Jose Castillon Henao was said to have cut a dashing figure on the streets of downtown San Diego. Partial to expensive Armani suits and accompanied by a flashy girlfriend, the Colombian native—who said he was a fisherman from Panama—made the rounds of shops at the Palladium and galleries in Seaport Village, snapping up diamonds, artwork, and custom-designed jewelry.

He frequented one of the best Disco in Oceanside Harbor District, a nightclub now abandoned, next door to the conference center. His people said the sales staff at the condo complex that they were in the real estate business and were using the computer set up inside their 25th-floor condominium to track fish movements via satellite.

But federal prosecutors say Castillon wasn’t really a fisherman. Instead, they say, he was captain of a billion-dollar cocaine-smuggling empire for the Cali cartel. They say that during five years as a part-time student of American Bible City, Castillon invested millions of dollars in drugs, business, and real estate. He indulged in fancy handbags, champagne, and books.

April 1998, Colombian officials arrested Castillon in connection with the seizure of 12 tons of cocaine off a fishing boat off the coast of Peru. Five months later, Mexican authorities handed Rodriguez-Lopez at his office in La Paz, Baja California Sur. As both men languished in foreign prisons, the United States government filed suit in federal courts here to seize the condominiums at Ocean Harbor Drive. Rodriguez-Lopez’s name was on the condominiums. His people said they had evidence that Castillon, a drug lord, had paid him.

But Rodriguez-Lopez, who remains
The Defense Of The Woods

By Bill Mauzerall

Sibaver De La Mora Ceceles is hard to spot among the ten-foot-high reeds of the pristine section of the Tijuana River. "Neighborhood" is a word you might use to describe this lush water-bound area, but the Tijuana River, in the heart of Mexico, is not a place you would normally think of as a neighborhood. The river is a natural resource, a place where people can enjoy nature and relax. And yet, in the midst of this serene setting, lies a truly remarkable story of conservation and community effort. The story of Sibaver De La Mora Ceceles.

Sibaver De La Mora Ceceles is a woman who has dedicated her life to protecting the Tijuana River, the lifeblood of her community. She has fought tirelessly to preserve the river, which is not only a source of water but also a home to numerous species of plants and animals. Sibaver has been a vocal advocate for the river, speaking out against those who seek to exploit its resources for their own gain.

Sibaver’s commitment to the river is not just a personal endeavor. It is a collective effort that involves her entire community. She works with local organizations, such as the Tijuana River Valley National Wildlife Refuge, to promote conservation and protect the river’s ecosystems.

In recognition of her efforts, Sibaver has been awarded various honors, including the prestigious La Ballena Azul Award, given to individuals who have made significant contributions to the marine environment.

Sibaver De La Mora Ceceles is a true champion of the river, and her story is an inspiration to all those who care about the environment and the well-being of their communities. She reminds us that we all have a role to play in protecting the natural world, and that by working together, we can make a difference.

Calling All Bids

By Errol Grimes

The city of San Diego has issued a request for bids to construct a new police station in the downtown area. The project, which is estimated to cost $25 million, is intended to replace the current police station, which is outdated and unable to accommodate the growing population.

The new station is expected to have a capacity of 150 officers and will include state-of-the-art facilities such as training rooms, a multimedia center, and a gymnasium. The project is scheduled to be completed in two years, and the city is currently soliciting bids from construction firms.

The city has outlined specific requirements for the project, including the use of sustainable building materials and a commitment to hiring local workers. Bidders will be evaluated based on their past performance, financial capability, and compliance with the city’s procurement policies.

The city is hoping to receive bids from reputable companies that are committed to delivering high-quality work and meeting their deadlines. The selected contractor will be responsible for all aspects of the project, from design to construction.

This is a significant opportunity for local businesses to participate in a major public works project. The city is looking for companies that are capable of handling large-scale projects and are experienced in constructing police stations.

Anyone interested in bidding on this project is encouraged to contact the city’s procurement department for more information. Bids are due in two weeks, and the city will announce the winner shortly thereafter.

The city of San Diego is committed to ensuring the safety and security of its residents. By constructing a new police station, the city is taking a step towards ensuring that its police force is equipped with the resources it needs to serve the community effectively.

For more information, contact the city’s procurement department at (619) 232-2323 or visit their website at sdcity.gov. Bids can be submitted via email or in person at the city hall.

My dad, of course, was hiding out. He was Frank Martin, my mother was Thelma Martin.

I was Mary Ann Martin.

