Suspicion

A deranged cop is gunned down in an alley outside his storefront clinic, and it looks like the kind of murder case San Diego homicide cops loathe: the professional hit, with a lengthy list of suspects. Dr. Kent Des Long, a 47-year-old, outwardly straight-laced Seventh Day Adventist from Redlands, proprietors of the clinic continue on page 34.
If You Don't Run You Don't Get Hit
By Susan Lazarro

Have you ever seen the men standing outside Home Depot looking for work?

The Spanish-speaking men in baseball hats who are too young, or too old, or too pretty, or too drunk to get in the door of/Home Depot. By the time they are able to get inside they usually are asked to do the job of an eenie, meenie, miney, moe. The job of a job that is already underpaid, underinflated, and underfunded by the company in question. The job of a job that most of us will eventually have to do at some point in our lives. The job of a job that is not only dangerous but also demeaning. The job of a job that is not only physical but also mentally exhausting.

Green Trap
By Lizzy Smith

Following the deregulation of the power utilities in California, a host of alternative providers began an advertising blitz; promising consumers the lowest rates and the most reliable service. But with the deregulation came a new reality: the possibility of market failures due to the volatility of the market.

Capitol gang
By Jack Young

When the California legislature passed the California Public Utilities Commission (CPUC) reform bill in 2000, it was hailed as a major victory for consumer advocates and environmentalists. But the reality was that the bill did little to address the underlying problems in the energy market.

U.S. Senate

The U.S. Senate passes a resolution condemning the Bush administration's handling of the war in Iraq. The resolution was passed unanimously and was seen as a rebuke of the president's decision to go to war without the support of the United Nations.

More affordable than you think!
Dear Aunt Judy,

How's the weather where you are? It seems to be much better where you are than it is here, at least. I hope you and your family are well.

I've been thinking a lot about our upcoming trip to New York City. I'm really looking forward to seeing all the sights and trying the delicious food. Do you have any recommendations for must-see places or must-try restaurants?

The weather has been so nice lately that I've been spending a lot of time outdoors. I went for a hike in the mountains and it was great. The fresh air and the scenery were amazing.

Anyway, I hope you receive this letter in good health. I'm counting down the days until I can see you in person.

Yours truly,

[Signature]
DeLong and his wife, Margaret, are planning a move to Arizona. "It's a great place with great weather," he says. "We've enjoyed living in San Diego for many years, but it's time for a change."

DeLong's career in the consumer products industry began at the age of 20 when he joined Procter & Gamble as a sales representative. He later worked for General Foods and Campbell Soup Company before joining DeLong Industries, where he eventually became a vice president.

In his new position, DeLong is responsible for overseeing the company's marketing and advertising efforts. "Our goal is to create more awareness for our products and to increase sales," he says. "We're looking at new markets and new ways to reach our customers."

Eye Doc

Dr. John Bokosky says his eyes, especially his graphic ones. "Very few good young people. They're blind when they go in, and after a cornea transplant, they lose and see and see and realize. A number of patients have had a permanent larvae. It's very well understood. Sometimes they have associated eye conditions that lead to their loss, but when you see the eyes, you can almost see the light come on."

Bokosky has been performing cornea transplants in San Diego for 15 years on patients of all ages, including children. "The success rate is females, as a result of the transplants. But we're seeing some patients who are even more successful. They're getting better vision without eye drops," he said.

"A good candidate for transplantation is one that has a scar on the cornea that limits the vision," he said.

"If you've been diagnosed with genital herpes, you can appreciate the importance of developing new treatment options. Because, so far, no available treatments are totally effective at treating the disease."

Dr. Bokosky said that the infection of genital herpes is a common and often painful condition that can affect anyone, regardless of age or gender. It is caused by the herpes simplex virus, which can remain dormant in the body for years and can reactivate at any time, causing symptoms such as painful blisters or sores. The virus can be transmitted through sexual contact and can be passed from person to person, even when there are no visible symptoms.

Dr. Bokosky said that the current treatment options for genital herpes include antiviral medications, which can help to reduce the severity and duration of outbreaks, and counseling and support to help manage the condition.

However, there is a need for new and more effective treatment options for genital herpes. The Office of AIDS Research and the National Institutes of Health have identified research priorities for genital herpes and are actively funding studies to develop new treatments for this condition.

Dr. Bokosky encouraged individuals who have been diagnosed with genital herpes to consult with their healthcare provider to discuss available treatment options and the most appropriate course of action for their situation.

Dr. Bokosky said that the Office of AIDS Research and the National Institutes of Health are committed to funding research to develop new treatments for genital herpes and to improve the quality of life for individuals affected by this condition.
Rules of Engagement

If Emily Post seems outdated, try The Engaged Woman's Survival Guide by therapist Arlene Modica Matthews.

Rules of Engagement

Answer: Rules of Engagement

Question: What do De Beers, Emily Post, and the U.S. military all have in common?

