Abe Opincar's "City Lights" piece, "Blood on the Mall" (March 12), was a great article. I used to work at Plaza Bonita in the security department, and I know Mr. Robert Sanchez. the mall manager, personally. There's a lot more that goes on than what reads here even. I can enlighten him even more It was a great article. I was re-ally enthused to read it. Lance Ruiz

Butterfly's Emotional Impact

For once I have to disagree with Jonathan Saville's usually perceptive reviews I have seen a half dozen Butterflys at San a half dozen Butterflys at San Diego Opera and others else-where (Classical Music Re-view, March 12). Never have I experienced one with the dra-matic and emotional impact of SDO's current production. True, it was well sung, but so were many others. This pro-duction's effectiveness is diduction's effectiveness is di-rectly due to stripping away the paper-umbrella postcard look of most productions in favor of a new focus. A Butter-fly that portrays Pinkerton and Sharpiess as isolated figures in a foreign land doesn't say much. A Butterfly that shows Cio-Cio San as isolated in the midst of her own culture and midst of her own culture and people is a body blow. Yes, people is a body blow. Yes, that rans counter to the li-bretto, but it is ruer to Be-iasco's play. It is also true to the music, witness the death/ suicide theme when Butterly renounces her religion. Any production that lets one expe-rience a war horse anew is worth seeing. I wish I had tickets to see it again. Dan Kremer

Last November, Channel 39 reported that these FEMA violations are among the three worst in the western region, which in-cludes hundreds of cities.

While FEMA is requiring that the city correct these vi-olations, the February 1 dead-line for a remedial plan was

Over the last ten years one California State University cam-pus has been built. During the same period of time. 20 prisons opened. Higher education in Cal-ifornia lost 8000 jobs over the last ten years. During that time, 26,000 jobs were udded to state correction departments. The Cal-ifornia state budget has grown at an average of 7 percent a year for the last decade. At the same time the California Department of Corrections operating budget ha increased 14 percent a year. In 1985 there were 7570 prison guards working in California. By 1990 there were 14,249 employed prison guards. Four years later, that number was 25,547.

Fifteen years ago there were about 35,000 immates in California prisons. Today, there are close to 135,000 in 31 prisons. It is estimated by the year 2006, due to

Larry's best gal

Q: How did your public involvement in the Gravegate scandal begin!
A: I had been reading not true, not true. I guess that Ar-ianna Huffington saw something there and continued to probe. She called me at the end of Novem-ber and asked me some things and I told her I could only give her my opinion. I faxed her my opinion, as a matter of fact.

Q: What was your opinion?
A: I was appalled that he was going to be buried at Arlington because of my association with the Navy. Military wife for 24 years. Most of any friends were Navy wives who had really, really gone with who had really, really gine through her bide inten. As a nat-ter of fact, one of thro who had her husband deskared dead after so trany years, and then about three or facy years, and then about three or facy years, and then about his remains so she had to go through it again. He was burned at Adrington and he darm well deserved to be buried at Arting-ton. That, to me, has abeys been savend ground.

At Yes, So when I heard this, I was very upon by it, So I gave Arianns my opinion. And then that week I got a call from the Subcommittee on Overrights and Inwestigations. When they called asking things, you don't ie. I had no reason to lie what-soever, so I told then what I new. They started investigating early and came up with all listends of things, I also said them that when the gentlemen came to investigate the I. I always to investigate the II. is called the Mercy Seat and is a fixture of every Salvation Army church in the world.

People don't sit on the Mercy Seat but kneel in front of it to pray when the altar call is given at the end of the service. The built in whalf for the beer of the service. shelf for the box of Kleenex is an interest-ing detail because it suggests the car-do practicality the Salva-tion Army has adopted toward its mission. Since it was started 130 years ago in London, in Whitechapel, the Army has make it addicts, prostitutes, criminals, and all other churches found too difficult, too dirty, or too depressing to shelf for the box of too depressing to bother with. Since such people tend to have experienced consid-erable pain in their lives, they often cry when they reach the Mercy Seat. The handy box of Kleenex is a pragmatic gesture in a church where people accomplish their awe-Excellent.....  * some journey toward God.

When I asked 25-year-oid Lieutenant Emily Miller, a senior pastor at the church, why her sermon last Sunday was positive and not condemnatory, she said. 'In the Army we don't tend to emphasize punishment or damnation. The people we work with, people on the street, already know they redomned. In their lives they are damned. We don't need to remind them of it. They know the conditions of their lives. We conknow the conditions of their tives. We con-centrate on what God has to offer them, what Jesus has to offer them, the Gospel. We offer hope."

