SAN DIEGO WEEKLY OCTOBER 23, 2003 VOLUME 32 / NUMBER 43 OCTOBER 23, 2003

Charles Steinberg has had a pretty good year. Until last week, the onetime Baltimore dentist and his lawyer pal Larry Lucchino were riding high on this season's storybook success of the Boston Red Sox, of which Lucchino is president and chief executive officer and Steinberg is executive vice president of public affairs. Before that, as most local sports fans no doubt remember, both men were affiliated with the San Diego Padres in similar roles. Indeed, the pair's Boston success has many of the earmarks of the Padres's trip to the World Series in 1998. Then in San Diego, as now in Boston, the baseball team was interested in taxpayer financing for a new venue. Long-suffering fans — desperately grateful for a winning season — seemed willing to give the wealthy baseball owners almost anything they asked for.

Wonderful Whistle

I just want to compliment you folks on that Alessio article in today's paper ("City Lights," October 16). Someone's got to blow the whistle on these dudes, and you folks did a wonderful job with that article.

Name Withheld

Mob

If John Alessio and family were part of the Mafia, you'd be dead now ("City Lights," October 16). So why don't you cut that out? If you did an exposé on the real Mob, there wouldn't be any more Reader. The problem is that you can't focus on the mob led by Korshak — if he's still alive — and that's running San Diego — you're afraid to deal with that mob. But what you do is you hit somebody that's already dead, who never belonged to the real outfit. That's pretty safe. But I'd like you to try exposing the real powers and see if you walk away alive.

Name Withheld

Missed Mast

In your article "Thunder Moon" you show a picture of a sailboat, underway (October 16). Now I may not be your typical reader, but the picture shows a singlemasted sailboat, while the article (last week and other times) speaks of a sailboat with two masts. A little more realistic picture would seem appropriate.

Arrogant

Jonathan Saville spent his entire review of Paata Burchuladze's recital (Classical Music, October 16) trashing the basso's voice, comparing it to others he prefers (e.g., Hvorostovsky's), and then admitted that he left before the second half of the program, devoted to excerpts from Boris Godunov, which is Burchuladze's specialty. I call that arrogant and unprofessional. Mr. Burchuladze may not be as practiced a recitalist as some, and his voice is much darker and less flexible than Hvorostovsky's, which is precisely why he chose to devote the second half of his program to Boris, a role Hvorostovsky to the best of my knowledge has never sung.

Mr. Saville was equally arrogant and unprofessional in an earlier review of one of the La Jolla Summerfest's concerts (October 2) when he dismissed a program of American songs by William Bolcom and Joan Morris. Bolcom and Morris have been presenting these programs for many years to great acclaim, and only a week after their performance in La Jolla the New York Times's lead reviewer, Anthony Tommasini, gave a rave review to a similar concert they gave there.

Mr. Saville may think he knows a lot, but he strikes me as a narrow-minded, self-important blowhard.

Chagrin

Patrick, I did detect a wee bit of sarcasm in the first paragraph of your most recent correspondence, the one which accompanied my letter of October 16. It was the best kind of sarcasm though, very humorous. How I wish that you were that funny in your column ("Sporting Box") every week. Alas, that extraordinary level may prove difficult to sustain.

My response. I always read your column all the way through. In fact, that particular day (September 4), I read it all the way through twice. Having noticed the impossibility of your scenario the first time, I was not sure if I could believe my eyes. Somewhat to my astonishment, the impossibility did not go away upon my second perusal. Oh, well. I enjoy fiction.

However, your latest offering did manage to clear things up a good deal, as it was written in a more explanatory and eloquent fashion. As it happened, it would appear to be a case of apples and oranges, um,

Fair and foul plays As the clock ticked down this summer on the final campaign for Gray Davis, the embattled California governor turned to some old friends from La Jolla for some lastminute financial support. Campaign-disclosure records show that Merjan Financial contributed $10,000 to Davis on August 22. Merjan is run by William Barkett, heir to a wealthy Stockton family with close ties to Davis and his former boss, exgovernor Jerry Brown, as well as to Brown's father, the late governor Pat Brown, and San Francisco mayor and former assembly speaker Willie Brown (unrelated to the other two Browns). On election day, October 7, 46 days after Merjan gave its money to his campaign, Davis appointed Barkett's wife Lisa Ann — Merjan's vice president — to the board of directors of the 22nd Agricultural Association, also known as the Del Mar Fair Board. Seats on the board have long been used as political plums and high-society stepping stones; plaintiff's lawyer Fred Schenk, brother of Davis chief of staff Lynn Schenk, was named to the board last December after he and members of his firm gave the governor at least $30,000 in campaign money. This year he kicked in another $10,000 to Davis's anti-recall committee. Though there's no salary, Del Mar Fair boardmembers get free admission to the annual San Diego County Fair, the Del Mar track and turf club, and hundreds of other ritzy events catering to Rancho Santa Fe's horsey set. To keep local newspaper and TV scribes compliant, each year the board throws a lavish open-bar media bash for favored reporters, complete with rock-and-roll bands and tables laden with catered gourmet fare. Besides her new position, Lisa Ann is also on the board of the Old Globe Theatre and the La Jolla Foundation. But Sacramento insiders are more interested in the role that Governor Davis may have played in her husband's legal dispute over settlement of a soured 1999 Central Valley deal involving Bill Barkett, his father Ioe, their Merian Financial, and Credit Suisse First Boston, which had lent Merjan millions of dollars to buy thousands of acres of farmland. After the venture failed, the bank accused him and his father of misappropriating millions for nonfarming purposes. Though Credit Suisse ultimately seized Merjan's 10,000 acres of land in foreclosure and the Barketts came away with a $10 million settlement for their trouble, farmworkers who had picked the crops were completely stiffed. As the transient workers waited in vain for the Davis-appointed labor commissioner to intervene on their behalf, another $550,000 of the settlement went to Byron Georgiou, a San Diego attorney who had once been legal-affairs secretary to Governor Jerry Brown, the Sacramento Bee reported. Over the years, the various Davis gubernatorial and anti-recall campaigns have collected at least $300,000 from the Barketts and related entities.

Sugar mom At least one San Diego spouse with ties to big money and political influence kicked in the maximum $21,200 to the campaign of governor-elect Arnold Schwarzenegger. Regina

Regina and Brent Wilkes

Wilkes of Poway is married to local GOP bigwig Brent Wilkes, proprietor of ADCS, a software outfit that has made millions of dollars on Pentagon contracts. Wilkes has close ties to Republican congressman Randy "Duke" Cunningham, who reportedly has helped ADCS land major federal deals. Wilkes and a long list of his employees bundled thousands of dollars to county supervisor and Arnold-backer Ron Roberts in his failed run for San Diego mayor. Meanwhile, Democratic assemblyman Juan Vargas, said to be interested in a congressional bid, gave $3200 of his campaign funds to the gubernatorial bid of Cruz Bustamante. Vargas, criticized by privacy rights advocates for using his position on the assembly's Banking and Finance Committee to raise money from the insurance industry — which is opposed to privacy legislation - accepted more than 30 $250 contributions from various State Farm agents ... Democratic assemblywoman Christine Kehoe, running for state senate, has picked up $1000 from La Jollan Norm Blachford, the wealthy Canadian inventor who played sugar daddy to Hillcrest's infamous Andrew Cunanan, whose 1997 killing spree included Miami Beach fashion mogul Gianni Versace.

Future file A close associate of indicted San Diego city councilman Ralph Inzunza is being quietly touted to run for the San Diego Unified school board seat now held by Ron Ottinger: Ben Hueso, a city employee who runs the Barrio Logan redevelopment project ... Yes, that was City Attorney Casey Gwinn and chamber of commerce honcho Jessie Knight out on the sidewalk in front of downtown's Wyndham Hotel in an animated discussion about the Chargers and their desire to have the taxpayers pay for a new stadium. They had just attended a party for Randa Trapp, a Sempra lawyer appointed Superior Court judge by

Bob Hope

Gray Davis ... Chargers owner Alex Spanos is listed as executor of Bob Hope's will. The aging comedian used to fly into Lindbergh on a vintage Lockheed business jet for every home game of the old Greek's football team ... Right-of-center ABC-TV commentator John Stossel is working on a piece said to be critical of unionized gardeners at the San Diego Unified School District. Interested parties note that John Spelich, PR honcho at ABC parent Walt Disney Co., used to be head flack for district superintendent Alan Bersin, who opposes the union.

Liars

By Don Bauder

In Gilbert and Sullivan's Yeomen of the Guard, the strolling jester, Jack Point, convinces the head jailer and assistant tormentor, Wilfred Shadbolt, to tell a fat fib about an escaped prisoner. Together, Jack and Wilfred sing:

> Tell a tale of cock and bull Of convincing detail full Tale tremendous Heaven defend us! What a tale of cock and bull!

Dick Murphy

The operetta debuted in 1888. Fast forward to San Diego 2003. Every day, in both the public and private sectors, a cock is being stroked and bull is being thrown.

Consider sewage. On September 6, Mayor Dick Murphy and councilmember Scott Peters, chairman of the clean-water task force, piously declared that the sewage-spill rate had dropped by 58 percent in three years. But they were boasting of the number of sewage spills, not the amount of effluent that had poured into the ocean. In the same three years, a whopping 38 million gallons of gunk had been discharged into San Diego Bay. In July, the Environmental Protection Agency filed suit against the city, charging that 42 million gallons of raw sewage has poured into the ocean since 1997, the year the city was ordered by the court to do something about the ancient sewer system. If the agency wins this year's suit, the city could pony up at least $41 million for violations and be ordered to spend hundreds of millions of dollars to comply with the 1997 terms.

In September, the city intended to sell $505 million worth of sewer revenue bonds. Verily, the word "bond" connotes truth, probity. In finance, a bond is a binding agreement, a solemn covenant. But, according to city government sources, Diann Shipione, the whistle-blowing member of the board of administration of the San Diego City Employees' Retirement System, sent e-mails in early September to the mayor, city attorney, city manager, city auditor, and city retirement system questioning whether the sewer bond prospectus had told the truth about the stability of the city's pension fund.

The offering was immediately withdrawn. Last week I called Shipione. She has never heard from any-

Best Bounces

By Geoff Bouvier

here must be some discrepancy. Word on the street has it that bouncers come big and dumb, like unnecessary monsters set on ruining our nights out.

"Bouncers only get those jobs because they're naturally violent bullies," said one club patron. "Who in their right mind wants to go around stuffing the next person up and chucking him down flights of stairs?"

Said another, "Most people enjoy getting along with each other and would hate to fight, but these animals are bred to fight, like mad pit bulls."

And another, "All bouncers have chips on their shoulders. They always reveal this image of 'Don't mess with me or else.'

And finally, "Bouncers think they have all that power, and the whole thing is going to their heads."

So I went venturing for these violent, unnecessary, pit bull-esque, shoulderchip-bearing bullies at the nightclubs and bars along the main strip on Garnet Avenue in Pacific Beach to catch them in the act.

At Moondoggies, a bald and muscled, nose-studded, dragon-tattooed door guy put me on the defensive immediately. But then he threw me with a ready smile and a personable chat...until his wife and two-year-old son toddled along, by which time I fancied I was meeting a gentle beast indeed.

At P.B. Bar & Grill, the door guys got almost as many visitors as the club itself. Seemed as if everybody knew their names. And by the time I reached Longboard's, ten blocks up, no one had menaced me, no one glared, and I had dug up precisely zero stories about war and strife and blood and

So what gives?

"It's a common misconception," said Paul Correia, who has worked the door at various P.B. clubs for over 11 years. "Everybody thinks we're these bad guys, but really we're just making a living." Paul sits on a stool outside P.B. Bar & Grill about five nights a week. He talks to me readily, has a friendly face and a big smile. And in the course of a half hour he is visited by me, an interviewing journalist; an air marshal he's known since P.B.'s last goth-club days; a huge and jolly fellow on a souped-up, Harley-ized beach-cruiser bicycle; two doormen from other clubs; a husband and wife; and various nondescript others, literally all of whose names he knows.

Correia's not a big fellow, not even close, but he is able to lower his ample eyebrows into a professionally honed glower at a moment's notice. He turns away a few people for various reasons — no secondary forms to back up the new military I.D.s, for instance — and he is cordial and explanatory with each unlucky patron. "It's more about people skills," he tells me, and from what I can see, he's right. One guy he turns away is absolutely massive, but Correia tells him, at length, the reasons he can't let him in.

"People wonder why I card folks who are obviously of age, like I just want to give them a hard time or something, but what if some 50year-old guy gets in who's already super-drunk? Then the bartenders can't serve him, and the truth is, he shouldn't have gotten in here in the first place."

The whole time he talks to me, he is giving I.D.s the once over with a flashlight, looking through them, sideways at them, around and around, an absolute scrutiny. He tells me later that most of the training for door guys involves the checking of I.D.s. There's even a test. Whenever he says "I.D.," his right index finger and thumb make a kind of C minus or half-boxshape, like some kind of universal hand signal.

"You know, that moment when I stop a guy and tell him, 'Excuse me, but I need to see your I.D.,' well, that's the moment when I can tell whether the guy's already drunk or something. I get to look him in the eye, have a few words, make him fumble for his wallet, you know."

Chris E. McGoey, author of Security: Adequate...or Not?, writes: "The duty of a bouncer is to monitor the crowd to see that everyone behaves. The goal should be to see that everyone has a good time but within established limits. The best bouncers are personable, friendly, and can talk to people without appearing threatening or intimidating. The best bouncers don't 'bounce' anyone...they talk to people. The mere presence of a well-trained bouncer will remind the patron that their conduct is being scrutinized."

So is it merely a common (drunken?) misconception that bouncers have the authority to pick someone up and physically remove him or her from the premises?

McGoey goes on, "Simply stated, bouncers cannot legally use force unless they are taking someone into custody or in self-defense. When force is used it must be reasonable. That means no tackling, no punching, no kicking, no choking, no head butts, and no pain-compliance holds. The authority of a bouncer or any other security person is the same as any ordinary citizen."

Up the road a ways, at Typhoon Saloon, security personnel wear ear devices for efficient communication. On a given night, there will be as many as 20 men working security for roughly 550 patrons. Incidentally, no bouncer calls himself a bouncers at the door are called "door guys," and the bouncers inside are 23 called "security." There were

"By such sleight of hand, the cost of the ballpark has shot up."

up."

"The bonds are like a Ponzi scheme. They keep borrowing more to make earlier payments," says attorney Michael Aguirre.

But this Ponzi will have to wait, too. The ballpark-refinancing bonds have not been sold, either. The truth is that as long as the city can't decide what to tell investors about the state of the pension system, it can't sell any bonds, because any prospectus would have to spell out the city's financial health.

You can't talk about San Diego's fiscal health without getting into the sorry saga of the Chargers. They say they will plunk down money to build a new stadium — if, of course, they get free land and infrastructure from the city. The team and city have been negotiating for months.

Councilmembers have honored their pledge of silence, but the Chargers have been trying to sell their proposals to any sucker who will listen. All along, City Attorney Casey Gwinn and Mayor Murphy have bent over backward (forward, actually) to accommodate anything the team pushed. But in the middle of this month, even Gwinn had had enough. He flayed the Chargers for yapping constantly.

It appeared that Gwinn had finally figured out how San Diego operates. A bit earlier, a purportedly new group called the Fans, Taxpayers and Business Alliance for NFL Football in San Diego, the San Diego Regional Chamber of Commerce, and the Labor Council of San Diego and Imperial Counties had come forward with a proposal to help the Chargers get a new stadium. Gwinn figured that the Chargers had choreographed the whole thing.

The chamber's and Chargers' official snake-oil salesman, Mark Fabiani, indignantly denied the charge. Yeah, sure. Back in December there was a silly proposal for a new Chargers stadium advanced by the San Diego International Sports Council — a group of well-heeled sports idolaters who get city handouts and then turn around and lobby the city for pro-sports subsidies. The chamber — which preaches separation of business and government but lobbies for every corporate-welfare scheme — enthusiastically

backed the goofy proposal.

CITY LIGHTS

Just who is this Fans, Taxpayers, and Business Alliance? Easy. It's barely distinguishable from the International Sports Council. It's made up of businesses and people who profit from the money that government gives to billionaire sportsteam owners. The corporate sponsors include vendors (Anheuser-Busch Sales of San Diego, Mesa Distributing, and Coca-Cola San Diego), media (Cox Communications and Channel 4, San Diego magazine), sports contractors (Barnhart Corp.), and others such as Donovan's Steak and Chop House and Sycuan casino.

Co-founder is Dan Shea, the big enchilada of Donovan's. He is on the board of the sports council. Douglas E. Barnhart of Barnhart Corp., which helped construct the Chargers' training facility as well as the Padres' ballpark, is secretary of the sports council. Anheuser-Busch Sales, Coca-Cola of San Diego, Mesa Distributing, Cox/Channel 4, San Diego magazine, and Sycuan have no fewer than eight representatives on the board of the sports council.

On its website, the alliance states that the city approved the 1997 upgrade of Qualcomm "as a temporary solution to attract the Super Bowl to San Diego again." Then it cites supposed problems with Qualcomm, such as poor concession areas and outdated media facilities.

"That is an outrageous distortion of reality," says Henderson. "The contract is absolutely silent about the Super Bowl. The Chargers, who had control over the design, agreed with the city that this was a state-of-theart facility that would serve the needs of San Diego through 2020."

"Actually, they said the renovations would get us many Super Bowls," says Aguirre. Councilmember Donna Frye adds that the corporate-welfare queens pushing for the stadium "aren't elected to represent the people."

In truth, I suspected all along that the Chargers, in collusion with business leaders, secretly planned to lobby for a new stadium quickly. But the public was completely deceived.

The alliance believes that ballpark architects may have made the statement, but couldn't definitively pinpoint it.

Oh, yes. In the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, liar Jack Point ends up prostrate and despondent. But that was in 1888. In England. ■ two distinct reactions from every bouncer I called a "bouncer": most of the bigger fellows seemed to enjoy the connotations, and most of the smaller guys took some form of mild offense. Just about every club I visited had both kinds, some big bouncers and some smaller — I don't know security enforcers.

An anonymous security enforcer at Typhoon explained to me why they have 'the hottest girls in P.B." at their club. "We don't like to promote an atmosphere of aggression. I mean, most of the security here isn't big muscleheads or anything. We like to deal with people as people, and we want the ladies to feel safe. So if a girl comes to us and tells us that some guy was touching her or making her feel uncomfortable, then we assign security to watch the guy and make sure he doesn't do it again."

And if he does?

"Then we usually don't touch anybody here. We can throw a guy out without touching him. It's pretty great. We get on the headphones and have as much security present as possible. And then we just kind of surround the guy and let him know that he's not welcome.

Most guys will just leave if they aren't allowed to drink or talk to anyone and if they have to try to fight, like, six or seven guys."

Correia, back at P.B. Bar & Grill, tells a similar tale. "I can't even remember the last time I saw a security guy throw a punch or do something where I thought, 'Whoa, you shouldn't be treating the guy that way.' You know, things have changed a lot in the last few years, ever since they started cracking down on public drunkenness and public fighting. Our bosses make it clear how much or how little force we're able to use. And now that we're in the age of the lawsuit, it seems like pretty much everyone complies."

CITY LIGHTS

He knows. He's done the job since the early '90s. After a night of interviews, I found that most bouncers are into their jobs for the long term. I found 14 of them who've worked security at various clubs for five years or more. For many, it's a second profession, a job they can work sporadically and at night. And quite a few of them have families at home to look

I wonder where the reality is between the bouncer's humanity and the bouncer's image, the way they are and the way we treat them and feel treated by them.

For a few mediating words about the subject and some grand advice from the wise, I click on www.askmen.com. "Although bouncers are just like everyone else, when you are waiting in line to get into a club, they are literally your ticket in. Do not, and I repeat, do not act cocky and arrogant. None of that, 'Hey man, come on, can't you do better than that?' or 'Buddy, just let us in.' Not only will you not get into the club, you will never be able to show your face in line again. And don't try to act cooler than the bouncer. Respect him and establish a rapport with him by being friendly. And if that doesn't work, then slip him a Benjamin." ■

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

MATTHEW ALIC

I could be out somewhere becoming politically active, helping ol' ladies across the street, or at least at home folding towels. But that ain't gonna happen. Here's my question. If I set up my folding chair at the traffic signal and endlessly push the "walk" button, snarling traffic during rush hour while nobody crosses, can I be cited for breaking any law in this fine city?

- Small-time anarchist with time on my hands in P.B.

Anarchist in a lawn chair, eh? Sounds like P.B. Or a great title for my next novel. Make sure when you do this you're at an intersection where the walk button actually makes the light change faster. Sometimes all it does is make the walk light stay on longer in your invisible pedestrian's favor. Sometimes it doesn't do anything except activate the walk/don't-walk sign when it's time to cross. And if you do this at rush hour, the light might then be timed to favor car traffic rather than pedestrian traffic, no matter what you do. And forget the idea of whapping the button repeatedly. That just releases your pent-up frustration. After the first whap, the machine ignores you. Which is to say, you probably won't get the gridlock effect you're hoping for. A cop might not be too interested, though I'm sure he or she could come up with an obstructing-traffic charge if you gave them any lip. More likely is a confrontation with one of the drivers. Better be an ejection seat in that lawn chair.

Mattski:

My impeccably mannered girlfriend from the Far East has one flaw, and it's a doozy: a matterof-fact throat-clearing operation that punishes like a stealth fighter hitting a cheap window. My nerves being that cheap window. It starts off under the radar and ends like a good sucker punch. A guttural crescendo accompanied by a stream of bilge reminiscent of Linda Blair. She deposits her phlegm, more or less, in the direction of any available trash can. I betray no hint of disgust. I'm stone, lest she gauge the depth of my horror. Though I did once ask her if she had ever served as a non-com in the Marines. By the way, this woman is elegant, educated, demure, serene, and lovely. I want to introduce her to my mother. What if this habit is just the tip of the iceberg? Grasping for straws here...

— H.B. Uridichi, downtown

Yikes! The lives you people lead...sometimes we're in awe back here at the Chuck E. Cheese Center for Deep Cover Investigations and Big Thinking. If the loogie queen was raised in China, Taiwan, or almost any other Far East location except Japan, she came to you with her spit rules already well established. Until recently, elaborate nose- and throat-clearing followed by freerange spitting has been no big deal in many Asian countries. It's a quick, practical way to deal with the gunk rather than carrying it around wrapped in tissue the way we do. (Don't even try to tell me that there haven't been times when all you really wanted to do was spit a big hocker that you dredged up from somewhere, just to be rid of it...unless you're the type who likes to poke around and examine it, looking for something scary, or at least interesting.) Why, even the French thought it was okay for men to pee in the street until a few decades ago. It's said that the air pollution in many Asian cities is what makes folks there so phlegmish.

Anyway, the SARS epidemic has at least changed the official attitude toward spitting. Nospitting laws are now in effect, especially in China. Maybe this is your ice-breaker with the magnificent mucus maiden. "Oh, by the way, my peach blossom, I read in the paper today that as a public-health measure, it's now illegal to spit in China! In U.S. cities, spitting has been illegal not to mention bad, very bad etiquette, for at least a century. How interesting that such an ancient and venerable country should only now realize what an unsanitary, low-class, revolting habit it is. So, my elegant swan, my ruby pomegranate in autumn, if you launch one more loogie, I will drop you like a piece of flaming jade. Please accept this gift of Kleenex as a token of my

Well, that's just my suggestion. Once she's advised of this cultural difference between East and West, she will likely comply.

Re: Our answer about how a big, fat garden spider bungee-jumps on a thread of silk ("ballooning") to connect a tree to some lower structure. Frequent spider-watcher Al Collins offers this amendment. "The amount of wind necessary to carry one of the larger species would be very strong. What they do is even simpler. From his perch, the spider lets out a single strand of silk, which is carried by the wind. When he feels it hit something and stick, he reels in the excess, making it taut, then climbs down the strand to continue building the web." Al's actually seen this happen. We can't argue.

Vic Conte. The Man and His Music.

When I interview professional athletes, I always ask about steroids. Active players say they don't know anyone who uses steroids. Retired players won't name names but say doping is an epidemic.

Put your money on "epidemic." Despite wellknown and documented physical hazards, athletes won't, or - more precisely, human nature being what it is - can't stop using performance-enhancing chemicals. The very best athletes, competing in just about any sport you'd care to name, are making one-million-plus dollars a year. If a 20-year-old millionaire can acquire an enormous edge, particularly when he sees others who are competing for his mega-buck job already using that enormous edge, he will.

What we have now, in all popular sports, are not-quite-human records. One assumes that the most this, the fastest that, are records set by humans who inject artificial chemicals into their bodies. It's gotten so bad that all sports records — the historical connection between one generation and the next are in doubt.

Saying that, I must also admit that the current system of gross neglect seems to be working quite well for all concerned. Athletes make big money, professional leagues and teams prosper, fans don't appear to care if, say, a baseball player, who averaged 28 home runs a year for 15 years, suddenly hits 75 home runs at the age of 36.

But, that may change. Indeed, hard times lie straight ahead for the industrial-sports complex.

On September 3, personages carrying guns and badges, employed by the Internal Revenue Service, San Mateo County Narcotics Task Force, United States Food and Drug Administration, and the United States Anti-Doping Agency, raided Bay Area Laboratories Co-operative (BALCO), a Burlingame, California, sports-nutritional supplement company.

BALCO is the mutant creature of one Victor Conte Jr. For the present moment I'll stick to basics. An athlete sends Vic a sample of his urine or blood. Vic examines the particulars and then provides custom-made nutritional supplements, by the gross ton, to athlete/customer. Athlete/customer now has his motor humming at perfect pitch, goes out, and runs the 100-yard dash in 8.33.

It's a beautiful world. Thanks to Vic.

But, what's going to make Vic's upcoming criminal case a Court TV ratings champ — and introduce the American public to steroids and how widespread their use is - will be the public disclosure of Conte's customer index. Yum. Yum.

Subpoenaed to appear before a federal grand jury in San Francisco are, according to Conte, at least 40 athletes, including seven NFL players and as many from Major League Baseball. Heading the list is Barry Bonds, followed by Greg Anderson. Anderson is a personal trainer in the service of Mr. Bonds. Anderson, by the way, had his home searched; indeed, had his front door knocked in by eager investigators. Then, there is Tim Montgomery, world-record holder in the 100 meters; shot-putter Kevin Toth; world champion sprinter Kelli White; Yankees first-base person Jason Giambi; Oakland Raiders linebacker Bill Romanowski, for openers.

We're talking blue-chip, cash cow, top-ofthe-batting-order athletic superstars, and we are only beginning. The subpoena list is said to contain over 100 names of well-known amateur and professional athletes and growing. Baseball and track and field are notorious for doping. This could be the case that finally breaks it open.

Authorities are looking into Conte violating money-laundering, tax evasion (receiving obscene amounts of cash from athletes who would rather not leave a paper trail of credit card receipts or checks documenting their transactions), Medicare fraud, and anything else having to do with state borders and illegally crossing thereof.

Briefly, Conte/BALCO was ratted out by an unnamed track-and-field coach who phoned the United States Anti-Doping Agency in Colorado Springs and said something like, "Vic has a steroid that can't be detected," and then overnighted a syringe filled with the undetectable steroid to the government anti-dopers.

 $Of course, once \, handed \, the \, evidence \, and \, told \,$ where it came from, government experts set to studying and mapping the substance and indeed, in due time, announced to the press that through their skill and — may I say it — diligence, they were in position to confirm that the substance in question was a new steroid, and yes, it had been undetectable. A few athletic stars were retested and, unhappily, tested positive.

The suspicion is that Conte was working a racket, devising a steroid that would not be detected by standard tests, and then selling the potion for vast sums of money to athletes who wanted to cheat in order to continue collecting many millions of dollars per year.

Business was good.

Finally, in the interests of completeness, I should tell you that Victor was once known as Walkin' Fish. He played bass guitar in the '80s band Tower of Power before moving on to another band, and portent of events to come, The Pure Food and Drug Act. I always liked Tower of Power.

Chassidic Jews have always caused a stir. When their Eastern European movement gained steam in the early 18th Century, academic rabbis who stressed emotional sobriety and rigorous Talmud study dominated Judaism. But the common Jew was too poor and too oppressed to spend all day learning Talmud. Chassidic rabbis, or rebbes, were populists. They taught that the common Jew could experience God through prayer, meditation, song, and dance. They stressed the mystical over the rational. They attracted hundreds of thousands of passionate disciples. They drove the academic rabbis crazy.

Out of many dozen, only a handful of chassidic groups survived WWII. Most lost their zeal for mysticism. Most became suspicious of outsiders. The Lubavitchers survived with their zest intact. In the late 1960s, the Lubavitcher rebbe Menachem Schneerson told his followers that their purpose was to acquaint assimilated Jews with Judaism. The Lubavitch organization Chabad, based in Crown Heights, Brooklyn, sent out almost 4000 emissaries throughout the world. They established schools, synagogues, learning centers. By the early 1980s, there were two Chabad synagogues in San Diego. Now there are six. San Diego Chabad's brand-new school sits on 27 acres off Pomerado Road and instructs 350 students.

