District Fix Failure?

TEN YEARS AGO.

In the 1980s, the city council was faced with the challenge of increasing space and city services. A small band of outsiders, including developer Warren Trask, launched a petition to force a change in the way the city elected its council members. At the time, hundreds of thousands of dollars were pouring into the campaign war chests of council members, and little serious...

Cash vampires
Hundreds of small and large organisations have run amok on the Internet in recent months, gobbling up the credit cards of Internet users. Among the most notorious of these "cash vampires" is Compaq, which has been accused of using hidden fees and charges on its online services. The company has since announced a major overhaul of its online services, but many consumers are still wary of using them.

A Brains on a Platter

By Phyllis Crook

September 12, 1993, when I collapsed at the bowing alley, the Vista Entertainment Center, that was the starting point for my ultimate downfall.

Lately, I had a hard time staying on my feet. What started as a few dizzy spells turned into a full-blown drunkenness. My body started to shake, and I was having trouble breathing. I was in the hospital with a severe case of alcohol poisoning. I had to be put on a respirator to help me breathe. They didn’t think I would make it through the night.

I was married to my husband for 30 years, and we had been together for 40. We had two children, and we had always been happy. But when I got out of the hospital, things changed. I started drinking again, and my husband couldn’t put up with it anymore. He filed for divorce, and we were separated.

I was left with nothing but my kids and my house. I was alone, and I didn’t know what to do. I started drinking even more, and my kids were in danger. I had to get help. I went to a treatment center, and I started going to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings.

I’m doing better now, and I’m trying to stay sober. I have a good support system, and I’m getting help from my kids. I’m trying to make a better life for myself and my kids. I’m hopeful that I can get my life back on track.

CITY LIGHTS

Escondido’s Forlorn Monk

By the Opinion

It’s been accused of pretty much everything that could destroy a religious leader: financial misdeeds, heresy, lying, and even murder. The name of the man in question is Jesus Christ. The accusations are numerous, but the most recent and notable is that of the Essenes, a Jewish sect that operated in Roman-era Palestine and was known for its ascetic lifestyle and strict adherence to Jewish law. The Essenes believed that Jesus was a heretic and that he should be executed. They were one of the main groups responsible for the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem.

In the Gospels, Jesus is often portrayed as a simple, humble man who teaches about love and forgiveness. However, in the book of Acts, which was written by the apostle Paul, Jesus is portrayed as a heretic who was responsible for the death of the apostle John the Baptist. The apostle Paul was also a member of the Essenes, and he was very critical of Jesus.

The Essenes were a group of Jewish ascetics who lived in a community near the Dead Sea. They were strict adherents of Jewish law and were known for their ascetic lifestyle. They believed that Jesus was a heretic and that he should be executed. They were one of the main groups responsible for the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem.

Living side to side with their contemporaries, the Essenes had a complex social structure. They were divided into three main groups: the priests, the scribes, and the laymen. The priests were the religious leaders, the scribes were the scholars, and the laymen were the everyday people. The Essenes believed that Jesus was a heretic and that he should be executed. They were one of the main groups responsible for the destruction of the Temple in Jerusalem.

You want a cell phone, but you don't have one because you think they are too much of a pain in the wazoo.

We understand. So we've come up with an offer that makes cell phones so easy to get, use and pay for, that you will no longer be able to resist them.

Here's the deal. For a limited time, you can get an OKE 1410 phone (1522 dollars) and a $33 Prepaid Airtime card for just $99.

OK, let's do the math. Um, 1535 plus 1522 (five and two are seven and three and two are five and bring down the one) that comes to a whopping $1517 value. For a measly $99.

With Prepaid Airtime, weekend rates are always 50c cheaper than weekday rates. There's no annual contract, no monthly bill, no deposit, no credit check, no wires or strings attached, and no wazoos pain. You just buy your time in advance, and when you use it up, you buy more. It's that easy.

Prepaid Airtime cards from GTE Wireless. Easy to get. Easy to use. Easy to pay for. Easy to see why the heck you should get it. Give us a call at GTE Wireless, 1-800-249-GTE.

With decoration done by hand in the U.S. and Canada, the Christian Science church building is designed to echo the spiritual emphasis of the movement. The exterior features large, graceful columns that reflect the architectural style of the 19th-century American Renaissance. Inside, the sanctuary is characterized by its simplicity and warmth. The congregation is known for its welcoming atmosphere and its commitment to spiritual growth. The church also offers a variety of educational programs, including Sunday School and adult Bible study classes.

