AT THE TURN OF THE CENTURY, they were called orphans, and they lived in a home on five acres in Balboa Park. Those who weren't orphans were "half-orphans," "abandoned chiidren," or "those for whom we temporarily provide." The San Diego Children's Home was built in the days when a home was supposed to look like one, and it did: three stories, all wood. White paint, brick chimneys, balconies, and dormers on the corner of 16th and Ash. At Christmas, the children were treated to a ride past the San Diego Free Public Library on a wooden-wheeled, flatbed truck that had been decorated with ribbons and boughs by the Elks.

Rose, Bill, Agnes Miller Wade, Betty, Uncle Arthur

By 1913, the number of children needing beds on any given day was over 90. That was the year a Mr. and Mrs. Jennings gave the children's home $10,000 to build a nursery called the Nellie-Inez Cottage. Mr. Jennings and the members of the board agreed to furnish the cottage — despite the extra cost — with hardwood floors, tiled bathrooms, fireplaces with ornamental tiles, and "other features of beauty." This was for babies and children under five.

Who F Cares About Soup?

I'm calling in response to an "Of Note" that I read recently in your Calendar section. I wrote one about a couple weeks ago about Richard Meltzer, I believe his name is, a review on Brian Setzer. So I said, I got to give this guy a second chance, so I got today's Reader and I gave him a second chance. What I did first was I read the What I did first was I read the first Of Note. That was written by Gina Arnold about Bone Thugs-n-Harmony. They were mentioned, literally, in the secand word of the review, and the whole review was about them. So then I skipped Richard's review of a band that I just love nesies of a band that I just love and I went to the one on the Beastie Boys, and that one was written by William Crain. And that one, too — the whole OI Note had something to do with the Beastie Boys and something about their music. So then comes Richard's, in the middle, about a board that I just love the Cigar Store Indians. And I read the entire thing, and I read the entire thing in some soup place and finding out every single soup be Las ever been, or he has ever lasted, or Campbell s whoever i, or Campbell's whoever has ever done, and then finally he tells me there are three Cigar Store Indian soups. I don't think that has much to do with the band and their performances, if you get what I mean. Who f cares about soup Talk to us about the band and get rid of Richard — or should I say, "Dick" Meltzer.

You Guys Are Dishonest

1 stopped reading your publi-cation some time ago — kept striking out with my Personals ad. However, when I saw the cover of your September 3 is-sue ("The Hell with Ted Leitner The Hell with Tony Gwynn"), I had to pick it up.

Congratulations on affirm-

Congratulations on affirm-ing my previous decision. This so-called "article" (should be labeled an editorial) was biased and misleading. It suggested that the city will be shelling out over $400 million to build the Padres a new ballpark down-town. In fact, the Padres' own-ers are shelling out well over $100 million, guaranteeing all cost overruns, and putting up their franchise as collateral! Compare this deal to ones given Baltimore, Cleveland, Denver, and Phoenix — and to the ones being proposed in Montreal and Seattle.

I should sum this up suc cinctly by saying you guys suck. I will instead say something worse: you guys are dishonest. Bill Sornson

Flavian Amphitheater Or A Papyrus Reading Center?

In response to "The Hell with Ted'Leitner, the Hell with Tony Gwynn": Some 2000 years ago the Flavian Amphitheater hosted the Flavian Amphitheater hosted the latest sporting events. Dwaffing all other outdoor theaters of the time, it held nearly 50,000 screaming fans. I am surv Vespasian, the emperor of Rome at the time, never envisioned his feram of a great amphitheater would carry over time and space, thousands of years later to a land both foreign in place and in tongue. Some people have that sumedient today, and in the same deal, and the same deal to the heated debates Romans must have had. "It costs too much" or "It is imprecial" or even Anza-Borrego Desert. Some-day San Diego County may be as well known for its wildlife, outdoor activities, and diverse geography as for Shamu, the and Wild Animal Park. That's the goal of the San Diego Ecotourism Commit-tee, a nine-month-old group of local business people, eco-logical groups, politicians, and tourism marketers. Worldwide, ecotourism is segment of the general hospi-tality industry. It promotes an area's unique natural features and active-recreation opportunities. According to a survey by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the total economic benefit from nature- and wildlife-oriented recreation in America is nearly $40 billion a year. It supports 766,000 jobs and contributes $3 billion to state and federal tax coffers. A nationwide survey on recre nationwide survey on recre-ation and the environment found that between 1983 and 1995, participation in back-packing was up about 73 per-cent, hiking 93 percent, and bird watching 155 percent. "My vision is to see San Diego as the number-one eco-tourism destination in the United States," says Michael Klein. "It has all the raw ma-Klein, "It has all the raw ma-terial. I don't know of a county in the United States that is as diverse as what we've got." Klein, with his partner Claude Edwards, run FLITE Tours and and I said, okay, let's say peo-ple [who come to San Diego for some other reason] stay one extra day to do wildlife viewing. And let's be conser-vative. Let's not say everyone stays, because you're dealing with conventioneers as well as tourists. But, hypothetically, 10 percent of them stay for one extra day with their fam-ilies. The industry potential for the region is $1 billion." To arrive at this, Klein used

1996 visitor counts from Con-Vis (about 4 million), San Diego's per diem food/lodging rate of $110 a day, and the county's 'economic benefit' multiplier of 2.4, provided by SDSU's economics depart ment. This multiplier is used to calculate the financial benefit of an industry to a specific region. But [ecotourism] has to be identified, it's got to be marketed, and it's got to be a

It's just a matter of coordinating efforts and taking advantage of what altourism department...and no specific goals to promote the region as a nature destination." Slater's summit was intended to begin the process of educating the business community and bringing together envi-ronmental, agricultural, and even historical groups to form a network of potential ecotourism destinations.

