There are plenty of mas-sage therapists who refuse to do anything sexual. But whether they acknowledge it or net, they benefit from the ones who do. benefit from the enas who do. Kathy sees it differently. Many men come into the spas-with a "stimulation," as she calk it, going on in their genitals. But they have come to a masage spa instead of going out to cruise E1 Cajom Boulevard for hookers. It is clear to Kathy, therefore, that need of these men really that most of these men real!

that most of these men really want genuine body massage, that down deeper than their "stimulation" lies a need for bodily healing. Proud of her muscle work techniques, that's what she gives them, deflecting at the same time their perhaps persistent presaures for sex. When she's done they have received comethine more valuable than something more valuable than what they came in for and rarely, she says, do they complain about the says, do they complain mout it. The outlook of the period the period of the period they are assage thing heat the they are assage thing heat the medical service to the citera, and besides, offering sets apart of the bargain is illegal. If they do is, they run a risk of being busted by the vice. Kathy started doing massage in the early '80s, and on to all east. The ideal of thesi-ing had drawn her to masseg therapy in the first place. Being a single parent with two child drens, however, the fold the pres-sure to care in a period list being booled by the dutter pils being booled is a special period. Being booled the money was alwars to nel:

wanted body work. Since for her the money was always too lit-tle, she ended up working other jobs at the same time. Gradually though, kathy started opening to the idea of a little sex, and her income picked up. She has never gone "all the way" or given ablow job. "Those belong to me," she says. "I also still give no sex to a man who i still give no sex to a man who is precely for it. But if I can tell he has a real need, and I like him. I'll get him off." While I was breaking up with Nancy, I went to Kathy for massage several times. During those sessions he listened to me talk of the divorce at length. And hence sees more 1 wheel if she talk of the disorce at length. And there was more. I asked if she recalled it. "Yes," she says, "I gave you sex then because you seemed to need connection with a woman verybadhy." Now, when it comes to sex, I'm surely as greedy as the next gay. But I appreciated Kathy's compliment. Could ownergo run accord

"But if I get the need, I can go into any bar and get a guy to 'do m And I'm not bragging about somewhat philosophical one-like drawing lines in the sand, the purists stop their therapy somewhere near the gen'tals, determining that line, I suppose, by how likely a guy is to get a hard-on beyond it. One masseuse linew drew the line not at erec-tion but at ejecution. She would accidentally alrows acidentally. any — can do this unless, of coarse, her position would make her inhibited by a fear of being found out. But women don't want to do things like that in the first place. I do think men suffer more emotionally and phys accidentally, always accidentally, brush my penis as she massaged near it, teasing it to an erection that would have to die its own death. Somehow in this approach ically from lack of sexual con nection. You know, men are generally much more depen-dent on women to satisfy their sexual needs than women are the penis has become something other than body at the time the therapist is giving a "full body" massage, exactly the way she advertises her business. Should she refuse to massage the abdom-inal muscles because doing so inal muscles because doing so causes a runnibing in the stom-ach? Penies and stomachs behave differently, but they're both part of that body that needs healing. Conflict of interest surely characterizes my point. Still, this whole business looks like just another hypocrisy of this cul-ture of ours, so confused as it is ture of ours, so confused as it is about most matters sexual. A friend told me about the first serious conversation she had about sex with her daughter, who was 12 at the time. Her daughter had wanted to know whether sex with a man was any good. Yes, there are some nice things about if, the closeness and so on, my friend had told her. "But you have to remember." "But you have to remember, "But you have to remember," she had gone on, "that sex for men is different. To them it's like cat-ing M&Ms." So the advice my friend gave to her daughter that day? Their joy in getting together for chamber music is palpable.

