Beach instead.

As he got back into his car, he felt the weight of Nancy Lee's revolver in his cost porket, heavier than ever. He'd been wanting to get rid of the gun, and the whole Pacific Ocean was handy.

gle and discouraging sound was the timeless pounding of the surf against the cliffs two blocks away. He had guessed wrong, let his hot hunch peter out. Bandage-head had taken the road to Ocean Beach instead.

Despite her wound, Nancy was in too dangerous a frame of mind to have her Enfield returned. He drove toward the ocean

He drove toward the ocean noise to Cave Street, making an illegal U-turn into the steep lit-tle road that meandered along the cliff edge. Then he slowed the car. The headlight beams glanced off the shape of parked cars and knots of people gathered near the railing a hundred yards downhill.

Thursday coasted down abreast of the police cars, braked, and got out. Most of the people and got out. Most of the people were wearing bathoos or dressing grows, and the pajman legs of the weeting lastin of night-dresses showed beneath tears. he drive to Noel Allan's duckhunting spot near Niland in the Imperial Valley takes about three hours from San Diego. The last section, between Highway 111 and the eastern shore of the Salton Sea, is a rutted dirt road, and my Toyota Corolla bottoms out every 50 yards or so. Ahead of me, Allan's Ford Explorer clips right along, raising a cloud of dust that further hampers my driving efforts. At last we park where the road meets the beach on a dike between two freshwater ponds surrounded by a tenfoot wall of salt cedar bushes. A beat-up hatchback is parked there. Standing next to it is a tall, bronzed man, about 70, in hip boois and an unbuttoned tan shirt. "This is Jerry Fink," Allan says, introducing him. "He comes down from Palm Springs to hunt here."

Noel Allan of Pacific Beach has been hunting this spot for 20 years. During the fall waterfowl season, he and his black Labrador, Moko II, spend five days of every week here, hunting ducks and geese by day and camping out at night. A wiry man in his early 60s. Allan's thinning hair hides beneath a camoullage fishing hat. He's telling Fink about last Saturday's duck-season opener, which Fink missed due to illness.

"It was spectacular. All kinds of ducks were flying. I took the limit, and all the hunters in this area took limits. I got a nice mallard drake."

All kinds of ducks are flying today too. Flights of two, four, sometimes ten ducks whiz by overhead, "Look at that," Fink says as they fly over. Allan responds by naming the species — redheads, contails, or reals.

Fink shows us the gun he's using today. It's an antique, 20-gauge, single-shot, which means he'll get only one shot at a duck before he has to reload. "You are a sportsman, aren't you, Ierry?" Allan jokes. Fink chuckies as he walks down a tunnel through the cedars and out onto the beach, where he turns right. "Jerry is a jump-shooten," Allan exp'ains. "He doesn't hunt with a dog or sit in a blind waiting for ducks to come to him. He'll walk along the dike for three miles up toward the north, end when he scares up a duck, he shoots it."

Neel Allan

At the end of the dike is a fire pit littered with bits of blackened firewood. "This is just the way I left it last weekend," Allan says as he pulls some tumbleweeds and cedar branches away from the curtain of cedars. "I've hid some wood and campground stuff in here." The camouflage cleared, he dips in and out of the bush cave, corring out with old carpets that he spreads on the ground, a wire patio chair without a back, some firewood he's saved, and Styrofoam blocks and flat boards he uses as tables. Then he opens the back of his Explorer and takes out a large dog kennel, setting it on the ground behind the truck. "This is where Moko sleeps," he tells me. "I sleep in the truck. With the back seat down, the bed measures 6 3". I'm 5 8," so that's plenty of room for me. If you're sleeping in a tent, you'd better set it up."

While I'm setting up my tent, the sound of a single gunshot, a combination of THUMP and WHACK, reports from the marsh on the north side of the dike. "That's Jerry," Allan yells, Moko, who had been meandering around the campsite, sprints through the tunnel and around the corner in the direction of the marsh. Allan and I follow. As we round a point 100 yards up the beach, we see Moko,

There is Hope
For Women Who

Suffer From Loss of Bladder Control.