One example of a wildlife-oriented travel destination cited at the summit was the town of Cape May, on the sandy southern peninsula of New Jersey, It's considered the number-one birding location in the United States. With rel-atively little else to offer in the mayors, councilmembers, and ecology and tourism repre-sentatives heard presentations by business and wildlife way of tourist attractions, in way of fourist attractions, in 1996 birding alone brought in $31 million to the commu-nity's hotels, restaurants, and presentation, it was full of dol-lars-and-cents things," says Klein." I took some base statis-tics over the past couple of years for the tourism industry, other businesses. From Slater's eco-summit came a mission statement for the project, "To promote the San Diego region's unique entional opportunities that en-hance the area and preserve those sites and stimulate eco-nomic development." The first summit also produced an action committee of environ mental and tourism representatives, chaired by the director of North County Convention and Visitors Burcau, Cami Matson. The committee is now establishing criteria for identifying feasible destina-tions for tourists. The com-mittee meets every other month in the SANDAG offices.

Says Klein, "We sent out a 'Does your facility have a vis itors center, educational pro-grams, environmental preser-vation projects, interpretive vation projects, interpretive materials, handicap access 'What are your hours of op-eration?' 'Is your facility sea-sonal?' 'Can you count the numbers who visit your facil-'ty?' Because," says Klein, "you can't say how well your eco tourism marketing is doing unless you can measure it. If you can't measure it, you can't manage it."

Edwards cites Locw's Coronado Bay Resort, on the Silver Strand, as one San Diego busi guests. According to a Loew's spokeswoman, "A lot of properties offer fitness classes, sailing, golf. But we find that people these days are looking for something different. For the last four years, in cooperation with the Chula Vista Nature Center, we've offered beach-to-bay nature walks to our guests on weekends. In De-cember we started bird-watching tours of the area and have three more scheduled this year. We're so close to the nathat it's an easy thing for us to do. There are more than 60 resident bird species in our area alone. And all these things have been very well received by our guests."

The ecotourism committee sees potential destinations beyond San Diego's many nature or wildlife preserves. City parks, gardens, vineyards, and wineries or other agricultural locations, museums, busi-nesses like Wild Birds Unlimquestionnaires.

Another project identified at the summit was a San Diego at the summit was a San Diego version of a bird-watching map offered by the Texas tourism office. Portions of Texas have been popular birdwatching destinat ins. But San Diego County offers visitors more species of birds (468) than any other U.S. county because of its diverse habitat. The colorful, glossy, fold-out map of Texas shows major viewing spots and their access roads on one side, and on the back, number keys identify the habitat, what you can expect to see in each location, local government and chamber of commerce offices in the area, and other pertinent informa tion. "At the summit." says Klein. "this was a recommen-dation of something that the region here should consider looking at. But was it a genuine conversion or a commitment of convenience! Judges have seen all sorts of courtroom and cell conversions claimed by prisoners seeking sympathy from the court.

Levy's lawyer Michael Pancer denies any such possibility.

"There's no way that that could be true in this case....
When we originally went for sentencing in Fred's case, sentencing in Fred's case, there was no mention made of the conversion that he went through. Both the government and the defense were pretty much in agreement with what the sentencing should be. So the issue of sentencing really played no role in Mr. Levy's conversion.

Let's enjoy the hell out of this one. Right now we can say San Diego beat a good team, Buffalo, 16 to 14 on a September Sunday afternoon at Qualcomm Stadium. We estly say that the Bolts are undefeated.

Before us, lie muddied and evil roads leading to Tennessee, Kansas City, New York, and Indianapolis. But that trip has yet to begin. Now is the time to bask and glow. "We are undefeated." Say it to yourself, your friends, relatives, beggars on the street, your best-liked clerk at the neighborhood porno store, the ever gracious postal employee; in fact, say it to each and every personhood you rub up against during the rest of the week. Get it out now while the getting is good.

The fact is, San Diego got lucky early and stayed lucky until the last moment of the game. Do not be deceived, that 39-yard chip-shot Buffalo's Steve Christie hooked with three seconds left to play was only the last of

First, let's have the dessert. That Ryan Leaf boy looks to be a comer, as Granddaddy used to say when speaking about the newest appliance dealer to hit town. Leaf made all the expected mis-takes: throwing four interceptions (two were saved from the record book by Buffalo penalties), trying to make plays that weren't there, calling audibles at the wrong time, throwing passes when he should have taken a sack. Leaf had precisely sack. Leaf had precisely the game you'd expect from a rookie. At close of business last Sunday, Leaf had carned the following stats: 192 yards passing (16 of 31), two interceptions, and one six-yard touchdown pass. If a veteran quarterback did that for two or three weeks in a row, the world would be enriched by the addition of another insurance salesmap.

But Leaf has a warrior's spirit. He will But Leaf has a warrior's spirit. He will fight. In between mistakes, you could glimpse his core: great poise, fearlessness, imagination, magnificent athleticism. This guy could be great. There are a lot of ifs: if guy could be great. There are a lot or its in the Chargers can keep him, if he doesn't get hurt, if he learns quick, if, if, if, if, which is the best you can get out of sports. But, if he gets past 45 ifs like Joe Montana and Dan Marino did. Leaf could be a great one gets past 45 its like Joe Montana and Dan Marino did, Leaf could be a great one. The Chargers defense had five sacks, three sacks by Rodney Harrison along with 12 tackles and a forced fumble. Give that man a raise. The game ball belongs to John

ing. He missed the last eight games of '97 with an injured right knee. That's the one body part you don't want to hurt if you're the team field goal kicker. There were ques-tions about Carney. And he answered them. He came back and nailed three field goals from 47, 48, and 54 yards out.