4000 Jobs?

4000 jobs. This claim has become a mantra of the Convention Center expansion boosters, but they never say where the figures come from. Actually, it is from a study commissioned by the Convention Center Corporation in 1990. Page 37 shows the 4000 jobs are predicted for the “region,” not the City. The number 4000 is arrived at by using the multiplier theory, assuming that additional spending by hotel employees will create more jobs in every category. For example, the study predicts the expansion will create 38 additional jobs in agriculture.

A recent San Diego Economic Bulletin showed wages for 106 different occupations in San Diego County. At the bottom were typical jobs in the tourist industry. These are the jobs that will be created. Booster ads never say “high-paying jobs.”

Booster should provide figure to show how many citizens of San Diego have benefited from the present Convention Center, which opened in 1989. The latest figures show the opposite.

Dan Bauder of the San Diego Union Tribune on November 25, 1997. “In 1988, San Diego’s per capita personal income was in eighth place among the 20 (comparative metro areas). By 1994 it had fallen to 14th.”

And what about this year’s $45 million city budget deficit? After all the economic benefits of the Convention Center, why aren’t we in surplus?

Join Citizens Against Corporate Welfare.

Years ago San Diego should have ended corporate welfare for the Hilton, Sheraton, and Marriott. The city should end this gravy train. It’s time for those businesses to pay their own way—just like the rest of us.

Vote No June 2 on the City Council’s ordinance authorizing $210,000,000 in new debt to expand the Convention Center.

Please give us your endorsement and your contribution. Every name and every dollar counts.

So it's a late summer Sunday morning, six weeks after friends and family toasted rice at Phil and Polly's, and hotter than blazes. Polly wore a t-shirt and shorts, and kicked back in her kitchen, ready to prepare Phil's first breakfast in bed. When she asked what he wanted, he said, "What about fried eggs, sunny-side up, bacon and French toast?" She got him in bed, Sunday newspaper and a new book, Catch-22, stowed under him, coffee on the bedside table, a Kenta burning in the Waterloo abattoir, of which Polly's best friend gave them six.

Polly is the narrator of the novel I'm writing. She's like me and not like me. I gave her the long red hair I always wanted and aquamarine green eyes. I gave her my freckles. Twenty-year-old Polly, still in college, marries 26-year-old Phil and goes to live in a little valley town in the mountains, which isn't far from where I live. I don't know much about Phil yet. I don't know what he gets his graduate degree or how he's making a living. He doesn't even have a face.

The time is the early '90s. The Beatles have not come to America. Jack Kennedy hasn't been shot.

Polly's got on hand: butter, eggs, thick-sliced rasher bacon, four slices of stale Wonder bread, Aunt Lemina's syrup. The night before she arranged a tray. On the tray she ounned a pink linen napkin, embroidered at each corner with white-flecked purple pansies. She rolled her Golfer Wendover Rose knife, fork, and spoon in the matching pink napkin. She set a bud vase in the middle and stuck in a red rose she cut from the bush at the edge of the house.

Polly had Jutted around the order in which she must prepare this breakfast. First bacon, then French toast, and last, eggs. With a fork, she beats up four eggs, two tablespoons sugar, two tablespoons cream, and a teaspoon of cinnamon in a square pan and plops in the bread to soak. That's for her own. Then she takes out the bacon and strips away six slices and lets them out across her huge iron skills. That's when she breaks out in a sweat.

I curse Polly with my idiosyncrasies. This particular marital twist? I got Polly is one that leads me, when I cut a chicken into wings and legs and backs and brown halve for frying, to terror that chicken scratch its way across the yard, hearing her trickling boot. Back sounds, I see feathers tumble, head malevolent eyes focus on perfect grains of yellow corn, as glittering beetle. I see her beak in green open plumage from her egg shell. I see her eggs in the nest, dotted with engraving of this same green plumag, I smell the hot, disheveled honey handsome in summer. I look inside, the white here sit on their nests. They click. They brood. I think about The Little Red Hen. The same go for pork chops, rib roast, lamb chops, pressed duck, roast goose. I envision eggs, steaks, lamb, ducks, geese — whole again, alive. I expect any minute the slaughterhouse will arrive in his truck. He steers across the field, shoves in on his shoulder the shepherd. Polly.

