Honorable Susan Golding and Members of the San Diego City Council City Administration Building

202 C Street San Diego, CA 92101

Dear Mayor Golding and Members of the City Council:

Tuesday evening, the Padres received the City's revised ball-park financing proposal in the form of a 31-page draft "Mem-orandum of Understanding," Although City officials and at-torneys needed over 30 days to prepare the proposal, the City has requested that we respond in writing to do just that. Since it is not possible to respond in detail to each of the issues addetail to each of the issues ad-dressed in the proposal in such a short time period, we have outlined below our reactions to the central issues. We trust that our effort to comply, even with his unreasonable timetable, is further evidence of our good faith eagerness to make a deal with you in a timely manner.

While the City's proposal may be more detailed and certainly is structurally different from all prior City proposals, from an eco-nomic and a risk assessment nomic and a risk assessment standpoint. the Cityl proposal relegates the Club to a bleaker inancial position than it was in under prior negotiations. Therefore, we simply cannot accept the City's proposal with-out major change. While the Padre appreciate the time and effort spent by the City to expanse and the proposal proposal proposal pare the proposal proposal proposal we had requested in our May 22, 1998 letter to you), the City's proposal su unacceptable City's proposal is unacceptable for many reasons, including the

for many reasons, instituting the following:

1. The City's proposal is a step backwards in our negotia-tions. While the City's proposal offers the same $175 million in transient and occupancy tax revenue that the City is proposed offered, the City's proposed offered, the City's proposed Padrespivate sector payment of $135 million is $10 million more than the City requested orally during our last meeting. Also, the City's proposal unre-alistically proposal unre-cented by the City of the City of the City's proposal would require us to assume all Ball-park cost overruss, including the City's proposal displayed to the City's cost overruss, including the City's proposal displayed to the City's proposal dis-tinct and city's proposal displayed to the City's proposal dis-tinct and city's proposal displayed to the City's proposal dis-tinct and city's proposal displayed to the City's proposal dis-tinct and city's proposal displayed to the City's proposal dis-November. After months of waiting, we were presented Tucsday evening at 6:30 pm with a completely unacceptable financing plan, asked to provide a written response by Thursday morning (which we have done), and required to sign an agreement with the Cigi in nine day; (by June 25. 1998, sooner than we had ever been informed by the City in the city of the this extra $25 million.

2. The City's proposal differs in several significant respects from the structure of the agreement that we have been discussing for several months. For example, whereas the parties have agreed that the contributions from the Padres and the private sector be combined and our discussions have long

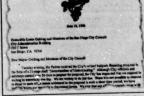

10000 Feet

proceeded along these lines, the City's proposal for the first time separates the two (although it would require the Padres to generate and guarantee both the Padres and private invest-ments). In addition, the proposal is so riddled with gener-alities and legal loopholes that it is difficult to identify what, if anything, the City is agreeing

 The proposal is not based at all on the agreements reached between municipalities at all on the agreements reached between municipalities and other clubs in similar cir-cumstances with whom we compete. In fact, the City's pro-posal appears to ignore this market analysis. As we have made clear to the City's negoti-cities amarket for determining the market for determining the inservablences of an agreement. reasonableness of an agreement between a municipality and a club, and the City's proposal is clearly unreasonable in light of that market. A construction contribution from the Padres contribution from the Padres on the order of magnitude as that proposed by the City is widely out of sync with the con-tributions made by other Ma-jor League clubs in public/pri-vate partnership over the last 10 years, contributions which averaged about $50.60 million.

The City has yet to explain why it feels justified in demanding a sum from us that is nearly triple that, when our rew at Qualcomm are not close to the levels enjoyed by our com-petitors. The City's proposal would simply not allow the Padres to compete (financially or on the field) with other MLB Clubs that are receiving "market-based" deals.

4. Contrary to the assertion in the cover letter, the proposal is flatly inconsistent with at least one of the basic ballpark ples to which we have agreed.

with the opportunity for long-term economic and competi-tive visibility. Indeed, were the tive visibility. Indeed, were the Padres to accept this proposal, the Padres would be burdened with one of the worst deals in Major League Baseball. While the agreement would purport-edly ensure that the Padres remain in San Diego, our finan-cial situation would continue to be desperate and our competitiveness non-existent. We can never agree to such an ar-

In sum, we are saddened and disappointed at the City's continued unwillingness to provide us with a proposal that is reasonable and based on comparability. In light of the City's most recent proposal, however, we are sure that it would be unproductive to con-tinue in the same manner. Yet, we recognize that the people of San Diego are eagerly awaiting the details of our deal. They expect to vote in November. To that end, we need to change the process, and therefore suggest that the Mayor, the City Manager and a representative of the City Attorney's office, autho-rized to negotiate and make de-cisions, meet with a similarly limited group from the Padres in a final effort to reach an agreement. In the context of such a meeting, we are prepared to present a compreher hours into a new job. Along with his message of comfort to players Lasorda delivered a message to greenhorn manger Glenn Hoffman. The message can be stated as. "After you've washed the uniforms, please remember to fold all the towels."