Now that we've had dessert, let's go back and eat the vegetables. In the third quarter, with the Chargers up 10-0, not-a-NFL-quarterback Doug Flutie came in for Buffalo's starter Rob not-a-household-name Johnson, and threw a 43-yard touchdown quarter, Flutie had his team leading 14 to 13. This is a problem. A hideously familiar

As they have for years, the Chargery incurred key penaltics, they dropped balls, and special teams went south. The Bolts could not go in for the kill when they had Buffalo down. And where was Natrone Means, the human tank? Give him the ball and he will get the ball and he will get you the yards. It's that simple. Means had 20 carries for 67 yards. He should be running 25 to 30 times a game. Not counting the Chargers' final possession, Means ran consecutive plays just twice. Beathard and Kilbride should do junch. Kilbride should do lunch

The Chargers are undefeated because Buffalo was determined to lose. That's not going to happen every week That's not going to hap-pen in Kansas City.

"How about a quesadilla stuffed with poached Alaskan salmon, with a mixture of dill, capers, red onion, and sour cream, served with roasted tomatillo, lime, and avocado salsa? Or lime, and avocado salsa? Or perhaps a fresh artichoke steamed, grilled, and served with a triple-mustard dill sauce? Barton knew the menu. He came regularly to the Adams Avenue Grill. But I was new, and the waiter was on a roll. "Another popular appe-tizer is our crab and scallops Arlan also has one of those sweet personalities. When I told him he had a four-cenright lung, his immediate reaon was, "I'm worried about my parents." They are in their 80s and had just sold the house in which they had lived for decades. Arlan had promised to help them move in a cou-ple of months, and he did not want to add to the trauma of their moving. We talked over his situation for a while and decided it would be best to decided it would be best to finish "staging" (determining where it had spread) his can-cer before he told his parents so they would know whether he would undergo surgery. The process of diagnosing and staging cancers still scares me, because the results allow us to predict whether the patient is going to die from the cancer or have a decent shot at living long enough to die of something else. Arlan is the same age as Jerry, my tacled engineer and also a great worsening cough and shortness of breath. Listening with my stethoscope to the breath sounds in his chest, I heard wheeres, indicating mucus obstructing the small airways toward the periphery of the bronchial tree, and rales (rhymes with "tales" or "pals," depending on whom you ask), the crackling tissue-paper sounds caused by that fluid in the lung tissue at the end of those small airways. I treated him with antibiotics and two types of inhaled medication. and when I saw him one weel later he was somewhat bet-ter. Three weeks later, though, he wasn't better, so I ordered a chest X-ray. "Iim, you will not believe this guy's X-ray," the radiologist informed me over the phone the next day. "He has something awful going on in his chest, probably cancer, maybe infection, maybe both You have to see this." After finishing with that morning's patients, I walke I the two blocks to the radiology department to see the ugly picture. Three quarters of Jerry's chest was white: only his right upper white: only his right upper chest showed the dark-gray translucency of normal lung tissue. I had never seen anything Names are magic. If you name a kid John, he'll grow up a different kid than if you named him Rudolph.

- John Gardner in a Paris Review interview

Polly started out as Katy. I hardly remember Katy now. I remember a few odd facts about her and not much of her feel. She was an only child; her parents divorced when she was a toddler; she grew up alone with her flighty, gorgeous, and slightly loony, heartbreaking little mother.

As did I, Katy grew up in postwar Manhattan. I like to dwell upon those years between 1946 and the summer, in 1950, when the North Koreans crossed the 38th parallel into South Korea. I can't tell you why because I do not know. I do know that in 1946 I had just come from my grandmother's Arkansas farm, straight to Manhattan. I had never heard so much and so many different noises. I had never seen so many people and all of them so different. My head must have been spinning. I flinched against the noise, the soot, the fast-moving crowds. Puerto Ricans, Negroes, any male of any color with a pencil mustache frightened me. I remember the stench of summer garbage and the sweet perfume of oranges being squeezed near the counter at the Chock Full o' Nuts. I remember the orange halves, squeezed dry and hollow, heaped up in a zinc bucket. Something about the Manhattan light sticks in my memory: yellow light, flaring up dark

CHRONICLES

They seemed like convalescents coming from a long illness, slowly back to health.

Katy was a cute and mildly knock-kneed brown-eyed kid who wore her hair in long braids tied at the end with grosgrain ribbons. She took piano lessons and prospered in school. In her teenage years, Katy grew into a tall, limber, lissome, wasp-waisted brunette. I gave Katy good breasts, bouncy and firm. I noted that a line of dark hair ran from her belly button to her mons veneris. Unwashed, she had what I think of as "brunette body odor," a civet cat's sexy musk mixed with stagnant pond funk that once men and boys sniff it, they never forget. Katy showered twice a day. She used Lifebuoy swap and harshly scrubbed her-self, from forehead down to long bony toes. One day she bor-rowed her mother's beavy Gillette razor and shaved away the line of dark hair. In less than a week, the line of hair grew back, darker and thicker. She felt desperate.