We lived in Missoula, Montana, and my family walked on the Fort Missoula Trail. It was a great experience for us.

One day, my dad and I went to the movies. It was an adventure for both of us.

We had a lot of fun that day. We laughed a lot, and it was a special day for me.

My dad was a great dad, and I will always remember our times together. He was always there for me when I needed him.

Thank you, dad, for being there for me. I love you.

"The reality is that clubs are generally supposed to be paying BMI and ASCAP fees just like a radio station."

"People are not just skating on the surface of the copyright issue. It's been a long time since the music industry has been able to present a clear-cut, straightforward message about copyright and why it's important. The problem is that many clubs have never really been in a position to understand or appreciate the value of music. They see it as just another form of entertainment, something to be enjoyed without consideration of its source."

"But the truth is, music is a significant part of the economy. In the United States, it is estimated that the music industry contributes over $100 billion per year to the GDP. This includes not only the sale of records, but also the licensing fees that are paid to BMI and ASCAP for the use of music in clubs and other public venues."

"So the question is, why aren't clubs paying these fees? The answer is that many of them simply don't know about it, or they assume that they don't need to. They think that they can just play music for as long as they like without paying a dime."

"But the reality is that this is a dangerous assumption. BMI and ASCAP are constantly filing lawsuits against clubs that use music without paying the required fees. And these lawsuits can be very costly, both in terms of legal fees and the potential for large judgments."

"So what can clubs do to avoid these problems? The best thing is to simply pay the required fees. This can be done through BMI and ASCAP, which have partnered with a number of organizations to make it easier for clubs to do so. By paying these fees, clubs can avoid the risk of legal trouble and ensure that they are contributing to the music industry in a responsible way."

And for anyone who thinks West Coast means pastel, hold on to your hat.

West Coast, you see, means a lot of things. And while some of these things might seem a bit more subdued than the East Coast, let's face it, they're still there. The music, the art, the fashion, it all adds up to a style that's uniquely West Coast.

The new collection from Warner Bros. Records is a perfect example of this. The albums are filled with some of the best musicians in the business, and the sound is as smooth as silk. But don't let that fool you — there's a lot more going on here than meets the eye.

The artists on these albums are pushing the boundaries of what's possible in West Coast music. They're exploring new sounds and styles, and they're doing it with a level of talent that's simply stunning.

So if you think that West Coast means pastel, think again. This collection is proof that there's a lot more to West Coast than meets the eye.

Local Music

Jeff Bright
By William Cram

The trouble with being a musician is that you think it's easy, but then you start working at it and you realize it isn't. That's what happened to Jeff Bright after he started working on his new album. He was recording in Los Angeles with producer Jim读书, and ran into some technical problems. The album was supposed to be a pop album, but ended up sounding more like a rock record. Jeff Bright is a singer-songwriter who has been working on his craft for many years. He has been performing at local clubs in the Bay Area for over a decade. His music is a mix of folk and rock, and he has a unique sound that sets him apart from other musicians. He is also a visual artist, and his paintings are often incorporated into his music videos. Jeff Bright is one of the most promising young musicians in the Bay Area, and his new album is a testament to his talent and dedication. He is currently working on his next album, which he hopes to release in the fall. Jeff Bright performs at the Bluebird Cafe on Saturday, February 7th. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. For more information, please visit his website at jeffbrightmusic.com.

Morocco on Lower Fourth

My ex-post put aside his entree and with spoons we began rolling up the beans, mushrooms, and lamb.

In the Spanish-speaking crowd, we overheard many conversations where people were discussing the cuisine and where to find the best places to eat. One group was talking about a new restaurant that had opened recently, and another was planning a trip to Morocco. We decided to try something new and followed their recommendations.

The restaurant was set up in a cozy, intimate setting with soft lighting that created a warm atmosphere. The menu consisted of a variety of dishes, including lamb, beans, and mushrooms. We ordered the lamb and beans, and the flavor was delicious. The lamb was succulent and tender, and the beans were cooked to perfection.

After finishing our meal, we were stuffed, but the atmosphere was so inviting that we decided to stay and explore the menu further. We ordered a few more dishes, and each one was as delicious as the last. The service was attentive, and we were well taken care of.

Overall, our experience at Morocco on Lower Fourth was amazing. We highly recommend this restaurant to anyone looking for a unique and delicious dining experience.
Expensive Disappointments

While it was not bad wine, it did not justify the expense and patience I had lavished upon it.
