As Far South as I've Ever Been

Early Black Settlement, part 2

Cynthia May Hudgins was born in Coronado and grew up there in the 1920s and 1930s. The Hudginses had moved to Coronado from Logan Heights. Her grandfather, Amos Hudgins, was in the 2nd Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry in the Civil War. Cynthia May knows little about her grandparents, other than that Amos had a Cherokee mother and Grandma Cynthia was the daughter of an Englishman and a slave. There had been a picture of her Cherokee great-grandmother, but Cynthia May's father had thrown it out. Story continued on page 28

Thanks For The History Lesson

Re the article by Barbara Palmer "None Darker Than Me" (August 2).

I was delighted to read some San Diego history on the Negro (black, African-American) part in shaping this city and surrounding areas. I have recently been trying to find information on the history of Julian and the role that blacks played in shaping its future. Most history in bookstores and the library do not mention Mr. Coleman's role during the mining days before the white man in Julian.

I have also been trying to research the black population in several areas today. My quest is personal. Having retired, I'm looking for an area to retire. Not quite as expensive as San Diego. I'm from the Midwest, having recently moved to this area.

Again, I really enjoyed the article.

Pure Magic

Thanks for John Brizzolara's insightful article on Dizzy's ("Red-Eye Cool," Pop Music, August 2).

That place is one of the few reasons to make the trek to downtown San Diego anymore — it's pure magic every time I go. One quibble, though: the quote with which Brizzolara ended his piece was attributed to poet Bob Kaufman. It is instead poetry from one of Chuck Perrin's own songs. The message is still true and apropos.

No One Wants To Talk To Ken

Ken Leighton has made a career of quoting unidentified "industry insiders."

Industry insiders is a euphemism for Leighton's lazy ethics and bloated imagination. Witness his latest nonstory (read: fabrication). He quotes an "unnamed talent manager" who says that he hears Jewel's ticket sales are "way off" for her hometown appearances at Humphrey's on August 19 and 20 ("Blurt," August 2). While I don't usually divulge advance ticket sales to the media, as I write this on August 2, some two and a half weeks before Jewel's performances, we have sold more than 2400 of the 2590 available tickets for a gross in excess of $130,000. If those sales are "way off," I'll take that kind of slump from every act that I book.

Leighton's reporting is consistently a joke. He's the scourge of the local music industry. From now on, let's keep track of his unnamed sources and anonymous industry insiders. That menagerie far outnumbers the amount of people who will talk to him on the record.

Kenny Weissberg
Producer/Humphrey's Concerts by the Bay

Ken Leighton responds: A respected artist manager gave me information that sales were slow. Weissberg's assistant confirmed that Jewel was considering adding a band. If Weissberg had responded to my queries, he could have addressed this to me directly prior to publication. I make the names of my sources available to my editors.

Drop The Priest Costume

The City Lights column entitled "Monsignor trumps mob lawyer" [August 2] once again shows that in his constant grab for other people's money (this time in the form of federal property), Father Joe Carroll is not primarily a priest concerned with spiritual matters but is rather a representative of the tax-subsidized homelessness industry. What makes this particularly disturbing is that in his zeal to grease the wheels of his homeless business by tapping into federal resources, Father Carroll has — not for the first time — jettisoned the Seventh Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal."

Why do I say he is stealing? Because instead of accepting only funds that are given voluntarily as charity by the rightful owner, Father Carroll constantly seeks to subsidize his activities with local, state, and federal resources. These resources are not voluntarily given. They are taken away by force from their rightful owners by agents of a government authority — as taxes. Of course, the bought-and-paid-for teachers in our public schools have long insisted that when the government taxes you and steals your money that it is not engaging in theft. But if you take a quick look at who signs their paychecks, you'll see why they behave this way. Follow the money.

They'll also protest that we live in a democracy! As if this changes the nature of an act of theft. I assure you that when a gang of street thieves takes a quick roadside vote to victimize you and steal your wallet, they have practiced the very same kind of democracy, but on a smaller scale — except they've been far more honest about it, and they don't insult your intelligence by claiming that they did it for your own good or that you somehow Ballpark lobby With the future of the downtown baseball stadium seemingly hanging in the balance, employees of the construction company that has a big contract to build it are shoveling thousands of dollars of campaign funds to San Diego city council members. Fifteen employees of Douglas E. Barnhart have each given between $100 to $250 to the campaign committee of Councilman Brian Maienschein; 11 Barnhart workers have contributed similar amounts to his colleague Jim Madaffer ... Fallen mayor Roger Hedgecock and wife Cindy have given $1000 to the Mayor Dick Murphy campaign committee. Other employees of Clear Channel, the radio-station chain where Hedgecock is employed as a talk-show host, also gave to Murphy. They included Michael Glickenhaus and Kevin McCarthy. Clear Channel has the contract to carry Padres games. Yet another media type and avid ballpark booster listed as giving to Murphy: San Diego Magazine owner James Fitzpatrick. Murphy used the money to repay himself the $75,000 he had lent his campaign last year.

From La Jolla, with love La Jolla's wealthy Evans family is bailing out of a 100-acre hotel and conference resort it wanted to expand in Newport Beach. A slow-growth measure passed by voters there last year has jeopardized plans for the 370-room project, reports the Orange County Register. Under the city's so-called Greenlight measure, Newport Beach voters get to decide the fate of any development that exceeds the city's general plan by more than 40,000 square feet, 100 daily car trips, or 100 homes. "The recent Newport Beach election results clearly indicated the community's support for a different hotel on the Newport Dunes property than the one we proposed," Tim Quinn, project manager for Evans Hotels, wrote the city council. The family, run by matriarch Anne Evans, owns the Bahia, Catamaran, and the Lodge at Torrey Pines, in addition to the historic Newport Dunes resort ... San Diego Unified School District member Ron Ottinger is sending out letters to a list of big-money donors who chipped in for 1998's $M school-bond campaign. This time, Ottinger wants the contributors, including contractors with business at the district, to ante up $250 a head for a ticket to a September American Jewish Committee banquet for school superintendent Alan Bersin. "I hope you will honor Alan Bersin's leadership, vision, and commitment by sponsoring a table for ten (10) guests in the amount of $2500." ... Charles Brandes, a wealthy La Jolla investment manager, has just bought an 11-room duplex penthouse on New York's Torry Park Avenue for a record $22 million, reports the New York Observer. The five-bedroom condo, featuring a skylight over the limestone spiral staircase and a 360-degree view of Manhattan, had been offered at $29.5 million. Brandes and wife Linda are trying to sell a smaller unit on a lower floor in the same building for $15.5 million.

Reminder money The Neurosciences Institute of La Jolla, a center for Alzheimer's research, has received a $10 million challenge grant from New York's Lewis B. Cullman, who recently sold the At-A-Glance calendar company, reports the Chronicle of Philanthropy ... San Diego Gas & Electric is paying the City of San Diego $45,000 to promote the giant utility company in a quarterly city newsletter mailed out to 70,000 small businesses. According to a recent contract, SDG&E gets to put its logo on the "front page and back panel" of the publication and be able to include a "45-word article on the second or third page." In addition, the city "may provide other story placement locations and additional space for SDG&E articles and photos." ... Artist Joyce Cutler-Shaw is being paid $217,750 by the city to create public art for the new Mission Valley branch library ... National University is breaking out a new advertising campaign in an attempt to discard its "remedial" image, reports Adweek magazine. "We are presenting NU not as an alternative to traditional programs but as a better and more modern approach to higher education for the real world," said Millie Olson, president of San Francisco's Amazon ad agency, handling the account.

I Can't Eat Peanuts!

By Robert Kumpel

Erin Bushie had no idea that her one-year-old daughter, Aubrey, had a severe food allergy until the call came from day care.

"At the day care, they all had a spoonful of peanut butter at lunch. She had trouble breathing and her eyes swelled up, and they called me right away. My boss let me go, and I took her to the doctor immediately. But when I got there to pick her up about ten minutes after the call, her eyes were so swollen that they were almost shut. It was scary."

Erin and her husband David now live with the reality that Aubrey must not have certain foods. Now almost three years old, Aubrey doesn't seem to care that some foods are off-limits for her. She is bright, energetic, and outgoing, blurting out, "I can't have eggs!" Her mom corrects her. "Not anymore. Now you can." Aubrey adds, "I can't eat peanuts!" then rushes off to the living room of their Talmadge home. Erin lists her allergies: "It used to be eggs, peanuts, cats, and dogs, but she's outgrown the allergy to eggs already. She used to be fatally allergic to peanuts, but her scores have gone down — lower than most kids who have allergies to peanuts, but they said to still not give her any. She might outgrow that too, but they don't expect her to. We worked with Dr. Michael Mellon at Kaiser and he was just great."

"What made it so scary was that I didn't know. One time, probably the third or fourth trip to the hospital, the respiratory therapist said, 'She probably has asthma.' I didn't know allergies were related to asthma at all. That was in September of 1999. By January 2000, we had her tested. They skin-tested her by making some pricks in her back."

Kaiser put Aubrey in a study, since she was too young for the regular therapy of inhalers. "They were starting this new medication, called Pulmicort, that was supposed to be like an inhaler. They provided us with everything, including the nebulizer [which reduces medicine to a fine spray], and did the study with several different babies. She responded well to it, and at the time she was around cats and dogs, and she could do that with the Pulmicort, even though she was allergic to them. In fact ever since we've started it, she has not been back to the hospital once."

Pulmicort is the generic name for Budesonide, a popular anti-inflammatory steroid used in treating asthma. A corticosteroid, Pulmicort inhibits the body's ability to react to allergens or cause inflammation.

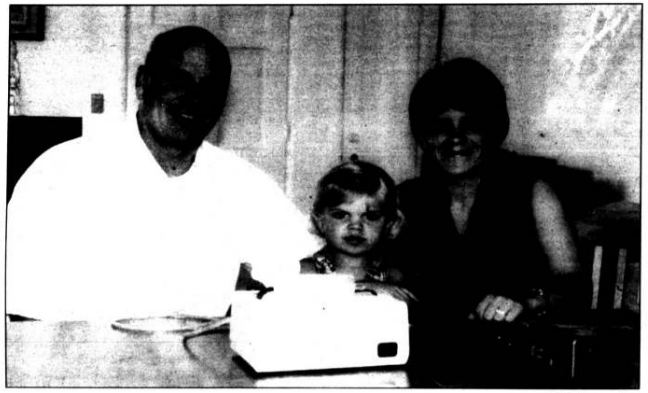

Erin brings out a machine about the size of a school lunch box with an electrical cord. It is a compressor nebulizer. The dosage of medicine is placed in the machine, and it produces a "fog" of medication for Aubrey to breathe through a mask connected by a hose. A new, smaller, battery-operated machine is still unopened. The new machine will allow Aubrey more flexibility, as it can be used anywhere. Erin calls this process "fogging."

While wearing a mask to inhale vapor is easy for an adult, getting a one-year-old to do it is not easy. "At the hospital, they used a Barney character with a mask, and they let the kids put it on Barney, then themselves. She didn't like it the first time, but after that she was okay. I think it's because she started so young."

Like other allergy patients, Aubrey needs an emergency dose of adrenaline on hand in case of anaphylactic shock, but she was too small at first for a standard "Epi-pen" kit. "We had to carry around a syringe and fill it ourselves with the proper dosage in case she ate the wrong foods. Whenever we went to the hospital, we went because she was having trouble breathing. Her passages were shutting on her, though she never broke out in hives or anything like that. Now that she's older, she can handle a bigger dosage, so we have the 'Epi-pen Junior' kit."

David is aware that, like most parents of allergic children, they have to go out of their way to inform anyone who comes in contact with Aubrey of the dangers. "All of Erin's awareness and reactions of what she has to do — every situation we have to go into — we're pretty informative to all the people involved. It takes an effort, but Erin, being a former teacher, she's really attentive to detail. She lets people know, not in an offending way, but just so everyone becomes aware of it. Everybody contributes, and there hasn't been any issue as far as her ingesting any foods that give her reactions." David produces an elaborate instruction sheet printed for babysitters, parents of friends, and teachers. It lists Aubrey's allergies and offers instruc-

Pretty Woman

By Deirdre Lickona

On a recent Saturday, I visited the jam-packed sands of Pacific Beach. The constant breeze tempered the sun's rays and made the day ideal. Like bees busying themselves with their honeycomb, these sun-worshippers busied themselves with recreation — beer, tanning, horseshoes. The tanned flesh of the toned twenty-something crowd was dotted here and there with bits of ink and metal, belly-button piercings and tattoos having slid from roguishness into trendiness. Like a drone, I weaved my way through the buzzing crowd, searching for a queen bee who would give me her perspective into the feminism of the new millennium — and in particular, how it manifested itself in her own body image.

My first attempt was with a group of youngsters — still in high school, barely old enough to test the more political waters of womanhood. Drue, 16, blissfully glossed over the distinction — whatever it may be — between "feminist" and "feminine." When I asked after the definition of a feminist, she replied, "Being in tune with women, being involved in your looks and the way your image is with people. I'm not really one. I want myself to look good, but I don't take all hours of the day on my looks."

As it happened, only one of the 17 women I spoke with declared herself a feminist, with any kind of conviction. Most said they were not, usually citing a lack of political drive. A few wallowed in the mushy middle, saying they supported "equality" and "equal pay for equal work" — the only issue mentioned with any regularity. All said they wanted to get married, and all but one said they wanted to have children.

I followed Drue's lead — discussing looks and image — and inquired after her bikini: black and white zebra-print with red trim. What had been her criteria in selecting it? "I need something that covers my butt, because they're making bathing suits that are nice and skinny and don't cover much. I like to buy bright colors, because it makes me look tan, but I'd rather have guys look at my face than my body. I mean, I don't love my body. There are things that I wish were smaller, or bigger." What? "My boobs, like everyone. But I'd rather guys look at my face, because you can tell more about a person from their face."

I turned to the more slightly built Erinne, 17, and asked about her own body image. "If I could have any body, I would be tall. I wouldn't have to be really skinny, but toned. I would like to have bigger boobs, because I think clothing would look better on me if I had a fuller chest." Do you like to be looked at by guys? "Yeah. Most girls do. It's flattering, self-assuring, and just kind of fun. But there's different kinds of guys. There's guys that drive around and catcall you and are nasty — that's gross. Or there are guys that just come and talk to you and have a natural conversation. That's kind of the way I like to be noticed."

I pushed a little. What about girls who show themselves off, perhaps prompting the catcalls from the "nasty boys." "It makes me feel bad for [those girls]. And it's bad for guys, because the guys will be like, 'Oooh, too bad you're not like that.' They get an image of the perfect woman, and then we have to live up to that. It makes us feel worse about ourselves, and that's not how we should feel. We should feel comfortable with our bodies."

As I moseyed down the beach, I zeroed in on two attractive, bikini-clad sunbathers. Both were blond; both were endowed with the height and chest that Erinne longed for. Neither considered herself a feminist. Christina, 26, spoke first. "I guess a feminist is someone who stands up for women's rights and issues. I'm probably not one. I'm kind of old-fashioned. I don't believe women should be barefoot and pregnant; I believe in equality and whatnot. But I'm not like a real political person. I work, and I'm independent and single, but when it comes time to get married, I want to have kids and marry someone who can take care of us."

Drue and Erinne

Erika, 27, echoed some of Christina's sentiments. "I don't consider myself a feminist, because I'm not actively involved in feminist issues. I have my own beliefs, but I don't make a point of going out and voicing my opinion or making a difference in those issues." I couldn't imagine that either of these beauties would wish for different bodies, but Christina was not absolutely content. "I'd like to have a tighter ass, a tighter stomach — all the things you get from going to the gym." Erika merely shrugged, "I'd like to be a little more fit, but I don't have any serious issues about how I would like my body to be."

I turned to Christina: what do you want men to notice about your body? "My boobs."

To Erika: What do men think of your body? "I don't know; that's a hard question."

Christina was incredulous. "That's not a hard question!"

"I know, but to say it out loud... Yeah, they like it. I mean, I would just never say that."

I asked what seemed an easy question — would you rather be smart and homely or dumb and pretty? "Fortunately," answered Christina, "we're lucky enough to have both. I can't say. I wouldn't want to be not pretty or to be stupid." Erika thought for a moment. "Beauty is on the outside. It doesn't last forever. So I guess I'd rather be smart and homely — but that's if I had to choose."

Twenty feet down the beach, Vicki — 30, voluptuous, busty — answered in a heartbeat. "Smart and homely, because I'd rather have men respect me for my brains. Guys stare at my chest when I'm talking to them instead of my eyes. If I could change something about my body, I'd get rid of my big boobs. I think some women don't understand what it's like to have big boobs. I like to tions on medications to use and dosage. "Erin has a gift for enrolling people into the idea of taking care of our kid!"

Erin doesn't think any of this has been embarrassing, nor has anyone treated them as oddballs because of their concern. "Everyone's been great about it. I think, too, when I say that she's fatally allergic to peanuts, they hear the word 'fatal,' and they understand that this isn't something that she's just going to be coughing at. After going to the hospital three or four times and seeing what a struggle it was for her to breathe — and sometimes it was an hour before the respiratory therapist was able to see her — after seeing your child struggle like that, you're not going to be timid about letting people know.

"If she has to go to a friend's house or day care, you have to let them know she's allergic to peanuts so they don't give it to her. Dr. Mellon said this is common with babies, that she seems to instinctively know what she's allergic to, and she won't eat it.

When she was allergic to eggs, she wouldn't eat them, when she would eat everything else under the sun. At the home day care I used to send her to, she'd say, 'I can't have peanuts' and 'I can't have eggs,' and a lot of the kids were older, so they'd all look out for her."

David: "With Chinese food, she would normally eat certain things. But with cashew chicken or any type of food cooked in peanut oil — which a lot of Chinese food is cooked in — there's no trace of peanuts that you can see. She would spit it out or push it away, but she wouldn't keep it in her mouth. She had a sense of what was bad for her."

Erin moved to San Diego from Missouri when Aubrey was a few months old. First working as a teacher, Erin had to use day care for Aubrey her first year in San Diego. Divorced from Aubrey's father, she met David when Aubrey turned one, and he has assumed the role of father since. David romps with Aubrey on the living room floor as he lavishes her with attention and affection. Since their marriage two months ago, Erin has quit her job to stay home with Aubrey.

Being alone in a new town with a sick baby was not easy for Erin. "I felt really scared and helpless. I didn't know what to attribute it to. I didn't know it could be related to food or anything like that. It's pretty scary. With your first-born, everything is pretty new to you already. I thought, 'This is something where I don't even know where to go read about!' I didn't know if I could handle it on my own, and this whole hospital thing can be kind of intimidating. It makes you feel really out of control, but the people I was working with — the doctors and the others — they made us feel relaxed and comfortable. They would tell us stuff when they didn't have to, just to make us relax. For instance, at the hospital, when they were talking among themselves using all their medical terminology, the doctor came over and explained what it was they were saying in laymen's terms."

Erin is not as afraid as she once was about Aubrey's allergies. "Before, there weren't many medications out there for babies. Then I would have really been concerned, but now there's something to help her deal with it. Plus, I learned that she can outgrow some of this stuff, like she has with eggs, and the peanuts are no longer fatal. They said that most kids outgrow allergies they had as babies when they hit three or four.

"In fact, right now, she's going off the Pulmicort. Her dosage was originally .50 milligrams every day. She would inhale through the 'fogger' for 10 to 15 minutes each morning. Over the last six months, we've reduced the dosage down to .25 milligrams, and for the last week, we've been using it every other day. We're trying to wean her off of it altogether. We want to see how she breathes on her own now, because this is supposed to be the best time of the year [July] to get off the medication. It seems to get better as she gets older."

David gives credit to Aubrey for their progress in the allergy game. "Probably every parent says this, but Aubrey is really bright. She's kind of independent, probably because she's been in day care since day one and has mixed with people. She's not easily influenced by people to do something she knows she's not supposed to do. If she believes something, nobody's going to persuade her. For instance, at Easter, she might see a bowl of candy, somebody will say, 'Go ask your mother,' she'll ask her mother, and her mother will say, 'You can have one.' She'll go back to this huge bowl of jelly beans, and she'll take out one jelly bean. She's pretty responsible about stuff like that, and she does know the difference in which foods she should be eating, to some degree, as much as a young child can. I think it would be very difficult if there was difficulty communicating with her. She's pretty aware of what's going on." ■ play sports, and I have to wear a regular bra and a sports bra to jog. It's like, 'Why bother?' You can have pretty breasts at a 34 B." As for the girls who show it all, she says, "Hey, if you've got the body, show it. If I had the body, I'd show it."

Tiffany, 28, lounged next to Vicki on a beach blanket. Her tan skin shimmered against her leopard-print bikini. She longed for the greener pastures (hills?) on Vicki's side of the fence. "I would like to have larger breasts, because ever since I started going through adolescence, I've felt uncomfortable and awkward about my breasts. A lot of it probably had to do with people around me. I'm very hippy; and I just want to even everything out into an hourglass figure."

I assumed that she therefore had no beef with breast augmentation. "I think it's about how the individual handles it. Some girls get a boob job, and they're all about showing their boobs to everyone and wearing slutty clothes and being promiscuous. I don't like that, but if somebody grows up like I have, being very uncomfortable about it, and gets a boob job and still dresses and acts the same way, it's great."

Ann, 21, who filled out her bikini in a perfectly proportionate manner, said she was satisfied with her figure. She listened serenely as I spoke with her friends, but her voice boomed with brazen proclamations when I turned to her. "Hell, yeah, I'm a feminist. A woman can do anything in the world that she wants. A feminist is independent, smart, beautiful, everything. She just knows what she wants and goes and gets it, understanding that she has to use her brain and personality in getting what she wants, and not her body."

So are you opposed to breast augmentation? "I didn't get boobs until I was 18. I was flat-chested the whole way up. I think if you let your body mature the way it's supposed to and then get a boob job, great. If you can carry it off respectfully, do it. But you don't have to show your tits to every single guy in the world. If you have the mind-" state that 'I know I'm doing what I want to do,' and you can pay for it without a sugar daddy paying for it, then it's all right."

I wondered what Ann thought of women that used their bodies, that liked to show it all. "If you've got the body, then that's cool. But don't be rubbing up on my man, because if you rub up on my man, I'm going to [beat up on you]. I'm going to get up in your face and be like, 'Don't you ever come near my boyfriend again.'" ■

"As a general surgeon, I rely heavily on my vision during operations. Consequently, I was actually quite afraid to undertake this procedure because of the fear that I may not have adequate results with my vision and that it might affect my surgical skills. However, your professionalism and expertise allayed my fears, and at this point I can honestly say that my vision is perfect and I have no trouble performing complex operations."

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Illustration By Rick Geary

Hey, Matt:
A friend of mine got a ticket on Third Avenue, between Juniper and Ivy [downtown], for not having her tires turned in toward the curb. She was legally parked at a meter, had her emergency brake on, and the car was in gear, so it wasn't endangering other cars. I don't think that part of Third Avenue even qualifies as a hill, so what's the deal? How steep does a road have to be to qualify for a ticket like that? I don't think I've ever heard of anybody getting a ticket for not having their tires turned toward the curb!

— Toni, North Park

I feel your pain. I applaud the outrage-by-proxy — sticking up for a friend who's been wronged. That said, I hope your friend just paid the ticket and is now a habitual wheel-crimper. According to parking enforcement, the San Diego muni code adopted state guidelines, which say that a 3% grade is a hill. That's a 3-foot elevation change every 100 feet. Not much of an incline, but enough to send your parked motor home careening down the slope. That section of Third is a hill, by state definition.

Parking enforcement doesn't have a list of streets that qualify as hills. Experienced meterpersons know them when they see them. Some parking police are sticklers for this violation, some are more lenient. Whoever tickets the Bankers Hill–Middletown area probably spends lots of time looking for uncrimped wheels, since there aren't many level streets around there. On some streets, you'll find reminder signs about wheel-crimping. I'm told those only go up when there have been a large number of crimper tickets written in the area. If a ticket is challenged in court, the city's engineering department will drag out its maps and confirm the degree of slope.

Hey, Matt:
Was the apparently universal word "binky" just some anonymous, orally fixated infant's cute term for a pacifier or a trade name cooked up by some anonymous, orally fixated ad executive?

— Mark in Normal Heights

The board of directors of Worldwide Alice LLC is proud to say we've never heard the word binky before. Guess we don't hang around with enough babies or ravers. But in the interest of scholarship, we poked around in our big bag o' facts and determined that Binky is a trademarked name, now belonging to Playtex, for a line of pacifiers: the Binky Firm Comfort, the Binky Gel Filled, and the Binky Newborn Orthodontic. I guess "Binky" was just too icky cutesy to resist, so it's now the "Xerox" and "Kleenex" of the babygoods world. The Playtex attorneys would appreciate it if, from now on, we'd say, "Hey, man, here, take my Binky-brand Firm Comfort pacifier. You've got this rad jaw thing going on. You're beautiful, man. I love you. Let's dance." The Worldwide Alice board of directors has added "binky" to the list of words never to be used again in the office, along with "comfort zone," "personal space," and "closure."

Hi, Matt:
Where does the necktie come from?

— Tieless Tim Cotes, Shelter Island

They came from hell, I tell you! HELL! Well, actually, France. The same country that gave us high heels. In the first century, Roman soldiers tied water-soaked hunks of material around their necks to keep themselves cool while they marched around Europe slaughtering people. I guess it's understandable why neckwear never caught on as a fashion statement then. But one day in the late 1600s, soldiers from Croatia showed up in Paris. They wore linen scarves around the necks of their uniforms. The French nobility took one look, and the next day men and women in the trend-setting upper classes had long, flowing things tied in a knot around their necks. The rest of Europe looked to the French court for guidance before they got dressed every morning, so soon everyone was wearing ties. The British King Charles seemed particularly fond of them. Neckties became a fashion and status statement. Serious treatises discussed proper knotting techniques. Ties and knots were named after famous people and places. And we sheep have been knotting cloth around our necks ever since. There's no indication that the Croatian soldiers used their scarves as the Roman soldiers had. So it looks as though the necktie was useless on day one and is still useless 350 years later.

SportingBox

By Patrick Daugherty

No Mas

For most of us, the sports year starts when the National Football League says it starts, usually on a Sunday, somewhere between the first and tenth of September. The sporting year moves smoothly through college and pro football until February, when it's time to eye college basketball, the NCAA basketball playoffs, then on to the NHL playoffs, and concludes in June with the NBA playoffs. July and August—if it's not an Olympic year or a World Cup soccer year, or if there's not a compelling boxing match, any Tour de France, the NASCAR weekend, the odd rodeo, or when Tiger Woods is playing for the PGA championship—is the time to pat your kids on their mushy little heads and tell them to play in the backyard. Unless, of course, you like baseball, in which case, leave the money-sucking wretches a note.

Either way you do it, there are only a few weeks left until the 2001 NFL season... I believe the term is, kicks over. No. Kicks high. No. Kicks-to-my-Lou. No. Kicks off. That's it, a few more weeks until the NFL season kicks off. I have come in early to prepare for another sporting year.

I will start by saying the hardest thing first. There will be no Sporting Box Football Contest this year, and, most probably, there will never be another football contest hosted by your servant. (The San Diego Hot Line for suicide and mental health problems is 800-479-3339.) For many readers, this is grim, evil news. The football contest has been running for seven years, which is seven generations as these things are counted.

It began, as these things often do, with a simple idea, "Gee, why not set up something like a sports book and let readers pick football teams against the spread? We'll give out prizes. Yeah, you bet, that'll be fun."

Now comes Mr. Handyman with a tip. Whenever you have a simple idea that begins with, "Gee, why not...", insert the phrase, "build a bathroom in the basement" in place of your original inspiration. If building a bathroom in the basement still sounds good to you, then carry on and don't stop until all the money is in my hands.

Year 1 and Year 2 readers e-mailed and faxed their picks to me. As I remember, there were 80, perhaps 90 contestants. Every week, I retrieved picks, wrote them into forms I had made up, then, after the week's games were played, I manually scored each person's pick and arranged contestants from highest to lowest.

My life became paper. The NFL season, through the Super Bowl, is 21 weeks. Let's say we have 80 contestants who average eight picks a week. That's 13,440 picks, each one important to the picker, and, taken together, impossible for me to manage. Therefore, we have errors on a constant basis which produces another weekly blizzard of e-mail and faxes. I averaged 20 hours a week dealing with...pieces of paper.

Things changed in Year 3. I had a computer, I had the Internet, mix-and-match and leave-me-the-fuck-alone. There were 300-plus contestants. An acquaintance, who claimed advanced computer skills, was brought on board to devise a system in which readers made their picks on an Internet site and computers would chew said picks, spit them out, leaving me to post the organized data back on the site. Free again.

Said acquaintance designed a truly insane system, requiring 63 steps from start to finish. Each step had to be done in sequence. It took four months, more or less, to learn his system. One day did not pass—not one day out of the 147 days that comprise an NFL season—that I failed to speak with this acquaintance, either in person, at his residence or mine, or on the phone, or by e-mail, or fax, usually on the topic of why step 23a wasn't working. The contest had become a seven-day-a-week job with no sick leave or overtime pay.

The following August I drove to a nest of high-tech offices and knocked on the door of every damn one until I found Jerry Fong. Fong is a one-of-a-kind guy. At 23, he'd already started and dumped a half-dozen companies. He is the smartest computer personhood I've ever known. It still wasn't easy. There were 700 contestants. It took two years to get his program right. I must have called him in the middle of the night 20 times. "Jerry, the site is down." I'd hear a grunt and ask, "Where are you?" "Taiwan," he'd say. "I'll take a look at it." And he did and the site would be up within the hour.

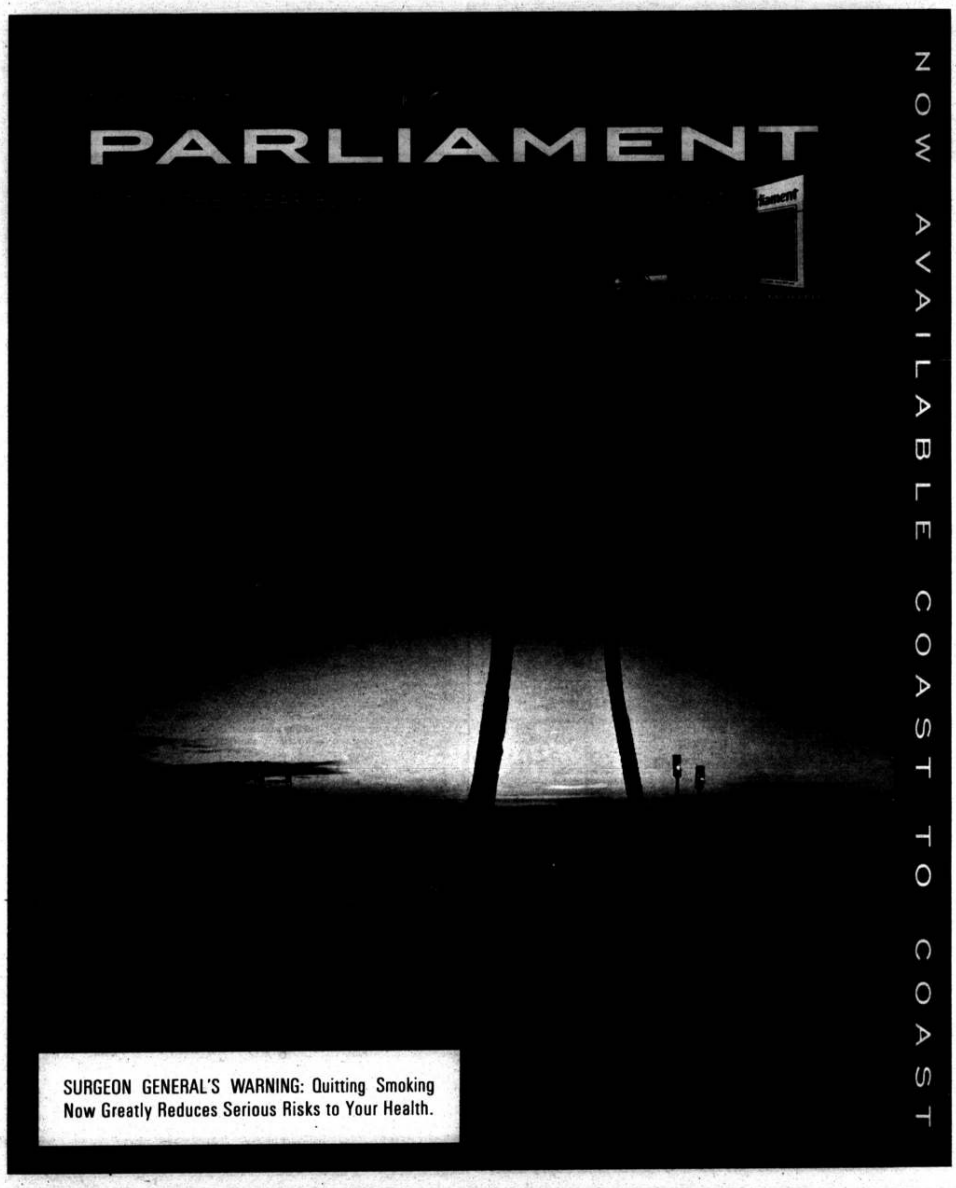

Last spring Jerry hit his bingo. He opened a new company in Houston. This one is a success. He's bought a big, big house on a golf course and...well, you know how it goes...we had a good ride.

Fundamental Baptist Church sits in a part of Escondido where the lots are wide and deep. Swamp coolers rust beside clapboard homes. In some backyards stand what must have been, decades ago, chicken coops. Mature orange and grapefruit and apricot trees bend low over lawns. And all around, to the east, stony hills rise.

Many of those stony hills are being leveled and terraced for hundreds of pink stucco homes. Fundamental Baptist's pastor, Reverend David Earnhart, told me there were 1000 homes in construction in the hills around Escondido. But his church is in the city's flatlands where little new is being built. Across from his church, Mexican families fill a Jehovah's Witnesses hall parking lot with late model vans and SUVs.

"There's fresh coffee in the kitchen," Reverend Earnhart told me when I arrived early for last Sunday's service. "Help yourself."

In the church "auditorium," folks were finishing a Sunday school lesson on the World to Come. Will we be reunited with our loved ones in Heaven? "The husband will recognize his wife and the wife her husband, and it will be a loving recognition. They will doubtless love one another as well as others in a lasting perfect love." Will there be old and young in Heaven, according to the age at which they died? Or will all people in Heaven be the same age? "The Bible does not give an explicit answer on this."

Nor does the Bible give an explicit answer about neckties, but most men at Fundamental Baptist wear them. The women tend to wear long dresses. In the entry, or narthex, where there are pamphlets like Scriptural Truths for Roman Catholics, you also find Uncovering the Truth About Modesty, which cautions against "ostentation or pretension," and whose author states that "too many Christian women overdo it when it comes to putting on their make-up." ("Charm is deceitful," the author quotes Proverbs. "And beauty is vain. But the woman who fears the Lord, she shall be praised.")

Reverend Earnhart's service began with a hymn, which, like others that followed, was written in the 19th or early 20th Century. Reverend Earnhart also acted as choir director. His prayer requests included an elderly church member who took a fall and hit his head on a bathtub, and evangelist Rich Tozour who will be holding a "family tent crusade" at the church, August 19th through 24th. A bulletin Reverend Earnhart passed among the congregation gave detailed biographical information about Reverend Tozour: "traveled as an intern with Dr. Ron Comfort (evangelist), summer 1987"; "worked as a counselor at The Wilds Christian Camp (Brevard, NC), summer 1989."

Last Sunday morning, Reverend Earnhart preached on Revelation 21. He addressed in particular New Jerusalem, which he described as an "immense city" descending from "God out of heaven, like a diamond, like a jewel," capable of accommodating "50 to 70 billion people."

The chapter's verse describing New Jerusalem's streets as being paved with "pure gold, transparent like glass," was vexing, Reverend Earnhart admitted. What sort of gold, after all, was transparent like glass? Reverend Earnhart told us that such details, like many described in Revelation, were beyond our understanding. To illustrate this point, he provided an example from physics. "If we say, for example, that an atom's nucleus is the size of a pinhead, at that scale the nearest orbiting electron is a hundred yards away. A great distance. And what is between the nucleus and the electron? Nothing. How can we comprehend that?"

Reverend Earnhart went on to expand on certain principles of quantum physics that suggest that there are other universes, and other natural laws, coexistent with our own. It was a surprising, but not unexpected, turn for a fundamentalist.

"Being a fundamentalist," he told me later Sunday night, "doesn't mean that you're a traditionalist. That you're totally unaccepting of everything new."

Reverend Earnhart is of a fundamentalist variety that, in his words, "isn't treated fairly, perhaps by design, by the media." Of an independent Baptist persuasion, he and others like him identify themselves with a New Testament Christianity that has defied convention since before the 10th Century. In other words, he doesn't see himself as Protestant. "I find much to agree with in Martin Luther, but I'd differ on many theological points."

Reverend Earnhart sees the great strength of independent Baptists as "our ability to think for ourselves and draw from different sources." In other words, he's difficult to pin down theologically and is comfortable with that. "I'd say Spurgeon is one of our heroes. And A.W. Tozer." He has a son who's a missionary in Peru, a daughter who's a missionary in Albania. ("She and her husband have been there a year and have got the language pretty much down pat. But there are other challenges.")

As for his own church, "I'm in charge of the doctrine. Everybody else's job is to be friendly. If we're friendly and kind and caring, that makes up for a whole pile of stuff."

Dear Aunt Trudy,

My husband (we have no children) is very sensitive to smells. He feels assaulted (his word) by many odors, especially chemical smells. I never wear perfume anymore, and I've never minded when he expressed his preference about the type of deodorant I use. In the past few months, he has started rubbing baby powder all over his body. He says it makes him feel fresh and clean and not so bothered by smells. He began by putting it in his shoes, then his underarms, and now pretty much everywhere. The problem is that he wants me to do the same thing, and he has started checking under my clothes to make sure I am powdered, which makes me very uncomfortable — I am shy about my body and normally do not even undress in front of my husband. I know this seems silly, but I have never cried so much in my life as I do lately. He is a good man. I love him and would like to have children with him. Do you have any ideas for how I can learn not to be so bothered by this?

SNIFFLING IN SANTEE

Dear Sniffling,

It pains me to think of you weeping in the bathroom, dusting yourself with clouds of baby powder! Honey, your husband needs to curb his rabid scent tyranny a bit. Your well-being and privacy are being infringed upon. Please talk to him frankly. Does he know these powder inspections upset you? Are other things going on at home that are distressing you too? We're all wired up differently. Some of us are hypersensitive to blazing lights, loud noises, exotic food. If your man wants to keep the talcum companies in business, fine. But his "sensitivity" sounds like it's increasing to proportions that interfere with rationality and domestic happiness. Not many of us would tolerate being "skin-searched" every day as though we were suspected drug smugglers! If talking this over doesn't solve the problem, he and/or you could see a psychotherapist. Let's make sure he isn't developing an obsessive disorder. He could get a physical, too — I've read that zinc deficiency can cause olfactory distortions. Address this problem now. Your cramped spirits will lift. Later on, you won't have to worry that your husband will sniff the kids each time they leave the house. Children tend to take a dim view of such shenanigans.

Dear Aunt Trudy,

We're worried about our pal who recently separated from her husband. One reason "Daisy" left "Cliff" was that she felt disappointed in him as a breadwinner. Now she's full of plans for financial independence. Sadly, Daisy's get-rich-quick schemes are absurd. She's never really had a job besides being a mom. Consequently, her employment ideas are like those of a dreamy teenager — though she's 40 with a couple of kids. She says she's going to start her own clothing line, though she knows nothing about business or fashion and can't draw or sew. Or she tells us she'll give private dance lessons to rich people's children, though she has no dance training and no connections to potential clients. "I just can't bear to work for anybody else," she tells us. "I have to be free to do something creative, where I'm my own boss." That's nice, but is it realistic? The way her divorce settlement is shaking out, Daisy will need a profitable job, fast. What should we do? We want to be supportive and not throw cold water on her ideas, but we're scared she's not going to be able to make ends meet. Should we say something? Or just keep nodding and smiling encouragingly?

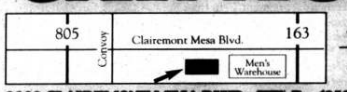

FOUR FRETFUL EL CAJON FRIENDS

Dear Four,

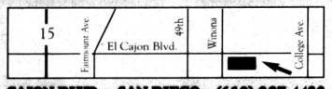

Gently try to help Daisy see reason, if she's receptive. That's a big if. Her whole world is going to capsize right about now. At 40 she suddenly has to adjust to being a single parent and a novice worker bee all in the same breath. This is going to be tough. She could use employment training and counseling, leads on decent jobs, help pulling her résumé together (such as it is), and tips on how to interview well, dress for success, etc. But if she's in the kind of major denial hinted at in your letter, it may be a while before she's ready to grapple with the reality of her situation. As friends, you can stick by her and offer assistance and advice when she's ready to accept it. For her and her children's sake, I hope that's sooner rather than later. But you four better be prepared to back off if she isn't able to listen yet. People in her position often feel like shooting the messenger who brings bad news. Stay out of the line of fire.

Chorizo

by MAX NASH

If you've spent time in Cuernavaca, the "City of Eternal Spring," you've wandered the better neighborhoods northeast of the cathedral. You've browsed the ceramics shops. You've browsed the pottery shops. You've passed Fernanda's chorizo shop, which was likely shuttered.

Tourists who recall Fernanda's shop recall the mural beside the entrance — a rendering of Xochicalco, a pyramid 24 miles to Cuernavaca's south. Painted by Enrique, Fernanda's husband, the mural is so detailed you can see each step leading to the pyramid's summit. You can see the cracks and pits in every stone. What makes the mural memorable isn't its realism, the tropical sunset shimmering in the background, but a scene at the pyramid's top. A Mayan priest, with an arm corded with muscle, holds a knife heavenward. Before him cowers a pig.

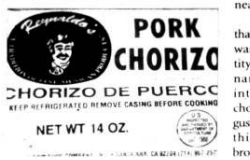

Fernanda once considered printing postcards of the mural to sell in her shop. She had second thoughts. It wasn't so much that the priest atop the pyramid was Mayan. (The Maya had penetrated Mexico that far north, and there were anthropologists who believed that the Maya had in fact visited Xochicalco.) It was the pig and the human-like terror Enrique had rendered in its eyes.

Mexicans make more than 100 different kinds of chorizo, and the small towns outside Mexico City, like the one Fernanda was from, are known for making the best kinds. Everyone agrees that the pork must be chopped, not ground, and that it must be seasoned with at least chile, paprika, and coriander seed. Of course proportions are open to debate and there's always someone who adds a secret ingredient that produces a chorizo surpassing all others.

Fernanda's hometown was noted for its unfriendliness. At some point in its history, the inhabitants hit upon sour inwardness as the distinctive quality that would distinguish theirs from the region's other towns. Tourists who found their way to the unattractive market in Fernanda's hometown didn't linger. The fountain at the market's center was broken. Just beneath its stagnant green surface, hundreds of mosquito larvae twitched. The women who ran the market's stalls answered questions with a sneer.