If you experience urine leakage when you cough, sneeze, laugh or exercise, you may be eligible to be part of an important clinical research study.

Many women who experience loss of bladder control assume that it is part of the natural aging process. However, many bladder control problems may be corrected or managed. A well-known pharmaceutical company is investigating a study medication that may help women with this condition.

If you are between the ages of 18-65 and experience bladder control problems you may be eligible to participate in a national study for an investigational medication to treat urinary incontinence.

If you'd like more information or would like to be a participant in this study, please call Amy at 1-888-688-1212 between 7 am and 12 midnight central standard time.

To see if you qualify call 1-888-688-1212. (7am to 12 midnight cst)

Despite the obstacles, by 1974 Crosby and Hambleton had documented the existence of about 180 previously unknown painted sites and become aware of the striking consistency of their artistic conventions. It's not that all the murals lock alike. Crosly eventually identified five painting "schools," each located an additional region of the peninsusia's interior. Within each of those schools, the Painters (as Crosly) rails them) followed format and arbitrary rules that led Crosly to classify all the works as Great Murals, "a separate, distinct art form." Individual works "have a codified related-ness reminiscent of what is seen in centuries of Russian icons or millennia of Cainese brush paintmilennia of Cince brush paint-ing," he concluded.

The mural painters never drew flowers, for example, or mountainscapes. Their abjects are "creatures in the natural world — humans, deer, moun-tain sheep, anteloper, rabbits, hares, mountain lions, bobcats, various birds, fish, turtes, snakes, whales, or pinnipeds. "Crouby swrites. Each of these is nearly always portrayed in a characteristic manner. Humans are static, presented "head-on with arms extende upward in a gas-ture suggestive of the classic." It surrender pose. "In contrast to the futures humans, four-legged animals "were given active profiles as if running or leaping."

The mural maker out-ined the contract and filled in the outlines with paint. Some-times they divided the interior into two parts, using a different color in each sector. Sometimes they filled the field with patterns such a stripte or checkerboards. But they never included within their outlines such details as eyes, noses, or mooths. Instead, they used the outlines to com-munic at the detailed informa-tion of the section of the con-traction of the color of the equipment of other the ran-uralists, perspective. "We see a dramatic contrast between the newest, which are in quite good condi-tion, and the oldest, which are about to vanish, "Crosby has written about the painting at El Batequi, "If the newest are over 500 years of age, as I believe, then a logical argument could be made that the oldest have been on that rock face for 2000 or

Today Crosby says he wasn't sure what he would do with the information he was gathering. His career had taken another turn about 1970 when Richard Pourade, editor in-chief for Copiey Books, asked Crosby to write a book about his 600-mile anything before in my life,"

Crosby expresses no
remorse over his failure to look for a bigger or better-established publisher for the latter, explain-ing, "I didn't have any particu-lar self-confidence" about what he had written. He lacked train-ing in either the visual arts or anthropology, and "it's a defi-cult stretch to get yourself out of La Jolla and into the mainstream with an agent, I was dif-fident about that."

When the book appeared, however, "It was a dreadful disappointment," he says today. His wife, Joanne, "burst into tears when she saw the first copy." Whereas Copley books written by Pourade "had first-cabin reatment," the color in Crosle cave-painting book "was just vile," he declares. Four years ago, INAH, the Mexican government's overseer of his-torical and anthropological sites, began requiring anyone bound for the Sierra de San Francisco to register in the village of Sar Ignacio, about 50 miles beyond Ignacio, about 30 march Vizcaino. Our group headed Vizcaino. Our group headed there next. In the harsh, stark land-scape that surrousds it, San Igna-cio materializes like sone cin-ematic vision of a desert osis. The early lesuis planted date palms that have spread and mul-tiplied over the centuries. Their greenery shocks the eye of the traveler group accustomed to a low-ceilinged room next to the museum, and we confirmed the price of hiring local guides and animals. It would cost $4 peases (about $6.75 per day) for each guid and $8 pease ($6.00) for each beat. We would meet up with most of these at a moun-tain ranch later that day. But are the second of the second of the receding like a mirage. Before we left San Igancio ver needed to find some harsh. And Erdman wasted to hirary with per pease who was riding, "I mean, to be frank, I didn't know anything about the paintings," he said. He added that he saw nothing wrong with them. Whoever had painted them seemed to be "clean people," he offered. "There were no pornographic images." On the other hand, he felt certain that other hand, he left certain that the murals had no religious significance. We didn't leave San Igna-cio until 3:15, and then we had to go all the way back to Viz-