However, the Lubavitchers' Yiddish-inflected Brooklyn accents, their public enthusiasm for Judaism, and their devotion to Rabbi Schneerson embarrassed Jews who wanted Judaism to project a tidy modern image. The mainstream orthodox had never trusted chassidism in the first place. But Chabad's detractors couldn't deny that Lubavitchers cared for Jews whom most synagogues ignored. Confused Jews. Lower-middle-class and poor Jews. Students. Immigrants. Drug addicts. Broken-hearted Jews.

In 1994 Rabbi Schneerson died without appointing a successor. Chabad's detractors wondered if Chabad might disappear. Their spirits lifted when word got around that some Lubavitchers in Crown Heights had started to claim that Rabbi Schneerson would rise from the dead and proclaim himself the Messiah. (In Christian terms, this would be something akin to a group of Roman Catholics deciding after Pope John Paul II's death that he would return as the Messiah.) Late last month, the New York Times magazine ran a long article on Chabad's schism.

I've been interested in how big religious issues trickled down to local congregations. Last week I called Rabbi Yisroel Goldstein at Chabad of Rancho Bernardo and asked what position his synagogue took on the Schneerson/Messiah issue.

"We take no position," he said. "It's a matter of personal belief. We're not here to dictate what an individual believes. We're not here for that. We're here to bring Jews closer to Judaism."

A perusal of Chabad of Rancho Bernardo's website seemed to agree. The site offers a page on Rabbi Schneerson that discusses him in flattering terms, but nowhere suggests that he's the Messiah. Digging further, I called a gentleman who's been familiar with local Chabad for 20 years. He told me, "I've always joked that what we've got in San Diego is 'Reform Chabad.' Sure, the Chabad rabbis here love their rebbe, but they've never been fanatical about him. They don't, for example, have the rebbe's picture plastered all over their synagogues."

The gentleman had a point. Last Saturday evening I visited Chabad of Rancho Bernardo. I didn't find a picture of Rabbi Schneerson anywhere. I did see 70 or so sweaty children. Last Saturday evening was the beginning of Simchas Torah, a holiday that celebrates the completion of the liturgical reading of the Torah. Simchas Torah also celebrates the physical Torah, the parchment scroll. On Simchas Torah, the scroll is marched seven times around the bimah, or platform on which it's traditionally read.

Rabbi Goldstein's pre-parade sermon was brief.

"On Simchas Torah, God commands Jews to sing and dance in joy before His Torah. The Torah was God's greatest gift to the Jewish people. The singing and dancing you do here tonight will energize you. This joy that you feel is spiritual energy that will empower through the ups and downs of the upcoming year."

During the lengthy Torah parade, adults and children tossed ten pounds of candy from the bimah. Rabbi Goldstein "empowered" the adults with what he called the "bar mitzvah," a cart laden with whiskey, rum, vodka, and beer. Persian Jews, Israelis, and Holocaust survivors embraced Torah scrolls and danced around the bimah. Everyone was casually dressed. I watched a middle-aged woman in slacks, T-shirt, and tennis shoes weep while she watched the kids dance by.

I worked the messiah-angle on several people. I came up dry. I kept pressing the issue with a fellow who'd been involved with Rabbi Goldstein's synagogue since it's inception in 1986.
"Look," he said. "This place is a supermarket. You've got every kind of Jew. For most of the people here, this synagogue is their connection to Judaism. They don't pay attention to what goes on in Crown Heights. They're not interested in that debate. My family got involved here because we bought a house two blocks away. I wasn't a religious Jew. It's the spirit of the place that attracted me. Nothing else.'

Last Saturday night's service started at 6:30 p.m. When I left at 9:45 p.m., Rabbi Goldstein was still dancing with a Torah in his arms.

Dear Aunt Trudy,

I had some complicated digestive problems over the last year and a half. I ended up having to see a lot of medical specialists, and it took them a while to figure out what was wrong. I won't go into detail about it all — I'm much better now, thank goodness. During the time I was sick I lost some weight. Now that I've recovered I really want and need to stick to the somewhat limited but very healthy diet my doctors have recommended. This means that the weight I lost has stayed off and probably will stay off permanently, as I can't have alcohol, desserts, fried food, dairy, etc., anymore. That's fine with me. I'm just grateful to be well and I want to stay that way. My doctors and I all feel I am at a good, healthy weight now, actually a healthier weight than I was before I got sick (I used to be kind of pudgy). My problem is that so many people I know slightly (my close friends know the whole story of what I've been through) seem to feel called upon to make comments like, "How did you get so skinny? You should eat more. You're too thin. You look like you need a milkshake. Do you have anorexia?" Trudy, I am tired of hearing this stuff. I am not emaciated. I just slimmed way down for the first time in my life. I do not know how to respond to these people who demand an explanation or seem disapproving of my weight loss. (You'd think they'd congratulate me!) And I don't feel I must go into a whole long explanation of my illness just to satisfy their curiosity. What can I briefly say to these nosy Parkers that isn't rude but will get them to drop the subject for good?

LINDA VISTA SLIM

Dear Slim,

I'm glad to hear you're well again. I think if you remain patient and good-humored with the inquisitive souls who make the rather thoughtless comments you quoted, you can quickly and efficiently redirect conversations to subjects other than your weight. Many people have huge "issues" about their own poundage, whether they are obese or not. It's a loaded, emotional subject for lots of us, and I think some people may be projecting their own worries and fears about their weight on you. They may even be a little jealous of your new syelteness. You could smile pleasantly and tell questioners that you've been ill, and you don't wish to go into the gory details but that you're better now, thanks, and feeling very fit and raring to go and ready to take a big juicy bite out of life. Then you can ask them, calmly, looking them straight in the eye, "And how are YOU doing?" Or you can say, "I've never felt better and I'm doing quite well, thank you. Let's chat about something more interesting than my dress size. What's going on with you?" In other words, politely shift the focus to interest in and concern for them, after having nicely let them know you do not intend to hold a symposium on your figure or your digestion.

Dear Aunt Trudy,

Some weeks ago you printed a letter from a person who was having a devil of a time with noisy neighbors. About a week later another reader wrote in suggesting that the people who were trying to insulate themselves from all the racket their neighbors were making purchase an air-cleaning machine. The logic was that the sound the machine makes, a steady whoosh or hum, might provide a kind of soothing white noise (as well as cleaning the air inside their home) that would buffer the neighbors' loudness. Since I have a similar problem I was wondering: would air-cleaning machines be better for these purposes than a conventional air conditioner?

WEARING EAR PLUGS IN NORMAL HEIGHTS

Dear Wearing Ear Plugs,

Maybe the best thing to do under the circumstances is to shop around. Visit some large department or appliance stores where they sell a variety of brands of both these kinds of machines, and actually listen to them. See which one produces congenial white noise that will most effectively help blot out the aural mayhem in your neighborhood. Bear in mind that in winter you will probably not want to run an air conditioner, whereas an air cleaner could conceivably be run all year round without chilling the occupants of your house. Also bear in mind that use of these machines will increase your electric bills. Many air conditioners are designed to be quiet, so the salespeople vou deal with will probably be amused that you are actually looking for one that produces an audible shoooosh.

-EVE KELLY

l call my husband's morning breath "dragonfly breath." Dragon because the breath has a hot, deathly odor, and fly because it seems to fly across our bed and up my nostrils each morning. He kids me that my breath doesn't smell like roses either. We both need a freshening up in the morning but we differ on mouthwashes. Patrick favors the burning sensation of alcohol-based mouthwashes, while I don't appreciate the pain. We decided to settle the argument with our own home study.

Patrick and I decided to each try a different mouthwash each morning and then to smell each other's breath. What a way to start the day.

The first few days, we tried the Wal-Mart Equate brand mouthwashes. They were the best bargains, costing $.88 for a 16.9ounce bottle, $1.47 for a liter, and $1.77 for a 1.5-liter bottle. The Equate Peppermint Mouthwash and Gargle left the breath smelling pleasant though the mouth felt less than clean afterward. The Equate Blue Mint Mouth Rinse bottle warned, "This package for households without young children." I appreciated the headsup on the easy screw-off top but Patrick's breakfast aromas coffee and peanuts — remained even after two rinses. The Equate Spring Mint Mouth Rinse tasted sickly sweet, and the golden-colored Equate Mouth Rinse tasted like paint thinner, though Tom's of Maine Natural Alcohol-Free Mouthwash, spearmint flavor, was our next guinea pig ($3.19 for 16 ounces at Target). Patrick and I appreciated the natural approach but were disappointed with the results. "I don't like it when you gargle and it starts bubbling out of your mouth and spilling everywhere, smarted Patrick, wiping excess mouthwash from his chin. "And your mouth still has memories from the night's sleep," he smiled as I breathed on him.

Dazzling Fresh Mouthwash by Rembrandt (at Target for $3.50 for a 32-ounce bottle with attached sample of Rembrandt Complete toothpaste) was a clear-colored mouthwash but packaged in a cobalt blue bottle. It also was alcohol-free. "I think these alcoholfree mouthwashes have a universal problem of foaming up when you gargle," moaned Patrick.

"Plus your mouth still smells like rotten flesh," I jested.

Arm & Hammer Advance Breath Care Icy Fresh Mint touted "3 Hour Power To Keep Breath Fresher Longer" ($3.69 for 24 ounces at Target). The most pleasant smell of the mouthwashes, but Patrick and I disagreed on the results. Though I found it refreshing, Patrick walked away gagging on the mint flavor. "It is almost too thick," he grimaced, "The tingling makes me feel like it is actually doing something."

"like cough syrup."

Scope Mouthwash Original Mint ($2.97 for 16.9 ounces at Wal-Mart) sparked an argument. "Too much bubbling for me," said Patrick.

"I think this has a great taste, with a soft tingling in the mouth, leaving you with 'the confidence to get closer' "I joked, reading off the label.

We moved on to the other Scope flavors: Scope Cool Peppermint and Scope Smooth Mint (both costing $3.94 for a liter bottle plus a bonus 8.4-ounce bottle at Target). Curiously, they both foamed up less than the Original Mint flavor. The Smooth Mint flavor tasted the best of the three, with a light minty flavor, and little bubbling with gargling.

The next morning, we rolled out of bed to Biotene Mouthwash with Calcium ($4.89 for 16 ounces at Target). Patrick went gagging to the sink to spit the stuff out before the recommended 30-second swish and came up panting. "This tastes like toxic waste. I need to rinse the taste out of my mouth," he muttered. I decided the painful taste was not worth starting the day with and I placed it with the loser bottles.

We were beginning to think we would never find a mouthwash we could agree on until we tried Listermint Alcohol-Free Mouthwash ($3.57 for 32 ounces at Wal-Mart). "Though it is missing the tingling feeling," commented Patrick, "it still leaves the mouth very clean and smelling refreshingly minty. And it doesn't bubble over when I gargle." We stashed that bottle in our bathroom cabinet.

The next morning, we found another winner, this time with DenTek Breath Remedy Mouth Rinse ($5.99 for 20 ounces at Target). "It leaves a clean feeling rather than a minty flavor," touted Patrick. We set DenTek Breath Remedy aside as one of the winners.

Cepacol Antibacterial Mouthwash with Ceepryn ($3.67 for 32 ounces at Wal-Mart) came with a Sore Throat Spray. It claimed to be the number-one brand in hospitals. "This is the worst bubbling one of them all," said Patrick. "My mouth feels very clean, but the taste is horrible," he added. Since it did work wonders on the dragonfly morning breath, we set it aside as a keeper as well. Hygiene can be painful.

Our last morning of testing, we tried the Listerines: Cool Mint, Fresh Burst, and the yellow-colored Listerine that mysteriously lacks a catchy name. The Cool Mint Listerine ($2.58 for 8.5 ounces at Wal-Mart) won the best-flavor award for both of us, but I could not stomach the excessive tingling in "The Listerines are my favorite of all that we have tested," remarked Patrick.

In disbelief, I asked him why. "I like them for the same reason that I like alcoholbased aftershave. The tingling makes me feel like it is actually doing something," he replied.

To keep the man happy, I stashed the Cool Mint Listerine in the cabinet next to my favorite, Listermint.

Dear Archie: I'm still wondering why KPRI tried to start rumors of John Lennon's appearance at the Yoko Ono concert last month. — L.H., San Diego

The folks at KPRI say that it was Lennon's hype. Lennon had sent word to the station that he was going to be at San Diego Stadium and even had them meet his flight with a limousine and security guards. KPRI's Mike Harrison says that ten minutes before they were about to pick him up at Lindbergh Field, Lennon called from New York and said he could not make it.

On this hot morning in May, as I load up my old battered red backpack at the Inaja Memorial Picnic Ground and prepare to head off into the brush, there's a cowboy sitting in his jeep a few yards away, watching me in his rearview mirror and trying not to laugh. He's slouching there, his hat cocked back, one boot posed nonchalantly on the dash, and squinting defiantly into the morning sun as it rises up over the Cuyamacas to the east. Anybody, he's thinking, who'd go out there is a damn fool.

When you think of him — if you think of him at all — you see the gray-haired poet in snow-crusted boots, the man whose work your grandmother or aged parents admire. You might remember snippets of verse you were forced to memorize in school — something about picking apples, or about stopping in an icy forest, or something vaguely about the moral elegance of New England. It's his surname, however, that truly sets the stage for any memory of the man — Frost. A surname as literal and direct as only a noun can be. Frost. Plain and simple. No nonsense. With a name like that, no one would ever ask, "Wasn't he the one who used to walk around with a lobster on a leash?"

This may have been a concert of music by gay and lesbian composers (which is all its title claimed), but it was not a concert of gay and lesbian music. There is no such thing — just as there is no such thing as a gay or lesbian rose garden, a gay or lesbian pasta alle vongole, a gay or lesbian joy, or a gay or lesbian grief. [Nicholas] Reveles performed a superb concert of human music — that's all one can legitimately say.

When the Chargers went to the Super Bowl in 1995, Mayor Susan Golding grabbed a free seat to Miami on the plane of owner Alex Spanos. Later, when a reporter started asking questions, then—city manager Jack McGrory asked Spanos to bill taxpayers for a $1000 first-class fare. This Monday, Golding returned from the World Series in New York, accompanied by Padres bigwigs on a chartered jet. The mayor's office was mum on how she paid for the junket.

THE COPS NEVER SHOWED

by Josh Board

aking up early on weekends is something I refuse to do. I eat my breakfast at lunchtime. And that wasn't going to change because I had some friends going to Oktoberfest in Ocean Beach.

I got there at 3:00 p.m., found parking half an hour later, and paid my $5 to get in. I didn't mind that, but the beers for $5 each got costly (note to self: don't ride the "Zipper" after three beers and lots of strudel).

It was great watching the band Deadline Friday, but the tent they played inside was stuffy and smelled funky. Even though I wanted to see bands like Psydecar, Tea Leaf Green, Rockola, and d'fRost, I couldn't stand the scene. I ended up leaving after an hour.

Local singer José Sinatra was talking to a few people, and I overheard a guy say, "That freak thinks he's Rod Stewart or something."

The real party was over in Hillcrest. Nicole Braa was throwing a surprise party for her boyfriend Reno. The thing I've found with surprise parties is that the guest of honor usually finds out. Or, when they walk in, they piss their pants when everyone screams "Surprise!" in the dark. But he

Nicole said, "The decorations took about five hours to do. I'm happy with the way they turned out." She had decorations and lights all over the front yard. Some colorful cloth said, "This is the pirates' den. We have parties here all the time. The family on our right side, they're young and sometimes come to our parties. On the other side, they sometimes complain about the noise. The

I'm surprised that when the band playing the party (the Biddy Bums) stops at 11:00, it is even noisier, with everyone carrying on outside. But the cops never showed up.

When the Biddy Bums got done, somebody asked where the drummer was. The singer said, "He got appendicitis. We're going to do a benefit for him soon. This was our acoustic

I brought a couple of sixpacks to the party, but they didn't need it. There wasn't a shortage of booze. After I drank a few beers and a margarita, I made the mistake of taking part in the toasts they had for Reno. (Why is it drunk people always want to toast people?) They poured me shots of Don Julio teguila. After the seventh toast. I was toasted. The room was spinning, and I went to the porch.

The three guys out there wanted to talk movies. They debated the best movies of all time. "How can you say The Hustler was better than Cool Hand Luke?" Another brought up A Clockwork Orange and One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest. I was hoping, when I commented on movies, I didn't sound like one of the crazy guys from that movie. I was surprised that I could actually have a decent conversation when everything around me was spinning.

Nicole came running outside, telling everybody they had to come back in and dance, since the Biddy Bums were going to do another song. They all went inside, and I talked to a cute Chinese girl who said she works for a party rental company. I asked if she helped set this party up, and she said, "No, but I've helped them with parties before. We have a lot of stuff like canopies, which they didn't need. When the Super Bowl was here, we did the party in Balboa Park for lady has cancer and is always going through treatments. But they tell us if the noise stops by 11:00, it's not a problem. And once the police come out, it's shut down. The cops have a new rule where, if they come out once, your party is shut down. No more warnings."

There are five people living in the three-bedroom house, and one of the ladies

Playboy. They asked me if I wanted to be an edible model. They asked all our female employees. I declined."

"What does that entail?" I asked.

"I would have had to lay on a table naked. And I would be covered in food, and people would eat it off of me."

Speaking of food, I grabbed a taco. Lots of Mexican food was set up in the living room, right in front of the band. I glanced at a girl on the couch who lit up a cigarette. Her boyfriend came in and started yelling at her. He said, "Who the hell smokes inside another person's house? Get outside with that thing! Are you crazy?"

I don't think the people living here would've cared. A pipe with pot was passed around in the kitchen for a while and nobody complained. Half of the crowd seemed to smoke cigarettes outside, and that's why it was so loud in the front yard. And with blankets and pillows set up out there, it looked like a mini-Woodstock.

There was an interesting mix of people here. A few gays and lesbians. A few who looked like frat guys. A few blacks, an Indian guy, some Latinos, and the cutest, quietest Japanese girl in a conservative pink dress.

One girl walked into the party with a shaved head. I overheard two guys talking about how hot she was, and one said, "She would be ten times prettier with hair. It's like Sinéad O'Connor or Annie Lennox. Why do chicks do that?" His friend said, "Maybe she's not trying to impress guys like us, but women."

Mariam one of the ladies who lives here, was bitching that the ice trays in the freezer were empty. It was funny watching people constantly checking them, yet nobody was filling them up (note to self: remind my roommate to

I called Mariam by the name Jennifer most of the night, because she was wearing a Disneyland shirt that said "Jennifer." She finally told me, "I only got this because it was a dollar at the thrift store. I didn't care that it wasn't my name."

I hear two blonde guys in the front yard talking about being Irish, and one said, "I was drunk hours before I got to this party." But it really didn't look as if anyone was drunk or wasted. Although I saw a lot of stuff consumed, people weren't loud and obnoxious. Everyone was polite and had interesting things to say. And there were interesting things to look at on the walls: An old Miles Davis poster. Some paintings done by one of the ladies of the house. A poster that said "Mary Carey for Governor" (she was the porn star in the race).

The guy in the kitchen who had the pipe was talking to me about pot smoking. He looked like Flea from the Red Hot Chili Peppers and said the usual things about how hemp is used in all kinds of things, like rope and clothing. And that alcohol is a lot worse, and he doesn't drink. After 20 minutes of this, we were told we had to leave the kitchen. One of the roommates went to bed and her room was closest to the kitchen. I went back out to the porch to talk movies and sober up before driving home.

Someone made the mistake of saying he'd never seen The Never Ending Story, and one guy who was a bit tipsy explained every single scene in it. That was enough for me. I drove home at 3:00 a.m. ■

SIGNIFICANT VIOLATION

RIGHT? YOU
TO FACE IT."

arren Ruis, a senior at Helix High School at the time of this interview, planned to go to UCSD this fall. He enjoys surfing and also maintains a part-time job.

Have you ever caught any of your friends in a lie? "Yes. I have caught several friends in lies, most recently when a friend of mine told me that someone said something they really had not said; it's mostly gossip."

Has any kind of dishonesty ever broken up a friendship? "Yes. I have a friend I no longer speak with because of dishonesty."

What's the silliest reason for which someone lied? "A family member of mine lies, saying he studies at the library when he is really talking with friends...I mean, who really cares?"

Why do you think people make up lies for unimportant reasons? "Well, in psychology we learned that people lie to overcome personal insecurities, and I think that is totally true. If someone feels they lack in a certain area, I am confident that they will lie to boost their image in another area or sector of life...we all do it, but some of us do it to a further extent than others."

Warren Ruis

Do you know anyone who's been caught forging their parents' signatures? "I do not know anyone who has gotten caught.... I have done it for classmates, but I've never been caught."

Do you know anyone who's been caught stealing? "My friends are not thieves, so I do not have anyone close to me that has been in this situation."

Do you think it's okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings? "When I did not want to go out with a certain individual, I told this person I had other plans when I really didn't; I think that is a win-win although it's a dishonest situation. I don't have to spend time with this pile of obnoxiousness, and that person does not think I just don't want to hang out with them."

Can you remember the last time you told a lie? "I told a lie two evenings ago, for the situation I mentioned above: not wanting to hang out with this individual."

Recall a lie that you got caught telling. "I had a pair of ski goggles, and I knew they were mine, although my brother claimed the goggles were his. I was determined to find a way to make them mine. So, I went in my room with a permanent marker and wrote my name on them to prove once and for all that the goggles were mine. As my mom is not wet behind the ears, she simply took her thumb across my name on the strap of the goggles and rubbed off my name. Needless to say, the embarrassment was plenty and my brother ended up with the goggles that to this day I still think are mine!"

Have you ever told a lie and confessed to protect your conscience? "I cannot recall a situation of this nature."

Has someone else's dishonesty ever inspired you to be honest? "When a close family member of mine lies about how much he/she paid for something, I am encouraged all the time to be honest about my own finances; it is just easier."

What else inspires you to be honest? "When I see someone have the snowball effect of being caught in a lie...it makes telling the truth all the more easier."

How often is the lesson of honesty reinforced at school, at home, or among your friends? "Well, I think the reinforcement of honesty comes through seeing situations where lying gets people into trouble...."

How old were you when you realized that all adults aren't honest? "When Bill Clinton got elected."

What's the most dishonest thing you've ever seen an adult do? "When children are lied to, that hits home the most — I cannot tell you how much that hurts to see...."

rian Lew is a senior at Junípero Serra High School. He likes watching football and basketball and spends most of his time either working or chatting online with his friends. Brian said he'd be attending UC-Irvine this fall to be a structural engineering major; he plans to become an architect.

Have you ever caught any of your friends in a lie? "Yes. Actually, it was this year. A guy I know had told everyone about how he had sex with a girl a few weeks prior. When we asked him what day it was, he told us a day in which he spent with us. He shut up after that, and he can't be trusted again."

Brian Lew Has any kind of dishonesty ever broken up a friendship? "So far, with my friends, there has not been anyone that has been so dishonest enough to break a friendship. However, if someone was always dishonest, it would cause me to stop being friends with them."

What's the silliest reason for which someone lied? "Having been kissed before."

Why do you think people make up lies for unimportant reasons? "Habit, or maybe they feel that people will only like them if they act a certain way...."

Do you know anyone who's been caught forging their parents' signatures? "Yes. They've gotten caught for forging things such as progress reports, dance agreements, etc. They were scared to show the parents the slip."

Do you know anyone who's been caught stealing? "I know people who have stolen, but none of them have been caught."

Do you think it's okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings? "No. I think you should be straightforward with people. If something is going on and that person should know the truth — but you know they will be hurt — you should tell them anyways."

Can you remember the last time you told a lie? "The last time I lied was about a week ago to my parents. I told them I was going to a friend's house to study, but I went bowling instead."

Recall a lie that you got caught telling. "When I was in the third grade, I was playing in the house when I accidentally bumped into a table and broke a vase. I told my parents that the wind blew it over. My mom knew I did it, so I eventually admitted it. Since I admitted it, I got off with a lecture."

Have you ever told a lie and confessed to protect your conscience? "Yes. When I was really young, I had broken a plate. When [my mom] found out, I told her it was my brother, since he wasn't home. But I felt guilty, so I told her I did it."

Has someone else's dishonesty ever inspired you to be honest? "Yes. I really hate when people are dishonest with me, when they blatantly lie to my face. So when I sense them lying to me, that just makes me feel so bad when I'm not truly honest with people."

What else inspires you to be honest? "My pride and honor. I despise people who lie. Lying is unnecessary, especially towards your friends. I don't see how people can have pride in themselves when they have to lie all the time."

How often is the lesson of honesty reinforced at school, at home, or among your friends?"Not often. At school, honesty is expected but almost never reinforced. Sometimes, in class, we grade each others' test with the idea that it is under the honor system. But nobody cares, so they cheat and change answers."

How old were you when you realized that all adults aren't honest? "When I was nine or ten years old."

What's the most dishonest thing you've ever seen an adult do? "I have seen many things, but one thing that sticks out is when a man who worked for my dad claimed injury at work when he hardly does anything. He claimed that he was hit by a hand truck and said he suffered from seizures and was not able to lift anything heavy even though it wasn't true. He's still on Workers' [Compensation] after two years." Prancis Parker High School grad now attending UCSD, plans to become a premed student. group.

Have you ever caught any of your friends in a lie? "Yup, a while ago. It was probably better if my friend didn't lie, but my friend got through it okay. No one really got hurt; it was one of those misunderstanding kind of messes." Has any kind of dishonesty ever broken up a friendship? "I've never had it happen to me, but some of my friends tell me how one lie broke up a friendship..."

What's the silliest reason for which someone lied?

Do you know anyone who's been caught forging their parents' signatures? "Nope."

stole to return the thing. I don't really think my friend learned their lesson, though. And they were never caught by the authorities."

Do you think it's okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings?"Sure, I think it's okay, but you can never know the consequences of a lie; you just have to hope for the best."

Can you remember the last time you told a lie? "I can't remember, but most likely it was a lie to my friends on the line of 'What's up?' and I say, 'Not much' when something is actually up, I just don't want to talk about it."

Recall a lie that you got caught telling. "Can't remember how old I was, hopefully pretty young...12? 13? I sent [an e-mail] message that I said I didn't send, and I guess I didn't really get caught; I just felt really bad, so I told the truth. My friends would have found out eventually. Anyway, I got in enough trouble, but I learned from my mistake."

Has someone else's dishonesty ever inspired you to be honest?"Yeah, of course, all the time. You see someone lie about how they want something when they really want something else, and you just think, That's just not cool, I don't want to be that way."

What else inspires you to be honest? "You have to hold up your own integrity. Maybe some people feel comfortable to lie; I really don't feel comfortable when I lie. The truth hurts sometimes, right? You just got to have the strength

How often is the lesson of honesty reinforced at school, at home, or among your friends?"School: [teachers] always tell us not to cheat on tests. Home: parents always saying, 'You shouldn't lie.' Friends: not so much, but I seem to blurt out at times to my friends, 'You shouldn't lie.' "

How old were you when you realized that all adults aren't honest? "I can't remember exactly when or how old I was; it's got to be when I realized the world wasn't perfect."

What's the most dishonest thing you've ever seen an adult do?"Make a totally blatant lie; not only was it stupid, but extremely dishonest."

A graduate of Junípero Serra High School, she was set to be a freshman at UCSD's Revelle College at the time of this interview. Nguyen intends to major in social sciences and eventually work in a psychological clinic.

Have you ever caught any of your friends in a lie? "Plenty of times, and most of the time, they would lie about the silliest and [most] unimportant things. I would just play along as if it's true, just to save them the embarrassment."

Has any kind of dishonesty ever broken up a friendship?"Dishonesty has never broken up any type of relationship I've had, but sometimes serious lies start to pull friends apart."

What's the silliest reason for which someone lied? "It usually is about materialistic stuff that most of my friends and I don't really care about. It's so stupid and easy for me to figure out that it actually is a lie."

Why do you think people make up lies for unimportant reasons? "Sometimes I think people just lie to fit in and to feel as if they have something to share with others.... People lie to feel more appreciated and appealing."

Do you know anyone who's been caught forging their parents' signatures? "Forging signatures isn't as bad as I thought. I've seen many people do it; most get away with it, but some do get caught. Their parents get notified, and although the consequences vary, overall, forging a school-dance agreement is much different from forging government documents. I don't know anybody who's done

Do you know anyone who's been caught stealing? "Yes. They steal things that they think are unreasonably overpriced. Stuff like clothes, makeup, jewelry are the most common items. They got in lots of trouble. Their parents were notified, and they had it put on their permanent record."

Do you think it is okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings? "Yes, but it really depends on the seriousness of the matter..."

Can vou remember the last time you told a lie?"Yes, to my parents, about going away for a few days."