Born and raised in the Salvation Army

by parents who were pastors all over North em California and Hawaii, Miller was ordained at the Army's Rancho Palon Verdes semi-nary—what they call their 'training college.' Miller embodies the organization's frankness and transparency. She is pretty, open, self-contident, chertil, sweet, and matter-of-fact about changes in her church. "Traditionally, we didn't baptize. But we leelieve in baptism. In the past, though, our members often work the uniform as their outward sign of salvasive. But at Isada, we believe in baptism. and so nows he of the delivery in baptism, and so nows he of don't haptite. The uniform itself is an issue-'Vounger people question its user. There are many sides to the debate. The uniform is self-known and it's the way most people well-known and it's the way most people. well-known and it's the way most people recognize us on the street.

Those things may or may not change.

But what won't ever change is our commitment to helping people in need. We believe it's biblical, and it's something we strees and encourage all the members of our church to be involved in."

members of our church to be involved in." Salvation Army liturgy is simple. The most unique thing about it is its empha-sis on music. William Bopth, the Army's founder, preached in Whitechapel's pubs where musicians and singing were common attractions.

"Why does the

"Why does the devil," Booth asked himself. "have to have all the good music?" He introduced brass hands and rousing melodies to Salvation Army worship, Nowadays the 19th-century hymns have melodies with a catchy, understated, bluesy have and the 80 are no understated, bluesy hook, and the 50 or so people at last Sunday's service had a great time singing them.

One woman in particular seemed to enjoy the hymnes. She was in her late 60.

was in her late 60s somewhat stooped, wore a weathered mink stole around her narrow shoulders, and at her neck, through the knot of the scarf she'd wound over her head, she'd somehow thrust a blue, long-stemmed carnation.

Muttering under her breath, she'd wandered in a little late for the service. She knelt at in a mitte tate for the service. She knell at her pew and paved with great concentra-tion. When she later stood to sing, she stood straight, squared her shoulders, and her voice was clear and strong. After the service, after I had finished speaking with Miller, this woman came up and took Miller by the hand.

"You know," she said, "I was just read-ing my Bible and praying that God would help me with my eyesight. And, you know what? I actually think it's gotten better. I'we looked all over downtown for a church. I like it here very much. I think I've finally found a spiritual home."

"So, according to your account, it is right to ill treat a man who does no wrong?" No, no, Socrates, that can't be right, 'protests Polemarchus. Indeed not, is Socrates' reply. We often believe things without having logical reasons for doing so: if we examined our beliefs more closely, we might end up chang-ing our minds. It has been the task of Socrates and philosophers ever since to clear up our errors in thinking. Logic is that branch of philosophy that thinks about thinking itself and studies the structure and principles of sound argument, asking such things as: What is it for an argument to ably? Served in the army of Athens and distinguished tenself on the buttle-field. Great teacher to other Creek philosophers. Accused of corrupting the youth of Athens, he was Kapris-

the author of two books on the subject, The Prior Analytics and The Posterior Analytics. In these, he defined the basic building block of logic, the syllogism. In every syllogism, we find three logically connected parts: a major premise, a minor premise, and a conclusion. For example:

1. All dogs are vertebrates (major premise)

All vertebrates are animals (minor prensisc)
 All dogs are animals (conclusion)

1. All men are mor-(minor premise) 3. Socrates is mor-

Therefore, written up in a classic Aristotelian Therefore, written up in a classic Artistockian, the above augment about Socrates ends up as: TA is predicated of every B, and B of every C. This is not telling us anything in particular about it is not telling us anything in particular about the structure behind our conclusion. Since Artistotic, a number of philosophers have defined laws of logical argument. For instance, in the 14th Century, the Englishman William of Ochham (1228–1349) wrote Commentary on the Sentences.

wrote Commentary on the Sentences, a discussion of Aristotle's logical writ-a discussion of Aristotle's logical writings, from which philosophers have derived what is known as "the law of Ockham's razor."

This is a principle of ontological concome, usually formulated as "Entities are not to be multiplied beyond excessity" (Entin non sunt multiplicands practer necessiterem). In plain English, this means that the reasons behind an argument should never he multiplied beyond strict necessity. It means looking for reasons most immediately explaining an event, immediately explaining an event, rather than citing all the possible rea-sons why such an event might take place. Let's say I eat a peach. A syl-logistic account of this process might from simple assertions to more complex ones. Aristotle's other great contribution to legic was to replace words with single letters in certain kinds of philasophical arguments. Rather than using particular terms — man, dog, olive — in Aristotle's discussions, we find letters. So, instead of wixing the sentence "Every dog has four feet," we find quasi-sentence such as "Every A is B.".

