None Of The Above

To answer the question of whether we should continue with district elections or rewith district elections or re-turn to electing our city coun-cil by citywide elections is re-ally a matter of determining which method provides voters the widest possible selection of candidates ("District Fix Fail-ure?" February 26). Presently, candidates must reside in the districts in which they run. Clearly, when the district is citywide, voters will have the best selection, since they will be able to choose from all the available candi-dates, regardless of which part of the city they come from.

And voters want choices. Since many of them have in-terests in two or more districts (they may live in one district and either work or own prop-erty in another, for example, they want to be able to select the candidate who will best represent all their interests.

But even without changing to citywide elections, there are two other ways to enlarge and improve the voter's choices. One is to use proportional rep-resentation (PR), also referred to as "priority witing," where the voters rank their choices for candidates in order of pri-ority. The other is to always provide NOTA, or "none of the above, "to every race, even (especially!) when only one person is running. Incidentally, using PR and NOTA would improve our state and national races as

Regarding "The Eye of the Dolphin" [February 26]. One week ago I attended the dolphin show at See World. How and oliphins splashing the audience, or trainers riding a dolphin, show dolphins in a "natural light, without gittz".
De dolphins need to jump over a bar in nature! This spectacle is purely show, lack spectacie is purely show, lack-ing educational value.

As for the Sea World trainers, how human of you to train these captive creatures to flip in the air, to urinate on command, and to retrieve toys. In return, the dolphins oceive a vet, ice cubes, and a filtered pool constructed of concrete walls. Of course, the vets probably deal with ailments and behaviors that manifest due to the stress and boredorn in conforming to Sea World's "educational train-ing." Oh, to be born into a life of captivity and conformity for human amusement and profitability.

Finally, 'dolphin huggers pay $125 to interact with dol-phins for a day. If one is so in-trigued by the mystique of these graceful, magnificent mammals, why infringe in their world by contributing money for their captivity? Give the money to established research institutes where dol-phins are studied in the wild. Dolphins were not created to be trained or hugged by man. Remember, we are land mammals, they are sea. Appreciate and respect these animals in their natural element away from human bugs. Hands off There is no justification for the mane spectacle of Sea World. Chalk another one up for human

Bit Harsh

Enjoyed Abe Opincar's latest "Places of Worship" review of the Christian Science church service in Coronado ("Sheep and Gosts," February 26). As a senior critizen and lifelong Christian Scientist, Lespecially liked many of his observations

as a nonmember. However, a couple of his remarks seemed a bit harsh. His saying that Christian Sci-entists hald extreme views and they outright reject medical care didn't quite portray my reason for being a Christian Scientist. I would rather be pertrared as one who has cho-sen to embrace and depend on the allness and omnipotence of God. As a child, I missed only about five days of school during my entire 12 years. So it seems a thoughtful and rea-

I have found a scientific, prayerful approach to health and well-being more dependable than many medical procedures. course, online has come to mean something else entirely. Growing up in the Midwest, we stood in line. When I moved to New York, I stood on line. (In England it was in a queue, but then, their trucks are lorries.) The odds of standing front to back for anything at any given time in San Diego are increasing con-stantly. Unemployment lines, the DMV, Social Security, disability lines, lines at the post office — these are universal and will always reare universal and will always re-semble U.S. propaganda films of the Scylet Union where people would supposedly stand in line for days for shoelaces or a head of cabbage or, at the end of the Cold War, a Big Mac. But lines in San Diego have a distinctive quality: joviality.

Take restaurants around town. Take La Jolla on a Friday night. Take lavier's (a phony name but a real place). Now, lavier's is a good place - that is, good food, good people work there, you get an honest mar-garita for a decent price imless you insist on being an asshole. The question grises: Why would anyone stand in a block-long line for an hour only to be deal-coed by screaming morons. Don Henley or Smashing Pumpkin music, conversation shouted across the bar, sports scores or monitors, rabid fans throwing confetti on your otherwise wellprepared frood, surf dudes shak ing their Coronas over their heads toasting El Niño for the benefit of the slinky, tightly fa-ted chacks across the bar?

I suppose there was a time when I might have stood in or on line for this myself. But these where that is worth standing on area, shifting my weight from one foot to another for 45 minutes. I will wait at the bar

I should not pick on San Diego: after all, I've lived here for 18 years, and I've become a San Diegan, But living in New York for ten years and Chicage before that conditioned me to have a love/hate relationship with any city I live in. New York ers, for example, will stand in line for any number of things, but when it's your turn at the counter, or to get on the bus, or to enter the nightclub, the idea is ating in a different way than New York or Chicago. Southern California is more sobrie, more isoleting, more lonely in a sense. As many people lived in my building in New York as live in, engaging in conversation with neighbors was hardly a priority it was to be avoided. One method of making contact wit our neighbors here — and w seem to want to -- is at the bus continued on page round, take a look back over 1997, and weigh in with their judgments. They can talk about wage increases, the mar-ket, feed prices, pests, and, as there was more of last year than you might have noticed.