Arturo, a quiet man in his mid-40s, "has been my guide mid-40s, "has been my guide for 23 years," Ewing announced, adding, "He's one of the best cowboys in the country." Born on a huge Spanish land-grant ranch on Baja California's gulf coast, he and his aging parents coast, he and his aging parents continue to raise cattle, Ewing told us. But to enable his chil-dren to attend school, he also ekes out an existence in Vizcaino as a ghide, a cowboy, an

The sun was low in the sky when we turned off the paved highway between Vizcaino and highway between Vizcaino and San Ignacio. About ten years ago, the government built a dirt road that climbs from here to the village of San Francisco de la Sierra, 23 miles away. Ewing says the road at times has been so bad it's taken her four hours to drive that distance, and a hug tropical storm last fall made things worse. But the govern-ment had just sent in a grading machine to improve the surthine to improve the su over it at the brisk pace of maybe

"Having worked on this book for two and a half years, I know every twist and turn of the road on the map And every peak. But I've neve seen it before. And here it is!"

A while later Ewing pointed out a distant dark spo on the other side of a wide arroyo -- Cueva Obscura, described in Crosby's book and a devilish place to reach. "I tell you, my respect for Harry Crosby is immense," she declared. "Every cave he went to is just hard!" She moaned, surveying the hard ness and the scale of the coun try stretching before us. "Oh, I

It was almost 8:00 p.m. by the time we reached Rancho Palo Rayo, a collection of small Palo Rayo, a collection of small dwellings just beyond the tiny vil-lage of San Francisco de la Sierra. Two more of our guides, Manuel and Francisco Arce, lived here and had invited us to camp on the property. While Ewing greeted them, the rest of us scrambled them, the rest of us scrambled in the dark to set up tents and sleeping bags. At 3500 feet, the wind was icy, and the prospect of a festive goot barbecure—dis-cused earlier—seemed nonex-istent. Instead, Ewing herded us-into a small structure with a roof made of palm fronds lashed together. A long wooden table was set for ten, illuminated by an electric bulb overhead. We spent an hour contemplating the figures, then we raced back to Ranch Palo Baro. Over group would be traveling, with 2 animals. The main event of this The main event of this day would be our group's descent into the Arroyo de San Pablo. But as Ewing supervised the packing of the burros, she urged the rest of us to make a quick visit to Cueva del Ratón, a painting site we could reach by car in maybe 15 minutes. From an maybe 15 minutes. From an site we could reach by car in maybe 15 minutes. From an elder in the village, we picked up a key that unbecked a gate guarding the site. path all but disappeared. Only the relative absence of scrub under our animals' feet sug-gested a common route, but it was choked with boulders and was choked with boulders and pebbles and rocks, often pitch-ing up and down over rocky thrusts of the earth. After an hour and a quarter, I was begin-ning to feel that I was adjusting to the mule's lurching motion. Then we came to the edge of the canyon.

Then we came to the edge of the canyon.