Katy's easy excitability dis-comfited her. Sins of the flesh worried her sick. She never worried her sick. She never touched herself there, never. She feared "going the whole way" and subsequent loss of reputa-tion. She feared that if she per-mitted her maidenhead's punc-ture, if she did it once, she'd want to do it do it do it all the

The more I wrote about Katy, the less I liked her. Katy became too pretty, too happy, and with the exception of her worries about going the whole way and too well adjusted and too much a "positive thinker." Katy seemed a "positive thinker." Katy seemed to curry favor with the page. She rubbed against its surfaces she fawned, as a kitten will, purring and rubbing. She began to remind ne of girls I knew in high sch. ol, peppy and popular girls who wore circle pins on Peter Pan collars, ran for student council treasurer, longed to be given a letterman's jacket, and ceited when a friend got tapped as when a friend got tapped as cheerleader. When, finally, I give up and dismissed Katy from her role as narrator, what I wrote in my notebook was: "Maybe this Katy could fead a reader through a Reilbook short story, but the direct manage a nowl through a Redbook short story, but she'd never manage a novel. She's too good a girl, too anx-ious to please. Blood-guilt does not encumber her. She's made, not born. She does not require

Katy's being such a nice girl, of course, is my entire fault. I was apprehensive about larding my heroine's carcass with my own past. I worried that I'd make her too much me and too

In my anxiety to distance my heroine from myself I made her a brunette. I was born with strawberry-blond curls that grad-ually turned auburn. I am ashamed to say that this peculiar business of not underpeculiar business of not under-standing brunettes extends to the dog world. Years ago, when I still lived at home with my hus-band Jack, we had Hugo, a roun-red standard smooth-coated red standard smooth-coated dachshund. Jack and I late one night decided that nothing would do but that for breeding pur-poses we acquire a female dachshund for Hugo. We decided, why, I do not recall. that we wanted a black-and-tan. I felt bad, not badly, but adjectivally bad, about giving up on Katy. I was reminded of my childbearing years when occasionally my period didn't start on time. As days passed without the trickle of blood, I began to suspect I was pregnant I began to wonder, "Boy or girl! Thegan to choose names, Edward and Nathan and Jeremiah and Elizabeth and Emily. — Wallace Stevens,
"Questions Are Remarks"

Two weeks after starting my novel, and already I was in the market for a new heroine. I was disgusted with myself. I was also pleased. I told myself I was learning to cut my losses. I don't know quite what that phrase means, but I like the grin-and-bear-it, swaggering, masculine sound: "cut my losses." Then I told myself what I used to tell myself real thing. I had to tell myself something.

I felt scared, I felt lost, I felt lonesome. I felt empty.
I didn't know what to do.
Here I was, with this störy. I knew its beginning. I knew its end.

I knew some of what happened in the middle. What happened had to happen to someone. Where was she? I did what T.S. Eliot said to do in the second of the Four Quartets, I waited, I waited with-hope for the wrong thing. I waited without thought, for I was not ready for thought. While I waited, I scribbled in my notebook, I typed into my computer. Each time I flipped open my note-book or clicked on the com-puter file titled "NOVEL" I came home to an empty house. Home, Eliot goes on to say in that sec-ond quartet, "is where one starts from." I began to wish I'd kept Katy.

But Katy, by then, was dead and buried. Eaten by beetles and veiled by ants.

I felt guilty. I too quickly turned my back on Katy. I too quickly stood, irritably shook myself off, and walked away. I did not let her steep. I did not let her darken the water that wants to carry my story.

The facts are, the truth is, I did not make the effort to understand Katy and what it takes to grow a character. I did not make the effort to understand mysel Did Katy scare me? Or did she simply bore me? I won't, I don't think, ever know the answer to those questions. Why I won't is that I got her past high school. I got her to shave off that line of dark hair that ran from her belly button down to her mons, and then I stood up, walked out of the room, and shut the door. I shut it hard. I slammed it. O, Reader, be patient. Be for I am more wretched. Every mean, vicious act I lend my novel's characters is a mean, vicious act I have committed or longed to commit: every filthy thought is my thought. If I started, this very moment, washing my hands, if I scrubbed them in caustic lye, if I washed through every hour until the world's ashy end, my hands would never be clean.

Sunday school teachers some-times speak of the Bible as the story of God's relationship with His people. I think that there's a way in which a novel, sub specie aeternitatis, is the story of its author's relationship with his characters. I think that charac-ter, in fiction, in addition to everything else that everyone else says it is, is an argument between an author and her characters. Yeats's statement found is rather endlessly quoted: "We make out of the quarrel with others, thetoric, but of the quar-rel with ourselves, poetry." My experience, as a writer, tells me that the creation of character in fiction also grows out of a quar-rel, a struggle, with myself. The action of character in even the most apparently formal and old-fashioned novel is also like, in

- W.B. Yeats's letter to the editor of the Daily Express (Dublin, 27 Feb. 1895; published in Col-lected Letters, vol. 1, ed. by John Kelly, 1986) It's one thing to kill off a char acter after 200 pages. By then you know every room in every house in your story. You've opened and examined the contents of every dresser drawer. You know what size shoe each character wears, his favorite needs and who it needs to tell it. You know this clear down to re on the last page, ever

When these characters happen upon one another in the aisle that run between barracks' beds chat about weather and politics and who's been called by an and who's been called by an author and who's not been called. Yet the courtesy among these characters of higher and lower status remains elaborate and perfect. The difference, couched meast simply, between character in genre fiction and character in serious fiction is expressed by Martin Ruber, a ram whose beard gives to an extraordinary length.

grew to an extraordinary length. Buber wrote in I and Thou about two kinds of relationships. There's the "I-It" relationship, basically a monologue in which the user harangues the used and the used is always a means to an end. There's the "I-Thou" relationship, a dialogue between free equals, freely and equally loved, who treat each other as ends and never as means only.

If you write or hope to write, no one will take such a fanatical interest in you as will your potential characters. Truly, they are your guardian angels. They dream your life as you lead it. They hum the contents of your consciousness. They hallucinate

Less dramatically, you may sense them near you on late afternoons or early mornings. You will not know why the room seems suddenly why the room seems suddenly crowded, or who left open on your desk the helpful Wallace Stevens poem. Who doe, arend the page at the upper right? Or does it seem some nights, when you gaze out your window, that the face that looks take it and your own? That the gaze it gives back is more trusting than yours? When you are at your desk and story send, does a voice beg you never, never to give up? That means so much to me, that a woke, humid in my ear, urgs me never to surrender.