The president and CEO of the Dodgers is a Murdoch-installed accountant by the name of Bob Graziano. whose baseball experience can be written on the cap of an aspirin bottle. Now, add a rookie GM and a rookie manager. Lasorda is a pro, but it will still take him the rest of the a pro, but it will still take him the rest of the season to figure out what he's doing. The new manager, Glenn Hoffman, has coached during parts of five minor-league seasons. His is a losing record, including 1998. Under his command Albuquerque has won just 27 games after 68 played. What this train wreck has told fans is that the Dodgers have thrown in the towel for the 1998 season. How is Hoffman going to run this team? Lasorda is already coaching his players. What kind of authority will Hoffman have the first time he have the first time he

The beaver trappers of the early 19th Century were, in effect, pathfind-ers. They "penetrated the hidden vastness of the Smith routes that were to become the course of sol-diers, explorers, and immigrants yet to come.

One such pathinder, James Pattie, was ability and the solid pathinder, James Pattie, was beings, albeit in a roundabout way. He wrote about his errant ordysaye in The Personal Nar-rative of James Ohio Pattie.

By 1827, Pattie had made several forays into the West, in search of beaver pelts. He d been wounded alset wice in shootouts with Indians and "was nearly silled by mistake by a frendry apache."

In September 1827, Pattie and his father, Sylvester, went to Santa Fe, where Sylvester

They couldn't find water for days. When they awa a pond near an Indian canque, they received through the natives, scattering them, dove in the water, and "overhanded our empty tomachs, and one bearne as side, as death. After vidiniting, however, as were relieved, and the state of the s

Four men came back with furst ruined by summer thooding. Pattie's father brought smallpox vaccine for the ripp. Pattie convinced the governor he would vaccinate "every purello, mission, and precision in California." Pattie' visited the length and breadth of California. "Including the Russian fort of Bodega, north of San Francisco. The preparation of the septement was $100 from the Russians at Bodega."

MASTER'S THESIS EXCERPTS:

1. "Pattie found two arrows sticking in his hunting shirt, and his blankets were pinned to the ground with 16 arrows."

2. Thoreau knew enough of affairs in the trans-Mississippi region to disapprove of frontier materialism. He visualized the mountain men as "the loafing class tempted by rum and money" and thought of the fur trade as "pitiful business."

3. "Few fur traders became rich.... The life was one of grueling hard work, constant exposure to danger, and few material rewards. But there was something to this way of life beyond the settlements and the "pork exters," which appealed to a certain adventurous element of frontiersman. Just what this appeal was is hard to define."

4. "I've trapped a heap, and many a hundred pack of beaver I've traded in my time... Many's the time I've said I'd strike for Taos and trap a squaw, for this child's getting old, and feels like wanting a woman's face about his lodge for the balance of his days; but when it comes to catching of the old traps, I've the smallest kind of heart, I have 'From George F. "I FEEL AWFUL." MYRNA'S 83-YEAR-OLD VOCAL CHORDS, PARTIALLY PARALYZED FROM HER STROKE TWO YEARS AGO. LABORED WITH THE EFFORT OF SPEAK-ING. THE STAPHYLOCOCCUS AUREUS BACTERIA COURSING THROUGH HER BLOODSTREAM HAD COLONIZED HER HEART AND BRAIN, DRAINING WHAT LITTLE LIFE SHE HAD LEFT. HER WRIN-KLED, WITHERING BODY SEEMED TO SINK DEEPER INTO HER HOSPITAL BED WITH EACH BREATH, THE COLOR OF HER SKIN FADING TO BLEND WITH HER WHITE REDSHEETS

I think Myrna felt awful for most of the two years I knew her. A retired social worker, she had the short stature and native New York accent of my grandmother, which made me feel as though I had known her much longer than I had. She had come with her demented husband to California from Florida in the middle of 1995 to be closer to their son Bitchard. Decades of cigarette smoking.

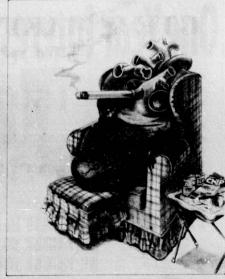

(which she quit prior to moving west) and high blood pressure had damaged the smooth muscle lining the inner surfaces of her arteries. One after-moon two months after her arrival, a blood clot ("thrombus" in medicalese), which had formed in an ulceration in one of the larger arteries leading to her brain, broke off, slid forward with the flow-ing arterial blood, and lodged in her left middle cerebral artery, occluding it and killing the brain tissue behind it.