The previous day, one of the Lindsays had proclaimed that the arroys where we would be traveling was like the Grand Canyon, a comparison I had dismissed as hyperbolic. In a strict sense, it is. The Grand Canyon is about a mile deep, compared to the Arroy ofe San Pables 1000 to 1200 feet. But the Mexican canyon is relatively much narrower, a fact that height-ens the appearance of its depth. On the rim, preparing to go to the bottom, the difference the bottom, the difference between the two capyons seems trivial, especially given the absence of a wide, well-groomed trail leading into the Mexican one. Barrely discernible, the puth that we went over switched uncount-turns. Chen it was o saepother— learning back almost as far as my anuma's rump and gripping the back of the asoldie (the proper gringo descent syle) — I felt as if I were standing upright, with Alegre's head somewhere below.

Days later, Lowell Lind-

She commented that she Bees these chaptel because the thinks the Painters put only the "really important" stuff in them, whereas in a "cathedral" such as Cueva Philada, "There's or much to see that it's hard to so much to see that it's hard to sort it all out." she thinks is critical — a large crack that runs from the uppercrack that runs rom the upper-most part of the cave down to a figure below a gigantic deer positioned vertically on the wall. Ewing says she never paid any attention to this or any other crack until her seventh or eighth visit to this canyon. On that occasion she was reflecting on occasion she was reflecting on something she had heard from her mentor, Ken Hedges, a curator at the San Diego Museum of Man. Ken kept telling me that this was shamanic art, "builg recalls, adding that shamans are always associated with spirit travel." So I subset myself, how are the Paircest Blummar are the Paircest Blummar de the Paircest Blummar de the Paircest Blummar de Carrell of the Car that it also had a pronounced crack. The more she studied the two natural leatures the surer she felt that the Painters had used them as compositional ele-ments. "This crack is absolutely proposition to the art in this crack." ssential to the art in this cave, she now insists about the scene at Flechas. She claims that since her first insight into the cracks' significance, she has found simsignificance, she has found sim-ilar cracks in 80 percent of the

As our group contemplated the arrow-strewn cave that morning. Ewing talked non-stop, a hyperactive docent in hiking boots. "Here's a fascinating figure!" she called out. "This is one of the only two "This is one of the only two fernale figures in the cave. Do you see her little breasts hanging out? Notice: one of her sides is gone. Later Ewing turned contemplative. The people who painted these images had evolved

Why did these people take time to paint when gathering enough to eat every day must have demanded every day must have definanded almost all their time and energy? Without pausing for breath, Ewing answered her own question as if the Painters themselves were standing in front of her. This art is important to them. This art is reling everyone in the community, This is going to help make your life better."

At Cueva Pintada, there's even a viewing platform where you can stretch out foll-length, your day pack under your head, and lose yourself in the spectacle arrayed above. in the Reader has no tife. As many crazy people as there are in this world, who would pub-lish somebody's address in the paper? Richard and Ethel Smith don't deserve that; they sleep and eat in a house that some crazy person who reads the article could go stalk. There are crazy people in this world. That is wrong. Also, why would they publish an article way after the fact? It happened two years ago. They've been in jail for two and a half years.

There's the pain of flooring the accelerator to climb a row of partned car-facet rhan the track beside you. Throbbing ampits from immping and bouncing, But if you think monater trucking might be in your future, even as a spectator sport, here are a few things you should know.

How does a monster truck differ from my

Unlike your car, the moreter truck has a name. Names already taken are Big Foot, the Terminator, Gravedigger, and Unnamed Untamed. If you're going to drive something called Gravedigger or Take That, You Moron, it makes sense that it should come with a roll cage, a racing harness, and a fire-suppression system. Since the main function of a system. Since the main function of a monster trusk is to da monster wheelies (driving up and over a row of cars while 5000 people cheer), the truck body is fliverglass, which reduce the weight by about 1600 pounds. Since you might, in the process, roil over, the windshield and windows are Plexiglas.

So far, it sounds like the perfect alternative to the Mercedes sport utility vehicle. Can I buy one for commuting purposes?