Fernanda, a tall girl from a family of merchants, married Enrique, a thin boy from a family of farmers. Enrique hoped to be an artist. His big break came when the Department of Health commissioned him to paint a mural on the town hall illustrating the prevention of cholera, dengue fever, and syphilis. Two-thirds of the mural was a success. Enrique depicted syphilis, however, as a spiny-tailed devil attacking naked Adam and Eve. This was judged an affront to public morals and was immediately whitewashed. Disgusted, Enrique swore off murals and took up jewelry-making instead. Fernanda, pregnant, took to making chorizo and selling it in her hometown's market.

Because Fernanda had no particular faith in Enrique's potential, because she was pregnant and needed cash, she was more friendly than the other women in the market. She smiled. Business was slow. The townspeople didn't like her smile and they doubted her chorizo could be better than their own. But it had a mysterious flavor and soon people were buying it out of curiosity. Inevitably, a woman from Cuernavaca bought some, too. She told her wealthy friends about the tall girl who sold remarkable chorizo in a small unfriendly nearby town.

Enrique knew that Fernanda's secret was a certain quantity of powdered cinnamon she mixed into the coarsely chopped pork. It disgusted him that something so simple brought his wife fame. When Fernanda opened her chorizo shop in Cuernavaca, she tried to soften Enrique by asking him to please paint the mural beside the front door. (The idea was that Fernanda's chorizo was an authentic regional product, and what could be more authentic and regional than Xochicalco?) Naturally there were passersby who said a pig was never sacrificed on a Mexican pyramid. And, anyway, the animal's frightened human-like eyes were a scandal. At first Fernanda liked the mural, but in time she saw the pig for what it was.

Fernanda and Enrique had long ago stopped sharing the same bed. They barely spoke at dinner. They were polite to each other only at weddings, baptisms, and funerals.

"We were just children when we married," she said about herself and her husband. She remembered what it was like to love him. She remembered trying to keep her hands away from his face when they kissed. She knew her fingers smelled of cinnamon and pork.

Fernanda was relieved when a large supermarket chain made overtures about her chorizo. The lawyers said her chorizo would be sold in a hundred stores. The Cuernavaca shop would be maintained as a symbol of the product's regional authenticity.

Fernanda has done well by her hometown. She paid to have to market's fountain repaired and cleaned. She buys textbooks and shoes for the poorest children. She has an apartment in Mexico City and a vacation home on a remote Oaxacan coast. She doesn't visit her hometown a lot.

She comes sometimes to Cuernavaca and you might meet her at a cocktail party there. She's stout now and matronly. Enrique is quite thin. They never speak to each other. The only way you might know they are related is that Fernanda always wears one of Enrique's necklaces, a string of simple stones carved with Mayan glyphs.

ARRIVE SAFELY

SIGHTSEER

Hey, Idiot

Despite all of his outrage and bombast, Hunter S. Thompson has always had the best gig in town. Make no mistake: gonzo journalism has been his ticket to a lush life. True, you can't fake it; your conviction has to be consistent, genuine, raw, and ardent, but if you happen to have a mind like Thompson's, if you happen to be whip smart and impulsive, then it's easy street. Thompson himself has defined gonzo journalism as "a style of reporting based on William Faulkner's idea that the best fiction is far more true than any kind of journalism." In other words, say whatever in the hell you want, so long as it means something. Thompson recently explained gonzo journalism to NPR contributor Hugo Perez this way: "It was really born of innate laziness.... I'm a monument to the triumph of laziness, because I just took the notebooks really and typed them up. I was trying to compete with photographers and illustrators. Whenever Annie Leibowitz would finish a story, she'd just send her film in. But I'd be left with the empty pages to slave over, so I thought, well, I can do that too."

Thompson's most recent soapbox has been a weekly column for ESPN.com. Since November of last year, he has been writing "Hey, Rube!" (espn.go.com/page2/s/thompson), which appears on the Disney-owned sports site's irreverent Page 2. "Hey, Rube" means "Hey, Dummy," as in "Hey, idiot, if you think this column is about sports then that's your fault," though it's worth pointing out that in Rubin "Hurricane" Carter's autobiography The Sixteenth Round, the incarcerated boxer's prison buddies address him as "Hey, Rube."

From espn.go.com/page2/s/thompson

Not surprisingly, ESPN coddles Thompson. He's an old pal of ESPN executive editor John A. Walsh, who was managing editor of Rolling Stone in the early '70s, when Thompson was its national affairs editor. "Hunter will call me and rail at me and want to know how he can watch an obscure basketball game that he's having trouble getting on the satellite," Walsh told the American Journalism Review in February. Walsh added that he has no idea whether Thompson's column will arrive every week at ESPN headquarters in Bristol, Connecticut, though so far, so good. "I've made 24 consecutive deadlines with ESPN.com," Thompson boasted to Perez.

Thompson told Perez that he's no stranger to making electronic submissions. He said that he used to travel around with a small fax machine for sending in his newspaper stories from the road. "I could pull into a gas station," he explained, "a closed gas station in South Miami, anywhere at all, and I used to carry a 50-foot extension cord, so I could plug it into the side of the building over by the rest rooms. And as long as I had a phone that I could get a quarter into, the machine would run." But just because Thompson is up to date technologically doesn't mean that he's in step. He may be a sports buff (he began his career as a sportswriter in Florida), but in his inaugural "Hey, Rube!" column, he proposed several ways to shorten baseball games, a sport he abhors. "Not even the New Rules would drag me back to the Ballpark," he wrote, "but I am a Doctor of Wisdom, a professional man, and some of my friends in the Business have asked me to have a look at this problem, which I have, and this is my solution, for good or ill." First, "Eliminate the pitchers, and they won't be missed. Pitchers, as a group, are pampered little swine.... They are as useless as tits on a boar-hog & should all be put to sleep." Thompson also proposed allowing all base runners to run to any base ("but not backwards"): "First to Third, Second to Home, etc. And with NO PITCHER in the game, this frantic scrambling across the infield will be Feasible and Tempting."

The column usually begins as a gambler's take on pro sports, then segues into politics, which Thompson understands as just another high-stakes games spoiled by capital. "I can Play in this league," Thompson stated in one early column. "I don't like it — but when my own editors at ESPN start asking me to get outraged about the Huge Salaries being paid these days to Baseball Pitchers — instead of the truly Insane high-stakes Gambling that is going on right now in our national Political Arena — I know how Thomas Jefferson felt when he said, 'I fear for the fate of my country when I reflect that God is Just.'"

But as is typical of Thompson, he reserves the most crushing blows not for his subjects — "preternaturally arrogant" athletes — but for the corrupted press that feeds off them, that "rude & brainless subculture of fascist drunks" who are "more disgusting by nature than maggots oozing out of the carcass of a dead animal." Your "average career sportswriter," Thompson charges, is a "jock-sniffing nerd or a hired human squawk-box with the brain of a one-cell animal."

Only Thompson can earn three squares a day by biting the hand that feeds him. ■

As Far South as I've Ever Been

Early Black Settlement, part 2

Christ Episcopal Church (Ninth and C), Coronado, 1910

On April 25, 2000, I conducted an oral-history interview with Cynthia May Hudgins. Her good friend's daughter was present at the interview. Cynthia begins by telling me:

My great-grandfather was probably mulatto. Grandpa Amos was very light but had Negro features. Grandma Cynthia's father was English — her mother was perhaps mulatto as well. Grandma Cynthia was light brown and did not have Negro features. Both my grandparents spoke perfect English as well — no patois. Their son, my father, was a member of the old East End Gang and attended the old Lowell School in South San Diego.

While I am of black ancestry, both my father and I appeared, and could have passed for, white. For many years I did. This is the reason I could not as a child understand why I was treated differently from the other children, by them and by my teachers. My Scottish mother left me to live with my grandmother. Coronado was a small town in the '20s and '30s, so everyone knew I was "colored" except me. I didn't know until I was 11 years old and my friend told me about the one-drop-of-black-blood rule.

Her mother was the only mother who let her child be friends with me, until I was in junior high and another woman let me associate with her kids and come into her house — when I went to live with my parents after my grandma's death. The Tsuneyoshis lived on our block and Fusako became a friend. In high school, another woman let her daughter be friends with me too.

My grandparents were married at Richmond, Ray County, Missouri, on June 19, 1874, by John W. Anderson, minister of the Methodist-Episcopal church. My grandfather signed up for the Civil War, giving his credentials as "farmer." That's all I know. And he was only just 18 years old or so.

This is the story that I read at a Memorial Day thing. I saw it just this afternoon when I was going through this stuff. Amos Hudgins was born in Missouri in 1844. Joined the 2nd Kansas Colored Volunteer Infantry, Company K, when he was 18 years old. Fought mostly in Arkansas. Mustered out in Kansas.

Fought admirably. After the war went back to Kansas. Starving. Ragged. Barefoot. They ate the mules' food, and then ate the mules. Amos was wounded by a mini ball in the left knee. Married Cynthia Ann Renfro in Fay County, Missouri, in 1874.

Cynthia was born in Maysville, Kentucky. She was a slave until age 12. Lived in Topeka. He rejoined the Army, 7th Cavalry, as a Buffalo Hunter and Scout, with Reno. Grandma had a millinery store — my mother told me that. Moved to San Diego County in 1887. My father was born in 1891 in Logan Heights.

My grandfather was hauling for a time with a team and wagon. He homesteaded in the El Cajon Valley. Homesteading didn't work out. That was when they came out here. He couldn't handle it, because of the knee. So he came into town with his team and wagon. He was offered the corner of Fifth and Broadway, where Walker Scott was, in exchange for the wagon and team, but he couldn't do it. He was a teamster — it was his livelihood.

So then he went off up to the Yukon, to the Gold Rush. He came back with three nuggets. My grandmother did hairdressing and sewing for ladies while he was gone. Probably straightening hair. She was very talented. They moved to Coronado in 1905 — maybe 1903?

He came back to San Diego and joined the California Naval Militia, because of the Spanish-American War. He was one of the three founders of the Masonic Fidelity Lodge No. 10, 1903. He was senior steward. Two members told me he was senior steward. In 1905, he was in Arizona, working on the San Diego and Arizona Railroad track.

He was barbering when Poppa was a little boy, but that probably didn't last too long. Poppa used to remember being in his shop and seeing the important men of the day come in — you know, Father Horton and some of those other people, shop owners and wealthy men.

The shop was around the corner from the old Golden Lion restaurant, between Fourth and Fifth on Broadway. The barbershop was on E Street, between Fourth and Fifth. I thought he might have owned it, but he just owned a chair in it, because the shop was William's shop.

In 1905, a Mexican hurricane came up. There was beach down along the oceanfront in Coronado, just like there is now. This Mexican hurricane came up and washed the beach all out. And the houses all along the oceanfront were inundated with water. Some of them were moved to other locations. Dr. Kneedler's house was moved from there to A Street.

So then the San Diego and Arizona Company decided to put in this seawall, and that was what my grandfather was working on. They were putting in these great rocks with horse and wagon. And one of those fell off the wagon and fell on my grandfather. The horse moved, and the rock rolled off and fell on him. It crippled him for life — he was really wrecked with this one, because he never worked again. As I remember, he was bent over and walked with a cane.

The beach washed back in again, because they dredged the bay to let the big ships come in. And they dumped the sand off Coronado. It washed in, so now we have a seawall and a beach.

We lived at 845 B Street. Because he was working for the San Diego and Arizona Railway, they gave him the job of night watchman down by the old ferry building. They kept stuff there, railroad ties and such, because there used to be a train that came over to Coronado every Thursday. It came around the strand and down Pomona. They turned on First Street and went to North Island, carrying supplies for the Navy.

At that time, my grandmother worked for the Babcocks and for Reverend Spaulding at the Episcopalian manse. I only knew that she worked for the Babcocks because Poppa told me he would go up there and play with the Babcock boy while she was working. I don't know what she did for them. I think she was a cook for the Episcopalian manse.

We were Episcopalian. Grandma and I went to church. We always sat way in back. I didn't know why, of course. I always wanted to head up to the front and sit up close, but she would pull me back and we'd sit in the back.

She was a lovely lady. Everybody in Coronado admired her. White men on the streets tipped their hats to my grandmother. Nobody ever called her by her first name. She was Mrs. Hudgins. They'd tip their hats and say, "Good morning, Mrs. Hudgins," or "Good afternoon, Mrs. Hudgins." Madame Schumann-Heink, the world-famous opera star, used to sit outside on her front porch. "Mrs. Hudgins, Mrs. Hudgins, wait for me." And she'd hoist herself up off of that big rattan chair she sat in and come down and stand on the sidewalk and talk to Grandma while I messed around on the sidewalk, until I got bored and said, "Come on, Grandma, let's go, let's go!"

What is your first memory?

Being waked up in the middle of the night, late at night, and taken outside to watch the Shenandoah come over, the zeppelin, you know. All the ships in the bay — the bay used to be full of ships because this was a Navy town — had their searchlights planted on it. And it was going to dock at North Island. And Grandpa got me up and was holding me. It must have been Grandpa. I don't see how he could have. Maybe Poppa came up. I was only four, and I was sleepy.

Well, it scared me, and I turned my face like this, and they said, "Look, look." This big silver thing went over, and it was so low, you could almost touch it. It was huge! As long as this house, and maybe longer. And then everybody went in and said, "Wasn't that wonderful. Wasn't that something." And they slammed their screen doors as they went into the house. So that was my first memory.

What is your next memory?

The night my grandfather died. That was just a few months later. I woke up, I guess. I was still sleeping at the foot of my grandmother's bed. And the lights were on in the house, and I heard people talking, and I heard my father's voice. So I called out. Somebody came in — it wasn't Poppa — and they said, "Shush, your grandfather's dying. Go back to sleep." And the next morning, of course, he was gone. That's all I remember. He was gone. Grandma was crying.

And I went to the funeral at Benbough Mortuary. There was a black mortuary in town, but he didn't go there. The Benboughs were friends.

Grandpa came to me after the funeral, and everybody said he was gone and he wasn't coming back. I had gone to bed. The bedroom was dark. The light was shining in from the kitchen. By that time, we had moved from the big house to the little house in the back, in my father's radio shack [Cynthia's father was a pioneer in early radio], so we could rent the big house. My grandmother didn't believe me when I told her Grandpa had come to me.

Grandpa didn't get around too well. He always wore that old campaign felt hat with the insignia on it — the Buffalo Soldier hat. A lot of people were at his funeral. We sat in a separate room with a sheer curtain. I could see the coffin, see the minister, hear the voices, and smell the flowers. There were a lot of people. I was four, so it was 1925.

He was friends with Captain Hines, who I think was in the military. And of course our Dr. Kneedler. He had been in the war — it had to be in the Civil War.

At our church we sat in the back. I had never heard anybody tell us to. Now, grandmother was never treated separately. That's why I couldn't understand why people treated me the way they did. She was friends with the streetcar conductor. She was friends with the men who worked on the ferry. Everybody respected my grandmother.

Like I said, white ladies stopped her on the street to ask about the family. We were never followed around in stores. I was, though, when I got older and went to the store by myself.

The kids at school called me "nigger" and threw dirt in my face. They wouldn't let me play on any playground equipment and wouldn't let me use their bathrooms, so I wet my pants in class. In first grade, there were four girls that used to beat me up every afternoon. And I'd go home, cry on the way home, dry my face, and nobody'd ever ask about school, so I never told anybody.

Do you know whether your grandfather was discriminated against?

I don't think so. People would always ask my grandmother, "How is Amos, and how is your son and his wife?" We went to visit at the big house on the corner, at Eighth and E. We'd go to visit the lady and go into the kitchen and sit — a white lady. Her daughter was the telephone operator — there was only one telephone operator in Coronado. Then we went to visit down at Ninth and B. There was another white lady, and we'd go to her house and sit in her kitchen. And sometimes she and my grandmother would go into the living room, where she had a big cast-iron stove that was always lit with fire, and I was fascinated by that stove.

Then, we would go and see Mrs. Wilson. Coronado has those funny little jogs, where streets go off at an angle. Now, Mrs. Wilson was a lady who wasn't — she wasn't very dark. She lived at Olive and at one of these angles on Olive. She had a son named Tommy, who was a chauffeur at the Hotel del Coronado.

Who else did we go to see? We used to go see the Alcaraz family. That was a white family. Mrs. Alcaraz never invited Grandma into the house. They sat on the porch. Oh, and then Mrs. Holmes. She was another little old lady. She had a son that my father used to play with, and we'd go and visit her and would go into her house. I didn't go into her house, I played outside, but my grandmother would. So she was invited to visit white ladies.

What about black servants? Where did they live?

Some of them commuted every day, and some of them lived in apartments over the garage. I don't know whether they actually lived in the house or not. They usually wore their uniforms — green or white heavy starched uniforms. They commuted by ferry or by streetcar. In the late afternoon, they'd be sitting in the park with their kids or charges, because the Navy wives went over to North Island to play cards in the officers' club or swam in the pool.

Navy people were separate from the other people. They rented houses all over Coronado. But these were not sailors, these were officers. It was elite.

Did Navy people live west of Orange Avenue?

No, there were some nice houses east of Orange that they probably rented.

There were at least three Mexican families and three Japanese families. Regarding where they lived, I couldn't tell you. One of the Silva families lived along here. There was Silva and Israel. There were Japanese, the Takashitas. They're all dead, gone. Fusako was my friend. She was a Tsuneyoshi. Heidi and Horuki, they were cousins. So there were two families. Their fathers were gardeners.

I never saw Japanese kids or Mexican kids being harassed. Never. Me, I was the target until the fourth grade.

What else did the children say to you?

They said, "My mother says I'm not supposed to have anything to do with you." "My mother says that I'm not supposed to play with you." That kind of thing. And they'd call me over and throw dirt on my face and run away laughing. Or they'd get me on the teeter-totter and drop me. It's a wonder I don't have a ruptured spine! I got so I wouldn't come when they called me.

How did you cope?

I read. As soon as I learned how to read, I poured myself into books. There were a few girls that would play with me, like the girl on my block. She would play with me if there was no one else around. Several would walk home with me from school once or twice, and then they would drop me if someone whispered to them, and they would leave me alone. So I didn't really have any friends until I met my first friend when I was ten. This was in grade school, which was K to the eighth grade. I went to high school in Coronado too, graduating in 1939.

I can brag about myself. I had the highest IQ in my graduating class. In the fourth grade, when we did the Standard Achievement Test — I didn't find this out until after I was gone and married — my test was so high at the school that they said a high school student's test had gotten mixed up with the fourth graders' by mistake.

And that was when my life changed. The teachers started being nicer to me. My fourth-grade teacher — I didn't really like her, because I thought she was prejudiced. By that time, I had figured that out. They were next-door neighbors. Her mother was the sister of the Father at the Catholic church, and she lived with him, right next to us. She was pleasant to Grandma, but she wasn't to me. But I think she's the one who stopped the harrassing.

At that time, I lived at 845 B Street. We lived in the little radio shack in the back — little teeny kitchen, two bedrooms, and a bath. That's all it was. It was torn down 10 or 15 years ago.

The front house was a two bedroom. This house — the radio shack — was on the property when we bought the house. It was all shingles. I was in that house until I was 11 or 12, until Grandma was killed, or died as a result of her injuries.

I wasn't born in that house. I was born in the front house in 1921, and I was about three when we moved into the radio shack, about 1924. I don't remember the actual rooms, but I do remember when the front house was rented. So I was in the back house with my grandmother and grandfather.

Grandma wasn't doing anything by that time. My father sent the papers so they had the pension from the Civil War. I don't know the amount they got, but after Grandpa died and she got his pension, it was only $43 a month. And when President Roosevelt took office, he cut the pension by one-third and really knocked those old ladies for a loop. And that's when she started going downhill.

Amos Algernon Hudgins (Cynthia May's father), c. 1916

She had lost Grandpa and the Depression hit. The house was sitting vacant, her pension had been reduced, and she began to fail. I know that now — I didn't know that then. It was so slow. I went to school hungry and dirty. She wasn't taking care of me. But the teacher knew that.

Why did your parents leave you at your grandparents' house?

My mother moved across town and took my dad with her. They let Grandma come on Sundays for dinner until maybe I was four or five years old, and then that stopped. My mother was cold. I communicated with a Scottish cousin, and his mother was the same way. Not loving. My father met my mother on a street in Glasgow. He was on liberty in WWI, in his chief's uniform.

He was walking down a street and saw a shipmate coming towards him. My cousin and I had talked about this in recent letters. This fellow had a woman on either arm, and she thinks that the other girl was my mother's sister — her mother — and she was chaperoning my mother, more or less, because my mom was only about 17 or 18, and Poppa was about six or seven years older than her. Anyway, he stopped, and he was introduced to the two girls.

He watched my mother walk away and heard this little bell ring in his head. He told me this — that the voice inside his head said she would be the future Mrs. Hudgins. When he got back to the ship, he said, "Which girl is the one you have claim on?" And his shipmate said it was the other one. So he got my mother's address and corresponded with her for two and a half years. Told her about his ancestry, asked her father's permission to marry her, saved the money, and sent for her to come.

They met in Kansas City. Traveler's Aid brought her to Kansas City and stood up for her at the wedding to make sure that it was okay, that she was married. They spent the night in a hotel, and the next day, they came out to California. There was no prejudice in Britain in those days. She knew that he was part colored and had received a picture of my grandmother and all that. And the first time she went out on the streets — it was being stopped on the street. They said to her, "Why did a nice white girl like you marry into that nigger family!" That's all I know. One of her friends told me that.

That did it. She didn't have a phone in the house, and she got closed into herself.

She came with an empty trunk — she brought a steamer trunk, but it was empty. I think she thought all Americans were rich. Father was well-to-do by normal standards, you know. He worked for a title insurance company as a poster. He started out as office boy, took classes and became a surveyor, then he became a poster, and eventually, he was head of the posting department, and I think that just before he retired, he became an officer of the company, but I'm not positive.

So she arrived at 845 B Street. And I was born in the back bedroom. The only thing she ever told me was that when she stepped off the ship — she was so seasick the whole way over, and when she stepped off the ship, if she had been able to get back on it and go back, she would have. But she was too sick.

The Traveler's Aid lady was there to take her, and there was nothing she could do. She told me that her mother was a cold, cruel mother. There was a brother that she had favored over the two girls. They lived in Glasgow, Scotland, in a tenement building. My grandfather was a switchman for a railroad, not well-to-do at all. And they thought all Americans were rich, you know. Look at how good-looking my father was, in his uniform, especially.

Coronado railroad, c. 1910

Coronado then was a very small town. Everybody knew everybody. Every other block in Coronado was owned by the Spreckels Company, and they were all vacant and kids could play. You could run all over. I lived on the beach. Everybody lived on the beach in the summer. The wealthy people came out and stayed in the hotel and stayed at tent city, in the tent buildings sitting off the Hotel del Coronado, or they rented a big house.

Did your mother ever join anything?

No, I don't think she was shunned. She just withdrew. My father introduced her to some ladies from the office where he worked, and he was in the Foreign Legion and tried to get her with those ladies. They were having one of those things that ladies had — a little tea or something — and people were supposed to bring things. She baked a cake. She knocked at the front door and the butler came to the front door and told her to go around to the back. She thought that it was a personal thing, not realizing that the food went into the back and came out the front later.

She had two friends. One was a policeman's wife, and the other was a Canadian lady. I don't know how she met them. They were her friends until the day that she died.

We all lived on B Street. So then my parents rented the house on J and then they bought it. I don't remember anything about their moving out, because I was too little, about two or three. All I remember was sleeping in my grandmother's bedroom, in the crib at the foot of the bed. I was taking a bottle, so I was pretty little. I remember that. And when she weaned me, I hollered a lot about it. So did my son when I weaned him.

Every Sunday my father would come and get me, and I would go over to J and then back. I'd stay there until the day was over and then would go back home. They finally found out through some grapevine that my grandmother was neglecting me and I wasn't being fed properly. They decided I was old enough to come to their house after school to have dinner. And then my father would drive me home at ten o'clock and I would go to sleep at my grandmother's house.

Mother only had two friends. Well, she would be friendly with the next-door neighbors. They were rentals, and people would come in, and she would be friendly with them. There were some Joneses living next door to us. At this time, I was five, six, seven, or eight.

Did the kids in elementary school ever start to like you?

Not really. There were two schoolteachers. They saw the situation. They were Campfire Girl leaders, and they asked if I would like to join the Campfire Girls. And I asked my mother, and she didn't have any money, so the two teachers chipped in to pay the money for the dues. My friend and I joined the Campfire Girls. But the other girls didn't mingle with us, so we dropped out.

My grandmother died when I was 11, and I was 12 when I started junior high. I went home to Grandma's every day from school to see if she needed anything, and then I walked back to my mother's.

You were still commuting back and forth?

Yes. I had my bicycle by then. I stayed late at school that day for some reason and hopped on my bike and rode to Grandma's. I see that she is okay, and I started to leave, and she asked me to go to the store to get some food for my cat. And I said I couldn't, that it was too late, and that Momma would be mad at me if I wasn't there to set the table. It was probably in the early part of the year, because Grandma died in the spring.

She was just an old lady. She wore a long, black dress, usually. Wore an apron, a white apron. She wasn't doing laundry by then or cooking. She wasn't doing anything, except sitting in her rocking chair and holding her Bible and falling asleep. She was a Christian person. She read her Bible religiously. I remember saying my prayers at my grandfather's and grandmother's knees. They both sat in their rocking chairs side by side in that little kitchen.

Anyway, she wanted me to go to the store, and I said, "I can't, Grandma. I can't. If I'm not home to help Momma, she'll be mad at me." And I took off. I was supposed to be there to do what I had to do. And I went to the movies that night. They gave me the dime or 25 cents, whatever it was. And I heard sirens. And I thought, it has nothing to do with me, and I went back to watching the movie. Then I rode my bicycle back to my parents' house. And when I walked in the door, I knew something was wrong.

Mom was sitting on the couch, and my father was awake in his chair. Usually he was asleep. I walked through the door and Momma said, "Grandma's been hit by a car."

And I said, "You're joking." And she said, "Why would I joke about a thing like that?" And I said, "Where was it?" She said, "It was at the corner at the Episcopal Church." She was cutting catty-corner, crossing in that black coat she wore with a black satchel and a black hat.

It was during the movie. You know where the church is, because you've seen it. On the corner of Ninth and C. She was crossing the street to go to the store, to get food for my cat. The neighbors on the corner — they had been our neighbors and now lived on the corner near the church — heard her scream. She was thrown 15 feet. The kid was speeding. He had his father's car without permission.

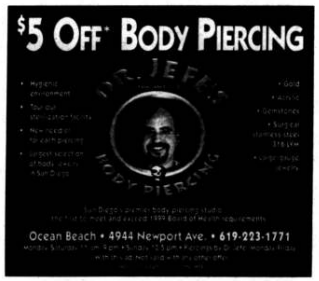

What kind of car was it?

I don't know. It was a Navy officer's son, so I'm sure it was something better than a Model T. And the police took her to the county hospital in San Diego.

My mother had her taken back to Coronado, and they put her in the Coronado hospital. But they put her in a little room that was kind of — it had been a storage room, I guess. It was discrimination, because I wasn't allowed to come through the front of the hospital. I had to go back down the side and go in that door. And she was sort of comatose.

I don't know where she was hit. She was badly hurt. There were broken bones, I guess. She was thrown 15 feet. She murmured to herself, but she didn't really know anybody or anything. In the beginning, when they asked her where she lived, she gave the address on Julian Avenue [her earlier home in Logan Heights]. She was doing that reverse thing that people do when they are getting ready to die.

And so the hospital — I don't know how Poppa found out that she was close to death, because they didn't have a phone. I know when I came in that night from the movies that the police had finally gotten around to coming and letting them know about it, because it happened about 7:30 or 8:00. It was an hour or an hour and a half before they were notified. And then they had taken her to San Diego. I don't remember.

She lingered two or three months before she died. I know that I was there. Momma left. Poppa said that he had better get to town to sign some papers before she dies, before she's gone. And so Momma took the car keys and drove Poppa down to the ferry, so I was alone with her when she died. She was just lying on the bed there breathing hard. And the nurse came in to look at her and went out again. Three times the door opened for no reason, but nobody was there.

And just before she died, her eyes rolled up, and she looked like she was seeing something she feared. And the nurse came in just at that moment and looked at her, grabbed her arm and felt it, and she ran off and came back with a hypodermic and slipped it into her arm. And then she said, "She's gone." And I sat there 10 or 15 minutes before Momma got back.

The coroner here in San Diego said that she was old and she was going to die anyway — that she had had a brain tumor. Dr. Kneedler said her injuries were due to the accident. The boy wasn't cited, and nothing came of it at all.

I didn't go to her funeral. I figured it was my fault that she had gotten killed. I felt pretty terrible about that.

So I went down to live with Momma and Poppa. And I lived in a little room off the back of the house. It was a little house. And that was when Poppa started saying, "We need a bigger house." And he had gotten their $500 wartime bonus, and they bought half of a lot. Then he began negotiating with Cal-Vets.

He got all the specifications for what constituted a house. And that room I was sleeping in had a door that opened to the outside, and they put it off as a bedroom. So he got the okay to go ahead. Then they had to come up with the $1000 for the lot. Cal-Vets wouldn't pay for the lot. They'd pay for the building but not the lot. So he borrowed the money from some people at work.

How were you treated in high school?

Pretty much the same. Of course, my friend and I did not mingle. Well, if somebody would say "hello," I'd say hello, but I wouldn't say hello first. I wouldn't be rebuffed.

"Well," Cynthia's friend's daughter says, "my mother was the one that told her why she was being rebuffed, because she didn't know."

Was it because of the lightness of your skin that you didn't know?

Um-hum. That was in the sixth grade. By that time, my friend's mother let me come and play at their house. And I guess she took a lot of flak from that. Especially from — what was the name of that woman who used to tell everyone that my father was a "big black nigger"? I forget what her name was.

Did you have a boyfriend in high school?

No. There was a boy in the sixth grade that I was really smitten with. And the first time I went to the Saturday afternoon matinee, he came down and sat alongside me. And then, some of those other kids, they called him up. And I saw him go and I knew that was it. And I started dating boys that I met in San Diego, when I discovered skating rinks. This was in Ocean Beach, and they didn't know anything about me either.

I was in a skating club. We had trips and went up to L.A., to one of the big skating rinks up there on one of the movie lots. I saw Judy Garland and Mickey Rooney. Anyway, I had a boyfriend there, a sailor. I told him about me and he said good-bye. Nicely though, very nicely. The streetcar conductor, every time he saw me with a guy, he would tell them. I'd meet them, they'd take me home, and they'd make a date. And then I would be stood up. They never showed.

He never got to tell my future husband, though. He always walked from the ferry to the door of our house. It was just three blocks, or a couple of blocks away. He never got to tell him. The conductor waited until we were married and then told my husband, "Well, you can't have any kids!" But it was too late, because the first month, I was already pregnant and I had a boy. Eleven years later, a girl.

I met him at the skating rink at Ocean Beach, down at the end of Newport Avenue. My friend came out on the floor and said, "There's some Marines over there and one of them wants to meet you." I said, "Okay." My friend always called me "Cynny." She's the only person that I ever allowed to do that, until much later in life. I know that I'm Aunt Cynny to that family.

So she introduced me to my future husband and the other two fellows he was with. He fiddled with my name about three times, and I was thinking, "What a dolt." He was in the Marines. He went through boot camp at the Marine base. He had just made PFC. He was from L.A., born and raised. He was a PFC when I met him, and when we were married, he was a sergeant.

After he floundered over my name about three times, I said, "Oh, to heck with it." They offered to drive us home. One of the other guys had a brand-new Willys-Knight, and they offered to drive us home around the strand. So we drove home with them. Boys didn't do anything in those days. They were gentlemen. But my friend and I were together that night. We made a point when we went out that we would never separate. I met him before college. When I went off to college, I dumped him.

Why did you go to college out of town?

Looking back, I think that's why my mother did it — to get me out of town. I think somewhere along the line, she woke up to the fact that I was being ostracized. I think that they thought my skin color wouldn't make any difference. My grandmother never told me anything and never asked me anything. Momma never asked me, but one time she looked funny when I came home from Valentine's Day and only had about three valentines. And she looked at them and said, "Is this all you got?" And I said, "Yes." She said, "Did the other kids get more?" I said, "Yes." And one of them was one of those penny, nasty ones. And she said, "Oh, this isn't very nice, is it?" I think that's when she got wise. I was eight or nine years old when that happened.

I went to college. My major was art. That was one thing — by the time I got to high school, I would always have a bevy of people standing around watching me draw. But by that time, I wasn't very friendly. I couldn't tolerate people. I didn't say hello first if I passed them on the street.

I made a couple of friends at college, but I've lost track of them. There were a few people from Coronado at the school. The school said to my mother that they wanted people of "your child's caliber" at Woodbury college, on my grade level and all that, and my mother bit it, hook, line, and sinker. She borrowed money on my father's insurance — didn't tell him — and shipped me off. When I came back, and after she was dead, I said, "Why didn't you say something, Poppa?" He said, "I thought that you and Momma had talked it over and that it was all right with you." And I said, "No, it wasn't. I wanted to go to State." State had one of the better art programs at that time. I wanted to be a dress designer and illustrator. I did sew for myself, but the clothes were all for me.

I didn't finish, because I got so sick that I had to come home. I lived with people for room and board. And I got so sick that I scared the old lady and she got in touch with my mother somehow through the school — Momma wouldn't have a phone. And I came home and she was mad at me, of course. The money had been spent, and I guess she couldn't get it back. When I was up there, I was so homesick. And I remembered that my future husband would come up every weekend to visit his folks. So I looked in the phone book and found his family's name and called him.

He wasn't too thrilled at first, but I started crying and that got him. So I came back to Coronado. I learned that there was a vocational school that had a couturier class. I knew how to sew, but I wanted to design clothes. That's what I wanted to do. So I went to that school.

I got hornswoggled into marriage on New Year's Eve. I was going to the class and dating my future husband again. We went to visit some military friends that he knew. In the meantime, I had accepted a ring from him. She noticed that I had the ring, and she said, "Oh, you're engaged." They had a new car and they wanted to go on a fairly long trip with it to break it in. And she said, "Let's take you to Reno and get you married." I said, "No, no, no." And they all started in on this. Her brother was there, and so on.

My future husband thought it was great. So I said, "All right. If you'll take me right this minute, I'll go." And they all jumped up, saying, "I can get off work," because they had to work a half day the next day. It was the night before New Year's Eve. And they had to drive to the depot to get permission. And the commanding officers were all having a good time because of the holiday. They said okay.

I knew the night I met him that it was meant to be. I fought it for two or two and a half years. It was a comic thing, I know. We then lived in San Diego and moved down in a canyon off Park Boulevard at University. We didn't want to live in Coronado. We couldn't afford to on $60 a month. We paid $25 of that for rent and received $15 a month for rations in-kind from the mess hall. I did live in Coronado again, after my mother died, for six years. Then we were shipped back East, and it was back and forth. We moved in here in 1955 and we've been here ever since.

My dad stayed in Coronado until he had a stroke just before his 78th birthday. My mother let herself die of cancer. She knew she had it and didn't have anything done about it. Her own mother had died of cancer. My mother was taking care of her when she was 18 or 19 years old, I guess. Her mother had had surgery, but they didn't get everything. And in her dying agonies, they couldn't give her enough morphine and she would scream, "Oh, if I hadn't let them operate on me, I'd be dead now." They believed that — once you got a cancer and they opened you up and the air hits it and they didn't get it all. There seems to be some truth to that.

My dad lived on alone after that. She was only 49. Poppa had a stroke. He was 78 or 79. So he came to live with us, and I had to take care of him. He was somewhat paralyzed. He was good-looking until he died. He was a beautiful man. He had a beautiful spirit. He was sort of a father figure to all of the young girls at the office. He had a wonderful sense of humor. Dad was in the Foreign Legion. He also was a Boy Scout leader. But my mother wasn't a joiner. And neither am I.

Eva Crawford came to San Diego in 1942. She and her husband built their house in Mountain View, just east of Logan Heights.

> "I didn't ever know anything about a person going to snatch my purse."

Arthur Casey interviewed Eva Crawford on February 19, 1993 (interview transcript available at the San Diego Historical Society Oral History Interview Collection). Mr. Casey introduces the interview by stating that Eva was born in Topeka, Kansas, and did teacher training at Washburn University and Kansas University. She taught for several years in Oklahoma. During World War II, her husband heard about the "wonders of California" and came here for a visit. After he'd been in California just one summer, he sent back to Oklahoma for Eva to move out too. She spent her first night here in the storeroom of a grocery.

Eva, what kind of people did you find in San Diego who could help you? I understand you had no friends or relatives here at all.

Mainly the church. I didn't have a background of knowing about anyone else. Then I went to the priest to ask, and Father Madigan was right there on 32nd and Imperial.

And the first little house that we built was right there across from Stockton School. And he came every day. So I talked, and I just asked him, "What would you do about this?" and "What must I do about that?" and it was just a matter that those people there at the church were my closest friends, and still today are....

You were telling me that it was only a day or two days after you arrived in San Diego that you had an occasion to meet Dennis Allen, and how did that go?

You know, when I went in, I liked the house so very much, having spent my first two days in California in that produce room that I could smell all the onions and the potatoes in. And then, to go into this lovely home that the Allens had. They had a very nice and quite a lovely home. And there must have been at least 25 or 30 black people sitting around the floor. Those who could find chairs were sitting in chairs.

So the lady that I went up there with that day — she spoke broken Spanish and English — made him understand that she wanted a job. Well, everybody said Mr. Allen gave you jobs, so I assumed he could almost do what a senator could do. I didn't know anything about Mr. Allen. But I found out that Mr. Allen had gone around the room, you know, and had given everybody in that room a job — from sorting nails to doing the cleanup in the bathrooms with the three shifts that they had. I didn't know anything about that. I didn't know people worked at night like they did.

Coming from a small town, and Topeka was quite a small town, you were limited, even though the state capital was there. We could always go to the representatives and senators. You always made everything that they had. You knew the governor. He lived on the same street with you. Well, what difference did it make? But when you get to a place like this, it's quite a lot different.

But Dennis Allen was sending people to Convair to work.

Yes, Convair to work.... So when he came down, he looked at me. I kept looking and he said, "Well, what did you come for? Now what kind of job can I fit you with?" And I said, "Oh, thank you so very much. I would like to have a job teaching school. That's all I've ever done." And he looked at me and he said, "Well, where did you come from? Maybe you'd better go back." He said, "I'm not giving out jobs teaching school. They don't have black teachers here." "Colored teachers." "Colored" is the word that he said. And I said, "What? I didn't know that." And he said, "No."

I thought that California really and truthfully was quite a lot different. I did not know. I was as far south as I had ever been when I got to San Diego. And that is being very truthful. People were more prejudiced. I had not lived in the South farther than Oklahoma, but I'm sure that there's no place yet that I would say that is more prejudiced than it is right here in San Diego.

So he just told you to go home?

"Go home." But before we left, his wife came in with the nice little cool mint drink of iced tea and she passed it around. I just knew I liked that lady. As a matter of fact, I did. We became very good friends. Dennis Allen, I'd say, was one of my very best friends before he passed. He used to laugh about that time and say, "When you walked through the door, I told myself, there's something odd about that woman — the way she throws her head and hair." I said, "Well, I just thought that maybe you was 'it,' you know, that I was going to come out of that hole at the store." But it all turned out to be all right.

Well, you were telling me earlier that you went home and thought about not having a job, and then you went on your own to go to Convair.

I decided to go to Convair and ask those people, "Now, wait, you must have a job for me." And they did have a job for me. They told me that I could be a storekeeper.

This is in 1942, and Convair is, of course, overwhelmed with work.

Oh, yes! Oh, my. They had day shifts and midnight shifts and all kinds of people working and walking. As a matter of fact, you did not find the crime situation that you find right here today. I didn't ever know anything about a person going to snatch my purse or anything like that. And now, you're always warned — of course I'm older now — to keep your purse, and for senior citizens to be sure, "Now you put your purse up under your arm."

At that day and time, why, no. Any time of night the bus driver would let you off, he'd say, "Well, good night," and you were free.

You had two small children or three children by now?

Two small children.

And how did you manage children and work?

Well, my husband was to take care of the children in the mornings early. I had to be at work at 7:00 a.m. And then he would go to work late at night when I came in, supposedly. Then in the meantime, he left the kids with Mrs. Hancock, the lady that took care of them and gave them their dinner, for the first part of the night.

But that meant coming in in the evening, bathing a baby, washing clothes, bathing the little girl — oh, she could splash in the tub, mainly — but the baby had to be fed. Bottles had to be boiled and washed. Everything. And then to prepare yourself for the next morning to leave the house at 6:00 a.m.

"He could not find an attorney that would take the case."

so that I would be on the job by 7:00 a.m.

Makes you tired now! Just to think about it. I don't know how I got off and on the buses that passed then, but I never missed a day. No.

So how long did you stay with Convair?

I stayed with Convair until 1942 or 1943. It was about a year and a half that I worked as a storekeeper, keeping inventory of the parts coming in and out of the planes.

So then, what was your escape from this airplane-manufacturing business?

My husband and his brother went to an NAACP meeting, and they met Dr. Will Crawford, who was superintendent of schools. He came home and told me Dr. Crawford said that anything that he could do for him, he would be very glad to do it....

So I went back to Crawford's office, and the secretary said, "Good afternoon." I said, "Oh, yes, I'm Eva Crawford, and I'm from Topeka, Kansas." And she said, "Did you have an appointment?" and I said, "Oh, no, just tell him Eva Crawford is here." And her mouth fell open and she looked at me, and she went in and she told him. I'm sure out of curiosity or amazement or whatnot, he got up and came out to see who Eva Crawford was.

Well, we shook hands, we talked, and I rather liked him. And I'm sure that he rather liked me, because he offered me a job. I was to do long-term substitu-

THE GREAT THING ABOUT EATING MUD IS THAT YOU NEVER GAIN WEIGHT.

Along Venezuela's Orinoco River live the Otomac Indians, who hunt for fish using bows and arrows. But for two months of the year, the river flows too high and swift for the Otomac to employ their normal fishing techniques. During this time, the tribe remains healthy and strong on a diet of mud balls.

tion work here in San Diego, which I did until after VE Day in 1945. And then I got a regular job at Central School, which I wasn't really prepared for. But I got that job, and I kept that job.

Did you talk, you know, with other teachers? Was there anger in the community about coming to California and being qualified to teach and being just ignored by a school district which was in desperate need of teachers? I mean, I know this is 45 years later, but...

You know, people weren't qualified. We didn't have that many black people going to school. The ones who came in here that were qualified had come from Texas or come from a Southern area.... There were not that many people. Northern people didn't come this way, and the people — I guess it was a little difficult to go to school. You didn't have enough money, and there wasn't anything like those federal grants and things of today. You did the best you could to go.

Now, there had been quite a lot of dissatisfaction about Lorraine Van-Low, and that was written up in the little black paper that he had called the Light House, and they had marched down there.

This was the native San Diego teacher who had gone through the San Diego school system but who still was refused a full-time job.

Uh-hum. That's right.