They're the newest "young victims," the ones who have just been picked up by police responding to calls of abuse or abandonment.

The big white house was torn down in the '20s and replaced by a new one, Spanish stucco this time, with an auditorium for the Christmas pageant, a dining room, a library, a little girls' dorm, a middle girls' dorm, and a big girls' dorm.

When the police brought Rose Bryant there in 1940, she was 10. She came with her 13-year-old sister Betty, 7-year-old Bill, and Charlie, who was 4. Rose would sleep in the little girls' dorm, and Betty would be a "middle girl." Bill would go to the boys' cottage, and the baby, Charlie, would live in the nursery. But first Mrs. White led them to a room full of second-hand clothes.

Rose says orphanage life taught her to be organized. Her possessions belonged in a locker at the foot of the bed. Every morning, according to the rules, she pulled back her sheets and blanket to let the bed air while she ate breakfast and brushed her teeth. Bath day came twice a week - tubs for the girls and showers for the boys. On Sat urday evenings Mrs. White scrubbed the backs of the girls and told each one, "Now don't forget to wash between your toes," a code for all the places you were supposed to wash but not talk about. If you ran more hot water than you needed to cover your legs, someone would come in and turn it off. If you forgot to scrub your teeth with the bamboo toothbrush and salt-and-soda tooth powder someone would come in and get you back out of bed. In flu season, you lined up for a dose of cod-liver oil.

Rose also learned to be her she puts it, some smarts. If she didn't, she feared she would always be a fool.

IS LASIK RIGHT

The breakthrough I've been waiting for in LASIK procedure to correct nearsightedness and astigmatism has finally become available!

Until now, the instrument that was available to create the corneal "flap" had the potential to cause severe complications if it was not set up properly. A new upgraded instument has recently become available in San Diego which makes LASIK a very safe procedure with no potential for the severe complications that were possible with the original instrument.

Dr. Jay Berman is one of San Diego's most experienced eye specialists and has een performing refractive surgery since 1982. Dr. Berman is an Assistant Clinical Professor of Ophthalmology at UCSD and maintains a private practice in San Diego.

To learn more about LASIK and whether it would help you reduce your dependence on glasses or contacts, please call us for a compliconsultation. We are happy to offer you.

Rose had no one to ask about this. At some point, too, a girl in Rose's Gorm began getting into other beds after lights-out. Her intentions, Rose hints, were sexintentions, Rose hints, were sex-ual. "She tried to get in bed with me, and I refused," Rose says, and I thought maybe I'd better report this to somebody, 'cause she was a big girl, and I didn't trius what her motives were." So Rose told the assistant matron, and told the assistant matron, and the next week, when Rose was playing on the playground, she saw the two of them walking hand in hand. This made Rose feel that she couldn't trust the matrons anymore.

Either to economize or to build character, the children did build character, the children did some of the work. The boys raided and trimmed. So called "little" gifs swept the dinning come after dinner. Besides boards and knickknacks, collectors may have velvet paintings. French-impressionist-style oil paintings glass pinball art, or photographs of surfers. The velvet paintings done by a Hawaiian named Andre date to the '40s and are, according to Seymour, both lifelike and beautiful, although "Elvis on velvet killed the look."

The earliest surf photographs were taken in the 1930s by the late Tom Blake.
"He made a phywood box, and he would put his 4"x 5" view camera — which takes one picture — in the box, paddle outside of Waikiki or wherever, sit there, open the box up, take the camera out, take a picture, and paddle back in." The results, Seymour says, are fabulous.

San Onofre beach, May 1941

Tomorrow afternoon at 4:00, collectors can preview Tom Blake photographs, dozens of vintage boards, surfer luggage, a Hawsiain guitar, a sterling silver Duke Kahanamoku spoon, surf posters featuring San Diego locations, and more when Allan locations, and more when Allan Seymour and Quissilver present the Pacific Coast Vintage Surf Auction. Surf pioneers such as Greg Noil. Bruce Brown, Phil Edwards, Larry Gordon, and Dale Velry will attend the preview, says Seymour. The profound effect clarinetist David Shifrin can make with a slight change of coloration defies description.

The super's quanty was due to a number of factors, primary among which was the assemblage of tal-ent: clarinetist David Shiffin; Violinists ivan Chan and Cathy Meng Robinson of the sterling Miami String Quartet; violist Paul Neubauer; cellist Felix Fan; and pianist Cecile Licad, playing with a sup-ple delicacy that revealed how fine a chamber musician she can be. Another admirable trait of this performance was its tempo, marginally slower than Prokofies' swry and playful version of kleemer mu-sic is usually done, so that along with the perky, invigorating vulgarity there was room for the lively tunes to expand into a touching melancholy. Most striking of all was Shifrin's approach to

Most striking of all was shiftin's approach to the crucial clarine part. Often enough, this is played with something of the squeal and bite of the klezmer-band clarinet, exotic and amusing at once. Shiftin, however, applied a languid, caresing, almost whimpering tone to the imital medody (and frequently thereafter), slightly drawing out the rhythm to achieve a heartbreaking expressivmere a continued with a virtually flawless concert, at the highest teel of musical performance, and only slightly touched by the self-congratulatory tackiness that characterized this summer's festival.

The program began with a performance of Prokofier's Overture on Hebrew Themse that was the most enchanting I have ever heard.