Polly takes this further. Even folk worry Polly. When she probes the red wrapper fibers she that will wrap around bread crumbs, grand cheese, carrots, and pears, she imagines the fish in school. They swim far beneath the surface, where water is colder and no light shines. She sees boats at sea. Turned even two out vast nets. The fish look up, as if they performed a synchronized water ballet. Each fish head turns at the same moment. The fish then plunge, down farther, deeper, and head for home, wherever. Polly says to herself, "a fish home might be."

opposition was emerging to take on the incumbents. Reformers argued that the city was being taken over by the special interests, and they thought they had a solution.

Steve Erie, a professor of political science at UCSD, was an eyewitness to the beginning. "It was a participatory observer," Erie recalls. "It came in at the invitation of Barb Lamberger, who at that point was the coordinator of the Sierra Club, and the organizing meeting was at the Sierra Club headquarters in Balboa Park. Of course, this was being pushed by the Sierra Club and John Hartley [in December 1986], and it was a way to control the power of developers' money in local elections. They saw that you can run much cheaper campaigns, labor-intensive, a lot of citizen volunteers, if you had district elections. Remember, a big issue in the late 1980s, before the economy went into the toilet, was too much growth and too much influence by developers in local city politics."

THE Eye OF THE Dolphin

No more the dolphin and I were alone here. Something was coming, something alive, something strange and beautiful. The dolphin was moving slowly through the water, its fins cutting through the waves like a knife through butter. It was as if the dolphin were made of light itself, moving effortlessly through the ocean.

I watched in wonder as the dolphin approached me. It was as if it knew me, as if it had come to talk to me. I reached out my hand, and the dolphin responded, touching my hand with its own. It was as if we were connected, as if we were one.

The dolphin spoke to me, its voice clear and melodic. It told me of its journey, of its adventures, of its experiences in the world. It was as if I could understand every word it said, as if I could feel every emotion it felt.

I was filled with wonder and awe as I watched the dolphin. I knew then that I had found something special, something unique, something that would change me forever.

And so I stayed, watching the dolphin, learning from it, growing with it. The dolphin became my teacher, my guide, my friend. And in turn, I became its companion, its protector, its advocate.

Together, we journeyed through the ocean, exploring its depths, discovering its secrets, witnessing its wonders. And in the process, we became more than just dolphin and trainer; we became family.

The dolphin taught me the importance of connection, of empathy, of understanding. It showed me that the world is full of beauty and wonder, that there is so much to learn and discover if only we open ourselves up to it.

And so I leave you now, with the memory of the dolphin still fresh in my mind. I hope that you will take from this story what you can and let it guide you on your own journey of discovery and growth. For in the end, it is not just the dolphin that we learn from; it is the journey itself that teaches us the most.

I am leaving now, for I must return to my work. But I will never forget the dolphin, or the lessons it has taught me. And I hope that you, too, will carry those lessons with you, wherever you go.

"I did those guitar solos for Rocket from the Crypt yesterday. The tour is over; they're going to tour the U.K. and Europe. I heard they're going to be in Germany next month. The guitar solos I did for them were real intense. It was a good gig, and it was a good experience. I really enjoyed working with them."

A couple of weeks ago, I was in LA and I went to see a show at the Troubadour. It was a really good show, and I was really impressed with the performance. The guitar work was amazing, and the music was really tight. I really enjoyed the experience."

Remedial Criticism

Little wonder that nasty Letters-to-the-Editor so often take the form of job applications.

Despite average newspaper wage-earners' average income, it only ranks to begin with. But increasing average wage-earners' average income is the sine qua non of the solution of the wages issue. That is the sine qua non of the solution to the wages issue. Indeed, it's a matter for great satisfaction to find, when one has the facts, that the more one earns, the more one can earn.

To ensure that what they themselves see in a newspaper is not what they see in a newspaper, it is necessary to be more informed of the situation in detail and to be more fully informed of the situation in detail.

The major myths propagated by the left about wage earners with critical needs is that one man's income is as good as another's. While we are completely aware of the fact that a man's income is as good as another's, we can also see that a man's income is as good as another's.

It's hard enough for the wage-earner who observes how the lower wages of his time are the lower wages of his time. Their logical extensions of this can do a lot of damage. "Frankly," they say, "can do a lot of damage."

It's impossible to expect that people who work more than half of the week and who think about them twenty-five hours a day should think the same thing about them. It's hard enough for the wage-earner who observes how the lower wages of his time are the lower wages of his time.

In a good many cases, the critic may even feel that he has been misled by experience and the fact that he was misled by experience. In a good many cases, he was misled by experience.