Most strokes and almost all heart attacks result from "thrombotic" events such as that which struck

"He vrooomed," his mother said, "all the way down the coast from Seattle." She sighed, Sarah did, a tumultuous sigh that sounded like sighs I sighed when Sarah, the younger of my two daughters, was Nick's age. I sighed so much in those days that I not infrequently simply said, "Ah, sigh and sigh again."

We got home. Nick, car in hand, made his way quickly to the bathroom. That done, I offered various juices. Nick settled on Welch's grape, precisely as his mother used to do. Nick sat at the kitchen table, sipping at the purple

I said to Sarah, I hope not peevishly, that I could never recall that she and her older sister Rebecca ever said. "Vrooom, vrooom, vrooooom." I asked, "Did you all ever really play with cars?" I could not retrieve any memory that showed me either girl with wheeled toys other than adorable baby buggies, of which each girl owned one,

Sarah answered. Then she added, about the Vrooom, vroooom, "Gets on your news, does it?" She said she was used to it. Living with Nicholas, she explained, was like living with the one-man and trains and trains and boats," she said, "if it travels. Mr. Nick wants to get it on the road."

I'm telling you this to explain how much trouble I've had with my novel's two boys, Matt and Danny, Polly and Phil's sons. Because I was an only child and came from such a small family that I didn't even have boy cousins, and because when I married I had daughters and didn't have sons, I've not found writing about Matt and Danny that easy. When it comes right down to it, I realize that I don't know that much about boys. But, because boys, and, of

How did he look, splayed out on a changing table? I didn't know. Via e-mail, I consulted Sarah and asked if she'd dredge up what she recalled about diaperine Nick, My enter ynazgled. pering Nick. My query puzzled Sarsh. It seemed, she wrote, like the most natural thing in the world, to her, changing Nick's diapers. She sent me this, below.

All that aside, though, I also found myself in real technical trouble as I tried to write about Matt and Danny's growing up Since I wanted to show Polly circumcised, if for no other res-son than that Phil was circum-cised, I had to figure out how the infant penis looked imme-diately after circumcision. I mentioned this problem to a fellow writer, the mother of daughters only. She said she knew someone who only recently circumcised, if for no other rehad a boy and who'd had him circumcised. She said she'd ask and get right back to me. Six hours later, r:ye-mail delivered this. My friend was happy to describe her baby sun's post-cir-cumcision appearance:

Phil was down on the floor, wax-ing his old cross-country skis, and the kitchen smelled of warm gar family, and had been three times county dairy princess but never dairy queen, a reward that Winegar, who'd left town to go to college in the East and never came back except for Christramses and was suspected of being a leshian) since they were all kids. What Polly didn't know about Phil and Betsy was that back when they were in junion high, Phil, who always was good at math, had worked out a trade with Betsy. He'd tutor her in algebra in exchange for her giv ing him hand jobs. [A man

Polly said all this, except

he did this. That when he and thisgirl were in junior high school he did this girl's math papers for her and then, in exchange, she touched him there until he came. This same man told me that he and his brother, when they and his brother, when they entered adolescence and were able to ejaculate, used to have contests to see who could come faster. He also told me that when he was about that same age, he used to get the family cat up in his bedroom and put peanut butter on his penis and get the cat to lick it off. When I asked him what the cat's name was, he looked at me with widened eyes, and said he didn't remem-ber. "It was Mom's cat. She gave

She gave them all sorts of goofy cat names, ilke 'Huffy' and 'Purrball' Maybe," he said, "it was Fluffy."] Anyway, when Polly, her wide forchead farrowed, tells Phil about Betsy's attitude toward Little George's penis, which Betsy laboromyses for a sesset barbin. also compares to a sweet gherkin, what Phil thinks about is the algebra problems and Betsydid, well, what she did. "Betsy," he says to Polly, "you have to rer ber, grew up out there on the ranch with all that castration of young bulls and the prize Wine gar bulls doing it to the cows gar bulls doing it to the cows." Polly was scrubbing their dinner's cream gravy off the iron skiller's sides and doing her Kegel zwe-ciese like her ob/gyn told her to do so she'd stay nice and tight down there. "Do it," he'd told her, bossed and ordered her, really, "for Phil." So it was while belief to the color of the color of the color belief to the color of the really, "for Phil." So it was while Polly's knuckles glistened with grease from the gravy and while she was pulling in as tight as she could the vaginal muscles that Phil, from his spot on the floor, added," Also, I wouldn't be sur-prised if that older brother of Betsy's, Carver, didn't get at her not be resisted, seen and her sister when the girls were little. You know, like maybe played a little too much doctor with them."