The spokesmen for the top three — cut flowers, bedding plants, and ornamental trees sound the most corporate. Asked about production and profits in '97, Mike Anthony, speaking from the San Luis Rey office of Milano & Co., grow-ers of cut flowers, answered. We don't generally give that kind of stuff out. In general, things went well — production was up, and our sales are moving forward -- we had a better [increase] was a difficulty; created its own problems as far as operations were concerned."

Anthony was willing to talk about changes in growing strategy. "[We're growing less of] some of the crops that are un der heavy import pressa things like pompons, chrys themums.... One crop specifi cally, caspia, is being replaced by a product called limonium Misty Blue. In general, large crops are being splintered int a lot of smaller crops. We used to grow 30 acres of Shasta daisies; we're now grow about an acre and a half '97, French tulips and Asiatio lilies did well enough as exper-imentals to become small-scale production crops. "Last year, we were doing maybe 30 or 40 bunches a week," says Anthony. "Now we're up doing three, four, five hundred bunches ev-ery other day." The weather didn't hit Milano & Co. hard, but they have started "playing around with plastic hoop houses" to protect from wind and increase production.

Gregg Opgenorth, production manager for Color Spot Nursery in Fallbrook, also made note of the minimumwage increase as a "major added expense," but Color Spot, too, had a good '97. Color Spot produces the "little sixpacks or four-inch pots of your Because their product is what Opgenorth calls "defiery stock, trees and shrubs, for the landscape industry, ex-plains Greg. A good year for nitely a luxury-type item," he cites the healthy economy as a business means more businesses, and that means more reason for success. They had good weather, meaning good sales, but "it's kind of a doubledevelopment and more land-scaping. "Our biggest sellers were 24- and 30-inch box trees. Queen palms are very popular, and the California pepper trees. Sales prices were up 10 percent last year, and the edged sword. To support our sales, we need to have our reser-voirs full. It's kind of a catch-22 for us."

According to production weather has been kind. "There hasn't been any frost the last

Furthest from the particu-lars of this-or-that planting is Tom Bellamore, senior vice president of the California Av-ocado Commission, A lot of things, he says, are put in terms of projections and averages with regard to place and tim of year. "In '96-'97, we pro jected a crop out of San Diego of 138 million pounds, and in '97-'98, we've projected a crop of 139.5 million pounds," com ing from roughly 24,000 acres of avocado trees. "We've had two very good years back-to-back," continues Bellamore. "Last year, overall, set a record in terms of crop value" — 78.8 cents a pound to the grower, for a total of more than $108 million dollars. Weather has been good, despite some knock-down-inducing wind and har-vest-delaying rain each year, and water prices, which make up "as much as two-thirds of production cost, have remained relatively stable." He stresses that his numbers are averages and that some San Diego avo-cado growers may not be do-

Armstrong feeds his chickens milo- and corn-based feed, and though he paid less for it in '97, he also had a hard time getting it to his million plus birds. The Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe/Burlingto Northern railroad merger took place, and "all of a sudden, they were not able to do as good a job. We have to get grain shipped out of Texas and the Midwest, and those cars weren't or they said, 'Not enough en gine power.' The [railroad is] getting better, but for a few months..." # Tourists Will Not Pay For This Expansion - You Will

Boosters of the $210 million Convention Center expansion say it would be paid for by Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT). People think this means the hotel room tax paid by visitors. But this is what the city budget says:

"[The] council may from time to time for the purpose of augmenting programs elect to allocate non-transient occupancy tax monies such as sales tax to this fund. (City Budget, Volume 3, Appendix 1, Lage 25)

There is no limit on how much general fund money can magically become TOT.

This year 42 percent of the TOT fund comes from other general fund sources. More than $21 million of sales tax has been renamed TOT.

Over a million dollars was taken from the Balboa Park Improvement Fund and called TOT

Plus another $2.2 million was transferred from the general fund.

This Financing is The City's Second Choice.

At the February 2, 1998, council meeting, Councilman Vargas said, "I agree with Councilmember Stallings however, that this is not the most favored financing mechanism."

Why? It may cost up to $30 million more in interest than the council's first choice

The council could have put its first choice on the ballot, but passage would require a 2/3 vote. This

There is No Cap On Casts.

Remember the promises in 1983? The original center would cost $93 million. Well, it cost over $200 million. Can this expansion be built for $210 million? There's no guarantee. In fact, the city's current estimate already exceeds $210 million

Such a vision of freedom was first and most clearly articulated by John Stuart Mill in his clearly articulated by John Stuart Mill in his clear to the modern liberalism. On Elberry Joublished in 1859). Mill stated: "The only freedom which deserves the name is that of pursuing our own good, in our own way, so long as we do not attempt to deprive others of theirs, or impost their efforts to obtain it."

When Mill looked back over his ver, he could see that aroremments

When Mill looked back over his-tory, he could see that governments had frequently censored and directed the opinions of the populace; they had prevented them from worship-ping certain gods, they had stopped them from voting, and, in Ancient Spart,, even forced them to take. Sparts, even forced them to take regular outdoor exercise. These ancient commonwealths felt them-selves entitled, in Mill's words, "to take a deep interest in the whole boddy and mental discipline of every one of their citizens."