No. But if you have $200,000, you could buy one for that career wirch you've been contemplating. About 197 men and three women drive monster trucks for a living, asy Gary Edwards of Motorsports Entertainment Group, which produce monster truck shows, tractor guils, and other events that involve men and motors. Feogle attracted to really big 'res tread to be' "motorsheed." — mechanics who race cars and/or work in junkyards. During monster truck season, which runs from April to November, the drivers haul their $100,000 car-mashers in specially designed tractor-trailer rigs ($25,000 to $100,000) that are also motor homes. $100,000 that are also motor homes. Ideathy, a monster truck driver lives in lowa or Nebraska, not California. because a central state is closer to the south, the Mexican border, and all the good venues from Fairbanks to Tupelo. But Gary Schott of El Caion, who has been a monster truck driver since 1984, takes his truck, the Terminator, to 25 or 30 shows per year, sticking mainly to the West Coast.

That depends, oddly enough, on your ability to attract a professional wrestler. That depends, oddly enough, on your ability to attract a professional wrestler. Each monster truck driver in a competition is paid a performance fee. Performance fees range from $1500 to $5500, with the highest fees going to big names. Three big names in carmashing—the Undertuker, the Heartherak Kid, and Stone Cold Steve Austin—are also man-mashers in the World Wrestling Sederation.

No. When you pay to see Stone Cold No. When you pay to see Stone Cold Steve Austin in a professional wrestling match, you see Stone Cold Steve Austin, the man. When you pay to see Stone Cold Steve Austin in a monster truck show, you will not, as you might have guessed, see Stone Cold driving a truck. You will not see someone else driving Stone Cold's truck. You won't even see a Stone Cold's truck. You won't even see a roach that Sone Cold fixed in his garage. You will see Mark Wheeler of Grand Island. Noteraska, earning a lot more money than he earned when he was just Mark Wheeler in a truck called Terraduster. You will see in short, the roach that Stone Cold Steve Austin oponsors and hopes, one duy, to drive. Edwards whose or organization helps match pro wrestler names with monster trucks.

How can I fight corporate schemes like this one at a grassroots level?

In freestyle monster-truck competition, the winner is chosen by the audience, which cheers for its atworite truck. Although Stone Cold Steve Austin may earn a bigger performance fee than Gary Schott of El Cajon, "people get tirred of the big names," Schott says, and may root against them, Since Schott has been stopped to the big names, "Schott has been about the stone of the Big names," Schott has been about the stone of the Big names, "Schott has been about the stone of the Big names," Schott has been about the stone of the Big names, "Schott has been about the Big names," and so cours the Enforcer, which is driven by Alex Wells to rode are grounds and county rodeo grounds and county fairs up and down the state of California for almost 15 years, he's a hometown favorite. And when it comes to monster-truck drag racing, Schott says, fame doesn't matter as much as reaction time. Schott's truck beat Stone Cold stone cold three times in San Diego last year.

On the green grass now lying, now mounting the hill. The spring from the fountain now bods like a pot; Through stones past the counting it bubbles red-hot.

The ground parched and cracked is like overbaked bread.
The greensward all wracked is, bents dried up and dead.
The fallow fields glitter like water indeed,
And gossamers twitter, flung from weed unto weed.

Hill-tops like hot iron glitter bright in the sun, And the rivers we're eying burn to gold as they run; Burning hot is the ground, liquid gold is the air; Whoever looks round sees Eternity there.

He could not die when trees were green, For he loved the time too well. His little hands, when flowers were seen. Were held for the bluebell, As he was carried o'er the green.

His eye glanced at the white-nosed bee; He knew those children of the spring: When he was well and on the lea He held one in his hands to sing, Which filled his heart with elec-

Infants, the children of the spring!

He held his hands for daisies white, And took them all to bed at night That in the green fields grew, As childhood's sweet delight.

And then he shut his little eyes, And flowers would notice not: Birds' nests and eggs caused no surprise, He now no blossoms got; They met with plaintive sighs.

When winter came and blasts did sigh, And bare were plain and tree, As he for ease in bed did lie His soul seemed with the free, He died so quietly.