Just then, as Polly's indrawn breath and widened green eyes indicated her horror at Phil's comment, Matt stirred in his white wicker bassinet, which white wicker bassinet, which Polly had set atop the kitchen table. He started crying, Polly quickly wiped off her hands and picked Matt up and got busy with him, all of which forestalled any further discussion of what, exactly, Phil meant by playing a little too much doctor and what little too much doctor and what made him think it was true that maybe this happened. It made Polly just sick to the pit of her Polly just sick to the pit of her stomach, the things that went on in these respectable valley families, and it also made her just sick to her stomach how Phil made so little of what seemed to Polly truly hideous, flagitious events. These stories made her think of pre-Revolution Rus-sian peasants, folks who showed up in Tolstoy or Destoewky or Copeol, although when she Gogol, although when she strained her memory to come up with a specific Russian story, one that showed people acting this way, she couldn't. She said to receive Christ's Body, She said aloud, "Oh, thank you, God," and felt herself getting teary-cyed and then with a frown taking over her face, she said, still aloud, "Polly, you're a fool and you're taking on airs." And then, Polly, inexplicably, broke down into yawing watery sobs.

Or men who wanted women to pee on them. "How could you ever want to do things like that" Polly wondered. So many ways, though, existed to screw up a child, and Polly prayed to God she wouldn't somehow do one of them.

I caused trouble between her and Phil, because he wanted her to do things with him that she did not really like to do, and he wanted in general to do it more than she wanted to do it, and she worried that Phil would find someone else to entertain Little Phil and there she'd be, abandoned. Phil was an extravagant, almost reckless flirt. He really was. There was no getting around it. There was also no getting around the fact that the trio of around the fact that the tito of women who worked for Phili in his dental clinic, his "desk lady" and his two chair-aide assistants, one who was Phil's age and one who was his mother's age, had abundant breasts, breasts that polity thought of as "land of milk and honey breasts." Polly had no idea that about the town these breasts were noted and commented upon, that one person was heard to say that Phil's gals looked like models for the after in a breast enlargement clinic's advertise-ments. Little did Polly know either that Phil for all his edu cation in science, actually believed that the bigger a woman's breasts, the more likely she was easily aroused. And, sad to say, had she viewed even a scintilla of the footage that ran through Phil's mind, all the grabbing at breasts and the succoring by these breasts' owners of Little Phil, Polly would owers of Little Phil, Poly would have given up the ghost right then and there. Because Phil fan-tasized pretty regularly about other women and peculiar positions and three-ways and old guiffriends who now were his patients and who opened their mouths wide and spread themselves out trustingly before him in the blue leatherette dental chiz.

A bad thing happened when I was in third grade. I was at the movies on a Saturday afternoon. A man who sat next to me grabbed my hand and put it on top of a hard lump in his pants. He wriggled fast, up and down, in his seat. Hot, sticky stuff that smelled like Purex bleach sported onto my palm. I snatched up my coat and ran out of the movie house and hurried home as fast as my short chubby legs would carry me. When I was a teenager I sub-mitted, and submitted is the accumitted and submitted is the accu-rate word, to the embraces of several boys, simply because I hoped that while in those embraces, I would pierce the mysterious closk that surrounder maleness and suddenly be able to see the world as boys saw it. If I permitted the hot damp blowng in my ear and the wet mus cular tongue's intrusion into my mouth, I hoped that the boy would whisper secrets. I wanted to know what it was about which to be thought. I was willing to put up with rough pawing at my A-cup breasts and anxious fiddling with my skirt's hem. I was willing to quell and quash my fears in order to learn. Boys' odors— sweat mixed with what, I think now, was a father's aftershave, and in winter, the woolen sweaters—interested me. Per-

When Polly cleaned Matt's room she found in his bedside trash basket notebook paper torn into small pieces. She gathered out the pieces and laid them on his cow-boys and Indians bedspread. What she saw when she fitted the pieces roughly together was a pencil drawing of a naked woman. The woman's breasts sat high on he, chest and were decorated with nipples the size of dimes. Polly could see that Matt had dug his pencil in so hard on these nipples that he'd torn the paper. The woman seemed to be on her back, stretched out like Christ on the cross. Her arms were spread wide and beneath them, Matt had drawn in hair. Likewise, her legs were spread wide and between legs were spread wide and between them Matt had again employed his pencil roughly. But what really caught Polly, and what she could not forget that day as she swept and dusted and changed the linens, was the look on the woman's face.