But Mill argued that such intervention constituted a gross violation of liberty. Even if all mankind, tion of liberty. Even if all mankind, except for one poron, believed exercise to be good for the body, then that one person could never justifiably be forced to change ideas. "All selecting is an assumption of infallibility." a description of the superior of the superio lined above were articulated in a classic essay by the Oxford philosopher Isaiah Berlin, in which Berlin coined the terms "negative" and "positive" lib-erty. Negative liberty was by far the more modest of the two; it was the desire to be left alone to think and do whatever one wanted so long as one didn't harm others (Mill's idea). Whereas the desire for positive liberty involved the more ambitious and potentially more dangerous desire to tell people what to think on the basis of knowing what was right (Plato's idea). Why would this (Plato's idea). Why would this be dangerous? After all, it is sometimes a good idea to change people's opinions, if these opinions are plainly daft. Berlin acknowledged the point: "It is possible, and at times justifiable, to coerce men in the name of some goal — let us say, justice or public health - which they would if they were more enlightened, themselves pursue, but do not, because they are blind or ignorant or corrupt."

However, as Berlin went on to say, this renders it dan-gerously easy for me "to con-ceive of myself as coercing others for their own sake... I am then claiming what they truly need better than they know it themselves... Once I take this view, I am in a position to ignore the actual wishes of men or societies, to bully, oppress, torture them in the name of their 'real' selves." Every tyranny, from Robespierre's France to Nazi Germany, has expressed the chill-ing desire to "make people free" — and to kill them if they resist such efforts at

if certain philosophers have defended negative liberty, it is primarily because of the dangers they see in the positi gers they see in the positive conception. Believing in neg-ative liberty doesn't always mean being a moral relativist (the philosophy that no one knows the truth and your guess is as good as mine). However, it does imply a belief that there are far more dangers in a polit-ical system that takes it upon itself to tell people what to do than in one that leaves them largely alone — even if this

I fell in helps just on our there. I really could not care less at the more man or about "mild depression," let me make it doer that I am not taking about the holy.

I am not talking about the hor-ror of severe, dinical depression. When William Styron wrote of his encounter with "...a disorder of mood, so mysteriously painful and elusive in the way painfal and elusive in the way in becomes known to the self—to the mediating intitlect—as to verge close to being beyond description." in his book Darboss Visible, he was not writing about me. No. What that poor bestard went through maken my 'midl' or (I har'e this phrase one shrink used on me) 'went depression' almost comical—if it weren't so subtly debilitating. I'll tell you what I mean.

I consulted the above-mentioned psychia-trist in 1990 for what I could only describe as a kind of "teary incontinence." In other words, I could not control when I would break down I could not control when I would break down in short fits of weeping.— sometimes it would occur at the most inappropriate and even light moments. I knew I was turning into my Uncle George. The blubbering Dago, 'my brothers and I called him.

On Sunday afteration visits to my Italian relatives, George would afterady be plastered by three o'Gock, He would pass out thorth after dinner and sometimes in the middle off it, but not before valing. The shrink told me it was natural, that I was grieving. I had just been dumped by my girlined. I told him I didn't think that was it. I wasn't even thinking about her when these emba rassing episodes would overtake me. Besides thought, but what did i know? That was when the Freudian mentioned the word "meian-cholia." It was better than "wet depression,"

One theory! held briefly was that I needed to flush melancholy emotions strough me on douby basis. This is, taking a morning leak in a different but equally essential way. Holly timene did that in Broadcast News. The character set aside several minutes in the morning before work to host uncontrollable. Then she before work to host uncontrollable particulars. Simple expedience, get to out of the ware to expedience and the she wasn't crysting bout arteriting in particular. I thought that was a great brushstroke of characterization.

It has only been in recent weeks that I've in the only open in neurin weeks that he figured out the Dr. Quinn Factor. It's the sound track. The music, well-done by William Oleis, is cinematic, more suited to epic, sprawling, ragic generational sugar on the big screen than television at its most mediocre. The key here into television at its most mediocre. The key here (no pun intended) is that almost every har is written in a dow minor scale (except for rare, short-lived possages), one that summors loss and regret, hope and struggle, long buried and fossitived emotions. The most flows undetected through the unconscious like an underground tream emoting the rational handage. In Queme could reduce my six foot, broad-shouldered Uncle George to a quivering mass of operation Italian angst. All via the music combined with lane Seymour's one-note acting that look of pious concern we all wish we got from our mothers. It is to accident, I think, that Charter Hospital is one of the sponsors of the morning rerun. They're appealing to depressives, alco-holics, and drug addicts, presumably out of work, You'know, "Do you feel helpless? Hoperas? Even worthless? I thought depression was my fault until I came to Charter.

We understand. So we've come up with an offer that makes cell phones so easy to get, use and pay for, that you will no longer be able to resist them.

Here's the deal. For a limited time, you can get an OKI 1410 phone (a $122 value) and a $35 Prepaid Airtime card for just $99. OK, let's do the math. Um. $35 plus $122 (five and two are seven and three and two are five and bring down the one) that comes to a whopping $157 value. For a measly $99.