If more wound neithers, but the mont of fose:

It may sound abstract, but the point of logic is to get away from the particular. As Bertrand Russell pointed out, logic is not about the way people gather information, it is about how log-

Though this may generally be true, it may not be the only or the immediate reason why I ate a peach at a particular point, I might have been forced to at gunpoint by a perverse kidnapper. Not all reasons seg give for our actions actually explain them. To rationalize an action logically is to explain in thy giving an agent's soom and immediate reason for performing it, not simply any reason why one might per-form such an action.

Logicians have tradition-ally been keen to highlight pop-ular errors of argument and have drawn up terms to define them. To take a small selec-tion besiens small selection, logicians speak of amphi-boles, by which they mean sen-tences whose meaning is ambiguous.

The best example was the Ancient Greek Oracle at Del-

In desperation at your interin desperation at your inter-locutor's depticism, you might argue: "Well, there's no evi-dence to say ghosts don't exist —so maybe they do." Fortunately for people who don't believe in ghosts, logi-cians point out a key law of rational argument: that you cannot say that something is true merely because there is no evidence to disprove it. In order to show that something is true, it is not enough to say ematical formula. Modern philosophers are that there is no contrary ev dence: it is also necessary to concerned not so much with

But this wasn't simple gender dysphoria. Six months earlier, the police had taken her in hand-cuffs out of an incest-survivors' group meeting because, she said, she switched personalities and heaven. Vertical the serious vertical program over the program of the program became Kristin, the seven-year-old who killed Joanne's baby dur-ing a satanic-ritual sacrifice. At the meeting, Kristin viciously stabbed a doll with a pencil. But this alleged sacrifice was years ago, and Joanne was Mark then. How could he have had a baby? And why did he need testosterone supplements in his teens if he was a boy?

I didn't pursue this at the time of the doll-stabbing incident because we had so much work to do just to get her through each day. But when I examined her six mouths later, it was clear that she had always been a boy. I chose not to confront her with this. My explanation was that the memory of the satanic-ritual sac-rifice was false, as such memories from people suffering severe mental illness often can be. She was a he, had always been a he,

As the early morning unfolds I remain both curious and apprehensive, not having yet discerned my neighbor's strategy. Finally, I see Jesse knocking on her porch and the two of them together venturing out to her tree. He appears calm, receptive to what she has to say; she, determined, though absent last night's fury. She builds her case with a multiplicity of gestures, and several times pushes vigorrusly on the tree. "It's loose," she seems to indicate, "and it wasn't like that before -I know, because I'm the one that planted it." He listens and nods, is patient.

After a time, and several rows probe on the tree she goes inside to make a plone call. He takes the opportunity to tak with several of his mean, and when she returns, they will again. Froulty, they pure She inside. If the Lish crew. The call tags he beam, if not include, respectful.

Later, she shows me a scape on the size of the tree. A piece of any piece to the size of the tree. A piece of any piece to the size of the tree. A piece or disquired not have decided. Whatever it was, the operation probably didn't whatever it was a few operations to be a size of the tree of the size to her—may have suffixed a broke, nor claumaged coven, meaning the plane of connection hetween trunk and roothall. At three o'clock this afternoon, she says — "The endiest I could get off work" — Jesse will have the tree day, up so they can examine it. Effectives is damagned or the roothall broken. Orit will replace the tree. If not, they'll reptant it. In sand.

An exception to this face plan appears to involve Linda's house. Due probably to a desire on lesse's part to have her sever located and replaced by the time they meet again this afternoon, a pair of men begin working in front of her house as soon as she leaves for work this meeting.

are also in hidning. All for want of some Ss. Eventually, though, the laterals are found. Linda's turns out to be just beyond her water bys, more than six feet from the palm. Once found, their follows the digging up of the old line and the laving of the new, the typing into the new main, and the refilling of the trench—the routine com-plicated somewhat in I and a vase by the need to work around her water line and by the necessary removal of the parkway grass between palm and

There is no doubt that the men who remove.

I would be mortified if there I would be mortified if there were untoward conzents in the pipe when they went to break it open — and particularly if I were standing there watching.

At a quarter to eight, two labores appear before my house and begin removing the sidewalk over the lateral. The old concrete is so weak that they succeed in breaking it out with nothing more than a manual nothing more than a manual pry bar. I've seen this happen deswhere in the neighborhood, and indeed, it seems the dirt in Barlingarie — which often yields only to a jackhammer — is tougher than its pink sidewalks.