When Pollytook out the trash, which she gathered, room by room, into a brown paper grocery bag (remember, reading here, that this takes place in the days before plastic garbage liners for trash and garbage can were ubiquitous). Ann Beattie broke up, In 1979 he took a job at Newwweck the job was answering readers' letters. He gradually began to write about books and section writer. His first published movel, Jernigan, was published in 1991 and was nominated for the Pullzer Prize. Gates recently was named as recipient of a Guggenheim Fellowship.

Preston Falls; Alfred A. Knopf, 1998; 384 pages; $25 Type: f.ction, something of a midlife-crisis novel Place: Manhattan, suburban Westchester, Upstate New York

Doug and Jean Willis have two children, fairly good jobs, a suburban honse, and a ramshackle country house in Upstate New York. Doug has taken a two-month leave of absence from his work as PR gay for Sportif, a Manhattan sports-beverage producer. The plan is that after Labor Day weekend, Jean and he kidd will return to horse and school and Doug will stay on in the country.

sports-beverage producer. The plan is that after Labor Day weekend, Jean and the kids will return to home and school and Doog will stay on in the country, get his head together, practice on his goitar, and fix up the house. No way is this what ends up happering.

Preton Falls is one of those books that women should read if they want to know more about what goes on in men's minds. Gates gives the reader the male mind with its guard down, thinking its own male thoughts.

This is one of the best novels I've read in months. Everything Gates bumps up against — trees, trucks, goitans, beer, Charles Dickens, Jane Austra, ampon insertion, home repair, children, jobs, guns, pay phones — he mapped the properties of the properties of friends and who writes about music for Newwork, that he writes wonderfully about music.

"It's very obvious," Gates said, "when people play instruments and when they don't play instruments. You can really, really tell when scenebody has worked hard to make the thing seem real, and you just can tell that they don't git. The only person I know who I just Lapper to know doesn't play but was fairly convincing about it is Charles Frazier in Cald Mountain. He really did good homework. He's obviously hung around and listened to old-time country musicians. And watched them. I don't think! would have known he wasn't a musician, had I not actually met him."

In Proton Falls (ann is always reading lane Austen and Doug is always reading lacken. I asked why he gave Doug the Dickens and Jean the Austen.

"I'm obsessed with them both. Big surprise. Superficial answer: because Dickens is the gur and Jane Austen is a woman. But I guess, I think, that I wanted him reading Dickens because the novels are so big and so long that you really, really can get lost in hem for a longer period of time than you can get lost in lane Austen. The sort of pared down, neat construction of the lane Austen books is more like the kind of thing I think would appeal to Jean. The kind of overrier, operated, over-the-otypens of Dickens I think would be more Austen books is more like the kind of thing I think would appeal to Jean. The kind of orbiting, operatic, over-the-topness of Dickens I think would be more the kind of thing that would sait Willis."

I mentioned that one didn't often find people in novels reading novels.

"Real people read. Why shouldn't they' If they can eat and go to bed with each other and go to the bathroom, why should they not be reading toot".

I said how much I liked Willis and then said that I had a feeling that readers perhaps were not supposed to like Willis all that much.

"I'm not sure I like him much myself. In my secret heart I do, But also my not so secret heart, it got really, really wearing to be in his presence for months at a time. It was a breath of fresh air to get into Jean's head for a while. She's got a good heart, the really does. A bip tut youn. I see these people all sorts of different ways. I'm so close to them in a way that I can't stand back from them, though I obviously shape the reader's response to them in some ways very deliberately. But I'm not sure I shaped my response quite as well as I shaped the reader's a seed of the standard of the said of the s from them, though I obviously shape the reader's response to men'n some ways very deblerately. But I'm not sure I shaped my response quite as well as I shaped the reader's. "Gates said that Presson Falls began, as did Jernigan, in a place. "There was a murder maybe two or three miles from inn country house Upstate. And whoever did the murder — they've never angult the guy eet — kelled the gov and left the body in a house. Then after a few days, ig sees, he sort of had a wood or may road, a mile from the house. There were copy coming by, and 'IV cress. That was one of the germs of it, this notion of a body lying out there in the woods. So in my initial conception of the thing it was going to be one of those disappearance/scam stories. Thank God I didn't do it. Put that went the plan for quite a while. That's all gone.

"There was another scene, really early, that stayed in the book. You know the scene where Willis's brother Champ shows up with his giftriend in the convertible! Well, a friend of mine and her husband showed up at my house Upstate in an old clunky car that wasn't a convertible. They had on these sunglasses. It's like they were visitors from another far more cool and wonderful reality. Sadderiy hy descended and then the world changed and got better. That was a very, very early thing. That little moment. Somebody coming to voit."

I asked if Gates begain, then, by putting together small sections?

I asked if Gates begain, then, by putting together small sections?