Sounds Okay Even Under the Balcony

It's amazing how the sheer sensual excitement of the sound can sweep you away.

abe newly recived San Diego Symphony con-tinued its season with a happy program of music by Moncavo, Haydon, and Brahms, conducted once again by Jung-Ho Pak, and with soloits in the Haydo Surfenia, convertantly drawn from the orchestra, Lenjoyed the more man and the performance.

to make out in the days when the Fox was still a movie palace. The reason these days is not the privacy (although it's usually quite empty up there) but the sound. An acousticain will know more precisely why, but my own iteory is that the great control of the sound of the sound of the control of the contr else in the hall (considerably more so than under the balcony, which is where I was placed on that Sunday afternoon).

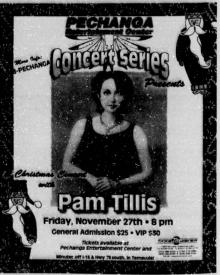

Admittedly, the distance does not make for the timused its season with a huppy program of music by Moncavo, Havdin, and Brahms, conducted once again by Jung-Ho Paks, and with soloist in the Havdin Surfeinia concentrated around the program and the performances—thought loved those erloyed them more if the management had given the more if the management had given the seath as Admitted to the management had given the seath as Admitted to the management had given the seath as Admitted to the management had given the seath as Admitted to the program and the expressions of the management had given the more in the management had given the more in the management had given the more in the management had given the seath as Admitted to the program and the performances—though the program and the performances—though the program and the performances—though the program and the program and the performances—though the program and the performances—though the program and the performances—though the program and the cert's excellence. As at the isson's opening, there was really no indication at all of the trauma the missicians had been through during the long harburgstep realized, no says of traumers or dislocation in the ensemble work, no falling away from the high degree of professionalism that had been reached under Your Talimi, and not even a perception of the loss of or many fine musiciants, and the second of the loss of or many fine musiciants of the second of the loss of or many fine musiciants of the second of the loss of or many fine musiciants of the second of the loss of the musiciants of the second of the loss of the second of the loss of the los ductor and seemed to be in good rapport with him, and there was a palpable aura of enthusiasm and commitment in their playing, to the great benefit of the whole concert.

certante, a cheerful and beautifully crafted work from the composer's maturity (the period of the Londor sym-phonies), the soloists were Nick Grant (now the orchestra's concertmaster), Marcia Bookstein (who is co-principal of the cello section), principal oboist William Banovetz, and rrincipal bassonist Charles Coker — which gave the audi-ence an opy-attunity to recognize how theroughly expert these four princi-pals of the "ness" or-chestra are. They played with exactly the kind of sweet, shaped hyricism Pak seemed to ask for in the overall tone of the perfor-mance. The conductor's approach was strong on delicacy, charm, warmth, and grace, with an easy-going flow and on uninterrupted going flow and an uninterrupted (and delectable) amiability of conception. There are other attitudes that can be taken to this music, which also can flourish with some-what faster tempos and greater what faster tempos and greater crispness and ascertiveness in the conducting (perhaps, more like the way the piece would have been per-formed in the late 18th Century). But Pals, whose of style, firmly car-ried through and giving an elegant unity to the performance, p.ov died an equally pleasurable experience. the Haydn, in Pak's suave and laid-back reading, was carried through to the Brahms, a score which responds naturally and copiously to such an under copiously to such an under-standing of its central vision. The playing was relaxed and unhur-ried, yet so luminous, so sensitively modulated, and so finely detailed that it never lost finely detailed that it never lost the music simpetus or its grandly articulated structure. Still, here too there are other possibilities: a stronger drive, a more potent drama, a sense that the music's pervasive serenity is achieved af-ter working through certain real tensions and conflicts. The tensions and conflicts. The Brahms Second played from that perspective comes off as a sig-nificantly different composition from what the audience heard (with appropriately comfortable delight) in Symphony Hall.