Also stronger — and con-siderably so — is the many-lay-ered road. In a replay of last week's scenario at Linda's, the backhoe that arrives to begin stripping the pavement from between Joaquin's sawcuts is soon thwarted. As before, the backhoe's failure prompts a call for the hydrohazmer. But now the old and aging hydroham-from the exposed passage through our sidewalk, as it curls and retracts the bucket — as it yanks out our water line, a great dangling length of copper tubing flopping asslovardly from a tooth on the bucket. This to the accompaniment of a great spray of water and an immediate flood. Normally, the line would enter the box from the street, pass through the meter, exit out the other end of the box, and continue on in roughly the same direction. So who would have expected my water live to instead make an immediate right turn and cross directly over the top

One of the men shuts off the flow of water, leaving me for the moment without water or sever. And for the next hour, while the backhoe and laborers while the backhoe and laborers resume their work. Don Gin-grich gathers tools and materi-als and sets about fixing our water line. He does this using flexible copper rubing (which eliminates the need for soldered, jointed turns) and what he calls compression couplings — brass devices that screw together after first slipping over the joining pipe ends in such a manner that the ends are grasped and sealed

In Lara's opinion, however, the prelined bases—which are more expensive—might last that long, but a manhele with an attaching a strip of thick white viril to the inside of the spacer ring that will sit at the top of the concrete stack. He does this with what amounts to a $1,000, indus-trial-strength hair dryer, fusing the spacer's plastic liner and the vinyl strip while at the same time iong, but a mannete with an epoxy-covered base, like the one he is now building with Sen-teno, will have to be rehabbed positioning the strip so as to overlap with the piece below when the spacer is set in place. Later, when the manhole has been stacked and the surrounding earth and street restored. Lara will return and place similar will return and piace similar vinyl strips over every interior joint; the edges of these wide strips will then be covered with thinner strips, so that every joint is doubly sealed. forming first a task at the first square around the block, ther repeating the same task at each accessive square until finally ending at my house, from whence they will return to start a new task — the concrete growing harder all the while.

Among the three men on the pour, one is Joaquin, who car-lier made the sawcuts that freed the old sections of sidewalk. On the old sections of sidewalk. On the chute is Miguel Pılar, who as both truck driver and lab And third is Pedro Silva. Pedro has been finishing concrete for many years, though this is his first job with Ortiz. He is lean and

When all are ready, Jesse when an are ready, jesse dons his gloves and begins back-ing the truck into position, he walking behind the truck, steady-ing the chute with one hand, and keeping eve contact with the driver in the side mirror. He backs the truck along one side of the street and over steel-plated laterals, and when he reaches his starting point he raises a clenched fist, signalling the driver to stop. Glancing in the mirror to verify that he still has eye con-tact, he twirls his forelinger. The driver reverses the direction of the truck's slowly spinning drum; its internal spiral fins begin catch-ing mixed concrete and push-ing it uphill; concrete begins to fall out the back; the funnel catches it; the chute carries it, sliding like a mass of gray por-ridge — this proceeded by the tumbling of a few loose peb-bles — and in moments the mud spills to the ground. The

the work and the truck, and so, smoothly, Jesse begins arcing his chute back and forth over the area to be filled. Occasioncrete down the chute where a little extra is needed. And when he's poured enough, he tips his finger and motions the driver to move forward a few feet.

"They are," says John, "so comfortable," And there is to their work a rhythm. And a song, For there rises an aural soup whose ele-ments I suddenly remember well, and at the remember of which I am surprised. Ever pre-sent are the hum and rumble of the diesel and the white of the turning drum, concrete sloshing in gued. Perodically, the air brakes release and the truck lurches forward: shih-knaRRONnimg, they go, Shih-knaRRONnimg. The showellers scrape, chop, and jostle, their blades slicing in and out of the wet missure. The tumper tumps. One gath-ers a hose and nozzle and begins ers a hore and nozzle and begins wetting the next section to be capped. Two grab hard fauts and begin smoothing the tamped concrete, leaving in their wake a flowing swirl of rough whorls and half moons they make no effort to remove these patterns, for this is a road and possibly to be repared when all is done.

Samir has been gone for several days now He is due back today however, and in honor of his return Jesse has a crew begin preparing for the test that will demonstrate the integrity of their pipe — and after which Ortiz can send the city a bill.

The test has been a subject of much recent conversation test, the mandrel test, and the one knows exactly how to spell "mandrel" or where the Wayne ball got its name.

Mandrel, I am assured by Allen Thomas. Executive Direc-tor of the National Association of Sewer Service Companie (NASSCO), is not spelled like the homophonically named blue-faced primate. Nor is there a dou-ble l on the end as I am told by a sales representative for a local pipe supply company. (The dic-tionary is not much help in the matter, for I can find none that describe a device like that to be put to use in our sewer.) The objects about which I am asking, says Thomas, are properly called test mandrels and are com-monly used in the drilling of straightness of long lengths of pipe and for which purpose they are available in a variety of sizes