With Prepaid Airtime, weekend rates are always 50% cheaper than weekday rates. There's no annual contract, no monthly bill, no deposit, no credit check, no wires or strings attached, and no wazoo pain. You just buy your time in advance, and when you use it up, you buy more. It's that easy,

Prepaid Airtime cards from GTE Wireless. Easy to get. Easy to use. Easy to pay for. Easy to see why the heck you should get it. Give us a call at GTE Wireless, 1-800-249-GTE6.

Antonio Romero, my brother's best friend, lost his parents on the first day of the heavy rain. In the days following the tragedy, I would come to learn from my brother Claudio the story of Antonio's loss.

On the day of the 6th, when the heavy rains began to fall, I was attending my first writer's conference at the Holiday Inn (now the ITT Sheraton Four Points) in Kearny Mesa near Montgomery Field. All day words of flood damage made the rounds among the attendees. By the evening, as the day's last lecture was about to begin in the hotel's 100-seat theater, we were being informed of street closures in North County due to the rains. Attendees who lived locally were told they would be unable to make it home hat evening and advised to call loved ones and to make room arrangements at the hotel. A list of road closures was given, and some people left immediately to make calls while others discussed alternate routes, deterrained to make it home. Living only a few minutes away in Banker's Hill, I had no problem getting home. Upon entering my apartment I turned on the latenight news for an update of the flood damage and saw my brother's friend, although i did not recognize him at that moment, standing thigh-deep in mud with a shovel digging framically.

From my brother, in the following days, over the phone, I heard bits and pieces of what transpired that early morning of January 6. A few weeks later, I moved to Playas de Tijuana, hoping to find some solitude while I worked on a writing project. The house was just a few blocks from my brother's. There I met Antonio, who was now living with my brother and his family. What follows is their story as told to me by my brother. The name of his friend has been changed.

Neighbors later would say they saw Antonio and his mother fighting to hold onto the mattress, some even hearing her shouts for help.

On lanuary 2, a small amount of rain fell, beginning in mid-morning and continuing until late afternoon. It was nothing out of the ordinary, certainly nothing that hinted at what was to come, and by the following day the sun had broken through and all was well for the next day and a half. Then, on lanuary 5 at about 6:00 p.m., a light rain began to fall. By 1:00 a.m. on the 6th the rain was coming down hard and the downpour would continue for the next 24 hours, and it would rain for all of the next 13 days

However, the residents of Colonia Gabilondo, accustomed to the flooding, had built their homes up on two-and three-foot concrete foundations, and so the annual waters had been nothing more than a nuisance, until now. Over the years the dry riverbed had become a dump-ing ground. Abandoned cars res, appliances, bed springs concrete slabs, and garbage filled the arroyo. When the rains came, the water slowly pushed everything along until the junk became a dam. In the Colonia, after only five hours of rains the water had begun coming out of the man-holes. In the early morning of the Day of the Kings, the dam broke. Cars and worn-out apphances gave way and a six-foot-high wall of water rushed down through the ancient

Antonio moved in and returned to work, But Antonio son found himself involved with court batter. He and other residents of Colonia Gabilondo were having to prove ownership to qualify for emergency funds and they were also suing the city for lack of responsibility in marintaining the draits and in maintaining the drains and seven properly. The legalities took so long and Antonio became so involved, eventu-ally becoming their spokesper-son, that he had to take a leave of absence from the travel agency. The lawsuits took over a year, and once that was done a year, and once that was done he married his fiance, Eva, and they now live in Playas. Soon after the court settle-ments, he began working for the Ministry of Urban Develop-ment, belging poor neighbor-hoods that need sewers, drains,

Five years later I arn again living in Playas and working on a writing project. Sometimes, as I drive around Tijtuna and see the newly paved streets, wide gutters, and drains, even the newly planted trees, I am reminded that it has all come at a price that, for most of us, is unimaginable.

for the few metal bands still for the few metal bands still touring through San Diego. it's a vindication that heavy metal should get a nice long cover story, much of which described the good old days of the late 1980s when metal deminated the poor music and dominated the pop music and local club scene

However, the Reader did heavy-metal music fans some-thing of a disservice by print-ing an article focused on the band Sledd, which is not a metal band in any meaning-ful sense of the term. Like Metallica, Sledd has sold out to the alternative craze, which, tragically, is still in vogue. De-spite what Sledd members may claim. "alternative" music is not "metal." It got its name because it's an alternative to metal, and not a very good one at that. More specifically, alto "glam metal," characterized their fellow travelers More importantly, the arti-cle's heavy emphasis on Nemesis's tales of sex, drugs, and sis's tales of sex, drugs, and general debauchery continues to debase and obscure the in-tellectual and musicological contributions which heavy-metal musicians have made to society. While I recognize that lurid subject matter is the Render's forte, you squandered an excellent opportunity to dispel the myth of metal as the music of scoundrels, rogues, and juvenile delinquents like Beavis & Butt-head. Make no mistake, heavy-metal musi cians have a lot to say about the way the world is, and could be. Much more so than the pompous, politically correct pillars of society such as Tip-per Gore and other hypocrites who get quoted on the evening news. Although much of heavymetal lyrics focus on love and relationships, anyone who is familiar with Rush, Guns 'N peace, justice, individual rights.