As fer lose Moncayo's Sin-fonietta, which began this uplifting program, there I have nothing to say about other plausible ways of performing the music, since this was my first exposure to it. It would ac-tually be hard to imagine its being played with greater vigor, humor, and color. In his pro-gram notes, Albert Rodewald (how nice to have him back!) thow nice to have him back!) reminds us of Moncayo's stylis-tic deb to Aaron Copland, and specifically to Salon Mexico, which — like the Moncayo work— withly and imagina-tively embodies the spirit of Mexican folk music, but which precedes the Sinfonietia by some eight years. Moncayo's musical nationalism offers less scope for irony than does Cop-land's treatment, but in both composers one can hear the land's treatment, but in both composers ope can hear the same vivid orchestration, clean textures, rhythmic vitality, and memorable tunefulness— qualities that Pak's conducting (and the Symphiony's playing) realized to their fullest.

Suddenly Last Summer

"So successfully have we disquised from ourselves the literality of our own feelings, the sensibility of our own hearts." Tennessee William wrote in 1983; "that plays in the tragic tradition have began to seem untrue." And stagings of William have retreated from his extremes. For Diversionar: Theatte, director have retreated from its extremes. For Diversionary Theatre, director D.W. Jacobs embraces Williams's sensibility. He turns Suddenis Lair Summer into a garish, outsized, emotional hallucination where, to awe her sanity, Catherine Holly must tell the most prepoterous awe her sanity, Catheriae Holly-must tell the most prepoterous truth of all. The production's a pothosite. The set sports flying bar-racouds and robled red and yellow house. But the acting's uneven, Pa-triciae Bimore Costa and Michael Douglas Hommel provide capable support as George and Mrs. Holly, greedy geeks. Bit on opening night Ruben Padlit, was too tentative as the doctor, and Shamoon Marce Smith was only halfway there as Catherine. She needed more of William's depth, modulation, and a gency. As Violet Venable, how-ever, Priscilla Allen gives a magiste-rial effort. Letting go of the myth she's created about her dismysian son will kill Violet. Thus Allen is domineering, cov. fragile, stately. son will kill Violet. Thus Alen, do indendering, cop, fragile, stately, furning, and doomed. It's easily one of 1998's best performances. Worsh a try.

A sprint, really, Four days, Friday through Monday.

The concept of the film is simplicity itself. Most of its action takes place in and around a four-door hatchback. in and around a four-door hatchback, which the stone-faced middle-aged protagonist drives round and round the twisting unpaved roads of a bar-ren, brown, and ugly construction zone on the outskirts of Tehran in the fictional filmmaker to move toward documentary. Fact, if I get what he meant, must be nudged into narrative; fancy coaxed into reality. Of course I am sorry to have had to drag in one of those "boscure" references that so annoy my readers (or anyway the ones compelled to communicate with my editor), but if Howard Stern, or Alanis Morissette ever said something simulating about the relationship between fictional and dox umentary filmmaking. I missed it. So I must fall back on Godard. (Jean-Luc, to throw some light into this corner of obscurity, leading figure in the French New Wave; major international influence throughout the Sixties, increasingly marginal ear since, though continuing to make movies into the present.) While Kiarostami does not enture as for from his fictional starting point as Godard himself often does—and so from his factional starting point as Godard himself often does—and so fren into areas of academic aridness—he travels well past emidpoint. First step is the dependent on satural locales, photographed without pretification, camera gimmicks, distorting lenses, filters, special effects, so that the resulting film can't help but become an unstance of the same present of the wind, passing vehicles, one of which might momentarily drown out the dislogue—and there is no bacture of the same production of the same players, and there is a thorough integration of the nonprofessional actor gration of the nonprofessional actor (who might sneak a glance at the camera) with the skilled professional. And above all, in the present work at any rate, there is the observance of "real time," meaning that the duration of time, meaning that the duration of the movie corresponds exactly to the duration of its events, except for some small skips toward the end, if only so as not to be fanatical about it.