The La Jolla Chamber Music Society began its 1998-99 Sherwood Stries — now re-named the Revelle Series, after a generous endowment by Ellen Revelle Eckis — with a dou-ble celebration. The concert honored the 30th anniversary seasons of both the figurations, and have by this time established a permanent chamber-music culture, with its iden-tifiable style. It is no surprise that New York should be a center for such high-quality perfor-mances of this boantiful and refined body of music, but how lucky we in San Diego are that artists like planist David Golub, violinist Cho-Lang lin, cellist Gary Hoffman, and violist Paul Neubauer (and numerous others, on different

Wantonness In Hillcrest

He brought a smile to my lips by licking the enormous platter clean.

When Paul Somerset and Scott Reams decided to open a Japanese/Pacific Rim restaurant, they found a dilapidated auto repair shop on University Avenue in Hill-crest that seemed to have no prospects for becoming a fashionable cafe. The ave no prospects for a magnetizetis in becoming a fashionable cafe. The ave no prospects for terms of the lease were so favor-able — the landford couldn't believe his good fortune in ob-taining such enterprising young men — the partners dicided to rebuild the place seal in the nature seal in the nature and set the glass windows. With no outside help there hould the such bar, which seats 20. They also built the liquor har, made the boots and tables. Scott Beams even created the free-form metal fish that hang on the walls — before he became interested in food he dabbed in metal sculptures. Paul Somerset was born and raised in Ohn, Hawaii — his tabler worked for C&H Sugar, and Paul boasts laughing that ha had a sweet child hood — and he knows the importance of fresh fails. Somerset and Reams net in Sont Valler in 1999, Sin Diego, Barbanch Lout ter in heid the greatest potential for their work bosines. Hence, One Sught they built the sushi bar, which seats 20. They also

Recipe for a Bag Full of Death

John had killed the chicken earlier that day ...

last of the summer's tomatoes waited on the last of the summer's tomatoes waited on the butther block. A snowy pie of gardel Parmesan sat in a bright ename! bowel. Romaine leaves dripped dry in a steel colander in the sink. And, from the white plastic sack on the breakfast nook table, six chicken free protuched, cold, naked, yel-low, and stiff, john's daughter Sara was fascinated with their toenails.

"I'd really rather not have them in the house,"

To really rather non-nave arrive in use nearest Lyan said. John had killed the chickens carlier that day at a small farm behas in the backcountry. He keeps a few sheep there, and a liama to guard the sheep, and, of course, chickens. Around the farmbouse he grows things like likes and apples that don't do well a this home on the coast. He instudy booght the farm

Lynn bears John's rusic learnings with Traziek detachment. Theirs is a marriage built for the long haul. Lynn has faith that the sheep, chick-ens, hiacs, and luma will, like rough spots in any marriage, gradually disappear over time. After all, John is nor the sort of nan who drinks or womanzes or spends weekends at the golf course with his haddes. In the well-off commanity where John and Lynn live, it in't uncommon for men

John and Lynn live, it and tuncommon for men-John's age to suidenly buy sports cars and leave their wives for flight attendants. John is instead the sort of man who suddenly builds a chicken coop in the back yard. While Lynn and the chil-dren tolerated the chickens in their back yard and at the farm, they never thought that John might actually kill them. Sure, they had complained, as had the neighbors, about Truman, the rouster, and his crack-of-dawn crowing, but they had assumed that Truman, like the hens Roushelle and Sunshine, would live out their days like a family pet. Not long ago, however, Roman, the Mexican caretaker who tends to the farm during the week, announced to John that the rousters had started announce to joint that the costers had started fighting one another and it was time to kill them, and perhaps a few hens from John's costal home, before they grew too old and too tough to eat. "The children have decided," Lynn told John, "that you can't kill any chicken that has a name. Not even Truman."