God's Desire?

l agree with Duncan Shepherd's intimation that we can agree to disagree. My basic dissatisfaction was — and still is — that Duncan is the most criti-cal critic I have ever encountered. I thought that, first and foremost, a movie critic neces-sarily also be a movie fan, yet the movies he approves of seem so few and far between. seem so few and far between, While I realize this is Duncan's statement on the condition of Hollywood movies today, my feeling is that his dis rate is too high, that actually several de-cent or good movies are receiving zero or one star(s).

Regarding the "Sheep and Goats" feature, or more specifically, the abundance of read-ship got the short end of the stick in Abe's review, here are points to ponder.

Religion, by definition, is a contradictory and conflictfilled system at best. Consider the fact that millions of people have been crucified, burned, hung, butchered, shot, or otherwise slaughtered in the name of religion over the past 2000 years. Hardly God's intention.

years. Hardly God's intention.
Also consider that for any person who thinks that he or she has found the one true religion, there are literally billions of other persons who absolutely disagree. Any "truth," facts "practiced by one religion are summarily refuted by the next religion's "truth" or "facts." Prejudice! Obviously. God's desire! Highly doubtfal! Finally, consider that science — most notably 20th-century science — has, as a matter of course and by-prod-uct, systematically disproved many heretofore "facts" found in the Bible. If you do not choose to believe this, you are simply not paving attention to the wisdom science can afford you. Know that the Bible is teacher, not history book, and

Shepherd needs more hugs and affection or just needs to learn to use his God-given learn to use his God-given sense with more proficiency. His recent review of God Will Hunting (Movic Guide) preflects some prenty innocent ignorance as to the culture of our youth of South Boaton and the relationship between the local working-class kids, who socially inter-weave with students of Mary, Harvard, and so on. The film explicitly reflected that relationship tionship with an unmo clarity. Those of us who gre up in Boston know well that the film depicts one of many of these relationships between locals and the imported stu-dents. Remember that Boston's major industry is the producunderstand the difference. I recall Dun-can missed the feeling of the film Sling Blade awhile back, now he misses the feeling of Good Will Hunting — both oc-ceptional films. Duncan, I hope you can clarify and better facilitate your senses to go be-yound bigotry and prejudice.

I Did Not Think

I felt compelled to write in support of Duncan Shepherd's comments regarding Titanic. Good Will Hunting, and Portrait of a Lady. I am so di couraged by the number of people who have told me that Good Wil! Hunting was the best movie of 1997. In my judgment, that move had two large, annoying problems: (1) I could summon up nothing but feelings of antagonism toward the protagonist the was so cruel and self-destructive — I really wanted to see him get a good smite in the second half of the film).

But since their repetitive, whether from the 16th Century or the 20th, consists chiefly of folksy, universentius songs and dances, they or-dinarily confine their instruments to relatively simple types of playing. At St. James, most of the time we heard the late—that great, expressive, complex instrument of Beruissance and Barroque may. complex uncrument on resummance area barrager music — used as a strummed accompaniment. As for the viola da gambo, which was the medium for some of the most dazzling and most profound music of the 17th Century, the Baltimore Con sort relegated it too to a humble role. The displays of breathtaking virtuosity these instruments are capable of were scarcely to be heard, although no

The music on the St. James pro-gram ("Early and Traditional Music in the British Siels and North America") was simple in struc-ture, straightforward, and devoid of any compositional complexity, but the performances were serious, meticulous, and refined, as though the musicians were playing Dowland, or Mon-

The Baltimore Consort's singer is Custer
LaRue. The soprano has a great name, comparable to Reno Sweeney, or Blanche Dubois, or Olivia de Havilland. Her voice and singing style are more controversial. This is a very light voice, with nothcontroversal. This a very light soice, with noth-ing but head resonance, pretty in an innocent, childish way, monochromatically sweet — alto-gether in the tradition of a certain kind of pure-wosced female folk singer. There is never a hint of depth or roughness or passion in it, and in fact these qualities seem to be excluded on numbers.

Of course, you may like that type of voice, or you may not. But such a voice does tend to make you may not. But such a voice does tend to make everyfising sound addie, in a very neutron range of musical and human experience. Custer LaRus-does attempt a bit of stereotyped expressiveness in her vocal delivery. It locus is exclusively the final note of a phrase, and the means of expres-sion consists of either an aburge coroff so that the rote is briefly and ble, or an intentional loss and sinking of pitch, as though the word were being spoken rather than sung. This mannerism give fam of Ronn McFarlane (among whom I count myself) a brief chance to hear him do his stuff. The vehicle however, was not some of the real Renaissance lute music he is so good at, but a performance of three pieces composed by himself in various Renaissance styles. There was a galliard, an al-main, and a gigue, with tunes, rhythms, harmonies, and textures with a certain lack of cogency, direction, and shapeliness that revealed the composer as alien to the basic thought pat-terns of Renaissance music, however well acquainted he might be with its outer forms. This was pastiche - and maybe you like that sort of thing. Or maybe you

"Alternative medicine is gaining more recognition." Rever tells me. "The whole alternative therapy movement— sometimes music therapy is classified under that. With CAT scans, and MRIs, and some of the unique brain studies... we're able see what kind of responses people have to music through those kinds of tests. We're validating what we've known intuitively. Science is really important in terms of val-idating what we do."