The superh-quality was due to a number of factors, primary among which was the assemblage of talent clarinest 19 weight 5 miles. and musical personality — in the three Fastiasy Pieces by Schumann, which followed. The hall-mark here was the composer's Romantic ardor and reflectiveness, in their shifting alternations, each emotional inputs given a full yet never exager-ated realization. The profound effect Shifrin can make with a slight change of coloration or a barely perceptible swell or diminusendo defies description. In the Schumann, shiftin was joined by pianist Wu Han. This summer, I came to think of Sum-merFest as the WuHanFest, for aside from being, one of the festival's two co-directors, she herself gave seven performances on six programs, mak-ing her the most exposed musician of the series. Her participation in this particular concert, first with Shifrin and then with violinist Ida Kavafian in Saint-Saëns's Opus 75 Sonata, showed Wu Han at her best. In both cases, the piano is in a tion, with the chief weight of musical thought and expression assigned to the clarinet or vi-olin. Throughout, Wu Han demonstrated a olin. Throughout, Wu Han demonstrated a sure sense of the possibilities and limita-tions of this role, allowing the other instrument its prominence, supporting it with energy and grace, and — when the oc-casion demanded it — adding her own, excellently executed intervention in ex-actly the right style and at exactly the right level of assertiveness. level of assertiveness.

The Saint-Saëns Sonata nevertheless remained the showpiece of violinistic vir-tuosity the composer intended it as, with Ida Kavafian rising brilliantly to the oc-casion. This was beautiful and sensational fiddling, conveying the work's sentiment, elegance, and glitter with all one could desire of esprit, éclat, panache, and other appropriate French qualities. Like its com-poser's entire veuvre, the Violin Sonata achieves its delectable effects chiefly on the surface. Exquisitely crafted as it is, and so surface. Exquisitely carded as it is, and so idiomatically written for the instrument, it never really grips the heart or mind — but what a pleasure for the mere sense of hearing, especially when played so restfully and with such absolute technical command.

The program concluded with Brahm's Second String Sected, once again with a neusemble bringing together some of the very best of this summer's muscianar he Mainmitten on the Mainmitten of the second String Sected, once again with an ended to the second String Section on the Mainmitten of the Section of the evening, the group took this great work at an expansive pace that allowed its expressive subtleties to flower. Isaac Stern, Cho-Liang Lin (anther SummerFest artist), Jaime Laredo, Michael Tree, Yo-Yo Ma, and Sharon Robinson. I was reminded more of the ripe, spacious performances by the Amadeus Quartet (plus Aronowitz and Pleeth) and by Pablo Casals and company at the Prades Festival in 1952 (with a younger Isaac Stern). The ummerFest Opus 36 was fully their equal, rising to the heights of Brahmsian stylishness in such passages as the boisterous gypsy-like trio of the Scherzo, where one wanted to jump out of one's seat in Sherwood Auiomie that gave this Summer Fest 98 concert its requisite signa-ture, it consisted of David Finckel and Wu Han presenting an ef-fusively inscribed paper plate to resident composer Bruce Adolphe (who fell to one knee Adolphe (who fell to one knee to receive it), along with the an-nouncement that Adolphe had been commissioned to write a piece for the couple to perform at next year's SummerFest — which evidently will carry the fes-tival's relentless Finckel-Wu Han showcasing to new heights. ■

Anything for a Laugh

It resembles a competent imitation of early Neil Simon.

Toadway bound' hopes hum when forgotten plays get revived. Moss Hart's 1948 conneck 1ght Up he Styredes this ferwor by being about the business of show business. The play, ma 50th anniversary revival at the La Jolla Playbouse, is funny (like his partner, George S. Kaufman, Hart knew his way around a one-liner). But at best, Sty resembles a competent imitation of early Neil Simon.

Hart writes like a director. He knows how to get people on and off a stage. Every character en-ters with a flourish and leaves with a splashy exit line. Scenes brim and button with formalist piz-zazz. It's what the characters do when not entering or existing that is troublesome.

THEATER LISTINGS

Beau Jest Lamb's Players is restaging its crowd-pleaser for the second time. Sarah Goldman's "beau," Chvis, is a gentile. Fearing her Jewish par-ents will object, Sarah hives Bob Schroeder from the Heaven Sent Schroeder from the Heiver Sent Excert Agency to play her boythread, Dr. David Sterling, at a family dinner. It sounds simple. But Bob, an aspiring actor, finds-himself in the Arciv Nightmare. He must play the doctor without a script, fligning out his role as he goes along. James Sherman's com-cipt has a day as, "speak for your self, John Adden" quality (the motif of the substitute lever). Here it's modest assertion virining centural resolutions of the property of the pro-tocol of the substitute of the substitute of the pro-tocol of the substitute of the pro-tocol of the substitute of the pro-tocol of the substitute of the substi for the skittish Sarah, who begins to fall for Bob and learns that standing up for oneself doesn't ne-cessistate stepping on someone else. The play is light summer fare, but Lamb's director Kerry Meads stages it for all it's worth. She keeps the pace lively and frames the jokes for best effect. And the cast, especially the opinionals (Combia Geral) best effect. And the cast, especially the originals (Cynthia Gerber, Mike Buckley, Steve Gallion, Trina Kaplan), take it from there. (Note: Lamb's Players added an extension for this popular show.) Worth a try.