Recall a lie that you got caught telling. "When I was younger, my parents wouldn't let me hang out with certain people, but I still did anyway and lied about hanging out with [other] friends that they liked. I told them I was at someone else's house and they called! I was obviously not there, and when I got home, I was grounded. I wasn't able to go out at all, and to add to that, they guarded me even more closely."

Have you ever told a lie and confessed to protect your conscience? "Yes. I always end up feeling guilty if I know I've done something wrong. I can't even take a piece of candy without feeling bad. Stealing and lying are the worst; I just couldn't live with myself."

Has someone else's dishonesty ever inspired you to be honest? "Yes, because it made me realize that I would hate to be the person who was being lied to."

What else inspires you to be honest? "Not lying makes me feel better as a person and just thinking of how it inspires me to not be scared to say what I think."

How often is the lesson of honesty reinforced at school, at home, or among your friends? "Telling the truth I think is common among most families because many times parents always stress being truthful.... Honesty is reinforced daily [at school]; whether it be taking a test or doing homework assignments, we are all expected to do each task without cheating. With friends, competition among them draws too many lies instead of honesty."

How old were you when you realized that all adults aren't honest? "Teenage years...probably when I hit middle school."

What's the most dishonest thing you've ever seen an adult do? "Cheating on someone's significant other. I think it's the worst, because a relationship like that requires so much trust and intimacy; it is a significant violation, misusing someone's good faith in you like that."

Has any kind of dishonesty ever broken up a friendship?"No. My friends are pretty trustworthy; that's probably why they are my friends. I am very good at forgiving people for their mistakes, because everyone makes them."

What's the silliest reason for which someone lied? "I think the silliest reason I have noticed is when people lie about test scores such as the SATs. One girl I knew said she got a really high score and went on and on about it. Later on I found out she never even took them."

Why do you think people make up lies for unimportant reasons? "I think people make up lies for unimportant reasons because they have low selfesteem, and they feel they need to lie about everything in order to be accepted by people."

Do you know anyone who's been caught forging their parents' signatures?"I know a lot of people that do forge their parents' signature, but I don't recall one of them getting caught."

Do you know anyone who's been caught stealing? "Yes; it was recently, too. There is a store in the town I live in that carries a bunch of gifts, pajamas, and cute women's underwear. Well, four kids from my school went in there and stole a bunch of underwear. The woman working there is a grandmother to a girl at my school, and she called her son and he hunted them down in town and scolded them for stealing. Later that day they returned [the underwear] to the store because they felt bad."

Do you think it's okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings?" I think that there are some times that it's okay to lie to avoid hurting someone's feelings. For example, if your pregnant wife is down on herself because she is gaining a lot of weight and she asks you what you think, you shouldn't tell her the truth and say she is getting fat."

Can you remember the last time you told a lie?"No, I can't recall."

Have you ever told a lie and confessed to protect your conscience? "Yes. A few years ago I lied to my parents about where I was going. I said I was going to my friend's house, but in reality I was going to some party that I shouldn't have been at.

I told them a day later, because I felt bad for lying, and they respected me for telling the truth."

Has someone else's dishonesty ever inspired you to be honest? "Yes, I knew this girl that lied about everything. It could be the tiniest thing and she would lie about it. Everyone knew that she lied all the time, and they didn't trust her because of it. Ever since then I have strived to tell

What else inspires you to be honest?" Just knowing that I am being myself when I am honest and that I actually mean what I am saying. I think people respect that...at least I do."

How often is the lesson of honesty reinforced at school, at home, or among your friends? "Not as much as it should be. My parents have always taught me to tell the truth, but I do not see it in schools often. Friends seem to be really honest with each other because they trust one another. I think honesty really has to do with trust; trust in others and yourself."

How old were you when you realized that all adults aren't honest? "Probably ten; I think that is the age you start seeing the world through different eves."

What's the most dishonest thing you've ever seen an adult do? "I've seen parents lie about their kids, when their kids do something wrong. They don't make the kids gain responsibility by facing their consequences but lie to save them. When in actuality it was their fault and they should have to deal with fic tie-ups on game days. And he argued that outgoing mayor Susan Golding and her staff had underestimated the financial burden on taxpayers. "They know there is not going to be adequate revenues from hotel taxes," he told a

But after that November's election, Murphy abruptly changed his tune. In his January 2001 State of the City speech, the mayor proclaimed his unconditional support for the project and vowed he would do everything in his power to finish it by 2003. He was off by only a year. But why did Murphy turn from a selfdescribed healthy disbeliever of the Moores ballpark to its biggest proponent? The mayor himself said he was just honoring the will of the city's electorate, citing the 60 perview. They believed that Lucchino and Steinberg had somehow managed to infiltrate Murphy's operation, cajoling and bullying the mayor and his staff into doing their bidding, and obtaining public information regarding the city's ballpark-negotiating position for their own benefit. Exhibit A, according to the critics, was Elena Cristiano, the mayor's strikingly attractive 36year-old press secretary.

She was born Elana Marie Myers. As she later would explain to a reporter, she "informally" changed it to Elena Cristiano because "I was adopted, and my adoptive father was extremely abusive, and I didn't want his name anymore. I didn't want my ex-husband's name anymore for the same reasons."

Murphy's office told questioners that Cristiano had been a newswriter at KNSD-TV and a public relations woman, but that was just a small part of her story. A dropout from UC Santa Barbara, Cristiano had started her career in San Diego as a waitress at Seau's Restaurant in Mission Valley and later had gone to work in 1997 as a member of the "Pad Squad," a cheerleading

City Hall's Mystery Lady

THE E-MAILS OF ELENA CRISTIANO

In San Diego, that ultimately meant abandoning Qualcomm Stadium and anteing up more than $300 million of taxpayer money for a new downtown baseball park. In Boston, the team's plans to abandon or radically remodel venerable Fenway Park remain thinly veiled, pending conclusion of the current season. "We have a vision for what Fenway should, and, I believe, can be," Lucchino cryptically proclaimed last August. "What we don't know is whether we can get there from here." Added Red Sox owner John Henry: "Someday, maybe after I'm gone, there needs to be a new ballpark. The question is: 'When?' We're trying to push that date back as far as possible."

That was more or less the same line offered by Lucchino and Steinberg to San Diego back in 1995, as they planted palm trees around the Qualcomm outfield and put up new fish-taco stands. They called the team the "new Padres" and played down the need for a new ballpark until the time was ripe. The same technique is today on display at Fenway, where Lucchino has just opened a new bank of seats atop the left field fence (called the "Green Monster") and inaugurated a sprawling new food mall beyond the right-field bleachers called "The Big Concourse."

Concourse and announced, "It's better than a new ballpark. We have all the history at Fenway. Why do we need a new ballpark?" But when pressed by reporters to tell whether he would lend his support to a major taxpayer-backed ballpark expansion of the kind hinted at by Lucchino, Mayor Menino tersely acknowledged, "We would look at it."

Murphy, too, was an early skeptic of Lucchino's plans. During the mayoral primary campaign in the spring of 2000, he questioned whether the location of the new stadium would create monumental traf-

Others who worked for the city took a darker organization sponsored by the San Diego Padres. Later she would go to work for the Stoorza PR firm, handling the Padres' campaign for the new ballpark.

During her initial interview for the Pad Squad, Cristiano said, the divorced mother of two met Charles Steinberg, then the Padres' publicity chief, and they quickly became friends. Not lovers, she stressed, just close friends. Steinberg agreed they did not have a "romantic" relationship. His role, he said, "was more to teach her that good things happen when you surround yourself with good people."

They were close enough, both acknowledged during separate interviews, that during her time as the mayor's press secretary they frequently exchanged gifts, including dental care in Baltimore for her children. They also purchased a Poway condominium together for $130,000. "Charles owns the condominium, but I'm on the deed because he used my money as a down payment, and he basically came into the situation to help me keep the property when I was renting it and the landlord was selling it." She said that she had never reported her ownership of the condo on the city's required conflict-of-interest forms because someone in the city attorney's office had told her she didn't have to.

Much of this occurred during sensitive

negotiations between the Padres and Murphy's office regarding the details of city financing of the new ballpark, but Cristiano denied that she ever allowed her relationship with Steinberg to interfere with the confidential work of the mayor's office. "In fact, Charles always used to tease people and say, 'I can't get anything out of her," Cristiano related in an interview last year.

"Not that he really tried, but it was definitely a situation where we were extremely careful that we were very professional, and I would never disclose anything to him that I learned within the confines of city hall that would not be appropriate public information. I was just really careful with that because I knew it was sensitive."

Cristiano's last major appearance as press secretary occurred in January 2002, during a joint news conference in support of the ballpark held by Murphy and his erstwhile mayoral rival, county supervisor Ron Roberts.

On February 19, the day after ground was broken for the downtown ballpark, the mayor issued a three-sentence news release headlined "Mayor Murphy Makes Staff Changes." It went on to say that Murphy "today announced that Colleen Rudy has been appointed Press Secretary in place of Elena Cristiano, who has been appointed Director of Communications." After that, Cristiano dropped out of sight.

Weeks later, the city confirmed she had left the mayor's employ but would say nothing more.

During the ensuing months, rumors of Cristiano's volatile personality made their way through city hall. Court records showed that during her 20s she had been twice convicted of shoplifting at department stores in Ventura and Santa Barbara Counties. While working as a broadcast newswriter, according to court records, she had also gotten into an altercation with a La Jolla Shores lifeguard after she allegedly questioned the size of the man's penis during his attempts to persuade her to keep her dog off the beach. She subsequently pled guilty to a misdemeanor in that case. During a March 2002 interview, Cristiano acknowledged the shoplifting incidents and having had other rough spots in her life, which she attributed predominantly to a series of bad relationships with abusive men, beginning with her adoptive father.

During the same interview, Cristiano said that she and mayoral chief of staff John Kern had various unspecified "issues" between them that contributed to her departure. Kern and other mayoral staffers did not return repeated phone calls seeking information about her status. Cristiano maintained that the mayor still had confidence in her and vowed that she would keep her $65,000a-year job, a sentiment seconded by Steinberg during a telephone interview that same month from his new office at Fenway Park. But Cristiano never returned to her desk, and city officials said she was no longer collecting her pay.

This summer, court files show that Cristiano legally changed her last name and the last names of her two sons to Cristiano. Superior Court Judge Lisa Foster, wife of San Diego school superintendent Alan Bersin, made the change final on August 8. Cristiano, who filed a confidential application for waiver of court fees, said in an affidavit that she desired to make the changes because she had "been using Cristiano for 10-plus years, do not want abusive adoptive father's name (Myers) or abusive exhusband's name (Price)." Cristiano did not respond to requests for comment left at her home.

In an attempt to answer some of the lingering questions caused by the unusual circumstances of her departure, in the summer of 2002 the Reader made a request to the city under the California Public Records Act for copies of Cristiano's official e-mail files and certain telephone records covering the last several months of her tenure with Murphy. The mayor's office denied the request, and the newspaper subsequently sued to gain access to the material. When Superior Court judge William Nevitt sided with the city, the paper appealed to the Fourth District Appellate Court, which earlier this summer overturned Nevitt's decision and ordered the city to produce the bulk of the requested material. Below are presented excerpts from those records.

If you want to talk, give me a call.I do know one thing, Pam took the first blow and you were merely retaliating. I would have done the same thing. I think she had wayyyy too much to drink and lost control. I think she resents you for taking her baby boy away. Believe me, I know all about that. I had to go through the same thing when I married Paul. These mother-in-laws, whether you're married or not, need to get a grip. Hang in there girl, you don't have it easy being in your position.

From: Mike Gotch To: Elena Cristiano Subject: Re: For shame Message: The state does not move at the pace of local government. You could be covered in cobwebs if you stay in one place near the phone. All I can tell you is you are being considered for PIO for BTH agency. Pretty high brow stuff. The wine was for us to drink now. Since I don't recommend you drink before an interview, or even before sundown, you may be off the hook. Unless you hang around to see the sights. Regardless, Oliver's office is around the corner from mine, so do stop by and say hi. Good luck.

Message: Details: The weekend of March 1st. One firefighter and a guest (chosen by lottery held on February 5th). Two-day visit. This is a travel and tourism promotion by the U.S. Conference of Mayors. We would need to ask ConVis to set up free lodging, passes to Seaworld, the Zoo and the Wild Animal Park, and I can't imagine they'd say no. The Mayor would just need to attend a brief welcoming ceremony with Chief Osby, Reindt Reinders, and maybe Sathoff. I'd like to stage it at Fire Station One right [around] the

don't call... I hate being ignored. Hope things are going well.

Some stunning news here at NBC 7/39. It ain't good news either. They've decided to cancel the hourlong newscast at 4 p.m. It basically means Deb and I are out of an anchoring job... and in the worst case scenario (which unfortunately is not far fetched), our contracts are up in a few months, we could be out of a job. How do you like that. Success on weekends, get promoted, then get dumped. amazing.

jeez I'm right around the corner! Artie

February 6, 2002; 10:53 a.m. From: Cynthia Lewis To: ALL STAFF Subject: Scheduled Events for the Mayor Message: John asked me to send an e-mail to everyone regarding our commitments when scheduling events for the Mayor. If we commit to a stop-by or a quick in and out — that's what it is and there is NO SPEAK-ING involved. If it's a photo-op, it's a picture with NO SPEAKING involved.

We're saying "Yes" to things because they fit well and will not create stress within his schedule, then suddenly event or his level of participation changes and we're not aware of it until the night before the event. Not a good thing!

John stated that if we have to start getting these commitments in writing, we will. I think if you follow the times listed on the printed calendars you receive each Monday morning when preparing your advances and make sure that the role the Mayor's agreed to is exactly what happens, we'll not have to do it in writing. If you have any questions, please see John.

To: Elena Cristiano cc: Colleen Rudy; Cynthia Lewis; Dennis Gibson; Paola Avila; Rachel Shira Subject: Visit of New York Firefighters Message: Just to be clear on this visit, our role is strictly to welcome them here.

From what you have told me, the visit is sponsored by the U.S. Conference of Mayors, we have agreed to welcome them, and CONVIS, through Sal, who has agreed to provide for them while they are here. We want, ASAP, a schedule from the U.S. Conference of Mayors, and info from Sal on who is doing what for them. If they are flying in at a time when the Mayor can't meet them, then suggest they may want to change their flight.

As far as the Mayor is concerned, I had always envisioned a late Friday afternoon event. If Friday does not work out, we might want to consider asking Chief Osby to have some sort of welcome breakfast or lunch with him on Saturday if the Mayor agrees. Attachment: "Padres outfielder Mike Darr Killed in Crash "PHOENIX (AP), -San Diego Padres outfielder Mike Darr was killed and a minor league pitcher was injured early Friday when the vehicle they were riding in rolled over on an interstate highway. Darr, 25, was San Diego's opening-day center fielder in 2001, his first full big league season. He moved into the starting lineup after Ruben Rivera was released in spring training but eventually gave way to Mark Kotsay, who was obtained from Florida just before opening day.

Ben Howard, a 23year-old pitcher who played for San Diego's Class-A and Double-A affiliates last season, was treated at the scene and released, Arizona Department of Public Safety spokesman Frank Valenzuela said. The team said he sustained scrapes and bruises.

"We who work in baseball so often enjoy living in our own world, apart from the realities of life," Padres general manager Kevin Towers said in a statement. "Tragedies such as this burst the bubble and remind us how vulnerable we are and how precious life is."

February 19, 2002; 2:40 p.m. From: Elena Cristiano To: Robert Nelson Subject: e-mail to John Message: I am sorry that our telephone conversation ended so abruptly. I am extremely proud of my loyalty to the Mayor and his office.

I asked you repeatedly yesterday whether having my role be completely out of press was the Mayor's directive. I am assuming that your decision to send the release out this morning, in spite of my request to change the language, indicates that it was. I reiterate that my understanding was the Mayor wanted me to handle long-range communications strategy, including media. Regardless, I am very excited about the opportunity to write speeches for the Mayor.

A director of communications oversees external communications, including website, speeches, press and memos. I have a proven track record with getting the media where the Mayor wants them. The one advisory written and approved by you and Colleen in my absence had errors, both spelling and in content, and I strongly feel would not have been effective had I not changed it. Ask other Council offices and staff and they'll recount calling me a miracle worker. I take exception to any suggestion that I performed substandard work as the press secretary.

Finally, it is clear from our conversation vesterday that you believe the Mayor is blind to my faults. John, you are blind to my talents, skills and dedication. You said that I am an "ok" writer. I am an excellent writer - in all likelihood the best that you have. I respectfully suggest that you [find] a writing test and administer it to the staff. You will be unpleasantly surprised I'm sure. As chief of staff, you should want us all to do our best for the Mayor, yet every success of mine is treated with disdain. That is personal. I am terribly sorry that for some reason unknown to me you so deeply dislike me. I plan to continue to do the very best I can for the mayor in spite of your unfair treatment of me.

I truly hope that we can work towards a relationship of mutual respect, for the better of the Mayor and his wonderful staff. Elena

I have already handed over press duties to Colleen. She talked to me about parking spaces and offices. I understand the

Secondly, you say that you are "unclear about how much of this is at the Mayor's directive." So let me make it clear that John and I speak for the Mayor so there is no need to question his direction. If you had questions about the changes I told you about, then why did you not ask me? Also, it is not appropriate to give direction to Sara Cavataio. You are not her supervisor, I am. You did this on another occasion when you asked Cynthia Lewis to stop over scheduling the Mayor. This was also inappropriate conduct as again [you] are not her supervisor.

And lastly, we will clarify your role and job duties, and I ask for your cooperation and patience as it may take some time and "trial runs." However, the change of offices is irrelevant to the definition of your role. Colleen is the press secretary and should be in that office.

As far as your other questions, I'll be available this afternoon by phone, or we can communicate by email, whichever you prefer. I've laid out three options that I think might work.

1. I would love to prove myself in the traditional capacity of director of communications: overseeing the office's external communications; being involved in proactive media strategy; speechwriting: developing a comprehensive history of your term as Mayor including photos and videos and month or quarter-in-review articles; and creating a regular schedule of one-onone get to know the Mayor video interviews to be aired on the website.

2. To minimize contact with John Kern for the time being, I could devote my efforts mainly to speechwriting. I feel this would best be done working primarily from home, attending staff, scheduling, and strategy meetings, as well as events where you give significant speeches or there are potential video or photo opportunities.

3. I am willing to take a paid leave of absence with plans to revisit the issue when my emotional and physical health is better in a few weeks.

Of course, I am open to whatever other suggestions you might have. I intend to keep serving the Mayor in the best way I can under the cir-

Lock and Load

The vigilante force sails on Thunder Moon...and they have Walters in sight, along with two-faced Emilio Paz. The motley crew — York, Dick, Gus, and Moanna — are almost close enough to smell their prey. Finally, York can exact retribution on the man who, just a year ago, tried to kill him (and succeeded with countless others). Thanks to Mo and her boat, he could even the score; thanks to Dick's gun stash, he'd have a calling card; and thanks to Gus's mixed loyalties — one minute he was Emilio's button man, next he was York's bodyguard — York had the backup he was usually without. It would be easy to kill Walters, but Paz had once been York's friend and protector. That would be more difficult...difficult, not impossible.

CHAPTER 17

We had sailed north past the islands and had come about on a SSW course some two or three miles off Coronado Del Norte. Mo struck the mainsail and we coasted in on the seas, windsurfing with the mizzen sail. The swells were a healthy four to five feet now. The silver yellow light from Thunder Moon overhead coated the backsides of the waves like sulfur-dusted platinum.

We had a landheading on the navigational beacon on the northernmost island, and I was at the bow with the binoculars. Mo had extinguished the running lights I wanted to see the boogie monster from a safe distance and reassure myself he was so white and fat and harmless and human.

so as not to announce our arrival. I could make out three boats anchored between Del Norte and Del Medio, the middle island. Both were barren rock looming into the moonlight five or six hundred feet and glowing eerily with a millennium's worth of pale pelican and gull guano.

In a few minutes we would pass the middle island and we would have a good view of the cove at Del Sur. I knew Walters was there. I could feel him. The feeling went to my bowels, and I had to rush below to the head. As I sat there I sweat and I tried to throw up into the sink across from me. My insides had turned to water, and I got rid of all of it. I placed the cool metal of the .45 against my forehead, but the smell of oil on the gun just made me sicker.

By the time I made it back up topside, I had guzzled a quart of water, but my mouth still tasted like ash, and I couldn't have spit if I had to. Stars were everywhere overhead like white-hot buckshot in freeze frame.

Mo, at the wheel, handed me the binoculars and said, "Here. Any minute now, you'll make out the beacon, just below it is the lobster shack, maybe some ruins of the old hotel casino. Just to the right of that is the cove. There will probably be a few boats out there."

I took the binoculars and put the strap around my neck. I lifted them to my eyes and my hands shook. I cursed and moved toward the bow. The deck moved beneath me like the set for Earthquake.

Dick and Gustavo were up there. Gus was smoking, Dick was finishing a joke. "... So the third cat, the one that belonged to the cocktail waitress, crushed the bones up, snorts the powder, fucks the other two cats, and asks to get off an hour early." Dick's shoulders shook with mute laughter.

Gus looked at him, smiling like he had stomach trouble of some kind. "Wait a minute. Why did the cat wanna get off early?"

"Never mind," Dick said and lifted what looked like a small telescope to his eyes. "Forget it."

"Just tell me."

"I said forget it. Jesus."

"Dick?" I fought my way the last few feet to the bow by clutching the rail. The seas weren't too bad, but my knees were shaking now. "What the hell is that?"

"Hey, it's Captain Ahab." He greeted me. "This is a sapperscope. A Starscope. Infrared. You know, body heat? You think Walters gives off any body heat?"

Before I could answer, the stronger navigational beacon on Del Sur flashed out from the shadow of the middle island we were passing.

"Whoa!" Dick said. "Here we is, lads. Tell Mo we wanna drop the mizzen for a while." But Mo had seen the beacon flashing at three-second intervals and was already hauling it down. She lowered it a few feet, sheeted it in, and then called out to Dick and me to hoist the small jib with the red markings. We found it in the forepeak, clamped it, and hauled. We were now picking up wind taking us west and south, between the middle and southern islands.

"Stand by to strike that jib!" Mo shouted.

"Aye-aye!" Dick called back. "Avast and bugger the bosun, matey!"

"You having fun, Dick?" I asked him. "That's good. It shouldn't be all toil and drudgery. Fun is good."

"Relax," he told me. "Breathe. You know how to breathe? Do it. Keep your fucking jockstrap on. Okay?"

Gustavo looked out into the starwashed blackness, the moonlight and shadows. "This where you think he is, huh?"

We could now see a handful of running lights and anchor lights in Puerto Cueva. "Yes," I said. "You smell him?'

"We're upwind," Dick pointed out. "Hope he doesn't smell us."

We struck the jib and drifted. Mo kept the mizzen at three-quarter mast and came forward. "Help me drop the anchor," she said. She handed me a pole with a metal hook and told me to keep the chain free as she spun it out. She stepped on a rubber-coated stud on the deck, and a motor whirred and hummed, letting out anchor line. Gus and Dick tossed the white and rust weight a few feet off the starboard bow.

Mo said, "We're in the trough here. We'll be okay. Supposed to be 8, 10 fathoms. Radar says 12. That's okay." When the chain crawled toward the bow she stopped the chain motor and we drifted then caught. Mo busied herself folding the smaller jib into the forepeak, and I played the binoculars over the Skipping two small sailboats, I found a big power cruiser. She was anchored in close to shore and had her port side to us so I couldn't read her name on the stern.

The boat was, I guessed, something like 80 feet. Looked bigger. She was lit up inside, but I couldn't see anyone except what looked like a kid on the flying bridge. He was throwing firecrackers over the side. I couldn't hear them, but I could see the sparks and flash, even a little smoke from the fuses. Good binoculars.

Someone was on the stern. A man leaning backwards, massaging his shoulders as if he were tired, bored, or his neck was bothering him. He wore a white jacket and he had long hair. It fell past his shoulders. He wore binoculars hanging at his chest. He paced a few feet to the port side and then back, stopping suddenly to pull a pistol from a waist hol-

The gun did not go off, but the man threw his head back laughing and the kid clutched himself and fell a few feet onto some scattered flotation cushions in front of the big hatch to the main salon. The man with the gun brought his hands together

I wanted to say, "Yeah, that's the boat." But it had been a while since I'd seen the Ponce de León, it had been from another angle, and one big luxury cruiser looked pretty much like another to me.

Mo said, "It's a Hatteras." "You can tell by the design?" Dick asked.

"No. I can read the word 'Hatteras' on the forward port quarter."

"We could call the Rachel on the radio," Dick suggested. "See if she answers to it."

"How about we just shout, Yo, Gene?" I said too loudly. "Give me those." I took the binocs back.

In the main salon I could see the shadows. Three of them. One man came out smoking a cigarette. He seemed to talk with the guy on the stern, and then the long-

"See what flag they're flying," Dick suggested.

"Mexican," I said. Green, white, and red on the stern. "Hang on."

The new man was heavyset, wearing something dark. He seemed to replace the long-haired guy at the stern. "What time is it?" I asked.

Mo said it was exactly ten o'clock. "They're changing watches. Guard rotation. It's gotta be Walters. The new guard is kind of fat. Short hair. Dark." The new guy had a magazine or small newspaper with him. I said so. He flipped the bird to the kid playing around the bridge. I mentioned this. I told them as I watched, that the kid took off all of his clothes and dived into the water.

"You know it's Wal-

I answered.

"Scratch that," she said. "Is he gay?"

"Shit, I don't know. Why?" I wanted those binoculars back because I wanted to examine this man. I wanted to see the boogie monster from a safe distance and reassure myself he was so white and fat and harmless and human.

"He's grabbing this naked kid. The boy is young. Really young. No...no hair. He's playing with the kid's butt. Is Paz the good looking, welldressed guy with something around his neck? He's got a moustache?"

"That's Paz," I said.

"He's throwing up. Over the side," Mo said. "Walters is toweling the boy. He's playing crotchgrab. Charming.'

Gus said, "What? It's another big Hatteras with armed guards anchored in Mexican waters right where we figure Walters is gonna be?"

"No," I said as I saw Eugene Walters waddle out from the main salon; white hair, glasses, shorts, and no shirt, flabby gut, spindly legs, drink in his hand. "It's Walters, all right." And then another familiar figure, dressed well, casual elegance, bottle of Corona in his left hand. "Emilio Paz too."

"Can I see those?" Mo took the binoculars and studied the boat, which now seemed distant, small, anonymous to me in the poor moonlight.

"Hey, Gus," I said, "do me a favor? Shut the fuck up?"

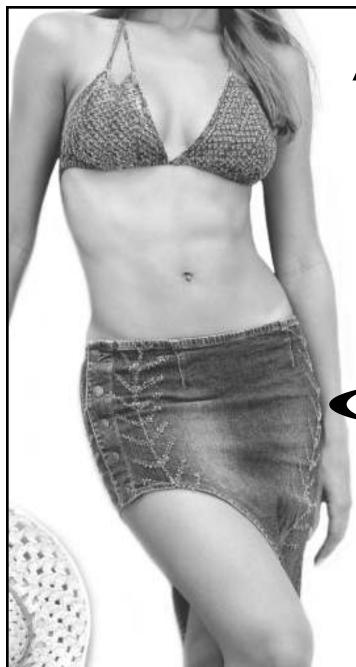

"Oh, no problem. Kee mo sabee."

"You swim, Gus?" I asked him.

"Shut up, both of you," Mo bit off the words. "If that's Walters, looks like how you describe him he's choking the kid with the towel. I don't know. Maybe he's pretending. The kid's kicking his legs, hard. Jesus. I think he's killing this kid."

"Give me those," Dick took the binoculars and reported.

"They're all drunk, man. Hammered." Dick looked at me for a moment and then fixed the binoculars against his face again. "That is Walters, no shit. The kid's okay. Looks scared though, out of breath. He's crying now."

He put down the binoculars and said to Mo, "We gotta talk, lady. We came here to kill this, uh, festering lesion on the backside of all people good and fine. This would be a real good night to do it.

The planets are in conjunction, you know? Walters and Paz are liquored up nicely."