Avigal moves to the theme Avigal moves to the theme of songs for the season, asking the group what season it is. A woman to the right of Mrs. Reagan answers her directly. "Good lady, I couldn't even tell you." Others in her area tell you." Others in her area chuckle in agreement. Most of those who sat stone-faced and alone before the session began are now animated and engaged. Often what is affected most in Alzheimer's patients is the memory of the here and now, making it difficult to establish relationships with a common ground for the session of the session of the session of the session of the session has complained about a headache.

One of the seniors has com-plained about a headache. "Does anyone else have a headache?" asks Avigal. She slows down the pace, intro-ducing the next song. "It's a quiet song, 'cause I was afraid we were getting too rowdy. Nothing like music to get you wound up, but then you have to be able to unwind too."

One woman adds, "It makes you feel good, even your heart, oh yes."
"I think that it's important to have a balance, you have to have everything in moderation." One woman starts in with remembrances of her Victrola.

Katy declares. "I've been on this Katy declares, "I've been on this earth a long time, and we couldn't live without music."
"I saw a sign," says Avigal, "that says life without music would be a mistake."
"Yeah, and I've got a shirt like that," says one man.

As much as it is to stimu late mental capacities, Avigal's job also entails getting the peo-ple into a state of motion. She remains animated, using rhythm and body language. Avigal reiterates that music therapy is not just about lis therapy is not just about list-tening, but about movement, coaxing the seniors to get up and dance. She mivets a woman named Tina to dance, whom Avigal proclaims to be the best ceeds to tell. Avigal explains, "The part of the brain that is in charge of music remains intact long after everything else is gone. I don't know exactly why. Music is the right brain....I once took a class where you make a timeline of your life, mark down signifi-

the premiere of Fargo, despite the prizes collected for it, despite the in-creased load on their personal bandwagon, the Coens remain squarely in the corner of the loser and the mislit, very much catty-corner from the fat cat and the mainstreamer.

The organizational motif for The Big Lebowsk, the central image, the thematic hub, where Fargo had the "deal" and Hudsuckerhad the "circle" and Barton Fink had the "head," is, crudely enough, "balls," Bowling balls obviously, but also, not so literally on display, another, weightier kind: nads, nuts, guts, brass, belicosity, bravery, manliness. ("Manfully," you'll remanness. \ Mannas, \ voi if remember, I said that they have risen to the challenge — the Coens, alias, for the time being, the Cojones.) The two kinds of balls come closest to a perfect overlap, a meriess as it were, in the suggestive shot of a pair of bowlets polishing their balls, side by side in an upright stance, their legs spread wide, each with his individual ball, two balls altogether, each sheathed in its indi-vidual sack, suspended at about pelvis level. It makes a memorable image. The balls motif will help to account for the far from arbitrary backdrop of Desert Storm, and the spillover of its saber-ratting rhetoric to the little mat-ter of the peed-on rug ("A line in the sand," "This aggression will not stand, man"), a matter that the laid-back Dude might have let drop had he not been egged on by his gun-toting, camouflage-vested, Vietnam-vet bowling buddy, Walter. (And nowhere in film history have we encountered such a harshly and hilariously candid por-trait of the veteran who is forever stuck in the foxholes of his past.) The natural and necessary underside of this motif is the threat and fear of emasscenes, one descending into a night-mare. (Have the Coens maybe gotten a little carried away with themselves bere? Yeah. Maybe. A little. La Jova culation: the trained marmot let loose in the bathrub in attack mode, the cho-

in the buthub in attack mode the chorus girks with gant sciences in the Myb, Berkidey-esque fantasy sequence, the excered tee and severed ear as classic castration symbols.