*Exactly. I had no idea where it would go. After a while, I began to do still with it. But in the beginning it was just very much kind of throwing stuff out there and seeing if it led anyplace.

*Gates asked then if I were as comminced by Jean as by Willis. I wasn't, I

I asked Gates what he thought would happen to Willis.
"I don't wonder about him the way I wonder about people. I mean, on the one hand, he's very, very real to me. But he's real to me only within the confines of that book. I find it hard to care about whether he and lean get that. It's a really good question. And it's curious that I don't care about that stuff."

I suggested that I thought if a novel worked as well as Preston Fails works, a reader tends to wonder what will happen to its characters after the novel ends. "That's good that the reader cares. As long as the reader doesn't feel that some crucial bir of something that you'd need to know is actually missing from the thing. I hope that's not the case. I don't think that's the case. I don't think that's the case of the start of the case. I don't think that's the case of the start of the case. I don't think that's the case of the start of the case. I don't finish that's the case of the start of the case. I don't finish that's the case of the start of the case. I don't finish that of the case of the start of the start of the case. I asked Gates if he were a dow write.

"Very slow. This thing took me seven years to do. I started working on Pretain Fallh during the time Jernigue Came out. So that's a long, long time. It certainly saw slow and painful in arriving. The first draft was about 70 pages. It was told in first person, both by Willia sand by Jean. That just wasn't right. I felt like I was showing off. Carp pointed this out to me: I hash't really second to the pretain the pretain property of the pretain pretain property of the pretain pretain property of the pretain over, you can just leave the thing and not need to see any more of it. That was really the big change, making it way, way shorter, getting rid of the bizarre subplots, changing the point of view, and shaping the thing. "I always feel like I should be a thrifty guy. One of the subplots that got cut out was so wrong. — Willis wes, having an affair with some woman. Totally wrong. He was riding the subway out to Brooklyn. Garbage, it was terrible. And there sits this 50 or 60 pages bearing on all this. I have this illusion that I could make it into a short story. I doubt that I'll touch it."

Lettice Douffet isn't the English Auntie Mame, but she comes close. Like Mame, Lettice ab-hors the mundane, the ordinary, the "mere." The "gray" 20th Century's no place for her. She burns for baroque embellishment, even when it's at odds with actuality. Her motto: enlarge, enliven,

But where Mame is egalitarian, cajoling everyone toward a fuller life, Lettice is an elitist. She sees herself as an aureate light amid dross, battling medi-ocrity alone. When she meets Lotte Schoen, a lifelong reac-tionary, Lettice finds what may become a boon companion. Peter Shaffer always errs on the side of the elite. In Amadeus, in Equus, in The Royal Hunt of the Sun, the gifted individual soars above the paltry masses. Shaffer doesn't think much of us and has small hope for our betterment. His plays, in fact, try to distance us from great-ness. What gives Lettice & Lowge interest, however, is that Lettice discovers abilities in Lotte and cultivates them. It's as if Mozart chose to share his genius with Salieri.

There's no such thing as ideal casting, but the Lamb's Players Theatre comes close. Rosina Revnolds, a mainstay in San Diego for the last 25 years has a blast as the grandiose Let-tice. She whirfs and flour-ishes — verbally and physi-cally — and performs a coup d'eutonstage. Reynolds claims the space in the name of "en-largement," "enlightement" — and entertainment. Reynolds also shows her

By Gins Arnold

The only time I ever saw Den 16 was when I was 15, and my mom and my best friend's most took my friend and me to Hawaii. One evening, the flow of to sent to see the control of the hotel where he holds court, and although I wasn't yet a findings force chirt, and through I wasn't yet a findings force chirt, and through I wasn't yet a findings force chirt, and through I wasn't yet a findings force chirt. As of them sent yet a findings force chirt. As of the most yet a findings force chirt. I me he wasn't to the ladies. Then he sang it to the ladies to even to save I are in the methylation. The control is a saw that the same is to the ladies and cate of the same is the same in the same in the same in the same in the same is the same in the same i was served on the side. Black-eved peas and roasted garla accompanied the steak.

We concluded with bread pudding with sundried cherries and bourbon suce. It was served in an eartherware cup, not in keeping with the easthetic surroundings, and in any event the pudding was too dry. The management is still experimenting with the choice of bread.

My suggestion is that Gulf Coast Grill import fresh fish from Broids. It mis reth pompane. In addition, there should be a short list named Plain and Simple that Giff Sed sky fresh fish without chiles, wilke, or other ascorded adorument. I'm still dreaming of Gustaf Ander's salmon with fresh dill succe. Do I have to drive to Coast Mea to get it?

mostard and fennel grew beside the paved trail I ran. Large black crows I'd never seen before — a new and jarring addition to the local fauna - cawed and eved me as I passed.