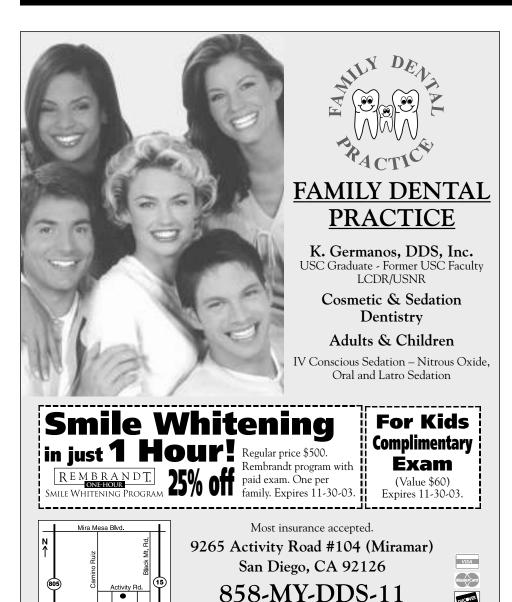

Mo was shaking her head from side to side. He took Mo by the shoulders and said, "He didn't kill that boy. Not just now. But I bet you my gold teeth he'll kill him tomorrow or the next day or the day after that. Just to get himself off. He's into it. You see it? York tells you he's the man behind a lot of dead people who didn't have it coming, not then, not the way it happened to them. York is telling you the truth. The guy had two people killed just last week. Problem with York is, he just doesn't tell you enough of it. I'm telling you we could stop him. We should blow his ass into hell tonight because they're waiting for him down there. He could kill a lot more people before we get another chance."

"I hear you. You'll do it anyway, won't you?"

Dick nodded. "Are you going to tell me we're wrong? Tell me, knowing what you do, that we should just report this guy to the Coast Guard or the FBI. Might as well report him to the Daughters of the American Revolution."

While Dick was speaking I was watching the scene aboard the Hatteras. Walters had taken the towel away from the kid, picked him up, and thrown him in the water again. The kid swam around and Walters took something from the guard on the stern. He put whatever it was in his pocket, brought out a lighter. He began tossing fireworks into the water at the kid. These weren't just firecrackers, but cherry bombs, M-80s or seal bombs, the kind tuna fishermen use to stun seals and dolphins to clear them from their nets. We could hear the muffled, underwater boom like a car door slamming a few blocks away. "Here," I said to Mo. "Look at this."

She took the binoculars and said, "Oh my God. The boy is swimming away she would do whatever had to be done. She just didn't want to say what it was to herself. Not out loud. That was okay. "If you have to kill him in self-defense..." She didn't finish because she knew, even as she said it, that that's what I had been talking about all along. "We have to get that boy away from there," she said with renewed conviction. "What do we do?"

"We need a diversion," Dick said, looking through the binoculars again. "Someone Paz and Walters doesn't know has to go aboard their boat and, you know...occupy their attention."

"No," I said. "Paz knows all of us except Mo. Walters knows you and I."

"He might not remember me," Dick said.

"I'll go," Mo said. "It makes sense. They don't know me."

"No way," I said.

"Yeah. I came here to kill him. It's him or me. I'll kill him if I can. That's all."

from the boat. Walters is keeping him away with those bombs."

I suggested what they might be, about a quarter of a stick of dynamite each. Enough to knock a mature sea lion out cold. "How long do you think that kid can tread water out of range? How many of those things you think they have? Maybe they'll just run out of them, and the kid will be okay, and Walters will get tired of the game and read him a story and tuck him in."

Mo put down the binoculars and looked at me. "All right," she said. "We have to help the boy, but can we at least try to do it without killing anybody?"

"Just take Walters and Paz into custody?" I asked. "What do we do then?"

"Figure it out later," Mo said, but there was resignation in her voice. She knew what she was signing on for, and I believed

"That's crazy. I can't ask you to do that."

"You didn't," Mo said.
"What's the plan?"

Dick put a hand on her arm and asked her, "You have a tank, a regulator, mask, and fins?"

"Yes."

"Well, I've got an idea." Dick outlined a plan that might work, but I didn't like it. I don't think anyone was nuts about it, but no one had another idea.

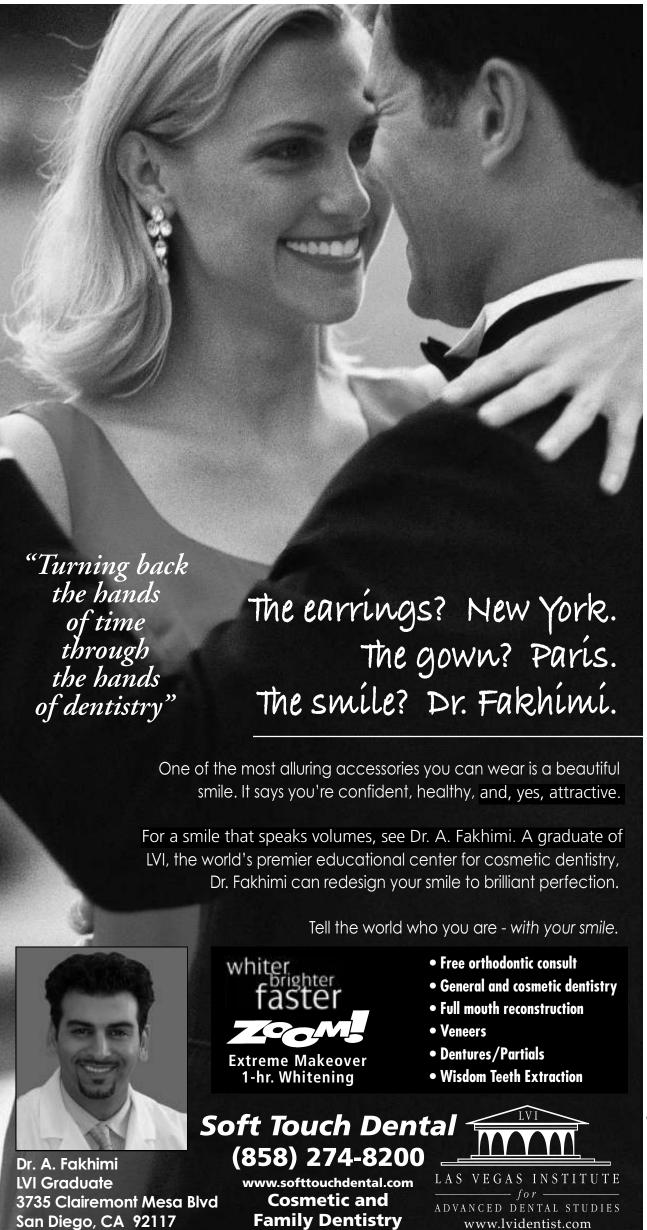

"Let's do it," Mo said and started toward the hatch for her gear. "The idea sucks, but that kid can't stay out in the water all night. Let's go."

Gustavo said, "Good she's on our side. Know what I mean?"

I did. And I said so.

CHAPTER 18

Mo went over the side at 10:21. She wore a black bikini and a wetsuit top with long sleeves. She had a mask, a tank and regulator, fins, a diving knife strapped to her right calf, ankle weights, and belt. She also had her diving watch, and we all synchronized our watches with hers. It was the second time in my life I synchronized watches, but the fun had gone out of it for me.

We watched her swim out and Dick suited up. He went into the water with a full wetsuit on, hood and all — not because the water was cold, but because the wetsuit was black. He brought his knife and the speargun. Dick was in the water two minutes behind Mo.

Gus and I unlashed the Avon dinghy and took the motor off of it. We threw the Avon over the side and tied the painter to a stanchion. I tossed the oars into the rubber boat and climbed into it. Gus handed me down the two MAC 10s, and then he followed me with the Ruger tucked in his waist.

"Here," I said to him handing him the .45 in my jacket pocket. "You want this?"

"Yeah. I'd rather have that piece of shit and the Ruger than one of those things." He meant the MACs. "I can't hit anything with a machine gun." We rocked in the trough and were thrown against Thunder Moon. We fended off, I stowed the painter under the wooden seats, and I started paddling. "I like for the bullets to go, you know, where I point the goddamned gun."

"Put the oar in the oar lock. I'll row."

"Fine."

Gus had the binoculars. He said, "Walters is letting the kid climb up the ladder on the stern. Now he's pushing him back in the water with his foot. Kid looks tired."

"You okay about killing Emilio if you have to?"

"No. But I will. I hope somebody else does it, but I won't waste any time, if that's what you mean." He put down the binocs and looked back at me. We didn't seem to be making headway, but when I turned around, the ketch was about 20 yards behind us. "How about you? I mean, shooting Walters. Can you just shoot him where he's standing? Just like that?"

"You never know what you're going to do until you do it." I was thinking we should trade seats, me rowing with my back toward Rachel.

"Hey, that's heavy."

"Let's trade seats," I said. We changed seats and we made better time as I rowed pulling the oars rather than pushing them.

Neither of us spoke for a while. Maybe a minute. Then Gus said, "You're thinking about it."

"Yeah. I came here to kill him. It's him or me. I'll kill him if I can. That's "You want me to save him for you? If I get the chance, you want me to do it or what?"

"You get a chance, shoot him. It doesn't have to be me. He just has to die."

"Right. Okay. No problem."

Gus looked at his watch. "She should be there by now." He lifted the binoculars. "Yeah, she's on like one of those old radio announcers calling a fight. As soon as I thought that he said, "He just slapped Mo. I bet she tried to help the kid."

"Jesus Christ," I hated Dick's strategy. It made Mo the point man on this, and if I got her killed...I... "FUCK!"

"Shut up, man. Are you crazy?" Gus crouched down, looked through the binoculars. "They didn't hear you, I guess. Jesus! Don't do that again. Keep it together."

Gus looked at his watch again. "Row harder, man. Five minutes."

"How's it look?"

"I think she's going through the story again. Paz came out. He is fucked up big time. Mo is pointing toward the island. She's got her hands together like she's begging them for a ride back to San Diego. Paz doesn't seem too interested. He's trying to help the kid up and get him in the cabin, the salon, whatever. Man, that boat is nice, I can see it. They got two TV sets, a big bar. I count five guys, plus one on the bridge, like the captain or whatever. Hey, there's a chick too."

"Give me the binoculars, Gus. You row. Row hard"

We changed seats again. Through the binoculars I could see Walters and Mo. Walters pacing, gesturing, drink in his hand. A girl, young, coming to his side. She had blonde hair, a pullover Mexican striped thing with a hood, bare legs. I was relieved at her appearance in a way. It would draw the focus from Mo's paperthin story long enough for us to catch up and board the Hatteras. Mo's story wasn't meant to hold up for more than five minutes before someone saw it for what it was. If Wal-every light inside the boat was on, but the bow was dark. Dick should be there now. Since no one was freaking out, I figured Dick had taken the guy forward and was waiting for us. "Row toward the bow. It's darker."

Gus rowed out 50 yards or so from the Hatteras's bow. We were getting close to surf breaking on the shoreline of the cove. The lobster shack and some other buildings to our right were visible now in the moonlight. One of the buildings had crude letters in black paint I could barely make out.

It said: Armada de Mexico. No lights showed from inside any of the buildings. I heard the braying of a donkey over the sound of waves on the shore.

Rowing back toward the yacht was harder. I could see Gus sweating or maybe it was seawater. His short sleeves showed weight-lifter's biceps glistening in the moon's jaundiced glow. I know I was sweating. My shoes and the bottoms of my Levi's were heavy with salt water, and beneath a dark green windbreaker Mo had found for me on board, my T-shirt clung to me like thin oilcloth.

Gus was rowing against the sea now. Uphill. We were already late a full minute. I could see a guard walking toward the bow.

He was a silhouette. The ash of a burning cigarette. He said, "Arnoldito, you little culo, you got my lighter? You got my camera? Where you put them, man? They ain't down there. Hey, you see this chiquita with the knife on her leg?" I could hear him as if he were next to me. "She looks good but no chi chis. Nice...hey!" and silence. A shadow moved in front of him. Batman.

Both shadows went to the deck and only one got up again. Dick ran to the bow and gestured for me to throw him one of the MACs. I was still too far away.

"Row!" I breathed hoarsely at Gus.

"Yeah, yeah."

Ten yards. Eight. I tried to stand in the dinghy but fell back on the seat because of the mounting surf almost breaking beneath us.

"Throw him the fucking gun!" Gus whispered at me.

The swells kept us from the bow though Gus tried mightily to close the distance. I made rowing motions to Gus. Sweat and spray made me blink. I couldn't see Dick anymore. The Hatteras rode the anchorage as if it were an island all its own. Rocking a little, but taking the low seas from stern to bow.

Someone shouted. I couldn't hear what they said. Dick's voice answered, "What?" It sounded a little like the guy he had just brought down. I wondered if Dick had killed him. Then Dick said, "Yeah, yeah," and I could see him gesturing wildly for me to throw him the gun.

As Gus rowed, I crouched with the MAC in my right hand. My arm was poised to lob it when I got close enough. Five yards or so and I hefted the thing, lowered it, felt its weight for the first time. Maybe eight or nine pounds because, besides the magazine in the handle, Dick had taped another clip along its length. Thirty-two 9mm rounds in each clip. If we didn't have tel 858 457 1111 www.sadrianplasticsurgery.com enough bullets to do this, there would never be enough. A wave drove us backward, but as I was slammed back onto my seat, I launched the gun into the night. I watched it rise neatly over the bow. Dick reached for it, snatched it out of the air, and tore the taped clip away from the weapon in what amounted to a single movement.

Dick disappeared for a moment and then his shadow was draped over the port side of Rachel. He was hanging over the side by his hands. No tank, no mask, no fins. The Avon was moving closer to him and we touched her side. I pushed off. I could see Dick motioning to us with a finger to his lips. He pointed up to the deck. Someone was up there. The gun was hanging by its strap from Dick's weight belt.

We were now directly under Dick as he made his way, hand over hand, back toward the stern. Someone called out, "Hey! Arnold's got his fucking throat cut! Ismael's...holy shit. There's a spear in him! Hey! Hey! Grab that bitch!"

We listened for the sound of Mo hitting the water. Her cue was to go over the side as soon as anything started.

Nothing.

"What's going on up there?" someone from amidships was asking.

"Turn on the floodlight! We got trouble."

Dick reached down a hand to me and pulled me onto his back. For a moment I was hanging by his weight belt. All 180 pounds of me. He wasn't even breathing hard. I caught the wood at the edge of the deck and tried to lift myself up. I made kicking sounds against the side.

In the next moment a searchlight was playing over the shoreline of the cove. It swung wildly from port to starboard. I hissed at Gus. "Go to the stern, like we said!"

Gus rowed against the swells. Dick was standing on the deck now. He dropped his weight belt, the gun was in his hand. I was just getting my legs alongside the rest of me, spreadeagled on the gunwale.

The stuttering toy sound of the Ingram Mac 10 spit five or six bullets, and the floodlight went out in a shower of sparks and broken glass.

I crouched on the deck, turned to look both ways, forward and aft, and tore away my extra clip from the side of the gun. I stuffed it in my jacket pocket.

Chaos reigned aboard Rachel. Nobody knew what was going on. I know I didn't, and I could hear two other voices, one in Spanish, the other in English, each asking what was happening.

A man came at me from the stern. Dick was climbing toward the flying bridge. Spiderman. His "Mo!" I called out as I moved to the stern. "Jump! Get out of here!" No answer.

I was moving under the windows of the salon. All the lights were still on inside, and I wanted some of them out, but I didn't want by bullets bouncing off the glass if it was bulletproof. Maybe nothing's that bulletproof, but if it existed, Walters might have it. I didn't feel anything about killing the man I had just shot. I was thinking about lights and shadows and Mo and where Gus was and what Dick was doing.

Three staccato pistol cracks sounded from the bow. I could hear the bullets striking the plastic and canvas around the bridge. I didn't wait to see what that was about. No one returned fire.

I was behind a wood and fiberglass bulwark that

I shot him about four times, I guess, in the chest. He went backward and up as if he had been hit by a speeding forklift.

tank, weights, mask, and fins lay on the deck next to me. The guy saw me, looked up at Dick, back down at me, and aimed a pistol, I don't know what it was, in my direction. He said, "Hold it! Freeze. ¡Helado! ¡Alto! Right there! Don't breathe!"

"You mean you don't want me to move or anything?" I asked him. I pulled the trigger and nothing happened. Safety on the trigger housing. I forgot.

"Drop the gun slowly," he said and then he called over his shoulder, "Hey!" and that was enough time to find the safety easily, moved it into the off position with my trigger finger, and then shoot him. I shot him about four times, I guess, in the chest. He went backward and up as if he had been hit by a speeding forklift. He landed on the deck and didn't move.

separated the huge stern cockpit from the main salon. Walters was on the deck crawling toward the salon on his back. He looked like a wriggling, beached sea elephant. He was holding an automatic pistol, and it was aimed at Mo.

Mo stood behind a heavy man with a white T-shirt that said, "Pedro's Mariscos. We're only moderately hot and our tacos are never hard." He had a shoulder holster over this but no gun in it. Mo had her diving knife pointed at his spleen. She was breathing heavily, the guy in the T-shirt wasn't. He had an acne-scarred face that I had seen before in the passenger window of a Lincoln Continental. This was in Tijuana almost a year ago. He was Nabor "Kaliman" Morelos.

None of them saw me. I aimed at Walters and was going to pull the trigger when Gus's face appeared over the stern gunwale. He had the Ruger in his left hand and the Colt in the right. The hammer was pulled back on the Colt. It was aimed at Walters. Walters stopped moving.

With Gus's hangdog eyes and Ringo Starr nose peering over the rail, his two automatic pistols in each hand, one now aimed at Morelos, he looked like some deadly 3-D graffiti that needed a caption like, "Kilroy is here and he's pissed."

"Mo," he said. "Go over the side now. We got 'em."

Good for you, Gus. What a bodyguard.

Several things happened quickly. It took maybe ten seconds.

Dick's Ingram erupted from the flying bridge. A long burst. The sounds of bullets biting into aluminum, fiberglass, and wood died on the wind. Something or someone fell up around the forward section of the Hatteras.

Walters turned to look, bringing his pistol around with him as if he might be aiming it in Dick's direction. Gus drew down on him, and Walters turned back in time to see, just like I did, the hammer of the Colt .45 closing almost silently on the chamber. There was a muted clack/snick. Nothing happened. The gun didn't fire. Gus looked at it, puzzled, then brought the Ruger around toward Walters.

Mo pushed Morelos away and dived over the side.

Morelos lurched, got his feet under him, and turned, grabbing Gus's left hand that held the Ruger. Morelos was bleeding from a shallow knife wound in his side where Mo had been prodding him. He chopped down with the side of his other hand, and the Ruger went off harmlessly, putting a bullet hole in the deck the size of a lemon. Walters fired at Gus. One bullet at close range.

I couldn't make up my mind whether to shoot Walters or Morelos. In that tremor of intent, I found the MAC going off in my hand. I hit Walters in the foot and Morelos in the calf. Ten or a dozen rounds went into the deck and gunwale. I think Walters's right foot took two bullets. Seemed like there were several toes missing. Morelos's shin was poking out in sharp, thin splinters from livid muscle.

Dick shouted from the flying bridge that everyone was to throw their guns over the side. "York! You okay?"

Walters tossed his gun, a Baretta maybe, over the side. "Don't shoot!" he said. "Don't shoot! York?"

I called up to Dick, "Walters shot Gus, man!"

"I know. You all right?" "Fine."

"Is that you, York?" Walters wanted to know.

"Who's below?" I asked him.

"Paz, a girl, and my pilot, the captain. How did you find me?"

Instead of answering him I rushed to his side and placed the muzzle of the MAC against his forehead straddling his shoulders. I searched the pockets of his beige shorts with my free hand. "You're not forgetting anybody?" I asked him. There were two seal bombs in his pockets, nothing else. I jammed each of them in his nostrils. I put them up there pretty far. "How about the boy?"

Morelos was groaning, curled into the fetal position on the deck just behind me and to my right. I jerked Walters's head to the right and shifted my knees so I could keep a better eye on Morelos. "Speak to me, Gene." His breath was Tanqueray and Old Mortality.

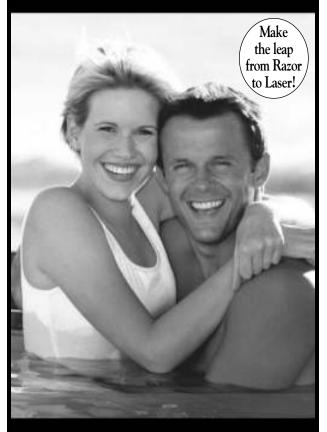

Walters had his eyes closed, grimacing, breathing hard through his mouth. He nodded

"You got a light?" I asked Gene. "Hey, Dick? You gotta match?"

Dick didn't answer. He was working on getting down from the flying bridge I guessed. "Ah!" I found a Zippo a couple of feet away laying on the deck. The same thing Gene was using to light these little nasty boys off earlier. The lighter was Emilio's. I'd seen it before. I didn't have to look at it now to know that it would have an inscription that said, "Cam Rahn Bay 1968" and then on the other side, "Too evil to die young."

I studied Walters's face. He looked like a mole, a kind of toothy albino rat or maybe, with his eyes screwed shut like that, a blind maggot. His yellowed teeth bit his lower lip, bleaching it a corpse color. His upper lip looked like a new scar. I had to look away because I suddenly hated myself for being afraid of this thing. How could I have let that happen? He was a joke. A cartoon. A bad sketch of some frail nightmare that would fade in daylight.

I ignited the Zippo and moved it to the bridge of his nose.

Walters writhed under me and called out, "No! No!"With his nose plugged up like that it came out, "Doe! Doe!"

Something occurred to me suddenly. Morelos had an empty shoulder holster. Mo had her knife on him. Maybe she had made him throw the gun over the side, but I didn't know that for sure. I wanted to know where that gun was. "Morelos! Where's your gun?"

No response except more groaning. I turned and aimed the MAC toward Morelos for a moment, the lighted Zippo still resting on Walters's forehead. Out of the corner of my eye I could see a pool of blood forming around Walters's foot. "I'm talking to you, Kaliman!" His back was to me. "Speak to me, Nabor, or you get a 9mm enema. Where is your gun?"

Walters lisped, "Ith ober the thide."

But it wasn't. Morelos had been lying on it and now he brought it up, a Walther or a Luger, I couldn't tell right away. As soon as I saw it, Walters bucked under me. A bullet sucked passed my head, just in front of my forehead. I ducked, aimed clumsily, not really looking and fired a burst of four or five shots. I dug my left elbow into Walters's windpipe as I did

"Okay! Okay!" Nabor "Kaliman" Morelos slid the gun across the deck to me and held his hands in the air. Both of them were covered with blood where he had been clutching his shattered shin. I couldn't believe I had missed him at this range, but if anyone could do it, I could.

I got to my feet and kicked Morelos's pistol to the left. Walters made as if to take the seal bombs from his nostrils. "Leave them there," I told him. "Crawl over to the stern next to Morelos." I swung the machine pistol back and forth between them. I moved slowly to Morelos and bent to search the pockets of his baggy, white, and bloodstained pants. Keys, wallet, cigarettes, clip for a Walther P-38. I threw it all over the side except for the wallet. I put that in my jacket pocket with the extra clip for the MAC and the Zippo.

Walters and Morelos huddled together, and I risked a glance over the side looking for Gus or Mo or the Avon. It was dark. I didn't see anything. "Mo!" I called out.

"I'm out here! In the Avon." Sounded like she was about 50 yards off. "Are you all right?"

"Yes! Are you?" I kept my eye on Walters and his man.

"Yes! Gus is dead, York." "Go back to the boat." She called out something, but I couldn't hear her because there was muted gunfire from below decks. Two guns. One was Dick's Ingram, the other had a deeper, higher-caliber sound. Maybe a shotgun or a .45. Three short bursts from Dick. Two reports from the other weapon. It sounded so muffled it might have been coming from the forepeak, even the engine room.

"Dick!" But I might as well have tried to phone him. I didn't like this feeling. There was nothing I could do but wait. I tried not to think about Gus, but I kept seeing his head disappear in a spattering of blood against the night like hot grease on a skillet. He had saved Mo's life. Maybe mine.

Another burst from the Ingram and then I heard shouts. A hatch being thrown open. Footsteps. Another hatch opening and the girl's voice, screaming angrily, "Fuck you, you fascist bastard, get your hands off of me!"

"York? We're coming out. You okay?" It was Dick.

"Yes. Who's with you?"

"Everybody except Paz. He's passed out. I can't bring him around."

The boy led the procession. He was wrapped in a blanket and he looked scared witless, in shock. His hair was still half wet and fell over his face. His nose was thin and his mouth was small. Part Anglo or European. His eyes peered widely from beneath his hair. He crossed the distance of the salon toward me. Behind him was the captain, I assumed. He had medium-long grey hair, a grey moustache and Navy watchcap even though the night was warm, even humid. He wore a sleeveless red Tshirt, cutoff jeans, and topsider deck shoes. He was bleeding from the nose, and he wasn't as old as his grey hair made him look. He was also in very good shape. His eyes were deep, expressionless, a poker player.

Dick had the girl by the arm and a sawed-off shotgun in his other hand. She writhed in his grip. "Let me go, you bastard!"

Dick called to me, "Let's bring them all in "All right." I turned to Walters and Morelos. "Let's go, in the salon. You'll be more comfortable."

"I cat boove," Walters

"Me neither," Morelos complained.

"Crawl, roll, levitate, I don't care. Inside. Now!" I fired two shots into the deck and Morelos got up, hopping on one leg. Walters pulled himself by his hands and one knee. He left blood on the deck like a slime trail.

Dick saw Walters crawling, the dynamite in his nostrils like tusks, and barked a quick laugh. "Jesus. Moby Walrus."

I took the opportunity to retrieve Morelos's P-38. I stuck it in my belt. As an afterthought I picked up the Colt .45 Paz had given me. The gun that didn't fire and cost Gustavo his life. I drew back the slide, ejected the unfired bullet, and pulled the clip out. I couldn't see anything wrong with the gun.

The boy was shaking and looking at Walters and Morelos in horror.

"Take it easy, son. Nobody's going to hurt you," I said. When he showed no reaction, I said it again in Spanish. He sat down on a sofa the size of a Subaru.

A glass table was in the middle of the salon. It was about as big as a Ping Pong table, but low. On it were empty and half-empty bottles of Corona, lime wedges, two bottles of Tanqueray, a bottle of Wild Turkey, glasses, some with ice, ash trays and cigarettes, a bottle of Maalox, a bowl of fruit swarming with flies used to a diet of island guano, a gram scale and plastic bags, clipped-off straws, and a hand mirror with cocaine lines laid out. Clothes were strewn around the room. Most of them looked like they belonged to the girl: lingerie and shoes. Wet towels were draped over coarse-weaved smoke blue upholstered settees and armchairs. There was a bar at the forward end of the salon: marble or slate. Ice was melting in puddles on its surface, dripping on the carpet that matched the furniture. The back bar was full of Wild Turkey and Tanqueray bottles. Just above it was an oil painting a little smaller than the scoreboard in Yankee stadium. It was a reclining naked woman with a dreamy look on her face. A minotaur, hung like King Kong, stood over her. It was done so badly, it looked like something I might have painted.

Next to the bar was a 35mm Pentax camera on a tripod with a flash attachment. A pair of handcuffs hung off the tripod knob. Laying on the floor and on a chair next to it were silk scarves, a leather mask, several dildos and cock rings, and silk ropes for tying up the submissive fun seeker.

Dick saw this stuff as soon as I did and stopped struggling with the girl. He had his hand over her mouth and she bit it. He laid the shotgun on the bar and took one of her

"Fine." I hit him at the base of his skull with the butt of the .45. He went immediately to his knees. The gun wasn't completely useless after all. I tried not to think about the last time I had used it that way. Captain Fuck You stayed on his knees for a second and then pitched forward, skewering his temple for a second on the edge of the table. "You are just one too many assholes right now. We'll sort you out later." I rifled through lingerie and scarves until I found another pair of cuffs. I put them on him.

I found a pair of dry cutoffs and a sweatshirt among the litter. I handed them to the boy. He took them and put them on under his blanket. They were too big, but he wore

"Can you haul him up here?"

"Maybe I won't have to. I think he's coming around. Hello, Mr. Paz. You're probably wondering who I am." I could only see Dick's wetsuited back and arms, his hands, and Paz's feet. He let go of the

The hollow thumping of Emilio thrashing down the gangway was joined by a long cry, "Hee-e-y-y-y!" It sounded like a safe had hit the floor. It was quiet and then, "Oh...God. What's going on?"

Dick pulled the MAC from his weight belt and pointed it down the gangway. "You're missing the party. Come on up here."

When Dick backed away, Emilio appeared half crawling, half standing and swaying. His hair was laid over his forehead, and he clutched the back of his head with one hand. He looked at Dick, the girl, still struggling, cuffed, bound, and gagged on the floor, then at me. He slumped against the bulkhead, closed his eyes for a second. "Shit." He let out a long breath, opened his eyes, and smiled his Cary Grant smile. "Still looking for love in all the wrong places, eh, amigo?"

"C'mon," Dick said, "up here. Sit down."

When Paz was seated, he looked down at his puke-stained aqua La Coste shirt and matching OP shorts. "York," he said, trying to focus his eyes. His voice was gravelly.

"Emilio." I nodded. Then I looked around the room and said, "I suppose you're all wondering why I called you here this evening?"

"Get it ober with," Walters said, grimacing in pain. "Kill be."

"I will," I said. "I promise." ■

Cross Motif

Went to see Mystic River yesterday. Marvelous film, very moving. Worthy of Duncan Shepherd's fivestar rating.