Lynn and the children had no qualms about Lynn and the children had no qualma shout enting meat. They dink 1 seem to mind anony-mous dead chickens, the ones that came in a Styrefoam container warped; in plastic, Johns treed debating this point with his family at the ens. He suggested that the chickens they accre eating could very well have had names, but the chi-dren wouldn't huy his argument. The idea of eating what they called a "family chicken," a chicken they had named, or even havon casu-ally, was, to them, "disgusting" but it was clear that Jynn and the shift chickens, huy it was clear that Jynn and the children were that their father isn't modern. "It's like we live in the 19th Century" is the sort of thing they whine about the farm, about their father's interest in sheep. about the chickens he bough to raise in a small coop in the back yard of their home on the coast. Lynn bears John's rustic leanings with frazzles but it was clear that Lynn and the children were about to close canks, with the older children whip abort to close canks, with the older chairen whip-ping the younger into self-righterous outrage. He could already see them chanting, "Daddy killed Rosabelle! Daddy killed Rosabelle!" while Lynn stood by, eyeing him with frosty reposed. It was a scenario that would repeat itself endlessly. John a scenario that would repeat itself endlessif, John agreed to kill only anonymous chickens. Several weeks ago he driver with Truman out to the farm where Truman was to be exiled and where Roman had already built a fire and set a ten-gallon pot of water to simmer. Roman comes from rural Mex-ico and has lived in the backcountry for many years. He had difficulty grasping the concept of a "family chicken," although he did allow that Tru-man had a "cute face." The roosters at the farm, however, were not so cute and had been pecking each other bloody. Roman and John chose four to kill. Roman produced a stick with a large wire book attached to one end. It looked, said John, like the book used in vadeville routines to pull comedi-ans off the stage. Roman entered the chicken yard and slipped the hook around a spawking rootext? neck. If e showed John how to hold the bird be-tween his legs, folding its wings back and over themselves so it couldn't straggle and flap itself fee. Roman areased the roosity: neck with three then beeves so in contain starting the and sup a set free. Roman graped the roots off since with three fingers, bending it forward. He then drew a sharp knife across its throat. Blood spurted onto the ground and onto his and John's shoes. For almost a minute blood pulsed from the rooster's neck. When the animal was limp, Roman laid it on the ground.

When John recounts how he killed the next two when join recounts now ne kuice the next two roosters, he speaks with cheerful definance, as if he were thumbing his nose at Lynn and the kids, as if he were saying, "Yes, you're right. I am pre-modern. And being premodern is a good thing!" He was amazed at how easy it was to slit the rooster's neck. When he and Roman were through killing, they dipped the four roosters in the pot of hot water for 10 or 15 seconds to loosen the feathers water for 10 or 15 seconds to loosen the leathers. ("The water must be very, very hot," Roman told John, "but not boiling.") They plucked the roost-ers and tossed the feathers into the chicken yard where the chickens gobbled them up — a sight that made John squeamish. "It seemed like canibalism," he said. Next Roman showed him how to dress the roosters, carefully cutting them open from clo to sternum, careful not to puncture the los his daughter, raced over to in-spect them. "We're having spaghetti for dinner," Lynn said, looking at the rooster's feet but speaking to John. She said the words with such finality that she seemed to mean that not only were they having spaghetti that night but that they would likely have spaghetti, and nothing but spagnetti, and nothing but spagnetti, every night for the rest of their lives. Rooster had no place on Lynn's menus. "Well, I gave one to Roman. He says his wife loves pollos del rancho. You know, country chickens," John said with a forced chuckle.

"T'll bet Sara loves country chick-ens, too. Don't you, sweetheart?" Which is when Lynn told Sara

Roman taught John how to remove the innards, pull out the gall bladder without rup-turing it to take out the sizzard the gall bladder without rup-turing it, to take out the gizzard, strip its membrane, and clean out the undigested feed. A well known Indian lecturer has the view known intrian techner has theorized that we don't actually think with our brains, but with our whole bodies. This has caused some controversy, since it indicates that our gut sense of things can be as valid as our coolly removed intellectual observations.

If you think this is the most insightful thing you have ever heard, you just might have a future with us.

If you think this is ridiculous, you may have a future with us - but for different reasons.