There are of course the proverbial two sides to all kinds of things, an upside and a downside, a light and a classified, and the kind of hall at the heart of the movie traditionally comes in two did even in bowling you get two bulls per farme), and accordingly the movie to is the nom-de-porn of the kidnapped bimbo, and La Jolla is invoked is the clifftop eulogy for a cremated surfer. "This is a very complicated case," the Dude observes at one point, "a lot of ins, a lot of outs, a lot of what-haveyous," and almost immediately the even in bowling von get two balls per frame), and accordingly the movie is riddled with intriguing couplings and doubling. Two Lebowskis, for a start, an aggressive "achiever" and a lary loser, a big one and a little one (And even farther back than the start, back before the birth of this world: two Coens), It is a "Chinaman" who peed case leads him to the vicinity of an In N-Out burger joint. I could go on, but I only wanted to provide a shove. The main point to be taken from all the combinations, the oppositions, the repetitions is simply the this and/or that of them. One thing and/or an-other. Ins and outs. Ups and downs. Highs and lows. Yin and yang. Hawk on one Lebowski's rug, and it was an-other "Chinaman" who put the other one permanently in a wheelchair. To complement the man in the wheeland dove lekyll and Hyde. Take the good with the bad. Win some, less some. Or in the specialized terminol-ogy of the Dude "Strikes and gutters." The cowboy-with-no-name has his chair, there is another man in an iron cats you." ("Is that some Eastern thing?" wonders the Dude. "Far from it," is the answer.) The point, to put it more prosaically, is the balanced, seesawing, cyclical, philosophical slant on life. That's what really matters in the movie; not the money that Burny Lebowski, a/k/a La Joya, owes to Jack Treehorn, and what's going to be done The storvline — the "case" — keeps running into new people in new walks of life, bowling types, philanthropic types, pornographic types, artsy types, cop types, thug types, teen types. And what matters about that apart from the intrinsic entertainment value (special nod to John Turturro value (special ned to John Turturro as errotch-grabbing, harner-wearing, makebooker by the name of Jesto-gitished in script on the breast pocket of his custom-tailored jumpsuits— who has his own dark and sharne-faced side, is the corritinal expanding and deepening of our view of humanity. The Goen brothers in The Big Lebooks are beginned in the properties of the pro-

The Coen brothers in The Big Lebowski are having fun with, among other things, complexity per sc. (But in place of "among other things," I might better have said something, if "embracing all other things," or "blan-keting all other things," is no with the very idea of complexity. Eur with the connecte and mountainous evidence of complexity. One of the riche's sources. complexity. One of the richest source of fun, played off in the sharpest con trast to complexity, is the glorious spectrum of stupidity on exhibit, the dope-addled but gropingly rational Dude, the big lug who is always abso-lutely sure he is right in spite of the fact that he has never been right yet (John Goodman, the 'Nam man); the woolgatherer who falls behind in the slowest of conversations (Steve Buscemi): the several teams of hired "muscle" (all brawn, no brains), one team of which are self-styled Nithilists, the sympho bimbo; the adolescent joyrider who afterwards forgets his corrected homework ("Use a dictio-nary," "Spelling") in the abandoned car. It would have been a more obvious and conventional choice to analyze and criticize the culture of ballsines and criticize the culture of ballsiness through the agent of a Sherlock Holmes, or, closer to home, a Philip Marlowe, a Lew Archer, a bannercarrier of brainness, perception, sen-sitivity. But ballsiness and stupidity so often in life go hand in glove, and white knights come along so rarely. The Coens, as always, resist the senti-The Coers, as always, resist the senti-mental option of giving us Someone To Identify With. At least, not closely, (Much as we may have loved and ad-mired Marge Gunderson, who among us would warm to trade place; with her? And what neithele would want barton Fink to be stating the case for serious art?) The pleu, admittedly, is sufficiently complicated to make any serious art? The piot, admittedy, is sufficiently complicated to make any of us feel a bit sluggish in the head, a bit drugged, a bit overwhelmed, a bit Dudish. It's all, like life in general, a bit much to take in. It, like life again. seems somehow to transcend comseems somehow to transcend com-prehension. And yet in looking back on it, after one sitting at any rate, it ap-pears to hold together as far as it goes. The trick of the thing is that it doesn't go, in a linear direction, as far as we would expect a plot to go if we had a Sherlock Holmes, a Lew Archer, to sort it out for us. Whereas in a vertical direction, with complication piled upon complication, "in" piled upon "out," it goes a good deal farther than we're accustomed to.

The complexity is no illusion. It is right there in front of us in frighten-ing and multiplying detail. It brutally illuminates the stupidity. And at the same time it forms the philosophical foundation for a broad and accepting, if aloof and frosty, view of humankind. We're all in the same, or a similar, boat; and we're all taking on water bost; and we're all taking on water faster than we can scoop it out. (No wonder that some opt for rimblion.) Only the true wirtunos can have simulataneous and equal access to gride will left the one spoil the other. The Coens — who better? who clee! — are able to make wonderful sport of deadbeats and boncheads from the high ground of diligence and sugernate. They never play "down" to the table to the company to the company to the state of the company of the company of the company. They never play "down" to the table company of the company o flavorful dialogue (always in service to the characters the ones in The Big Lebowsh happen to be foul-mouthed, but the ones in the Thirties screwball-comedy pastiche. The Hudsucker Praxy, spoke in soap hubbles, dense atmosphere, clever and convoluted plotting, rich and well-developed thermes, abundant allusions, 'in' sokes, grace notes, and red herrings, each element teamed with the others in common purpose. The munificence of the Goens is, in its own way, a part of, a reflection of, a depiction of, the overwhelmingness of the Big Picture

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

harles Hatfield would not be welcome in San Diego this winter. Here mixing Icloud-seeding chemicals for inducing rain, "the Rainmaker," as he was called, thought he should get paid for the heavy precipitation that caused the flood of 1916.

