. But I've also worked with sendedrella circin with no formal training, only lots of experience. THE ANT-SIZED STONES

Coliseum, where I saw them, the stage was flanked by two giant blow-up dolls: naked women with huge breasts, one on her hands and knees. The ant-sized Stones run around between these cargantages, but never. around the arena and stare at 50-year-olds boogying to "Satisfaction" while we "Satisfaction" while we inhaled the sick stench of money — i.e., cigar smoke—that wafts off an aged crowd. Both the bar and the booths were doing big business. The latter wer business. The latter were selling these brown bomber jackets with the Stones tongue logo on the back for $400 — they weren't even leather. I asked a guy how many be sold, and he said, "Three, but then our credit card machine broke." Lisa Fisher in a black teddy touching herself during "Fionky Tonk Woman." When she's introduced, Mick says. "Lezas," I ave a present for you," and hands her a slinky negligee. Sex wise, the show is very Hugh Hefner, circa 1963, out of touch and outherite.

card machine broke."

The Stones play their songs quite well, although each number — augmented by a humanoid overdub of horns, keyboards, and backup singers — is produced within an inch of its life, and there are no count 'em — NO surprises, unless it's "Gimme Shelter" and "Sympathy for the Devil," both of which used to be kinda spooky, Now the only spooky thing about them is the sight of 50,000 fiftysomethings going "whoo whoo!" in unison. There's a little sonic delay between Mick's moving lips and what you're hearing, which makes it all look like a badly dubbed it all look like a hadly dibbed Japanese monster move. But you're still in the same sip code as the Stones, and that's worth something.

The lights work in the Stones' favor, including a beautiful simulated ailerno on "Sympathy for the Devil." At the end of the show there is a firework display that Offensive — offensive being the operative word.

Still, the super-huge production values serve their purpose, since that's the only production values serve their purpose, since that's the only thing that really distinguishes them from the Temptations-ShaNaNa-Lesley Gore revue at the Hyatt Reno. The Stones have always celebrated money, decadence, drugs, and women, so if bowing and craning to that menality scraping to that mentality doesn't sicken and alarm you, you should be there. "Somehow or other, when I was in Raney Blue, Robert Hillburn — whom I didn't work for — just stuck his nose in and started demanding that I be fired if I don't stop being a musician. Now, Hilburn is not the most popular guy among people at the Times.

The guy is a colossal weenie. You can quote me on this. Basically he went to the people above my editors, and what it continues on my editors, and what it continues to write music for the Timera as long as 1 didn't play outside of San Diego, So I didn't for over a year. This was a major problem, a major hindrance for me. "I mean, Hillburn's out there appearing in films as a music critic, and he's ghost music critic, and he's ghost music critic, and he's ghost printing. Michael Jackson and the support of the sup

"If I had stayed in Rancy Blue, I would have had to hide my musical activities or lose my job. I would have been my job. I would have been also parting death threats from people whin desperately need to get a life. This was over a piece I'd written in the OC Weedly, a loving, hearfielt, and quite homest article about Country Dick Montana. People were coming to my shows was, like, "Yeah, well, fuck you." He's telling me this as I'm listening to his record, and I'm thinking Yeah, yeah,

My friends gladily ite them and pronounced the en-chiladas and refried brans highly satisfactory. Nothing here is grouped up with som cream.

Roben suggested that 1 try the steamed tacos ($6.75). Corn tortillas are warped and placed in a steamer. Either chicken or pork is mixed with garlic, "secret spics," orange slices, and onions and cooked for about three hours. All fat is skimmed off, so that when you eat the steamed tacos the pork or chicken tates fat-free, flavorful, and healthful. I loved them.

"You take an Idaho potent and you slice it real thin. Feeling hungry? Let's find an In-N-Out Brurger place. Best burgers in town! One here in Lemon Grove somewhere. I feel like cele-bratia!"