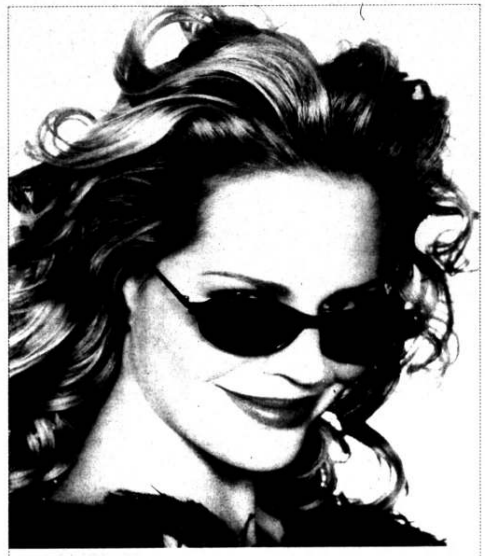

And so there was community resentment and protest.

But there was no community resentment.

About you outsiders, non-Californians. You just didn't deserve a job in California.

No. They thought it was just wonderful if they had jobs as mail carriers. Well, at one time, I thought that wouldn't be such a bad job, but I wanted to hurry up and get a job teaching school.

But even the job that Crawford sent you out to was a really rough, tough job.

Very.

The children you encountered at Central School were problem children, and you had how many of them?

Twenty in the classroom to begin with, and then they weeded them down until I had 15. They took 5 of the older ones out of the class. I mean, at the same time he started a class of upper-division mentally retarded children. That was on the other side of the class building.

And it was sink or swim. You had no preparation for this.

No-o-o-o, not at all. But I didn't sink. I swam. I started right out to State College and I found out exactly how to work with those people. Then, from there, I went to USIU and got my master's degree, and I just continued.

And at this time, you're raising a family of your own.

Yes. I had eight of my own children.

Your husband had gone into the contracting business?

My husband went into the contracting business and was the first black contractor that ever passed the board. He had to take a test, and the test was for three days. Every day he was up there, moaning and groaning about the test, the test. But he made it, and he had made it in buildings. Later he went in for lathing and plastering, and still later, he passed a test similarly for plumbing.

But then, you know, when he first came and there would be jobs [posted] on the board downtown at the union hall, and it would say, "We need lathers." You know what a lather is — when you put the paper and the wire up, and so on. No white man would work on the same boards with him. And this was in San Diego, in 1945....

And he would come home. Oh, he would be very disillusioned and upset. And I said, "Well, let's go home!" "No, I'm not going. I'm going to prove it right here." Well, it wasn't long before, when I started and did my first long-term work at Washington School, that the people from down in that area found out that he could build, and they hired him, one after the other. All of the houses went up. And he was doing very nicely.

We got some rough ways to go on things. Every house would just be fine. The people would be renting the house, the money was coming in for them. But what, "Oh, the man that put the roof on left that, and it's leaking." "Well," he would say, "I wasn't on the roof, I didn't have nothing to do with the roof." He would say, "I'm not a roofer." But, "Well, maybe some of the mud that you were mixing up sprayed up." Oh, no! And do you know, he could not find an attorney that would take the case and beat them fair and square.

Well, that's, yeah, so the whole system...

The whole system as well.

...rejecting, first of all black people, and especially black people from the Midwest or from out of California, which most people were.

Well, the ones that were here weren't doing anything. I have to admit that. Because, I mean, you would run into people that had lived here for 25, 30, or 40 years, and I'd say, "Well, where is your house, why didn't you own something?" "Well, I... I just never had a chance to." Um!...

So your career, then, was with San Diego School District. You just stuck with it. You're saying you did special education preparation at San Diego State and actually got a master's degree with USIU.

I got the master's degree in guidance and counseling.

Oh, you were looking for a way out of the classroom?

That's right.

How many years were you actually there with those children?

Well, not just in the classroom, because you never got out of the classroom, even while you were counseling. I ran a counseling group. I thought that it was nice to know my people, and so, in the mornings, I always called six children in every morning out of whatever the end of the alphabet was. And we sat around and talked.

And the first thing in the afternoon, I called in six more, and we sat around and talked. And I always served them a little cookie or a little something that kind of opened them up, you know. And they would confide. And you could say, "Well, let's don't do this. That isn't the good way, I don't believe. Now, I don't want you to take my values, but I want you to think about it."

I ran into a girl just Monday whose grandmother died, and when I walked in the house, she didn't speak. So I didn't really recognize her. And so, when her mother said, "I know Jackie has been asking when was the teacher coming by." And I said, "What teacher?" I didn't think she was talking about me. They know that I am a teacher in this area, you know. And Jackie walked out and she said, "You don't remember me." And I said [her name].

"All of that time... Do you know, I'll never forget what you told me. On Sundays, go to church. Every Sunday, go to church. I don't care what church you go to, but you go to church. Don't go to that park." This very park here that turned out to be the worst park in the world for a while, but it's one of the best now. She said, "I'll never forget that." She said, "I was in your group." So she was one of the ones that I'd passed a little Kool-Aid and cookies to, and she remembered then that she must go to church. And she said, you know, "I go to church every Sunday." So, some things do rub off on the children.

So you were counseling young teenagers in San Diego during that Civil Rights chaos time, the Lyndon Johnson times, War on Poverty times.

Nineteen sixty-six. I was counseling when they had the Watts riots.... I had gone up to retrieve some children from up there and didn't know whether I was going to be able to get back when I saw all these fires going up every place. So it's something that you lived with. It's something that you try to make a lesson out of — everything that goes wrong. It's not really "wrong." You've got to look at it like the other man sees it too.

Sometimes we feel about people on welfare: "They're here, now they're getting more than I'm getting. I've worked all my life, and they're taking it all." You don't realize. They may be taking it all, but they aren't taking the good that you have gotten out of life. I can feel sorry for them no matter how much money they get. Money is not everything.

In the last of your school work, you were at O'Farrell, which was a new school, I think, in the 1960s.

Nineteen fifty-three.

Nineteen fifty-three. So you stayed there a long time, about 10 years or 15 years or so at O'Farrell Junior High School?

Until they closed down O'Farrell. I was there 20 years.

...Maybe we should talk a little bit about the park. You say, when you came here, Mountain View Park [at 40th Street and Ocean View Boulevard] was pretty undeveloped. It was probably an abandoned piece of city property.

Yes, there were no houses below the park.

This was the end of the city. You were right on the very edge when you built here?

That's right.

When did your husband build this house?

Nineteen forty-three.... This street out here was mud. There was no street. And this was the end of the bus line. It was just right for us. The children and the park. And they had two wonderful, wonderful park people that were at that little house. A woman and a man. And you know, their names escape me. They were both Caucasian. Wonderful people. They'd take the children to the zoo. They took the children — oh, anything that they had — the State Fair. They just took the children. Oh, they were wonderful.... But there was nobody hardly at the park. Maybe they could put all the children in one car. A Mexican man lived across the street, and he had two children. We had the most children. Nobody around, much. All of that was vacant. No houses over there. None back here. And we had goats, chickens. We had an old cow. A garden.... And now I see the police go through. Why, I didn't ever know they had policemen, hardly. What did we need a policeman for here? Everything was pretty good.

LEPROSY: THE COMMON BOND BETWEEN MAN AND ARMADILLO.

(Dasypus novemcinctus)

It was once thought that only humans could get leprosy. But in the late 1960's researchers discovered that armadillos could also carry the disease. The mycobacterium Leprae thrives in cooler parts of the body (feet, nose, ears, etc.) and armadillos have a relatively low body temperature for mammals. Plus, armadillos live long enough for the slow-acting disease to emerge.

It really was country?

Yes, they didn't have any problems.

How far away did your kids have to go to get to school?

Eight blocks up here to Catholic school.

Oh, they went to St. Jude's?

Uh-hum. From there they got scholarships and went to Saints, and from there, the oldest one went on and got another scholarship.

Let's talk a little bit about San Diego history and Mountain View Park right here. As you said earlier, it did go through a very rough, tough period when there was a major drug exchange here in Mountain View Park.

Oo-o-o-oh, that's right! Do you know, between about 1964 and 1968, on a Sunday morning, for example, the park would be just like you see it now, nobody there. Everybody going to church. At one o'clock, you couldn't walk. It would be just like that. Crowded. Just a crowd. Everybody would have a broken glass to try to get somebody. There was dope being sold. There was a band that sat out there that played and danced and oo-o-o-oh, just about ran you out of your mind.

They'd park double-parked in the street. You couldn't go past. You couldn't get home. Fortunately, we walked, so we were just going that way anyway. And I guess in about 1967 I just begged my husband, "Please, let's move!" and he said, "No, we're not going to run."... He would say, "We're going to stay right here." Do you know, once I got up and there were 22 bullets that had been shot right there in the front yard. I had a grandchild here that was three and one that was five that was just screaming to high heavens.

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOE KLEIN

Memorial to Eva Crawford's husband

The policeman came to the bathroom window and said, "Get in the tub! That's the place to stay safe." I said, "I want to get out of this house." He said, "Stay in. Get in the tub." And we did. I'm sitting almost where I am now when a woman walked up and gave a gun to her son — they told me it was her son after he was killed — to shoot a policeman, and he got shot. That boy wasn't more than 15 or 16 years old. Fell right out there.

There wasn't anything. My husband got up one morning and one was laying right over there. The reason that my husband's got this monument that people built for him was that he went to the park every night, circling the park, to see if everybody's all right — he and a man named Mr. Williams. I said, "Somebody's going to kill you. They'll kill you and leave you out in that park." He said, "Nobody's going to kill me. Nobody's going to bother me. They don't want to. I just walk with the Lord, and we just go all around the park, and that's how things are." And I said, "Well, bless you and God, but I'll tell you!..."

Do you know, now they send people from the GR, which is General Relief, or they send people to work on their food stamps, and you see how clean it is along there, and everything is nice and clean and picked up. It wasn't so then. They didn't have any programs like that. They had one man that came down, and, poor man, he would sweep this and try to get all that up that they'd left out there.

Every night, my husband and old man Williams would get that broom and go sweeping along. They kept up everything, that is, after they got the pavement in. But of course, when we came down here, we didn't have any walks. We didn't have sidewalks all the way down here. We had that piece in the front, and they didn't have any over there. They didn't want any. He said, if he had to pay for it, he didn't want to.

Did the neighborhood eventually change?

Well, people began to move....

Except you?

The University of Redlands was founded in 1907 and is accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges.

Yeah. No, he wasn't moving. He's going to stay right here, he said. And if they had all stayed here, we would have had a better community. We would have stayed together! Well, I guess so.

You never know.

You never know, because the community now is solidly Mexican, and I'm going to stay because I've got no place else to go now.

This is a phenomenon which I've watched myself driving down Imperial Avenue. I've watched the commercial world change from black to Mexican. Here we are clear out at 40th Street.... The black community has just scattered. There really is not, in your perception, a black community in San Diego anymore?

No. I guess down around 30th and Imperial, maybe, would be three or four blocks in there where all the business is Mexicans....

At St. Jude's, you only have one English-language mass in all the masses here — otherwise they're Spanish?

Yes, and he has 500 or 600 people at each one of them.

Well, so, this is a new idea. This is black flight. I mean, we've talked about white flight, but this is black flight?

Uh-hum.

And it was blacks running away from the violence of the drugs, the chaos of the Vietnam protests, and the craziness of repressive police in those years. And meanwhile, here you are.

Yes, and I think I may as well stay.... [My children and grandchildren] like the old house. They come for breakfast. Twice a week, I have two that are dentists here that will drop by. First thing, they put up the bars — you know, have somebody put the bars up, and the garage door opener, and a dog on the back porch, and he's big as I am, and he wouldn't bite anything other than a cup of coffee and a biscuit. Now, what good is he, I don't know.

But, they've all said, "Mom, we have a room, you know, you can move right in with us." And I said, "Well, now, I couldn't see out all over to meddle into everybody's business...."

When you were at O'Farrell, you had probably mixed white and black out there?

At O'Farrell, I'd say, I had a slight mix. I had very few Mexicans. I had mostly whites and blacks. The whites were just on their flight seat because...they were just moving out, so there were quite a number. But, as it moved down to around 1969, they were mostly black. Not Mexican.

And so, were you a counselor for racial integration. I mean, were you trying to teach human relations in your counseling?

I had a son to do that. He had a doctorate, and so he knew.... [I was trying to keep] them in school and not bring all of the things that happened at home to school. And there was a time when, "Don't touch." That was during the time that Bob was there. "Don't put your hand on me, don't touch me." No!

Black pride.

Yes. That came out of the Muslims, and that kind of stuff. "Don't touch me!" And I used to love to go up to one. He was the blackest one that we had at that school. But he didn't have — they weren't wearing the beads, those head things. And I just loved to go up and put my arms around him, and say, "Don't touch me. What are you touching me for?" He'd have to laugh, and he said, "I don't like these old farts touching on me." I said, "But you look so go-o-o-od, and that purple shirt is just beautiful."...

But I saw him on dope after that when I was working here at the hospital. I volunteered at the hospital for the next 12 years. And they'd pass and say, "Hey, Teach," and I'd say, "Yes, this is 'Teach' all right, and Teach didn't bring no dope to school or have you interested in it." He said, "I'm getting off it today. That's why I'm up here in this new ward — this new building they've got up here. Now, I'm off of it, Teach, I'm off of it." Going into it farther then than he had been before.

So this is another aspect of your life. This was at Physicians and Surgeons Hospital.

Yes.... I worked in the gift shop, and I was president of the board there.

You were just hoping that the hospital would make it and be a community resource.

Yes, because, see, every hospital board met with every other hospital board throughout the whole county down to El Centro, because our little president is from El Centro. So, you've got to see people. And some of them would look at me and say, "You know, you look like some, oh, that is." Well, they might be all white and you wouldn't be maybe but two blacks there, myself and somebody else. But it didn't matter, because when they looked up on the head table, I'm up there and I'm on the board voting. It was something that I liked. ■ voted to do it to yourself. When two wolves and a sheep vote on what to have for dinner, the sheep is just as dead. Unfortunately, Father Carroll is among those who believe that enough votes are all that is needed to trample on a person's right to be left alone and unmolested.

You cannot do a good deed to one person by first performing a foul one — such as theft — on another. Victimizing others is wrong. By constantly seeking government subsidies and resources for his business, Father Carroll undercuts the true meaning of charity and leads well-meaning people astray by his evil example. I think Father Carroll should just drop the priest costume and become an honest tax-subsidized thief like so many other businesses across the nation. At least then he would not compound his wrongs by adding hypocrisy to the list. At the very least, he could paint a big fat H on his forehead.

Meltzer No Lester Bangs

Richard Meltzer. Music reviewer? Give me a break. All this time, I just figured he was entertaining himself at the expense of the readers and the artists of the CDs I assume he gets for free. Now, to very little surprise, I learn he doesn't even listen to the CDs he reviews, he judges them on the artwork (this from a The Lounge interview). Is this something you deliberately keep from your readers (and music fans who actually want to hear what a CD may sound like), or do you feel it isn't even an issue? I know if I was a band whose CD was reviewed by Meltzer, positive or negative, I would consider the review worthless, even detrimental.

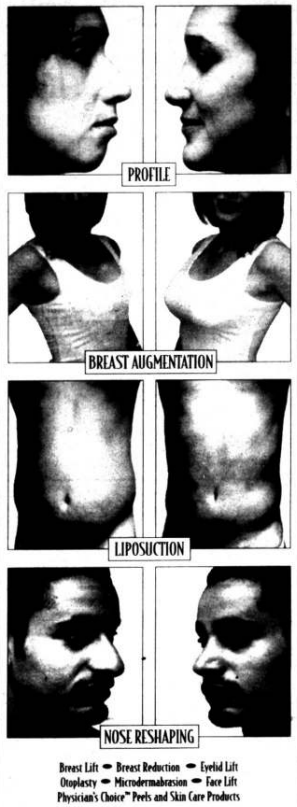

What is it going to take to get you to stop these reviews in "Blurt" by this masturbatory waste of reviewing space? I mean, come on, give him a column or something where he can rail at the system that gave fame to Lester Bangs and obscurity to him...but leave him out of actual music reviews. Please.

Ken Meyer Jr.

Richard Meltzer responds: Evidently my ears are better than yours, Ken, 'cause if you'd actually been paying attention to that show, you'd have heard me respond to the host's QUESTION regarding my listening-or-not to every dang CD that comes my way by telling him that, YES, indeed, fortunately or unfortunately, I damnsure bloody well do. Listen. That I also from time to time judge them by their artwork, and their smell, and whatever the hell else comes along for the ride, is no more, no less, than consumers of these whatsems as product normally do in making their own binary decisions re buy-or-not, keep-or-not, etc. I'm as much of a "music fan" as you are, buddy, and if my own fannish take on things doesn't jibe with yours, well, that's part of what you get when perspectives on music aren't MANDATORY. I'm sorry you feel like such a pathetic outsider, but if you were a "band" and you made with all this desperate, whining b.s. of yours, nobody (myself included) would give you a second listen.

Don't Drug The Kids

The article "A Mom Fights for Her Son" (July 26) really hit home for me because I am expecting my first child any day now. I believe the mother in the story should be commended on the way she raised her special son. I would like to know the schools this child attended so I can keep my child far away from them. I am appalled with the solution of drugging children as a way of making them conform. The way the author described children lining up at lunchtime to receive their medication at this school was like something out of Pink Floyd's The Wall. Children are supposed to be rowdy and full of energy; that is what being a child is all about. The schools today are not equipped to deal with children that challenge the system. The teachers of this child were so quick to label him with a handicap that they were missing the bigger picture. This child was further along with his pattern of thinking in kindergarten than most students his age. Instead of trying to come up with a way to make this child like the rest of the children in his class, his abilities needed to be nurtured. Children with these abilities have the potential to grow up and be world leaders.

Urinal-Phobia

This letter is in response to "Ps and Qs" ["City Lights," July 26]. I am surprised that psychologist Victor Kops would admit to a fear of urinals. I have met my share of men who dislike the urinals very much. They find it uncomfortable and hard to "concentrate" when they are trying to do what they are there to do. Even though I've heard this repeatedly from many people, I still considered it strange for a man to be uncomfortable in that situation because they've been living through it all their lives. But it makes sense for them to be uncomfortable, though. Whoever came up with the idea of the urinal didn't think much about comfort and mimicking the "home toilet" feeling in a public bathroom. But there is a solution: all men's bathrooms also have toilets. So if a lot of men dislike the fact that they have to urinate next to another man, there's always the option of going in the toilet. But when people notice what you're doing, they might consider that a little strange, because not everyone feels the same way. But just go with it. Heck, if a psychologist is admitting to it, now everyone can. Just remember, if you're using the toilet instead of the urinal, remember to put the seat down.

necropsy and ruled out any obvious reasons for the last guinea pig's death, that still doesn't mean, as Mrs. Albright states, that they "hadn't done anything to kill Smoky." Of course your family had everything to do with killing both guinea pigs. From reading your column every week, I can say with most confidence that your family is just an overpopulated giant whirlwind of everything I am truly against. For your children's sake, get a clue already!

Pigs Are Excitable

Anne Albright: Your guinea pigs all died because they were in cedar shavings ("Kid Stuff," July 26). Cedar and pine shavings are deadly toxic to rodents. If you ever decide to get a pet guinea pig again (which I and 99 percent of the San Diego Reader-ship population hope you won't) please use Carefresh brand pet bedding, or at least ripped-up newspaper or clean rags. Also, the pigs are excitable little things and should not be handled by exuberant young children, so if the time comes that you (not the kids) decide to buy another piglet, please make sure that the kids are calm enough to understand the delicate nature of this particular pet.

And, Anne, should you venture down the pet path again, please find another vet: that one that performed the necropsy should have detected respiratory distress and failure due to aromatic poisoning.

KOGO, Not KGTV

It was interesting reading Jay Allen Sanford's piece ("Blurt," July 26) on the Beatles' one and only visit to San Diego in August 1965. However — and I don't know Mr. Sanford's age — he made a few factual errors which I noted that I'd like to set the record straight on.

First, and most obviously, there was no San Diego Union-Tribune then. The two San Diego Copley newspapers in 1965 were the San Diego Union (morning rag) and the Evening Tribune (afternoon). Second, the call letters for TV 10 at that time were KOGO, not KGTV.

Third, Mr. Sanford describes our airport in 1965 as a "new" and in quotations "International" airport and states that it wasn't called Lindbergh Field yet. Well, I don't know what he meant by "new," but we had had an airport using the same runway (as we do currently) for decades before 1965, and for at least most of that time it was called Lindbergh Field. Perhaps by "new" Mr. Sanford is referring to the Harbor Drive terminal, which wasn't opened until early 1967, a year and a half later. The Pacific Highway terminal was still in use when the Beatles were here, and one moniker which I don't think our airport was known as until the opening of the Harbor Drive terminal was San Diego International Airport.

Schubert Didn't Use Chinese

I read Saville's review of Jennifer Bates's art-song recital (July 26).

The special beauty of the voice as a musical instrument is that information and emotion is transmitted simultaneously with abstract music.

Yet, classical singers feel compelled to sing in languages (French, German, Italian) which few in the American (as opposed to European) audiences comprehend easily.

Thus, the females might just as well be flutes and the males, cellos.

The important texts are thus unappreciated as part of the performances.

Printed translations leave something to be desired, and the idea of overhead projections in recitals is ludicrous and distracting.

If the English singing translations (often archaic) of the great European art-songs are presently not felicitous, at least the American audience can understand them.

Let those schooled in poetry and the needs of the singing voice offer singers better singing translations.

Remember, the Europeans chose their native languages for their audiences. Schubert would not have used Esperanto or the Chinese language for his words.

Musical snobbery should not be allowed to triumph over audiences' fuller appreciation.

Keep An Eye On Molesters

In the article by Thomas Larson, "Not Only the Man Down the Street," in the July 12 Reader, he says, "In our zeal to expose the abusers, you and I and the rest of the country are up against the limitation of law, in general, and Megan's Law, in particular." Larson discusses the problem that is faced when implementing the Megan Law in that it causes these child molesters to move around more frequently, making it hard to keep track of them. I think that it is good to have a resource for parents to go to for the protection of their children, but I agree with Larson that too much attention can be detrimental. No matter how much is done for us, it will not eliminate the problem we face of child abuse. The ultimate responsibility is ours. First of all, as was pointed out by Larson, the more publicity these convicted child molesters get, the more they will move around. It is better for them to stay in one place so that more people will be aware of where they are so that they can take the necessary precautions. Parents have the responsibility to keep their children safe, and having a resource to find out for themselves where possible danger might be is very helpful, but it can be taken so far that is defeats the original purpose.

Larson also stated, "There's no wrist bracelet, no scarlet letter, to tag a molester for life so that everyone knows what he did." Again it comes down to the fact that the responsibility is ours; the government can't solve all our problems for us. Even if the government was to implement every idea we had, it would not eliminate child abuse. People are always complaining about the government getting involved with too many things. However, when there is a problem, those same people want the government to fix everything.

Child molesters are never going to be extinguished. I have known several people in my life, that I am very close to, that have been molested. Some of them had good parents that were very cautious, but that still wasn't good enough. Then there were other parents who are definitely to blame for what happened to their child. It is true that you cannot always be with your children, but I believe that it is important to make them aware of certain situations and to let them know what is and what is not acceptable behavior from other people. We will never be able to totally prevent these treacherous things from happening because there are always new molesters.

For those that are abused it has a great effect upon their lives. Child abuse is definitely a serious matter. However, no matter how serious it is, we will never be able to put a stop to it. The most effective thing that we can do is to have the upper hand in the matter by knowing where the offenders are and do the best we can to keep our children protected from them and other potential offenders out there. The thing that we don't want to do is create such a commotion that the molesters move from place to place to where it becomes hard to keep track of them at all. When we finally come to realize that the government isn't the answer to everything, something might get accomplished and it will happen without using more and more of our tax money.

Monsters
Limited thought process? (Letters, August 2) Hmmmm. That's quite a catchy phrase. How did Mr. Pedophile ever find the spare time to think of that one?

My vision of this monster? A homely inbred married to his computer — endlessly downloading hours of child pornography. Since he has never "acted" out his fantasies (thankfully), he must be using other methods to satisfy his perverted urges. No matter what he claims, he and others of his ilk are…(Oh, what words can I say, that you can put in print?) Demented? Pathetic? Genetically missing a few?

Or perhaps he was a victim as a child. ("Today's victim could be tomorrow's pedophile.") What people don't seem to realize is, these people cannot be rehabilitated (without the process of a full lobotomy). So I wonder why other readers keep urging these types to seek help.

He will never convince me that it's normal behavior for an adult to get sexually stimulated/gratified using children/babies as stimuli. I wonder what he meant when he said that nonpedophiles (a small percentage, he says) "find it appropriate to rape children." To which group of people is he referring? Homosexuals? I think not. I know a few gay couples who have adopted. Some of these babies were previously physically or sexually abused and guess what? In a loving, nurturing environment these children are now begin-

Lose 15 lbs. in One Month
I found hypnosis and I lost 220 lbs.!

My name is Lynn Lee and I have tried every fad diet that you can think of. I would lose some of the weight only to gain back the weight and all of the old habits. I felt tired and discouraged.

After my first session I immediately noticed my new eating habits. I was eating healthier, drinking more water and my food portions were smaller. All these changes without any effort! No more cravings or binging. I know that I will never gain the weight back because thanks to Healthy Opportunity Hypnosis I now eat to live, not live to eat.

If you're ready to start living today, do what I did. Call Healthy Opportunity Hypnosis at 619.297.2737. Hypnosis can work for you too.

CERTIFIED FOTOFACIAL™ AND EPIFACIAL™

Using IPL and Vasculite HR • Two convenient locations

Photo Rejuvenation utilizes intense pulses of filtered light to gradually and gently remove broken capillaries, brown spots, rosacea, red face, enlarged pores, and fine wrinkles. It will stimulate collagen production leading to younger and smoother skin. A 30-minute treatment performed in the office allows immediate return to work and your daily activities.

Now you can rejuvenate your face, neck, chest, arms, hands, and legs with no downtime.

Photo Rejuvenation treatments are performed by Dr. Morad, Board-Certified Head & Neck Surgeon specializing in facial plastic surgery. Dr. Morad has over three years' experience with IPL technology (a lifetime compared to others). He is the Director of Photo Rejuvenation Clinic in La Jolla and Face Beautiful in Vista. ning to blossom. (But what you monsters have done to them will scar them forever.)

You were right in one regard. Jeffrey Dahmer, John Wayne Gacy were monsters. And so is anyone within the evil circles that you travel in. What you people do to children is the worst possible thing that could happen to them. I'd love to send y'all on an all-expenses-paid vacation. Say, San Quentin? Attica? Pelican Bay? Ever hear of the convicts' code of ethics? Can we book your seat tomorrow?

And as far as your Springer reference, I bet that "Steve" would love to get you face to face for a few minutes.

Does Pedophile Want A Medal?

Oh please. You seem to have unearthed your very own literate resident "nonpracticing" pedophile who can predict his own future sexual behavior... as well as that of "literally millions" just like him, who lust after children but are "above" molesting them ("Letters," July 19, August 2). Amazing! And that he knows there are "literally millions around the world" who are just like him too! What statistician was able to pull off the survey on that one, anyway? A pedophile abhorred by the thought of raping a child...does he want a medal? Unlike adults, young children don't have to be raped. Pedophiles intentionally choose (1) children who know and trust them and (2) children lacking in the social skills and maturity to deal with their pedophilic brand of coercion.

Well, here's a small suggestion straight from the heart. How about a bumper sticker just for pedophiles (practicing or otherwise). It could say, "I'M NOT SICK, I'M NOT SICK, I'M NOT, I'M NOT..."

Blink-Out Zones

North County Hikes

PHOTOGRAPHER BY DAVE ALLEN

Calavera preserve

LOCAL EVENTS

Several lifetimes ago, it seems, people who wanted to affect political change organized protest marches. Now some of them are organizing nature hikes.

The members of Preserve Calavera in coastal North County give their hikes names like "Last Chance Hike" and "The 14 Million Dollar, 1.3 Mile, Destroy Our Nature Preserve Twilight Hike." Besides touting the ocean views and scenic farmland to be seen on these outings, hike leaders point out the "coastal sage scrub that will be destroyed" when the new four-lane highway is built — to accommodate all the new housing developments.

But Gigi Orlowski of Calavera Hills, who leads one of the twilight hikes, says the mood isn't glum. "Some people are only now realizing that these spots exist, and they're in awe of them. The wonderful thing about these hikes is that people of all ages walk together: senior citizens, people with small children, people carrying babies on their backs. The real story here is that the people of Carlsbad, Vista, and Oceanside are working together to try to create a regional preserve."

This weekend, Diane Nygaard of Ocean Hills will lead a morning hike to the summit of Mount Calavera. She says the extinct volcano is the "centerpiece" of the area, which is currently 3000 acres of open space. "But there are about half a dozen developments proposed, so that over 60 percent of it will be lost over the next couple of years. And we're not saying that there should be no development but that it should be done responsibly, so it minimizes adverse effects."

Preserve Calavera not only wants land to remain open; the 500-member group also wants the parcels to be contiguous, because of the danger of otherwise creating what are known as "blink-out zones." "These are wildlife preserves in name only, because they are surrounded by roads or houses," says Orlowski. The birds in those areas may do all right, because they can fly over the highway to get from one preserve to the next. "But bobcats and mountain lions that try to follow the same path will get crushed by traffic. So they become isolated and tend to weaken and die, because there's no new blood coming into their gene pools. That wildlife isn't sustainable."

Gigi Orlowski, Calavera Mountain in background

The words of these women are measured. They are used to meeting with developers; they know that compromise is key. And so Orlowski, like Nygaard, is careful to mention that she isn't against all development. "You can't stop it, but it could be done in a way that's sensible. It doesn't have to be so random and so project-by-project. If it's planned well, it doesn't have to be either/or. Wildlife can continue to thrive alongside development."

Not so decorous are the words of some who have posted messages in the forum section of the group's website, www.preservecalavera.org. They are angry that dirt bikes find easier access into the area, thanks to pathways left by bulldozers. They want walls built around their neighborhoods, not roads leading through them. "As to the argument that [the time saved by a new road] may mean 'life or death' for one old fart someday," writes Phil of Carlsbad, "well, okay, then move next to the hospital if you're so worried about it."

A few people who have expressed opinions are appalled that the Carlsbad police want some acreage for an outdoor shooting range. The current range may be displaced by Carlsbad's proposed new municipal golf course.

Asked about the status of these projects, Orlowski says, "We are hoping to meet with the city soon and discuss the various plans. We did meet with a developer last week." She admits being frustrated by "all the ifs, ands, and ors. There's still a lot of uncertainty."

One thing is clear in her own mind: she looks to L.A. as an example of what San Diego should not aspire to be, although she finds it difficult to think of an example of good habitat management planning, or HMP, as it's known in bureaucratic circles. Finally, she recalls hearing a series of stories on public radio about what's being done in Nepal, where planning for contiguous wildlife corridors is "a country-wide thing, and I mean, we're talking elephants and tigers."

In the meantime, her hike, according to the website description, may be one of the last chances to see the western part of Calavera Hills before it becomes 781 more homes.

— Jeanne Schinto

OUTDOORS

Orioles, the bright yellow- or yellow-orange-and-black birds seen flitting among the palm trees, are summer residents of San Diego County's coastal areas. A century ago, the orioles preferred to nest in sycamore trees, which were then more common in our area's river bottoms. Today these birds are most likely to take up residence in the planted palm trees, where they obtain fiber to build their nests from the easily shredded fronds.

The Milky Way appears at it most glorious during August summer evenings free of strong moonlight (this year, these evenings occur from now through August 21). You'll need to be in the mountains or the desert to see it clearly; too much artificial light in or near the urban parts of San Diego County renders it all but invisible. The Milky Way seems to broaden and become generally brighter over the south horizon, specifically near the constellation Sagittarius. When we gaze in this direction, we look toward the crowded heart of our galaxy, where millions of dim stars are so closely spaced in the sky that taken together they resemble puffs of steam.

"Rocks, Plants, and Animals," naturalist Jack Pomeroy leads a guided hike of the southwest section of Daley Ranch and discusses the natural setting, Saturday, August 11, beginning at 7:30 a.m. The 3.5-mile walk is moderately strenuous and covers the ranch house, Boulder Loop, and Rock Ridge trails. Meet at the Daley Ranch parking lot on La Honda Drive. Free. (ESCONDIDO)

The Place Is Very Birdful, guides from the Chula Vista Nature Center will help you identify the denizens of the Sweetwater Marsh wetland area on Saturday, August 11, beginning at 8 a.m. For reservations and directions to the meeting place, call 619-409-5903. Free. (CHULA VISTA)

The Sleek and Beautiful Terns are the featured subjects for this bird-watching hike led by an educator from the Natural History Museum. Learn about the different species of terns, their vocalizations and preferred habitats. You'll also see herons, egrets, and other shorebirds, waterfowl, and gulls. The birding class (geared for adults) is scheduled for Saturday, August 11, from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. To register and obtain details about the meeting place, call the museum at 619-232-3821 x203. $55 members, $65 nonmembers.

Calavera Mountain, there's a movement afoot to save some of the area around the mountain from development. Join this moderately paced two-hour hike to the peak to observe the surrounding area and the acres of native vegetation that will be lost to home and road building. The hike is set for Saturday, August 11, from 8:45 to 11 a.m. Meet in the parking lot of Oak Riparian Park, off Lake Boulevard. Wear sturdy shoes and bring water. Free. For more information, call 760-724-3887. (OCEANSIDE)

"Looking for Living Things," learn to follow animal tracks and other signs, with tracker Dave Kiser, Saturday, August 11, 9 a.m., Blue Sky Ecological Reserve, Espola Road. Wear comfortable shoes and bring water. Free. 858-679-5469. (POWAY)

Native Plants for Medicine and Food, the theme of this week's four-mile guided hike in San Dieguito River Park is how early native residents of the area used plants for food, medicine, baskets, and many other things. The walk and talk is set for Saturday, August 11, from 9 to 11 a.m. Call the park for reservations and for directions to the meeting place. 858-674-2275 x5. Free. (RANCHO BERNARDO)

Local Botany, join this guided hike to learn about the native vegetation of the eastern end of Los Peñasquitos Reserve, Saturday, August 11, at 9 a.m. Meet at the Mercy Road parking-staging area, upper level, at the junction of Mercy Road and Black Mountain Road (take the Mercy Road exit off I-15, then go west to Black Mountain Road). Free. For information, call 858-484-3219. (MIRA MESA)

Nature Walk, guides from the San Elijo Lagoon Conservancy lead nature walks on the second Saturday of every month at this ecological reserve. The next one will be Saturday, August 11, beginning at 9 a.m. Meet the guide at the Rios Avenue trail head. Free. 760-436-3944. (SOLANA BEACH)

The Park's Palms are the subjects of this week's guided walk through Balboa Park, led by rangers and Off-shoot Tours, Saturday, August 11, beginning at 10 a.m., in front of the park's visitors' center. Guides will discuss the botany, growth habits, and landscape value of these trees. It's free. 619-235-1100. (BALBOA PARK)

University Heights, Urban Safaris leads a guided tour of this neighborhood, explaining 100 years of history of the area, Saturday, August 11, 10 a.m. Meet at Caspian Corner, 4646 Park Boulevard, just off Adams Avenue. Space is limited; please call for reservations. $10. 619-222-9960. (UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS)

Beginning Birders are especially welcome on these monthly guided walks, sponsored by San Diego Park and Recreation Department. The next hike is set for Saturday, August 11, from 11 a.m. to noon. You'll learn about coastal birds and their habitats, especially great blue herons, terns, brown pelicans, grebes, loons, egrets, teals, and turnstones. Meet the park ranger at the kiosk along the bike path beside the wildlife preserve (the flood-control channel) across from Sea World. Bring binoculars and drinking water. Free. 858-581-7603. (MISSION BAY)

Star Party, join members of the San Diego Astronomers Association to look at the heavens through their various telescopes, Saturday, August 11, 8:30 to 10:30 p.m., Blue Sky Ecological Reserve, Espola Road. For information and reservations, call 858-679-5469; $1 per person donation. (POWAY)

The Perseid Meteor Shower, the best known of the many meteor displays that return year after year, will take place under fair conditions this year. The moon, at last quarter phase, will rise near midnight and prevent you from seeing fainter meteors during the prime (early-morning) hours. Near dawn (4:30 a.m.) on the two best mornings, Sunday and Monday, August 12 and 13, you might catch meteors at the rate of about 15 to 25 per hour, assuming you are watching from a clear site in the mountains or the desert.

LOCAL EVENTS

curs when the Earth plows through a broad stream of tiny dust-particles left over from the past disintegration of a comet. The particles burn up as air friction slows them at heights of about 50 miles, resulting in luminous streaks visible for a second or two from the ground. The bright Perseids often leave a lingering luminous trail that may remain in the sky for several seconds or more. Lie in a comfortable position, facing northeast, under an open sky, for best results. Strong coffee is advised.

Trail Maintenance, volunteers are needed to join the ranger staff to help create a section of the new 9.4-mile Mule Hill/San Pasqual Valley Trail in the North County's San Dieguito River Park, Sunday, August 12, from 8 a.m. to noon. Call the park for details of meeting place and other information: 858-674-2275 x5. Free.

Walk Under Shady Oaks at the Blue Sky Ecological Reserve in this guided nature hike, Sunday, August 12, 9 a.m. Wear comfortable shoes and bring water. The reserve is located on Espola Road. Free. 858-679-5469. (POWAY)

Birds of the Salt Marsh, one of the best local birding spots is the Tijuana Estuary. As many as 370 species of birds have been identified in the area. A volunteer guide from the Tijuana River National Estuarine Research Reserve will help you identify the population this Sunday, August 12, from 3 to 4 p.m. Being binoculars if you have them. Meet at the visitors' center, 301 Caspian Way. Free. For more information, call 619-575-3613. (IMPERIAL BEACH)

Local Geology is the focus of this easy-paced two-mile hike through Daley Ranch, Sunday, August 12, beginning at 4:30 p.m. Meet your guide at the Daley Ranch entrance on La Honda Drive. (Take the El Norte Parkway exit from I-15, and go four miles east to La Honda Drive.) Free. 760-839-4680. (ESCONDIDO)

Critters at Night, wildlife is very active after dark. Join nature interpreter Patty Heyden for a very quiet 1 1/2– to 2-hour hike through the Blue Sky Ecological Reserve on Espola Road, Sunday, August 12, 8:30 p.m. Not recommended for kids under 10. Group size limited. For reservations and information, call 858-679-5469. Free. (POWAY)

Walk for Therapy, the Elizabeth Hospice sponsors two weekly walks for those who have experienced grief and loss. The next event, along the hiking trail around Lake Hodges, will be Monday, August 13, at 9 a.m., beginning in the parking lot across from Hernandez Hideaway restaurant on Lake Drive. Free. (ESCONDIDO)

On Tuesday, August 14, at 9 a.m., take a beach walk, meeting at the sea wall at the west end of Tamarack Street. Free. For more information on either walk, call the hospice at 800-797-2050. (CARLSBAD)

The Waning Crescent Moon and Venus form an attractive close pair (1.5 degrees apart) in the eastern sky at dawn next Thursday, August 16. Jupiter, which is somewhat less brilliant than Venus, lies well above the pair. Look no later than 5 a.m. for best results.

DANCE

West Coast Swing, an evening of dancing starts with classes for beginners. The West Coast Swing Dance Club holds two events each week. The next ones are scheduled for Friday, August 10, with intermediate classes from 7 to 7:45 p.m., followed by open dancing at 8; and Sunday, August 12, with beginners' classes from 3 to 3:45 p.m., with open dancing beginning at 4. All ages welcome, with or without partners. Members $5, nonmembers $7 (which includes lessons). Jump and jive over to the Starlight Dance Studio, 6506-H El Cajon Boulevard. For information call 619-491-1808. (COLLEGE AREA)

Reuben H. Fleet Science Center, travel back in time in China: The Panda Adventure. The film is set in 1936, based on the true story of Ruth Harkness, an independent woman who traveled to the forests of China to follow in her late husband's footsteps and achieve his dream of bringing the first live giant panda to America. See this film through the end of the year.

Did you know there are 50,000 known caves in the U.S., and every state has at least one? Journey into Amazing Caves squeezes into some of the earth's alien, hidden realms, guided by two cavers seeking these often unexplored frontiers. The latest MacGillivray Freeman Films offering follows "extreme scientists" Hazel Barton and Nancy Aulenbach as they seek organisms that might hold new medical applications. Caves continues through November.

He doesn't know how to swim or ice skate, but Michael Jordan has often been called the greatest athlete of the 20th Century. The "real-life story" of Michael Jordan is presented in Michael Jordan to the Max. Expect a "larger-than-life tribute to a larger-than-life figure." See the film through October.

The WELL: A Story of Love, Death & Real Life in the Seminal Online Community

Katie Hafner

Carroll & Graf, 2001; 196 pages; $21

FROM THE DUST JACKET:
Online Communities

It was the Orwellian year of 1984, when Stewart Brand, originator of the Whole Earth Catalog, and Larry Brilliant, a philanthropic doctor, created the Whole Earth 'Lectric Link, or The WELL. Yet, rather than heralding Big Brother, it soon became a liberating cultural innovation that has helped change our world.

A balky VAX computer and a rack of modems in ramshackle offices in Sausalito, California, The WELL provided a place in the virtual world for people to discuss myriad topics online. It also had a dual existence as members organized parties and rallied to give emotional and financial support to fellow members in crisis. The WELL quickly became a community as cherished by its denizens as any small town in America.

This fascinating chronicle of an innovative business venture is also a moving story of interconnected lives. WELL Beings ranged from commune-dwellers to technologists to business people to Deadheads. But all members adhered to founder Brand's original credo of personal responsibility, "You own your own words." As revealing as diary entries, dozens of verbatim electronic postings provide unique windows into such events as:

Maurice Weitman's reunion with his biological mother: "After over 12 years of searching, and almost 40 years of wondering, I've located the woman who gave birth to me and then relinquished me for adoption."

A brutal lover's quarrel between Tom Mandel and Maria Syndicus that dominated conversation on The WELL for weeks, followed months later by his farewell, amid a tragic bout with cancer: "So, thank you all, my best wishes and prayers to each and everyone of you. It's been a fabulous life, and it wouldn't have been the same without you."

As this spirited history unfolds, Katie Hafner probes the many reasons for The WELL's legendary success, never since duplicated, from its inception just 17 years ago up through its recent purchase by Salon.com.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: Katie Hafner, a technology reporter for The New York Times, was born in 1957 in Rochester, New York, and grew up in California and Western Massachusetts. During her elementary school years, Hafner lived in San Diego. The school to which she went, she said, on the day that we talked, "is not there anymore. It used to be called Scripps Elementary, and it's down at the bottom of Torrey Pines, the intersection of Torrey Pines and La Jolla Shores. It's a private school now."

Hafner graduated from the University of California at San Diego with a major in German literature. "And then," she said, "I went to Columbia Journalism School. And after that I went to work for a small paper in Lake Tahoe, The North Lake Tahoe Bonanza. That was a great job. And then in 1983 I went to a computer publication, Computer World."

"That," I said, about Hafner's working at Computer World, "was very early for that kind of thing."

"Yes, it was early. In 1984 I went to another computer publication in New York, Data Communications. Then in 1985 I went to work for the San Diego Union." Hafner was at the Union for a year. Defense was her beat. "It was a good year for that. There was a lot of breaking news. That was the year the shuttle exploded, and it was one of the years of Star Wars. And then I went to Business Week, and moved up to San Francisco, and was at Business Week for about three years, and then moved to New York, and quit my job to write books."