One thing that jumped out at me (almost overwhelmingly) and that was totally absent from Shepherd's review (October 9): The motif of the cross (this can't have escaped his notice). Shepherd has started this ball rolling in my mind from all the reviews he's written of the Coen brothers films, and having just read his review of Intolerable Cruelty in Thursday's edition, the subject was fresh upon viewing Eastwood's film.

Obviously a second viewing is in order, in any case, because the film is so powerful. But it would be informative for me to view it in order to gain a better understanding (and accounting) of his intentions. From the very beginning of the film, we see the cross as a symbol of protection (from questioning) as it appears on the ring and around the neck of Dave's molesters. It is also visually stunning at the morgue, where the light bleeding through the double doors forms a brilliantly illuminated cross, perhaps that of salvation. Dave's fascination with werewolves and vampires gives occasion for a cross to be used as a shield against such, as we see in the movie clip while watching TV. Jimmy Markham's back contains a cross tattoo, although I don't know what that would have symbolized to him — perhaps some superstition of protection? The cross is strongly suggested at the end of the film when Eastwood pans the concrete where the names of the three boys are etched. By his diagonal framing, we see the seams of the concrete blocks to form a cross overlooking those names. And I'm sure there's at least one more strong instance of the cross motif that I seem to have forgotten. One more reason for a second viewing.

It also occurs to me that the musical theme itself, penned by Eastwood, echoes this motif. It starts on the tonic, raises a tone, then returns to the tonic, then falls a tone, then raises back up to the tonic — a musical cross.

Perhaps it would be somewhat trite to see Dave's plight, twice over, of being tricked into the backseat of a car, as a "double-cross."

Shepherd's comment "The implication of a Catholic clergyman in this crime adds nothing but lazy-mindedness" seems to have somewhat missed the point. I see the cross motif as a indication of Eastwood's primary point of redemption. Yes, I agree that the film is about chance, fate, doom, cycles (no more pointed and demoralizing than in the final glimpse of Dave's son on the float — an undeniable promise of the sadness to come). But I don't think Eastwood is quite able to leave us with such a sense of hopelessness. Even though Dave's life ended so tragically, there is a sense of redemption in our final knowledge of his innocence of the crime, and "innocence" is something he knew very little of. The point is further brought home by the return of Sean's wife and child — a second chance, a renewal, redemption.

Camera Show and Sale

omputers are the hot thing now, whereas 20 years ago cameras used to be the main toy of a lot of people," says Anton of Santa Monica. ("My last name is too long and complicated; everyone knows me just as Anton.") Even so, he hasn't retrofitted his business, Bargain Camera Trade Shows. Digital cameras are generally not to be found at the monthly sale he runs in Pasadena and the twice-yearly one he brings here, every April and October.

"At an event like ours, the focus is traditional photography," says Anton, who neither owns a computer nor sources for used traditional equipment, which is getting harder to find at camera stores. At one of our shows, you can get a very nice range-finder camera for, shall we say, $50, and a nice interchangeable-lens camera for $100. And if you are starting to develop your own prints, you can pick up an enlarger, a really nice one, for another $50. And you're all set to go quite far."

Some of the dealers coming to San Diego this weekend, mostly from the L.A. area, will have used motionpicture equipment of the traditional (not digital) kind, says Anton. "We get a lot of students who come to the shows, and what they look for, and expect to find, are Super 8 millimeter cameras, projectors, and editors. As they're getting harder to find, we're becoming one of the last sources for those types of things, too."

Nikon is one name that still photographers seek, especially on cameras and accessories in good condition. Those in the market for "collectibles" — rather than merely practical, usable items — look for 'anything made in Germany," says

These collectors also want one-ofa-kinds, like the 19th-century French hand-cranked movie camera that someone brought to sell at Anton's show in San Diego last spring. It came with the projector, which was also

Rollei magic II

Rollei Magic II, circa mid '50s

hand-cranked. "The lot included some supplementary editing paraphernalia, too — little collectible odds and ends in their original little boxes, along with vintage images." The price for all was

The seller of these antiques was not a regular dealer. He was just a local resident who set up a table on a onetime basis. Anyone can, and everyone welcomes good fresh "merch."

Likewise, anyone may bring items for a free, informal appraisal — or several appraisals, which is the prudent thing to do, especially if selling them to a dealer at the show is one's ultimate goal. "Instead of driving from store to store, you can walk from table to table for a cross-check," says Anton, who believes that his and others' camera shows may never offer much used digital equipment. "And I'll tell you why. Things, as you probably know, are changing so fast that digital becomes terribly dated very quickly, just like the computer itself. There isn't a good secondary market for it, either."

And yet as film becomes increasingly quaint, does Anton envision a day when the technology will have only collectible value? "Some of the finest commercial photography in the world is still done with traditional equipment," he replies. "I think the two technologies will co-exist for quite a while. In the motion picture industry, some people are resisting it.

It took them 25 years to learn all the subtleties of their equipment. If they change, they'll be caught in the transition.

Gary Schacker, a professional photographer in his early 50s who lives in La Mesa, hasn't made the transition. "Digital is viable now, but professional-level equipment is expensive," he says. "And while you'll save on film and processing, there's a trade-off. Even after you shoot, in order to get a set of proofs, it takes a lot of computer time to edit each picture. I probably will convert eventually. But right now there's no real quality advantage and no time advantage. And the cost advantage is offset by a very labor-intensive process."

Schacker does shoot digital for fun. "I carry around a little Canon pocket point-and-shoot that also has manual controls. It's unbelievably good quality. Digital point-and-shoots, I think, are better than film pointand-shoots ever were.3

As for the shows, where Schacker used to be a regular buyer, "I haven't been to one in over a year," he says. "There's more to see and more to buy and more to learn on eBay.

To which Anton would counter, at a show there's more to touch, even more than at a camera store, where a shopper isn't encouraged to examine everything in the case. "In the late 1970s, I was interested in movie-making as well as still photography," he says. "But I was intimidated by camera stores. It was an uncomfortable feeling. At the camera shows, there's more informality. Everything is out. A person can come to the show and examine everything, and do it all day long.3

oak native to the county. Associating with pines, firs, cedars, various evergreen oaks, and occasionally chaparral, the black oak lends a true autumn coloring to popular areas such as the Cuyamaca, Laguna, and Palomar Mountains.

Our Lady of the Forest

Alfred A. Knopf, 2003; 283 pages;

FROM THE DUST JACKET: From the best-selling author of Snow Falling on Cedars, an emotionally charged, provocative novel about a teenage girl who claims to see the Virgin Mary.

Ann Holmes seems an unlikely candidate for revelation. A 16-year-old runaway, she is an itinerant mushroom picker who lives in a tent. But on a November afternoon, in the foggy woods of North Fork, Washington, the Virgin comes to her.

 $Father \, Collins \, -- \, a \, young \, priest \, new \, to \, North \, Fork \, -- \, finds$ Ann disturbingly alluring. But it is up to him to evaluate — impartially — the veracity of Ann's sightings: Are they delusions, or a true calling to God? As word spreads and thousands, including the press, converge upon the town, Carolyn Greer, a smart-talking fellow mushroomer, becomes Ann's disciple of sorts, as well as her impromptu publicity manager. And Tom Cross, an embittered logger who's been out of work since his son was paralyzed in a terrible accident, finds in Ann's visions a last chance for redemption for both himself and his son.

As Father Collins searches his own soul and Ann's, as Carolvn struggles with her less than admirable intentions, as Tom alternates between despair and hope, Our Lady of the Forest tells a suspenseful, often humorous story of faith at a contemporary crossroads.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY: From Publishers Weekly: When Ann Holmes starts having visions of the Virgin Mary, the bedraggled teen runaway becomes the last hope for the inhabitants of a dank, economically depressed logging town and the miracle-seekers who descend on it. In this psychologically dense novel, she also becomes a symbol of the intimate intertwining of the sacred and the profane in American life.... Guterson's evocative prose, pithy dialogue, and piercing insights cut through the fog of sin and guilt that shadows these wounded characters like the overcast sky of the Pacific Northwest. And as Ann's visions stimulate a tourism boom and draw the attention of media vultures and a skeptical Catholic Church, Guterson explores larger social themes — the demise of blue-collar America; the ironic symbiosis of religious devotion and commercial exploitation; the replacement of faith in God by faith in psychopharmacology; and the link between the exaltation of women's saintliness and the reality of women's degradation.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: David Guterson, one of five children, was born in 1956 in Seattle, Washington. His father practiced criminal law and his mother was a housewife. Mr. Guterson received a B.A. from the University of Washington in 1978 and an M.A. from the same institution in 1982. From 1984-'94 he worked as a high school English instructor on Bainbridge Island in Puget Sound. His first short story collection appeared in 1989. His first novel, Snow Falling on Cedars, published in 1994, became a worldwide bestseller and was made into a film starring Ethan Hawke. Mr. Guterson lives near Seattle with his wife and four children.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR: I asked how Mr. Guterson happened to choose the rain forest setting.

"I guess the first thing to say about it is that from childhood on I have spent a lot of time out of doors. One of my hobbies is hiking, and I spend time in the rain forest, walking trails. So I have a long experience of this part of the world, and in particular, of rain forests. I also have a love for the rain forest, for the deep forests of my part of the world.

"Until this book I haven't really had the opportunity as a writer to fully express that love for deep forest. There's a bit of it in Snow Falling on Cedars, but that's really more about islands and snow than it is about forests, and this one is more about forests. And it was a pleasure. It was a pleasure to work in that setting.'

Our Lady of the Forest shows an extraordinary knowledge of logging. I said I didn't know when I'd read a book with so many logging terms in it.

Well," said Mr. Guterson, "maybe Sometimes a Great Notion. There's a story with a lot of logging in it. This book, of course, is set in part in a logging community, and one of the prominent characters — Tom Cross — is an unemployed logger. But I don't depict that much logging. There's a little bit. I put more of my writing energy into depicting the feel of a logging town. The culture of the place and the ethos and the sensibility. I can't say that I've spent a lot of time in these towns. In my 20s I worked summers for the Forest Service, and I lived in a small logging town. But for the purposes of the book I didn't do any formal research about small logging towns."

The story is told through four characters. About this, Mr. Guterson said, "Well, it skips around narratively. You're in the consciousness or the point of view of a variety of characters, and then you get into the Tom Cross sections, and you're inside the point of view and the mindset and the values of somebody in a small logging town who's frustrated and unemployed and discontent and "And so lost," I said.

"And so lost, right. I'm sure that readers will have mixed feelings about Tom. He's an abusive, racist, violent, sexist person. Yet even with all of that, because you're inside his heart and mind, you can in certain regards sympathize or empathize with him. I think it's a bit disconcerting, though, to find yourself empathizing with somebody who on the surface is so unlikable.'

When Mr. Guterson began Our Lady of the Forest was Tom

Cross on the scene or did he show up later?

"In the beginning for me with this book was theme. I was wanting to write about things like faith and hope and desire and desperation. I started with that. I started with the setting that we've talked about. It was only after I had those three things strongly in mind that I moved on to thinking about characters. So I can't say that Tom Cross was a starting point at all."

"Was it difficult to find Ann's voice?"

"It was hard. I find all of it hard. Always, and this certainly is the case with Ann, the further that you move from the conditions of your own life, the more challenging and difficult it becomes to enter into the heart and mind of a character. She's certainly far from the conditions of my life. So, yes, it was a challenge to imagine this person, and it definitely takes time, and there were a lot of revisions."

Ann, I said, "had such a horrible life."

"Right, it was. Certain aspects of this book are perhaps depressing. Tom's life is depressing and Ann's life is depressing, and yet the book is about hope and faith."

I mentioned that many years ago I had spent quite a bit of time with my father in the Pacific Northwest rain forests, where he liked to botanize for ferns. I said that these forests always seemed so mysterious.

Mr. Guterson agreed. "They are mysterious. They're otherworldly. And in certain ways I could see how people would react to them spiritually. They're often described as cathedral-like. There's this incredible beauty. And utter stillness and sound. So it seemed to be the proper setting for this sort of thing."

Ann Holmes has been earning her living as a forager for chanterelles, a trumpet-shaped yellow edible mushroom that is found in the rain forest. About this, Mr. Guterson said, "I did do a little bit of research on mushroom hunting. I went out and picked and went to a couple of these sheds where a buyer will take buckets of mushrooms off your hands."

Was Mr. Guterson raised as a Roman Catholic?

"No, I wasn't. My parents were Jewish. But the atmosphere of my youth was both humanism and agnosticism. I'm not a member of any organized religious group. I don't attend any house of worship."

"Would you like to be able to believe, as does Ann Holmes, that the Virgin Mary could appear in the rain forest?"

"I don't need to believe it in the concrete sense. I don't think I could ever believe it in the concrete, objective sense. But for it to be valid and meaningful and legitimate it doesn't have to be real. Or in the concrete sense to me. For it to have meaning and value and purpose for people, it can be real in some other way.

"This is a phenomenon that happens all over the world and is actually a relatively modern phenomenon. Most of these apparition events have unfolded in the last 175 years or so. There are a number of scholars who have various hypotheses as to why. I haven't noticed any particular upsurge in apparition events in the last couple of years. But, as I said, it is a phenomenon of the last couple of centuries. And in the U.S. it seems to be a phenomenon of the last, say, 60 years."

"How do you hope readers will feel after they finish the book?"

"There's a variety of answers to that. I want readers to have a sense of pleasure and satisfaction, both emotionally and intellectually. When you read a story and you feel that intellectually you grasp it and you feel that something has happened to you emotionally, that you were moved in some way — the feelings and the ideas in the book come together for you, and so there's this sense of closure and satisfaction. I also would hope that readers would feel sort of wistful. Sort of regretful that the experience is behind them, that they sort of yearn for the world of the story and long to return to it. And the third thing — I'm really talking about what I have happen to me as a reader — is that the story stays with me. That it rummages around inside me. That I think about it at odd moments, that it sort of boils up in other kinds of chords and it resonates inside of me. All of these things I think we ask of stories. And the stories we love do all of those things for us.

"In this book the major characters are all victims of various forms of suffering. Some of it, inevitably, self-inflicted. They are offered the hope of redemption. They in various ways respond to the invitation. The novel is about that. It's about the invitation to redemption and how we respond to it and how we cling to it and what our hopes are.

"One thing I stay away from as a writer is in any espousing or

"I want the readers to have a sense of pleasure and satisfaction, both emotionally and intellectually.... I also would hope that readers would feel sort of wistful."

promoting a specific point of view. I feel like my role is to create a context in which the reader can have his own confrontation with the human condition in whatever regard it's being presented. I guess I have no interest in how the reader responds; I'm just trying to create the context in which they can respond. I just tell the story. And they decide what to do with it."

Was it odd to Mr. Guterson to realize that scenes from his past books and from this newest will resonate for many years in the minds of strangers?

"People write me letters, and they tell me about the things that they react to and how the book operates in their lives and so on. I guess it affirms something that I believe, which is that you could say nothing makes a difference and everything is meaningless, but if anything matters and anything makes a difference, I think books do. I think books matter to people. People really love books. They have a passion for books. I think stories matter to people, I think the stories stay with people, and frankly, that's probably what keeps me writing is this sense of connecting with people in a meaningful way."

THE LOST PILOT

For my father, 1922-1944

Your face did not rot like the others — the co-pilot, for example, I saw him yesterday. His face is cornmush: his wife and daughter, the poor ignorant people, stare as if he will compose soon. He was more wronged than Job. But your face did not rot like the others — it grew dark, and hard like ebony; the features progressed in their distinction. If I could cajole you to come back for an evening, down from your compulsive orbiting, I would touch you, read your face as Dallas, your hoodlum gunner, now, with the blistered eyes, reads his braille editions. I would touch your face as a disinterested scholar touches an original page. However frightening, I would discover you, and I would not turn you in; I would not make you face your wife, or Dallas, or the co-pilot, Jim. You could return to your crazy orbiting, and I would not try to fully understand what it means to you. All I know is this: when I see you, as I have seen you at least once every year of my life, spin across the wilds of the sky like a tiny, African god,

I feel dead. I feel as if I were the residue of a stranger's life, that I should pursue you.

My head cocked toward the sky, I cannot get off the ground, and, you, passing over again, fast, perfect, and unwilling to tell me that you are doing well, or that it was mistake that placed you in that world, and me in this; or that misfortune placed these worlds in us.

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond • By Jerry Schad

Poway's Iron Mountain thrusts its conical, chaparral-clad summit nearly 2700 feet above sea level, a height that is frequently well above the low-lying coastal haze. On many a crystalline winter day, the summit offers a sweeping, 360-degree panorama from glistening ocean to blue mountains and back to the ocean again. The main trail to the summit. 3.2 miles one way, is smoothly graded, hardly falters in its steady elevation gain, and is popular with all types of self-propelled travelers.

The starting point is just south of the intersection of Highway 67 and Poway Road, where parking is available along both sides of Highway 67. Construction will start soon on a trailhead parking lot designed to accommodate dozens of cars. Head east on the initially wide and almost level path. Ignore the trail branching left (north) and continue to a place mile into the hike or hike ride where the trail briefly dips to cross the bottom of a ravine. On the far side of the ravine you climb in earnest for a while, negotiating the steepest grade you'll encounter along the whole route.

At 1.5 miles you reach a saddle where you can turn left or right. Stay right and commence a generally leisurely (for a while) ascent through the waist- or shoulder-high chaparral. The vegetation is slowly recovering after a 1995 wildfire burned everything to ashes along the entire route. After a decided turn to the west, the ascent becomes steeper again, and final switchbacks take you back and forth across the ever-narrowing summit cone. On top you may find a visitor register — a notebook stuffed with hundreds of written comments. You'll also find a massive, pier-mounted telescope (no coins required) thoughtfully placed so anyone can scan the near and far horizons.

When it's time to go, return the same

You may add three additional miles to your route - plus some challenging up-anddown segments - by returning to the Highway 67/Poway Road trailhead via a looping path to the north. You'll pass such minor landmarks as Table Rock and two cattle ponds. The mature chaparral vegetation (mixed with a few oaks) along this northern loop has been untouched by fire for several

The Ellie Lane trailhead, a large equestrian staging area 0.7 mile north of Poway Road, offers an alternative starting point for the northern loop. It is typically underutilized and offers plenty of parking space.

A Disaster

A concertgoer learns to put up with a certain level of imperfection.

REVIEW

was greatly looking forward to David Cates's traversal of the complete Bach Partitas, and I was greatly disappointed. I was not the only one. No aficionado of Baroque music who had heard Cates's terrific CDs (for Wildboar and Music & Arts) could have imagined that a live recital by this talented harpsichordist, on a first-rate harpsichord (by Curtis Berak), in a first-rate venue (the concert hall of the Neurosciences Institute), would be anything less than wonderful. In the event, his playing was so far less than wonderful that numerous lovers of the repertoire who heard Cates's first concert on Saturday evening (Partitas 1, 2, and 4) indignantly failed to return for the second installment on Sunday afternoon (Partitas 3, 5, and 6).

I myself didn't last even that long. After the hash he made of the B-flat and C minor Partitas (two of the most splendid in this magnificent set of keyboard compositions), I lit out for home, where I tried to erase the memory of those awful 40 minutes by listening to recordings of the same music by artists who knew what they were doing: Edward Parmentier, Trevor Pinnock, Lars Ulrik Mortensen, Igor Kipnis, Blandine Verlet, Scott Ross, Kenneth Weiss, Kenneth Gilbert, Robert Woolley, and Siegbert Rampe (all these on harp-sichord); Richard Goode, Maria Tipo, Sergey Schepkin, Dinu Lipatti, Glenn Gould, and Andras Schiff (all these on piano); and Richard Troeger (on clavichord). A tremendous diversity here, in style and interpretation (and, of course, in instrument); but each of these musicians, in his or her own way, knew how to bring out the astounding creativity of the Partitas, their great range of expression, their uncanny ability to raise dance movements to the highest level of inventiveness while at the same time retaining the quality of dance, whether slow and dignified or fast and fiery.

Only David Cates fell short — and the bitterness of spirit his disaster at the Neurosciences Institute caused was all the more disconcerting in that his CDs have shown him to be an outstanding performer of none other than Johann Sebastian Bach (one of the best recordings of the French Suites, and a beautiful anthology including the French Ouverture, two Toccatas, and the Chromatic Fantasy and Fugue). In decades of concert going and record collecting, I have never encountered an artist who showed such a disparity between what he did in the studio and what he did on the stage.

How did things go so wrong? No one I know has been able to come up with an explanation, and I am as puzzled as everyone else. But at least I can report on what went wrong.

First of all, Cates's Partitas were unacceptably flawed by flubs, fluffs, and glitches. Few keyboard players are letter perfect in every public appearance, and among those who have to do a lot of rerecording in order to get rid of the mistakes are some of the greatest. A concertgoer learns to put up with a certain level of imperfection. But Cates was way beyond that level, to the point where scarcely five or ten measures could go by without some embarrassing error. Not only were there wrong notes, missed notes, double notes, and fumbles; at times, he seemed to lose his way entirely (although he had the scores in front of him), so that for an instant the music sounded as though it had run into a wall. The frequency of these problems made them impossible to overlook, severely damaging the continuity of the musical discourse; nor did they recede as the performance wore on, as similar problems often do in musicians (principally singers) who have not properly warmed up but who recover themselves after a few moments.

Was the harpsichordist ill? Was it stage fright? Had he been neglecting to practice? Was there some painful stress in his life just then? Whatever it was, he certainly deserved pity. But so did his listeners.

In any case, none of these hypotheses could explain another pervasive defect of Cates's Partita performances. Throughout the works I heard, there was egregiously excessive use of what one member of the audience generously defined as rubato. I would not call it rubato, which means a slight alteration of rhythmic values within a phrase (some notes a bit prolonged, others a bit shortened), while maintaining the overall metrical pulse. What I heard was an ungoverned propensity to slow up so as to make some kind of musical point, or to inject some kind of "expression," followed by a return to the basic rhythm.

The result was a perpetual limping — not only in stately allemandes and sarabandes, where a fluid attitude toward meter can make sense (if kept within reasonable bounds), but even in the exciting courantes and gigues, where Cates's tactics often managed to break the back of the ball carrier while leaving the ball itself lying dead on the field. Particularly annoying was his insistence on spoiling a climax (for example, in a rising sequence of phrases) by slowing down just when the momentum had acquired its full energy. But that was only a specific instance of a more general flaw: the inappropriate placement of these rallentandos, without rhyme or reason, and not for the sake of any logic or expressiveness I could hear, but merely as a mannerism.

To hear how real rubato (along with an occasional rallentando) can be effectively used in the Partitas, listen to Tipo or Weiss (an incomparable artist who will appear on November 5 for the Harpsichord Society). Or, to hear how the Partitas can be played with a minimum of rhythmic alteration yet without any loss of suppleness, listen to Schiff (an astonishing performance especially notable for its ornamentation) or Pinnock. Or, yet again, to hear a master of Baroque flexibility, whose rhythmic nuances always come in just the right place — and to just the right degree — to give the music a breathtaking inner vitality, listen to Bach's E major French Suite or his E minor Toccata, as played with sensational power and grace on the recordings by...David Cates!

When — and, more importantly, why did Cates adopt a new, willfully erratic style for his playing of Bach? I have no idea. The Toccata was recorded in 1999, the French Suite in 2001. Even Cates's 1998 CD of Froberger, who was an authentically wayward composer in a way J.S. Bach never could be, avoids the extremes of rhythmic pushing and pulling that many harpsichordists consider to be Froberger's natural language. Why now, then, with the Partitas, for which such a style is especially inappropriate?

Finally, there is the matter of repeats. Talk about waywardness! Nothing but perhaps the whim of the moment seemed to justify Cates's unpredictable decisions to take the repeat here or to leave it out there. For those who know these works, it became a kind of unnerving adventure to try to guess how much of any of the Partita

David Cates

Bach, The Partitas (BWV 825-830) David Cates, harpsichord

Neurosciences Institute (San Diego Harpsichord Society)

movements we were going to be allowed to hear. I have three objections to this free-and-easy attitude toward the repeats (an attitude unfortunately shared by others besides Cates). The first is simply that Bach indicated he wanted a repeat of the first half of these movements and a repeat of the second half. Didn't he have a reason for so indicating? Didn't he compose the music with the structure of repeats in mind? Doesn't the architecture of each of the movements depend fundamentally on the aabb form? And if that's what the composer wanted, and if we can possibly suppose that the greatest of all Baroque composers (and maybe of all composers tout court) knew what he was doing, wouldn't it be wise to leave well enough alone?

You may say - or David Cates may say — that this is just historical pedantry. All right, let's drop the argument from the composer's explicit intentions and consider the matter purely from the point of view of how the music sounds. Is there anyone anywhere who will maintain that a movement in any of the Bach keyboard suites sounds better with the repeats (one, or the other, or both) omitted? That it touches the heart more deeply? That it engages the intellect more fully? That it makes more sense? The contrary is true.

And if you find even this argument controversial, let me turn to the simplest and most concrete of reasons for observing the repeats. Most of these movements are quite short (there are only a few exceptions, such as the Ouverture of the Fourth Partita and the Toccata of the Sixth). Their music is beautiful and fascinating. Leaving out the repeats deprives us of the added pleasure of hearing something beautiful and fascinating twice rather than once; and it also makes many a movement too short, if only in the number of seconds it can engage our attention. So since we listeners want to hear these sections repeated, and since Bach has encouraged us in our addiction to his music by telling the performer to repeat them, WHY NOT REPEAT THEM?

On this issue, there were already suggestions in Cates's recording of the French Suites that the harpsichordist had a yen to monkey around with Bach. It was not so much a matter of repeats as of supplying additional opening movements to the Suites. A typical French suite, from the invention of the form in the early 17th Century, begins with an improvisatory-sounding prelude. All Bach's so-called English Suites (which are actually in the French style) begin with such a prelude, followed by an allemande. So do all his unaccompanied Cello Suites. And all his Partitas have a nondance movement preceding the allemande, although only one of them is specifically labeled a prelude. But none of the French Suites has a prelude; all six of them begin right away with the allemande.

Enter Cates, who apparently feels that there must be some mistake here. How could Bach actually change a conventional form? Impossible! So Cates proceeds to fill the supposed lacunae with preludes taken from other Bach works in the same key, including several preludes from the Well-Tempered Clavier (severed from their fugues). The keys are right, but otherwise these additional movements (however well played they are on the recording) do not fit; they sound both intrusive and superfluous. The right way to approach the anomalous structure of the French Suites is to accept the fact that just as, in the Partitas, Bach wanted to experiment with suites that begin with a movement other than the conventional prelude (toccata, overture, fantasia, sinfonia, and the like), so in the French Suites he wanted to experiment with suites that begin with an allemande. Moreover, the interpreter ought to try to understand the advantages Bach saw in this structure, and he ought to try to convey that understanding through a sensitive performance. The alternative is the slippery slope of altering the music to make it conform with the performer's idea of what Bach should have written; and once you have taken that step, why not play loose with the repeats, or maybe even rewrite passages that displease you? Will that be Cates's next innovation?

Nothing I have written here, however, should discourage any music lover from acquiring Cates's Bach CDs (or his Froberger). They are fine recordings of fine performances. But if this harpsichordist comes to town again, you might want to pause and consider your options before you get a ticket to one of his concerts. And as for any future Cates recordings, listen before you buy. ■

Soul Partners

W.S. DI PIERO

y clever scheduling or happy coincidence, the San Diego Museum of Art has followed up its summer exhibition of Degas bronzes, which so grandly demonstrated the ways in which Degas anticipated the modeling and spatial dynamics of early modernism (though few knew the sculptures even existed until after his death), with Partners of the Soul: African Art of the Baule, which gives a fair idea of the kind of African art Picasso, Matisse, Modigliani, Giacometti, and so many others adapted to western pictorial idioms.

A people of central Ivory Coast, the Baule make wood carvings that express, as does most art by indigenous peoples, a spiritual vision. Their masks and statues from the 19th Century to the present follow a set of conventions, drawing on a fund of tribal forms that articulate the Baule's communal consciousness, especially its conception of physical beauty. The masks, even the smallest, sober and demure of visage, have a forceful sculptural presence. The figures have long necks; slender, low-slung torsos; pendulous conical breasts; sculpted hair; bent knees; and thick calf muscles — all signs of beauty. Both figures and masks have downcast eyes meant to convey personal reserve and respect for others, which figures in their worldview, but more on this later. In traditional carvings, the hands are clasped to the belly around the navel, another indication of reserve and in women a sign of fertility. Contemporary male figures usually have their hands in their pockets. Within these norms, though, Baule artisans value variation and innovation. From one sculpture to the next we see different patterns of bumpy accents on face and body, for instance, which repeat the beautifying scarification practiced by the Baule and the gold facial decorations worn on ceremonial occasions.