My mother never liked the term "getting engaged." She said it reminded her too much of a cage. She was on an airplane to New York City when she got engaged to my dad. Whenever she thought about it, she would say, "It's not about the concept of freedom. If she was engaged to a man, she was about to be locked up in a cage." She never married anyone she thought was lockable. But then I got engaged to a man, and I realized that she was right. No man is wider than a cage. Engagement is the start of a relationship, not the end. It's not about the concept of freedom. It's about the concept of commitment.

Above all, cosmetic surgery is an art.
my doctor found a tumor on one of my ovaries. It's probably not cancerous, she said, but I need to go for a second diagnosis.

"That's a tough pill to swallow," her assistant said.

I couldn't stop crying. I called my mom, who was out of town. She came over, and we sat on the floor, hugging each other. I said, "I don't know what to do. I'm so scared."

She said, "You're not alone. I'm here for you."

We went to the hospital, where doctors inserted a catheter into my abdomen. I was awake the whole time. I was in pain, but I knew I was going to be okay.

I was discharged, and I went home. I was in pain, but I knew I was going to be okay.

Once we were married, I would have to give up waiting. He didn't think it was right that we should work around all those laymen.

"It's not fair to us," he said. "It's not fair to our future children."

I was angry, and I walked out on him. He said, "It's not fair to us," and I said, "It's not fair to me."

I left him, and I never looked back.

I'm not married now, and I'm happy. I'm doing well.

"It's not fair to us," he said.

"It's not fair to me," I said.

I left him, and I never looked back.

Downers and Uppers

Even a listener familiar with the Eighth Symphony could begin to doubt whether it was top-flight Beethoven.

The end of the concert at the Eighth Symphony of the New York Philharmonic, with Leonard Bernstein on the podium, was as abrupt as the unexpected arrival of snow in June. It was not a case of the music's sudden chill, but of its quick disappearance. The audience held its breath. The musicians, too, seemed to be holding their breath. Then, with a talent and a grace not usually associated with symphonic music, the music began to melt, and the orchestra melted with it. The audience was left with the feeling that the music had been a dream, and that Bernstein had appeared to us in a dream and taken us back to the reality of our own time.

The concert was a triumph. The music was performed with a precision and an intensity that made it seem as if the musicians were performing it for the first time. The audience was overwhelmed by the beauty of the music. The audience was also overwhelmed by the beauty of the conductor. Bernstein's energy and enthusiasm were infectious. The audience was swept up in the music, and the music was swept up in the audience. The audience was left with the feeling that the music had been a dream, and that Bernstein had appeared to us in a dream and taken us back to the reality of our own time.

The audience was swept up in the music, and the music was swept up in the audience. The audience was left with the feeling that the music had been a dream, and that Bernstein had appeared to us in a dream and taken us back to the reality of our own time.

The concert was a triumph. The music was performed with a precision and an intensity that made it seem as if the musicians were performing it for the first time. The audience was overwhelmed by the beauty of the music. The audience was also overwhelmed by the beauty of the conductor. Bernstein's energy and enthusiasm were infectious. The audience was swept up in the music, and the music was swept up in the audience. The audience was left with the feeling that the music had been a dream, and that Bernstein had appeared to us in a dream and taken us back to the reality of our own time.

This Madly Bittersweet Painter

The voices in Pollock's head had their mouths stitched shut.

There is a moment in all artists' colorful films when Pollock, as a young man, is shown having a breakdown in his studio. Pollock, played by the great actor, is straddling a chair, screaming at the top of his lung. The room is filled with his paintings, but the camera's focus is on Pollock. He is screaming, but no one can hear him. The scene is a powerful representation of the artist's struggle to express his inner world.

Pollock, like many other artists, was a great innovator. He is known for his abstract expressionism, a style that was revolutionary for its time. Pollock's work has been called "automatism," which means that it was created without conscious control. This style allowed Pollock to express his inner world in a new way.

This Madly Bittersweet Painter is a film that captures the essence of Pollock's struggle. The film is a powerful reminder of the importance of artistic freedom and the impact that it can have on our world.

Humored by Sweetcakes

They got kids and now I'm serving their babies.

The ice cream social is a monthly event that takes place on the last Sunday of each month from 1-3 pm at the community center. All families with children are welcome to attend and enjoy the homemade ice cream and other treats provided by the volunteers.

They got kids and now I'm serving their babies.

The ice cream social is a great opportunity for families to socialize and bond with each other. It's a fun and relaxed atmosphere where parents can connect and share tips and ideas. The children can also make new friends and have a blast.

They got kids and now I'm serving their babies.

The ice cream social is a great way to support the local community and give back to the families in need. It's a heartwarming event that brings people together and creates a sense of belonging.

Two World Wars Haven't Helped

It's tiring always taking shots at the Spectator, but the magazine is enormously influential.

I must not express myself too strongly. The Spectator has been criticized for its conservative and often reactionary views. However, it remains a powerful influence in British society, particularly in the realm of politics and culture. I think it's important to acknowledge both the strengths and weaknesses of this publication.

I'm not here to be tricky...