"When did you get your first computer?"

"In 1984, I got a PC Junior. It had a 300-baud modem. I had an MCI mail account. I was so proud. And then I got a Mac."

For several years Hafner had written for the The New York Times. Since 1998 she has been on that paper's staff. Hafner is author of Where Wizards Stay Up Late: The Origins of the Internet; The House at the Bridge: A Story of Modern Germany; and Cyberpunk: Outlaws and Hackers on the Computer Frontier. She lives in the San Francisco Bay Area with her husband and their daughter.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR: Hafner joined The WELL in 1989, when the price to subscribe was $8 per month plus $3 per hour to dial into and be "on" The WELL's system. At that time, approximately 3000 people subscribed to The WELL. The system, back then, was used variously as information-storage warehouse, electronic conference room, a place to compile a program on The WELL's UNIX system, or an address from which to read the worldwide system of computer networks, USENET. Some WELL members (who by 1989 sometimes spoke of themselves as "WELLbeings") logged in once per week, some rarely, if at all. A core group of perhaps 300 people logged in every day and stayed on for several hours. Hafner was one of the more casual members. She used the system primarily as a place at which to send and receive e-mail. She occasionally visited conferences on The WELL but tended to "lurk" and read what others had written rather than publicly post messages herself. She felt too shy, "too intimidated by all the activity," to add her own messages to those on the system. Also, exchanges on The WELL can become quite antagonistic. Hafner, explaining further why she rarely posted, laughed and said, "I really don't like to be criticized."

I asked how Hafner remembered The WELL of the late 1980s, early 1990s. "It was small," she said. "It was very intimate. That's the best way of putting it. It was clear from the beginning that there were very smart people on it. And that really sustained it."

Hafner writes that Stewart Brand decided early on to offer free accounts to journalists, a decision that turned out to be "one of his savviest moves. Over the years, dozens of newspaper and magazine articles were written about The WELL, a business with roughly the cash flow of a convenience store, so that by 1990 The WELL had become a force whose influence was wildly disproportionate to its size. A discussion that started on The WELL had a way of bleeding into the larger world; it would be taken up and then written and talked about in more mainstream forums. As a result, many ideas first generated on The WELL became pivotal in the history of cyberspace, including the name of cyberspace itself."

I asked Hafner about The WELL's influence in the larger world.

"Over the years," she said, "some of the best journalists who were covering computers got onto The WELL. And so a lot of really important discussions started happening on The WELL about things like the First Amendment. Very early on, groundbreaking intellectual discussions were taking place on The WELL, and then they were being covered in the press, an important combination. They weren't taking place in a vacuum. Therefore, they got important coverage. Things like The Electronic Frontier Foundation had its start through The WELL as did important discussions about intellectual freedom and the First Amendment, and pornography on the Net. People on The WELL are not stupid. And they were saying, 'These are important issues' and people outside The WELL paid attention."

The WELL, as the book's subtitle promises, is also "a story of love, death, and real life." What goes on in this online community is not only a series of discussions of issues. The WELL also has always been an online village, a community where people, many of whom will never meet face-to-face, have rather dramatic interactions with one another. Hafner tells the heartbreaking story of Tom Mandel and Maria Syndicus (known on The WELL as "Nana") — their courtship, love affair, breakup, Nana's breast cancer, the couple's make-up, Mandel's lung cancer, the couple's marriage, and in 1995, Mandel's death. "The WELL," Hafner said, "really tapped into all dimensions."

As to why The WELL encouraged both the intellectual and emotional response, Hafner suggested, "I think it appealed to people who like to take the time to think before they type, but also it appealed to people who like a constant back-and-forth. And as anyone knows, constant backing and forthing can lead to some pretty emotional scenes."

As to how The WELL differs from a system like America Online, Hafner said, "AOL I've always thought catered to the lowest common denominator and so, by definition, The WELL was kind of self-selecting, which is what gave it a small but disproportionate influence in cyberspace in the early 1990s. When Bruce Katz [founder of Rockport Shoe Company] went in [during the mid-1990s] and bought The WELL [in 1994], he was criticized for wanting to turn The WELL into another AOL. People really rose up against him. They didn't want to be another AOL. And I think, 'Who could blame them?' "

By the mid-1990s, The WELL had some 10,000 subscribers. Since that time, with the rise of the use of the Internet and the growth of AOL and other, lesser launch pads onto the Internet, WELL use has decreased. Over the years, ownership of The WELL has passed through several hands. The system is now owned by Salon, a company, like many other companies who make their home in cyberspace, in financial trouble. The WELL, however, remains one of the most interesting sites in cyberspace.

A visit to www.well.com will allow you to see for yourself. There's still romance, there are still quarrels, there is still interesting talk about books and politics and the media. And, The WELL, unlike almost every other entryway onto the Internet, does not sell subscriber data to marketers or flash advertisements across one's screen.

"I think it appealed to people who like to take the time to think before they type, but also it appealed to people who like a constant back-and-forth."

Now that The WELL has been in bookstores for several months, Hafner said that she had begun to feel that she and her publisher were marketing this book incorrectly. "It just dawned on me that we were doing this. The subtitle is 'A Story of Love, Death & Real Life in the Seminal Online Community.' Not that this is misleading. But people who are not interested in what they imagine as 'online' may be misled by the title. I've had so many friends say, 'WELL, I can't read your book because I wouldn't understand it.' And I want to answer them by saying, 'Hey, the book is not about computers. It's not about online, it's about people. All kinds of people.' "

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond • By Jerry Schad

San Diego County — indeed all of California — is an orthopedic basket case. For millions of years, the ground beneath us has been shattered by slow but sure, incremental changes that can be read, by subtle observations, in the jumbled topography existing here now. Tectonic forces have bent, broken, displaced, and distorted our county's granitic bones; fractured its backbone (the Peninsular Range of mountains); sliced and crumpled its sedimentary skin; and altered the circulation of its surface water.

While California's most wrenching and violent movements tend to take place east and north of here, close to the great San Andreas Fault, even coastal San Diego bears the obvious marks of a landscape broken into sliding strips during geologically recent time. Faults with monikers such as Coronado, Silver Strand, Rose Canyon, Florida Canyon, and Texas Street cut north-south across the geologist's maps. Most are considered to be relatively moribund, but not so the Rose Canyon Fault, which may muster a magnitude 6.5 or 7 earthquake sometime in the next few centuries. The Rose Canyon Fault is thought to be the extension of the historically active Newport-Inglewood Fault — the culprit in a damaging 1933 earthquake centered at Long Beach.

Fault traces are tough to spot in the paved-over urban environment; however, the following excursion may increase your understanding of the Rose Canyon Fault: Start at Soledad Park atop Soledad Mountain. The inclusive near view encompasses La Jolla Shores in the north, where the fault makes landfall, and a fault-underlain section of Rose Canyon along Interstate 5 to the south. Farther south, the fault slices across the slopes in Bay Park, just east of Mission Bay, continues along I-5 into downtown San Diego, and finally goes under San Diego Bay.

The land west of the Rose Canyon Fault has been creeping north, in fits and starts, relative to land on the east. Soledad Mountain itself has been thrust upward on the west side, which is why the normally east-west-trending drainages of upper Rose Canyon and San Clemente Canyon join, veer south, and follow a path of least resistance to Mission Bay. From Mission Bay south, the land west of the fault has sunk; water from the Pacific Ocean has invaded to form south San Diego Bay.

Next, visit Tecolote Park and Recreation Center's south baseball diamond, which is tucked into a steep alcove of friable rock. Behind center field, outside the diamond's fenced rim, you'll discover an interpretive sign. It marks the boundary between half-million-year-old, dark-beige conglomerate rock on the right, and 50-million-year-old, light beige sandstone on the left. Your two feet straddle a strand of the fault that may one day bring urban San Diego to its knees.

Antique Gas and Steam Engine Museum, the museum's activities include locating, collecting, documenting, and preserving historical gas-, steam-, and horse powered equipment related not only to agriculture, but to the general development of America. The collection is made up of equipment used in lumbering, mining, oil drilling, and construction industries. In addition, the museum has a blacksmith and wheelwright shop, a country kitchen and parlor, a steam-operated saw mill, and 1/3-scale train. Find the museum at 2040 North Santa Fe Avenue. For further details, call 760-941-1791. (VISTA)

Bonita Museum and Cultural Center, the museum highlights the history of the Sweetwater Valley from the mid-1800s, with historical photographs; artifacts, tools, and farming implements; the district's 1953 fire engine; and bound copies back to the 1930s of the Chula Vista Star News. Reuben H. Fleet Science Center, "ExploraZone 2," the newest round of exhibits from the Exploratorium in San Francisco, boasts more than 30 exhibits designed to make science, math, and technology engaging and fun. These interactive exhibits involve learning about hearing, speaking, seeing color, electricity, and magnetism and continue on display through June 2002.

A range of topics including communication, problem solving, and gender stereotypes are explored in "Psychology: It's More Than You Think." Over 17 interactive experiments are included in the exhibit, addressing fundamental questions about how people behave, learn, and develop. Delve in through Friday, January 4, 2002.

Ongoing exhibitions include "Technovation" (through 2001), "About Faces," and "Skyscapes." The permanent exhibitions present a variety of hands-on exhibits illustrating scientific principles. Explore the various methods of transmission and storage and retrieval of information, such as lasers, flashing lights, waveforms, and more. For further information, call 619-238-1233. (BALBOA PARK)

San Diego Automotive Museum, vacation, migration, and the cars that ruled the road in the Golden State are examined in "California, Here We Come!" The most rustic road included in the exhibit is the Old Plank Road, originally built in 1912 of wooden planks nailed to crosstie. The primitive road carried drivers across a six-mile stretch of sand dunes between Yuma and San Diego. Other featured highways include El Camino Real, Pacific Coast Highway, and historic 101. Make this trip through Sunday, September 23.

Although he disappeared from posts atop drive-through boxes in 1980, Jack's back! To commemorate the 50th anniversary of Jack In The Box, an exhibit of memorabilia from this "drive-through pioneer" is on view through Monday, September 4. Visitors are greeted by an authentic clown head on a reconstructed speaker box, menus, photographs, uniforms from the '60s and '70s, and more.

More than 80 automobiles and motorcycles from horseless carriages to future prototypes are included in the museum's permanent collection. Find the museum near the Starlight Bowl; 619-231-2886. (BALBOA PARK)

San Diego Historical Society Museum, "Out of Our Vaults II: Curatorial Curios" features artifacts from the society's collections of fine art, decorative arts, furniture, textiles, tools, instruments, photographs, architectural drawings, documents, and ephemera. The exhibition changes periodically though Sunday, September 2, drawing from the society's stored collection of over 17,000 objects.

The museum is located in the Casa de Balboa building; 619-232-6203. (BALBOA PARK)

San Diego Hall of Champions, the museum — dedicated to promoting, recognizing, and preserving athletic achievement — is located at 2131 Pan American Plaza. Call 619-234-2544 for information. (BALBOA PARK)

San Diego Maritime Museum, examples of ships from the 14th Century to the present are included in "Masterpieces in Miniature: A Precious Collection of Tiny Yachts." Nearly 50 tiny and elaborate models are included, ranging in size from three inches to three feet. The exhibit, continuing through Monday, December 31, also includes ships in bottles.

"Pirates!" offers an entertaining romp through history and Hollywood, with a look at the real life of the pirates who inspired the fiction, the movies, and the romanticized perceptions of the foul mariners. The exhibit includes an actual cutlass owned by pirate Charles Gibbs, who was hung in 1831 for his deeds, as well as a silver-painted skull believed to be the skull of Blackbeard himself, and original paintings by Don Maitz. Movie memorabilia includes the original coat worn by Errol Flynn in Captain Blood, along with costumes for Burt Lancaster and Charlton Heston, prop cannons and pistols, a display of characters from Muppet Treasure Island, and small statuettes from which the robotic inhabitants of the Pirates of the Caribbean ride at Disneyland were created. Enjoy the show through August.

Rare original paintings by Willarts, van de Velde the Younger, Backhuysen, and Porcellis are featured in "Art of the Sea: 17th-Century Dutch Masters and Their Legacy," on exhibit through Tuesday, September 11. The lasting influence of these masters over the ensuing three centuries of European art is reflected in the other art included in the exhibition.

The museum features permanent exhibits documenting the history of San Diego's waterfront and the building of the West Coast by sea, including exhibits concerning the old San Diego–Coronado ferryboats, the tuna fishing industry, and the military. The museum fleet consists of the 1863 bark Star of India, the 1898 San Francisco ferryboat Berkeley, and the 1904 Scottish steam yacht Medea. There are also nautical exhibits, ship carpenters, model building, ships in bottles, woodcarvers, and a complete research library.

The museum is located at 1306 North Harbor Drive, along the Embarcadero at the corner of North Harbor Drive and Ash Street; 619-234-9153. (DOWNTOWN)

San Diego Museum of Man, spiritual paintings, vivid sequin banners, and papier-mâché, wood, and iron sculptures are included in "Voodoo: Spirits in Haitian Art." The exhibit features a variety of objects relating to the voodoo religion, which evolved from a mixture of African religions and Roman Catholicism. See the show through Sunday, January 27, 2002.

Skeletal remains reveal fascinating stories from the past in "The Bones Don't Lie: Stories from the Grave," on view through January 27, 2002. The exhibit explores everything from bone recovery and identification techniques to uncovering evidence of nutrition, disease, and trauma, to the use of skull and bone imagery in popular culture. The exhibition includes hands-on learning and interactive displays.

Rare rock art from eastern California is explored in "Echoes of Antiquity: Rock Art of the Volcanic Tableland," an exhibit of color photography on display through January 6, 2002. The show features work by San Francisco photographer Jean Allsworth highlighting the petroglyphs of the southwestern edge of the Great Basin north of Bishop. Some of these rare petroglyphs may date back to early archaic times, perhaps as much as 10,000 years ago.

Fetishes are carved objects representing animals or other beings revered by American Indians and others for their beauty and power. The exhibit "Zuni Fetish Carving: Past to Present," available for viewing through June 2002, celebrates contemporary fetish carving. Expect to learn about fetish history, symbolism, process, and materials.

Not Romero But Beethoven

Romero seemed to relish the density of events in these early works.

REVIEW
JONATHAN SAVILLE

Once again, the Athenaeum has put San Diego music lovers in its debt by featuring pianist Gustavo Romero in a comprehensive series devoted to a single great composer. Two years ago, Romero played Chopin. Last year, it was Bach. This time, the composer is Beethoven, whose 32 sonatas will be performed over the course of two summers.

The first installment actually consisted of three sonata recitals at the Neurosciences Institute, plus a fourth concert of concertos by Beethoven, Haydn, and Mozart. The sonata programs all followed the same format. Each began with one of the composer's first three sonatas (Opus 2, written in the 1790s when Beethoven was in his early 20s). A selection of early sonatas followed (seasoned by the two short works from 1809, at the end of Beethoven's fourth decade). After intermission, the programs continued with one of the late sonatas (dating from 1816, 1820, and 1821). Each program ended with one of the Beethoven "blockbusters" — that is, his most frequently performed solo piano works: the "Appassionata," the "Waldstein," and the "Moonlight." The standing ovations that followed these sensational performances induced Romero to offer a generous number of encores, emphasizing the Bagatelles.

Romero's Beethoven, like his Chopin and Bach, provided an engrossing experience. It was not that one heard amazingly innovative interpretations; nor did the pianist's personality draw attention to itself. These concerts were not about Romero, not a display of virtuosity or an occasion for vaunting the performer's talents. The focus was exclusively on Beethoven, and above all on the revelations about the composer's creative development that are underlined when so many of his sonatas are performed one after the other. Romero has gone deeply into these works and into the soul that produced them, and his purpose in playing the sonatas seemed principally his own mesmerized exaltation in re-experiencing and sharing what he had discovered. After each sonata he left the stage smiling to himself, as though carried away by the composer's fabulous imagination, indeed as though the music were still surging through him and lifting him on its crests.

This was true not only of such dazzling masterpieces as the "Waldstein," which Romero played with tremendous brilliance and power, but also of the lesser-known works. The early sonatas, including those of Opus 2, are astonishing in their inventiveness and in their plethora of ideas. Here, Beethoven is building on the heritage of Haydn, but from the very first he establishes his own unmistakable voice. Romero seemed to relish the density of events in these early works, pointing them up with strong dynamic contrasts and with articulation and phrasing that brought out the vivid individuality of each successive episode. His — and Beethoven's — impulse to give a sharply outlined individual character to each theme and each change of key or texture or direction or pace extended itself to the radical differences of character found among the array of works presented in a series like this. Every one of Beethoven's sonatas has its unique tone; he never repeats himself; from Opus 2 to Opus 111 he continually surprises the listener with the unexpected — and Romero followed the composer in this perpetual self-transformation, so that each performance (there were five on each program) offered a wholly fresh perspective on the possibilities of the form.

The density of thoughts, emotions, inventions, and surprises on such a program was naturally a bit overwhelming, especially when the performances were so colorful, so intense, and so vibrantly reflective of every nuance of meaning. A longer series, with fewer sonatas on each program, would have allowed the audience a greater opportunity to take everything in. On the other hand, the sense of being overwhelmed (Romero himself was probably the only person in the house who did not feel it) is an appropriate reaction to any confrontation with Beethoven, who is never a relaxing composer, even in his slow movements, and even in those sections (prominent in the earlier sonatas) where his sense of humor is at its most vital. Compacted drama is his signature. Everywhere there is struggle, whether comic, tragic, or transcendent (this last being a persistent characteristic of the late sonatas). It is his recognition of this fundamental fact of Beethoven's creative identity that gives Romero's performances of the composer's sonatas such ability to compel the listener's fascination. ■

If It's August, It Must Be Time for SummerFest! The La Jolla Chamber Music Society's SummerFest La Jolla 2001 continues through August 19, with concerts, workshops, and encounters.

Friday, August 10, will be a salute to the late David Golub, once a mainstay of SummerFest. At 6:30 p.m., there's a pre-concert talk by composer in residence Bruce Adolphe, artistic director Cho-Liang Lin, and others who knew Golub. The concert (7:30 p.m.) features Mozart's Clarinet Quintet in A Major (John Bruce Yeh, Kyoko Takezawa, Cho-Liang Lin, Cynthia Phelps, Gary Hoffman); Bruce Adolphe's "Thousand Years of Love" (Adolphe, Sylvia McNair); Brahms's Andante from Piano Quartet No. 3 (Schub, Lin, Paul Neubauer, Hoffman); and Dvorák's "Dumky" Piano Trio (Schub, Mark Kaplan, Hoffman).

On Sunday, August 12, the pre-concert talk at 2 p.m. will be by Felix Fan and David Chan, former participants in SummerFest's "Rising Stars" program. The concert (3 p.m.) features Prokofiev's Overture on Hebrew Themes (Schub, Yeh, Lin, Chan, Neubauer, Fan); Debussy's Sonata for Violin and Piano (Lin, Helen Huang); Stravinsky's "L'Histoire du Soldat" (Yeh, Chan, Huang); Brahms's Piano Quintet in F Minor (Schub, Takezawa, Chan, Neubauer, Ralph Kirschbaum).

On Tuesday, August 14, the pre-concert talk at 6:30 p.m. features renowned guitarists Celin and Pepe Romero. The concert at 7:30 p.m. the Romeros with Mark O'Connor offer a program of works by Guiliani, Granados, Albéniz, O'Connor, Debussy, and Schumann.

On Wednesday, August 15, at 6:30 p.m., SummerFest's young artists offer their perspectives on the evening's program. The concert at 7:30 p.m. features the workshop ensembles performing Ravel's String Quartet in F Major, Mendelssohn's String Quartet No. 4 in E Minor, and Schubert's String Quartet in D Minor ("Death and the Maiden").

All of the concerts take place in Sherwood Auditorium at the Museum of Contemporary Art, La Jolla (700 Prospect Street). Tickets are $35 or $45. For reservations and information, dial 858-459-3728. (LA JOLLA)

Violin Prodigy (and San Diegan) Eugene Ugorski, 11 years old, joins the San Diego Chamber Orchestra's Festival Pops Orchestra for a concert on Saturday, August 11, at 8 p.m. The program, titled "Passport to the World," will feature selections from Europe, Africa, South America, and the Far East, plus some Elvis selections, African dance and drumming, and other surprises. It's held at the Del Mar Fairground's horse arena. Ticket options range from $6 to $85 for single tickets. Gates open at 6:30 p.m. The fairgrounds are located on Jimmy Durante Boulevard. 760-753-6402. (DEL MAR)

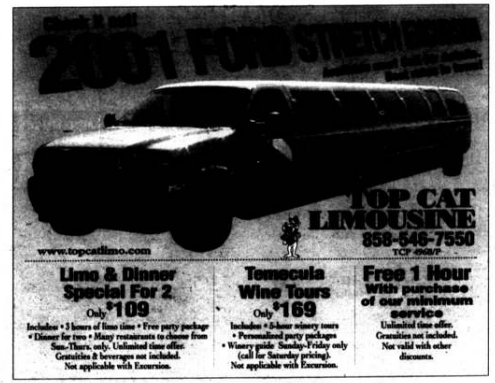

"I Love Opera" is being presented by the Small Opera at San Diego at 7 p.m. on Sunday, August 12, at the Academy of Sound and Music (1495 C Street). Singers of all ages will be performing arias, art songs, and Broadway favorites (a professional accompanist is provided). You're invited to sing, listen, or both! The suggested donation is $5. For more information, call 619-702-1495. (DOWNTOWN)

Traditional hierarchies have long since melted down into an egalitarian, improvisational, issue-driven free-for-all.

REVIEW
W.S. DI PIERO

I have no formal education in art history. I lasted one day in the only art course I took in college and commenced my education, such as it is, with visits to the Philadelphia Museum of Art and local galleries. I don't have, never will have, the global, finely tuned command of art history that scholars and possess. The Boston poet and art writer William Corbett, whose good book on Philip Guston I recommend, titled a recent memoir Furthering My Education, an apt phrase for the way I (and Corbett and other poets I know) have gone about educating ourselves in public.

I've never been a big reader of high-profile art magazines, so in the interests of public education — mine — I thought I'd go through a recent sampling and see what I could see. I picked up a lot of information and even tidbits of real learning, but my excursion reinforced a suggestion someone once made about literary magazines: all should merge into one publication, because it's easier not to believe in one God than it is not to believe in many.

With the exception of the British publication Modern Painters, which I'll come to later, the magazines I read — ARTnews, Art in America, Artforum — are intelligence reports from the trenches of contemporary art where traditional hierarchies, developed since the age of anonymous guildsmen in the Middle Ages, have long since melted down into an egalitarian, improvisational, issue-driven free-for-all. A seven-page stretch of the June ARTnews touches on motorcycle-painting art; comic-book aesthetics; Reneé Cox's photo, Yo Mama's Last Supper, in which the artist appears nude (you read about it when the opportunistic Rudolph Giuliani denounced its appearance in an opportunistic exhibition at the Brooklyn Museum of Art); the questioned authenticity of one of Goya's most famous paintings, The Colossus; and the recent rejection of a public work by Frank Stella, a 37-foot-high, aluminum-and-stainless-steel sculpture titled Bandshell, which cost $2.8 million to build and ship. Moolah makes the art world go round. The first third of a typical ARTnews or Art in America is devoted to news (and the kind of black-tie gossip I guiltily relish) about acquisitions, auctions, museum politics, and art-world big shots.

The feature articles have mostly to do with taste, trends, historical revisionism, and evaluations of who's hot and not. ARTnews contains a profile of the sculptor Mark Di Severo who, like Stella, works in big steel, and a piece on the renewed interest in Mies Van der Rohe, long in bad odor among postmodern architects for his cool, greyhoundish, skin-and-bone structures. But each is a two-page sprint, which left me wanting something chewier. The longer, more detailed articles balance contemporary themes (how sculptors working in different media — rubber, plastic dolls wrapped in beeswax, video setups using cathode-ray-tube monitors — treat the body "as a metaphor for emotions") and contemporary artists (like Polly Apfelbaum, who lays out on the floor hundreds of pieces of colorfully stained velvet) with attention to market-related matters such as the dissemination of Hans Arp's estate and a controversial auction of art owned by high-ranking Nazis.

Art in America, like ARTnews, has to cover local and international scenes, keep its nose in the money, so to speak, and satisfy the intellectual needs of a diversified audience, while trying to maintain a balance between the trendy and the enduring, what's passing and what's passed. For readers like me who believe in the ongoing vitality of painting, the July Art in America has an astute article on Vuillard's treatment of Place Vintimille, where he spent the last 13 years of his life, and on the contemporary American painter Lisa Yuskavage, whose soft-focus paintings of juicily busty, big-nippled women (usually in lingerie) have become so trendy that she turns up in two of the other magazines.

Mark di Suvero, from ARTnews

Artforum has a narrower field of vision, since it's concerned mostly with contemporary art and is more politically forthcoming. Its articles tend to be grounded in the assumption that the European canon is untenable, suspect, or at the very least unstable, and that formation of taste is pressured by socioeconomic power structures. It pays more attention to contemporary visual noisemakers than to canonical artists like Vuillard. This isn't a complaint. I like certain kinds of noise. It wakes me up. The summer Artforum contains articles on Frank Gehry, Clyfford Still, and the British installation artist Mark Wallinger. Unlike its sisters, it pays considerable attention to photography and film and always includes stuff like the smart-looking portfolio of photographs by Philip-Lorca diCorcia made in — here's the political spin — "Mayor Giuliani's tarted-up Times Square."

Normally, the title of the British publication Modern Painters tells all you need to know about its contents. Since its inception in 1987 it's been devoted to the criticism and exposure of artists working in traditional media. Each issue features subjects ranging from the Nabis to Balthus, from Italian Futurism to the so-called School of London, whose "members," Lucian Freud, Francis Bacon, Leon Kossof, and Frank Auerbach, have in recent years drawn renewed attention to figurative painting. (Artforum, on the other hand, pays more attention to the Saatchi-sponsored "Young British Artists," who go by the moniker YBAS, the most notorious being Damien Hirst.) Modern Painters sometimes tries too hard to be sassy and irreverent — it once featured a dull, preening interview of Balthus by David Bowie! — but it has kept its sights trained on an artistic practice played down or shunted aside by other magazines.

That said, however, the spring number is a rousing exception to the rule. Half of it treats other visual media — still photography, movies, video — which have altered the way some painters do their work and have provided new formal possibilities. The development of modern painting in the mid-19th Century was tweaked by the invention of photography, which forced a new definition of Realism. In fact, painters almost immediately began to use photographs as models. (Vuillard not only painted Place Vintimille, he photographed it many times.) Modern Painters features a profile of the gifted young German photographer Andreas Gursky, and the reproductions of his grandiose, congested color images alone justify the $10.95 cover price. But the most interesting piece, as one might expect from this magazine's usual editorial bent, is an interview with the late Euan Uglow, a superb British painter whose work, except for an occasional show at Salander-O'Reilly in New York, is little known here. Uglow's figures, many of them nudes, are peculiarly dry, and they're constructed on sketchy grids left exposed as part of the compositional structure. Though he wasn't interested in novelty, Uglow did novel work. He was one of those painters who advanced the ancient practice in modestly sized, innovative increments, enlarging the possibilities of painting and creating rich occasions for those of us who are still furthering our education. ■

ART MUSEUMS

California Center for the Arts Museum, over three decades of innovative printmaking are explored in "Kenneth Tyler: Thirty Years of Printmaking." Printmaker and publisher Tyler transformed American printmaking by extending its boundaries into areas once considered the domain of painting and sculpture. The exhibition focuses on the influential artists who have worked at Tyler Graphics, including Josef Albers, Helen Frankenthaler, Nancy Graves, David Hockney, Jasper Johns, Roy Lichtenstein, Robert Motherwell, Claes Oldenburg, and many others. The exhibit includes "mini-retrospectives" of work by Hockney and Lichtenstein.

ART

tures works acquired since 1998 by 12 artists including Mary Plaisted Austin, Richard Baker, David Baze, Doris Bittar, Robert Mapplethorpe, Harry Sternberg, Jorge Tacla, and Eloy Tarcisio. The museum's collection has an emphasis on California-based artists, particularly those living and working in San Diego County.

Both shows close on Sunday, August 12. Find the center at 340 North Escondido Boulevard (at Valley Parkway); 760-738-4120. (ESCONDIDO)

Mingei International Museum of Folk Art, coinciding with the artist's 80th birthday, "Eighty-Eight Turnings — A Retrospective of Bob Stocksdale," features the turned bowls he's known for. Stocksdale began turning wood as a hobby on his family farm, where he made baseball bats, honey dippers, tops, and spindles. He turned his first bowl while interned in a camp for conscientious objectors during World War II; since then he's turned more than 10,000 bowls on his lathe.

Concurrently, view "Kay Sekimachi — An Intimate Eye — Woven and Paper Objects," an exhibit of work by this fiber artist (who happens to be Stocksdale's wife). Both shows conclude on Sunday, September 23.

"Venini — Glass and Design in a World Perspective" centers on the work of the Venini factory in Venice. The exhibition also contains art glass by contemporary artists and by Louis Comfort Tiffany, as well as examples of ancient Egyptian, pre-Roman, Roman, and Islamic glass. Art glass by Benjamin Moore, Marvin Lipofsky, and Dale Chihuly, all of whom have worked at the Venini factory, are also included in the show, which closes on Sunday, January 6, 2002.

The Mingei is located on the square with the San Diego Museum of Art and the Timken Museum of Art. For additional information, call 619-239-0003. (BALBOA PARK)

Museum of Contemporary Art, Downtown, the diverse works of a Tijuana-based consortium of artists and designers whose work encompasses fine art, architecture, clothing, graphic design, and electronic music are gathered in "Torolab: Laboratorio of the Future in the Present." "Torolab — its name a play on the Spanish words for 'laboratory' and 'bull' — was established in 1995 as a socially engaged workshop committed to examining and elevating the quality of life for residents of Tijuana and the transborder region through a culture of ideologically advanced design." The exhibit features environments, architectural models, clothing, design objects, and sound installations by architects and artists Raúl Cárdenas Osuna, his wife Marcela Guadiana Cadenas, and other members of the collaborative. For this project, Torolab engages the idea of the "Una Futura Urbana" (Way of the Urban Future), creating three ambient spaces. The show concludes on Tuesday, September 25.

Surveying the depth and range of the museum's holdings, "Selections from the Permanent Collection: The 1970s," on view through Tuesday, September 25, suggests the variety of approaches employed by artists in the U.S. during this decade. It was a time "dominated by a spirit of radical investigation centered on expanding the definitions of what a work of art could be." Expect to see work by artists regarded as leading figures in the period of the '70s.

Find the museum at 1001 Kettner Boulevard (at Broadway), directly across from the Santa Fe Railroad Depot, adjacent to the America Plaza trolley transfer station. 619-234-1001. (DOWNTOWN)

Museum of Contemporary Art, La Jolla, "Design from X to Z: Jerry Hirshberg and Nissan Design International," explores the creative activity of the engineers, modelers, researchers, and designers of this San Diego-based design studio. The exhibition explores the design process behind the Nissan Xterra, one of the company's best-selling vehicles, and includes preliminary concept sketches, interior mock-ups, scale drawings, and hand-sculpted clay models. The exhibit also features the wide range of consumer products created at NDI, as well as the new design of the 2002 "Z." The show concludes on Monday, September 3.

Since the mid-1980s, Los Angeles-based photographer and filmmaker Sharon Lockhart has created a body of work investigating the tensions between the often-conflicting desires for dispassionate observation of and emotional connection with the human subject. "Sharon Lockhart" features approximately 40 photographs and multiphotograph series, along with the films she's created since 1994. See the exhibit through Monday, September 3.

"Skeet McAuley: The Garden of Golf" features a series of large-scale panoramic photographs of golf course landscapes taken at architect-designed golf courses in San Diego County. The photographs are said to "illustrate the diverse golf landscapes of the region." Scout the courses through Monday, September 3.

Find the museum at 700 Prospect Street. 858-454-3541. (LA JOLLA)

Museum of Photographic Arts, a fascination with and fear of water fueled the creation of surreal images revealing the "reflective and distorting properties of water and mirrors on nude figures" in "Connie Imboden: Beauty of Darkness," on exhibit through Sunday, September 30. All of Imboden's photographs are unmanipulated gelatin silver prints. "Seen from above and below, the forms of Imboden's water images occupy varying relations to the surface of the water they are suspended in and are recreated through the transparency or reflectivity of that surface."

A midcareer retrospective spanning more than two decades and several continents is offered in "Philipp Scholz Rittermann: Navigating by Light." All of the work included in the show is said to explore the element of time; the artist is said to be "particularly interested in the conflicting perceptions and perspectives of the eye and the camera." View the show through Sunday, October 21.

Find the museum in the Casa de Balboa building, at 1649 El Prado. For information, call 619-238-7559. (BALBOA PARK)

Oceanside Museum of Art, 50 years of Los Angeles art is celebrated with work by artists, faculty, and students associated with the Chouinard Art Institute, an icon of contemporary art during the years spanning 1921-1972, in "Chouinard: A Living Legacy." Presented at three North County locations, 137 painters, sculptors, and ceramicists are featured simultaneously at the Oceanside Museum of Art, the Kruglak Gallery at MiraCosta College, and the Boehm Gallery at Palomar College. Each venue highlights artists from different periods of the school's history, with a Chouinard graduate curating the exhibition for each venue.

At the Oceanside Museum, Ed Flynn is the curator for "The Last Years: Third-Generation Artists, 1956-1972," on view through Sunday, August 26. Find the museum at 704 Pier View Way; 760-721-2787. (OCEANSIDE)

San Diego Museum of Art, who was Anna Mary Robertson Moses? "Grandma Moses in the 21st Century" seeks to answer that question, featuring a large selection of her most important paintings. The exhibition charts the evolution of her style, providing the opportunity to reexamine her art on its own merits and in the context of modern art history. The show examines the degrees to which Moses relied on both memory and personal observation in rendering her subjects; also considered is the relationship of Moses' work to the tradition of American folk art as it existed in the early years of the 20th Century, as well as to the contemporaneous Regionalist movement. Although Moses began painting at an advanced age, her longevity resulted in a career of more than 20 years, and this show concludes with her last painting, Rainbow, created when she was over 100 years old. At her death in 1961, she had completed more than 1600 works of art. Take in this retrospective through Sunday, August 26.

The popular advertisements of three pleasure-driven cultural environments are examined in "High Societies." The exhibit offers a collaboration between three of the museum's curatorial departments: American art, European art, and Asian art. The largest section of the exhibition, "Psychedelic Rock Posters of Haight-Ashbury," is drawn from the collection of Paul Prince and focuses on work by Victor Moscoso, Wes Wilson, Stanley Mouse, Alton Kelly, and Rick Griffin, "from whose collective efforts flowered a psychedelic renaissance in American graphic art." "Toulouse-Lautrec and the Cabarets of Montmartre" features the complete set of 31 Toulouse-Lautrec posters. The images vibrate with the energy of the famous red-light district where such renowned Parisian cabarets as the Moulin Rouge flourished in the 1890s. The colorful world of the "floating world of Edo" (modern-day Tokyo) is captured in "Japanese Woodblock Prints and the Floating World of Edo," revealing the lifestyles and fashionable dress of Kabuki actors and courtesans. In spite of the diversity of time, place, and culture among the components of the exhibition, all present graphic images that promoted popular entertainments by imparting a sense of their spirit and experience. The show concludes on Sunday, August 12.

For additional information, call 619-232-7931. (BALBOA PARK)

Timken Museum of Art, the first American exhibition focusing on the Italian view painter who updated images of the grandest public spaces in Venice nearly 300 years ago is currently on display. "Luca Carlevaris: Views of Venice" brings together paintings from public and private collections in the U.S. and Europe, including eight Carlevaris works and comparative paintings by Gaspare Vanvitelli and Canaletto. The show is anchored by Carlevaris's Piazetta at Venice, a large oil on permanent display at the museum. See the show through Friday, August 31.

The museum's permanent collection includes European masters, 19th-Century American paintings, and Russian icons. For information, dial 619-239-5548. (BALBOA PARK)

THEATER

Terminal Flanks

First prize meant so much, they should have to risk their lives.

JEFF SMITH

San Diego has two Tony Award–winning regional theaters — the Globe and La Jolla Playhouse — yet each tells us zip about our region. We're off-limits. Because there's nothing to us? Because they're terrified of offending season subscribers? Or, since both send so many to Broadway, do they tailor shows to please New York audiences?

The La Jolla Playhouse has broken this streak with a world-premiere comedy-drama, by a local playwright, that holds a mirror up to us in ways both unflattering and quite funny. Annie Weisman was a cheerleader at Torrey Pines High. Be Aggressive turns her experiences into an apt metaphor ranging far beyond rooting a team to victory.

In fact, rarely do Laura and her four cohorts at Vista del Sol High mention a specific sport, game, or opponent. Their cheers, which encourage extreme violence, are generic. They exist in a frenetic vacuum, yet can be as Darwinian as anything on the field. Not long ago a national cheerleading competition banned certain moves — a blind back-flip from a ten-person pyramid being one — as too life-threatening. When they heard the ruling, several squads hit the roof. First prize meant so much, they argued, they should have to risk their lives.

They wanted, in Weisman's phrase, to "be aggressive." Laura and Leslie regard their senior year as terminal. It's the "last cheer year." When they graduate, life will cease or, at best, lose all meaning. Since they urge the team to get manic, why not go over the top on the sidelines? No, wait. Not just "perky coastal" mania. Unlike their mates, Laura and Leslie seek the rabid essence of cheer — to be what they say, with "Bible Belt intensity." They're "Ginsu," they're convinced. The rest are just "butter knives."

Freud said jokes are an acceptable means of making harsh social commentary. For teens, cheerleading's a means of venting with precise, formal outbursts. School pride is but one of its triggers. Laura and Leslie use it to process emotional trauma: for Leslie, a dysfunctional family; for Laura, the recent hit-and-run death of her mother.

Laura faces sudden loss. Baby Boomers, who still want it all, never had to deal with deaths by drive-by, AIDS, teenage suicide, or idiots gunning down their classmates. Today, death and teens walk hand in hand, a constant reminder being weapon-checks at school. Like Laura, teens today see more of life by 17 than Baby Boomers did by their dreaded Big Four-Oh.

And as happens to Laura, the culture turns its back on grief. The citizens of Vista del Sol — i.e., adult Baby Boomers — cultivate happy faces, images of achievement, and spend small fortunes keeping both wrinkle free. They act like grown-up cheerleaders, accentuating the positive and banishing the negative.

Similar to advertising agencies and public relations firms, cheerleaders support teams uncritically (my older sister was head yell-leader and never once asked why my basketball team, when I was a sophomore and we stunk up the gym, didn't win). Be Aggressive offers other examples of cheerleading with the volume turned down. THEATER on developing an endangered wetlands. And when Laura's working at the Smooth Talk Juice Bar, she roots buyers on, minus pom-poms.

Laura's lucky to have cheer, even though she and Leslie are Vista del Sol's least chipper students. With the latter, Weisman's written one of the funniest, most acerbic characters San Diego's ever seen. Leslie's a Dorian Gray. Beneath her Be-True-To-Your-School smile and Valley Girl slang lurks a bitter, confused, hilarious human being. She might be pregnant. Or might not. Whatever… When asked if she has low self-esteem, Leslie replies, "Yes-s-s… I hate myself. Duh!"

Laura and Leslie are so alienated they're even outcasts among the cheerleaders. They're "terminal flanks," meaning they don't get to do fancy antics. "These bitches are dedicated to fear and mediocrity," says Leslie in one of her more toned-down remarks. So Laura and Leslie make a pilgrimage to the Spirit Institute of the South — or S.I.S. — a Canterbury for those with the true calling. The trip involves robbery, theft, and misread maps.

They never make it to S.I.S., which is a shame, since the play promises to show us that scenario. Be Aggressive, in fact, could use a stronger second act; it's much better with the inertia of the first than the activity of the second. Even though constructed like improv skits, short scenes and blackouts, and though director Lisa Peterson energizes it like a homecoming pep rally, the play herks and jerks unevenly.

Be Aggressive has a Mercutio problem. Shakespeare had to kill his comedian, in Romeo and Juliet, so the tragedy could begin. As played by the wonderful Jennifer Elise Cox, with invective ablaze, Leslie's so funny, so stark, everyone else looks vapid. Weisman shouldn't kill her by any means. Just share her wealth. One example: Leslie has a line about Nixon pulling out of Vietnam. It's a keeper, but doesn't fit the character. Give the line to Leslie's mother and it could explain a ton.

The script's also facile with grief. It dawns on Laura (a deft, driven Angela Goethals) and her father (Mark Harelik, as comical as he is nerdy) because dramatic form says it's time for breakthroughs. She's been running away, and he running in place, long enough. Both feel contrived.

I can't remember a year, in years, when we've had more consistently top-notch acting. Add Cox to the list, also Daisy Eagan. She plays Laura's 11-year-old sister Hannah, who'd love to abandon deep denial, only those around her won't allow it. As Hannah questions her environment, Eagan eloquently shows how received culture conditions her to its demands.

As an ever-present emblem of that culture, scenic designer Rachel Hauck placed a gigantic red, eyelike structure, almost center stage, and a green bull's-eye on the floor. You can explore those metaphors as much as Weisman's. Audrey Fisher's costumes are Del Martian casual. And the cheerleaders, wearing red-and-white outfits and sporting a plethora of pig- and ponytails, risk life and limb, during scene changes, on roller skates.

Be Aggressive is imperfect. Big deal. Its troubles are fixable, it's definitely worth seeing, and the La Jolla Playhouse merits praise.

Regional theaters can do as they please. But one of the original notions, when they began springing up in the '50s and '60s, was they could do work not meant for Broadway. They could be experimental, and regional. This is what the playhouse has done. In an age of images, markets, and hard-sell spins — an age of cheerleading, if you will — the playhouse has staged a no-name author's first effort. What a radical choice! ■

American Rhythm
For 12 straight summers, the Lamb's Players Theatre has showcased one of its productions at the Lyceum. This year, Lamb's also showcases its creative team: Kerry Meads and Vanda Eggington at the Lyceum and at Lamb's Coronado theater. They wrote and orchestrated Boomers and American Rhythm. Each combines songs — or song bytes, actually — with history, and the songs gain striking resonance in this context. Director Meads has a genuine flair for the format, and Eggington's arrangements are always fresh and interesting (she can stitch one song out of three or four). Talent runs all through the cast, especially Tracy Hughes, who turns every assignment, from "Blues in the Night" to Tina Turner, into a show stopper, and Tom Stephenson as the genial narrator. Newcomers to this version perform as if born for the role: Sandy Campbell's singing of "I'll Be Seeing You" is a Kleenex grabber; and Michael Dalager's versatility amazes. Another huge plus: Jeanne Reith Waterman's excellent costumes — from pseudo-Edwardian finery, to flapper, to Dust Bowl, to dark '90s mortuary chic — sweep through the history of 20th-century fashion. Led by pianist Don LeMaster, the seven-piece back-up band propels the nicely paced, entertaining, and surprisingly poignant evening forward.