Ortiz's mandrel is about a foot and a half long; it looks like a heavy-duty cylindrical steel cage, with a spindle through the center and cone-shaped ends fitcenter and cone-shaped ends fit-ted with rings to which a rope can be tied. The mandred's crit-ical dimension, however, is its diameter: a fraction under eight inches. The internal diameter of the new sewer main is eight inches and if the mandrel can be passed through the pipe from manhole to manhole it means the intervening section of pipe is free of deformations. "It's a simple test," says Samir. "If the mandrel gets

But there's a tone in his voice that inspires less than complete confidence, and an ensuing series of phone calls leads me higher and higher up the sup-ply chain until I finally find myself on the phone with an executive of the Sidu Company, in Los Alamitos, California. Sidu is the maker and seller of Wayne balls:

the company's name, says the executive, is an amalgam of the words Sidney and Duke.
Sidney Preen, says my informant, was the inventor of the Wayne ball, which is a brand name for what is generically called a cleaning ball. Preen worked for Later, Lask Samir if he has ever seen a test fail. No, he says, never 'Although I've heard about it.' And later still, in another part of Burlingame, the test would fail the mandrel would become stock and have to be pulled out back-ward. There, the crew would have to recepen the trench and dig down to the newly laid sewer where they would find the pipe compressed and made oblong from too much compaction Put today, on the street where I live, the pipe has passed the test. The city will buy it.

The principal area to be capped is the square in the roat below which the space was dug for the new manhole. Originally eight feet on a side, the square has been nicked and dinged to the point of irregularity and forms now a great, jagged-edged basin. Within this basin the top of the manhole sits like an island pro-truding from an ocean of dirt. This exposed tip consists of three layered elements: the apex of the ered elements: the apex of the concrete cone perched atop the manhole's subterranean stack, the concrete spacer ring, and the cast-iron lid and supporting frame — the only parts that will

Christian Scientists

Worship God In reading Abe Opincar's ac count of his recent visit to the Christian Science Church in Coronado ("Sheep and Goats," February 26). I appreciate his efforts to get into the thinking of the people who worship there. It must be a challenge to stay ahead of the learning curve in rating the worship services and accurately conveying facts about such diverse religious communities. Unfortunately, the source used for statistics cle in the Journal of the Amer an Medical Association show ing Christian Scientists twice as likely to succumb to cance as the normal population. The IAMA article referred to is a longevity study for Christian Scientists but does not men-tion cancer or a wide gap in life expectancy from the nor mal population. After its pub-lication, serious questions were raised about the methodology and conclusions of the study. A statistical referee from the New England Journal of Medi-cine confirmed that the study lacked sufficient data to draw a statistically valid conclusion.

For Christian Scientists turning to prayer seriously is not naïvely hoping for mira-cles. It is profoundly life changing, and seeing and ex-periencing healing in so many cases over the years has pro foundly changed our views of health and well-being. This certainly isn't a matter of cherishing life any less than other do. Although grateful for heal-ing, Christian Scientists don't worship health or "healthy mindedness," they worship God. Health is a predictable side effect coming from a deeper understanding of God. Your Christian Science readers would appreciate the cor-rection to the above-mentioned error.

Unprofessionalism Upon reading Eleanor Wie mer's recent critique of Via Italia in your February 26 is sue, I felt compelled to write a response addressing her gross unprofessionalism and tasteless review of a truly wonder ful new Italian restaurant (Via

I have dined at Via Italia or numerous occasions and have never had anything but a won-derful, authentic Italian meal. Eleanor Widmer's refer the pasta sauce she espied a another table as "rust colored" another table as "rust colored" betrays her ineptitude for de-scription. She might have bet-ter luck describing Indian or Persian dishes, many of which can be described as quite un-sightly, yet positively delicious, I suggest she purchase a the-saurus and perlaps take a class or box in basic culiansy appreciation. I myself do not base my review of a dish table. my review of a dish on the color of its sauce. I'd soone rate the food at a restauran according to what pattern of silverware they choose Oh ves, and her comr regarding the risotto with blue-berries. I would have expected Eleanor to have had a more sophisticated palate, but ap parently she does not know sine. In Italy, this melange of fruit with risotto is not at all uncommon. However, the chef's choice of blueberries (apparently not a fruit that is indigenous to Italy) was most creative. I tasted that risotto dish and found it to be refreshingly different; the blue berries were a wonderful count-erpoint to the risotto. This is a truly delightful Italian dish that you cannot get anywher but perhaps in Italy (and ther only if the chef is talented enough to create sych a taste).

Furthermore, to expect a quiet, sedate atmosphere at an Italian restaurant is tanta-mount to ordering a ham-burger at a sushi restaurant. Via Italia is fun, not just because the food is excellent, but because the atmosphere is lively with an Italian flair. Just about everyone who works there is from Italy, and when the restaurani is busy you can feel the energy. Eleanor should take a trip to Italy — she might un-derstand the food (which is in-separably intertwined with the culture) enough to appreciate it.