Partners of the Soul shows how carvers have kept current with fashions. A contemporary female figure wears heels, a snug, bright green dress, and carries a purse. While historical pieces are often dressed in cloth and decked with beads, the modern statues are painted in loud, flat reds and blues, and the Baule have a special affection for polka dots. One sharpie is done up in floppies, T-shirt, and shorts and sports a modified fade; another is dressed in European business attire, hands stiff at his sides. For better or worse, the Baule have sometimes adapted their work to supply-and-demand economics. During the period of French colonization beginning just before World War I, Africans holding prestigious bureaucratic positions (called "colons") wore special uniforms, which became so popular in the tourist and export trade that they were massproduced.

Balance, proportion, harmonious detail, and the deft handling of mass all recommend the beauty of the work to us. But that beauty isn't complete, or completely comprehended, unless we know something about Baule spirituality. The French anthropologist Pierre Ètienne wrote that for the Baule "all of nature is supernatural, [and] there is no practical human activity that does not implicate, or which does not refer to, a supernatural context." The downcast gaze I mentioned earlier is critical, because for the human order to remain intact, people must respect each other. The Baule word for the verb "respect" means "to think of someone as human." Their universal order has a particular structure: humans create an alliance with nature, by virtue of which a village establishes itself and people work the land. Outside and transcending the human and natural orders lies the Beyond, an ideal place where everything is perfection. Like so much in Baule spirituality, though, it has its correspondence in this world. The Other World is also called "the village of truth," which the scholar Vincent Guerry says exists "in opposition to the village on earth, to this world of appearances where one never knows the basis of things, where people live in untruth."

The Baule are a fetish culture. Fetishes are of two worlds, the supernatural and the material. A fetish is an actual thing and the spirit-presence abiding in the thing, fixed, temporized, and used in the form of a mask, statue, or amulet. Fetishes are forces out of nature channeled in nature for their power. When a fetish is being used by a shaman or diviner, he or she "owns" it, because it's a thing, and so the diviner can also bargain or argue with it, even boss it around. One anthropologist observed that if an adept isn't satisfied with the fetish's results, he blackmails it: "Watch out! I'm going to ditch you and find myself another fetish!"

ture are diviners who perform whose meanings can be

"read." Sometimes they use a most curious object called the "mouse oracle," a two-chambered mouse house made of wood or clay. A mouse lives in the lower part and enters the upper chamber when the diviner has opened the oracle's lid and sprinkled rich chaff there. While eating, the mouse

Standing male and female figures, wood, undated

disturbs small beaded or bone shafts attached to a small plate (usually brass or tortoise shell), and the diviner then reads the new arrangement. The mouse possesses such power because it's in direct contact with the earth and bears the earth's fate-determining powers.

But the most compelling of figures, in terms of their control over lives, are the otherworld partners. Each tribal member has a spouse of the opposite sex who lives in the Beyond, who will sometimes step into this world and jealously demand recognition by his or her earth partner by making some kind of trouble, usually over marriage or sexuality. Diviners counsel troubled people to acknowledge the partner's existence by having a fetish figure carved. In Baule consciousness there is a person in the carved wood, and its existence is recognized by wearing it or carrying it around. These fetishes are smallish, 10 to 15 usually, but sometimes only 2 or 3 inches high and worn on beaded necklaces. Each idealizes human beauty of some kind. One 3-inch male is thoroughly modern: olive drab V-neck shirt, shorts, slicked hair, hands in his pockets. A traditional feminine figure is even smaller: her hands, tucked to her belly, triangulate with her navel, which suggests it's a fertility fetish. Respectful recognition carries over into the way the partner is treated. Every week, on the same night, a Baule spouse sleeps alone so that the Other World partner may visit in his dreams, and the following morning the spouse addresses the partner and makes small offerings.

I'm being a pedantic windbag here because, although the exhibition contains relatively few objects, it's dense with anthropological information, and there's no catalog, which is a real drawback. You'll need time and patience. The wall labels elaborate what I've said here and tell all you need to know to understand the origins and meaning of the stuff on view. These objects of beauty will reward the effort.

Events that are underlined occur after October 30.

Gleeful Martyrs

If you sketched their movements on a blackboard, they might resemble a mathematical theorem.

hen I read David Auburn's Proof, I wondered why it won the 2001 Pulitzer Prize for drama. The play read flat and derivative, raising many of the same questions as Tom Stoppard's Arcadia: how could a young woman — italics Stoppard's—with scant mathematical training formulate a theory requiring computers 150 years before they were invented?

Both plays also probe intellectual gifts. Our stereotypical genius is an old coot with a fountain of white hair formulating Unified Field Theories on some shady Princeton lane. How could 16-year-old Thomasina Coverly, in Arcadia, or Catherine, in Proof, be a genius? They seem so ... everyday. So what does genius look like? Is it fixed or fleeting? Does it come with a price?

In always arresting choices, co-directors Delicia Turner Sonnenberg and Sam Woodhouse give the San Diego Rep's Proof a physical response to these theatrically static questions. The play's four characters are Robert, a math giant in his 50s (and long past his prime?); Catherine, 25; her sister Claire, 29; and Hal, a 28-year-old hyper grad student. The actors scurry, make elaborate crosses, drape over a couch, stand on a table, poke through windows, and flit about like sand fleas. This is one blocked show but doesn't feel that way because the actors race, in response to the text, like quick minds — at the speed of thought. If you sketched their movements on a blackboard, they might resemble a mathematical theorem.

Jerry Sonnenberg's set reinforces these visual correlatives. The exterior of a 19th-century Chicago manse, the set's as bulky as the movements are light. Weathered brick walls and curtains the color of faded cardboard make the place look – and Catherine says that before he died Robert lost his mind and shuffled around like a "very smelly ghost."

When we first see her, Catherine's in dark depression — what Einstein once called "promiscuous misery." Her father's gone ("I'm glad he's dead," she says, but does she mean it?). In his last years he suffered from hypergraphia: a compulsive need Van Gogh had, among others, to cover paper with markings. Robert wrote 103 notebooks. Was he working on a new mathematical code, or deciphering messages sent him, through the Dewey decimal system, by aliens? One of the notebooks does have a paradigm-shifting proof. But who conceived it? Did Robert make a comeback, or was it - no way! - Catherine?

Owing to illness — get your flu shots, folks! — I caught Proof two weeks after it opened. The production was on its feet and running, literally (it's a shame critics review opening nights; much saner, in many ways, would be seeing a show mid-run). The production had time to generate the nuances that give Auburn's script life.

Some of the show's finest moments were its least "dramatic," when the excellent cast just let their characters be: among them the father/daughter intricacies (Sam Woodhouse's touching Robert, who sheds decades — and his madness? — before our eyes; Danica McKellar's almost bottomless Catherine, the actor offering emotional "proof" for several different Catherines); or the anti-romantic courtship she performs with shy/manic Hal (gymnastic Francis Gercke); or younger/older sister complexities, and is Cheryl Kenan Fording's Claire a compassionate sis or Simon Legree?

The adroit production balances mathematical certitude with that most Heisenbergian of Uncertainty Principles, the mystery of human relations.

To show them he means business, when Lucien appears before the state mental ĥealth review board, he'll wear his bright red Spider-Man T-shirt. Arnold wants to emigrate to Russia but needs a map. These are Tom Griffin's "boys next door": Lucien and Norman have developmental disabilities, Arnold is a marginal depressive, and Barry is a "grade A schizophrenic, teetering on the edge." Jack Palmer, their service coordinator, may have been on the job — which resembles raising quadruplets — far too long. It cost him a marriage, and now he may lose his only

Many years ago, Lamb's

Players staged The Boys Next Door at their National City theater. It was a signature show for the company. There are times in their current restaging when the acting verges on cartoon, others when it vaults over the top. But there are also moments of magic.

As when Robert Smyth's rotund, smitten Norman dances with Deborah Gilmour Smyth's mentally challenged, spiritually radiant Sheila. Jack Palmer sets the scene by saying that the chaperoned dances are either the happiest or saddest places on earth. At first it sounds like a playwright's hyperbole, carving out unearned, privileged terrain. And the mind ponders other bipolar candidates (epiphanies in foxholes? gleeful martyrs? cursed baseball franchises just innings from the World Series?). Then Norman and Sheila dance — okay, they klutz, lucky not to trample feet. Suddenly we see from their perspective. Embraced by swirling stars, they feel like

Fred and Ginger. The Boys Next Door requires this double quality. Much of it is sitcom, the humor coming from situations and the dreamlike logic of the characters (to hide an accident in the men's room, Arnold pours water all over himself). At the same time, and without ever using the patronizing word "special,"

Boys depicts the terrors and elations of unconditional innocence, which may indeed be the happiest and saddest condition of all. ■

In Joe Penhall's talky, fascinating drama, Christopher may or may not be paranoid schizophrenic. A black émigré from Africa, he swears his father was Idi Amin (Delusional? Amin did have 43 children from five wives). At a London psychiatric hospital, trainee Bruce and senior advisor Robert cross-diagnose Christopher. Bruce wants more study; Robert says send him home. But how much of their readings come from other than textbook symptoms? And what about Christopher? Is he trapped between conflicting, possibly racist, interpretations; or — to secure a safe haven at the hospital — does he try to influence them? Blue/Orange wanders, on occasion (and tests credulity when both psychiatrists do an in-yourface diagnosis of their patient), but under Richard Seer's taut, rapidfire direction, and three quality performances (try to "read" Teagle F. Bougere's wonderfully antsy, edgy Christopher; or, for that matter, Brian Hutchinson's harried Bruce, and the excellent Ned Schmidke's agenda-laden Robert), the Old Globe's in-theround production presents plural beings in a world where the old categories no longer account for gray's myriad shadings. Grassroots Greeks

6th @ Penn's former "Seven Weeks of Greeks" has become so popular it's a regular series. And what a great idea! To reacquaint local audiences with the masterworks of ancient Greek drama, Linda Castro and David Cohen offer staged readings The approach is refreshing. There's no attempt at polished work or choices set in granite. Instead, the actors treat the text as if this were the first day of rehearsal, the threshold of exploration. They read in a semicircle. There's some movement, a suggestion of costumes, and (re)acting, but the emphasis is on the word and, as in all Greek drama, on an unfolding story at once hairon-fire irrational and as logical as a courtroom debate. It doesn't take long to see how pertinent and compelling these plays are. An informal Late-Night Catechism Every Monday night, during summer, the Laguna Playhouse stages the popular "interactive adult cate-chism class," taught by a sister from the old spare-not-the-rod school. The concept doesn't sound like much. The sister is substituting for the regular teacher (it's his poker night, don't tell a soul). She used to have the job but was deemed too strict for contemporary students. And the class is just that, part of a course on Catholic doctrine. But the sister's authoritarianism takes it to unforeseen places (you can hear cries of recognition from the audience, especially when sister brings out a hard ruler and taps her palm). The results, the two times I've seen the show: a.) an almost nonstop evening of comedy; and b.) a thought-provoking look at education, religion, and much more. The sister, it turns out, is not kidding. Worth a try.

National Comedy Theatre

ComedySportz changed its name, but its methods (and madness) remain the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked Priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone's TheatreSports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on ActroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a "challenge match" against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played "Emotional Sympathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit, rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledged failure, abundantly, then forgot it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Relatively Speaking

Alan Ayckbourn's early comedy relies heavily — at times mind-bogglingly — on what isn't said. Greg wants to ask Ginny's parents for her hand in marriage. So he goes to an address on a matchbook. He meets Philip and Sheila, who aren't Ginny's folks (Philip's her former lover and employer). Because Greg assumes he's talking to Ginny's parents, miles of dramatic irony ensue. In a preview I saw, it took the North Coast Repertory Theatre a long time to get, and keep, rolling. A languid first scene and slow set change didn't help. Also, in Speaking, Ayckbourn was much more concerned with crafting architecture — piling complications upon complications — than character. And a quality cast (including the ever-funny Brian Salmon and a seemingly innocent Susan Denaker as Philip and Sheila) wrestled with the script throughout. The production settled in, somewhat, when Marty Burnett's glorious set meta morphosed from Kansas to Oz. If vou can accept Avckbourn's avoidance of the obvious question without shouting, "Greg, don't you see?" - and if the cast comes together, the production might be worth a visit down the road. Rough Crossing

Sandor Turai and Alex Gal have four and a half days - the time it'll take their ocean liner to go from England to New York — to write a musical comedy. Time's just one obstacle: a storm threatens, and young composer Adam vows to quit when his new love's unfaithful. Tom Stoppard adapted Rough Crossing from Ferenc Molnar's 1924 comedy Play About the Castle. Compared to Stoppard's Arcadia or The Coast of Utopia, Crossing's a busman's holiday piffle. But fun. Director Stan Wojewodski Jr. moves his cast at farce speed. And when the storm hits, on John Coyne's Art Deco set light fixtures flop and a stack of plates shimmies like a Slinky toy. It's hard to tell who's having more fun: Mark Nelson as a ship's steward/raisoneur with all the answers; or Alan Coates and Jennifer Roszell. As the romantic leads in the musical and ex-romantic leads in life, they get to break every rule of acting and ham to the heav ens. Even with a strong cast and direction, the production nods on occasion. Bits that work in the first act succeed less in the second. And the ending gains more from Katherine Roth's ersatz costumes (women in opened oyster shells and tall pirate ship hats) than a script that lets it down. Crossing melts in the mouth, but something does linger. Amid the hijinks Stoppard pays quiet tribute to collaboration. On the Atlantic, and in the theater, no one is an island.

San Diego Theatresports

making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add competitive scene making, with the audience awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odiousness of comparisons used in this format, but San Diego Theatresports' "game show" is a hoot. The 90-minute evening offers different bits. The show I caught had "Team Sports" — two pairs of players competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla Theatre" - five directors invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit" (other formats include "Micetro" and "Improv Survivors"). Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, callow youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group makes the hits much more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, has written one of the few brilliant books (Improv) I've ever read about making the ater. And they put his pearls to good use. Their motto: "Remember, when it's not funny, it's art." Worth a try.

Triple Espresso: A Highly Caffeinated Comedy

Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffee house 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend "Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard," or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" -Hugh plays '70s tunes on the piano. He and his companions, here to celebrate Hugh's anniversary, got stuck in the '70s. The trio used to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they admit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept characters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackerjack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficulties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudodrama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. Guerra said he was surprised, especially since he dedicated the previous two shows of his Local 9-4-9 to the award nominees.

"We regret that our commitment to the Red Hot Chili Peppers concert prohibits us from taking part in the awards," said station manager Darrel Goodin.

"By the time Kevin asked FM-94/9 to get involved, the station already had prior commitments," said Guerra. On the night of the SDMA ceremony, FM-94/9 was broadcasting live from the Red Hot Chili Peppers show at the Coors Amphitheater.

"I'm the last person to get involved in station politics," said Guerra, then adding, "If I want to do something and not be involved in something political, I guess I'll have to do something on my own."

"I share Al's frustration with the small-time politics

Does this mean that Al Guerra is planning to organize an alternative to the San Diego Music Awards?

"No comment," said Guerra.

On the SDMA website, Guerra was listed as one of the five members of the SDMA board of directors as recently as four weeks ago. Hellman has since removed Guerra's name from the list.

blink-182's ten-date "DollaBill Tour" will cost patrons only $1. The series of November club dates was top secret until being announced on MTV last Friday. "We're paying for this ourselves," singer/guitarist Tom DeLonge told MTV News. "It's a chance for us to just come back together because we always play gigantic stages. Mark, Travis, and I are always, like, 30 feet away from each other, so we get to come back closer and remember what it's like. It's so much fun to play in the smaller places.'

The band originally wanted the shows to be free, but host clubs balked. "They didn't want kids showing up and getting angry or hurting each other trying to get in a small venue because it was all free, first come, first served." Blink's new album (as yet untitled) hits stores November 18. The first single, "Feelin' This," will debut on MTV's Making the Video Halloween eve.

The DollaBill Tour opens November 6 at the Avalon in Boston and wraps up in San Diego at Soma on November 21. Tickets for the Soma show are only available through MTV.com, and they go on sale today.

"When people would ask, we would tell them we were on tour." But the truth, according to Tabularasa lead MC Matt Kirk, was that his four-man hip-hop band from Taos, New Mexico, was living out of their 32-foot RV while they tried to break into the local music scene.

"We were actually on a tour of neighborhoods looking for two-car parking spots. Our favorite spot was on Fanuel Street off of Garnet. Everybody in PB is familiar with that bus."

Kirk credits a friend for giving them a career-boosting suggestion.

"We had a generator on the side of the bus. We got this great idea that we would pull into these beach parking lots in OB, PB, and Mission Beach and play until the cops came. For two months in January and February of 2001 we played every weekend, sometimes twice a day."

Kirk said all 1000 copies of their Land of Entrapment CDs were sold at their guerilla beach gigs.

Elvis Presley's bass player for eight years was San Diegan Jerry Scheff. He had just written his first song for Elvis ("Fire Down Below"), but the King died a few days before recording it. Scheff also played on a few Doors albums, and with Barbra Streisand, the Monkees, and Elvis Costello.

"His son is a great bassist, too," a musician friend tells me. "He's with Chicago

I ask Jason Scheff, Jerry's son, if he ever met Elvis, and he says, "No, I never met him. My dad came to town on Elvis's last tour, and my two brothers and my grandmother and I saw the show at the San Diego Sports Arena. And he flew us to Las Vegas two weeks later. My dad told us we'd have really doesn't get old. We've had so many hits, we have to change songs around just so we can keep playing all of them." How many originals are

Did you talk to Elvis?
"No. He was pretty far gone by that point."

Did your dad tell you some cool Elvis stories?

"Actually, he didn't talk much about him. I think he got sick of everybody always asking him the same questions."

Do you ever get tired of doing the same Chicago hits, night after night?

players, and Robert Lamm. He was the singer before Peter and sang all those hits like 'Does Anybody Really Know What Time It Is?' 'Saturday in the Park,' 'Beginnings,' and all those."

You had one solo album, Chauncy, that came out six years ago. When will you have another?

"People keep asking me that. But I have four kids now and a career with the band, so I'm not overly motivated to make another record."

Scheff doesn't live in San Diego anymore, but Chicago makes it here at least once a year for shows. They played Viejas on September 23. On Tuesday, October 28, Scheff will be in town doing a fundraiser for his drama teacher from Point Loma High School.

"Larry Zeiger was my drama teacher, and I had him in 10th grade for English. I left school at the beginning of 11th grade. He tells the story of how I was failing his class, and he felt sorry for me because I had potential, but he didn't feel I was applying myself. He said, 'All you have to do is this one assignment, and I'll pass you.' It was pretty easy, and I said, 'I don't need to pass the grade, because I'm going to be a rock star.' He said, 'You need something to fall back on. What happens if it doesn't work out in music?' I said, 'You don't have to worry about that.'

"In the past everything was under one person.... It is my understanding that the venue is going to be opening up to other people and other promoters."

Electronica promoter/producer Jonathan Gage, who has presented the Thievery Corporation and Jazzanova at 4th & B and Brick by Brick, says he had a "good discussion" with the new owners of the Belly Up Tavern. Gage said it appears that the Belly Up is opening up to the idea that outside

We have spoken to him," said Steve Goldberg, coowner. Goldberg admitted he is seriously looking at having a DJ-driven electronica night once a week. "Maybe even a Friday or Saturday.

Goldberg said he is "learning every day" about new ways to energize the Belly Up.

Last Saturday, for the first time in its 29-year history, the Belly Up invited an outsider to present a local band showcase. Jim Austin, coowner of Redsand clothing and a musician himself (bassist for Bartender's Bible and the Golden Hill Ramblers), presented Anya Marina's CD-release party with fellow performers Reeve Oliver and Bad Credit. "We want to integrate the Belly Up with surf-related local talent. He said he is looking to have Austin eventually present a showcase "twice a month or maybe even once a week."

promotion, nothing works." Last week he announced that Kira Finkenberg would be the Belly Up's new director of marketing and advertising, who will work three days a week at the Belly Up. Finkenberg will still maintain her own marketing company called the Kira Co. out of her home office. She handles marketing for L.A. promoters Bill Silva and Andy Hewitt (who present music events at the Hollywood Bowl, Hard Rock Café, and the Joint in L.A.). Finkenberg previously worked at House of Blues Concerts in San Diego.

Finkenberg replaces Scott MacDonald, who, Goldberg says, will remain at the Belly Up to help Diana Martinez book local artists.

Rodeo Records Travis Dahl Ramona

odeo is a punk, alternative, and hardcore label. Currently signed are the bands 21 Rest, In Your Face, Backyard, Flak, the Bloaks, and Dahl's own band, London Falling. "It's pretty much nonprofitable (as opposed to nonprofit)," he says. Dahl distributes product over the Internet at www.rodeorecords.com. "My goal for the year pretty much is to have Rodeo Music Volume One, a compilation." He says the record should be completed by year's end. "The label idea," Dahl admits, "kinda started out as a joke." He describes making bogus labels for his own CD so that other people in the industry would think that he was actually signed. In time, Rodeo morphed into the real thing. "Hopefully, we'll grow into a big company like other punk labels, like Epitaph. There's a lot of talent up here in Ramona," he adds, "pretty much for lack of anything else to do."

Surfdog Records Dave Kaplan, president Niels Schroeter, general manager

Surfdog Records, Surfdog Music Publishing, and Surfdog Entertainment Marketing all started in 1992. Dave Kaplan Management started back in 1986 with UB40. Surfdog's current mainstay clients, says Surfdog promotions manager Deana Cacus, are ex-Stray Cat Brian Setzer and rock guitarist Gary Hoey. The label/management company also represents and is the label home for local bands Slightly Stoopid, Agent 51, and Voivod (featuring ex-Metallica bassist Jason Newsted).

Surfdog's roster has included in the past Sprung Monkey, the B-Side Players, and the Royal Crown Revue. Surfdog releases a compilation every couple of years under the acronym of MOM or Music for our Mother Ocean, which benefits the Surfrider Foundation. As for Surfdog's future, Cacus is mum. All she will say is that there are projects on the drafting table. "We've been working," she hints, "with more local bands."

Cargo Music Eric Goodis Rose Canyon

Eric Goodis moved Cargo Music to San Diego from his native Montreal in 1986. Cargo, along with Surfdog, is considered by industry insiders to be one of the biggest of the local labels. "The biggest name we had," Goodis tells me, "is blink-182." Indeed, Cargo Music released blink's first CD (in later years, the Poway band signed with MCA). "From a San Diego perspective, Rocket from the Crypt started on this label," says Goodis. "We still have bands like Deadbolt, Three Mile Pilot, Black Heart Procession, and many more." Goodis uses the word eclectic to describe his taste in music. "We also represent Lisa Sanders from San Diego, Mary Dolan, Eve Harris, Cindy Lee Berryhill." But Goodis says that Cargo is gradually slowing down. "We're putting out fewer and fewer records," he says. "We're becoming more of a distributor. We're down to about six releases a year. Right now, we're doing a lot of rockabilly and psychobilly. We signed some bands from Germany." Goodis scouts all talent himself. "Now that we're doing distributing, we pick up new bands just through the distribution. We'll see what's selling well and listen to the CDs," he says. "We get tons of demos."

"The full name of the company is Crows Feet Productions and Recording Label," says Michael

Dave Kaplan and Neils Schroeter of Surfdog Records

McClune, "just in case one day we actually get into that." Two years ago, McClune founded Crows Feet with partner Betsie Brown. Their intention was to run a record label as well as a production company. So far, the label has not materialized.

Calendar Music scene

"I can say that one of the reasons that we chose not to go with a record label as the primary function of our business is that the labels...have sort of an irrational exuberance about the music industry. They do it the way they do it," he says, "even though you can see the writing on the wall."

"The big labels," he explains, "the Sonys and the Universals, 90 percent of their releases don't make a profit, so they wait around looking for that one that will cover all the others. In any other business, that just doesn't make sense."

For now, Crows Feet books and promotes concerts including the Backstage Blues Series at Humphrey's. McClune and Brown also function as publicists for XM satellite radio, the Delgado Brothers, and Southside Records in L.A.

Accretions Marcos Fernandes Mission Hills

"I used to have an office space," says Fernandes, "but now I pretty much run out of the home." As for employees, Fernandes says, "We're an artist-based label, meaning that all the artists on the label are fully involved with their projects. I'm also a member of the Trummerflora Collective, so a lot of the Collective members actually end up being on the label."

Accretions was founded to distribute Fernandes's own group, Burning Bridges. In Eric Howarth. "M-Theory is also a record store too. We're right on 30th and Juniper, across from the Whistle Stop bar." Howarth's assistant, Michael Zimmerman, helps run both the label and the record store. Howarth also uses interns from various colleges. "Right now, we've got three

"There's a lot of talent up here in Ramona, pretty much for lack of anything else to do."

1994, Fernandes began to include other bands on the Accretions roster. But unlike operations at a conventional label where an artist is signed to a contract that includes recording, promotions, and/or distribution, Fernandes doesn't sign groups. "There's no exclusive or anything like that. It's all based on each project." Product, he says, is sold online at www.accretions.com or distributed by Drimalla. Fernandes says, "We usually have three or four releases a year."

M-Theory Records Eric Howarth South Park

"The label has been going for a little over four years now," says bands signed to the label. We've got one San Diego band that we're working with called Congress of the Cow. And we're working with a couple of artists out of Portland." Distribution is via www.mtheory.com and at their store. Howarth says M-Theory puts out, on average, three releases each year. "We released Creeper Lagoon's DreamWorks record and their Spin Art record on vinyl. Another band that's on V2 now, Alien Crime Syndicate — I would say they're probably the biggest couple of names from our past. Most of the stuff we put out," says Howarth, a former Intel account manager who is also a musician, "is indie rock kind of stuff. I don't have a policy about only putting out a certain kind of music. It's just gotta be music I love. You don't do a record label for the money."

Silver Girl Records Keith York San Diego

York started Silver Girl in 1993. "Basically, it's a one-man operation at this point. I sell a lot of stuff through distributors," he says, "but bands on tour sell the most material through their contact with people." Silver Girl is an indie rock label. "My stuff is more pop, more melodic. A lot of my friends have labels themselves, and they're into the noise or punk rock end of the spectrum."

Bands signed to Silver Girl have included Buck-O-Nine, fluf, Dewey Defeats Truman, AM Vibe, Red Dye Number Five, and Trackstar from San Francisco. York works a day job at KPBS-TV.

"I teach at San Diego State, and I also have a television consulting business."

York's goal?

"To run my label for another ten years and run it as I can, not dictated by whether or not it makes a profit."

Revolt Records David Devore Robert Stojak El Cajon

"I handle the business side of things, and Robert handles our recording studio," says David Devore. Devore formerly worked in promotions at the Record Plant in Los Angeles. He says his experience with major labels spawned Revolt Records.

"We kind of have two separate businesses we've rolled up into one. We do that to sustain the label." Revolt offers a commercial recording studio along with label support; the label has been in business for three years. "We specialize in a lot of things," savs Devore. "I come from Hollywood, where genres are not a limitation but an opportunity. We have released...Square Circle, who's been very successful on a regional level. They've won a number of local awards."

Devore lists what the label doesn't cover. "We don't do country, jazz, adult contemporary," he says. Bands signed to the label have included Twerp, the Third, and the Beverly Killbillys. According to Devore, the Killbillys are "a psychobilly-crossover-industrial-rock band."

Double Barrel Records Scott Blinn San Marcos

Guitarist Scott Blinn started the label in 1999 as a means of distributing his own product, which at that time consisted of CDs put out by his old band the Mississippi Mudsharks.

"It's kind of a project-byproject operation," says Blinn. Double Barrel has released CDs by local harmonica player Billy Watson, and the Tiki Torchers, another of Blinn's bands, and has distributed product for Bill McGee and Billy Thompson.

"The reason I started the label was to distribute a lot of local blues and roots acts, guys that already had records done. What I did was, I got packages together and sent them to my distributors in Europe," Blinn built a lucrative working relationship with Crosscut Records (one of Europe's biggest blues distributors) when the Mudsharks toured in Europe in 1996. Crosscut now distributes for Double Barrel. Blinn also distributes product on the Web at stiki@prodigy.net. Blinn says that sales in Europe vastly surpass those in the States. "The Mudsharks had two numberone-selling records," he says. The Tiki Torchers weighed in at number four on the charts. "My record was right under Stevie Ray Vaughan. Luther Allison was number two, and Albert King was number one. I was freaked out at number four," he says, "because all the guys above me were dead." ■

BY DAVE GOOD

The rock outfit Queens of the Stone Age didn't fully grab my attention until their third album in which Dave Grohl appeared as drummer. I just didn't hear anything extraordinary in the previous work of guitarist Josh $\textbf{Homme}, \ \text{even though he was highly regarded}$ and had worked with one of my favorite bands, Soundgarden. At that time Grohl's name had cachet through his previous employment in Nirvana, the tabloid-style lawsuit with Courtney Love over who actually owned Nirvana's music, and the heavy radio play Grohl was getting via his power-pop project the Foo Fighters. Grohl seemed destined for stardom and a box on Hollywood Squares. It came as something of a surprise then when he took a summer vacation from the Fighters and went on the road with the relatively hardcore Oueens.