He dropped his life like ripe fruit kept going through my head. It was such a poetic way to the describe the death of a man who'd slaughtered millions. I pictured a fat mango — wrinkled, soft, sweet — falling from its branch with a soft thump to a mossy jungle floor. No drama. No judgment. just nature taking its course. No screaming or mischief. Only the quiet work of chemistry and physics. I wondered if, when my turn came, when sprints around a lake no longer forestalled the inevitable, I would drop my life like ripe fruit too. After my run I was very hungry, and as I drove home along University Avenue I passed a small Cambodian restaurant with a merry "Grand Opening!" banner hanging above its door. I'd never eaten Cambodian food. I made a U-turn, parked, and went in. The interior was small and chaotic Children with balloons tied to their wrists

It took a long time to make. The man and woman standing behind the cash register grinned at me expectantly. I grinned back. Fifteen, maybe twenty minutes passed before the waiter brought to my table a large steaming bowl. The soup smelled pleasantly of chicken and of the lemon grass and cilantro that bobbed on its surface. grass and ciliatro that bobbed on its surface. Mouth watering, Jucked up the ladde the waiter brought with the bowl and plunged it into the soup. I expected to dredge up chunks of chicken, crisp bean sprouts. By now you'll have goessed that when I deev the ladde up from the bottom of the bowl, it held a hot purple chunk of pig blood. I don't know what I'd been chinking, why I thoughly going to a Cambodian restaurant the day to the chinking of the chinking of

I had often seen sleek, quivering slabs of congaeled purplish pig blood in the ment sections of Asian markets around town. I am net a finicky cotert. I like my beef and lamb bloody-rare, but I have limits. Pig blood reminded me not of reforlorn broth. Everything I knew, or thought I knew, about Cambodia came rushing down on me: The Killing Fields' Haing Nor writhing in a sourceful, waste-not-want-not peasants, but rather of the stinky, sticky, sharp-edged brutality of Third World rural life. slimy pit of rotting corpses, the grinning skulls piled in the post-genecide wire-service photos out of Phnom Penh, Henry Kissinger.

Red drained from the cube and trickled nausea, and the wetness in my mouth turned from desire to revulsion. For Cambodians, pig blood may be just one more tasty thing to add to chicken soup, but to a jumpy, middle-aged writer with more imagnation than common sense, it was a gastronomic Waterloo. Taste really didn't matter. I wouldn't eat it if it tasted like filet mignon or bittersweet chocolate. It

Call it "discomfort food." At the end of this Lail it apcomined tools. At me end of this low, dishonest century, we may know too much to est "ethnic" with equanimity. As long as we don't think too long about history, about who's in the kitchen, about what they know or might have witnessed, or about whomever it is back home they daydream of while they chop onions and weep, we can tuck into Salvadoran pupusas or Ethiopian injera with gusto. But knowledge, as Adam and Eve would tell you, is a powerful sea flashing in my mind.)

That I can eat, and eat with relative calm, in Italian and French restaurants is because Italians were inext, half-hearted Pascists, and the French managed to mobilize a gallant, if glaringly inel fectual resistance to the Nazi occupation However, recent renewed interest in Japan's fort on the part of the Japanese government to offer restitution to the Filipina, Korean, and Chinese women forced to serve as "sex slaves" during WWII might cause me to reconsider my dislike for tempura. Not long after my visit to the Cambodian restaurant, when riots had erupted in Jakarta and Surabaya, and Indonesia seemed poised to implode a friend invited me to dinner at Bali, the city's only Indonesian restaurant. May-hem seemed very far from Bali's festive interior festooned with native handicrafts — batik, I burbled about what a great chef I thought she was, how much I had enjoyed her cooking. Her smile was strained. I asked after tapestry, wood carvings. Later that week I returned to

Bali to interview its chef, Roswita Sjamsuddin, who I thought would add colorful hu-

Rancho Bernardo Rancho Bernardo

Think it's agood idea for the city.

The way things are going right now with the team, people are going out and seeing the ball club and enjoying themselves and having good family fun. And it brings alc of exonomic progress to the city.

Kou've seen what having a down-out ballpark has done for other cities tile Baltimore, Phoenis, Denver. I don't think the city of San Diego needs another ballpark. To my way of thinking, the atadium that we have would be utilized 82 dates less than it is now. What would we tion. If they can't make a fir Network Administra I'm for it because the Padres need I their own stadium and it will generate income downtown. I think the city should pay for half of it and the Padre organization should pay for the other half. I like the location they've other half. I like the location they we chosen for it because I think they need to expand the renewal of down-town. You've got the Gaslamp and Horton Plaza, but the rest of it is still pretty run-down. I think by putting a new stadium down there it will spread the downtown renewal it will spread the downtown renewal int..) the run-down areas. I don't think the Padres' threatening to leave is extortion, it's just business. It's the reality of major sports. Major corporations do it too. I worked for Packard Bell electronics, and they told the city of L.A., "iou need to give us tax breaks or we'll leave." L.A. said needs the bol.