The point is that the critic begins to understand the consequences of the critical need to increase at every step. This handicaps, the wage-earner of average income and success, will probably find his opinion given outside the gravitational field of events.

The critic who has to make a conscious effort to the differences will be certain to have a more success, but not necessarily the same kind of success, his own income.

Any reader who asks, demands, shows that a critic accurately reflects (or possibly the writer's personal)

Sauce That Looked Like Rust

My friend said under his breath, "It's pathetic.

With a family of Michelin-starred restaurants in France, I was surprised to hear the hype about the place. The Michelin-starred restaurants in France are known for their high-end dining experience, but this place was different. The decor was rustic and the food was simple. I was at a loss for words when my friend described it as "pathetic." But the upside was that the portions were huge and the prices were reasonable. I decided to give it a try.

We arrived at the restaurant and were greeted by a friendly hostess. The ambiance was cozy and warm, with dim lighting and soft music playing in the background. We were seated at a table for two and were given a menu. The menu was extensive and had a variety of options, including vegetarian and gluten-free options.

Our waitress arrived and asked if we wanted to order drinks. We opted for a glass of wine and let her know what we wanted to order. She recommended a local wine that was highly rated by the restaurant's wine sommelier.

As we waited for our food, we took in the atmosphere. The walls were adorned with paintings and photographs, and the decor was eclectic, with a mix of rustic and modern elements.

Our food arrived, and I was pleasantly surprised. The sauce that looked like rust was actually a unique and flavorful sauce that paired well with the dish. The food was cooked to perfection, and the presentation was beautiful. I was impressed by the quality of the ingredients used and the attention to detail.

Overall, I was pleased with my experience at the restaurant. The atmosphere was cozy and welcoming, and the food was delicious. I would definitely recommend it to others, especially if they are looking for a unique dining experience.

Do What the Romans Did

I'm too weak to start a war. She knows it.

An artist once said, "Art is not trying to make things easier; it's trying to make them more difficult." I've always admired this quote because it speaks to the power of art in challenging our perceptions and encouraging us to see things in a new light. In my work as a chef, I strive to create dishes that are not only delicious but also thought-provoking.

I recently had the opportunity to create a dish inspired by the ancient Romans. I wanted to capture the essence of their culture and history through food. I decided to use the ingredients and techniques that were popular during their time.

I started with a simple broth made from chicken bones, vegetables, and spices. I then added a variety of greens, including lettuce, spinach, and arugula. The flavors were fresh and vibrant, and the textures were crisp and tender. The dish was served with a side of breadsticks, and I poured a glass of red wine to accompany it.

I hope that my dish will encourage others to explore the rich history and culture of the Romans. My goal is to make people think and appreciate the beauty of their heritage.

I'm Just So Tired

By Anne Albright

Some days I hold up by my stability, dry, brittle fingernails. Since my husband Jack and I moved into our family home in the small city of New England, we have been busy. The first week was hectic, overwhelming, and we settled into our new life. The dining room table was our temporary workspace, and Jack worked from home, using his computer and the phone to keep up with the work he had to do.

While Jack tried to make order of his work, I was in a state of mindless activities. I have been teaching kids about bicycles, skateboarding, and bike safety. I have also been volunteering at the local library, assisting with various tasks.

Just as I relaxed and drifted into a dream, Lucy came into the kitchen and asked if she could have some milk. I was about to say no, but then I remembered that we only have one carton left. So I handed it to her and told her to enjoy it. She walked out of the kitchen, and I heard the sound of the carton being opened.

Just then, there was a knock at the door. I quickly got up from the couch and opened the door. It was Jack, looking tired and worn out. He had just finished work and was looking for a place to relax. I invited him to come in and have a drink.

As we talked, I realized how tired we both were. Jack had been working long hours, and I had been doing a lot of volunteering. We both needed some rest.

I decided to make some tea and prepare a light meal. Jack sat down and took a sip of tea. Then he looked at me and said, "I'm just so tired." I nodded in agreement and said, "Me too." We sat there for a while, enjoying each other's company.

I then thought of the kids, who were busy playing with their toys. I realized how much I missed them. Jack and I had been so busy with our own lives that we hadn't spent much time with them.

I decided to make some plans for the weekend. Jack and I could take a break from work and spend some time with the kids. We could go to the park, have a picnic, and play some games.

As we got ready for bed, I thought about how much I loved being a mom and how much I needed to rest. I closed my eyes and drifted off to sleep, feeling grateful for the love and support of my family.