What was most surprising and terribly disturbing is the vitriolic tone of her article. She seems to have written her review before visiting the restau rant and tasting the food. Her comments were so far off the mark, there can be no other explanation than a political rouse, except perhaps her total ignorance of Italian cuisine. For the really good restau-rants, I would assign another food critic for your reviews. Eleanor Widmer simply does not have the taste or profes-sionalism for it.

Disgusting Little Self-Justification

Duncan Shepherd's "Remediai Criticism" (February 26).
Buckling down to answer,
among the many others culled from his undoubtedly copious collection of hate-mail, the question. "Why don't you seem to like anything?" the best response be can muster is, "Because I know something you don't know." Not only i he insistent (as a five-year-old tugging at the pants leg is in-sistent) upon convincing us of his right to his own opinion,

Cause he sees lots of movies.
I'm sure he has known a mother's love, and I'm sure he does cast a reflection. And he does cast a reflection. And be probably does have skin. And maybe children don't, after all, cry and run away when they see him. Such indictments are far more a mussing than any he's ever applied to his subject matter, which he regards with the disdain of a student working through his second year of college at a fast-food joint, but they are only substantial to a conege at a tast-took john, they are only substantial to a man who takes advantage of his public forum by adding "Sticks and stones" to his disgusting little self-justification. What I call into question is whether or not be likes movies I agree that a paucity of com-plaints does not necessarily in-dicate the most rich film experience; but neither does a wealth of them. Someone who is able to generate a great deal of intelligent things to say about a film, both positive and negative, is perhaps likely to have gotten more out of it. Someone who has all that and is able to write about it is, at least in a fashion, a critic, and ting paid to do so. Shepherd is all that minus the positive comments. And the intelli-gence. And the ability to write. In point of fact, he didn't say his opinion is better - not in so many words. He said it more power to them for get-where he thinks he made that case. If a critic likes most of the movies I like and dislikes mov of the movies I dislike, ther that guy's good for a recom-mendation, but infinitely more importantly, if he and I disagree, then I hope I'm in for some insightful dissertation that will make me think about the movie a different way. A critic's column is a convertion with someone else who as we the movie, and if that per-son isn't Duncan, there's a chance that I might even learn something valuable about re-ally watching a movie, a skill that Shepherd thinks only crit-ics can possess. There's an-other type of critic whose value lies in the wit with which tion with someone else who he akewers yet another "sacred cash cow," and there are even hints that Shepherd might want to be like that. But his writing lacks the wit, and what he thinks is biting sarcasm in-evitably turns out to be tire-some negativity. I never asked Duncan to have the same opinion as I, and he's welcome to dislike anything he pleases.

LOCAL park system overnight because nobody rushed out to put signs on the trails saying, 'Welcome to the trails.' State and county rangers didn't welcome bikers, Greenstadt says, Lecaus they were perceived as a liability problem (higher speed and higher numbers) and because they lacked, as a group, the political clout of hike's and equestrians. In 1988, fat-tire bikes had been in mass production for only seven years, and those who walked on the trails viewed them as invaders.

Ten years later, Greenstadt says.

ry local trails — city, county, and e — are still closed to bicycles. Bib ere banned from the Blue Sky Ecological Reserve in Poway, for ce, in the fall of 1995, and all pails in Los Peñaguitos Car,yon Preserve closed to bikes.