The Sneeze In 1988 Michael Frayn performed an act of theatrical colonialism. He bined four of Anton Chekhoy's short comedies with four short stories, the latter rewrit ten as one acts. The combination ows that, even though Chekboy snows that, even though Cheknov initially thought theater was "the venereal disease of the city." he had an innate bent for the stage. The Lamb's Players production reacts against stodgy stagings of Chekhov, treating the one-acts as "jokes" in a vaudeville. If someone falls down, in the right spirit, it's funny. And Chekhov has people falling down all over. At times the show overreacts. It has a dread of dullness, even for a second. Thus the six-person cast kicks up the comedy, even though the plays are funny enough on their own. The evening has striking individual performances: Deborah Gilmour Smyth, as a

Ballard accepted the position as hand direc-tor at Montgomery after leaving Point Lone High School. Not only did he manage to get his kids a gig at this year's Street Scene, but Remo drum-has recently signed on as a sponsor of both his setel and African drum bands. I ask Ballard about his decision to switch schools.

"I left Point Loma at the end of my contract year in June. I had actually pose home to Ari-zona — I was four days from taking a job there. Then there was abig article in the San Diego Union Jabout meļ, and Ed Reed, the director of music for Sweetwater School District, called me at my house and told me about the job. The notes chees tone is the size of the note. The notes themselves are bulges on the top of the drum ar-ranged in diminishing circles. The larger the bulge, the lower the tone; thus, lower tones take up more space. This explains why each bass player is sur-rounded by six full-scale oil barrels, each with three notes. I go back out and have one last chat with Papa. "Keith tells me you're from Trinidad. What materials did you use there?"

Trinidad. What materials did you use there?

"Sometimes a 5-gallon paint drum, 25-gallon coonsul oil drums. There was a company that made coconsul oil, on we used to use their drums. We used to see their drums. We used to see their drums. We used to see all drums to get them, (because) we couldn't jafford to joby them. After the wat, we started getting these $55-gallon oil drums from the U.S. Naval base in Trinidad."

Gone with the Wind — The most beloved movie ever made from a book by Margaret Mitchell, covering the fate of the Old South from ante-belium days to postbellum days. Birth of a Nation it is not. Southern belles flirt with their beaus, a pregnant lady tumbles down a flight of stairs. Atlanta burns, a wounded war her stains. Atlanta burns, a wounded war hero limps back to the plantation, etc. To borrow an apt remark from the ruby lips of Scarlett O'Hara: Fiddle-dec-dec. With Viven Leigh, Clark Gable, Leile Howard, Olivis De Havilland, and Thomas Mitchellt directed by Victor Fleming, 1939.

Raving Privato Ryan — Steven Spiel-berg's blood- and-gats war movie is at its best when it is most conventional and at its worst when trying for more (Spielberg in a unstabill), and I a very other very conven-tional. Whether or not the filmmaker has achieved his flag waving, trumper blowing goal of bottoring the survivors and the failer at Ornaha Besch, he has it facus bomored a Hollywood genre that had dwindled down close to extinction, and had evolved whenever a straggler would wander along! almost exclusively into the anti-war movie. In his striving for "more," he has certainly supplied plenty of ammunition (so to peak) to the pacifist, but he does not venture so far as to attempt to muddy the reputation of the Last Good War. The essence of this inexcusably long movie (simplest way of attaining "more") is a clear-cut and small-scale mission, albeit an implausible and impractical one: to local; and safe and impractical one to locate and safe-guard a lone paratrosper who is the last surviving of four brothers in the Normandy Invasion. Forget the why of it, though. What matters, to the overating cause, any-way, of resuscitating the conventional Hol-lywood war movie, is the streetypically di-verse team of soldiers and their self-revelations around the campfire and on very sure, sine a banked when we asked for number eight, or gaejang backhan, what the "Chef's Specialties" section of the menu described as "raw crab in a seasoned soy sauce." We went back and forth a few times with our assuring her that, yes, we understood what raw crab was, and with her not quite believing us.

"Well," she said, fingering her order pad, "let me bring you a sample of it and then you can de-

She almost hesitated when she set the saucer

She aimost hesitated when she set the saucer in front of us.

The dish wasn't pretty, a tangle of spiny claws and spindly legs bathed in a dark brown sauce and spindly regional in a dark frown state. Hecked with sesame seeds, thin carrot rounds, and what appeared to be bits of grilled pepper. Across the table from me, my friend, a southern Marylander whose family has for generations eaten crab. looked uncertain.

Minutes later the saucer was empty, soy sauc smudged our fingers and mouths, a messy mound of empty crab shell sat on our placemats, and our eyes scanned the busy restaurant for our waitress. We wanted more

But first we had to convince our waitress to order it. fou get the impression that white people visiting Korea House aren't very adventures iting Korea House aren't 'ery adventuresome and that the thoughtful staff are wary of Caucasian dis-appointment. It's a shame. Most white folks stick to the various barbecues, which are good and fun to play around with on the individual grill set in the middle of your table. Barbecue, however, makes up only a small part of Korea House's menu. Ven-ture beyond and, with a little care, you can have one of the more interesting meals available in the city. The raw crab that so worried our waitress is one of the best things I've ever eaten. I say that knowing even raw carrots frighten some readers. But I don't automatically cotton to the exotic. My friend's the kind who fulminates against turnips. them is the kind who fulminates against turnips. The raw crab had to overcome so many prejudices that its winning us over proves how good it was, Its sweet sauce, laced with dark sesame oil, garlic, and black peper, somehow permeated the entire creature. Rather than obscuring its flavor, the sauce enhanced the crab's sweet, intense essence. Korean food is rough-hewn. You attack crab with your bare hands. You grill meat with you own chopsticks. The half-dozen pan chan, or little side dishes, that come with each meal ring with garlic, hot red pepper, sweet rice vinegar, sesame, and green onion. Many entries pit sweet against soft braining the spicy, only against art. The trick is to balance all this foothrightness with mellower, even bland flaws.

Watch how Koreans, and even the many laparenes, who come to knore it locus compose their mains.