The Boswell Sisters
The night I caught the world-premiere musical, many in the audience stood and applauded the curtain call. And the three singers, playing the famous harmonizing sisters, are terrific. Michelle Duffy, Amy Pietz, and Elizabeth Ward Land (with a warm, smoky 1930s radio voice) blend voices beautifully in the Boswells' "syncopatin' songbird," roller-coaster style. The Stuart Ross and Mark Hampton book, however, couldn't be more thin or contrived and just disappears in Act two. Ross wrote Forever Plaid, and The Boswell Sisters uses the same formula — reunion of a group of harmonizers — but falls flat with pseudo drama. Like the Plaids (and their clones in Triple Espresso), the sisters complain: they can't sing anymore; then sing great (especially Duffy's "Until the Real Thing Comes Along" and Ward Land's "Stormy Weather"). Everything gets trumped up then tossed away. The result is a musical revue with filler. The sisters are ciphers (it's amazing how little we learn about them, almost as if their music happened by fiat; you want to find out what the musical didn't tell you). The staging is static. Nothing builds. And the ending, which comes from just north of nowhere, is sheer manipulation.

Da
Almost everybody loved Da. For 58 years he was the Pyrnne's gardener, cultivating some of Ireland's most beautiful roses. He lived a happy, unperturbed life and died in 1968. Was Da blessed? Had he found the path of least resistance through the maze? Or was he, as his adopted son Charlie suspects, a shallow, do-as-told sheep afraid to say no? Now a successful London playwright (just like Da's author, Hugh Leonard), Charlie returns to Dublin for his father's funeral.

He'll put Da's affairs in order — won't amount to much — and get on with his life. But recollections accumulate "like bills you thought you'd never have to pay," and Charlie must put his own life in order. A play about letting go becomes about holding on. Da is strange, in that the leads are less developed than the minor characters. As "Charlie Now," Joel Ander son does little more than react. Da is also more attitude than character, though Jonathan M. Murtry fills him out with like amounts of blarney and charm. James Winker makes Drumm, who devoted his life to standards, unforgettable. Stiff, stern, Winker's Drumm, "like a Victorian father," is the anti-Da. As Charlie's mother, Robin Pear son (you owe one of 2001's best jobs of acting. She's lived in Robin Sanford Roberts's rustic, wood grain–set all her days, doing a mil lion chores a million chimes. Rose's deeply resistant performance suggests that when Charlie's made his peace with Da, he should turn attention to his Ma.

I Love You, You're Perfect, Now Change
The longest-running off-Broadway musical revue satirizes "sex, love, dating, and marriage." It starts with youth and ends with old age, moving from the cusp of despair (song called "Single Man Drought"), to a marriage ("Wed ding Vows"), to senior singles meeting at a funeral ("I Can Live With That"). Directed with flare by Sam Woodhouse and chore ographed with seamless fluidity by Javier Velasco and backed up by the odd but effective combination of piano and violin, the San Diego Rep's version is a light-hearted, al beit lightweight, crowd-pleaser.

The Laramie Project

(they should move the show next door, to the Lyceum Space, and run it all summer). Most of the show's 18 vignettes are generic. I can relate to that stuff, and the characters are little more than their situations: either lagging behind, or too far ahead, of love's eight ball. Some of the show's most interest ing moments sit against the norm, as when Deborah Van Valken burgh croons a country ditty in three-quarter time, "Always a Bridesmaid," and concludes maybe it ain't such a bad thing. Through quiet insistence, expressing his tal ents without fanfare, Steve Gun derson has become a local head liner. He doesn't have marquee looks, even wears a scruffy beard for the show, but can convince you every person he plays is real. This includes a sensitivity-challenged stud ("Why? 'Cause I'm a Guy"), a father adopting his child's lan guage, and a vein-flexing San Quentin convict determined to show a hesitant couple that mar riage isn't a life sentence. (Note: due to popular demand, the Rep has extended the show's run.)

The Member of the Wedding
Frankie Addams, "a gangling girl of 12," has an urge to belong. She's al ways been an "I person," never a "we." When her brother gets mar ried, in a small Southern town, Frankie wants to join the wedding — make it a three-way marriage. Carson McCullers's rarely performed coming-of-age play (1950) was among Broadway's first hit shows concerned with race relations (even boasted one of Broadway's first integrated casts). Based on her short novel, it's more a mood piece than a play. For most of its three acts, little happens, then everything. Because it's so static, the acting must be expert. The Muse Theatre's opening night per formance, however, was not. A ma jority of the cast was somewhere between reciting the lines and speaking them. They were several rehearsals away from the essential spark for a living give-and-take. Carolyn Leone-Smith's mid-'40s summery costumes were ready to go. As was Rick Mittleider's set: a detailed kitchen and back yard in the MMPAC's small space, though his lighting (which went from day to night in seconds) and Peter Hashagen's sounds needed more tech-rehearsals.

National Comedy Theatre
ComedySportz changed its name, but its methods (and madness) re main the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terri ble Turks mangled Methodist Priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Com edy Theatre, an offshoot of John stone's Theatresports! artists, di rector Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on As troTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a "challenge match" against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audi ence, they played "Emotional Sym pathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit, rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledged fail ure, abundantly, then forgot it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Shear Madness
Mystery dinner theater minus the meal. The longest-running nonmu sical in American theater history is set in a unisex hair salon in Mis sion Hills. In an upstairs apart ment, someone stabs erstwhile pi anist-diva Isabel Czerney with clipping shears. Whodunit? Up to this point the cast — performing as if on second base, unmiked, at Qualcomm Stadium — overkills every word, gesture, and joke. Then in a volte face, the house lights come up, and the audience be comes the detective. The show's core, and obviously the cause of its longevity, lies in the give-and-take between cast and audience. During the interrogation the actors be come re-actors. They ad-lib and trounce hecklers. Although many ad libs sound scripted ("You don't have a butler! How do you eat?"), the cast, especially Rick Meads as top cop Nick O'Brien, is at its best in this format. Shear Madness be gan in 1978. Along with physical comedy and malaprops (one char acter gets labeled a "genital liar"), the play derives humor from topi cal and local references. Several topical references need updating (when was the last time you equated Sandy Duncan with Wheat Thins?). The show bills itself as mindless fun. Much of it is, and no more. But some local references — negative remarks about Lakeside and Paradise Hills, for example — raise nagging questions about the anything-for-a-laugh mindset be hind the production.
Worth a try.
THEATRE IN OLD TOWN. OPEN-ENDED RUN; TUESDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. SATUR DAY AND SUNDAY AT 5:00 P.M.

Shotgun Wedding Anniversary, or, Who Wants to Murder a Multimillionaire?
Let's get this straight: Basil and Petals Wilcox-Smythe will renew their wedding vows on their 25th anniversary? Hey, call me daft, but do they even like each other? And who invited Brenda Socrates, cos metics mogul and Petals's worst enemy (or is she?), to the festivi ties? And Basil and Petals's strange son and his pal Marcella... what is that all about? Not to mention Jof frey and Sperus, behive-bouffanted event coordinators (Petals likes theme events, like "Gnet-A-Fu neral"). Turns out these folk aren't just ten kinds of whacko. The phones are down, a storm's out side, and they're suspects in a mul tiple homicide. Each has enough motivation to make you question not who — but who didn't — dun nit. Mystery Cafe Dinner Theatre's latest has a relatively loose script and a cast adept at comedy and ringing ad libs. James Pascarella, one of the funniest people in San Diego, again reigns supreme in multiple roles (audiences be warned: Think you're witty? This guy's all-pro). Her hair an orangish red not found in nature — maybe on Mars — Diane Thrasher's a scream as Petals, who never met a situation she didn't yearn to con trol. Gerry MacKinnon, William Fredrick, Megan McLeod, and Crystal Verdon (whose middle name should be "Talent") keep the show rolling, even when the script lulls.

Theatresports
A cross between improvisational comedy and Family Feud. Improv, making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add com petitive scene-making, with the audi ence awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odi ousness of comparisons, but The atresports' "game show" is a hoot. The 90-minute evening uses various formats. The show I caught had "Team Sports" — two pairs of play ers competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla The atre" — five "directors" invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit." Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, col low youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group is tal ented enough (and know when to blackout best) to make the hits more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, has written one of the few brilliant books (Impro) I've ever read about making theater. And they put his pearls to good use. Their motto: "Remember, when it's not funny, it's art."

Triple Espresso: A Highly Caffeinated Comedy
Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffee house 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend — "Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard," or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" — Hugh plays '70s tunes on the pi ano. He and his companions, here to celebrate Hugh's anniversary, got stuck in the '70s. The trio used to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they ad mit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept char acters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackerjack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficul ties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudo drama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. (Note: the original cast members have been replaced).

Twelfth Night
Jack O'Brien's done such an odd thing with Twelfth Night that watching it requires an adjustment. In the last ten years local produc tions of Shakespeare's comedies left the impression the directors would rather be in Philadelphia. We've been in a decade-long gagathon in which attack, not Shakespeare, ruled. In O'Brien's staging no one wears a Padre uniform. Chewbaca doesn't do a cameo. O'Brien doesn't exaggerate any element. In stead, he blends tones like a choir master. His direction is so balanced and gimmick-free one can almost overlook its slow pace (by Act five, where characters start seeing dou ble, the show should frenzy but doesn't). James Leonard's set, in which water drops off the world's edge, is gorgeous (though out of season: wisteria and geraniums bloom in spring; the play takes place around January 6). The Globe has stacked the deck with some of its finest male comic ac tors. In their midst, Deborah Tay lor's every bit their match as Maria, an ardent social climber and the play's real schemer. Paxton White head's Malvolio is a chronic con trol freak, but with a tincture of in nocence, as if he'd know better if he wasn't such a repressed "enemy of life." Whitehead is excellent. So is Harry Groener as Feste. He matches the Clown's verbal dexter ity with physical inventiveness and leaves the haunting impression that Feste has already read the play.

"All night long car alarms were blaring. But apparently neighbors had a problem with my soundproof space."

the inside track blurt

Eric Colona said that his underage nightclub Venus, on El Cajon Boulevard right next to a towing yard, got special attention from the neighbors and police.

"There were hookers and drug dealers on the boulevard all night long. But whatever is complained about is what the city responds to. I've been told by the police that they don't respond if no one complains. I guess no one cares about hookers and drug dealers."

Opened June 2000, the Venus nightclub is now out of business. Colona, a substitute teacher, said he had a lot of success presenting bands like Big Provider, Under the Stone, the Bipeds, and Proof of Burden to the under-21 set.

"We got a lot of pressure from the city, so we decided to move out [of San Diego]. They kept increasing the amount of security required. They kept checking IDs and the customers would leave. After the curfew [10 p.m.] only those 18 and up could stay. Before the curfew, no one under 18 is allowed if you had dancing. It was on my shoulders if children were caught past curfew."

Colona said he is facing a court date over an incident at Venus. "They caught a kid who used his brother's fake ID to get in. The police cited me. A kid being out past curfew is my responsibility, and I'm not even his parent."

He said the laws are different just two blocks away in the city of La Mesa. Venus was in the city of San Diego.

UNDER THE STONE LOOKS FOR NEW HOME

Colona said there is one clear message the City of San Diego is sending out to young people: go party in TJ.

"By continually harassing people who are going out to have fun and making it impossible to have any fun in city limits, it leaves them no choice but to go to Tijuana and get drunk."

He said alcohol and San Diego laws don't mix.

"If people are drinking in my parking lot, in my opinion they should be cited, not me.... How come you can drink in the parking lot of the stadium? It is completely illegal to drink in anybody else's parking lot except the stadium. Why is that? Is it because the stadium has so much money, or is it people on the city council are always involved with the stadium?"

He said his patrons get different scrutiny from other area youth.

"When it comes to underage drinking [at SDSU], campus police look the other way. I was at a stop light the other day on College Avenue, and right in front of me these college kids were on the lawn drinking beer out of a keg. A campus policeman was right next to me at the light. He just drove by."

Colona, 34, said he is abandoning the 250-capacity, 3000-square-foot building that housed Venus, which previously held a factory that made blinds.

"I'm looking for another location." He said he will use what he has learned at the next Venus.

"We started out as a rave club. But ravers were too hard to deal with. They were overly sensitive. They were always complaining that I was creating a bad vibe. They were a bunch of sissies. I guess you could say we evolved into a rock club.... If you catch somebody smoking a joint at rock events, they say, 'I'm sorry, I'll put it out. I'll get rid of it.' If you catch somebody smoking a joint at a hip-hop show, they will go over there and smoke it. If you tell the same thing to someone at a rave event, they'll look at you dead in the eye and say, 'What are you talking about? I'm not smoking.'"

The closing of Venus underscores the fact that there is a shortage of all-ages venues in San Diego. UCSD's Ché Café and the Epicentre in Mira Mesa exclusively serve those under 21. Occasionally Pokeez Café idowntown and 'Canes in Mission Beach serve the underage crowd.

Jim Diaz works at the Epicentre, where his title is director of the music industry institute. He admits that at his club, fans under 18 are allowed to stay after the 10 p.m. curfew.

"This is a different business [than Venus]. We are a nonprofit teen center."

"They are assholes there," said one local musician who declined to be identified. "We played there last week. They told us we had to pre-sell 30 tickets at $5 and show up with the $150 and a list of 30 names of everyone who bought a ticket. We did that. The money went straight into their hands. There were three other bands, none of which showed up with $150 or names.... And they didn't care that the other bands showed up without the money or a list."

He said his band did not get paid.

Diaz said he did not work at the show in question. He said the person who would know was James Barnum, who books the Epicentre from Fullerton.

"When some local artists play for the first or second time, and we don't feel they have a tremendous draw, we ask them to sell tickets. However, it is not a pay-to-play situation. If they only sell 19 [out of 30], so be it. It's our way of seeing which bands are serious, to tell us which bands we should select to play on nights we have bigger artists.... Without locals, we are not able to exist. We understand that."

All four bands that were supposed to play that night did play.

Barnum said one of the of the four bands who showed up did not sell their tickets in advance.

"We were not very happy about that," he said. They still played. He said the other three bands did sell at least 30 tickets in advance and turned their money in.

Barnum said if the band in question did not get paid, "They were supposed to. I'll have to look into that if they didn't."

But not all local bands are eligible to play the Epicentre. Chris Knowles of Under the Stone said the Epicentre wouldn't even consider them.

"When I talked to the guys who booked at the Epicentre, they said they needed a CD and a promo kit for us to play there."

Knowles admitted that the band hasn't been able to afford one yet.

"We will submit it to them as soon as it is ready. I'm hoping the guys at Venus will open another club. It's perfect for bands trying to get their start.... That place has been like a home to us."

"I got sick of calling some dude Daddy Cool," said former Kottonmouth Kings rapper St. Dog about the band he started in 1996. "It got to the point where it wasn't funny anymore. I made a paycheck with them, but I'd rather be broke than call some guy 'Daddy.' "

St. Dog — who doesn't see the irony over his beef about calling someone a funny name — has some issues with the hip-hop troupe he cofounded in 1996.

PHOTOGRAPH BY EVAN LOWD

MR. ST. DOG HIMSELF

"I wanted to do more musical things with a band. They just want to play off the DAT [recorded tape]. I wanted to mix it up with a couple of punk songs and with a live band."

Mr. St. Dog now lives in San Diego County. He doesn't divulge his real name or his hometown. He admits he's losing out financially by no longer being a member of the band that had a radio hit with the song he cowrote called "It's a Dog's Life."

St. Dog started his own label — USA with a circle around the A (an old punk icon for "anarchy"). It is pronounced "US Circle A." He plays around the Southland with his older brother Big Hoss. But when he left the Kings a year ago, he said it took a while to get back in the groove.

"I got such a bitter taste from music, I completely dropped out of the scene and moved to San Diego [from Riverside] and started surfing," St. Dog said he was responsible for "60 to 70 percent" of the Kottonmouth Kings' lyrics, but he shared songwriting credits with everyone in the band.

"A lot of people come into the music industry and everything is a bro deal. On 'Dogs Life' we split all royalties on the lyrics equally. You want to be cool, but at the same time you're really sacrificing your life for music."

St. Dog says the lesson he learned from the Kottonmouth Kings should be a lesson to other lyricists who share songwriting credits and the resulting royalties with band members who didn't create the songs.

"Before you make any rash decisions, get a book and find out what you are entitled to. Do not be afraid of hurting people's feelings by knowing your rights. If people's feelings get hurt, tell them to write more lyrics next time.... I was clueless in that situation. Music in general has always been like that. People should read books like Everything You Need to Know About the Music Industry."

St. Dog does not blame his former bandmates for benefiting from his lyrics: he only blames himself. But he says he does not get simple respect when he shows up at Kottonmouth Kings shows.

"They see me and they don't give me no love.... They don't even throw a dog a bone.... They were bro when I was supplying the lyrics. Now they don't promote me onstage. They just want people to forget me."

But longtime fan Johnny Russell of Fallbrook says real Kottonmouth fans remember.

"I believe his talent is what led the group. When fans find out that St. Dog is back in the picture [as a solo artist], he's gonna take their fans over."

St. Dog says some fawning press articles may have contributed to his exit from the Kings.

THE CASUAL ROTATOR

"One of the questions was 'How old are you?' " said Jeff Trageser about his audition for a new MTV show in development.

"It wasn't me saying I was the front man. It was the press.... Things went south from there. The next thing you know I'm in a band with my brother. I went from a major label to my own indie." He says the Kottonmouth Kings got a three-record distribution deal with Capitol.

St. Dog now sells his own CD, Spun Crazy, at his own shows.

"I'm content where I'm at now. I have no plans to get back together."

St. Dog and Big Hoss appear at 'Canes (18 and up) tomorrow, August 18 at the Galaxy in Santa Ana, and August 23 at the Whiskey in Hollywood.

Trageser works as a nurse at Mercy Hospital. His partner, local artist Mark Sgarbossa, make up the electronica duo Rotator.

"I said we're both 32. The room went silent. After a big long pause, [MTV producer] Ted Smith finally goes, 'That's okay. You don't look 32.' Obviously we realized at that point it wasn't the best time to be honest."

Rotator was one of 90 artists invited to tape an audition for a pilot for a new show featuring unsigned bands.

"I think the show is going to be called Your Turn or something like that. We taped our [audition] at this place in L.A. called the Complex, which is the same studio where they do the voiceovers for The Simpsons and where Fleetwood Mac recorded some album or other."

Rotator joined 30 other bands on the day of their audition. A ten-man MTV production crew taped the band segments and eventually selected ten groups or solo artists for the final pilot.

Rotator did not make the cut, but they learned a lot about what matters in MTV-land.

"Everyone was from L.A. We were the only out-of-towners. It was a surreal experience. We were fish out of water. Everyone had an entourage and big hair and bigger chests."

Everyone else, said Trageser, seemed to care more about looks than their music.

"We met this folk singer who made me think [of] Joni Mitchell or some kind of earthy singer. She had the biggest fake tits I've ever seen. They were barely contained in her top. After she played [for her audition tape], I said, 'Great show.' The first and only thing she said to us was, 'Who's your agent.' Everyone seemed really competitive and secretive. Most of these acts had agents who get auditions for them. I call them acts because I don't want to call them musicians because they weren't."

Trageser said Rotator got the audition from a reference from an employee of MP3.com. He said everyone but Rotator came to the audition with their agent or their mom.

"There was this young girl group. All five had the exact same tight shorts and baby doll shirts. There was a blonde, a brunette, an Asian, a black, and a Hispanic. What was weird was they all had the exact same color skin. They were all mocha.... And they each had their mothers standing off in the background.... There was this one punk band. Everybody's hair stood straight up and was a different color. They were all pierced from head to toe. Their look was over the top. Which is where we failed. We just showed up in T-shirts and cargo pants...

"The only other electronic artist besides us was this one guy who showed up with a CD he was going to sing along to. I had just spent all this time setting up all my music gear and this kid shows up with a CD. What kind of electronic musician doesn't bring his own gear? I wanted to slap him."

Trageser and Sgarbossa say they want to continue their campaign to get locals interested in a live electronica band à la the Chemical Brothers. "If you go around town and ask kids where electronica comes from, they say from DJs and turntables, which is not the case. When you go out to see live bands, people expect guitars, bass, and drums.... We want to play electronica like a live band. Not everybody is ready for it."

Rotator appears Friday at the Ken Club in Kensington.

CD review: Blood Runs Cold, Hoagy Carmichael, Furniture Frolic 000002

"MTV'S Hip Hopera: Carmen, the soundtrack to the music network's groundbreaking 'first hip-hop musical,' is a modern retelling of Georges Bizet's 19th century opera incorporating contemporary urban music. The inaugural release on Matthew Knowles' Music World Music features performances by some of the biggest names in hip-hop including Da Brat, Royce Da 5'9", Rah Digga, Mos Def" — oh, 'scuse me, I'm reading the wrong thing. I'm on so many mailing lists all of a sudden...uh...where's it?...okay:

"Hoagy Carmichael, Blood Runs Cold's stirring tribute to a songwriting legend, is not so much a recapitulation of his career or a series of performances of his greatest compositions as" — hell, I don't need to read these things...'s better to rely on your own ears.

Of all unlikely hybrids, what we've got here is REGGAE-SPEEDMETAL versions of a buncha Hoagy songs, almost all of which STINK. I hate to be binary, but the only thing that doesn't stink is "Rocking Chair" — that's a fact.

No, it's NOT a fact: just one keen observer's critical judgment.

Cello Ska

"I walked over to the first cellist and grabbed her cello."

SCENE
EILENE ZIMMERMAN

Cellist Felix Fan says one of the "weirdest" concerts he every played took place in June in Hong Kong. He performed there with Chinese composer Pan Dun (who won an Oscar for the soundtrack to Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon).

"We were in this huge stadium and it was really full [about 8000 people]. It's not that common for me to do a stadium gig; the most we usually get is two, maybe three thousand people, and it's usually enclosed. This was outdoors. It was a concert to mark the fourth anniversary of the turnover of Hong Kong to the Chinese," says Fan.

Although Hong Kong is his favorite city for performing, Fan says the audience reaction was strange. "It kind of came and went. They applauded, then they didn't. And in the front row were all these Communist military people. Lots of kids running around and screaming. It was a very weird vibe," he says.

Fan is one of the local musicians performing at this year's SummerFest in La Jolla from August 1 through 19. Most concerts will take place in Sherwood Auditorium at the Museum of Contemporary Art. The roster includes violinist David Chan, concertmaster for the Metropolitan Opera in New York; harpist Deborah Hoffman; and pianist Bruce Adolphe, among others.

During a brief stint at Yale University in 1994, Fan performed at a benefit concert for Senator John Kerry. The show took place in a dormitory, and Fan dropped his bow twice during a piece before his string broke. "It was pretty frustrating. I finally just stopped playing."

Why does a cellist drop a bow?

"Why do you drop your pencil? No reason, not nervousness, just clumsiness. Just one of those things. I ran into the wall this morning and bumped my head — that kind of thing....

"Another time I broke a string — which doesn't usually happen — was during a performance with the Tai Pei National Symphony. I broke two strings in rehearsal, and then during the concert I broke another one," he recalls.

"The piece of music was modern," says Fan. "You can fake your way through a lot of it.... The audience, generally, with a very modern piece of work, won't recognize it. It's not as if it's Mozart or Beethoven, where, if you make a huge mistake, they are going to notice. It's not good to break any string, period. You only start with four. Depending on the piece, it's worse to break one than another. For instance, certain pieces rely heavily on the C string, others on the A string. So if you're performing a piece that relies on the A string and you break the A string, you're really in trouble."

After faking it for a while with only three strings, Fan says he did the only thing that seemed reasonable. "I walked over to the first cellist and grabbed her cello. She didn't really know what was going on and she looked shocked. But I had a page left to play, so I took it. I was the soloist."

Fan, a 26-year-old La Jolla native, graduated from the Bishop's School before spending those four months at Yale feeling, he says, "stagnant." He left after a few months and went to Cologne, Germany, for four years, to study with Boris Pergamenschikow, a well-known Russian cellist. Fan splits his time between La Jolla and New York City when he's not on the road.

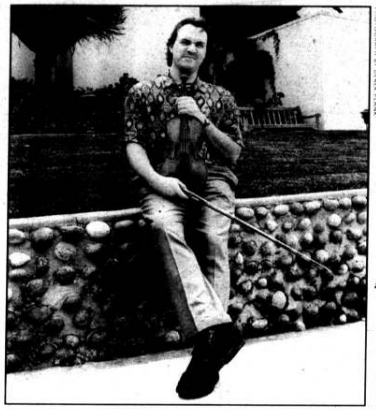

He started playing violin at four, at his mother's insistence, then switched over to cello, he says, out of laziness. "Something about standing up and playing violin was hard for me. Also the sound of a cello, even today for me, is more soothing to my ears. I also played piano for about seven years."

Fan says he and Dun have put on concerts in Asia with an orchestra, percussionist, and cellist, somewhat like a concerto version of the Crouching Tiger film score. "There are more extended cadenzas in the middle, instead of just playing the film score verbatim.... Pan Dun put in these three cadenzas — and a candenza, in the baroque sense, 300 years ago, was something Haydn or Bach or another composer put in where the performers could improvise, do their own thing. These days cadenzas are written out, but for Dun, he was more old school in this case. You are playing with an orchestra and the orchestra cuts out. Pan Dun's music has its own characteristics, so although you could theoretically play anything you want, you don't. I played something that pertained to what had just been played, to keep it consistent. Otherwise, it sounds like you're just messing around...

"Dun has turned [the piece] into a more abstract piece ...and he uses this huge screen with video art installations. It's really different. I still love doing chamber music, but it's because I get to do this other stuff," says Fan. "Otherwise, it can get monotonous, because concerto repertoire for cellos pre this century are not that vast."

Then there's the ska band Common Sense that Fan records with and performs with when possible. In July the band played at the House of Blues in Los Angeles. "That's like 'go ahead and get drunk and get onstage and do what you want.' They are so damned loud, I can't hear what I'm playing anyway," he says.

Mark O'Connor, a Bonsall resident and one of three composers-in-residence this season at SummerFest, will perform his own compositions on the violin. O'Connor is a rarity in the classical music business — a composer who performs only his own work. "It's rare to be a composer/performer in classical music because there are so many demands to hear the great classics."

MUSIC SCENE

Two things that are toughest for solo artists to do, he says, is open up for another act and to play in venues other than concert halls. "When you have to play in places that serve alcohol or food, there's

"All of a sudden you hear, 'We'd like two popcorns.'" all kinds of noise going on and talking and ordering of food. It's so distracting. You're trying to create a magical moment and all of a sudden you hear, 'We'd like two popcorns.'"

With a Grammy under his belt for the recording Appalachian Journey — some of which he will play opening night of SummerFest — O'Connor no longer has to worry about movie-trained audiences who think a performer is invulnerable to chatter.

The New York Times said last year that O'Connor's journey from self-taught fiddle player to "concert-hall virtuoso is already one of the most spectacular, if underpublicized, journeys in recent American music."

O'Connor grew up in Seattle, son of an alcoholic father and a mother who had cancer. His mother wanted him to take guitar, and he started at three.

"I started taking violin at 11. I released my first fiddle album at 12, and by the time I was in my teens, I'd released six albums," he says. By 19 he was playing electric violin with the rock band the Dregs (also known as the Dixie Dregs), and from 1990 to 1995 he was the Country Music Association's Musician of the Year. At the same time O'Connor began working with classical composition.

"I originally chose violin because…I felt like through this one little instrument you could articulate how happy or sad you felt."

About the mixed reaction his music gets from audiences, O'Connor says, "They might like something that I don't think is all that great, but I get a standing ovation for it.… Other times I'll be playing something I think is very serious and pretty darn good and I won't get the reaction I thought I would. You always have to be prepared to…move on; that's what performing is all about. If everything happened the same every time, there'd be no sense in repeating it." ■

Jerks Preen

"If you're a German, then I'm a Chinaman."

Bits and Pieces: I was having a drink with a couple of buddies recently on a Sunday afternoon, a guilty pleasure, and one of them, a cabdriver who happens to be a classically trained violinist, complained to all of us about these "young jerks" who had been getting into his taxi of late and talking about jazz, as if they were experts. They were not experts, my friend explained; they didn't know "jack shit about jazz," but they'd seen the Ken Burns PBS series Jazz on TV, so now they were experts.

Elmo Hope

I know where he's coming from, as the expression goes, and am not unsympathetic. My friend knows a great deal about jazz and music in general, and it's irritating for older people to watch or listen to younger people preen in foolish ways. But that's what they do, and that's what my friend and I, doubtless, did way back when we were young. Actually, we were at university together and had mutual friends in the late '60s but never met until 20 years later. Maybe he would have found me to be a preening jerk at the time. I can't imagine why anyone wouldn't.

REVIEW
AUGUST KLEINZAHLER

The Burns series has generated much discussion and not a little argument: not just in here but in the pages of journals like the New York Review of Books (sometimes referred to as the New York Review of Us). Everyone seems to have an opinion, and, using my own crude instruments of statistical analysis, opinions tend to run negative, at least among those with a more than casual acquaintance with the medium.

The objections to the series are of interest. Not a few seem to involve the paucity of white musicians and commentators. I don't buy that one. I don't think Wynton Marsalis and Stanley Crouch were appealing, especially the former, who is transparently self-regarding, but they were bright, knowledgeable, and articulate. Among white commentators, not many would be preferable to Gary Giddins. Whitney Balliett, perhaps, but I have no idea what he'd be like on camera, and I'd guess he was approached and he declined — just a careless speculation on my part.

Actually, Balliett, the dean of jazz writers (and not at all shy to volunteer his displeasure), gave the Burns series a generally favorable review in the New Yorker. What I think is going on (and I think it's a good thing) is that people take their jazz very seriously, very personally, and they haven't seen this most American of art forms discussed in so public a forum before. I empathize with that discomfort.

Quite apart from Marsalis and Crouch — and far too much Ellington and Armstrong — my objection to the series was that they didn't have my favorite guys on board: artists like Elmo Hope, Sonny Criss, Randy Weston, Tete Monteliu, Warne Marsh. None of these is a household name, but they are in my household, dammit, and they all make it onto my desert-island top 20.

Sonny Criss

None of them is a major figure like Ellington or Armstrong or Miles Davis or Coleman Hawkins or Monk or Bud Powell or Lester Young or Charlie Parker. In fact, Hope is an amalgam of Monk and Bud Powell and himself; Weston is deeply beholden to Monk, as Monk was to Ellington and Basie and James P. Johnson before him. Monteliu's principal debt is to Bud Powell and Marsh, I should think, comes out of Lennie Tristano via Lester Young. And Criss? Ain't no Sonny Criss without Charlie Parker, that's for certain. But if I'm sore at Ken Burns, I'm sore because my guys weren't up there waiting in the spotlights. In my view, apart from broader structural complaints, that's what everyone's grousing about, at least deep down.

Last week I wrote about the outstanding 20th-century pianist Dinu Lipatti, a French-trained Romanian musician whose life and career were tragically cut short by leukemia. Since my favorites have become the subject of this week's column, let me return to a recently discovered favorite of mine, the great Russian (of German ancestry) Sviatoslav Richter. I return because it's a pleasure to return, but also because I've uncovered a video of the great man that contains, among other things, rare footage of Richter in performances over several decades, including excerpts from performances of J.S. Bach, Beethoven, Chopin, Debussy, Liszt, Mozart, Prokofiev, Rachmaninoff, Schumann, Tchaikovsky, Wagner, Berg, Brahms, Glinka, Handel, Haydn, Mendelssohn, Ravel, Saint-Saëns, Schubert, Wolf, and Shostakovich.

Randy Weston

Richter is truly a phenomenon. In a career lasting 55 years he gave more than 27,000 performances at around 3600 concerts in 1000 different places, sometimes as many as 100 or more concerts a year, performing over 200 different works. His repertory included something like 833 works, which does not include the 600 or so songs he performed.

Richter led a nomadic life, indifferent to creature comfort. He appears to have married happily, to a singer, who was devoted to him. He was an extraordinarily handsome man and, what is evident in these film clips shot over many years, was well aware of it. He was clearly capable of great charm or the worst sort of imperious behavior. He lived exclusively for music, although he did like to paint a bit.

It's remarkable to be able to watch a true genius in conversation, as well as in performance. He has a wonderfully expressive face and speaks very frankly, sometimes unkindly, of other musicians and composers. He has that ruthlessness about him that I associate with genius, or a kind of genius. He must have needed it coming of age as a musician in the '30s, surviving both the Stalin era and the Nazi assault on Russia. One shudders to think what sort of compromises and betrayals were required of him to fare so well during those extraordinary times. Richter would not be alone or even remarkable in this regard; survivors revise history to suit themselves.

In the course of the video, one meets a number of other celebrated musicians, composers, conductors, at least in passing. Richter did not get along equally well with all of them. He and von Karajan, the rehabilitated Nazi and stellar conductor, had some major problems, which are discussed in a wryly amusing fashion. At one point, when things are going to hell in a hand-basket, Richter pleads with von Karajan, "But I am a German, too." To which von Karajan responds, "If you're a German, then I'm a Chinaman." Actually, von Karajan was of Greek ancestry, but he'd never admit it and it's of no real pertinence here.

Philips Records has a new series called Philips 50, in which it is reissuing great performances, from the early 1950s to the present, remastered using the latest 96kHz 24-bit technology in their digital transfers. Among these performances are Richter's legendary Sofia Recital from 1958, which includes his matchless performance of "Pictures at an Exhibition" by Moussorgsky. The sound restoration is really something special. The performances are, well...Richter.

I've also found, from Music and Arts Performances of America, an entire disc of Richter playing the works of Scriabin, including 24 of the Preludes, Etudes Op. 42, and Piano Sonatas No. 2, 5 & 9. Only another Russian (German ancestry notwithstanding) can play Scriabin like this. A must buy, if you can find it. ■

AROUND TOWN

The Gaslamp Quarter and 5th Ave., Downtown
619-595-5977

Kick back in style and sip an "olive oil yarn," while listening to the soothing sounds of jazz. Tuesday's Jazz Jam Session is hosted by the smokey alto saxophonist Cecilia Coleman. This event always attracts the big players in SoCal. Drys isn't charging a cover, so come on down.

The Casbah
2501 Kettner Blvd. 619-232-4355

You don't have live music at this intimate venue. Thursday, 8/9, The Scottish Greens play and The Bhotels, Seven Year Bomb and Pedals Off the Road. Friday, 8/10, Members with Friends, $25 at the back room. Saturday, 8/11, Corrugated, Freedom For Sammy, I Wish I and Insane. Tuesday, 8/14, Matthew Dudley Playboys, Gindi's Run and Zero Day play a free show.

345 B St., Downtown 619-231-4343

Every Saturday is Club 69ere from 10pm till 4am. This week, Ultra features DJ Imani and Aubrey Rhodes. Proficient DJs J Iwhanee and 42 Ed Chaplin will also be spinning. Don't forget to step outside and enjoy one on their giant smoking patio.

Dream Street
3228 Bacon St., Ocean Beach
619-222-9131

G.D. Productions is still booking the hardest rocking bands in OB. Thursday, 8/9, hear the rock of Aspiring and 82nd. Friday, 8/10, catch a punk rock show with The Blackheads, Sweatnutt, Mercury Legion and Changing Masters. Saturday, 8/11, it's Dark Reign, The Adkins Boys (Backwood and Bumrapp)A. That'll be a heavy groove show.

Club Montage
5620 Hardwick St., Midtown
619-260-0600

Thursday night is Karma from 9:30pm till 4am. Tastemaker will be spinning hip-hop in the main room all night, and their dupe will spin house after-hours. You can get in free with a current industry pay stub! Don't forget about the $2 shots all night long!

The Shack
6001 La Jolla Blvd., La Jolla
858-459-0004

It's time to kick back on the patio at The Shack. Their Scenic Bar is now open at Windansea Beach. They neighborhood bar has great food, great tunes, a great view, and it's only a block away from the best surfing in town. What more could you ask for?

Cyclo Bar
4602 Mission Blvd., Pacific Beach

ON NOTE

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

I was waiting in line at the world's slowest coffee place the other day, listening to a godawful Gloria Estefan song blare over the speakers, when I thought, This is pop music: trite lyrics repeated over and over until — even if you hate the song — you know its title, so it's easier to look for it in your local shopping mall.

As revelations go, I admit it wasn't much, but it disturbed me because I love pop music. I like a concise song structure and a pretty melody and a hook I can sing along with. But, the fact is, I also hate pop music for the same reason — its song structures are predictable, its melodies obvious, its hooks hungry for attention.

I think Matthew Sweet feels the same ambivalence. He's spent his career gathering elements of the Beatles, Big Star, the Beach Boys, and other pop greats and then reassembling them. At his best, as on the breakthrough early-'90s album Girlfriend, his influences are integrated into his own vision, and the result is beautiful and honest. At other times, he sounds like a craftsman who has come to hate his job. He takes a heartbreaking melody and puts it in a song called "Someone to Pull the Trigger," about taking part in a suicide pact. He takes a tender love song and gives it a refrain that goes "sick of myself when I look at you, something is beautiful and true." He shuts up and lets his (excellent) guitar players solo all over the place.

It's Sweet's ambivalence that keeps him from being a real pop star, like Estefan. And thank God for that.

Mini Bar and Phantom Planet open. (To hear a sample of Matthew Sweet*, call 619-233-9797, wait for the prompt, then punch in ext. 4451.)*

MATTHEW SWEET, Belly Up Tavern, Monday, August 13, 8 p.m. 858-481-8140 or 619-220-8497. $16.

My name is Ina. I am a mother of two and grandmother of three. I started smoking at age 18 and stopped at age 60, but it was too late. I'm still alive but I have to speak through what they call a blom-singer, my esophagus had to be removed because smoking put cancer there. When I started smoking it was commonplace. No one knew that I would have to take out part of my body because of it. If in this day and age you are still smoking with all the information about smoking's harmful effects, what are you thinking?

OF NOTE

BY RICHARD MELTZER

Modus ponens. Modus tollens.

If a. Then b. Not b. Then not a.

"From Morenci, Arizona, where the copper mines blow, I can see Clifton and the valley below."

"They saved Hitler's ck, they hid it under a rock. I discovered it last night. I couldn't even believe my eyes. If Hitler's ck could choose its mate, it would ask for Sharon Tate."

"I can pick your face out from the front or behind. You may look pretty, but I can't say the same for your mind."

If Depeche Mode did songs like THAT, well, you can bet your boots I would at least acknowledge it.

If Depeche Mode became Depeche Modern... um, sorry. I don't have any Depeche Mode jokes up my sleeve.

ON NOTE

BY DAVE GOOD

Blowback is being called Tricky's most radio-friendly work ever. He says he owes it all to his new diet. He claims junk food drove him insane. He said he suffered from deep depression. It showed in his work. Last year, Tricky got hooked up with a psychotherapist who told him to cut out sweets. He dropped the processed foods, went all-macro, and, as a consequence, now makes happier music.

Born Adrian Thaws in the UK, Tricky has been called the Trip-Hop Witch Doctor and Lord of the Slow Beats. His career began in the late '80s with Massive Attack; he went solo soon after the release of Blue Lines. He moved to New York and began to release uneasy-listening records in collaboration with Neneh Cherry, DJ Muggs, Grease, Gravediggaz, and Terry Hall. If Tricky borrowed, then it was to take others' moods and excesses even further off-center. If early Tricky smacked of an artist who was looking for a gimmick, then, by 1995, the British press had given him one. It dubbed his Maxinquaye something new: trip-hop, and it included him in what would later be defined as the Bristol sound. But dissect any record by Tricky, and you will find his musical influences laminated together in thin layers like a bogus ID. One hears sonic backwash from Marilyn Manson to Snoop Dogg, from Prince to Brian Eno.

TRICKY

Tricky is essentially a rapper but fancies himself a poet: "I am she/Fists are clutching/Breast stroke/Hotel/Motel" (from "Abbaon Fat Tracks"). A majority of Tricky's songs are about nookie — especially the ugly kinds. With techno beats, dubs, and dark synth undercurrents, the Tricky experience is music for foam-dance night in the concrete pleasure pit of some discrete rave. He understands, and works, all the angles — Tricky's live gigs feature dramatic lighting that allows only brief glimpses of his tattooed, shaved, emaciated figure.

Emiliana Torrini opens.

RESTAURANTS

Paul and Janie in the Quattrocento

PHOTOGRAPH BY KEN STEELE

Ricardo Macias

In the last chapter of our story, you may remember that I was frantically searching for the right restaurant to take old friends visiting from El Paso. Janie and Paul may have landed in a culinary high desert, but their tastes were shaped in New York and San Francisco (where we first met as neighbors in the same building). Now Janie (a Jackie Kennedy lookalike, by the way) pines for flavors West Texas doesn't provide. "Eating Italian, especially fresh seafood Italian, absolutely trips my trigger," she e-mailed. "We're being more self-indulgent than usual on this trip, and good food is a large part of that."

So Paul and Janie drove 14 hours to eat fresh fish. The third restaurant I scouted before they arrived fit their bill: DeMedici, Italian, with good food, fresh seafood. And the sidewalk terrace with a front-row-center view of the perpetual Gaslamp spectacle? Pure gravy.

At the "scouting" visit, I ate indoors, enjoying the creamy-toned, carpeted dining room decorated with large sepia drawings and framed pictures in the style of Quattrocento Florence. The crowd at the well-spaced tables was on the spiffy side, the men in crisp shirts, the women in cleavage. We arrived to a tenor warbling Verdi, and in the course of dinner we traversed the pseudo-Puccini of Carmine Coppola to conclude with a lengthy medley from Dean Martin. As we left, we noticed an autographed photo of Jerry Lewis in an alcove near the front door. The manager, seeing us parsing the pic, told us that Lewis is a regular at DeMedici when he's in town, so I guess he and Martin must finally have made up, or he'd run screaming from that sound-loop.

Dino was crooning again when we arrived with our roving Texans — you remember: "When an eel nips your hip when you're taking a dip — that's a moray! When a fish fangs your face while you're treading in place — that's a moray..." (Morays aren't edible, so they're one species DeMedici doesn't serve.) We'd purposely parked in a lot several blocks south, to give our friends a strolling taste of the Gaslamp. Almost every corner that weekend evening held a Happening: A bad Bob Dylan imitator was noodling near the parking lots, a better one was ensconced with amps a couple of blocks further north. Two guys sporting large Afros and spangly shirts strolled past a half dozen Christian teenagers yelling at us to discover Jesus, and a dozen Hare Krishnas (did you think they were extinct or restricted to airports?) were chanting and drumming as they marched up the sidewalk. We continued to enjoy the parade from DeMedici's street-noisy patio.

Fried calamari, both the rings and the tentacles utterly tender and dusted with the lightest breading, were among the best I've tasted in town. Their dipping sauce was a steaming-hot, lightly garlicky marinara. (Although it was delicious, I found it too heavy for the sprightly squidlings and contented myself with spritzes of lemon juice.) An appetizer not to miss was the angelic seafood cannelloni, a delicate crepe stuffed with (slightly overcooked) shrimp and spiny lobster dice, in a lyrical, coral-pink light cream sauce. We also enjoyed fresh mozzarella di bufalo and prosciutto, with subtle, satiny cubes of authentic Italian water-buffalo cheese wrapped in unusually juicy imported prosciutto. Drizzled with excellent olive oil and a bit of vinegar, they gained extra zing from a bed of fresh basil leaves.