It's dark. Around 7:50 at night. We're driving west down Breadway through the scrappy outsirts of room, at Sheetwale Way, Little Darlogs, Showgish Adult Cabber (labe) up the night on the scrapps.

"Well, how 'bout celebrating there?" I ask.
"You kidding?" says Ted. "All that stuff, I'm changing, man. It don't mean diddly-squat to me

no more."

Now I know something's wrong. Ted's always been my main connection to sin. Gambling, grog.

you name it.
Suddenly be says, "Screw In-N-Out. I can't wait to tell you. This'll do."
He swings left across Broadway into what looks like an old red-and-white gas station. Escept it has palm and ficas tree sprouting where gas pumps should be. And a formatio garging where air hoses should be. And row big yellow signo outside. One says, "Charley's Famous Hamings outside. One says, "Charley's Famous Hamings outside. One says, "Charley's Famous Hamings with a Mickey Mouse tattoo on his left arm is ovolking on his VM garge. We track around his bug to the window. "Can we eat in!" I ask the kid behind the order window. "Suce," he says, "back there."

He points to a red-and-green trellis area overgrown with bougainvilles. as to Ted.

"Who cares" "says Ted, He's foun Maine, We start working our way down the list of hamburgers, hot dogs, sandwiches, and kebobs to the two combo specials. "Oth hell, it's 'flig for the combos,' says Ted, He hauls out a quarter. "Lish jet number one."

combos, "says Ted. He haus our a quarter." Tain I get mumber one."

Yer-hil'st comes down heads. So I get combo number one a triple-bacon choeseburger with an order of regular French fries. $4.53, I order a large strawberry milishake ($1.60). Ted has to order combo number two, the double levbob with cheese and bacon and one large order of French fries. ($5.10). He gets a medium chocolate shake: $43.41).

We haul it all across the drive-thro to the "trellis room." It has a concrete floor and varnished picnic tables and benches sitting under fluorescent strip-lighting. Behind the red trellis on the far side, a Persian usbby cat sticks her nose through the trellis and starts mewling for food. Our table has been carved with a zillion names and hearts. Behind me, on the trellis ring, noneone has written. "For a Good Tune, Call Monika, 555...."
"Can you keep a secreft" says Ted.
I hold back on my first bite into the triple-boxen cheeseburger.
"I'm going to have a kid. A son. With Virginia," "Wha..."

"Course, I've got to tell the wife."

"And my daughters."
"Wha?"

"Wha?"
"And my morn.... But what a feeling! He could be the near president!"

"My mom assessons the kebob meat," says Richard." I still don't know her exact recipe. We're Challeans, Christians, from Iran, My father got Alleans, Challeans, Christians, from Iran, My father got water of this place then. Of course, the kebob are Americanized. Richard says he would have become a soldier at 12 in Iran if his dad hadn't gotten him out in says.

That wakes Ted up "Uh, I thought we were talking about my new life."

Oh, yeah, I grab my strawberry shake. "A toast!
To new life! To the future president of the United States!"

"Don't go overboard," says Ted. "Got a lot of negotiating ahead."

Yesh. I suppose so. It brings a lot of business to the area and it I of business to the area and it brings a lot of attention to the city. Those are positive things. It's definitive a pain decling with a letter people but it's managenide. I think attention to our city is inevitable, and if I rather have it be positive. Were already a big city. We can't go backwards. So we might as we'll do the big things like the Super Bood and do them right.

Yes, I am. I think it will be good for the city and for everybody.
Everybody will be making moneyhotels, restaurants, taxis, everybody.
The crosseds will be big, but they are the ones with the money. You can't The croseds will be big, but they are the ones with the money. You can't make money without the croseds, so I don't mind them. Besides, it's nost forever, just for a while. If it was all the time, maybe it wouldn't be so jood. And the TV bype, it brings in business. There can be no business without the TV. I think it's good for the city and the people making a living.