For some reason, the San Diego City Council sought out Hatfield in December 1915 (SD Historical Society personnel say preceding years weren't marked by drought). By the end of January 1916, storms had devastated Southern California. Bridges crumbled, train tracks washed out. The Lower Otay Lake dam collapsed on January 27-28 and 20 people died. Hatfield left town quickly. He came back a week later to collect what he thought he was owed -$10,000 (no contract was ever prepared or signed). The City denied him, so he sued. The case lingered for more than 20 years before being dismissed. Hatfield died in 1958.

Home Looking Glamorous

Kid Stuff

I used to wear makeup. I remember the first time my mother let me wear cycliner and mascara to a high school dance. I was 15. Standing at the bathroom sink, I leaned in toward the mirror and tried to trace a flawless black line around my eyes, the line I'd seen on all the models in Seventeen seen on all the models in Seventeen and Glamour. My hands shook. My line wavered. I smeared Vaseline over the blotchy, black mess, wiped it off, and tried again. By the time I left for the dance, my black-rimmed eyes were swollen and bloodshot. I looked like I d been crying for a week.

In my 20s. I wore makeup every day. I could put it on without thinking — eye shadow, eyeliner, mascara, blush, fity pencil, lipstick. Each morning I stopped and gazed at my public face, impassive, appraising, before hundring loss owoder over the before brushing loose powder over the before ortisting soose poware over the whole charack with a big puff's brush. After lunch. I pulled lipstick from my purse and smoothed on a new coat. The click of a compact and a few pats of pressed powder on my nose and checkbones meant! was ready to face

I left lack to do the bath-andbedtime routine and I found myself at a Mary Kay Cosmetics party. Mary Kay representatives sell makeup and skin-care products in people's homes the way Tupperware alespeople do. Someone the sales rep knows — the hostess — invites a few friends over for a free facial and makeup demonstration. The sales rep gives everyone samples of the products, lets you use them, then hits you with a sales pitch at the end. The hostess gets some free products. Everyone goes home looking

While we waited for the masks to While we waited for the masks to dry, the sales rep passed out a series of the products designed to give us all "satin harshs." Each product had to be nubbed in. Some had to be washed off.

The whole process took five minutes. While we all worked product number three into our dry, cracked fingers, one of the moms envisioned her children wailing outside the bathroom door.
"Wait a minute, sweetie. Mommy's hands are only on Step Number Three.

After the mask came rejuvenating fluid, then moisturizer, then foun dation and powder. The sales rep showed us how to apply eye shadow, eyeliner, mascara, blush, and lipstick. When we'd all finished, we looked around the table. Everyone looked like a picture of herself, face smooth and even-toned, flaws erased. I left without buying anything.

When I got home, the house was quiet. I took my new face upstairs to show lack. He lay on our bed reading a book. As I walked into the room, the comforter beside Jack giggled. Rebecca popped out from under the blue damask, hair tangled across her face. "We have one girl who can't go to sleep," Jack told me. Then he and Rebecca gaped.

'Mommy, what did you do to your face?" Rebecca asked.

"It's just makeup," I said. "It'll week off

> I used to wear makeup. I remember the first time my mother let me wear eyeliner and mascara to a high school dance. I was 15. Standing at the bathroom sink, I leaned in toward the mirror and tried to trace a flawless black line around my eyes, the line I'd seen on all the models in Sevente seen on all the models in Seventeen and Gilamour. My hands shook, My line wavered. I smeared Vaseline over the blotchy, black mess, wiped it off, and tried again. By the time I left for the dance, my black-rimmed eyes were swollen and bloodshot. I looked like I them, creim for a well.

like I'd been crying for a week. In my 20s, I wore makeup every day. I could put it on without thinking — eye shadow, eyeliner, mascara, blush, lip pencil, lipstick. Each morning I stopped and gazed at my public face, impassive, appraising. before brushing loose powder over the before brushing loose powder over the whole charade with a big, puffy brush. After lunch, I pulled lipstick from my purse and smoothed on a new coat. The cick of a compact and a few pats of pressed powder on my nose and cheekbones meant I was ready to face

Now that I stay home with my glamorous. three children, my beauty routine isn't what it used to be. Every morning, I wash my face in the shower with whatever soap I happen to be using on the rest of me. After my shower, I rub a little Oil of Olay into my cheeks. While Rebecca and Angela holler from downstairs about a lost toy and baby Lucy clings to my damp legs, I dab on the tiniest bits of eyeliner and mascara.

good. About once a week, Lucy pulls the photo albums off the shelf in Jack's and my bedroom. Sitting with her legs stretched out in a V, she flips through the pages. Every time she comes to our wedding album she points to the pictures of Jack and says, "Daddy...Daddy...Daddy." When I point to the smiling woman standing beside Jack and say, "And that's Mommy," Lucy just says, "Uh."

So I had to laugh tonight when I left Jack to do the bath-and-bedtime routine and I found myself at a Mary Kay Cosmetics party. Mary Kay representatives sell makeup and skin-care products in people's homes the way Tupperware