"The service here is just tremendous, really professional," Janie observed as the staff managed to clear away our appetizer plates and replace our silver so gracefully that we barely noticed them. "They don't get in the way," Paul continued the thought, "or make you feel like they're hovering, like they do in snotty restaurants." As we happily caught up on old friends and new gossip ("He's married to HER now?"), we enjoyed an exemplary "seafood wine," a vibrant Ferrari-Carrano Fume Blanc from the lower financial reaches of the wine list ($24).

NAOMI WISE

DeMedici's kitchen artistry reaches its height with several simple, fresh fish entrées. Since the menu is ridiculously long, we gladly followed the evening's "chef's recommended seafood" suggestion and enjoyed a spectacular Sole Portofino — a baked fillet of petrale sole, stuffed with shrimp, lobster, and crab. Embraced by a very light, faintly sweet breading, the fish arrived tremblingly tender on a hot iron platter wreathed with piped, oven-crisped mashed potatoes (ahh, mash without garlic, for a change!), and garnished with crisp, oven-roasted carrot sticks and buttery if rather limp snow peas.

Janie fulfilled her longings with a flawless Seabass Maremonte. The thick slab of Chilean sea bass (a.k.a. Patagonian toothfish) was sautéed in extra-virgin olive oil with garlic, white wine, and sliced button mushrooms, and served over firm saffron-gilded arborio rice. Janie positively purred to find the fish cooked "à pointe," precisely perfect. "This is exactly what I've been missing!" she said. "We're so far from the ocean that all the fish in El Paso restaurants tastes frozen, and they always cook it to death. This just hits the spot." But the firm, flaky, snow-white meat and glorious, near-sweet flavor of the sea bass also demonstrated why this fish story may be headed for a sad ending: Chilean sea bass has been so overfished that it's dwindling toward extinction. I'd happily accept the substitution of our scrumptious local corvina and baquetta bass species for however many years it'll take for the toothfish to regain its grip on life.

Cioppino Marechiaro was another hit. This seafood stew reputedly originated among the commercial fishermen in San Francisco (where its main ingredient is Dungeness crab) — but DeMedici does it vastly better than any restaurant at Fisherman's Wharf, with a sauce that's far kinder to delicate seafood than the Wharf's coarse "tomato gravy." Here, clams, shrimp, calamari, mussels, cubes of salmon, and several species of whitefish are bathed in a light, velvety bath of tomato and white wine with a hint of saffron. When the bowl arrives, all the seafood is still very tender (but you have to eat fast, because the hot broth keeps cooking it).

All was not entirely wine and roses, though. Italy's culinary virtue centers on freshness rather than fanciness, with a daily diet that relies on the best produce of the season. Like most other San Diego Italian restaurants, alas, DeMedici serves a salad of beefsteak tomatoes that are merely crisp, not ripely sweet (in late July, high tomato season!). And as sensitively as the kitchen treats its fish and calamari, it can be brutal with shellfish. The most tragic victim was a Lobster Diavolo, a sawed half of a big bruiser of a spiny lobster balanced on a heap of linguine, its legs hanging over the edge of the plate. After precooking, evidently its meat is removed, diced, and returned to its shell with spicy marinara sauce. At your order, the monster is reheated until its meat turns into a hot, spicy, chopped-up Superball. The same tendency beset our chewy Scampi Vesuvio and all the exoskeletal species represented in a Frutti di Mare, an appetizer sampler of hot and cold seafood. The problem is, a lot of people in San Diego actually prefer overcooked seafood. "I think it's a fear that people have here — 'No, no, you cook my shrimp and my shellfish well done!' "says DeMedici's general manager Mario Valerio. "I guess they fear the delicacy of the shellfish and fish. The majority of people here, when the halibut is cooked to perfection, they'll go, 'Ehhh — I'll try it.' " (Well, personally, I still want seafood that's juicy-tender, even if I have to fight the current, and I won't stop preaching this gospel until everybody else converts and gets it right!)

"All pasta dishes below are the owner's mother's personal recipes," says the menu. The sauces on our pasta show that Mamma was indeed an excellent cook. Regardless of the crustaceans' condition, we loved the buttery linguine and zesty marinara that accompanied the lobster and scampi.

Another of the owner's mother's recipes shapes the restaurant's unusual rendition of cannoli. They're done in authentic Sicilian style, with crunchy, cookie-like shells surrounding a filling of ricotta and chocolate chips — but with an unexpected nip of nose-tingling pungency. "Is that, um, nutmeg?" Paul asked. "Hmm, maybe mint liqueur?" I speculated. It turned out to be tiny chips of powerful Mexican cinnamon.

All the desserts are housemade. My favorite was a retro plateful of profiteroles, sumptuous little cream-puffs filled with barely sweetened whipped cream and anointed with fine, bittersweet chocolate syrup. A spongecake-based tiramisu was so light it tasted like a sweet breeze. I was less fond of the eggy crème brûlée, which (in place of a brown sugar topping) sported a thin glaze of berry jam, distinctly burned by the heat of the salamander. Janie — a great devotée of puddings and custards — found it lovely. Taking the bitter with the sweet, the desserts were capped off with the best espresso I've had in quite a while.

My friends decided to help me "rate" the restaurant but were loath to try grappling with the paper's stringent four-star scale. "On a scale of 1 to 10, this'd be a 7," said Jane. The rest of us nodded. "In El Paso, it'd be a 20," said Paul.

ABOUT DEMEDICI

Salvatore ("Sal") Vitale was born in the U.S. to a mother from Palermo, Sicily, and a father from Verona. His family was in the restaurant business, and even as a child he cooked alongside his mother. While he was growing up, his family returned to Italy for several years, and he remembers with especial pleasure how his mother would make bolognese sauce and pasta on Sunday afternoons and serve it to the whole family at a table out in the garden. He always dreamed of opening his own restaurant. About six years ago, he opened DeMedici and was able to entertain his mother there every evening for the rest of her life.

The recipes come from several sources. "Our chef, Ricardo Macias, is the chef I've worked with for 28 years," says general manager Mario Valerio. "I used to manage Anthony's Star of the Sea — I was there for 30 years — and when Mr. Vitale and I opened this restaurant about 6 years ago, the chef from there came over here, and we combined the dishes he knew with Mr. Vitale's mom's recipes." Vitale made his own contributions: "Half of the seafood recipes are mine. For instance, I went to school in Messina, and the involtini de spada, rolled stuffed swordfish, came from a restaurant there called Canopieri. The sea bass with mushrooms was my mother's.

"I use the best of everything," he continued. "We have 15-ounce Provimi veal chops, 12-ounce, aged, corn-fed filet mignons from the Midwest. The fish is brought in daily, and the seafood chefs cut the fish every day." The fish come from Pacific Shellfish, Leong Kuba, and San Diego Seafood. "They charge a little more, but it's worth it," says GM Valerio, who's in charge of seafood procurement. "We're among the few restaurants to use local calamari, versus the imported calamari. It tends to be a little more expensive, but it's very tender, it's not chewy, it's not injected with water. I get pink Mexican abalone from Pacific Shellfish, too, and nobody has abalone like we do; it's so tender the way our chef does it. He really cooks from the heart. When he butchers the halibut, he cuts it across the grain, so when it's on the grill cooking, you can lift it up from the bottom with a spatula, and the fish cracks open in the middle so you can see how far it's cooked, but when you lay it back down it closes up like it's never been touched."

I commented to Vitale on the enormous span of his wine list, including a reserve list that includes major French chateaux, rarely found associated with Italian menus. "We have some special guests who come in often and requested them, so we put those on the menu for them," Vitale answered. "There's something for everybody at my restaurant." ■

Aleppo Heart

I think she wants to take her study of me to a higher level. Homo Impecunious.

"Bonjour, monsieur!"

This is me being, well, okay, pretentious. Blame the sign. "Café de Paris." Course this ain't no swank Gaslamp outfit. This is Faiz — friends call him Frank — standing outside his place, up here where the city kinda hiccups, between downtown and City College. He's a brave man. The neighboring tailor shop has closed, the hotel on the other side looks comatose. Potential clientele seems mainly lite-pocketers, like me, City College students, and a few nervous lawyers hurrying west toward Corporate Canyon. But he came anyway, painted his storefront bright green, hoisted his sign, and put out cloth-covered tables. Now he stands grizzle-bearded, hands on hips, ready for business.

"Hi," he says. "Want to see our lunch special?"

As it turns out, I've still got an hour or so before I'm supposed to pick up Carla at City College. (She's going to check out anthropology courses next semester. I think she wants to take her study of me to a higher level. Homo Impecunious.)

"Sure," I say, and follow him in. It's spare, but with a spark of elegance. Cream tiles on the floor, white walls, a bunch of green forest-and-lake paintings, plus The Kiss at City Hall, Paris 1950, a big black-and-white French photo. All the tables are covered in floral green tablecloths with dark green mats. The chairs are big, heavy, like judges' wooden chairs. Faiz leaves the menu with me as he takes a dish to the guy sitting opposite.

Looks good, too. A chicken rice soup, followed by a big green salad with a mound of tuna in the middle, and French bread. "Today's special," says Faiz, "$5.95. You want it?"

TIN FORK
ED BEDFORD

Uh, not yet. I want to see what French things he has first. Half of the two-page menu is breakfast, plus American-sounding sandwiches (all $4.50), such as turkey breast, ham and cheese, grilled chicken breast, chicken walnut salad. Straight salads sound American too: grilled chicken Caesar, San Francisco Cobb, Greek salad (all $4.50).

The soups include French onion ($4.45), lentil ($3.50), and the chicken rice ($3.50). But it's the last part, "French lunch and dinner," that I lock on to. Even though they cost a lot more, Cordon bleu steak is $9.99 (with French fries and vegetables). So is the filet mignon and the pepper steak. "Escalope Milanaise" is $8.99. I could have resisted all this except — aagh! I see Sole Meunière is here ($8.99). I'm flashing back to the only school play I was ever in. I was the waiter, holding this smelly plate while the little brat who was the star sang some song about "Heart and Sole Meunière." The last night I somehow dropped it in his lap.

I know. It's $8.99, but for old times' sake.

"It'll take maybe a quarter of an hour," Faiz says. "Fine. No problem."

He brings me a coffee ($1.50) — in a fine china cup and saucer with silver and blue scrolling, no less. I spend the time watching the red trolleys clank past right outside and the big British Airways 777 jet lumbering in, hanging there, slower than the trolley! What a procession.

Faiz comes out with a small bowl of soup. Part of the deal. It's that chicken rice soup, in classy china decorated in gold and green and maroon. I start slurping. Boy, this is tasty. Filling. Lots of chunks of chicken, tomato, potato, vegetables, and rice. Faiz brings a block of French bread to go with it.

Now I see him working in the open kitchen at the back. Flames burst out of his fry pan. He stirs what looks like a sauce in the pan, takes it off the heat, pours it over a plate, piles other things on it, and now he's back, laying it in front of me. Lumps of fish under a brown sauce, with what look like sauteed mushrooms floating around the top. Pile of brown rice pilaf on one side. Slices of raw tomato and cucumber for color.

The fish tastes rich in that wonderful sauce, except it doesn't look like the single flatfish of my school play. It's lots of small pieces. "For the sole, you should tell me a day ahead," says Faiz. "These are small, but they're what I had."

Actually, it's fine with me. They're tender, the 'shrooms really rock, and that sauce is so rich you need the rice pilaf to tamp it down.

Faiz says he's been in the business 30 years. Before, he used to run Lord's. "It was a French restaurant in an old mansion — in Aleppo, Syria," he says. "Red velvet-covered walls. Hundred-year-old lamps. Government ministers would eat there. Lunch would cost, say, $10 to $15. Expensive for Aleppo." He says Aleppo used to be the ancient crossroads between East and West. "It is a special place, and the food! The fruit and the meat have so much more flavor. The atmosphere." You can tell: Aleppo's where Faiz's heart still is. "But my sister lives here. So, I start again."

It's almost three. Carla! Mujer Impatiensis. I hurry out. Gotta give Faiz points. The man may not have had a whole sole today, but he has a whole lot of heart.

American Sweetness

"I was very spoiled right off the bat. I started with good wines, and back then, they were cheap."

Ed Moore bought Thee Bungalow from its original owner in 1987 after a long on-again, off-again relationship with the restaurants that occupy three of the four corners at the intersection of West Point Loma Boulevard and Bacon. Starting in 1972, he had worked as a waiter at the Windjammer, located in the building that, until recently, housed the Belgian Lion; then as a waiter at Thee Bungalow; then as general manager at La Maison des Pescadoux seafood restaurant (which had replaced the Windjammer); then as owner of Livingston's Chicken Kitchen (now El Tucan), which occupied the intersection's southwest corner; and, finally, as owner of Thee Bungalow. Along the way, geographical distractions were provided by locations such as Le Cordon Bleu in France, a restaurant kitchen in Los Angeles, classrooms at San Diego State, T.G.I. Friday's in Mission Valley, Gustaf Anders in La Jolla, and Cafe 11 in Hillcrest. (He has now purchased the Belgian Lion's old location and is in the process of converting it into a Mediterranean-themed seafood restaurant named the Third Corner.)

Crush
MATTHEW LICKONA

During his tenure as general manager of a French restaurant, he did the wine purchasing. "We were obviously very heavy into French wines. I was weaned on [Burgundies like] Batard Montrachet and Le Montrachet and Musigny and Richebourg. I was very spoiled right off the bat. I started with good wines, and back then, they were cheap. It was $5.99 for a Mouton Cadet, or let's get a Richebourg for $22.

"Back then [in the late '70s], there wasn't a lot in California wine. There were some big hitters — Freemark Abbey was big for Cabernet, plus Martha's Vineyard from Heitz and Clos Du Val. Spring Mountain was the big Chardonnay, the one we all tried to get. But there really wasn't much more than that; the Martinis and the Mondavis were just sort of starting out. France was where it was at, and Germany was where it was at. People loved German wines back then. That changed a lot. California wines got better; people were proprietary. They went with the local product. People on the West Coast felt you could get a California Cabernet and it was cheaper than a French Bordeaux." And whether the domestic industry intended it or not, its wine "was more toward an American palate — Americans like a little sweetness. They don't like that dust quite as much."

When Moore took over Thee Bungalow, the list had "maybe 100 wines. The former owner didn't drink. He had the basics: some California Cabernets, some Chardonnays, some Pouilly-Fuisses. I think he let his salesmen do most of the ordering in. There were some first-growth Bordeaux there, because occasionally, people would want them." Moore began a gradual expansion. "As the money came in, with what was left over, I might buy an extra case or two of something. Probably by the end of '88 or '89, we had 120 wines, and then 150 the next year, and then 200."

Moore wanted his restaurant to become a wine-lover's destination. In 1989, he sent his list in to the Wine Spectator — whatever its faults, the magazine has indisputable clout — and received an Award of Excellence for his wine list, which he has received every year since.

Things began to snowball; the list gained breadth and depth. "There was a period where I increased the wine list pretty fast; it probably started when the '90, '91, '92 vintages came along. There were lots of good wines out there, and there were lots of new wines. The Pahlmeyers and the Fognis and all the rest were coming on. I was very, very active, going up to the wine country two and three times a year. I learned a lot and started shying away from France and some of the other regions. It became pretty easy with California Cabernet, just to buy this and that. I was just buying, and I had a hard time saying no to a lot of good wines."

Besides California Cabernet, "we were expanding into areas like South Africa; we branched into Chile long before most people were going into Chile. I remember the first time I tasted La Playa eight or nine years ago. For, like, $3 I thought, 'This is just a great bottle of wine.' I was trying different wines when it was pretty much tunnel vision elsewhere. When Gallo was trying to make a resurgence back into the varietal wine market, yeah, I put them on the list. For $4, they were making great wine. I didn't care if there was a Gallo name on it." He gained a reputation among sellers as a person who would take an unknown wine or a difficult sell — if he liked it.

He began doing winemaker and owner dinners, riding the wave of winery interest in increased exposure for their newly high-profile personalities. "We've had Joe Heitz, the Cakebreads have been here, the Duckhorns." When such dinners became commonplace and the wineries — sufficiently exposed — backed off, Moore pressed on, happy to do double duty as chef and lecturer in the celebrities' absence. "We look at geography, general wine-growing regions, what's growing... by the fifth or sixth wine, it might be a little more difficult to get people's attention, but for the first three courses, they're learning about the area."

Once a year, he hosts Ed's Reds: three nights, 40 dinners a night, different wines each evening. "I buy [specifically] for Ed's Reds, especially magnums [double bottles]. Every now and then a winery will find 10 or 15 cases of magnums, and I'll buy a case and just bury it someplace. Then I'll bring it back four or five years from now."

Further, "Because I've accumulated certain wines, we can do some fun things with verticals. We did a La Iota dinner two years ago — eight different vintages of La Jota Cabernet. I bought a lot of those wines back when they were dirt cheap, so I didn't have to charge a lot." And years spent in the company of other restaurateurs has gained him access to private cellars loaded with gems that he would otherwise never see. "We're talking about doing a Dunn dinner — nothing but Imperials [large bottles that hold the equivalent of eight normal bottles] of Dunn," an old-style Cabernet with a reputation for agelessness. "I've got friends with enough Dunn in their cellar to last a while — they're not going to drink 'em." ■

NORTH COASTAL

THE ARMENIAN CAFE 3126 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 760-720-2233. Located in a cottage with a view sun deck, this Armenian cafe prepares authentic specialties such as gyros cooked on the premises. Best bets are breakfasts that include omelets with shish kebabs. Music and belly dancing Friday and Saturday. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Closed Monday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

BARONE'S TRATTORIA DEL MARE 2334 Carmel Valley Road, Del Mar, 858-259-9063. Pleasant interior, 27 pastas, low prices, huge portions of tasty food make this a winner for all bargain seekers. On weekends, try the paella, large enough for two. Linguine rustica and chicken Marsala best bets. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

THE BRASSERIE La Costa Resort & Spa, Costa Del Mar Road off El Camino Real, Carlsbad, 760-438-9111, x4500. This hotel dining room offers breakfast, lunch, and dinner. All-you-can-eat Sunday buffet brunch with champagne is $32.00. Seafood buffet Friday, from 5:30 p.m. Outstanding service. Reservations recommended. Pisces Delicacies of the Sea is also located in this complex. Expensive. — E.W.

CAFE 101 631 South Coast Highway, Oceanside, 760-722-5220. Inexpensive. This is the oldest li'l eating establishment in Oceanside. Cooks have been flipping burgers here since 1928. The cafe is named after Route 101, the Pacific Highway. Old-timers remember when everyone, from truck drivers to movie stars, would stop for a bite before heading on to San Diego and Tijuana. Try the ABC (avocado, bacon, and cheese) omelet, the 101 original cheeseburger on a grilled bun with its "secret sauce," chicken fried steaks with eggs and, of course, the great Depression dish, biscuits with gravy and home fries. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive. — E.B.

D.B. HACKERS SEAFOOD CAFE AND GRILL 101 North Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-436-3162. This simple dining room is enhanced by beautiful watercolors on the walls, and the fish and chips are terrific. The fish (New Zealand hoki) arrives in a golden crust, is well drained and delicious. Fish tacos are also available. If you would like small portions, try the "kiddie" serving. Fresh fish, pastas, and daily specials also worthwhile. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

FIDEL'S CARLSBAD 3003 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 760-729-0903. A sister restaurant to the venerable establishment in Solana Beach, the stars here are carnitas; quesadilla with chicken, beef, or pork; tostada supreme, and breast of chicken Milanesa. Open daily lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.W.

HILL STREET COFFEE HOUSE 525 South Coast Highway, Oceanside, 760-966-0985. Organic in Oceanside? Really! Look for the sign: "Organic Restaurant and Espresso Bar" in front of a restored yellow-and-white Victorian house from O'side's past. The menu is full of healthy dishes: tofu/spinach breakfast scramble, frittata espinaca ("Greek eggs"), and pain perdu (for us peasants that's French toast) with fresh fruit and syrups. After 11:00 a.m., try their Cajun chicken. Inexpensive. — E.B.

MCCABE'S FLYING BRIDGE 1105 North Coast Highway, Oceanside, 760-722-1151. This cantilevered marvel should be on some historic site list. Open since 1943, its dining room juts out over the San Luis Rey River, and come sunset, you're in a "flying" gallery watching the river, trains and the mighty ocean blazing with color. Dinner specials are cheap, standards are moderate, and if you're really strapped, the coffee shop has no view, but offers rock-bottom dinner prices. A moderate-priced and generous Sunday brunch in the dining room offers chartlipagne, prime rib, and shrimp till you drop. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B.

MILTON'S DELICATESSEN, GRILL AND BAKERY 2660 Via de la Valle, Flower Hill Mall, Del Mar, 858-792-2225. You'll find 200 items on the menu. They include Jewish deli; Chicago-style pizza; and grilled ribs, steaks, vegetables. Two recommended items: Chinese chicken salad and skirt steak sandwich. Not the greatest Jewish deli, not the worst. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Moderate. — E.W.

OSCAR'S 1305 Encinitas Boulevard, Encinitas, 760-632-0222. Here's a good place to take children or to enjoy a low cost, unpretentious meal. The menu consists of pizza, barbecue chicken and ribs, sandwiches, salads. The best bet is the chicken-rib combination for two with salad in a bowl large enough for four and hot bread sticks. Fun for a casual meal. Same menu lunch and dinner, continuous service. Branches in Carmel Mountain and Mission Valley. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.W.

PACIFIC COAST GRILL 437 South Highway 101, Solana Beach, 858-794-4632. Many dishes here are under $10.00. Best bets: baby back ribs, fresh fish, variety of burgers served with salad and fries presented in a paper bag. Sunday brunch from the menu, 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Warm, casual atmosphere. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to expensive. — E.W.

SPICES THAI CAFE 9810 Valley Centre Drive, Piazza Carmel Shopping Center, Del Mar (east of Carmel Valley turn-off), 858-259-0889. Superb Thai restaurant that's not only elegant but whose food contains no MSG and very little fat. The seafood dishes rate highly. Among other delicacies are duck and frog legs. Put Spices Thai Cafe at the top of your list. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

SUSHI @ LA KAZ 3870 Valley Centre Drive, Carmel Valley, Del Mar, 858-792-5509. Outstanding, sophisticated sushi includes caterpillar roll (eel and avocado), soft-shell crab roll, tempura roll. Good hot dishes include "Dynamite" and sukiyaki. Elegant sushi. Closed Sunday. Open for lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner Monday through Saturday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

TORREY PINES CAFE 2334 Carmel Valley Road, 858-259-5878. The menu is similar to the sister restaurant, the Bird Rock Cafe, with many salads, pastas, and an excellent Sunday brunch. But there are terrific new additions: paella and tender short ribs cooked in a barbecue sauce plus mashed potatoes and vegetables. Neither is to be missed. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

NORTH INLAND

150 GRAND CAFE 150 West Grand Street, Escondido, 760-738-6868, www.150grand.com. In a comfortable setting, with three dining areas to suit every taste, chef Riko Bartolomei is exploring a genre that can only be called "worldwide adventure food." Elements from all over the globe (Asia, France, North Africa, etc.) appear in fresh, startling combinations that work brilliantly together. The menu changes daily, but many favorites recur over time with slight variations to reflect seasonal produce or creative inspiration. Inventive desserts run light, fresh, and fruity, e.g., mango tart tatin with sweet basil syrup. If you love the food at Pascal 33 or Marine Room, you'll find a meal here easily worth the trip. Lunch is a bargain, with the same ingredients as the evening's menu in slightly different combinations. Well-chosen wine list. Lunch and dinner seven days. Reservations strongly advised. Expensive. — N.W.

A LITTLE BIT OF GERMANY 1717 East Vista Way, Vista, 760-941-4626. Authentic German menu offers most of your favorites: chicken in champagne sauce, sauerbraten (beef in wine-vinegar sauce), Wienerschnitzel. Hot potato salad, made-on-the-premises spaetzle, and strudel major pluses. Call for directions. Closed Monday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

BERNARD'O RESTAURANT 12457 Rancho Bernardo Road, Rancho Bernardo Village Shopping Center, 858-487-7171. The restaurant is elegant in food, service and ambiance. The cuisine is California French; menus change every few weeks and best bets are rack of lamb, filet mignon, fresh daily fish and creme brulee. You'll have a good experience here. Lunch, Monday through Friday. Dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

EL BIZCOCHO Rancho Bernardo Inn, 17550 Bernardo Oaks Drive, Rancho Bernardo, 858-675-8500. You get what you pay for at one of San Diego County's premiere dining destinations — stunning new French cuisine in a lovely, civilized room. The left side of the menu lists traditional golf and tennis folk favorites (lobster bisque, filet mignon), but the right side is a daily-changing array of creative dishes by chef Patrick Ponsaty, including a five-course tasting menu. These dishes are not merely luxurious, they're the food of thrills and revelations, with flavor combinations that are intense and balanced, audacious and refined. The wine list is awesome and pricey, with numerous half-bottles and some near-bargains in the higher realms (the legendary Chateau Grillet Condrieu at $126). Dress rules aside, the atmosphere is anything but stuffy: A charming room captain puts you at ease and servers are pleasantly attentive. It's an ideal restaurant for a special night out — and the Sunday brunches are lavish, too. Jacket required, ties usual, women's attire chic or prosperously dowdy, reservations essential. Very expensive. — N.W.

DELICIAS 6106 Paseo Delicias, Rancho Santa Fe, 858-756-8000. The room is smashing and the menu offers excellent pastas, fresh fish, first-rate meat and chicken, gourmet pizzas. Open for dinner nightly. Expensive. — E.W.

DICRESCENZO'S 11625 Duenda Road, Westwood Shopping Center, Rancho Bernardo, 858-487-2776. Should you be in Rancho Bernardo and seeking great Italian sandwiches or pizzas to eat in or take out, keep this Chicago-style "deli" in mind. The Italian beef and Rocco's Imperial sub are knockouts. Closed Sunday. Open Monday through Saturday, 11:00 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.W.

HERNANDEZ' HIDE-AWAY Rancho and Lake Drives, Del Dios, Lake Hodges, 760-746-1444. The popular bargain priced breakfast/brunch on Saturdays and Sundays offers steak and eggs, chilaquiles, sausage, beans, and omelets. At dinner, most tables sport pitchers of margaritas to wash down standard So-Cal gringo-Mex dishes. Reservations urged, especially for weekends (when non-reservers may have to wait over an hour for a table); ask for driving directions when you call. Weekend brunch; lunch and dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

HIDE AWAY CAFE 150 South Acacia Avenue, Solana Beach, 858-755-3388. Here's where your mom met your dad the day he bought a long board. The Hide Away is the classic forties California beach café. You have to look carefully down the tiny tree-shaded street to spot their big blue-and-yellow sign. It's a homey little place, with a corrugated iron roof, wooden porch, and a green mantle of gnarly old ivy. Flap through the swing doors. Inhale the good smells from the kitchen. Sit down at one of the intimate tables. Order the jalapeño and grilled red onion omelet with avocado and jack cheese. Or the delicious "Kaleidoscope": scrambled eggs, cheese, bell peppers, onions, and home fries. Finish up with a slice of homemade pumpkin nut bread. Breakfast and lunch only, open daily to 2:00 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B.

MANDARIN GARDEN RESTAURANT 8242 Mira Mesa Boulevard, Mira Mesa, 858-566-4720. From the dim sum served Saturday and Sunday to its variety of exotic dishes, this restaurant is worth seeking out, especially at dinner. Located in the Mira Mesa Mall, it offers many unusual and hard-to-find appetizers. The noteworthy main dishes are steamed whole fish, twice-cooked pork (spicy), fresh eel served in brown sauce. The extensive menu includes standard dishes favored by Americans. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

MIIKI JAPANESE RESTAURANT AND SUSHI BAR 9823 Carroll Canyon Road, Eucalyptus Square, Scripps Ranch, 858-566-0206. You'll find a first-rate sushi bar tucked away in this tiny shopping center. The fresh yellowtail, scallops in spicy sauce (hotategai), or the special order of baked salmon roll are all wonderful. Fifty-three items appear on the sushi list, all prepared by a master chef. The cooked combination plates are also fine. If you sit at the sushi bar, you may be disappointed because chairs, not stools, are used and you can't watch the chef. If you're in the area, don't miss this one. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Sunday, dinner only. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

REAL TEXAS BBQ 6904 Miramar Road, 858-566-5235. Texas barbecue consists of meat, chicken, and links that are smoked rather than cooked over a fire. The room is unadorned but very clean. Same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily, continuous service. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

SAND CRAB CAFE 222 Micro Place (at Opper, off Barham), Escondido, 760-480-2722. Sandy Crabbe (honest, that's his name) owns this fun, funky dive in the wilds of industrial Escondido near the San Marcos border. A visit offers the primordial, preschool ish joy of whacking crabs to pieces with mallets and eating them with your hands. (Bibs are optional.) Everybody gets into the party spirit. There's a huge a la carte list of appetizers, soups, snacks, and main courses, often at bargain prices. Entrées include several crab-bucket combos, cooked to a well-seasoned boil with corn, potatoes, and spicy Louisiana sausage. Most of the shellfish were flash frozen on shipboard, but they're still tasty. The melted non-butter "spread" accompanying them appeals to the area's many health-conscious residents. (Or you can BY-OButter and they'll melt it for you.) Fine tangy housemade key lime pie is a perfect finale. Full bar; not much wine, but good margaritas. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W.

SIRINO'S 113 West Grand Avenue, Escondido, 760-745-3835. French-born chef-owner Vincent Grumel serves Gallic classics in an intimate, small-town bistro setting. This is a cuisine of rich dark sauces robing fine ingredients, such as a huge, flavorful veal chop (no factory calf, that). Mushrooms and vegetables (from local farmers or Grumel's own garden) are the season's best and sensitively treated. Desserts are worth every calorie — save room for the spectacular Bavarian. Full bar, fine wine list. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner Tuesday through Saturday. (Closed annually from third week of June to third week of July.) Expensive. — N.W.

TONG SZECHUAN 609 North Broadway #E-F (Albertson's Shopping Center), 760-480-9438. The "New Style Favorites" of North County Chinese restaurants feature fresh fruits. Tong's has several variants, mainly cornstarch-battered fried proteins in honey-based "sweet-and-sour sauce, lightened with loads of seasonal fruit chunks — pineapple, papaya, pear, etc. They're tasty dishes. For the rest, the Szechuan specialties (hot-and-sour soup, kung pao, ma la, etc.) are better than the old "Chinese-American" standards on the menu. Lunches are big, bargain-priced, and popular. In this quiet, pretty room, you may overhear northern or western Chinese dialects at nearby tables. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Very inexpensive (lunch) to low-moderate. — N.W.

LA JOLLA

AESOP'S TABLES 8650 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde Shopping Center, #106, 858-455-1535. The chief attributes of this Greek and Mediterranean restaurant are fresh food, tasty preparation, and low cost. The salads are a good buy. Entrées are large enough for two. All items available for takeout. Lunch, Monday through Saturday. Sunday, dinner only. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

AZUL LA JOLLA 1250 Prospect Street, 858-454-9616. The unobstructed ocean view and opulent interior are glamorous. Cuisine is Mediterranean with California influence. Menus change daily. When available try pan-seared scallops and the outstanding asparagus soup, not duplicated anywhere. Fresh fish and seafood. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

CHOPAHN 8935 Towne Center Drive #111, Renaissance Towne Center, Golden Triangle, 858-677-0100. Located in a romantic, elegant dining room, this Afghan restaurant offers first-rate food — possibly the best Afghan menu in the city. Be sure to order two or three appetizers and the house specialty Kabob-E-Chopahn, lamb loin chops on a skewer of lamb and chicken kabobs. Rice and vegetables are a good choice for vegetarians. Loving ownership; personalized service. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Inexpensive to expensive. — E.W.

CRESCENT SHORES GRILL 7955 La Jolla Shores Drive, Hotel La Jolla (formerly Summer House Inn), 858-459-0541. The 11th floor view carries this restaurant. Good preparation of gourmet American food, fish, seafood, steaks, and chicken. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, dinner, and weekend brunch. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

FLEMING'S STEAK HOUSE AND WINE BAR 8970 University Center Lane, Aventine Complex, La Jolla East, 858-535-0078. Beautiful atmosphere, excellent service, very fine preparations. Very crowded weekends. Steaks and chops first rate. Vegetables à la carte. Open dinners only nightly. Upper moderate to expensive. — E.W.

FOREVER FONDUE 1295 Prospect Street, #201, upstairs, 858-551-4509. If you stay with the cheese fondue, house salad or shrimp with spicy cocktail sauce, you'll have a good meal. Steel plates make food cold. The dinner for two at $38.95 is not necessarily a best buy. Same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily; call for hours. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

THE MARINE ROOM 2000 Spindrift Drive (off Torrey Pines Road), 858-459-7222. High cuisine, high adventure, high seas, high prices.... With the arrival of chef Bernard Guillas, the romantic Marine Room has become the quintessential great San Diego restaurant. The exhilarating coastal view meets Cal-French-Pacific Rim cuisine that's as exuberantly out-front as the waves whacking the windows. Guillas's oceans, culinary inventiveness with ultra-fresh ingredients makes every visit a voyage of discovery, and preparations are so elaborate that each listing on his prix-fixe menu reads like a whole tasting dinner. The wine list is sublime, too, just bring your trust fund. Reservations required; resort-casual to dressy. Call ahead to arrange wheelchair access. Very expensive. — N.W.

ROPPONGI 875 Prospect Street, 858-551-5252. In terms of atmosphere and food preparation, one of the best restaurants in La Jolla. Euro-Asian preparations offer 20 appetizers, which include sushi. Don't overlook the Thai soup, Atlantic salmon, duck confit, mousse salad. Excellent Sunday brunch but be sure to get there early to avoid a long wait. Beautiful interior; excellent service. Open daily. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

SAMMY'S CALIFORNIA WOOD-FIRED PIZZA 702 Pearl Street, 858-456-5222. You have a choice of 22 wood-fired pizzas, most with exotic toppings. Many come here just for the salads; half orders are served for most salads. Same menu lunch and dinner. Continuous service. Open daily. Downtown locations, 619-230-8888. Del Mar location, 858-259-6600. Carlsbad location, 760-438-1212. Inexpensive. — E.W.

SANTE RISTORANTE 7811 Herschel Avenue, 858-454-1315. The chef has added luster to every dish on the menu, but mostly to the nightly fish and seafood dishes. At least three fresh fish are available every night along with those on the menu. Excellent chopped salad, pasta with mushrooms, ravioli with quail and lamb chops. Separate room for bar; separate private dining room. Lunch, Monday through Friday. Dinner, Monday through Saturday. Enclosed patio for lunch. Not to be missed. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

SUSHI ON THE ROCK 7734 Girard Avenue, 858-456-1138. This noisy, high-energy spot, a boxy, saloon-like space with a sushi bar in back, draws a lively, twenty-something crowd (although older folks will have plenty of company, too). Unlike more traditional sushi bars, there's a vast selection of "rock and rolls" — huge, creative futo-maki party sushi. And they're fabulous, with sparkling fresh seafood and immensely clever combinations. Try, for instance, the shrimp tempura roll, which wraps fried shrimp, crab shreds, daikon sprouts and Japanese mayo in deep-fried salmon skin — the combo would be just as impressive as an appetizer at a top Cal-French restaurant. The Orange Crush is another sublime invention: fresh and crunch with veggies and ahi(-wrapped) in suave salmon. Even simple rolls are so well-conceived, and the rice so nicely seasoned, you won't need soy-wasabi dip. The one-time menu of cooked dinner entrees, however, is now minimal. No reservations, long waits (in cramped entryway) on weekends. Full bar, good sake list. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly, with deep discounts for Happy Hour specials. Moderate. — N.W.

LA TAVERNA 927 Silverado (at Girard), 858-454-0100. Reservations are a necessity at this tiny trattoria, especially if you'd prefer the relative quiet of the roofed sidewalk patio to the din of the cute but cramped dining room. Don't look for meatballs and red sauce except at lunch because dinner is Tuscan-style, showcasing pastas with simple, fresh sauces. Highlights include chef-owner Mary Ann Vitale's house-made Sicilian-style fennel sausage, and if the feather-light potato gnocchi are a special, just say yes. Save room for a slice of house-made layer cake. Service is downright endearing on weekends, when Jimmy Vitale (the owner's husband) charmingly plays maitre d'. Moderate. — N.W.

TRATTORIA ACQUA 1298 Prospect Street, 858-454-0709. You'll do fine if you stay with the simplest dishes: marinated grilled chicken breast on pizza dough, grilled portobello mushrooms, or pasta dishes. Entrées from shores other than Italian don't fare as well. The restaurant is located two flights down and offers an ocean view and patio as well as indoor dining. Elevator located at garage below on Coast Boulevard. Open daily. Inexpensive to upper expensive. — E.W.

CLAIREMONT & KEARNY MESA

94TH AERO SQUADRON 8885 Balboa Avenue, 858-560-6771. One of Diego's hidden jewels: there's classic American fare (honey-glazed pork tenderloin, farmhouse chicken) in the "Officers' mess," but better yet is Happy Hour — pig-out heaven! Weekdays from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m., the free buffet might include a "stroganoff" of Polish sausage, veggies, cheese potatoes, plus raw veggies, nacho chips, and salsa. (Of course, you have to buy something — say, a pitcher of Bud to "feed" two of you.) Thursdays and Fridays, the outside "Runway" grill features kebabs. The biggest attraction is the place itself. Built to mimic a WW I French farmhouse taken over by the 94th, a bunch of Yankee flying aces, it has a garden full of Fokker Triplanes, Nieuports, SE-5s, and live ducks — and right outside, the real Montgomery airfield, so you can fly in and park outside, if you have your own plane. Come at sunset — it's a trip. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B.

BACI RISTORANTE 1955 West Morena Boulevard, 619-275-2094. If you have been eating low-fat, low-calorie food, consider this place a special treat. Be sure to order at least two pastas (parties of four or more can request a combination pasta plate) and fresh fish or chicken. Excellent fried squid and the best zabaglione (dessert) in the city. Salt may be more than usual. First-rate service. Open Monday through Saturday. Closed Sunday. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

EMERALD CHINESE SEAFOOD RESTAURANT 3709 Convoy Street, Pacific Gateway Plaza, Kearny Mesa, 858-565-6888. San Diego's best Chinese restaurant for fresh seafood and fish. Live fish, prawns, and lobsters are kept in tanks and prepared minutes after you order. Superb dim sum, served daily, is especially fine on Saturday and Sunday, when 100 items are available. Open daily. Upper moderate to expensive. — E.W.

HSU'S SZECHUAN CUISINE Hazard Village, 9350 F-G Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Kearny Mesa, 858-279-9799. This restaurant is noted for its hot and spicy Szechuan dishes as well as for its Mandarin specialties. For Mongolian barbecue, you have a

PHO TAU BAY RESTAURANT Full name: La Cai Mi Goi, va Pho Tau Bay. 7604 Linda Vista Road, Linda Vista, 858-268-3161. The building looks like a converted McDonald's, but the interior is oriental and swanky with large fish tanks, blue carpet, gold metallic wainscoting, silk roses, a golden three-foot-tall laughing Buddha, and a red altar with three black-bearded gods. For lunch and dinner you can choose such exotics as quail, boar, alligator, and "Spicy Chop Frog in Coconut Milk and Curry." Breakfast is cheap, filling, and very Vietnamese. Try Mi tau, a gentle rice noodle soup with shredded chicken. Or order hanh nu thit, eight inches of fresh bread with traditional South Vietnamese beef stew. Puzzled? Ask for Mr. Le. He will explain all. Inexpensive to moderate. — J.S.

PHUONG TRANG 4170 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-569-6750. Don't miss this excellent Vietnamese restaurant where 232 items are offered. The cuisine is healthy, offers great variety, and is pleasing to the eye as well as the palate. Best bets are egg rolls, chargrilled shrimp on sugarcane, ground beef wrapped in grape leaves, prawn salad, rice in earthenware pot, grilled whole fish, spring rolls. Service is swift, the food very tasty — it's low fat and wonderful. Open daily. Inexpensive. — J.S.

SAN TONG PALACE 4690 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-571-6857. This unassuming, strip mall restaurant is easy to overlook, but once found, impossible to resist. San Tong's hybrid Korean-Chinese menu draws from these regions tastiest styles. Their Rainbow Salad demonstrates this combination deliciously, and San Tong's dumplings are outstanding. Their seafood dumplings are especially remarkable. For the adventurous, I recommend the jellyfish salad, a novel treat for Westerners. At San Tong Palace, curious appetites are rewarded well. Inexpensive. — M.N.

SHOGUN KOBE 5451 Kearny Villa Road, Kearny Mesa, 858-560-7399. This restaurant specializes in well-seasoned Japanese-style steaks, either by themselves or in combination with lobster, shrimp, or scallops. All entrées arrive with soup, salad, rice, and Japanese-style vegetables. Seating is communal at the teppan tables. There's also an attractive, well-stocked sushi bar. Open 7 days, moderate to expensive. — E.W.

THE BEACHES

GUAVA BEACH BAR AND GRILL 5714 Mission Bay Boulevard, Mission Beach, 858-488-6688. Old-fashioned American cooking such as meatloaf with mashed potatoes and macaroni and cheese (on children's menu) are prepared here, along with Mexican and seafood specialties. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — J.S.

HARBOR'S EDGE Sheraton Harbor Island Resort, 1380 Harbor Island Drive (across from airport), 619-291-2900. The restaurant has a stunning bay view and contemporary interior. Good California cuisine includes fish, chicken, pastas. For inexpensive diversion, try the Bakery (adjacent to the dining room) where sandwiches and pastries are served. Open daily. Breakfast, lunch, dinner, and Sunday brunch. Moderate to expensive. — J.B.

HUDSON BAY SEAFOOD 1403 Scott Street, 619-225-8787. Fresh fish and seafood, burgers, and salads served in room on the dock. Great view and you may eat on the outside deck or inside. Very casual. Best bets: fish and chips and fresh fish sandwiches. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.W.

HUMPHREY'S 2241 Shelter Island Drive, 619-224-3577. California coastal cuisine in a newly renovated room with a beautiful bay view. Among the well-prepared dishes, black Angus "baseball cut" steak, grilled vegetable tower, seasoned crusted ahi, prawn cocktail parfait. Excellent service. Open daily for breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Sunday buffet brunch. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

JARED'S 880 East Harbor Island Drive, 619-291-1028. The house specialty is steak, offered in a room directly on the harbor. Presentation, in the manner of Morton's, is to show you the entrees raw. Price of entrée includes nothing else; vegetables, potatoes à la carte. Excellent appetizers, especially five-onion tart. First rate bread and bread pudding. Closed Monday. Dinner only, Tuesday through Sunday. Expensive. — E.W.

LAMONT STREET GRILL 4445 Lamont Street, Pacific Beach, 858-270-3060. Select the entrees that cost $11.95 to $16.95 and include salad or soup, potatoes, vegetables, and fresh fruit dipped in chocolate. This restaurant boasts a real fireplace in the heated outdoor patio. It's really entertaining. Dinners only, nightly. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

PALENQUE 1653 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 858-272-7816. Located in a small house, this restaurant serves regional dishes from Puebla, Guerrero, Nuevo Leon, and Mexico City. The food is quite spicy, so if you prefer fewer chiles, say so before ordering. Low-cost items include tortilla soup, posole (spicy broth with hominy topped with fresh lettuce), shredded pork with sausage and salsa, michiote (an unusual grilled preparation of sundried beef and eggs), and chiles rellenos topped with fresh tomato sauce. For authentic regional cooking, it's not to be missed. Open daily, lunch Tuesday through Sunday, dinner nightly. Inexpensive to moderate. — J.W.