After a false start or two in the music industry, Homme and Nick Oliveri moved to California's Palm Desert and founded Queens of the Stone Age. At first they referred to their music as robot rock — minimalist heavy metal combined with the repetition of trance. Later, the industry would call the Queens' music stoner metal. I think of them as a guitar-heavy band that's trying not to be a guitar-heavy band. Unlike modern post-punk, the Queens left the guitar solos in, but guitar tones are reduced to a dark presence that underscores everything like a chorus of buzz saws. There's choice innovation at times — the blues vibraphone, for example, on "The Lost Art of Keeping a Secret" makes for uneasy, spooky footing. Elsewhere, the obvious British Invasion influence keeps the playing spare, the songwriting melodic, and the vocals sounding innocent. Well, not so innocent, really. I won't reprint any lyrics here, but listen closely to "Feel-Good Hit of the Summer." The song says a lot about the group's collective stoner mentality. The name

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

There's a brief scene in the movie School of Rock where a Fugazi sticker is clearly visible. Other than that, there's almost no mention of indie rock in the Jack Black picture. Too bad. There's a good story to be told about a reallife thirtysomething fourth-grade teacher whose strange, home-recorded music made him the toast of the indie world.

It's such a good story that many fans of that teacher, Rob Pollard, and his band, Guided by Voices, have had a hard time accepting the idea of Pollard as a professional musician. But it's true. He gave up teaching many years ago to be a full-time rock star. We know what happened to that dream. Still, there is a third act to the Pollard story. In the past few years, he has released a dizzying number of recordings: solo projects, collaborations, works by imaginary bands, even a rejiggered album by '80s band the Phantom Tollbooth, with Pollard contributing new lyrics and vocals. And of course, there has been GBV. To some extent, new GBV albums are now like new Rolling Stones albums - little more than an excuse to go out on tour again. And GBV's shows are still great, with Pollard going through a case of Rolling Rock before the encore, and the audience doing its best to keep

But the most recent album, Earthquake Glue, is good, too. While a little short of hooks compared to the earlier material, the newer GBV songs showcase a hard-rock ensemble that's more limber than ever. As always for a hyperprolific writer like Pollard, some of the new numbers are better than others, but the imbalance has a way of work ing itself out onstage.

The Sultans and the Go also perform.

TIA JUANA TILLY'S

Avenida Revolución and 7th (near Caliente) Tijuana, Mexico 011-52-664-685-9015

MUSIC ➤ rock, pop hits

SPECIAL NIGHTS ➤ none; closed during Mexican holidays or elections

CLIENTELE ➤ 18 and up, as are all bars in Mexico; 75% American tourists (mostly Caucasian, some Asian), 25% locals; 50% female; most are early 20s

COVER ➤ none

HOURS > Monday–Thursday, 4:00 p.m.–2:00 a.m.; Friday and Saturday, 4:00 p.m.–4:00 a.m.

DRINKS ➤ bottles of Corona and Pacifico, $2.25; Negra Modelo, $3.75; Modelo Especial, $3.75; happy hour every day from 4:00 p.m.-7:00 p.m. (draft beer during this time is $.99; mixed drinks two for one at $2.99); ten different tequilas; I had a Cadillac Margarita that was $10 and strong

FOOD ➤ fajitas, $10.99; ribs, $11.99; combo plates, $7.99; appetizers, $5.99; lots of other restaurants and food carts up and down the street (sign across the street says "breakfast at 9")

ACCESS ➤ this is not the Tilly's located on 5th and Revolución; it's on 7th and Revolución; cab from border is $5, but it's only a 15-minute walk

DRESS ➤ casual; lots of college guys wearing sandals and Nikes, shorts, baseball caps, jeans, and Tshirts ("UCLA," "Tommy Hilfiger," and "I ate the worm")

DANCE FLOOR ➤ none (the tiny area the band plays is on same floor as the customers, right next to the front tables)

FIRE EXITS ➤ three: one onto 7th, one onto Revolución, and one that exits from the back kitchen area BATHROOMS ➤ men's had one urinal and one stall; a sink with liquid soap but not paper towels or air dryers; women's had one stall, a sink with liquid soap, and paper towels; both clean and graffiti-free CAPACITY ➤ 100 (the other Tilly's down the street probably holds 225)

SPECIAL AREAS ➤ none; this is all one big rectangle; you can see the band from any area in the place; you are allowed to smoke at your table (as in all places in Mexico)

FURNISHINGS ➤ 25 tables inside; 8 tables outside with umbrellas; a ramp for wheelchair access; the kitchen has a large open area so you can see them cooking your food

DECIBEL LEVEL ➤ 93, but that was at the farthest point from the band (about 100 feet from any amplifiers); 105 last week at Lestat's

QUOTABLE ➤ "Are you sure this is the right Tilly's they were supposed to meet us at? Because if it is, those assholes are already an hour late."

A different conversation: "Every one of these bars looks the same. Why are we even down here?" His friend replied, "Because 19-yearolds can't drink in San Diego."

There's not much here. The other Tilly's, located about a mile down the street, looks ten times nicer inside, holds more people, and seems to draw a bigger crowd. But this location has bands on Friday and Saturday. Juan, our waiter, said, "Usually the bands we like to get are in the summertime, when more people come here. Not so much with the music during winter months."

I talked to a group of eight college students about the band (with the name that sounded like "Los Pistoleros Fighters"), and they said, "We didn't come here to see them. There's an AM/PM minimart across the street, and we needed aspirin. We just stopped in for a few minutes. We prefer the places that play dance music with dance floors."

Album Name: Ocean EP (2002)

Artist: Ithaca Label: self-released

Songs: 1) Ocean 2) I Know She's There 3) See Me

4) Instrumental 5) Drops and Resets

Price/Where Available: www.ithacamusic.net for $5 Band Members: Jeff Williams (guitar/vocals), Karl Bolton (quitar/vocals), Rob Dennler (bass), Casev Cravy (drums) Extra Info: Ithaca just released a CD with Color Turning, and it's available through Can't Never Could Recordings (www.cant nevercouldrecordings.cjb.net/). Ithaca plays its last shows at the Root Beer Café in Temecula, October 24, 9:00 p.m., and in Tijuana at Los Zapatos Negros, November 13, 10:00 p.m.

Website: www.ithacamusic.net

Last month four-piece indie rock band Ithaca decided to call it quits after two years of performing together. Nevertheless, their five-track Ocean EP

On a visceral level, the CD is packaged and presented as great chill-out surfer music, but there's this underlying air of somberness to it. Piano solos dispersed throughout the disc usually culminate with a few powerful notes. The addictive vocal harmonies of frontman Jeff Williams and Karl Bolton add to the desolate feeling. Their repeated lyrical phrases, for example "Oh, I soar with the gods" or "I know, I know, I know, she's there," backed by resounding guitars, produce something cathartic.

The tracks are lengthy, each over five minutes. In 'See Me," despite formulaic wailing paired with a standard three-chord guitar method, the song wears well through repeated listening. "Instrumental" showcases the band's tight musicianship in a nearly flawless seven-minute stream of melody.

Be ready to hit the advance button on the CD player with "Drops and Resets." The deceiving track starts out as docile as the others, but the slightly faster-paced melody is soon shattered by a vocal calamity that rivals anything else previously experienced on the album. (And they were doing so well.) Still, four out of five songs isn't bad.

An old friend of mine, Jan the computer whiz, called me a couple of weeks ago. She wanted to give her 80-year-old mother, who lives in Escondido, a special a day on the town. I immediately thought of the Golden Egg and the Fireside, a couple of restaurants I enjoy for their good heartland cooking and small-town atmosphere. One is an excellent breakfast house, the other's an old-fashioned

First stop: breakfast. The Golden Egg Omelet House has been in business for about 20 years under the same owners, John and Carlene Lovett. For the last 18 of them, the same two chefs have headed the kitchen. Stability pays off.

The restaurant is tucked away behind a McDonald's under the rise of Centre City Parkway. The building looks like another faux-Spanish mall rat — but a Coco's it's not. When you step inside, the first thing you see to your right is a blackboard listing the day's specials and featuring seasonal items such as fresh local fruit. Straight ahead is a long, eccentric room. Hanging from the brick walls and open rafters are dolls, bent-wire craft objects, droll signs, windchimes. Over the years, Mrs. Lovett has collected these oddments because they please her. If something pleases you, she'll be more than happy to sell it so that you can

When you take a table, you find the first hint of the quality to come: packets of organic Alta Dena half-and-half. Your waitress shows up with a pot of coffee. Looking around, I noticed that people eating here ranged from nine months to 90-something years, with many tables shared by four generations. I also noticed that the wooden high chairs for the youngest patrons are robust enough to withstand the flailings of the most rambunctious imp. Most of the grownups are obviously regulars, and the waitresses call many of them by name. Like the chefs, these women have been working here for a long time.

The cooking offers big flavors and even bigger portions. Do note, though, that out of consideration for the huge retirement community in Escondido, most dishes arrive barely salted, so go ahead and follow Joy of Cooking — season to taste.

The house specialties are omelets and potato casseroles. The omelets are built on six-ounce ladlefuls of a light, fluffy egg-milk batter (about three eggs' worth) and a mound of filling. It's not the eggs but the fillings that'll fill you. The 30-odd filling choices include everything from Denver to Cal-Mex combos to Italian sausage and peppers. You're not limited to the list, either. For example, when I noticed fresh strawberry crêpes were listed on the specials board, I remembered the sublime strawberry and sour cream omelets I used to devour at the legendary Duke's Tropicana Coffee Shop in Hollywood and asked if I could have this off-menu omelet made for me here. The waitress went to check with the kitchen, and the answer was, "Of course. If we have it, we'll cook it." The berries were sweet and plentiful, crowned by high-quality sour cream. În fact, I liked it even better than the manna at Duke's — lighter eggs, better berries.

The potato casseroles are presented on a separate menu. You have a dozen choices, most with geographic names — Pennsylvania, Chicago, Southwest, etc. My sweetie ordered a Maryland, with bacon, spinach, mushrooms, Swiss cheese, and Hollandaise sauce. It arrived sizzling in an oval French casserole, with the mild gooey cheese melted all over the top. Under the cheese were skinon chunked baking potatoes, their rich flavor marking them as Idahos rather than unpedigreed russets. Intermingled were clumps of spinach, butter-sautéed small button mushrooms, and bits of crisp bacon. Beneath it all was a layer of velvety, lemony Hollandaise. My only complaint was with the food's boxing-ring arrangement on the plate. The spinach was at one corner, the mushrooms in the other: it's hard to split a plate this way.

If neither an omelet nor a casserole punches your clock, your choices include all the other breakfast and lunch favorites — waffles, pancakes, eggs, burgers, and two-inch-high sandwiches on Dutch crunch rolls. You need a big fat mouth to get around one of those.

After breakfast, Jan took her mom on a shopping safari through Escondido's multiplicity of malls. En route, they stopped off to eyeball the downtown construction site where a new movie multiplex is going up, with five new restaurants included. (More on this once they're up and cooking.) Worn out and hungry again, they landed, as I'd recommended, at the Fireside.

This sprawling, 10,000square-foot building was completed in 1948 and houses more than just a restaurant. Numerous civic groups (the Lions, the Republican Women, et al.) convene in its rooms, and a large ballroom does double duty as a dinner theater and nightclub. Singles in their 30s hang out in the bar lounge during the daily three-hour happy hour; on Tuesday's karaoke nights, they transform into werecrooners howling out pop solos. Twentysomethings shoot pool across the hall and return with dates on Saturday night to shimmy to the salsa bands; they come on `after the dinner theater's interactive mystery ends.

By day, the restaurant is a popular lunch spot, offering scaled-down versions of many dinner entrées along with burgers, sandwiches (including a three-tier Monte Cristo), main dish salads, and a half-dozen choices priced at $7 and listed on the menu under the label "Inexpensive and Quick." Appetizers and à la carte dishes are served all day, including a cup of soup or a plate of pasta with garlic butter for just three bucks.

In the evenings the feeling is tranquil. A central fireplace warms diners in the plush booths on both sides. Seniors flock to the early-bird dinners, which offer five entrées at a reduced and affordable price. Younger diners come in a little later, often drawn by the prix-fixe four-course "wine dinner" at $40 per couple (complete with a bottle of one of the house wines).

Chef-owner Ray Alto, a Native American who's also a native of North County, has been in the restaurant business for 35 years, starting as a teenage dishwasher at the Lawrence Welk Resort. He and his wife Arvie bought the Fireside 8 years ago. His dinner menu is an anthology of six decades of ambiwannabe-worldly tious, American cookery, from the chicken Cordon Bleu of the 1950s, through duck à l'orange, herb-breaded rack of lamb, fried onion petals, and pasta with smoked salmon, and on to an up-to-the-minute macadamiacoated halibut. But the most popular attractions feature juicy hunks of beef. Baby boomers who were schooled in Midwestern colleges may feel as if they're back in their junior year, canoodling at one of the romantically dim Continental steakhouses of that time and place.

A couple of classic appetizers of the Continental persuasion piqued my interest. It's been a long time since I last ate snails, and a half-dozen of their meats were served shelled in an escargot dish resembling a round tin for miniature muffins. They were cooked to the point of tenderness and topped with enough garlicky wine-butter sauce to drench several baguettes. We didn't have several baguettes on hand, but the garlic-herb toasts served alongside for dipping were even more delicious. I was less pleased with a set of crab-stuffed mushrooms, with a watery lump of crab that tasted as if it might have come from a can, and a bottle-blond béarnaise sauce nearly as thick and bland as melted cheese. I wished that I'd chosen the prix fixe couples' dinner instead, with its simpler, leaner appetizers.

All dinners include a choice of soup, house green salad, or Caesar salad. The soups are made in-house from scratch. I found the broth of a vegetable-beef soup hearty and clean, but the vegetables were cooked almost to pap. The Caesar dressing only hints of anchovy, and the chopped green herbage is dominated by the tough outer leaves of the romaine.

The Fireside seems timeless, but change sneaks in even here. Two years ago, the restaurant's flyers bore the motto, "The home of dry-aged beef, where beef is treated right.' Today, the kitchen still treats beef well, but they've switched to less costly wet-aged meat. The beef grows tender but no more flavorful during the 26 days it hangs in a vacuum-pack. It's still good — USDA Choice (second to Prime), trimmed of excess fat and gristle. You can choose charbroiled steaks from six different cuts, either served plain or with one of four elaborate garnishes. You can also dig into boneless roast prime rib in three sizes, from 8 to 16 ounces, served with salty au jus and mild horseradish cream

They'll cook your beef as done as you like it, but a disclaimer on the menu warns, "Not responsible for meat cooked at temperatures over medium.' So my sweetie ordered his Filet Mignon Fromage very rare, and that's just how it arrived. "Mmm, good stuff, Maynard," he purred at first bite. The tender slab of meat had been butterflied, stuffed with blue cheese, folded back together, and wrapped in bacon. It was topped with a thick layer of sautéed small mushroom slices, a bit mushy, in a white wine bordelaise sauce flavored with rosemary. I had the petite prime rib, which was still plenty big, with a tender texture and a beefy flavor — but not half so beefy as its dry-aged cousin that I enjoyed two years ago.

All meat entrées come with a medley of steamed broccoli, carrots, baby corn, and green beans with the texture of frozen veggies. For your starch, you can choose baked, mashed, or redskin potatoes, or rice pilaf. The large, soft-skinned russet potato is evidently foil baked (and stripped of its breaches before service) and comes with a palm-size blob of very salty butter and all the sour cream and chopped green onion tops you could want. The Romano cheese mashed potatoes, however, were dense and rather dry: I borrowed some butter from the baked spud to smooth them. There are a half-dozen desserts, but only the tiramisu is made in-house, so we passed.

Jan reported back to me that she and her mom were "just thrilled" (her words) by these two old-timey eateries. Just like me, they were smitten with the luscious all-American breakfasts at the Golden Egg. As for the Fireside, Jan loved her classic shrimp cocktail and her big, straight-up Delmonico steak and baked potato. Her mother, she said, was delighted to re-encounter fancier dishes she'd enjoyed in fancy dinner houses when her G.I. Joe marched home and courted her at restaurants very similar to the Fireside. Perhaps those Continental specialties no longer reflect the rigor of Escoffier, perhaps they get some help from a soupçon of restaurantsupply magic, but they taste good enough to win the hearts and palates of all Escondido. Mission accomplished.

OAXACAN IN P.B.

Last week I reviewed some rare, authentic Mexican cooking up at Hacienda de Vega in Escondido. If you live closer to the city center, the real cuisine is now coming nearer to hand. Gringo's is a dumb name for a Mexican restaurant that's growing serious, featuring the cooking of chef Victor Jimenez (formerly chef de cuisine at Thee Bungalow and Gulf Coast Grill). Jimenez is now delving into his culinary roots, researching regional Mexican cuisines for a hoped-to-be monthly series of dinners. Just back from a sojourn in Oaxaca, he'll be cooking some of that area's most distinctive specialties. His findings will be served at a "fiesta dinner" at the restaurant's "Food of the Gods Festival" on October 29 (preview October 22). The dinner costs $45 per person, or $65 with matched wines, at 4474 Mission Boulevard in Pacific Beach. Phone 858-490-2877 for the necessary reservations. ■

Strike Snacks

ast week. What a week. The strike, the court... For starters, we were in Vons. Yeah. Inside Vons. Carla and I had stacked a week's worth of supplies in our cart. The place was silent as a tomb. Outside you could hear the pickets wolf-whistling anyone who dared to cross the line. People working inside avoided your eyes, and you avoided theirs. Yeah, scabs, them and us. We were standing beside the cans of beans when I cracked.

"I can't do this," I said.

"What? You have people to feed, Bedford. The strikers are worried about getting less health coverage? What company's paying any of ours? None! Who are you thinking of? Them, or us?"

She burst into tears and headed out of the market. "You do what you want," she said way out loud. "These strikers have cars. You don't. How are you going to carry stuff like this home from some godforsaken little store somewhere in the boonies?"

But I had my secret plan: eat out till the strike's over. There have to be enough cheap places, I thought. I unpacked all the groceries we'd collected back onto the shelves and into the freezers, left the way I came in, with nothing, and confessed to the picket guys I couldn't do it. Some even promised to give me a ride to the nearest non-

We ended up eating liquor-store groceries that night. Following morning, I had to go to superior court. Some guy reckoned I owed him money. Had to be there at 7:45. So I got myself up to Clairemont Mesa Boulevard and Complex in Kearny Mesa at the crack. I noticed a bunch of people from my number 20 about to cross Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, all heading for the superior court, looked like.

But across the road they made a beeline for a food truck parked in the lot of Airgas, an industrial oxygen place. They joined other people heading there from Airgas and the superior court. Must be good food.

I followed them, trying to decide if I had time for anything before 7:45.

"Morning!"

The little woman's voice came out from behind the window.

"Morning, my dear," said the guy ahead of me. "The usual."

The lady turned out to be Ngoc Nguyen. Originally from Saigon. Escaped by boat to Malaysia. Arrived here in 1983. She really made an effort to be friendly and outgoing with her customers. I could see they appreciated it.

The guy ahead of me took out a breakfast burrito of bacon, egg, and cheese from a warm stack of them, and a cup of coffee. Gosh. Only $2.50 for the burrito and 50 cents for the coffee. But I was thinking: I've got half an hour to fill, and outside here, it's chilly. So instead I crossed back to a McDonald's. Warm in there. I started to join the line when I saw — aagh! Coffee's 99 cents.

Sigh. So back across the road. But I was glad I did. Ngoc and her nephew Tung had a huge selection of breakfast sandwiches, like bacon, egg, and cheese, or ham, egg, and cheese, mostly $2.50; interesting burritos like chicken curry, also mostly $2.50; and even Chinese food you could have as breakfast, like barbecue-duck rice, or stir-fried beef rice, all $3.00.

This was, like, doable. And Tung said they have a breakfast of two sausage slabs, three eggs any style, and Tater Tots for three bucks. How could you pass that by? I checked my watch. Ten minutes.

Sure, I'll have that breakfast," I said. And boy, it was truly a deal. Cheaper than buying breakfast materials at Vons, I swear. Two generous sausage patties, a big mess of eggs underneath, and a couple dozen potato nuggets in their own little paper bowl. I chewed, we chatted. Tung is from Vung Tau, a beach resort near Saigon. Tung has been back recently. "It's developing big-time," he said. "It's becoming like La Jolla."

The thing to remember about Lee's Catering Truck is they're here, and then they're gone. "We get here at 7:00 a.m.," said Tung, "and we take off about 7:30, for Sorrento Valley, La Jolla, other places. So you've got to catch us while you can.'

Time was a-crunching. I said goodbye and headed for the entrance to the superior court. I put my meal down on a newspaper vending machine. Had to gulp the rest. Boy, it tasted delicious in the rush. It got me thinking. Strike or no strike, there are places like Lee's where you can dine daily and not spend much more than at the supermarket. Plus no dishes to wash! Hey, this could be the start of a whole new social life!

I downed the last two potato nuggets. It was 7:45. Gulp. Time to face the music. Too much to hope the judges would strike too?

"I don't drink first-growth, 30-year-old Bordeaux. I don't think I have to."

rogs: slimy, goofy, up there with the waddling platypus on the inelegance scale. And yet, if you've watched enough nature television, you may have seen a slow-motion shot of a frog's leap. It's the frog's moment of transcendence: the moment after takeoff but before landing when its long hind legs are fully extended behind it, when the frog's lines take on a sweep and curve you would otherwise never associate with a creature that normally appears both angular and lumpy.

was frozen in Zen perfection for Frog's Leap winery by label designer Chuck House. "I felt what was most important was that we could still keep the energy of that motion — the idea of the frog and the leap — but make it a serious label in terms of color. It didn't have to be a bright, goofy label; it was a balancing act." At the time, House was doing occasional design work for the Colonna and Farrell Design Studio, but as he told wine columnist Jake Lorenzo, "That was the first real job I had done completely from the beginning, with my own sense of art direction, and realizing that I knew best." As he later noted, "It turned out to be an extremely successful package for them, and that's where it all started for me. A few months after its release, "Lodovico Antinori called me from Italy and asked if I would like to do some work for them. Of course, it turned out they've been in business for over 600 years." California's celebrated jumping frog, indeed.

Today, House is one-half of the ICON Design Group. The other half is his brother-in-law

Jeffrey Caldewey. With Caldewey, he is co-author of Icon: Art of the Label, a book that serves as a retrospective of each designer's work over the past 30 years or so. Of the two, House comes off as the man of wider extremes, producing severe, classical labels for California wineries like Araujo and Bryant Family that make them look as though they've been in business as long as Antinori, then decorating a bottle of Bonny Doon Riesling with floating pieces of sushi daydreamed by an Asian woman as she reads the Critique of Pure Riesling.

Like Caldewey, House takes his cues more from the producer than from the wine itself. "I'm not attuned to real subtleties in wines. I don't want to get so close to the winemaking that I get locked into an approach just on that basis. I don't drink first-growth, 30-year-old Bordeaux. I don't think I have to in order to understand the way those packages look in the cellar and the way they create a feeling of confidence in what's being produced." Still, he does write in Icon that the label provides a "window into the wine"; you wouldn't want to put a high-end cellar-dweller label on a right-here, right-now quaffer. He grants that when he talks to a producer, he does want to know "the type of wine they're trying to create, and how expensive it's going to be is part of it. If it's going to be an extremely rare and valuable product, you have to create a sense of rarity, the idea that something is worth seeking out." He designs such labels to be "comfortable in the cellar of somebody who has a lot of firstgrowth Bordeaux, who is familiar with the great winemaking traditions of the world. You want something that's going to look at home alongside wines of world-class reputation, especially when it comes to cellaring potential."

When your first thought is for the cellar and not for the supermarket shelf, you don't have to worry so much about being eye-catching. In such instances, House is likely to go for parchment-toned labels adorned with little more than black ink, sometimes without decoration beyond the shapes of the letters. And when letters are all you've got, decisions about what sort of letter shape to use loom larger. "I remember putting the ORNELLAIA label on paper. It has an interesting structure — the O and the R have curved letter forms, and from there on it's straight letters. So you want something with some serif to it, a little bit of warmth and softness to ameliorate the stick quality of it. With Bryant Family Vineyards, again, using script lettering takes words that are not as soft and gives them a voice that's a little more delicate." He compares the effect to a tone of voice. "When you're tuning in your radio, you can immediately tell if you've got NPR or your local morning shock jock. You don't even really have to hear what's being said."

side the cellar as well. In one famous case, House eschewed even the tan of the parchment, writing "Etude Pinot Noir" in black script across an unadorned white label. Years later, the label remains a model of elegance and grace. "There's an almost literary quality to it," says House. Literature has the power to engage the imagination. "If you think about your memorable experience reading Anna Karenina and then [compare it to] seeing the movie Anna Karenina, you usually remember the book. The novel was basically created in our imagination. To leave people with that element of creation and participation makes them full partners in the process.

ange seal. "Their name actually relates to an Anglo-Saxon word for the flow-er, the person who put feathers in the back of the arrow so it would shoot straight. It didn't have anything to do with the traditional notion of flowers. But beyond that, it's my contention that if you have respect for people, they will have respect for you, in a way. Letting people create an image of their own instead of nailing it down with a pretty bouquet creates a partnership with an intelligent public. Again, it was more of an upper-echelon - if it were a six-dollar bottle that was going to be sold at Safeway, I doubt we would have used the same approach. But with a good bottle of wine, you don't have to fool people into anything. You can just share something honest with them, and a small but committed group will respond. It's often surprisingly effective to treat people as if they have some degree of intelligence." ■

DJANGO'S WHITE SEA BASS EN PAPILLOTE (OVEN-ROASTED, SERVED IN FOIL PAPER)

BY GILLES KNAFO

Owner/Chef, Calypso Café and Le Petit Calypso, Leucadia

I created this recipe and named it after my son. I name all my recipes after my staff, my animals, my wife.

What is fun about this dish is that you open a package. First you enjoy the smells, the wonderful aroma. Then what you see is beautiful. What you taste is so good.

I like it because it is easy to do at home on the grill or you can throw it in the oven. Because it is wrapped in foil the fish will come out perfectly moist.

I recommend serving a dry white wine such as a Sancerre, a Chassagne Montrachet, or a Pouilly-Fuisse.

HOW TO DO IT Preheat oven to 350 degrees or prepare a grill.

In a small bowl combine coconut juice, lime juice, and honey with a wire whisk. Set aside. Cut two 12-inch pieces of baking foil and coat with nonstick cooking spray. Place one piece of sea bass in center of each, folding up sides slightly. Place cinnamon stick on top of each piece of fish. Sprinkle each with half of the scallions, lemongrass, and sliced banana. Pour half of the coconut mixture over each. Fold and seal with the foil. Bake in preheated oven for 10 minutes or cook on the grill for 10 minutes, 5 minutes on each side. This recipe serves two.

1 cup coconut juice

INGREDIENTS

½ cup lime juice

2 teaspoons honey 2 4-ounce pieces of fresh sea 2 cinnamon sticks 6 scallions, chopped 2 lemongrass bulbs, chopped (remove outer leaves and > root from stalk before chopping)

NORTH COASTAL

The Armenian Cafe 3126 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 760-720-2233 Long ago, Turkish conquerors brought Armenian food to Greece. At this large cottage with a sundeck overlooking Highway 101, some dishes (e.g., gyros) have traveled in the opposite direction, and the menu also translates the Armenian specialties to the more familiar Greek food vocabulary. The gyro meat mixture is made on the premises; other good choices are Armenian marinated rack of lamb and shish kebab, including kebab-filled breakfast omelets. Music and belly dancing Friday and Sat-urday evenings. Three meals, Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Fidel's Carlsbad 3003 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 760-729-0903, A sister restaurant to the venerable establishment in Solana Beach, the stars here are carnitas; quesadilla with chicken, beef, or pork; tostada suprema; and breast of chicken Milanesa. Open

relatively ordinary renditions of the standard stuffed-tortilla variations. No wheelchair access to rest rooms. Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Inexpensive. — N.W. (5/02)

Oceanside Cafe 1938 South Coast Highway, Oceanside, 760-722-7337. This little place is as "mom and pop" as they get. "Hi honey. You going to have the usual?" That's Shannon. They do lunch, with good burgers, but breakfast's what a lot of folks come for. "Dieter's Downfall," a 3-egg omelet stuffed with ham, bacon, sausage, tomato, Jack, and Cheddar, is wicked. Two other things to try: the "Sausage of the Week" is made next door at the Red and White Market (anything from bockwurst to French apple-chicken sausage). And the dieter's real downfall comes with Marsha's carrot cake or her double chocolate cake - rich, moist, and fresh out of her oven every morning. Breakfast and lunch. Inexpensive.