As a board member of the San Diego Mountain Biking Association and vice president of the San Diego County Trails Council, Greenstadt works to open more trails to bikers and obeys the rules when they're closed. But sometimes, he says, it's hard to tell which sometimes, he says, it's hard to left which is which. In Sycamore Campon Open Space Preserve, which lies west of Highway 67, Greenstadt says the county recently posted triangular yield signs at the entrance to a trail called Martha's Grove. The signs included symbols for horses, pedestrians, and bicycles. "When someone told us that they'd seen that sign," Greenstadt says, "we contacted the county and said. Wonderful! You've opened the Martha's Grove trail to bikes!" "The country replied, "No such thing," Greenstadt says, "and we were told, "We'll have the signs taken down." In Greenstadt's recently published guide to mountain biking in San Dieg County, the Martha's Grove trail is dutifully marked "NO BIKES." So is the Botanical Trail in Effin Forest and the Sunset Trail in the Laguna Mountains But the news isn't all bad for those who ish to climb and descend on fat tire including one called Noble Canyon, which Greenstadt calls "one of the world's great singletrack adventures it on a harrow, acceptang train with "densely overgrown blind curves." Greenstadt also recommends Daley Ranch, a 3000-acre park that opened in the spring of '97. Twelve miles of trail are open to Fikers, but the park's popularity has made it what Greenstadt dubs a "potential flashpoint," a place where bikers should be on their best behavior. On Wednesday evening at Borders Books, Greenstadt will discuss local mountain-biking issues and sign copie of his guide, which contains detailed maps, elevations, and ratings on the "scare-o-meter" for 32 different rides, plus biking etiquette and phone numbers for the numbers for the city, county, state, and Boogle Nights — A movie that needed, that cried out, to be made: a hefty slice of heretofore unrampled celtural history, careed out of the San Fernando Valley, cracarred out of the San Fernando Valley, crad-die of the poors rhin industry. The precise insigher of the timeline—sufficiently lengthy to qualify is "spik," engedight at a two-and-shalt-hour running time— could hardly have been ones strengically selected. It spans from the salad days of the late Seventies, derir these glortfled stag films, had gained a footbold in public places in the light of days to the early Eightten, when the arrival of video drove them back underthe arrival of video drove them back under-ground and into the privacy of the home. At its best, the movie encloselse on the ter-tricopy Tim Burrion staked out in Ed Wood, a cheerist spectarle of people doing the best they can, however alsymant their level of stabilty. But writer-directs Paul Thomas Anderson, who appears to regard altimed in-section of the property of the property match. But there is much to admire on this menu, and could eat some of the preparations week after week without tiring of them. I adorred the maninated sliced chicken breast placed over fresh spirach, friske (curby greens), radicchio, and red and vellow peppers, garnished with toasted almonds. The weet mustard dressing had virtually no colories or fat and it really spiraged up the said ($8.95). I had a difficult time deciding between muslatur alla mezurada (the chef S Italian version of the French mooses with hard-boiled egg and house-mude trans (fresh turns cocked confit-style). of the French motions: with nato-none egg atto-house-made tuna (fresh tuna cocked confit-style) and imalata di gambrerit, consisting of posched shrimp, celery hearts, red onions, hothouse cu-cumbers, and dill-lemon sauce ($9,75). I chose the latter because I'm a dill freak. The dill sauce was essentially fat free.

What was I afraid of? That I wasn't going to get enough to eat?

What interests me about this story is not the what interests net about this story is not the insteadfs and not the jowl grabbing, but that Simp-son, some 30 years after the fact and despite all the other wild goings on that evening, remembered that Rosethic had "helped himself to copious quan-tries of food from the buffet."

That I wasn't going to get enough to eat?

The Sunday Frunch is about the only place arymore where well courselves go, (Holiday meals used to be occasions for indulgence, but now, before Chrismas, say, or Thankagiving, the media pepper us with 'llow-cal recipes for holiday favorites,' and the large health club chains broadcast commercials for 'holiday membrahig' discounts'. More accurately put, the Sunday brunch is about the only place where we are presented with the illusion that we could let ourselves go. Many people are happy to content themselves with illusion and little else tent themselves with illusion and little else.

I am not and my friend Lana is not, which is why we errived at the Sunday brunch at the Coronado Marriott — reportedly the best Sunday brunch in the city — determined to help ourbroisen in the city — determined to neep our-selves to "copious amounts of food." It was the first day of sun after many weeks of rain, and the air was warm and smelled of the sea. Our waiter at the Marrriott led us into the restau-Our waiter at the Marrisot led is into the restau-rant. We passed a long, long table loaded with bowls, trays, and platters of protections, salamis, parts, staemed asparagus, marinard mushnooms, parts salads, smoled salmon, smoked salmon crusted with black pepper, smoked whitefuls, sliced melon, sliced pineapple, wedges of blue-cheese, hunts of cheddar, slices of Camembert. Past the table to our tight, white-lad one carved huge rosust and huge harm. To our left was the such lost, where a woman placed slices of salmon at table filled with cash logs, cooked prowns, and raw owsters needed in crushed ice. But this was only the beginning.

Deeper in the restaurant, roward the patio, the winter pointed to threes and chaling dishes steening with gags Benedict, usuage, scallayed postures, bocon, creamed-chipped beef and bread pudding. And then just before you entired the patio, the desert tables, a multilayered display of chocolaire cakes, mouse cales, ministure flum, pastries, peris fours, mail froit tarts, cooked deped in white and dark chockeds, republesse, editor, pupils lacquered with caramelized sugar, as Juge polit lacquered with caramelized sugar, as Juge

After our waiter seated us and poured our coffee and champagne, Lana looked at me and whispered, "My hands are shaking." She gulped her champagne. They started shaking when I saw the salmon."

My heart, too, was racing. I signaled the waiter for more bubbly. "Let's just sit here for a second and try to be calm." Lana and I have known each other for 25 years.