Nick Condo

What do you think about the downtown ballpark issue?

I think it's a great idea if it help out that area. The only thing I would worry about is the traffic sit-uation. I don't want to see the traf-fic get any worse than it already is.

John Paul arrived early. Wednesday at John Paul arrived early. Wednesday at 3:19 a.m., about two weeks before my due date, I awdee to a warm pulse of fluid between my legs, I waited for a moment to make sure I wasn't dreaming, then reached over and touched Jack's shoulder. "Sweetie," I whissered in the dark, "my water just broke Can word me a teaching.

whisered in the dark, "my water just broke. Can you get me a towle?"

A half hour later, Jack backed the minious out of the driveway, and we headed for the hospital. Our three girts. Rebecca, Angela, and Lucy, lay asleep in their beds. A generous, groggi neighbor sat on our couch. He was scheduled to be relieved at dawn by Jack's dad, who was driving up by Jack's dad, who was driving up-from Clairemont.

"I hope the girls won't be disappointed," I told Jack as we hurtled down the nearly deserted freeway. All day Monday and Tuesday, wed promised the girls we would go to the Del Mar Fair on Wedneyday When we nived Pobeco. Wednesday, When we tucked Rebecca and Angela into bed Tuesday night, they told Jack and me which ride they would go on first - the bumper boats and which treat they would eat rainbow cotton candy. "But the fair lasts a long time this year," I paused to breathe through a contraction. "We can go sometime toward the end."

We arrived at the hospital giddy and punchy from lack of sleep. As the triage nurse examined me, lack cracked jokes. Each time I laughed, more fluid sipped from my body. The nurse rolled her eyes at Jack. When they'd wheeled me up to a

When they'd wheeled me up to a labor and delivery room, dressed me in a backless hospital gown, and hooked me up to an IV, my abor progressed slowly, Jack and I walked Japs around hallways, past fourth floor, down endless, shiny linoleum hallways, past the reception area and back to my room for 80 long minutes. I would have three strong contractions in a row, three contractions in a row, three minutes apart. Then the next contraction wouldn't come for 6

pitocin to the IV dripping into my arm. A synthetic form of the hormone arm. A synthetic form of the hormone that causes labor to progress, priocin is supposed to make your contractions stronger, more regular, and closer together. I sat in a rocking chair and tried to read a magazine while lack dozed on the bed. My contractions got stronger. Every four or five or sax minutes, I felt a tensing low in my belly. As I closed my eyes and started to breathe deeply, five or six extremely sharp steak knives stabbed me halfway between my belly button and my pubic bone. Then the pain wrapped around my back and radiated down through my hip joints into my thighs.

I asked one of the nurses when I might be able to have an epidural. An epidural is a nerve block that allows you to feel your contractions without feeling any pain. "We'll have to wait until your contractions are more regular," she told me. "You still have a ways to go."

For the next three hours my contractions continued to grow more intense. They never became regular. At 11 a.m., the nurse added here," he told them. "Things are going pretty slowly. We thought we'd have the baby by now." Afternoon sun glared outside the window. Jack-had long since stopped telling jokes. I spoke only when spoken to.

At 2:00, my doctor examined me. "You're about three-and-a-half centimeters dilated and 60 to 65 percent effaced." Since you can't push the liaby out until your cervix dilates to 10 centimeters and effaces or thins out 100 percent, I still had a lot of work to do. I wanted to weep with discouragement. Then my doctor said the magic words. "But you can go ahead and have the epidural. There's no reason for you to suffer." Five minutes later the angel of mercy, otherwise known as the anesthesiologist, wheeled her cart into the room. She made me scooch to the edge of the bed and curl around my belly while she inserted a tiny needle into the space around my spinal cord. Ten minutes later, I lay on my side smiling at lack. Each time a contraction came. I could feel the pressure as it wrapped around my belly. But no steak knives stabbed me. I took a deep breath and drifted off into a nap.

A little before 4:00, the nurs examined me and called my doctor.

Another nurse came into the room and started setting out shiny surgical instruments and metal bowls. Someone piled towels and blankets near the warming table where they would put the baby.

At 4:35, I pushed my little boy into the world. The doctor let Jack pull him from my body and lay him on my belly. His scrunchy, blue turtle face, covered with what looked like cold Crisco, looked up at me and blinked. Jack and I laughed and wept. The doctor and nurses congratulated us. The girls, after all, were not disappointed