SAM CHOY'S HAWAII AT THE BALI HAI 2230 Shelter Island Drive, Shelter Island, 619-222-1181. Unpretentious Hawaiian's finest creations emphasize seafood here, in a family-friendly setting with spectacular views. Dinner prices include soup and a salad with an addictive sesame dressing. Simple entrées are best. Try the coconut-stuffed halibut in pineapple cream sauce or a sashimi lover's sampler of three different fish species, seared "ahi style." The weekly specials can be risky; wokked entrées run to old-fashioned "Cantonese-American" fare. Full bar, with well-made "umbrella drinks," pitiful wine list. Champagne brunch buffet Sundays. Reservations get a view table. Noisy on Sundays. Moderate. — N.W.

SPORTSMEN'S SEAFOODS 1617 Quivira Road, Mission Bay, 619-224-3551. Fifty years ago this restaurant-fish market was a tuna cannery, part of San Diego's late-lamented fishing industry. The same Sicilian family still owns it, and still knows everything about fish and how to cook it. The menu is devoted to the "fruits of the sea" and includes a wonderful seafood platter (shrimp, squid, clams, fish, fries, and salad). And, of course, a crispy-crunchy fish and chips platter. Eat outside on deck, contemplating the small ships on the bay. Open seven days, lunch/early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B.

THEE BUNGALOW 4996 West Point Loma Boulevard, Ocean Beach, 619-224-2884; www.theebungalow.com. The very soul of Ocean Beach resides in Ed Moore's charming, comfortable historic "cottage," where the menu covers classic French bistro fare from pate to soufflé, including comfort food entrees like grandmaman used to make. And like mambre's, the cooking is a little inconsistent. Skip the over-rated duck and head for the seasonal specials, the rich stews, and — of course — the pates and soufflés. When the peppers come soup is on the menu, leap for it. A huge wine list at very low markups is a special blessing. Slightly dressy; reservations strongly advised. Expensive, but with affordable carly bird weeknight dinners. — N.W.

MIDWAY, OLD TOWN & MISSION VALLEY

EL AGAVE 2304 San Diego Avenue (at Old Town Avenue), Old Town, 619-220-0692. Reservations recommended. Wheelchair access difficult (steep ramp). You'll find upscale, unusual Mexican specialties in an intimate Spanish-style dining room or on a small heated balcony. The menu celebrates three great pre-Hispanic cuisines — Aztec, Mayan, Nahuatl — with discreet admixtures of France, Spain, and Italy. (It's the history of Mexico on a plate.) Among the highlights are the five different Oaxacan moles (plus a sixth from Chiapas), Yucatecan-style venison, local sea bass in tangy jamaica (hibiscus) sauce, and a unique appetizer, tlacogos cuitlacoche, ovals of blue corn masa topped with a sort of "mushroom" that grows on corn ears. (In English it's called "corn smut," but it tastes much nicer than that sounds.) The bar stocks over 600 tequilas and makes a food-friendly on-the-rocks Margarita with fresh fruit juices. Moderate. — N.W.

GEORGIA'S GREEK CUISINE 3550 Rosecrans Street, Gateway Square Center, 619-523-1007. This small, immaculate Greek restaurant serves food that will please anyone on a budget. Lunch is an especially good buy. All entrees, as well as sandwiches and appetizers, are prepared for takeout. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

OLD TOWN MEXICAN CAFE 2489 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 619-297-4330. Breakfasts are only noted for its excellent breakfasts, served from opening to closing. Try also the rotisserie-roasted chicken, the carnitas, or the fajitas. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

BARNES BAR-B-QUE 2625 Lemon Grove Avenue (at Cypress, tucked in the back of Liquor Mart Square), Lemon Grove, 619-462-9706. The sign on the window reads: "Soul Food: 99 cents," inside is the homey solace of good cheer and excellent Memphis-style barbecue. Pork gets star billing in a sandwich, it appears as tender chunks laced with smoke; on ribs, as luscious, mahogany-hued strips slathered with sauce that balances sweet smoke, citrus tang and a mild, persistent spice. BBQ beans are a revelation, creamy set in substantial, warming, alongside rich bits of pork in a sauce that delivers a sweet molasses bite. Macaroni and cheese is gooey and gummable, a mild counter to the murky, sour/salty greens. On Fridays, you can get Southern-fried catfish or red snapper, plus hush puppies. Inexpensive. — A.M.

DULZURA CAFE Highway 94 at Dulzura, 619-468-9591. Breakfast and lunch seven days, dinner Friday through Sunday. Think Grapes of Wrath, Okies, the 30s. Dulzura Café is the real thing, serving big hot meals to weary westerners since 1910. The walls are cluttered with license plates, pots, brass cream-separators, corn-shuckers, horse-collars, railroad lanterns, ancient egg-beaters, six-foot snake skins, deer antlers and a seedy stuffed bobcat head. The food's for filling. Big juicy hamburgers with lanky home-cut fries, thick slices of meat loaf, or if you arrive early, steak and eggs or a hefty Denver omelet. This is frontier food before slim spelled "success." Listen for speeding cars rounding the corner as you cross into the dirt parking lot — and watch for the scorpion in the counter-top. Inexpensive. — E.B.

LY'S GARDEN 6011 El Cajon Boulevard, 619-265-1885. Although the extensive menu offers Chinese as well as Cambodian specials, it's best to order the Cambodian food. Be sure to ask Mr. Ly for suggestions. Live crab and lobster as well as fresh oysters and shrimp available. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

THE MOUNT SIGNAL CAFE 1201 West Highway 98, Calexico, 760-357-1379. Out in Yuha desert, west of Calexico, this 40-year-old restaurant remains in the era when Mexicali and Tijuana were fresh for the best bullfighters and bulls north of Mexico City. The owner's mom, Maria de Jesus, was a banderillera, known to fans as "Mamelita," a member of perhaps the only female bullfighting team ever. Surrounded by hundreds of bullfighting photos, you'll find traditional caserò (homestyle) Mexican dishes. Keep an eye out for old matadors as you dig in. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B.

SALA THAI 6161 El Cajon Boulevard, Campus Plaza, 619-229-9050. You will find this Thai restaurant as charming as its owner. The menu is extensive, the service attentive. Try the spicy seafood combination or the Chinese specialties. Loving experience and gastronomically satisfying. Open Monday through Saturday for lunch and dinner. Sunday dinner only. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

SUNNY GARDEN CUISINE OF CHINA 5500 Grossmont Center Drive, La Mesa, 619-464-2288. This neighborhood restaurant (formerly Chang) offers 18 chicken preparations at low cost, plus diced chicken in lettuce cups and smoked chicken with fried greens — the last two are appetizers. Good neighborhood restaurant in gorgeous surroundings. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

TOMMY'S PIZZA 1164 North Second Street, El Cajon, 619-440-2676. This old-fashioned pizza house also prepares superb Italian sandwiches that include Italian roast beef, meatball, sausage, and various combinations. Call for hours. Inexpensive. — E.W.

TYLER'S TASTE OF TEXAS 576 North Second Street, El Cajon, 619-444-9297. Insomniacs and lovers of barbecue! Tyler's offers a seven-page menu with Texas specialties available 24 hours a day. Big Texas breakfasts, great barbecue chicken and ribs, chili (no beans!), grits, all-you-can-eat catfish on Wednesday and Friday. Excellent bakery serves homestyle pies. Go ahead, make a fool of yourself. Open every day, 24 hours a day. New branch: 7868 El Cajon Boulevard, La Mesa, 619-466-9295. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

ANTIQUE ROW CAFE 3002 Adams Avenue, 619-282-9750. Breakfast, served all day, offers at least 30 items. These include a variety of omelets, eggs Benedict or Florentine, egg burritos, and biscuits and gravy. One portion is enough for two. Dinner offers burgers, a Philly steaks. Indoor and outdoor seating. Open daily. Morning hours vary. Inexpensive. — E.W.

CHICKEN PIE SHOP OF SAN DIEGO 2633 El Cajon Boulevard, 619-295-0136. You'll get lots of fried chicken, chicken and turkey pies, mashed potatoes, and desserts for prices that don't seem to have changed much since the shop opened over 50 years ago. A great bargain. Steaks also available at low cost. Very large seating area; no frills. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.W.

KRONG TEN QUAN 4658 El Cajon Boulevard, City Heights, 619-282-7615. Look for a mini-mall with bright yellow signs, including "Karaoke Cafe." In this functional space next door to a sometimes-loud karaoke bar, the basic menu — pho, noodles, et al. — is cheap, fresh, and delicious, arriving with heaps of fresh herbs for do-it-yourself wrapping and/or garnishing. But there's a separate menu of house specials (you'll have to ask for it, or get the take-out menu and look for the section labeled "Món Nhau/Our Specialties") on which you'll find unusual dishes from Central Vietnam that you're unlikely to encounter in Saigonese restaurants. These include venison, goat, frog legs, and snails. Not everything will be available — the kitchen staff is picky about quality and price. Staffers speak very little English, but point-and-shoot works. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W.

MAMA'S BAKERY AND LEBANESE DELI 4237 Alabama, North Park, 619-688-0717. This informal little restaurant is more interested in quality than presentation, concentrating on the specialties they do well. Mama's offers quick meals with a culinary tradition, definitely not "fast food," but with fast food prices and ease. Recommendations include the deliciously cheap falafel sandwich in Mama's fresh-made saj, (soft flatbread). On cool days warm up to a bowl of fool mudamas, or slow-cooked beans (tasty fava and garbanzos). Try also spinach pie, labneh (creamy cheese, olive oil, and pita), and baba ghanoush (smoky pureed eggplant and hummus). Inexpensive. — M.N.

OLD MILL CAFE 3949 Ohio Street, North Park, 619-294-3804. The best-kept secret in North Park looks like a Swiss chalet inside, but serves 1950s American eats in big platefuls. Breakfast buffs should check out the pork chops with two eggs, potatoes, and toast, or biscuits and gravy, or the famous pigs in a blanket (three sausage links rolled in hot cakes with powdered sugar). The lunch and dinner menu is also good and cheap — for instance, golden fried chicken with vegetables and rice or baked potato. Inexpensive. — E.B.

UPTOWN

ALADDIN'S CAFE 3420 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, 858-573-0000; Uptown Shopping Center, 1220 Cleveland Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-574-1111; www.aladdin_cafe.com. These cafes offer a bright, clean atmosphere for bright and clean if rather generic Middle Eastern favorites (hummus, tabbouleh, kebabs, shawerma, etc.), plus imaginative Levantine-flavored pizzas and salads. There are ample choices for vegetarians. The Hillcrest location offers beer and wine. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W.

BREAD AND CIE 350 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-683-9322. Twelve varieties of bread are baked daily in a 10,000-pound French stone hearth oven. Outrageously good because of the crusty exteriors and density. Among the best are multi-grain, sour-dough wheat, and fig-anise. Baguettes, brownies, and biscotti are first-rate. The sandwiches to eat in or take out are spectacular. Don't miss this one. Open daily. — E.W.

BUSALACCHI'S RISTORANTE 3683 Fifth Avenue, 619-298-0119. If you like old-fashioned Sicilian-style cooking — tons of tomato sauce, olive oil, and garlic — then try this converted cottage which serves it. Lots of pasta dishes, veal, chicken, and fish. Lunch, Monday (through Friday; dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

CAFE ON PARK 3831 Park Boulevard (Park and University), 619-293-7275. Gigantic portions and good food make this a standout for people with large appetites and slim purses. Be aware that there are long waits on weekends for breakfast and lunch (served simultaneously) and dinner. The place seats 40; the cooking is called eclectic American comfort food. It's home-style rather than slick. Open daily. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.W.

CITY DELICATESSEN 535 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-295-2747. Jewish specialties available here include brisket of beef, chicken in the pot, chopped liver, and a wide variety of sandwiches and vegetarian items. Breakfast specials weekdays, early bird dinner for $9.95. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner, to midnight during the week and to 2:00 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.W.

CREST CAFE 425 Robinson Avenue, 619-295-2510. Onion rings served in a loaf, homemade potato chips, chicken, steak, pasta, and a variety of extra-lean charbroiled hamburgers, plus the continuous service from breakfast to late night keep this cafe crowded. Breakfast omelets particularly good. Desserts are homemade. Noisy and high spirited, this cafe is open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.W.

EL INDIO SHOP 3695 India Street, 619-299-0333. The shop has an indoor dining area, or you may brave the elements (such as they are in San Diego) on benches across the street. You won't be disappointed by the pungent, mouth-watering specialties. The entire menu is available for takeout, as are huge bags of tortilla chips. A good value and very good, inexpensive food. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.W.

GELATO VERO CAFFE 3753 India Street, 619-295-9269. A fine spot for Italian sorbettos and ice creams, pastries of all kinds, and coffees. Diners can read undisturbed indoors or, weather permitting, outside. Open daily. — E.W.

LAUREL RESTAURANT 505 Laurel Street (at Fifth Avenue), 619-239-2222. Douglas Organ's French provincial restaurant is sophisticated and stylish, featuring an ever-changing seasonal menu of fresh, appealing dishes and a superb wine list (as you'd expect from the sister of the North County's Wine Cellar Brasserie). The crowd, many coming straight from work or business conventions, are on the dressy side. Dine early in the week for quiet, as weekends are jumping. Reservations are a must. The site now includes a small gourmet market, open from 4:00 p.m. Expensive to very expensive. — E.W.

LIAISON 2202 Fourth Avenue (Fourth and Ivy), 619-234-5040. This French restaurant with its romantic, atmosphere offers an à la carte menu and fixed-price meals. Pleasant food, excellent service. Patio dining, weather permitting. Closed Monday. Open Tuesday through Sunday for dinner. Low moderate to expensive. — E.W.

PRADO House of Hospitality, Balboa Park, 619-557-9441. In a magical space at the heart of Balboa Park, Prado features cute neo-Nouveau decor and a something-for-everyone menu of American-Mexican-Italian-with-Asian-touches cuisine. Despite the mixed ethnicities, the food brings few surprises, but is generally flavorful and served in huge portions. Top choices include meaty crab cakes, a refreshing eggplant "napoleon," and an astonishingly tender, slow-roasted pork loin. A meringue-based banana Tres Leches cake is everyone's favorite dessert. The bar makes a nice stop during a museum-crawl and offers ethereal fried oysters and a range of gussied-up margaritas. Dinner reservations vital. Interior is vast and prone to loudness, but heated, umbrella-topped terrace tables are quiet and scenic. Moderate to a little expensive, with reasonable wine list. — N.W.

SAFFRON NOODLES AND SATE 3737 India Street, 619-574-7737. Casual Thai food, noodle dishes, soups, saté (grilled chicken, beef, pork) to eat in or take out. Best bet: chicken noodle soup and curry served Wednesday only. Gorgeous artwork. Open daily, same menu all day. Inexpensive. — E.W.

TASTE OF SZECHUAN 670 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-291-1668. The Mandarin Szechuan menu offers standards with few surprises. But the three best features are the lovely room, the astonishing friendliness of the management, and the late hours. The Peking duck is excellent and so is the chopped chicken in lettuce cups. If you have favorite dishes, they will be prepared upon request in advance. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

RESTAURANTS

DOWNTOWN

BUCA DI BEPPO 705 Sixth Avenue, 619-233-7272. Family-style, southern Italian dining room seats 305 people. Food is simple (one sauce fits all), portions huge and restaurant is child- and teenager-friendly. Go for plain fun, but not for gourmet dinners. Meatballs and spaghetti best bet. Open daily. Nightly for dinner; Saturday, 4:00 p.m. to midnight; Sunday, noon to 10:00 p.m. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

LA CAMPANA MEXICAN RESTAURANT 2479-A Broadway, Golden Hill, 619-232-8756. Don't be fooled by the strip mall location. Jefe Arturo's wonderful specialties include cachinita pibil, roast suckling pig in sauce; a nice, thick pozole, pork and hominy soup; and tacos filled with various odd parts of the steer, including the sweet meat of the cheeks. Decor includes campanas, traditional bells, and old photos of Arturo's hometown, Tepic, the riverport capital of Nayarit. While you wait, listen to Arturo belt out songs from the kitchen. He has a great voice. Inexpensive. — E.B.

THE CHEESE SHOP 401 G Street, 619-232-2303. This café offers outrageously good sandwiches of which my favorites are the Black Forest ham and the roast pork. Muffins and cookies are baked on the premises. Paper plates for food but real mugs for coffee and tea. Open daily. Inexpensive. Branch in La Jolla, 2165 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla Shores, 858-459-3921. — E.W.

CHIVE 558 Fourth Avenue, 619-232-4483. This downtown hot spot is sleek, stark, dramatic, a restaurant in which to "be seen." Their "cuisine moderne" is Asian and Caribbean influenced and succeeds the atmosphere. I found the salmon and pork osso bucco outdone by their sides, but recommend the beef filet and rack of lamb, which Chive's generous kitchen roasts to perfection. Behind the artsy fare, Chive's staff is cordial and efficient, its kitchen talented, if a little arty and uneven. — E.W.

FARGO'S BAR-B-QUE 6171 Imperial Avenue, Encanto, 619-262-0201. Don't be put off by the drab row of shops. Inside you'll find Jacinth Williams, a friend of Bob Marley and other Jamaican stars, and herself known as the "queen of Jamaican cooking." Choose authentic island dishes like curried goat and yam, or spice-marinated "jerk" (barbecued) chicken, or "escoveitched" fish, gently pickled in a lemon-based sauce. Several interesting beverages include sorrel (made from hibiscus), Jamaican-bottled cream soda, Kola Champagne, or "Ting," the number-one drink in Jamaica. Or if your sex life needs a boost, try a Roots Drink or Irish Moss, a sort of seaweed milkshake. Restaurant hours can be irregular due to catering gigs; best bet is to call in your order for pickup. Inexpensive. — E.B.

FIO'S 801 Fifth Avenue (corner of F Street), 619-234-3467. This handsome Gaslamp old-timer serves rich, comforting, serious North Italian cuisine in a civilized atmosphere, with the bar glassed off from the dining rooms, keeping the sound-level low. High-quality ingredients (fine fresh fish, free-range chicken, genuinely ripe tomatoes, great gorgonzola) are employed in well-executed dishes that are creative without going off the deep end. Great small details include fine bread with rosemary butter and an impressive wine list. There's plenty of life in this old girl yet. Full bar, heated patio. Moderate (pastas) to expensive. — N.W.

GRANT GRILL U.S. Grant Hotel, 326 Broadway, 619-239-6806. As always, this restaurant serves quality meat in a traditional room that uses tablesside service. Best bets are spinach salad, lobster paella, shrimp-and-scallop risotto, and, of course, the mixed grill. Open daily. Breakfast, lunch, and brunch; moderate. Dinner, expensive. — E.W.

HENRY'S BBQ 1300 Market Street, 619-239-3919. The outside's a little tatty, but inside — Aladdin's Cave! A dining room of gold-framed pictures, mirrored golden-wood booths, and cushions, tables, walls, and carpet all in blue. Pork ribs are the thing here, guaranteed slow-cooked overnight for ten hours. Also beef, turkey, lamb, and ham. Try them together in combo sandwiches. Full plates come with barbecue beans and macaroni, potato, or coleslaw salad. "We haven't changed the menu since 1953," says Lorens, grandson of the original Henry. Closes 6:00 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B.

HOME QUEST COFFEE HOUSE 1010 Broadway, 619-232-3222. Okay, it's toward the scuzzy part of Broadway, and caters mainly to people struggling with substance problems, but the place is full of life and positive energy. You can hear it from the sidewalk — people sitting on stools at high tables loudly chewing the fat, chowing down, and smoking. Anybody's welcome, and almost anybody can afford the rock-bottom prices for a breakfast egg with hash browns and toast, or three pancakes, or three slices of French toast, or even a piece of chicken and toast. The dinner menu includes liver and onions, pork chops, or three pieces of chicken plus mashed potatoes and vegetables. Open 6-1/2 days (closes after lunch Sunday). Inexpensive. — E.B.

ISLAND SPICE 2820 Market (29th), Grant Hill, 619-702-9309. Interesting Jamaican specialties are served indoors or on a sunny patio. Breakfast can include run dung (sautéed salt mackerel) and ackee with salt cod. At lunch and dinner there's fine jerk chicken (ask for dark meat, it's moister), but don't overlook less-known delicacies such as savory oxtail stew, escoveitch (pickled) fish, curry goat, and fish or chicken in a tangy "brown stew." Dinner hours and offerings vary, and many patrons get take-out. Call just before you go to learn what's available and place your order. Inexpensive. — N.W.

KANSAS CITY BARBECUE 610 West Market Street, 619-231-9680. Scrumptious smells waft across the tracks at the Seaport Village trolley stop — barbecued pork and beef. Follow your nose. And yeah, this is the joint where Tom Cruise and Kelly McGillis did their "sleazy bar scene" in Top Gun. But guess what? It's kinda sleazy, especially in the shadowy horseshoe bar, with memorabilia like hanging bras, Czech license plates, and stickers ("Grow Your Own Dope. Plant A Man"). The beef and pork ribs (or rib tips or chicken breast) are worth it. They're cooked over an oak-fueled fire. Nice long Happy Hour (3:30 to 6:30 p.m., at bar only) has great food/grub deals. Open daily, lunch until late. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B.

LAEL'S RESTAURANT Hyatt Regency Hotel, One Market Street, 619-687-6066. All-you-can-eat fish-and-seafood buffet, Friday nights only, 6:00 to 9:00 p.m., $21.95. All-you-can-eat prime rib buffet, Thursday night, $18.95. Wednesday night, all-you-can-eat Italian buffet for $14.95. Worth trying for lovers of buffets. — E.W.

MAMA GUCCI'S HOME-STYLE ITALIAN FOOD 1157 Sixth Avenue, 619-338-0400. Mama Gucci did so well here, she retired back to Italy; now her son-in-law, George, runs the restaurant. A pretty interior with blonde wood chairs, checkered tablecloths, yellow walls, red shutters, and window-box flowers brings in the downtown office crowd between noon and 1:00 p.m. — but join the in-crowd sitting out in the sun, drinking wine and scarfing up spaghetti Bolognese or chicken Chianti (chicken or linguine with mushrooms and red-wine sauce). Lunch only, 11:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m., Monday to Friday. Inexpensive. — E.B.

OCTOPUS GARDEN 314 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-233-1653. Not to be missed Japanese and Continental preparations. Superb sushi and sashimi; unique hot appetizers; fish with continental sauces. Ahi tuna steak and sea bass outstanding. Upstairs seating for large parties. Delightful atmosphere and service. Open nightly for dinner. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

OLD WORLD RESTAURANT 452 Eighth Avenue, 619-238-0568. Way back in PB (Pre-Ballpark) days, left and Evelyn created this East Village oasis of bougainvillea, fig trees, pink brick, purple timbers, golden lights, white tables, and umbrellas. They've restored the interior to the building's original 1902 look, when it was the Mestemacher Carriage and Auto Painting Shop. Try dishes like "Great Grilled Grueben" (homemade corned beef, grilled on rye with Swiss cheese and sauerkraut) or orange-pecan chicken salad with wild rice and grapes. Make sure they add their secret weapon: Whizz-bangs. Inexpensive. — E.B.

THE PARROT GRILL 802 Sixth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-231-9981. Insomniacs take note. Dinner is served nightly to midnight and Wednesday through Saturday a light menu (sandwiches, salads, appetizers, desserts) is available to 2:00 a.m. Food is fabulous, service is some not. You can make a meal from appetizers. Best bets: barbecue ribs, honey-glazed duck, pork chop, key lime pie. Gorgeous interior and service. Dinner only, Wednesday through Saturday. Upper moderate. — E.W.

RAINWATER'S 1202 Kettner Boulevard, 619-233-5757. Though this attractive restaurant is noted for its fine steaks and chops, the live Maine lobster and fresh fish (especially the salmon in parchment) are outstanding here. For a low-cost meal, try meat loaf and creamy-mashed potatoes. Open daily. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner seven nights a week. Expensive. — E.W.

SEVILLA 555 Fourth Avenue (at Market), Gaslamp, 619-233-5979, www.cafesevilla.com. (Also in Carlsbad.) This site has three faces: a crowded but Euro-civilized tapas bar for spontaneous snacking, a romantic dining room with serious Spanish entrées, and a basement nightclub dishing out assembly-line paella. The best food is upstairs. You can get tapas in the restaurant and entrées at the bar, and in either case the choices are varied, interesting, and highly cosmopolitan, executed with wonderful consistency. Be sure to look for something that includes potatoes; the humble spud gets Cinderella treatment here. No reservations (or wheelchairs) at tapas bar; reservations strongly recommended for dining room. Moderate. — N.W.

SISTER PEE WEE'S SOUL FOOD 2971-1/2 Imperial Avenue, Grant Hill, 619-236-0470. One of the oldest, best soul food cafés in the county, but get there early (it closes at 8 p.m.). Sister Pee Wee says her daily lunch and dinner menu depends on what she feels like cooking that day — you might find big pork ribs with mashed red-skin potatoes, black-eyed peas, collard greens and two-inch-thick cornbread, or Southern-fried chicken, or seafood gumbo, or catfish fillet with all the trimmings. Sister's special is chitlins and catfish. Breakfast includes eggs, bacon, ham, sausages, and hominy grits. Inexpensive. — E.B.

THE SNACK GALLEY Greyhound Depot, 120 West Broadway, 619-234-4522. At 4:00 in the morning you don't expect Cordon Bleu, Pink, or any other color. The great thing about Snack Galley is that it's open at all. If you can get past the sleeping bodies, ask for the breakfast sandwich: bread stuffed with egg, cheese, and bacon, sausage or ham. Sausage is best — it feels like you get more to munch. Order a large coffee to wake you up, or sober you up, whatever you need. Open 24/7. Inexpensive. — E.B.

STAR OF THE SEA 1360 North Harbor Drive (Ash Street), downtown, 619-232-7408. This is not your father's Star of the Sea. In a chic new setting with the same romantic view, a talented new chef offers superb sea catch in fresh-flavor combinations that are bold but sane. Menus change seasonally, but one constant is an always-ravishing chef's tasting menu, which can include a cleverly paired wine flight. À la carte dishes are equally alluring, and wines are interesting, mainly affordable, and poured generously into good large goblets that show off their noses. Service is very considerate. Is this perfection? Quite possibly so. Somewhat dressy reservations urged. Expensive to very expensive. — N.W.

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

LA BELLA PIZZA GARDEN 373 Third Avenue, Chula Vista, 619-426-8820. From the outside, La Bella looks like an Italian farmhouse, with geraniums, bright green shutters, and maroon canopies. A real extended family runs this business. Their secrets are: long hours (from breakfast until after midnight daily), big meals, and small prices. The menu includes standards like spaghetti with meatballs or lasagna, including sides of garlic bread, soup, or salad. The hit with kids is "Papa's Favorite," an 8-inch pizza with mushrooms, pepperoni, and sausage. Inexpensive. — E.B.

BUON GIORNO 4110 Bonita Road, Bonita, 619-475-2661. The menu includes antipasti, soup, salad, pasta, pizza as well as chicken, meat, and fish. Try the Caesar salad topped with grilled fresh chicken breast, or linguine al pesto. Fish does very well here. Open daily. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

CROWN ROOM, HOTEL DEL CORONADO 1500 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-6611, ext. 7284. Open only for Sunday brunch and special events. The food is competent, but the room is outstanding, especially the crown-shaped ceiling. Expensive. — E.W.

D'LISH PIZZA AND PASTA 386 East H Street, Chula Vista, 619-585-1371. The pizzas and pastas are tasty and the salads are huge and fresh. Excellent service. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

GRANDMA'S PANTRY RESTAURANT AND BAKERY 875 Seacoast Drive, Imperial Beach, 619-424-5800. Kids will appreciate Grandma's notice — pinned above a heap of cheesecakes, pies, and cakes — that says "Enjoy Life More: Eat Dessert First." The menu ranges from Belgian breakfast waffles heaped with strawberries and cream to "Hot Juan" frittata (eggs, chorizo, onions, cheese, flour tortilla, salsa, and sour cream) to homemade meatloaf with mashed potatoes, veggies, a roll, and chilled pudding. Friday and Saturday nights, try their "All-The-Fish-You-Can-Eat" special. Then go and have your second dessert. You can walk it off on Ell's pier. Breakfast and early dinner six days, Sunday to 2 p.m. only. Inexpensive. — E.B.

LYDIA'S CAFE AND NIGHTCLUB 1628 Palm Avenue, Imperial Beach, 619-429-3603. This easygoing dancing eatery has a faithful following that goes back to 1957. And yes, there is a real Lydia, age 76, mother of six, grandmother of 26, great-grandma of 44. (Give her a hand!) But before you dance, eat! Check out the birria en su jugo (goat in its juices) with beans, rice, and tortillas or enjoy filling snacks like taquitos, cuarachas (a corn tortilla stuffed with ham, cheese, and sour cream), or the snack Lydia says she invented — botanas (beans, pork, and melted cheese over corn chips). And now — huitel! Open early to very late, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B.

MARCO'S FINE ITALIAN FOOD AND PIZZA 736 Palm Avenue, Imperial Beach, 619-424-3636. You hardly notice it tucked into a row of TV repair shops, but Marco's is a jewel. Marco, Frank and Rosa Palombo ran the place for 30 years. Now Alex Pacheco does, but nothing has changed. There are the classic red tablecloths, murals of Italian scenes, white trellises, dripping plastic grapes, and Chianti bottles. Try spaghetti, mostaccioli, or rigatoni with meat sauce and meatballs. Live a little! Order a half carafe of Burgundy and sing along with the music — "Funiculì, Funicula." Inexpensive. — E.B.

PEOHE'S The Landing, 1201 First Street, Coronado, 619-437-4474. This gorgeous, view-endowed restaurant offers upscale, Hawaiian-inspired fish and gargantuan steaks in a plush tropical-style setting with indoor waterfalls and three separate patios. Given the visual splendor, much of the food is better than it needs to be, featuring top-quality seafood prepared with care. For instance, a homely halibut is transformed into a glamor-gal by a lush and sassy Frangelico-touched macadamia beurre blanc. A chocolate shell filled with macadamia nut ice cream may be worth the calories, too. Full bar. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Reservations advised. Expensive. — N.W.

ZORBAS FAMILY RESTAURANT 100 Broadway, Chula Vista, 619-422-8853. All-you-can-eat Greek buffet daily, lunch, midweek dinner, weekend dinner with entertainment of belly dancers and Zorba's dancers. Plenty to eat. Not gourmet food, but fun. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.W.

TIJUANA

(The prefix for all Tijuana numbers is 011-526. From the United States use the prefix 011-526 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's seven-digit number.)

BIG BOY RESTAURANT 9892 Agua Caliente Boulevard (across the street from the old bullring), Tijuana. Open 24/7. Besides having excellent Mexican-American food, this Big Boy knock-off draws some of the most interesting people in Tijuana — journalists, lawyers, cattlemen, politicians, Baja's heavy hitters. Day or night, Big Boy is always busy. Gringo food's no problem. Breakfasts include eggs, bacon, sausage, chorizo or ham, plus hash browns or frijoles, toast, juice, and endless coffee. Nobody will object if you sit sipping the free refills till the moon comes up. But you won't — you'll crack and order more when you smell the popular, macho "royal" hamburger, with two beef patties, smoked ham, onions, lettuce, tomatoes, fries, and salad. Or the chicken breast marinated in tequila with cilantro, guacamole, and beans. Inexpensive. — E.B.

LA COSTA 8131 Galeana (Seventh Street between Revolución and Constitución), 685-8494 or 685-3124. An extensive menu, consistently fresh product, and huge portions have made La Costa the reigning seafood house for Americans. Identical lunch and dinner menus offer lobster, shrimp, grilled fish, fish with sauces, squid, abalone, and oysters, all in a variety of preparations. Price of entrées includes soup, salad, rice, dessert, beverage, and after-dinner drink. Almost always crowded. Open Monday through Thursday, 10:00 a.m. to 11:00 p.m. Friday through Sunday, 10:00 a.m. to 12:00 midnight. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

GRAND BISTRO Grand Hotel Tijuana, 4500 Agua Caliente Boulevard, Tijuana, 681-7000, x4188. Visit this Tijuana restaurant for its formal elegance, mystery, romance. Visit Grand Bistro for its prime rib! The tastiest I've ever eaten. This thick and juicy portion of Mexican beef comes with an outstanding side of "creamed spinach," slow-cooked with bits of smoky bacon and minced onion. Along with a fine Bistro salad and a selection from their excellent and affordable wine list, it's a voluptuous, if fatalistic, meal. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

LA LENA 11191 Blvd. Agua Caliente, 686-2920. Don't miss the charming room, the open grill, and the tortilla maker who prepares fresh tortillas as the diners are seated. Dinners come with an appetizer and soup, and some of the entrées are extraordinary. Try the pastes ("Fas"). Roasted quail and chicken do well here. Open daily, lunch to late dinner. Take Revolución to the left-hand bend where it becomes Agua Caliente. Continue past the twin high-rise towers of the Grand Hotel. A large sign marks the restaurant (on the right side of the road). Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

PUEBLO CAFE La Alameda Fronton Palace, 701-E Avenida Revolución, Tijuana, 685-8667. Eat at the Palace! This is a great place to impress out-of-town relatives without going broke. The owners, who are connected to Ensenada's Husnong family, set out to lure Mexicans back to their own overgringofied main street, staging local art/sculpture shows and Mexican rock bands on the weekends. For dinner, try the "Royal Quail of the Castle" or the smoked tuna salad. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B.

SAVERIO'S RESTAURANT MEDITERRANEO Avenida Carlos Robirosa 200, 686-3604 or 681-8496. This "in" restaurant attracts a young crowd. Pastas and pizzas are available, but the best bets are the fish and chicken dinners that arrive with soup or salad. Top price is $14.00. Crowded and noisy weekends. Open daily, same menu noon to 11:00 p.m. Sunday to 10:00 p.m. Low to moderate. Take Revolución until it turns into Boulevard Agua Caliente. Continue until you see the Hotel Grand on your right. There, turn left onto the side street Avenida Carlos Robirosa. You'll see Blockbuster Video. Saverio's is across the street. — E.W.

EL TAURINO 7531 Sixth Avenue (off Revolución), 685-7075. Located in the heart of the old section of Tijuana, three blocks west of Revolución, this restaurant provides superb value in an excellent setting. Basically a steakhouse, it also offers fish, seafood, and fowl. The price of the entrée includes grilled quail, soup or salad, and mammoth amounts of the main course. Almost everyone orders cabrería, or try empalpelado, fish and shrimp cooked in silver foil. Superior service. The menu is printed in Spanish and English, and the maitre d' speaks perfect English. First-rate bargain for high quality. Open daily 12:00 noon to 12:00 midnight. Continuous service. Inexpensive to moderate except for lobster. — E.W.

TOUR DE FRANCE Gobernador Ibarra 252 (past the Rio section), 681-7542. This French restaurant will provide you with wonderful food, incredible service, and an extensive menu printed in French, Spanish, and English. The presentation, preparation, and quality of the food are first-rate. Don't miss the desserts, especially chestnut soufflé. Closed Sunday. Open Monday through Thursday, 8:00 a.m. to 10:30 p.m., to 11:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Reservations on weekends a must. Phone for directions. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

LA VUELTA 2004 Avenida Revolución, 685-7309 or 684-2611. For an extravagant evening of mariachi music, good food, and high spirits, remember that La Vuelta is open every day, 24 hours a day. Mariachi available daily. Authentic Mexican food and atmosphere. English spoken. Inexpensive. — E.W.

EL ZAGUAN Avenida Paseo de los Héroes 10501, Zona Río (turn right at statue of Lincoln), 634-6781 or 634-6006. The name means doorway or entrance, usually to a mansion, and the interior is opulent and striking. Fish, seafood, poultry, and beef are offered with Continental sauces. Best bet is shrimp in tequila sauce or fresh fish. Soups always exciting. Food is not exotic, but is straightforward. The atmosphere will please the most fastidious. Menu in Spanish; English spoken. Open Monday through Saturday, 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 a.m. Sunday, 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.W.

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

ANTHONY'S FISH GROTTO For its fresh seafood salads, its fish and chips, and its daily fresh fish specials, Anthony's still goes to the head of the class for stability of product, good-sized portions, time-honored preparation, and low cost. Open daily, lunch through dinner. No reservations. Inexpensive to expensive. Locations: 1360 North Harbor Drive (at Ash Street), downtown, 619-232-5103; 215 West Bay Boulevard, Chula Vista, 619-425-4200; 9530 Murray Drive, La Mesa, 619-463-0368; 11666 Avena Place (off Bernardo Center Drive), Rancho Bernardo, 858-451-2070. — E.W.

BULLY'S NORTH 1404 Camino del Mar, Del Mar, 858-755-1660. Especially during summer, this branch is the most colorful and is jammed with the sporting crowd, which makes the place exciting. Food is the same as at other Bully's, but the high intensity carries it. Steak, prime rib, hamburgers, fries, and fresh fish are favorites. Open daily. Moderate. Other locations: 5755 La Jolla Blvd., La Jolla, 858-459-2768; 2401 Camino Del Rio South, Mission Valley, 619-291-2685. — E.W.

CALIFORNIA PIZZA KITCHEN 437 South Highway 101, Suite 601, Solana Beach, 858-793-0999. Here's a good family restaurant where you can take your children and grandchildren for salads, pasta, pizza. There are 28 pizzas. The chicken tequila with spinach fettuccine is great, as are vegetarian sandwiches. Same menu, lunch and dinner. Open daily. Inexpensive. Branches also in La Jolla Village Square, 3363 Nobel Drive, 858-457-4222; Carmel Mountain Plaza, 11602 Carmel Mountain Road, 858-675-4424; 7007 Friars Road, Mission Valley, 619-298-4078. — E.W.

CLAIM JUMPER The portions are so large they elicit gasps (the prime rib served weekends is 26 ounces). The food isn't memorable, just more than any one person can eat. Among the attractions every day are the huge salad bar, barbecued chicken, ribs, and turkey dinners. Count on a wait on weekends. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to expensive (for larger steaks and beef rib). 5500 Grossmont Center Drive, La Mesa, 619-469-3927; 12384 Carmel Mountain Road, Carmel Mountain, 858-485-8370; 5958 Avenida Encinas, Carlsbad, 760-431-0889. — E.W.

HOMETOWN BUFFET 5881 University Avenue, University Square Shopping Center, 619-583-7373. If you're a nostalgia buff and long for cooking as it existed 50 years ago, try this all-you-can-eat buffet. Menus change daily. Massive amounts of food that's fresh but not low-cal/low-cholesterol. Not for gourmet diners, but fun. Open daily. Other branches located throughout the city and suburbs. Call 619-583-7373 for locations. Inexpensive. — E.W.

Roll Call

Not every nook and cranny of the narrative could stand up to the light shed at the end.

REVIEW
DUNCAN SHEPHERD

Some of the credit for The Others, even down to the time of year of its release, must presumably go to The Sixth Sense for reopening the door to an old-fashioned, low-tech, thick-atmospshered ghost story. There remains plenty of credit still to spread around among the Spanish writer and director (and musical scorer!) Alejandro Amenábar, heretofore known for the overly tricksy Open Your Eyes; his compatriot cinematographer Javier Aguirresarobe, working so close to monochromatic darkness as to argue vehemently against waiting for the video; Nicole Kidman, in a bounce-back performance after the boop-boop-a-doopery of Moulin Rouge, re-tuned now to a Henry Jamesian (or, from The Portrait of a Lady in specific, an Isabel Archerian) quivering tautness; Alakina Mann and James Bentley as her puckered-browed, pasty-faced children; and Fionnula Flanagan as a formidable latecomer to the long screen tradition of creepy housekeepers.

Set entirely in and around a gothic Victorian mansion on the Channel Islands at the close of the Second World War, the story awakens gradually to other possible presences in the house, beyond those already accounted for: the resident family of three — minus its MIA head — and a reduced staff of three. There is no phone, no radio, no electricity in the place. (Was it Osbert Sitwell who first suggested — before Edmund Wilson picked up the theme — that the ghost story went out when the electric light came on?) And the children's alleged allergy to daylight, a most poetic malady, apparently not limited to vampires, dictates a strict policy of curtained windows and locked doors, so as to contain the light and minimize the leakage, much as water must be contained on a ship. The locked doors can present a problem, of course, for responding quickly to a scream or to the proverbial Things That Go Bump. But a door found to be unlocked will be a problem, too, at the cost of the mistress's wrath. The latter's fire-and-brimstone brand of Christianity ("Forever! Pain! Forever!") makes her, in the post-James and post-Freud period, an automatic suspect in any supernatural disturbance. Then again, one or both of the children, whose number and ages accord quite well with the brother and sister in The Turn of the Screw, might simply be making it up. Or otherwise conjuring it up. And creepy housekeepers are always worth keeping an eye on. The denouement turns out, if not all the way to the last ingenious detail, to be precisely what I had begun to fear — and not because it would be frightening. Not every nook and cranny of the narrative could stand up to the light shed at the end. Yet there are, by my count, three legitimate skin-prickling frights throughout the course of the meticulous and measured unfoldment. Those are in the bag before the final twist.

The Others

The others:

Brother. Takeshi Kitano — if you are looking behind the camera, or Beat Takeshi if you are looking in front of it — returns to the crime scene after the lighter interlude of Kikujiro. (Easy tip to remember which name belongs where: it's the scar-faced actor who looks beat, as in tired, weary, spent, if not as in beaten, battered, whipped, crushed.) The scene soon switches, however, from Tokyo to Los Angeles — something new, after all — as our zombified yakuza escapes one gang war only to enter another one. Or more accurately, instigate another one: it seems something of a gag that the undemonstrative Japanese proves to be quicker to violence, and fiercer when he reaches it, than the famously trigger-happy homies. The body count is staggering, the cops never come into it, and the entire affair is too abstract, abstruse, and affected to be in any way affecting. But one thing you always get from Kitano is pictorial composition, a punctilious concern for framing, scale, lines and planes. This formal precision sits a little oddly amid the rainbow coalition of local thugs, though not unwelcomely. No less oddly or unwelcomely than the stringent ban on rap and hip-hop on the soundtrack.

Original Sin. Writer-director Michael Cristofer, who had already used Angelina Jolie in the made-for-cable Gia, clearly feels very unlike me about this actress, opting to start the movie as he does with a closeup of those joke-shop lips, mouthing a line that will become the title of the Gloria Estefan exit song: "You can't walk away from love." Jolie, in flashback, then debarks in horse-and-buggy Havana, a mail-order bride from Delaware, bearing a trace of her British accent from Lara Croft: Tomb Raider as well as a ready explanation for why she looks in person nothing like her homely photograph: it's because she didn't want a husband who was interested in her for only her beauty. (In that case she could have sent him a closeup of just her lips.) This sounds plausible enough to the would-be bridegroom, Antonio Banderas, who had represented himself as a tobacconist's clerk, instead of as a coffee baron, because he didn't want a wife who would be interested in him for his money. Nor, in their extended honeymoon (extended at least in part thanks to slow-motion), does her grotesque vampery tip him off that something's amiss. Cristofer has re-set the pulp novel by Cornell Woolrich, Waltz into Darkness (previously filmed by Truffaut under the name of Mississippi Mermaid), in a more exotic locale in hopes, evidently, of making the unbelievable more believable. Or in hopes that the relentless Latin rhythms on the soundtrack will cast a spell should all else fail. The total effect is hypnotic solely in the sense of soporific. For me, the only amusement came afterwards when I read in the press notes that the drunkenly reeling camerawork was "admittedly influenced by the remarkable classic 1950s films of Max Ophuls, particularly Lola Montes and The Earrings of Madame D., which melded romantic stories with revolutionarily elegant camerawork in which the camera actually seemed to be alive." As if I hadn't already realized Cristofer was delusional.