We have known each other as fat children and as fat adults. Over the past year, Lana, a mother of two, lost 67 pounds, "plummeting," she says, "from a size 16 to a size 8, from 207 to 140 pounds," 'from a size I for a size I, from 707 to 140 pounds,' hanks to a 50%-cabrie-per-day fiet and daily three-hour sessions on a Stairmaster. walking a tad too fast, but there me. At the sushi bar." Lana, glaring, pointed in his direction with one of my asparagus spears. The pusher and his wife were sitting with another cou-ple. They were all thin and tanned and wore black clothes really was no reason for the pusher and his friends to have stared at us the way they did. I guess their staring did make us a little self-conscious, a little wary of making too many trips to the buffet. Lana and I returned to our table carrying two full plates apiece. The pusher and his pals watched us pass with awed silence. Then they all burst out hughing.

"Let the heathen rage." Lana said. "Ignore them. These are the best prawns I've ever eaten in my life. The watermelon and the pineapple are very fresh. And the blue cheese is out of champagne, damnit."

"Keep it comin', big boy,"

I worked my way through I worked my way through more asparagus and many slices of smoked salmon crusted with black pepper. I polithed off a nice selection of cheeres and six nice selection of cheeses and six pieces of salmon sushi. It was time for dessert. For a person who likes swerts, the dessert display at the Marriott's Sunday brunch is a supreme test in self-control. The cakes, the tarts, the cookies, the ministure flans, the cream miniature flans, the cream puffs — all of it is so beautiful that you want to clamber onto the tables and start shoving the tables and start showing chings into your mouth by the fistful. You want to grunt and wallow in the deserts. The urge is powerful. The dessert display holds people spellbound. This is it. What you've dreamed of since childhood sweets, beautiful sweets, and you can eat all take an entire cake back to our table? Lana whispered, point-ing to a lovely mousse cake decorated with wedges and curb of dark chocolate. "I mean, what

"The pusher and his friends might oink at us or lynch us." "True," Lana said, crestfallen.

She settled for a plate of strawberries and melted choco-late. I took a pile of tiny cream puffs. We both agreed tha sweets taste very good with chempagne.

By the time we finished our desserts, the pusher and his friends were gone. It was get-ting warm, and Lana and I felt sated and dazed. We watched a woman dressed in a large feathery white coat and a high, feathery, majorette-type hat carry a piste laden with eggs Benedict to her table. "That hat," Lana said numbly. "It's so soft and fluff looking that if I were a bird I'd be tempted to lay an egg in it." . We sat and were quiet for a long while. For two people who had lived with self-denial for so long, the experience of being full of good food was overwhelming. Lana seemed pensive. "What are you thinking about?" I asked.

"I'm thinking about what I want for dinner."

Yes, because of all the dust that col-lects throughout the year. I think spring is the right time to do it because it's the time to open things in I allow flowers curreds to I want because it's the time to open thing-up. I plant filmers outside to I want to make it look good on the inside no. It's the time to got all of the col-webs down because there's more company coming over in the sum to the company coming over in the sum basically the execution for starting over. My spring cleaning involve weaking the curvatins, pulling the farmiture out and vacuuming behind it and sometimes changing the recom-around. During the ext of the year I don't do major cleaning all of the time. By broat earth a showroom.

I clean all of the time. 1 V start with, I dean all of the time, I get jain/ors or servicemen for the big jobs like carpet cleaning and window cleaning and drape cleaning. The small jobs, I do trayelf constantly because I'm a super near freak, I'll never let a pile of dishes sit overnight. I don't know wely I'm like that, but I know it want from my mother. She was the opposite.

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

That fool would be the first to fly an experimental supersonic seaplane? V Someone generously paid by Convair, no doubt. The Sea Dart (XF2Y-1), shown here on San Diego Bay, was the first waterbased aircraft to break the sound barrier. Only five were built; only three were flown before November 4, 1954, when one exploded and crashed into San Diego Bay. Two years later Convair pulled the plug on the project.

Introducing READER MATCHES, the best place to meet San Diego San Diego singles!

You'll receive a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds and on the Internet at www.sdreader.com. You'll also receive a free "voice mailbox" that allows you to record and receive messages from a touchtone phone.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free ad, fill out the coupon below and mail or fax it (619-233-7907) to us. (If faxing, please photocopy the coupon first.) The deadline for submitting your free ad is Saturday at 7 am. Free ads are not accepted over the phone or in person. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number (printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security code for exclusive access to your responses.

You may place a late ad until 6 pm Tuesday by phone (619-235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by fax (619-233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word. By phone or by fax you may use Visa, Master-Card or Discover only.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILEOX:

After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction and listen to your responses. Call (619) 881-2000, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You must have a touchtone phone. Cordless and cellular phones are not recommended.

QUESTIONS? Call (619) 235-8200, ext. 268.