"I was there, buddy, I was there."
The building looks as if it had been a McDon-ald's in a previous incarnation. But inside, all oriental and kind of swank. Large fish tanks, blue carpet, gold metallic wainscoting, imitation marble Formica table tops, silk roses in vases, that golden threefoot laughing Buddha, a red altar with offerings to three black-bearded gods, and a stage for live music that doesn't look as if it's being used. Also lots of waiters, even at this time of morning, when only three families are eating breakfast.

"Spicy Chop Frog in Coconut Milk and Curry," says one of the wall banners. "$12.99." They also have quail, boar, alligator. "Uh, not for breakfast," says Joe. Mr. Le hands him a menu. - with 258 items on it, Joe's eyes glaze.

The first 23 items start with Pho, What's that!" He looks to me. I look to Mr. Le. "Pho mean dish of moude beef soup?" he says. "Vietnamice people like it for breat/fast. Gentle start for the stomach. Popular in the North."

"Difference are pretty subtle," says loo. I look down the items. Pho Chin Nem Gan Gan Stack. Sliced well-done fat-flank, brisker, tendon, and tries. $3.89."

the crisp, bittersweet cabbage giving way to the tender, metal-lic oyster. And I still think of yookhow, the steak tartare we ate at Korea House. The thin strips of very lean raw beef are smoky with sesame oil, slick with egg yolk, and come with slices of fresh garlic and small crisp sticks of Asian pear. Play around with those flavors in your mind, see how they might surprise you, and you'll understand why yook/nw might be worth the risk. Raw egg, raw beef, raw crab, even raw cysters may spook you, but there are risks to be weighed in all of life and few are as pleasurable.

Well. I'd just as soon remember was not thinking about that the Lother day and, personally, I was more impressed with Mother feresa and I feel like there hasn't been any Mother Teresa type in proportion to what there's been for Princess aroun fee death all over again. I'm not into this year anniversary thing they're doing. I think it's in bad taste. It's not publish; selling stores, selling overse, selling what she had to offer. I think it's said, I don't know what it is, but I guess people have a curiosity that runs in that direction. It's not human nature to get into feathstairing and refereng people that have had famous lives.

How does all of the Princess Diana hype strike you?

rebruary, my husband Jack worried about the heat. "You know the rule of thumb?" he asked me one night as I stood in the kitchen unpacking summer, the temperature goes up one degree." Because Jack has lived within 5 miles of the coast all his adult life, San Marcos, 13 miles inland, seemed like El Centro to him. A cold rain beat against the windows and already lack was envisioning a and already Jack was envisioning a summertime inferno.

As pring turned to summer and El Nino's rains sputtered out, tied days gree warmer. During July, the afternooms baked. I ast in the house nursing baby John while swear tolled down my body. Every now and then Jack would walk into the kitcher from his office in the parage, "I's not so hot," I would tell him. "At least ware so at the horer. And it alwary to the proper here were not before it alwary to the proper here."

we've got the breeze. And it always cools off at night." Jack's parents shared his dim assessment of San Marcos's climate. One sunny afternoon in early August, I drove the kids down to Clairemont to visit Jack's mom and dad. When we

van. "We survived," I told her.
Then a week and a half ago, the weather turned hot — really hot.
Texas hot. India hot. Every day we'd Texas hot. India hot. Every day we'd swelter. Every night we'd watch the news. Some smiling weatherman in an air-conditioned studio would tell us, "They set another record today in Vita [five miles west of us). It was 101: "Or, "Excondido [five miles set of us) best the old record of 103 by two degrees today." They were the old record of 103 by two degrees today. Monday morning, we awakened to the smell of smoke. A landfill south of San Marcos had ignited by south of San Marcos had ignited by spontaneous combustion over the weekend. I looked out the window to see long, smog-colored bands hanging in the still, hos air. With my cotton nightgown clinging damply to my skin, I turned to lack and said. "We've moved to Hell."

The day grew hotter. The fans blew air heavy with moisture and smoke around the rooms of our house. Great white thunderheads house. Great white tulnuterreads billowed over the mountains to the east. In the late afternoon, the clouds moved west toward the ocean. As we sat around the dinner table, Jack paused with a fork full of fond halfway to his mouth. "Did you girls hear that?" he asked. We all listened to a low, faraway rumble. "That's thunder," Jack said.

After dinner, the sky turned a After dinner, the sky turned a steely gray, and the wind began to how!, Jack and I walked outside. I held Johnny tight against my shoulder. The girls followed us out onto the sidewalk. The edge of the storm, feathering against the sunset sky, blew over us. The wind carried testing of smoke, and cinders flew ahead of leaves blown from the trees. Every minute or so, lightning lit up the darkening eastern sky. I wondered aloud if a lightning strike hadn't started another fire closer to us.

"Oh, honey." Jack rolled his waved to some neighbors up the street who had also come out to take in the weather. "I'm going in," I told him. "I'm going with you." Five-year-old Rebecca danced nervously between Jack and me. "I don't like this storm, Mommy." Three-year-old Angela ran up the sidewalk toward the neighbors. "I'll go get Angie," Jack said and walked into the wind. Back in the house, the blinds clattered at the windows. A fine layer of dust and soot already covered the sills. I moved quickly

Rebecca looked at me with terror in her eyes. "I'll go get him, Mommy." She ran out the front door, down the walk to the driveway. "Daddy," she cried, near hysteria. "Daddy, come home." Rebe ca raced back up the walk. "I can't find him, Mommy," she subbed. "It's okay, sweetie," I reassured her. "We'll go out together and get him."

Out on the sidewalk, I waved to Jack to come home. The wind tore at my hair. I held Johnny's face against my shoulder so cinders wouldn't blow into his eyes. Jack walked toward me with Angela in his arms, big grins on both their faces. "Isn't this awesome?" he said.