Osmosis Jones. A cartooned white blood cell (voice of Chris Rock) tracks down a lethal virus (voice of Laurence Fishburne) inside the body of a live-action Bill Murray: a loud, crude, ugly hybrid. Not to mention a less imaginative and less educational crib of Fantastic Voyage. Because the live-action parts are handled by Bobby and Peter Farrelly, they're even uglier than the animated parts — even discounting the snot, the zit, the puke, and the ingrown toenail.

Rush Hour 2. Genial, self-satisfied, moderately dull sequel on the unending and unchanging chemical reaction between mismatched Hong Kong and L.A. cops, Jackie Chan and Chris Tucker. Tucker continues to be a sore spot for his refusal at any point to resemble a cop. He is nevertheless nearly as funny as his co-star, after trying ten times harder. Strong support from Zhang Ziyi (strong opposition, rather) and very briefly Don Cheadle. Brett Ratner again directed, if that's the word.

The San Diego Film Critics Society (nothing to do with me, you understand) is sponsoring a benefit preview screening of the newly restored and expanded Apocalypse Now next Monday at seven at Mann's Hazard Center, all proceeds going to the upcoming student film festival at the Museum of Photographic Arts in October. For ticket information, call 619-291-7777. A worthy cause, however worthy a movie.

Delayed confirmation of what I guessed when I saw Kathy Najimy's plug for Kathleen Wilhoite's CD in People Magazine's Best-of-2000 issue: they are friends. The confirmation came in the form of the weekly "My Favorite Weekend" feature in the Thursday Los Angeles Times. (The Times, naturally, was asking Najimy. It's unimaginable they'd be asking Wilhoite.) I, on the other hand, am unbiased. I don't have to know Wilhoite in order to wish to see her in more and better roles. ■

America's Sweethearts — An alternative-universe Hollywood where a married pair of superstars — it will not be helpful to think of Cruise and Kidman, Burton and Taylor, Bogart and Bacall — have appeared together in nine consecutive boffo blockbusters (the samples we see of their work are on a par with the standard big-screen sendups of TV soap opera); where the female half has met with a disapproving public and two straight flops since their breakup; where two years after the split there somehow remains an unreleased joint effort directed by a three-time Oscar winner who, looking like the wild-haired Ben Gunn of Treasure Island, is editing the project in Kubrickian secrecy inside the Unabomber's transplanted Montana cabin; and where the head of the studio must wait to see the final cut with the national press corps at the junket. Julia Roberts, just to open a can of Whiskas in the overall atmosphere of fishiness, plays the part of Catherine Zeta-Jones's wallflower sister (wearing a fat suit in flashback for substantiation), though that doesn't cut down on her usual quotas of teeth and tantrums. Both actresses could sue the cameraman for their sallow complexions. John Cusack, insofar as he's supposed to be in recovery from a mental breakdown, has shakier grounds for litigation. And Christopher Walken, as the anchoritic director, would probably be flattered. Billy Crystal, as the unprincipled publicist (a tautology, to be sure), works very hard and handily on the assembly line of gimcrack jokes. The sheer volume of jokes would be reduced, however, by roughly a third if Crystal and his co-writer Peter Tolan were deprived of the penis. (Perhaps Tolan's given name shaped his destiny.) Joe Roth, a former studio chief himself at Fox and Disney, returning after a decade to the director's chair to lengthen his brief and undistinguished list of credits (Streets of Gold, Revenge of the Nerds 2, Coupe de Ville), should certainly know his subject from top to bottom. But disembling and disinformation can become a habit. Hank Azaria, Stanley Tucci, Alan Arkin. 2001. ● (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; ENCINITAS 8; FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT CENTER; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE 16; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; RANCHO DEL REY 16; TOWN SQUARE 14)

The Big Lebowski — There are actually two Lebowskis, a big one and a little one, a multimillionaire philanthropist and a lazy, laid-back bowler, both christened Jeffrey; and when the latter — who prefers to be addressed as "the Dude" — is mistaken for the other by a pair of dim-bulb thugs, he is pulled into an apparent kidnapping plot of rapidly deepening complexity: "a lot of ins, a lot of outs, a lot of what-have-yous." The Coen brothers, writer-director Joel and writer-producer Ethan, are here having fun with, among other things, complexity per se. Fun with the very idea of complexity. Fun with the concrete and mountainous evidences of complexity. And one of the richest sources of fun, played off in the sharpest contrast to complexity, is the glorious spectrum of stupidity on exhibit: the dope-addled but gropingly rational Dude (Jeff Bridges); the big lug who is always absolutely sure he is right in spite of the fact that he has never been right yet (John Goodman); the woolgatherer who falls behind in the slowest of conversations (Steve Buscemi); the several teams of hired "muscle" (all brawn, no brains), one team of which are self-styled Nihilists; the nympho bimbo; the adolescent joyrider who afterwards forgets his corrected homework ("Use a dictionary," "Spelling") in the abandoned car. The complexity is no illusion. It is right there in front of us in frightening and multiplying detail. It brutally illuminates the stupidity. And at the same time it forms the philosophical foundation for a broad and accepting, if aloof and frosty, view of humankind. The Coens — who better? who else? — are able to make wonderful sport of deadbeats and boneheads from the high ground of diligence and ingenuity. They never play "down" to the audience. They demand effort and intelligence, and they reward these by the truckload: lively characterizations, flavorful dialogue, dense atmosphere, clever and convoluted plotting, rich and well-developed themes, abundant allusions, "in" jokes, grace notes, and red herrings, each element teamed with the others in common purpose. Julianne Moore, David Huddleston, Sam Elliott, Peter Stormare, Ben Gazzara, John Turturro, Jimmie Dale Gilmore. 1998.

★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS; FROM 8/10)

Cats and Dogs — Beastly spy spoof (intermixing live animals, puppets, and computer animation) focussed on a feline world-domination conspiracy and the vigilant watchdogs who oppose it. An overblown lead balloon, heavy on Bondian gadgetry and cartoon violence. With Jeff Goldblum, Elizabeth Perkins, Alexander Pollock, and the voices of Tobey Maguire, Alec Baldwin, Susan Sarandon; directed by Lawrence Guterman. 2001.
● (FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; HARBOR DRIVE IN; MISSION VALLEY 20; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; RANCHO DEL REY 16)

The Closet — Avariciously commercial French comedy of the type that tends to be remade in Hollywood. Francis Veber, its writer and director, amounts practically to a one-man factory of the type. And it's hard to see what could stand in the way of a remake of this one, a PI: farce about a nebbish in the accounting office of a condom plant — a Jack Lemmon scented white-collar drudge — who, to save his job, floats a rumor that he is gay, thus setting himself up as a potential martyr in the eyes of the company's best customers. (The strategy is devised by his new neighbor, an aging homosexual who, twenty years earlier, had been fired from his job because he was gay: how times change!) The consciousness-raising vein in this is not too bothersome. Rather more so is the cruel streak: the presumption that it's quite all right, quite just and proper, even quite PC, to torture and torment a macho homophobe into a nervous breakdown. Neither the consciousness-raising vein nor the cruel streak is a boon to the mirth, which scrapes along at the subsistence level. The thing, nevertheless, that elevates The Closet above mediocrity, the thing that makes it worth looking at, is simply — how else to put it? — that it's a thing worth looking at. A thing of beauty, even. More specifically, a thing photographed by the great Luciano Tovoli. The beauty of it springs not from the obvious and conventional source of training the camera on beautiful things: calendar-art scenery, Architectural Digest interiors, and the like. And not from the cameraman's cosmetics case of beautifying tricks: "painterly" light, pea-soup atmospherics. But instead from the beauty of the colors per se: luscious and lustrous, rich and resplendent, bright and buoyant, crisp and clean; sharply separated yet slightly diffused, softened, never harsh or garish, never violently clashing; a broad and democratic palette in which every spot on the spectrum is granted an equal independence and individuality, unsubjected to any filtering, desaturating, monochroming processes to yoke them into an unnatural "harmony" or imposed "scheme." The image is as diverse and gay (in the old way) as a balloon bouquet, as tasteful, as refined, as a Bonnard. With Daniel Auteuil, Gerard Depardieu, Michele Laroque, Thierry Lhermitte, Jean Rochefort, Michel Aumont. 2000.
★★ (COVE)

Eraserhead — Equipped with a too sooty black-and-white image and a sadistically overamplified soundtrack, David Lynch's nightmare visions belong somewhere in the area of "fantastic art," but have found a somewhat uncomfortable home on the midnight-cult circuit. The main narrative thread, if one can be extracted from the jungly snarl, centers around a slimy, encephalitic birdlike creature (a fine example of "monster" special effects, and one that the makers of Star Wars and Close Encounters might well look at with envy), which has somehow been sired by the movie's sadsack hero, and which now lies on a table in his apartment, mewling, spitting up, contracting chicken pox, and being generally disgusting; and this thread possesses something of the quality of Gogol's and Kafka's satirical horror stories, although not as firmly embedded in a believable background and a lucid, factual tone. The shock value of the movie's various images of excrescences, eruptions, diseases, decapitations, and so forth, is largely numbed by its thorough submersion in a delirious, deliquescent world where anything goes but nothing ever comes of it. Still, this pestiferous little movie, produced in co-operation with the American Film Institute, leaves you with the feeling in the pit of your stomach that you are apt to have after stepping accidentally on a snail. 1977.
★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 8/15, 7 P.M.)

The Fast and the Furious — The world of street racing (vroom vroom) intersects with that of truck hijacking: your basic drive-in movie (if there were still drive-ins), souped up with headbanger music (thunk thunk), some chest-flattening effects of speed, and a bonny glazed coat of hot bods. (Michelle Rodriguez, among them, makes the jump from the low-budget, independent Girlfight to the big leagues: "Why don't you girls pack it up before I leave treadmarks on your face?") Director Rob Cohen records this lifestyle with reasonable amounts of energy and flair and unreasonable amounts of drool. Paul Walker, Vin Diesel, Jordana Brewster, Ted Levine. 2001.
★ (NORTON PLAZA 14; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE 16; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; VOGUE)

Ghost World — The heroine, out of a comic book by Daniel Clowes, is someone a critic could love. Not only a critic, rest assured. Fresh out of high school — or rather, jaded out of high school — she can produce an equal sneer for the wheelchair bound valedictorian ("High school is like the training wheels for the bicycle of real life") and for the hip-hopping black cheerleaders who follow. A tireless crapehanger, a walking crap detector, alienated, aloof, alert, aware, unaccepting, reacting, resisting, judging: Little Miss Raincloud. And yet the movie, directed discreetly if none too fluidly by the erstwhile documentarist Terry Zwigoff (most notably Crumb, profiling a real-life outsider, the underground cartoonist R. Crumb), never loses sight of the fact that she is still just a teenager; it never tries to puff her up into a self-worshipping Lara Croft cult figure, much less an all-knowing Susan Sontag arbiter of taste. (Is the band at the post-graduation bash almost so bad that it's good, or is it so bad that it goes way beyond good and back to bad again? How's a girl to know?) The focus of the episodic action is on her curious alliance with a fortyish bachelor and discophile, quiet and retiring, with slumped shoulders, a bad back, flat hair, no social life, and the face-pulling first name of Seymour (Steve Buscemi, surreptitiously brilliant in the part), whom she had come to know after answering his Personals ad as a practical joke. What he plainly has in common with the heroine, for all their outward disparity, is an acute awareness and unacceptance of the surrounding world: "I can't relate to ninety-nine percent of humanity." In addition to which, as a mark of his greater depth and maturity, he has an awareness and an unacceptance of himself as well: "Maybe I don't want to meet someone who shares my interests; I hate my interests." It's true that the movie, on behalf of its two principal outcasts, takes condescending aim at a lot of easy targets (the faux Fifties diner, the electric-guitar redneck "blues" band at the local bar, the "XXX" bookstore, and so on), but then again, there are so many beckoning targets in the world that some of them are bound to be easy. A tireless crapehanger can't be expected to let them pass without a sneer or a snipe. And it's a sizable accomplishment — and compensation — that the movie places so much weight on the importance of taste and temperament in the living of daily life, the forming of relationships, the getting through a day. Thora Birch, Scarlett Johansson, Illeana Douglas, Stacey Travis, Bob Balaban. 2001.
★★★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Greenfingers — "Inspired by actual events," the story tells of a select group of long-term convicts who take up gardening at a progressive English penitentiary, and take it all the way to the annual Hampton Court Palace Flower Show. Life-affirming, strong-arming underdog stuff; equally soft-hearted and soft-headed; as cutesy-wootsy and cozy-wozy as Waking Ned Devine and Saving Grace (though writer-director Joel Hershman is American). Clive Owen exhibits a fine poker face but surely his work in Croupier merited a better reward. With David Kelly, Helen Mirren, Natasha Little. 2001.
● (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Hedwig and the Angry Inch — Writer-director-star John Cameron Mitchell adapts his own off-Broadway musical (songs by Stephen Trask), a voyage of self-acceptance for an East German immigrant and transsexual glam-rocker (or "transsexual" according to a mock tabloid headline on display), with a botched sex-change operation that has left him a seventh of a man. The transplant to the screen is also butchered: cheap, garish, and shaky. 2001.
● (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Jurassic Park III — Elementary and elemental spectacle of ravening dinosaurs and edible humans. Beyond that, it pretty much eludes criticism or comment. A small objection might be raised at the way dinosaurs, for live-action purposes (which is to say live-action humans, but computer-generated dinosaurs), have become the monopoly of the Jurassic Park franchise. This makes for a stifling sameness, an unhealthy constraint, although on the other hand it allows the action to get rolling in a hurry: no need to lay any groundwork. Another small objection, specific to Part III, could be raised over the ease of identifying the disposable humans and the speed of their disposal. The preciousness of the remaining humans (most of all William H. Macy, Téa Leoni, and, after sitting out the first sequel, Sam Neill) tends to depress the level of suspense. Any child — the target viewer, after all — will know full well that nothing too bad is going to happen to them any time soon. Aside from its shorter menu of snack food, the movie has lost little in transferring the controls from Steven Spielberg to Joe Johnston: little but excess baggage. (Even the dinos no longer seem able to cause the earth to quake with every step.) A well-paced hour and a half could not nowadays feed the Spielberg ego. 2001.
★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; CHULA VISTA 10; CINERAMA 6; DEL MAR HIGHLANDS 8; FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT CENTER; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; LA COSTA 6; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE 16; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; POWAY 10; RANCHO DEL REY 16; SANTEE DRIVE IN; SWEETWATER 9; TOWN SQUARE 14)

Legally Blonde — A wish-fulfillment fairy tale, more voguishly known as an empowerment myth, concerning a So-Cal sorority sister, Fashion Merchandising major, and Miss Hawaiian Tropic runner-up (Reese Witherspoon, in her mile-wide vein of mockery) who gets herself admitted into Harvard Law School to chase after her ex-boyfriend — and oh by the way, outrun him to the head of the class. Some of the details, if you allow maybe a hundred yards of slack for knowledge of how the world works, are giddily inventive: the admissions application "video essay" (directed by an unspecified Coppola) delivered in an assortment of swimming pools and bikinis, or the pet Chihuahua named Bruiser, or the pink pompom at the top of her classroom pen. Ready as we may be, however, to applaud the discovery and cultivation of a human brain, willing as we may be to believe that this can occur in the airiest of heads, we might balk nonetheless at the two-faced assumption that it's as simple as turning on a faucet. The idea of growth without change goes against nature. Like the idea of satire without teeth. Luke Wilson, Matthew Davis, Selma Blair, Jennifer Coolidge, Raquel Welch; directed by Robert Luketic. 2001.
★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN; FASHION VALLEY 18; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; HORTON PLAZA 14; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE 16; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; RANCHO DEL REY 16; TOWN SQUARE 14)

Made — A reunion of the male leads of Swingers, Vince Vaughn and Jon Favreau, with the latter again writing the script and for the first time directing as well. He has enlisted Wong Kar-wai's nimble cameraman, Christopher Doyle, to photograph it — a smart move, it might seem, except that the scrappy results only go to show the importance of Wong Kar-wai's eye in their collaborations. The story, or better say situation, centers around a couple of lifelong pals, loosely connected to the mob, who for their separate reasons tighten those connections when they accept a vague assignment as cross-country couriers. As in the overrated Swingers, only more so, Favreau and Vaughn each have a well-honed shtick — Big Putz and Bigger Putz — and they repeat it ad infinitum and nauseam. Favreau once again comes through as the sympathetic one, not so much for his lunkish sadsack looks, still less for his mawkish relationship with the neglected daughter of his stripper girlfriend. It's just that he's not the one you yearn to see bound and gagged. Famke Janssen, Peter Falk, Sean Combs. 2001.
★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE; MISSION VALLEY 20)

Memento — A tale of revenge told in reverse. To put it like that is not to suggest the movie goes literally in reverse motion, with people walking backwards and saying "Ollieh" instead of "Hello," although that in fact is the method of the opening scene: a Polaroid snapshot gets sucked back into the camera, and a spent cartridge jumps up into the chamber of a handgun. But this just gives the movie its initial push backwards in time. After that, the scenes (in normal forward motion) are arranged in opposite order of occurrence, a bit reminiscent of the screen adaptation of Harold Pinter's play, Betrayal, or the earlier Elizabeth Jane Howard novel, The Long View. One big difference between this and those is that Memento is a thriller, not a relationship thing. Knowing how it all turns out would appear to be more crippling. Yet appearances, as we all know, can be deceiving. Another big difference is that the action here is squeezed into a tighter time frame, with each of the scenes ending at the precise point — with perhaps a second or two of repetitive overlap — where the previous scene started. Events, in others words, have been broken up arbitrarily in mid-course, so that we join them in medias res and must wait until the ensuing scene to find out how we reached that point. Still another difference, slightly soiling the purity of the concept, is that the scenes are separated by black-and-white interpolations (for explanatory purposes, mostly) of indeterminate chronology, and there's a heavy dose of verbal recapitulation right before the finish. This narrative technique proves to be a true test of your powers of concentration: a good thing in and of itself. You have to pay close attention. And you have to do what the hero himself is unable to do: to remember what came before. The trick of the thing — the inspiration and justification for the ass-backwards order of procedure — is the hero's peculiar "condition," as he refers to it, whereby he is incapable of forming new memories ever since the head injury he sustained while his wife was getting raped and murdered. Admittedly the movie is something of a stunt, a sleight of hand. The reverse-order gimmick could only work in concert with the blank-memory gimmick; copycats beware. This is a one-of a kind whatchamacallit designed for one use only, one time only. (Though a reverse-order sequel, strange to say, is not unimaginable.) It hangs together. It does its job. It can have no further application. But this is a work of fiction, not a kitchen implement, and in that department ingenuity counts much more than utility. Guy Pearce, Carrie-Anne Moss, Joe Pantoliano; written and directed by Christopher Nolan. 2001.
★★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

The Neverending Story — The adult might well appreciate the plug put in for novels (versus video games) as a source of children's entertainment, and might also appreciate the elementary lesson dished out at the climax about the audience's vital role in the creative process, more or less what Coleridge had in mind with the expression "poetic faith." But the particular fiction used to demonstrate these ideals — an overproduced and underimagined fairy tale about a land called Fantasia besieged by something called The Nothing — will best be left to the wide-eyed or merely undiscriminating tot. With Noah Hathaway; directed by Wolfgang Petersen. 1984.
★ (NEN, 8/12 AND 13)

O Brother, Where Art Thou? — A road comedy, "based upon The Odyssey by Homer," about three chain-gang fugitives in Depression-era Mississippi. (The title, should you need reminding, comes from Preston Sturges's Sullivan's Travels; the proposed title for a "meaningful" film by a refractory Hollywood contract director, whose subsequent quest to get in touch with the Common Man lands him on a Southern chain gang.) While the humor is as broad as the Coen brothers ever have allowed (i.e., Raising Arizona), it is equally as bright and as funny. No one in American cinema, past or present, writes tastier, tangier dialogue than Joel and Ethan Coen; and the script is studded with well-turned gags that could stand alongside any textbook samples from the pages of Preston Sturges, Jules Furthman, Ben Hecht. (The nitwit fugitives enter inevitably into a who-put-you-in-charge dispute. The rebellious one says, "I'm votin' for Yours Truly." The besieged leader responds, "Well, I'm votin' for Yours Truly, too." The swing voter, looking uncertainly from one to the other, puzzling out the politic choice, says, "Okay, I'm with you fellers.") And the Coens show here, as they showed already in The Hudsucker Proxy, that if you take the four letter words out of their vocabulary they will not be handicapped in the slightest. Also comparable to Hudsucker, or more exactly comparable to the metamorphosis of Tim Robbins therein, is the loosening-up and warming-up of George Clooney into a flexible and a palatable actor, flourishing in the part of Ulysses (you see?) Everett McGill, fond of the four-dollar, as opposed to four letter, word ("bifurcated," "rusticated," "rancor," "paradigm"), and hypersensitive about his hair every waking moment ("My hair!" is the first thing from his lips when startled from sleep) — even to the point of borrowing John Turturro's hairnet from The Big Lebowski. And his grooming routine with a tin of pomade (it has to be Dapper Dan brand, not Fop), getting a sort of razor stropping motion going with his comb, is as educational as it is elegant. Turturro, as the second of the escapees, is of course an old reliable in a Coen movie. But the revelation in the cast is the writer-director (of Eye of God) and sometime bit player, Tim Blake Nelson, whose expressions of open-mouthed and cross-eyed stupidity, as the slowest of the trio, form the solidest thematic link to the Coen brothers' previous effort, Lebowski. In spite of the preponderance of the evidence (the Farrelly brothers, Adam Sandler, et al.), it is not necessary for a comedy about stupidity to be stupid itself. Not unless it is content to be unfunny and hypocritical in the bargain. The Coens have become the keenest observers of American bonbery since the departure — right around the time in which O Brother is set — of Ring Lardner. With John Goodman, Holly Hunter. 2000.

Planet of the Apes — The "unique personal vision" of Tim Burton comes down here to the burgeoning field of science-fiction graphics: a new illustrated edition of an old familiar classic. (Rather dark and murky illustrations, too, with a forest-primeval feel to deepen the timeless mythicality of it all.) Sure, the ape makeup, to say nothing of the beetly battle armor, is an improvement over the 1968 screen treatment, but so what? (Myth doesn't demand verisimilitude.) Mark Wahlberg, meanwhile, whose notion of heavy emoting consists of breathing through an open mouth, is the farthest thing from an improvement on Charlton Heston. (The latter, content these days to be a joke, has an unbilled cameo in a monkey mask, reprising the curtain lines of the original.) The moral sententiousness, even in the absence of Rod Serling on the screenwriting team, remains very much the same. As does the lameness of the humor: "Extremism in defense of apes is no vice," "Can't we all just get along?" and the like. More fundamentally, the entire concept of an evolutionary inversion — talking apes and caged humans — is too much a novelty to bear a remake, just as it couldn't bear four sequels. And the new and different surprise ending is apt to wring from the viewer a befuddled "Huh?" where the old one wrung an "Ah." Helena Bonham Carter, Tim Roth, Michael Clarke Duncan, Paul Giamatti, Estella Warren. 2001.

The Princess Bride — Rob Reiner, who's said to have been wanting to make a movie of the William Goldman novel for many more years than he'd actually been a moviemaker, is not at this point a good enough director to cover up for a not good enough idea; he's still tied too tightly to the TV sitcom sensibility (acquired no doubt in his years as an actor on All in the Family), all the way down to the clunking closeup of whoever happens to be talking at the moment. In fairness he does seem to keep on trying to do something a little different, only he is doing something less different here than he seems to think. The possibilities of the tongue-in-cheek swashbuckling adventure have been pretty thoroughly mapped out in such things as, coming forwards in time, The Great Race, Richard Lester's The Three (and Four) Musketeers, Richard Quine's The Princess of Zenda, Flash Gordon, and the Indiana Jones films. And the Errol Flynn–Douglas Fairbanks prototypes never had their tongues far from their cheeks in the first place. But forget all that now, if you possibly can, as you are guided again to The Shrieking Eels and The Cliffs of Insanity and The Fire Swamp, with its St. Bernard-sized rats, and The Pit of Despair and so on (only the names are different), to be regaled not so much by the actual spectacle of any of these sights as by the choking facetiousness of your tour-guide. This attitude of indulgent superiority is evidently supposed to coat the thing with a layer of "adultness." And for a second coat into the bargain, there is a present-day framing device wherein a horribly made-up and costumed grand-dad (Peter Falk) "reads" the story we are seeing to a precocious sitcom kid in his sickbed: a soft-sell pitch for literature (the television of yore) that had been done before, and better, in The Neverending Story. Winks and eye-rolls notwithstanding, however, The Princess Bride remains obstinately a movie for children. There is no harm in that. But there is not a lot else in it either. With Cary Elwes, Robin Wright, Mandy Patinkin, Chris Sarandon. 1987.

★ (KEN, 8/12 AND 13)

The Princess Diaries — Fairy-tale success story: from little nobody to big somebody, minus any desire or effort, more like a lottery prize. More exactly like an unexpected inheritance: the throne of Genovia (pear capital of Europe), by subterranean bloodline. What a surprise for a frizzy-haired, four-eyed, fifteen-year-old San Francisco art-misfit! The transformation of the Ugly Duckling ("If Brooke Shields married Groucho Marx, their child would have your eyebrows") falls a long way shy of a miracle, and nothing shy of a pitch for the beauty parlor. Even before she is defrizzed, defuzzed, and despectacled, the filmmakers have a hard time hiding the physical blessings of Anne Hathaway; and to pair her with Heather Matarazzo as best friends tends to raise her up rather than drag her down. Notwithstanding the trouperish contributions of Hector Elizondo (it's a Garry Marshall film, so there is perforce a part for Hector Elizondo) and a non-singing Julie Andrews (now in the Prof. Henry Higgins role instead of the Eliza Dolittle), this dish of milk-toast is for either very little girls or very old girls only. 2001.

Rush Hour 2 — Reviewed this issue. With Jackie Chan, Chris Tucker, John Lone, Roselyn Sanchez, and Zhang Ziyi; directed by Brett Ratner.

The Score — The score is excellent — the musical score, that is, by Howard Shore; bluesy, subdued, taut, anxious, ominous, nearly good enough to convince you that you are watching a legitimate suspense film — yet the movie on the whole is more con job than big-time caper. The bait, the hook, would be the big-time cast, Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Marlon Brando, Angela Bassett. Confidence builders, for sure. The second two, on closer inspection, can be summarily dismissed. Bassett is no more than The Girl, an untethered flight attendant who alights intermittently in the apartment of a Montreal jazz-club proprietor and out-of-town safecracker, but who for the duration of the movie stays mostly in flight. Brando, as a foppish fence dressed for the tropics, admittedly commands the well-worn accolade of Can't Take Your Eyes Off Him When He's On Screen, but that's because, primarily, he takes up so much of the screen even in long shot, and secondarily because of our morbid fascination in searching for the slithering sex object of One-Eyed Jacks inside the body of a whale. And in any case, he's not on screen for long. That leaves us, for most of the way, with De Niro and Norton, and a by-the-numbers heist plot whose main virtue is avoidance of excess. Comedy and fantasy director Frank Oz (In and Out, The Indian in the Cupboard, etc.) is concerned more to change his pace than to top his past efforts. 2001.

Sexy Beast — A misleading title, except perhaps in tone, for a British caper picture that perches on or near the same cutey edge as Guy Ritchie's Snatch and Lock, Stock, and Two Smoking Barrels. A gangster's gangster film. The big difference, however, between Jonathan Glazer's debut film and either of Ritchie's is — highly subjective criterion — that when it tries to be funny it actually succeeds. Not all the time. Not the heart-shaped smoke ring blown by the hero, a "definitely retired" denizen of the London underworld now living the life of Riley on the Costa del Sol, to his adored and worshipped wife, "Dirty Deedee," the former porn star. Not the Valentine-card image of them floating above the lights of the city in a horizontal embrace. But regularly. Judiciously. Ungreedily. The extended centerpiece of the movie, really the bulk of the movie, is the sharply written (when you can decipher the dialect) powwow between this contented sloth and the former confederate who means to coax him out of retirement and won't take no for an answer. More specifically, the centerpiece of the movie is Ben Kingsley. (Yes, there's eventually a caper, almost as an afterthought, and not the most watertight — we might say — of criminal schemes.) It's quite wonderful how we can tell before his arrival, just from the throat-clutching effect of the name "Don Logan" on its speakers and hearers, that we're in for something, without knowing what. It's even more wonderful how that something turns out to be so much more and different, than we ever could have guessed. Devilish in demeanor (sitting goatee and shaven dome), but bedevilled himself below the surface (witness the fragmented talk to the mirror as he works himself into a lather), a veritable ambassador of misery ("I won't let you be happy! Why should I?"), practically a force of nature and yet a precisely motivated and malevolent one, he is incongruously smaller than the man he terrorizes, a yapping terrier facing down a slobbering Saint Bernard, all flat and hard where the other is bloated and squishy, a prohibitive favorite in any stare-down contest, and so thoroughly awful as to be thoroughly amusing. Ray Winstone, Amanda Redman, Ian McShane, James Fox. 2001.

★★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA PALOMA, FROM 8/10)

Shrek — This computer-animated twist on the Beauty-and-Beast theme — the chivalric quest of a lonely, touchy, Scots-accented ogre and his volunteer sidekick, a wisecracking ass sans Sancho Panza, to rescue a martial-arts princess from a fire breathing dragon and a Machiavellian bridegroom — is relentlessly clever, relentlessly ironic, relentlessly hip, or just plain relentless. But when did abrasive and anachronistic smart-alecky become the accepted and dominant mode in film fantasy? Fantasy, like religion, requires at least a pretense of faith. DreamWorks might like to think they are tweaking the tradition of Disney's animated fairy tales (Snow White and Pinocchio, among others, put in cameo appearances), but in truth they're in lock step with Disney's Aladdin, Hercules, Beauty and the Beast, simply a few paces behind. With the voices of Mike Myers, Eddie Murphy, Cameron Diaz, and John Lithgow; co-directed by Andrew Adamson and Vicky Jenson. 2001.

Songcatcher — A prim, proper, prissy musicologist, pissed off at again getting passed over for promotion, flees to the Appalachians to visit her schoolmarm sister, and discovers in those mountains a hidden gold mine of folk music (this is in 1907) crying out to be documented. The music itself is agreeable and abundant (Iris DeMent singing from a front-porch rocker to a solo fiddle accompaniment is the peak), but the backwoods melodrama piles up to a laughable climax, and the coverage of it is oddly spotty (wouldn't you expect a reaction shot of the heroine if a barn-dance brawl breaks out at her feet? or if her work goes up in flames before her eyes?), and the women's issues — not just inequities in the workplace, but the Love That Dare Not Speak Its Name — are strictly rote. Janet McTeer, Aidan Quinn, Jane Adams, Pat Carroll, Emmy Rossum; written and directed by Maggie Greenwald. 2001.

★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Spy Kids — Cartoonish espionage caper, aimed at a younger age group than usual for Robert Rodriguez (From Dusk Till Dawn, Desperado, cameos themselves). Slick, sometimes eye-catching, but nothing to hold on to. With Antonio Banderas, Carla Gugino, Alexa Vega, Daryl Sabara, Alan Cumming. 2001.

Place your Reader roommate ad today and get responses tomorrow!

Call (619) 235-2415 day or night.

For just $20 per week, you receive:

- A 25-word printed ad in the Reader
- Use of a 24-hour voice mailbox service
- Placement on the Roommate Hotline

Pay with Visa, MasterCard, Discover, check or cash. The cost is $20. No matter which payment option you choose, you must first call (619) 235-2415 to place your ad.

Write your 25-word Roommate ad on the following worksheet and be ready to dictate it when requested. You will have one minute of recording time. Begin with the neighborhood, then describe the property and list the rent. After dictating 25 words for your printed ad, continue to further describe your available roommate situation. When you are finished recording, press 2.

Your print ad may not describe you or the person you are seeking.

The system dictates a mailbox number and security code.

MAILBOX NUMBER _____ SECURITY CODE _____

To retrieve your messages call (619) 235-2415. You may get responses on the Hotline before your ad is printed, so call frequently. Messages are erased after you hear them, so have pen and paper ready. Your mailbox will expire at midnight Wednesday, six days after publication.

The deadline for placing voice mail ads is Monday at 6 pm; however, print-only ads can be placed until Tuesday at 6 pm by calling (619) 235-8200. All voice mail ads will be placed on the Hotline within 24 hours. So call today! No cancellations accepted.

Renew your mailbox and ad if you don't need to make any changes in your ad copy or mailbox recording. Call (619) 235-2415 and choose the renewal option. You may renew your mailbox any time Thursday through 6 pm Monday.

Advertisers are responsible for checking their Roommate ads for accuracy and reporting errors by 6 pm Monday, following publication. Call (619) 235-8200.

I'm willing to trade a 1968 Ginsberg for a '71 Yevtushenko.

By John Brizzolara

"How do you think the players feel about tonight's grudge match against Long Beach, coach?"

"Well, John, as you know, we've got a good team this year, a good club. We just try to win one at a time, you know, and give it 110 percent. Long Beach is a good team, but we've been working hard this spring. It's early in the season, and we have Clemens back in the lineup. So, we're hopeful, John."

"I understand Clemens was sidelined for laryngitis. Will that be a problem in tonight's slam?"

"Not at all, John. He's 110 percent."

This imaginary interview with coach Rob't O'Sullivan, poetry slam master, San Diego Division, goes much better in reality, thank God. The poets from Long Beach are stuck in traffic this Friday night, and the crowd is a little restless, a little hyped on caffeine, no doubt. It's got to be close to 50, maybe 60 people huddled at tables and standing, spilling onto the patio and sidewalks at the Urban Grind on Park Boulevard. In a moment, O'Sullivan is going to have to go up to the mike and stall for time, yet again.

"Slam master doesn't mean I'm a master at slam," O'Sullivan says. "I'm the liaison between PSI [Poetry Slam Ink.] and the local community." A happily nervous, lean and mustachioed poet in his early 40s, O'Sullivan is the editor of The Driftwood Highway Anthology 2001, a local gem from Longboard to Tipperary Press here in San Diego. Why a gem? How about lines like this from Jennifer Geran on page 21:

"...your orange sponge cake skin
you are the surprise snack cake in my lunch box...
...these people were born with silver sporks in their mouths their wedding cakes are real estate transactions.
...dildos smell like Christmas morning baby dolls."

I may be no expert, but I think you have to react with a sincere "wow" to works like this. For example, my reaction to "little debbie" above was something like Oh, man. Hah hah. Whatever. Yeah, real estate wedding cakes, been there...and I remember what baby dolls smell like, so maybe it's true, that same vinyl polymer odor...oh my God! What's wrong with me? I'm sniffing marital aids!

But poetry off the printed page and back into public places, where it belongs, coming at you with a human larynx, is powerful stuff in the hands of performers with the combined skills of an actor in a one-man production, a brokenhearted street-corner jazz virtuoso, and a desperado stand-up comic spitting machine-gun bullets into the caffeinated night air.

"PSI," explains O'Sullivan, "certifies cities across the United States to make sure they meet all of the requirements to be an official PSI venue. We're the only one in San Diego. Two years now. I was on the team, and this year I'm the coach. Yeah, we take the sports analogy to its extreme." The coach gives me San Diego's lineup for tonight: "The legendary Chris Vannoy, Sally Vonn, Wayne Clemens, and we're not sure of the fourth, it may be me. Coach stepping in for a player." Tonight is the first Friday at the Urban Grind venue, and even with little publicity, the match has drawn a full house.

Onstage, O'Sullivan explains how teams are selected: the top 4 in performance points of the first 56 who "get their act together and pay the registration fee go on to compete at the regional and national levels. Last year, San Diego competed for the first time in West Coast regionals against 11 other cities. This year, we're going on to nationals. So, tonight, we'll have a pre-national slam poetry bout between two teams who are going to nationals — though we'll be seeing Long Beach up in Big Sur next week."

Poet Kimberly Dacres recites ("You are the breath on the backside of all my clever words..."), and then the judges are introduced: Marc Kockinos, who runs the Tuesday-night spoken-word show at Claire de Lune on University Avenue; and three others, Brady, Kelli, and Leilana.

The participants are to be judged on performance (eye contact, mike technique, etc.) and content as well as skill in bribing judges, according to O'Sullivan. Each judge will hold up a card with a number from 1 to 10 (decimal points, like 7.8, for example, are common), the highest and lowest scores are discounted, and the remaining three are added so the maximum score would be 30. Last year's coach, Lizzie Wann, is introduced, who in turn introduces "sacrifice poet" Jim Verano, who reads a poem dedicated to the Navajo elders arrested earlier in the week for doing a sun dance on $2 billion worth of coal in Arizona and ticking off the proprietary oil company.

Wayne Clemens

The face-off is underway. O'Sullivan pinch-poetizes for San Diego, and Mark Gonzales, Long Beach's second poet of the night, gets off a windy Latino lyric called, I think, "Conspiracy," defending slam poetry and even calling Shakespeare a slam poet. When one judge holds up a score less than satisfactory to a woman in the Long Beach camp, she screams out, "Idiot!"

Wayne Clemens starts out low, slow, mellow, and maybe shy. Everyone strains to hear. It is a poem about a musician, a jazz player, his father. For form following content, Clemens gets full marks. As the poem describes the music gaining momentum and volume, so does Clemens. Angular, staccato discords are described in edgy bursts and bonsai accents. A melodic solo is described, language abandoned to scat-singing improv, dovetailing back into the poetry in exact cadence. Clemens's poem has arced from whisper to shout, a prayer to a joyful noise; the jazz is poetry, the poem, jazz.

After Clemens's performance, Lizzie Wann announces in a this-just-in-folks voice that the Urban Grind at 3797 Park Boulevard has decided to host the slam every other Friday night. Long Beach edged out San Diego in points at the end of the evening, but it was a squeaker. I tried to get to Clemens, surrounded by fans and Channel 10 news cuties; I wanted to tell him I was with him 110 percent, but the players were mobbed. I may get a chance on Friday, August 17. Until then I'll make do with my slam poets trading cards. By the way, I'm willing to trade a 1968 Ginsberg for a '71 Yevtushenko. Any takers?

Cooking with Ben

I've watched cooking contests on TV. Some telegenic chef with a ponytail and neatly trimmed goatee faces off against an oversized European named Hans. While a giant clock ticks off the time, each chef prepares an elegant meal out of ingredients revealed only moments before the time started to run. A small army of assistants dices and slices and helps each chef pan sear and reduce and plate their entries. At the show's end, the host tastes the dishes, rolls his eyes in gustatory bliss, and declares a winner.

Big deal. Anyone could prepare a fabulous meal under those conditions. Lots of help. Perfectly fresh and pricey ingredients. An appreciative audience. If those chefs want a real challenge, they should come to my house at dinnertime. We could call the show Cooking with Ben. Each entrant would have to prepare a meal using only ground meat, cream of mushroom soup, noodles, hot dogs, Tater Tots, and cheese from which he had to scrape little patches of mold. During the preparation, the entrants would refill sippy cups, accompany a toddler to the bathroom, change a diaper, and make one member of the audience stop looking at another member. Throughout the entire process, a curious, active ten-month-old baby named Ben would rummage through the kitchen's cabinets and drawers for items that make a lot of noise when dropped on the floor or pounded. When the chefs finished their masterpieces, the audience members would pout, make yucky faces, and request "something else" to eat.

Wednesday night's episode of Cooking with Ben had a few added challenges. We're going on vacation at the end of this week. To get away from the office for two weeks, my husband Jack has been working extra hours. Jack normally goes to work a little before 6 a.m. and gets home around 4. I have another adult around the house during the cranky, low-blood-sugar hour before dinner. This week, Jack's been coming home closer to 6. The kids are antsy and excited about our impending trip. When they're not waxing ecstatic about all the fun they're going to have with their cousins, they're fighting over toys and torturing each other.

Wednesday afternoon around 5:00, my eight-year-old daughter Rebecca asked, "What's for dinner?" Rebecca had been playing Barbies in the family room with her sister Angela, who's six. Four-year-old Lucy and three-year-old Johnny played house in the living room. Ben snoozed in his crib upstairs.

"Spaghetti and meatballs," I told Rebecca.

Rebecca looked stricken, as though I'd just announced we'd be having arsenic for dinner. "But I hate spaghetti and meatballs," she whined. "Spaghetti makes me choke, and the last time I ate meatballs, I threw up."

"Sweetie, I know you hate spaghetti and meatballs. But the other kids like it. I'll make you a grilled-cheese sandwich if you want."

Rebecca looked hurt but placated. "All right. Can I have chips?"

"No."

Angela ran out into the living room. "Lucy, guess what?" she asked in great excitement. "We're having spaghetti and meatballs for dinner."

"Yeah!" Lucy shouted.

"Yeah!" Johnny echoed.

I looked around the corner from the kitchen to the living room. "Johnny, do you want spaghetti and meatballs, too?" I asked.

"No," Johnny answered. "I don't like that."

"What do you want?"

"I don't want anything."

"Ben's awake," Angela announced.

As I climbed the stairs, I could hear Ben crying. When I opened the door to his room, he held his arms up and looked at me with sleepy, mournful eyes.

"Hey, sweet man," I gathered him into my arms. "That was a good nap."

When I walked back downstairs, Angela asked, "When's Daddy going to be home?"

"Not until after dinner," I answered. "He has to work."

I set Ben on the family-room floor and handed him some blocks. "Be happy," I told him. "Mommy has to make dinner."

Ben threw down the blocks and crawled after me into the kitchen. While I filled a pot with water for the pasta and assembled the meatball ingredients, Ben opened the cabinet where I keep the pots and pans. BAM — Ben grabbed a metal cake pan and slammed it to the floor. I jumped. He looked up at me and smiled. While I mooshed the ground beef with Ritz cracker crumbs, a raw egg, some basil, and a half-cup of pasta sauce, Ben threw the pan to the ground three or four more times.

I finally lifted the pan off the floor. "That's enough," I told him.

He wailed.

"Here," I pointed him to the plastics drawer. "Play with these."

Ben pulled out every plastic cup, bowl, plate, and container I own and tossed each one on the floor. I threaded my way to the stove and popped the meatballs one by one into the skillet. When the meatballs started to brown, I picked Ben off the floor and popped him into his high chair. He ate Ritz crackers and some yogurt until the meatballs were cooked through. I scooped one out of the skillet, broke it apart with a fork, and blew on the steaming meat. When the meatball was cool, I set it on Ben's tray. He grabbed a handful of ground beef with his great paw of a hand and stuffed it into his mouth.

"Pretty yummy," I said.