What emerges is a work of tremendous formal unity, purity, strength.
The longer-haired critics, when talking in particular of matters such as "real lime" and "long takes" (in which Kanststam) is an unfanatical believer, too), were once accustomed to toos around the word "integrity" — not, on et primarily, in the layman's likely understanding off along the lines of understanding off along the lines of the property of the layman's likely understanding off along the lines of lines of the lines of t of their habit of popping up in similar circumstances. They disclose the most fundamental incomprehension and unappreciation of the art of fiction, an inability or unwillinguity or unterta, achidals meet to identify with the hero. Kutrostami, as much as possible and perhape more than necessary, helps out the remedials in the audience by tacking onto the end of the contraction. helps out the remedials in the audi-nece by tasking onto the end of his movie a video postscopi in which, in a stringly distantial image, we can a stringly distantial image, we can be stringly distantial image, we can specificate the string around in apparent good health—a final shove toward the documentary end of the spectrum, as forceful reminder that what we have been watching is a movie, a fibrication, a pixe of work, a particular treatment of a given subject. For my part, I would tempted to imm in front of a bus at-tempted to imm in front of a bus athave to testify that I felt much more tempted to jump in front of a bus after sceng The Waterboys or after sceng The Waterboys or after sceng The Waterboys or after sceng The Waterboys and I am after sceng The Waterboys or after sceng the Control of the Waterboys of the Waterbo (To illuminate the obscurity: Malle, Resnais, contemporaries and compa-triots of Godard.) It makes me want to see other films by Kiarostami. Makes me want to see other good films by anybody. Makes me want to keep

AIRS International would like to change that. We've been named to Inc. magazine's 500 fastest growing privately held businesses for three years in a row We grew thirty times in size over the last seven years, and we fully intend to do it again over the next seven years.

To be part of the AIRS team, you must

- · A mature adult with a strong work ethic accompanied by a desire to contribute. Please, no "clock watchers."
- · Courageous and persistent. You're not easily intimidated. You thrive on pressure.
- · A direct communicator. You don't "beat around the bush" and don't like others
- · A computer lover. You are familiar with Windows, Word, and Excel. You enjoy using and learning more about technology.
- Astute in English or math. Excellence in both would be ideal.

If you're like most of us on earth, you're interested in a warding career-with income potential that is out of this world. Recause interest rates are the lowest in decades, refinancing eople's homes is one such opportunity. In fact, because people tinue to buy homes regardless of the interest rate, there are literally thousands of customers always there waiting for your service. And as an Independent Loan Originator for MortgageSpan, you'll be amazed how easy it is to cash in on this booming market.

If you're a realtor, you can earn more on each real estate transaction by also being the loan officer. MortgageSpan. A phenomenal business opportunity right here on earth... with profit ntials out of this world.

What's the best way to cash in on it?

READER MATCHES, the best place to meet San Diego singles! You'll receive a free personal matching ad in the Reader Classifieds and on the Internet at www.sdreader.com. You'll also receive a free "voice mailbox" that allows you to record and receive messages from a touchtone phone.

HOW TO PLACE YOUR AD: To place a free ad, fill out the coupon below and mail or fax it (619-233-7967) to us. (If faxing, please photocopy the coupon first.) The deadline for submitting your free ad is Saturday at 7 am. Free ads are not accepted over the phone or in person. We'll send you a 5-digit mailbox number (printed in your ad) and a 4-digit security code for exclusive access to

You may place a late ad until 6 pm Tuesday by phone (619-235-8200), in our office (1703 India St. at Date St., downtown), or by fax (619-233-7907). The charge for these late ads is $20 for the first 25 words plus $1.20 per additional word. By phone or by fax you may use Visa, Master Card or Discover only.

HOW TO USE YOUR VOICE MAILBOX: After you receive your mailbox number and private security code, you can record your personal introduction and listen to your responses. Call (619) 881-2000, 24 hours a day, and follow the easy instructions. You must have a touchtone phone. Cordless and cellular phones are not recommended.
