And Our Next Pretty Lady Is...
By Matthew Lickona

There are so many beautiful people in San Diego. People just do not realize it. It's totally unappetizing.
— San Diego, mobile agent director

Fashion magazine pretty pages are all a bit of a pretension. It's a little far from the reality of what it means to really be pretty. It's just a way to show off what you think is pretty.

Andrea Jenkins, mobile agent director

We are going to flash a picture of the pretty lady in the magazine.

There are many reasons for buying an LG digital phone. The most important is Real Value. The smallest CDMA phone in the world. *A mere 2.67 inches tall and a mere 4.68 inches wide. *So easy to hold, so easy to carry. A phone that’s easy to use. A phone that’s a pleasure to use. But more than that, an LG digital phone is a phone that’s built to last. A phone that’s built to perform. A phone that’s built to give you the best service possible. A phone that’s built to meet the highest quality standards. A phone that’s built to be the best. A phone that’s built to be the best for you. A phone that’s built to be the best for everyone. We Love
Our Country,
But We Hate
Each Other
It all started because of a huge dust storm and a dinner date with Tstrings Bergman. By the time it was over, I had played myself out of a month's pay, a group of San Diego physicians, dentists, optometrists, pharmacists, nurses, medical technicians, and pilots had formed a loose association that would become the Flying Samaritans.

For 37 years, the Samaritans have delivered monthly medical and dental services to villages in rural California with voluntary labor, private funding, and donated supplies. The day the Samaritans idea was in motion, Ahren Mellett (Mr. S.T) was the control of six benches, a busload of food, and a rack of mail.

As in all storms, in 1968, a high wind blew the mail. A sandstorm, Ingred Bergman, and the flying samaritans.

SUGAR IN YOUR EARS

That day, the notion of corn as buttering with vitality that one could hear in getting taller did seem remote, even laughable. Overhead a leader as sagged, menacing. A chill breeze slashed across the fields. The tallest corn anywhere on the China property barely cleared two feet, and it was growing at a slower rate than almost any other corn crop in the China family's history on this property.

There was a time I might have assumed that the growth rate of their corn crop wouldn't matter much to the Chinese. I thought of corn, then, as a productive vegetable, one of those least likely to turn up in the kitchens of great restaurants or the columns of food critics. But renowned chefs make pilgrimages to the Kunde Safa Fuy property. Influential writers such as Ruth Reichl of the New York Times and Jeffrey Steingarten (The Man Who Ate Everything) have raved about the produce there. In 1992, a lengthy New Yorker magazine profile of the China operation detailed some of the elements that explain this success. Among them is a willingness to produce such crops as more diastrawberries, tomatos, black stuffing beans, purple Chinese long beans, and more.

In the centered image, where beans are...

A Pianist for Almost All Seasons

If every pianist were as sound as Alfred Brendel, there would never be a bad performance of anything in the literature.

That Alfred Brendel is one of the most contemporary pianists is something everyone knows. He is one of the most respected and admired musicians of our time. He is a pianist who has an innate understanding of the music he plays, and who is able to bring out the essence of the composition. His playing is characterized by a sense of rhythm, phrasing, and nuance, which is truly remarkable.

Brendel is a master of the Romantic repertoire, but he is also capable of playing contemporary music. His interpretations are always fresh and original, and he is able to bring out the most subtle nuances of a piece. His playing is always characterized by a sense of drama, and he is able to create a powerful sense of tension and release.

Brendel is a true artist, and his playing is always a pleasure to hear. His interpretations are always fresh and original, and he is able to bring out the most subtle nuances of a piece. Don't Let Satan Play with Your Mind
When I ask what she remembers about Africa, she repeats four times that her mother and father died.

The little girl who was speaking walked back to her place in the Mirada Children's Choir.

Sylvia's mother, the director of the choir, had been singing about the power of music to lift the spirits. She knew how difficult it was for the children to lose their parents, but she believed that music was a tool for healing.

As she sang, the children closed their eyes, lost in the magic of the music. They were transported to a world where their problems didn't exist, where they could feel the love and care of their parents once more.

Music is a universal language, transcending all boundaries. It has the power to heal, to console, and to bring people together.

In the end, the children's voices blended into a beautiful harmony, a testament to the strength of the human spirit and the enduring power of music.

Every now and again the mood will shift to Instant Sentiment or Instant Inspiration.

On their first novel for Columbia, the usual four-person genre-formula generally assumes that a movie is no more than a collection of incidents, each of which has been randomly selected and arranged to fit the plot. But when the incidental elements are so closely related to the plot, it becomes necessary to create a structure that is as complex as the plot itself. This is what has happened here. I regard myself as the salmon queen of San Diego.

The first time I visited Avenue Room Restau- rant at the La Jolla Shores Inn, I found the restaurant "beautiful and elegantly decorated," with a "warm and inviting" atmosphere. The menu featured "fresh and flavorful" dishes, and the service was "excellent.

PICTURE STORY

by the San Diego Historical Society

Celebrating the Escondido grape harvest.

Since 1925, Frank Curran, whose tenure as a San Diego lawyer ran from 1963 to 1971, offered the following tribute to his 1960 oral history, which he died in 1962.

"The two cities in North County in those days 1920s were the rather liberal little town of Oceanside, to which the Curran family moved in 1919 where the bootleggers and everybody else hung out, and the real strict town, where the KKK and the rest of them hung out, in Escondido. There was constant conflict between the two cities, in a sense, except on holidays. On the Fourth of July all Escondido came over to Oceanside. On Easter Day of September 7th, which was [California] Admission Day, Oceanside went to Escondido. So, at least, there was an exchange of holidays between the two cities."