Potato Shack Cafe 120 West I Street (off South Coast Highway 101), Encinitas, 760-436-1282. Check out the cute potato-toon mural on the side of the building — a sign for spud-lovers to load up on portions sized for lumberjacks from The Lumbervard across the street. American fries (served "All you can eat!"), French fries, potato patties, and baked potatoes with various toppings are the heart of the menu, along with eggs, omelets, biscuits with sausage gravy, and beer-battered onion rings made from sweet reds. If size counts, consider the daunting inchthick "manhole" pancake that's bigger than the plate. Lunch runs to "deli" sandwiches (with potatoes), or a hearty bowl of chili con carne. Arrive early weekends. Open daily, breakfast to late lunch. Inexpensive. — N.W. (10/01)

Ruby's Diner 1 Pierview Way, Oceanside, 760-433-RUBY (7829). One thing about Ruby's: You can build an appetite just getting there. It's at the end of the 1/3 mile-long Oceanside pier. (There's a 50-cent electric wagon, too.) Ruby's is part of a themed "forties diner" chain stretching from LAX to Scottsdale, Arizona. But it's still fun. Shiny Chevy Corvette-style red leatherette and chrome booths, white walls, portholes, old Coca-Cola signs, "Dewey-Warren" presidential buttons, and that view to Hawaii. And pretty darned good-sized servings too, from omelets to the "Super Burger" with Swiss cheese and avocado on a grilled Parmesan sourdough bun. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Tom Giblin's Irish Pub 640 Grand Avenue (at Roosevelt Street), Carlsbad Avenue (at Koosevelt Street), Carlsbad Village, 760-729-7234. Occupying the whole of a handsome, sprawling, blocklong Elizabethan-style building, this friendly "small-townish" saloon offers some above-average pub-grub, especially the perfect, moist corned beef with firm-tender cabbage, the huge, lively salads, and the house-baked brown bread. Boxty (Irish "peasant' potato pancakes, rarely found in California) are done up rather doughy rather than crisp to serve as "wraps" for corned beef and other dishes. Live music on holiday evenings and during happy hours. A large, attractive heated patio next to the parking lot offers some afternoon serenity. Open daily, lunch until late, plus Sunday breakfast/brunch. Inexpensive. — N.W. (3/02)

Trattoria Positano (Cardiff-bythe-Sea) 2171 San Elijo Avenue, Cardiff-by-the-Sea, 760-632-0111. If you're tired of Italian restaurants, you'll be revitalized by this one. Original recipes, wonderful fresh fish, nightly specials, excellent lamb and pastas. Very warm atmosphere. A treasure. Reservations accepted only for parties of six or more; expect a wait at prime dinner hours, especially on weekends. Lunch and dinner six days, Sundays dinner only. Upper moderate. — E.W. (6/98)

Vivace Four Seasons Resort Aviara, 7100 Four Seasons Point, Carlsbad, 760-603-6999. The well-prepared food is no more expensive than the offerings in any upscale San Diego restaurant, but it's an experience to dine in such luxurious surroundings. Menus change seasonally. The appetizer list offers unique selections. For entrées try chicken in clay pot or daily fresh fish. The Four Seasons lounge is a great place to visit and listen to live music. Go see the hotel. It's worth the trip. Open nightly, 5:30 to 10:30 p.m., dinners only. Expensive. — E.W.

NORTH INLAND

Galeon (Escondido) 503 West Mission, Escondido, 760-746-5951. Mexican seafood, along with the usual dishes, is featured in a bright coffeeshop atmosphere with comfortable booths, big windows, a lunch counter and a salad bar. Shrimp and langostino ("squat lobster," in fishermen's terms) are the house specialties, and are well treated. Also consider an intense little marlin taco (squeeze some lime onto this rich, strong fish), or the savory albondigas soup (lime it up, too). Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Inexpensive (standard dishes) to moderate (seafood). — N.W. (6/01)

Island Boy Grille 10066 Pacific Heights Boulevard (south of Mira Mesa Boulevard, at Carroll Canyon Road), Sorrento Mesa, 858-452-7708. It's the Sorrento Mesa, 858-492-7/08. It's the last thing you'd expect up here in Corporate Lunchland, but Pua Macario's Hawaiian food sanctuary is the real thing. Pua ("Flower") serves genuine items like purple taro poi, seven-hour cooked lau-lau (beef, pork, and fish slow-steamed in taro and banana leaves), rice delivered by the ice-cream scoop, potato salad delivered hot with shrimp and crab in it, and mahi mahi, lots of lovely flame-seared mahi mahi. Delivered in a standard polystyrene box, eat in or out. And heavy! The Wasa Plate will include, say, two big pieces of mahi mahi, a pile of shredded kalua pig and cabbage, or kahuna shrimp, or teriyaki chicken, plus two scoops of rice, salad and any side dish. If you're a really big kahuna, the Kanaka Plate will deliver three main entrées and three scoops of rice. Sparse decoration: eggshell blue walls with photos of real hula-dancing, and a longboard by Hawaiian Julian Cruz (it's yours for $450). Warning: only open 11 a.m. to around 2:30 p.m. Always crowded. Inexpensive. E.B. (3/02)

Pho Hoa Hiep 9910 Mira Mesa Boulevard, #A, 858-578-1468 (also at 6947 Linda Vista Road, 858-268-2406). This pho (soup) place of the brothers Hoa and Hiep is a clean, busy eatery near hi-tech offices. It's popular at lunch and dinner, partly because of frequent two-for-one deals. Try the #1, Dac Biet Xe Lua, an "extra large bowl" of soup filled with rare steak slices and well-done brisket, flank, tendon, and tripe along with mint and bean sprouts. A popular breakfast pho is "French bread with beef juicy cube soup." They also have rice dishes. And try the traditional fruit drinks, maybe the Xam Bo Luong, a combination of loganberry, black dates, seaweed, and lotus seeds in syrup. Lunch, dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

dido near the San Marcos border. A visit offers the primordial, preschoolish joy of whacking crabs to pieces with mallets and eating them with your hands. (Bibs are optional.) Everybody gets into the party spirit. There's a huge à la carte list of appetizers, soups, snacks, and main courses, often at bargain prices. Entrées include several crab-bucket combos, cooked to a wellseasoned boil with corn, potatoes, and spicy Louisiana sausage. Most of the shellfish were flash-frozen on shipboard, but they're still tasty. The melted non-butter "spread" accompanying them appeals to the area's many health-conscious residents. (Or you can BY-OButter and they'll melt it for you.) Fine tangy housemade key lime pie is a perfect finale. Full bar; not much wine, but good margaritas. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (5/01)

Tong Szechuan 609 North Broadway #E-F, Albertson's Shopping Center, Escondido, 760-480-9438. The "New Style Favorites" of North County Chinese restaurants feature fresh fruits. Tong's has several variants, mainly cornstarch-battered fried proteins in honey-based sweet-and-sour sauce, lightened with loads of seasonal fruit chunks — pineapple, papaya, pear, etc. They're tasty dishes. For the rest, the Szechuan specialties (hot-and-sour soup, kung pao, ma la, etc.) are better than the old "Chinese-American" standards on the menu. Lunches are big, bargain-priced, and popular. In this quiet, pretty room, you may overhear northern or western Chinese dialects at nearby tables. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Very inexpensive (lunch) to low-moderate. — N.W. (5/01)

Vincent's Sirino's 113 West Grand Avenue, Escondido, 760-745-3835. French-born chef-owner Vincent Grumel serves Gallic classics in an intimate, small-town bistro setting. This is a cuisine of rich dark sauces robing fine ingredients, such as a huge, flavorful veal chop (no factory calf, that). Mushrooms and vegetables (from local farmers or Grumel's own garden) are the season's best and sensitively treated. Desserts are worth every calorie — save room for the spectacular Bavarian. Full bar, fine wine list. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner Tuesday through Saturday. (Closed annually from third week of June to third week of July.) Expensive. — N.W. (6/01)

Barone's Trattoria Del Mare

2334 Carmel Valley Road, Del Mar, 858-259-9063. Pleasant interior, 27 pastas, low prices, huge portions of tasty food make this a winner for all bargain seekers. On weekends, try the paella, large enough for two. Linguine rustica and chicken Marsala best bets. Lunch, Tuesday through Friday; dinner, Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W. (1/00)

Charlie's by the Sea 2565 South Highway 101, Cardiff-by-the-Sea (a long block south of the stoplight), 760-942-1300. This seaside spot offers a blissful patio right on the breakwater and a terrific, authentic Boston-style clam chowder to match the view—it's light, creamy, and loaded with clams, unpeeled red potato chunks, and bits of honey-cured bacon. The kitchen's good with simple dishes, including fresh raw oysters and the lively "Bayou Burger" with Cajun seasonings and well-made spicy fries. The dinner menu includes more ambitious items, but the weekly main event here is Sunday brunch, with a menu of standard brunch dishes at affordable prices, featuring endless refills of champagne. (Hint: Veuve Clicquot it's not.) Huge wine list, full bar. Free valet parking. Brunch reservations advisable. Open daily, lunch or brunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — NW (9/03)

J. Taylor's Restaurant L'Auberge Resort and Spa, 1540 Camino Del Mar (at 15th Street), Del Mar, 858-793-6406. On lush, lovely grounds, in an airy, country-inn dining room, Executive Chef Tom Atkins offers Northern California-style "comfort" cuisine, with simple, fresh flavors and prime seasonal ingredients (you'll think you're in the Napa Valley). Execution is expert. Appetizers and desserts are especially appealing, as is a multicourse tasting menu (with matched wines optional) that lets the chefs stretch out and show off a little. In fair weather, you can dine on a patio overlooking the herb garden that's the source of so many flavors on your plate. A rather steep wine list emphasizes California vineyards. Free valet parking at restaurant door. Three meals daily. Expensive. — N.W. (1/03)

Samurai Japanese Restaurant 979 Lomas Santa Fe Drive, Lomas Santa Fe Plaza, Solana Beach, 858-481-0032. This restaurant boasts "the largest California sushi bar" as well as a menu of over 100 items. The food is artistically prepared and presented, the sushi uniformly fine. You can eas ily make a meal from the sushi and ap petizers. Seating is available at the sushi bar or the central dining area, which provides capacious booths. A tatami room (with floor-seating on tatami mats, Japanese style) offers special prix fixe feasts ($60 per person and up), by reservation only. Open daily. Moderate to extremely expensive. — E.W.

LA JOLLA

Cuvee 5656 La Jolla Boulevard (at Bird Rock Avenue), La Jolla, 858-551-4090. Also at 2334 Carmel Valley Road, Carmel Valley, 858-259-5878. Seasonal if rather underseasoned California-Mediterranean cuisine, designed to accompany an interesting and very affordable wine list. All bottles on the regular list are under $25 and available by the glass; you can even get a sip before choosing. A reserve list includes fancier choices, still at minimal markups. Low corkage for BYO, too. Menu suggests apt wine pairings for each dish. Dining rooms are pleasant but quite noisy. Reservations are urged; a few tables on heated garden patio are available to drop-ins. Small parking lot in alley behind La Jolla branch. Dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Moderate. — N.W. (2/02)

Fleming's Steak House And Wine Bar 8970 University Center Lane, Aventine Complex, La Jolla, 858-535-0078. Beautiful atmosphere, excellent service, very fine preparations Very crowded weekends. Steaks and chops first rate. Vegetables à la carte Open nightly for dinner only. Upper moderate to expensive. — E.W. (1/00)

La Taverna 927 Silverado Street (at Girard Avenue), La Jolla, 858-454-0100. Reservations are a necessity at this tiny trattoria, especially if you'd prefer the relative quiet of the roofed sidewalk patio to the din of the cute but cramped dining room. Don't look for meatballs and red sauce except at lunch because dinner is Tuscan-style, showcasing pastas with simple, fresh sauces. Highlights include chef-owner Mary Ann Vitale's house-made Sicilian-style fennel sausage, and if the feather-light potato gnocchi are a special, just say ves. Save room for a slice of house-made layer cake. Service is downright endearing on weekends, when Jimmy Vitale (the owner's hus band) charmingly plays maitre d'. Moderate. — N.W. (11/00)

On Tap! Bistro and Brewery 4353 La Jolla Village Drive (next to Macy's), University Towne Centre, La Jolla, 858-587-6677. On Tap! serves the best food of any brewery in San Diego. The same menu is served continuously from lunch to closing. Best dishes are spit-roasted chicken and penne with salmon and shrimp. All beers are brewed on the premises. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate. — E.W.

Sadaf 613 Pearl Street (at Cuvier), La Jolla, 858-551-0643. You worry — those formal fixtures and black-tux waiters, the gold-encrusted paintings, and the crisp, pink table linens all scream "expensive!" Actually, prices are easygoing, especially at lunch. The appetizers are free: a basket of lavash (unleavened bread), and beside it, butter and a large sliced raw onion. Eating bread with onion makes you hungry say the Persians. Pistachio-androsewater ice cream is a great finale Nonspecials and evening meals cost more, but at any price this is real Persian food, with typical riotous herbage and sybaritic spicing. Another branch in the Gaslamp turns into a nightclub after dinner, but the food's better at this La Jolla flagship. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (10/00)

Trattoria Acqua 1298 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-0709. You'll do fine if you stay with the simplest dishes: marinated grilled chicken breast on pizza dough, grilled portobello mushrooms, or pasta dishes. Entrées from shores other than Italian don't fare as well. The restaurant is located two flights down and offers an ocean wo mants uowii and offers an ocean view and patio as well as indoor dining. Tutto Mare 4365 Executive Drive (at Executive Way), Golden Triangle, 858-597-1188. The modern Italian cuisine here emphasizes pasta and fresh seafood from the mesquite grill or oakfired oven. Lunch hours roar with chic crowds from the surrounding office buildings, but the kitchen is most on its toes then, too. Pastas are mainly housemade, with fresh-tasting sauces, and substantial seafood salads are available. Entrées (whether seafood or meat) may be overcooked by the fierce wood fires, and most come with minor variations of the same lemon-butter sauce and a one-size-fits-all veggie medley. Full bar, interesting wine list, good Happy Hour nibbles. Complimentary valet parking. Call for careful directions (very hard to find). Extremely noisy. Lunch and dinner weekdays, dinner weekends. Pastas and salads moderate, entrées expensive. — N.W. (10/02)

MISSION VALLEY & THE MESAS

94th Aero Squadron 8885 Balboa Avenue, Kearny Mesa, 858-560-6771. One of San Diego's hidden jewels: there's classic American fare (honeyglazed pork tenderloin, farmhouse chicken) in the "Officers' mess," but better yet is the free buffet Happy Hour — pig heaven weekdays from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Selections might include a "stroganoff" of Polish sausage, veggies, cheese potatoes, na-chos, etc. (Of course, you have to buy something — say, a pitcher of Bud for two.) Thursdays and Fridays, the outside "Runway" grill features kebabs. The biggest attraction is the place itself. Built to mimic a WWI French farmhouse taken over by a bunch of Yankee flying aces, it has a garden full of antique planes and live ducks — and right outside, the real Montgomery air-field. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (11/00)

Andres' Patio Restaurant 1235 Morena Boulevard, Bay Park, Morena Boulevard, Bay Park, 619-275-4114. This is a cozy cultural surprise on hard-to-define Morena Boulevard. The food is flavorful (and not spicy-hot like Mexican and South American dishes). A good introduction to it is ropa vieja ("old clothes"): shredded beef sautéed with mushrooms, green pepper, and tomatoes with everpresent rice and black beans. And the Cuban sandwich (roast pork, baked ham, and cheese) shows off the Cuban handling of pork. Other interesting dishes include alcapuria (pork and green plantain) and luscious, messy yuca con mojo (yuca root with garlic oil). Open for lunch Monday to Thursday, lunch and dinner Friday and Saturday. Inexpensive to moderate. E.B. (8/01)

Bale French Sandwich Shop 6937 Linda Vista Road (at Ulric Street), Linda Vista, 858-565-8057. Also, 4879 University Avenue (at 49th Street), City Heights, 619-283-4352. Ann Nguyen started this back in 1980, and her prices haven't changed — they're incredibly low. But the taste of her sandwiches is up there in French-Vietnamese heaven. The Vietnamese are special at this: they do French better than the French with some spicy Asian touches. The BBQ Pork French sandwich delivers the immediate taste of cilantro, garlicky mayonnaise, sweet barbecue sauce, carrots, onions, cucumber, and lashings mayonnaise, sweet barbecue sa of sliced pork, with the occasional heat

Emerald Chinese Seafood Restaurant Pacific Gateway Plaza, 3709 Convoy Street (at Aero Drive), 1st floor, Kearny Mesa, 858-565-6888. Arguably the best Chinese restaurant in the county, here's where local Asians (of all nations) go for both casual family dinners and special feasts of Hong Kong specialties. When you dig in, you'll know why. Menu (trilingual in Chinese, Vietnamese, and English) emphasizes seafood and gourmet delicacies of the South China coast, plus lunchtime dim sum carts daily. staff is bilingual and crisply helpful, and the specialties are well worth exploring. Reservations accepted for all meals, including weekend dim sum brunches. Few dishes include MSG; diners can request none in made-to-order dishes. Live fish tanks, full bar, serviceable wine list. Mainly moderate, with moderate splurges like live fish and Peking duck easily balanced by inexpensive down-home dishes (unless you insist on shark fin or bird's nest). Open daily from lunch until midnight or later. — N.W. (9/02)

Hungry Stick 4664 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Clairemont, 619-272-1412. "Life's too short to drink cheap beer," says the sign. They must mean it. At Happy Hour (weekdays 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.), a 24-ounce glass of Guinness is as cheap as a Bud. Which is nice because it goes great with this pool bar's greatest hit: "San Diego's Famous 1/2-lb. Steerburger." The burger bun is crisp, the big slab of meat's crunchygrilled, and the tomato, lettuce and raw onion are fresh. The small menu also includes chicken breast on a bun, patty melt, and hot wings. They boast 24 beers on tap, and, of course, dozens of giant-screen sports TVs. Open seven days, until late. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Pampas Argentine Grill 8690 Aero Drive (at Montgomery Field), Kearny Mesa, 858-278-5971. The Argentine specialties feature grilled grass-fed beef, including a somewhat Americanized version of the gauchos' great parillada mixta (mixed grill), with a great chorizo but minus any exotic organs. The nat-urally raised meats are lower fat and lower cholesterol than feed-lot beef but are salted heavily in the kitchen unless you request otherwise. Specify rare or medium-rare, unless you really like brown cardboard. Lighter fare includes free-range chicken and fresh, welltreated seafood. Beef empanadas are a tasty, authentic starter. Potatoes (fries and mashed) are splendid, salads are exuberant. The full bar features Chilean and Argentine beverages with many affordable South American wines by the glass Park in lot at restaurant's front door, not the back-door lot. Lunch (mainly sandwiches) on weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate. N.W. (4/02)

THE BEACHES

The Fishery 5040 Cass Street (at Opal Street), Pacific Beach, 858-272-9985. Half fish market, half fish restaurant — you can buy fresh raw seafood (much of it rather steeply priced). Or you can get cooked seafood ranging from the casual to the elaborate. The menu includes fish and chips, sandwiches, chowders, crab cakes, raw oysters, sushi and sashimi, fusion-style fish entrées and simple shellfish extravaganzas. Short but smart list of sakes. Open daily lunch and dinner. Prices are mainly moderate but they cover the waterfront, from inexpensive (lunch specials, fish and chips) to downright exorbitant (Maine lobster or live King crab). — N.W. (9/02)

Hawaiian Island Barbecue Pacific Plaza, 1768 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 858-483-9830. What do folks really eat in Hawaii? What they serve here: plate lunches. Which means two scoops of rice, one scoop of macaroni salad, and then whatever, like garlic shrimp, mahi mahi or fried shrimp, Hawaiian BBQ chicken, chicken katsu, Hawaiian BBQ beef or short ribs, even hamburger steak. But to go all-out Hawaiian, try the chicken lau lau (chicken and butterfish wrapped in taro leaves), slow-cooked kalua pig (don't call it pork) with cabbage, or limu poke (seaweed and raw tuna). Barbecue? Their BBQ Mix (Hawaiian BBQ beef, chicken, short ribs, with rice or macaroni salad) is a deal. Authentic? Count the Hawaiians around you. Lunch and dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

The Mission Cafe and Coffee House 3795 Mission Boulevard (at San Jose Place), Mission Beach, 858-488-9060. Gourmet and Latino breakfasts served in funky surroundings. Outstanding are cinnamon French toast, blackberry-banana pancakes, and roast beef hash with rosemary potatoes and eggs. Chino-Latino lunch items. All dishes plus fabulous bread, scones, muffins, available for take-out. Open daily 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.W.

People's Organic Foods Co-op Deli 4765 Voltaire Street, Ocean Beach, 619-224-1387. This is the land of "organic," "cruelty-free," "environmentally safe," "shade-grown." Vegan Country. People look either disgustingly healthy, disturbingly pasty, or just plain smug. But the food tastes pretty good. And they sell it by the pound so you can mix and match. Course, you have to learn new words, like tempeh (cultured soy which can be made to taste like anything). And dishes have a sensible momsy East Coast feel — garlic eggplant with beet root and onions, tempeh loaf, sweet squash and rice, millet spinach bake, shepherd's pie, "mango madness," tempeh sausage, steamed vegetables, vegan macaroni and cheese. Bottom line: it's guilt-free. Open seven days, breakfast, lunch, dinner (but "serious" breakfasts Saturday and Sunday only). Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/03)

Qwiigs Bar & Grill 5083 Santa Monica Avenue, Ocean Beach, 619-222-1101. A splendid ocean view, a good sushi bar, sprightly salads, and fresh fish are the main attractions here. Friendly service. Long flight of stairs to the dining room, with an elevator for wheelchair access. Open daily. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

Society Billiards Cafe 1051 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 619-272-POOL (7665). Okay, this is a pool joint, but a classy one with sidewalk seating and a decent kitchen. It has the normal appetizers — buffalo wings, nachos, potato skins — but also dishes like chicken taquitos and veggie dip, and good salads like teriyaki chicken with French bread or pita. The French connection continues: Marc, the chef, is French and throws a mean Greek, Thai, or New York pizza, or 17 other varieties. His mesquite chicken wrap goes great with one of the many ales. And the great thing is, you can come late: the kitchen's open till 1:30 p.m. every night. Lunch, dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

The Surfside 4527 Mission Boulevard (at Garnet Avenue), Pacific Beach, 858-273-2979. In the evenings, it's a "scene" here — for good reason. Yo'u'll find fresh sushi, sashimi, and "California coastal cuisine," i.e., fun and flavorful fusion-y tapas, many of them going for half-price during weeknight Happy Hours. You can actually reserve for the sushi bar (it'll put you at the head of the line), where the chefs are unusually friendly. They shine on simple, pure Japanese sushi, although they make the usual "party rolls," too. Most seafood is of fine quality (except the toro, which seems to have problems). For those preferring a tapas-style sitdown meal, there's a breezy, informal dining room with large windows looking out on the street, plus a small private dining room for parties. Four Japanese beers, 10 sakes available. Reservations urged for large groups. Parking is tight; just one handicapped slot in front lot. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (10/02)

Sushi Ota 4529 Mission Bay Drive (at Bunker Hill Street), Pacific Beach, 858-270-5670. What becomes a legend most? At its best, this renowned sushi bar offers fish of exceptional quality, perfect tart-sweet rice, tight wraps, and disciplined creativity. These joys don't come easily. First, find the place: Driving south from Balboa, look left, and pull into the mini-mall with the large -11 sign (opposite Rubio's). Sit at the sushi bar to snoop on your neighbors' choices, watching for off-menu ex-travaganzas, e.g., sea snails cooked over flaming sugar or the irresistible "sushi sundae" (uni, toro, mountain potatoes, salmon roe). Don't miss the ama-ebi, with crisp shrimp heads atypically flash-baked (not batter-fried). Cooked dishes are dull except for chawan-mushi (custard broth with gingko nuts). Alas, when Ota-san's away, his elves may play — amateurishly. Best bet: Reserve a bar seat for an early dinner Wednesdays through Saturdays, when the master is most likely to be present. Disabled access chancy; long, crowded waits unless you've reserved. Moderate. — N.W. (11/00)

Victor's 2702 North Mission Bay Drive (in the De Anza Mission Bay Golf Resort), 858-490-3380. You're in a ranch-style clubhouse here, looking out onto a wonderland of palms and pines surrounding a giant artificial waterfall. Victor's eatery spills out over a concrete patio. Inside, it's easy to fall into conversation with regulars at the cozy bar. You can pay a little (for, say, soup and half a tuna sandwich), or a lot (for the Friday through Sunday prime rib special). Pasta dishes like "Rasta Pasta" (red and green bell peppers and tomato in a cream champagne sauce of penne pasta) are a happy medium. Or their delicious "Victor's Ultimate Burger Grilled," with mushrooms, onion, bacon, and Swiss cheese. Order rare. Breakfast, lunch, dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/03)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Asia Cafe 4710 Market Street (at 47th Street), Chollas View, 619-527-1917. May be Asian San Diego's best-kept secret. You have to look behind the smog shop at this all-Laotian shopping center to find it. The menu's Southeast Asian, but the owner — and most of the conversation around you — is Lao. Lao dishes include the famous Larb-Kai (chicken salad with hot peppers, lemon grass, and sticky rice). Good regional alternatives: Bamee (egg noodle) roasted pork soup, Crying Tiger (ground beef salad with vegetables), Duck Head BBQ, and Lard Nar (seafood, beef, or pork with sloppy wide noodles and vegetables). Closed Tuesdays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Los Reyes 2496 Broadway (at 25th), 619-231-0716. If you've ever craved those fabulous Mexican fish soups that can be such energy restorers, these strip-mall Mexican restaurants have a great one. It's Caldo 7 Mares (Seven Seas Soup) and it comes as a big bowl of savory red fish soup clunking with giant crab legs, clams, chunks of white fish, shrimp, the pink and purple suckers of octopus, and vegetables. It's also called Vuelva a la vida: "Return to life." On a hot day, their Cocktail Campechana (shrimp and octopus in a light, spicy tomato broth) will return you to life, too. Four brothers and one sister from Michoacan run the place. A very Michoacan dish is carnitas—pork shoulders. Or try their gringo lunch deal of a bacon cheeseburger with fries and a can of soda. The prices make this a tightwad's paradise. Three meals daily, with the Broadway flagship branch open until midnight on weekends; all other branches closing early every evening. (Smaller branches at 47th and Market, 25th and Imperial, and 1270 Picador Boulevard.) Cash only. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

Phoenicia 3381 Adams Avenue (at 34th Street), Normal Heights, 619-282-4120. To find this tiny restaurant — the longest-running eatery on Adams Avenue — look for a window featuring a cedar tree (the symbol on the Lebanese flag), an American flag, and the word "Phoenicia" written in Arabic and English. The inside is cramped, but they have sidewalk tables, too. Try their baked eggplant stuffed with lamb, pine nuts, onions, and garlic, or the kafta kabob, with ground meat, parsley, onions, and pita bread. The real treat is the kibbeh neyeh, raw lamb with cracked wheat, onions, and seasonings, but you'll need to call 24 hours ahead to get it. Homemade rose juice and Lebanese coffees are delicious, too. Breakfast through very early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Saigon 4455 El Cajon Boulevard, City Heights, 619-284-4215 or 619-284-4288. You're in a big glass palace here. It's especially good on Sundays, when three- or four-generation Vietnamese families gather for lunch. Gaggles of waiters hover a glance away, but take your time. The menu has over 250 items on it. Default choice: pho, the famous, filling soup-meal of Vietnam where beef cooks in the soup. Another safe bet is stir-fried crispy or soft egg noodle with seafood and assorted vegetables. "33" Vietnamese beer is on hand to make Saigon lovers sentimental. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

tics and play Cambodian chess. At lunch, Laotians replace them. Maps of "Kampuchea" decorate the walls, as well as long-distance telephone ads. The menu includes Chinese, Khmer, and Lao dishes. In the morning, ask for "djak kvai coffay dok ko" — fried bread with Cambodian coffee, the standard French-Khmer breakfast. Later in the day, you might try pan-fried noodles with broccoli and beef or shrimp and gravy ("koitiow bahat sai kho"). If in doubt, ask for Kathy, who speaks Chinese, Khmer, Lao - and English. Turf Supper Club 1116 25th Street, Golden Hill, 619-234-6363. At this cozy saloon (a landmark since 1950, "re-established" in 1998), if your meat's done wrong, it's your own fault. Every night's an indoor cook-out, as patrons huddle by the communal fire-pit tend-ing their steaks (a choice of three ritzy cuts, well-marinated in garlic and olive oil), burgers, chicken breasts, or portobello mushrooms; others choose the veggie kabobs or teriyaki skewers of beef, chicken, or fish. And that's the menu. The only side dish is a simple salad — not even fries. But the meat's a treat, especially the huge, juicy Delmonico rib eye. If you're an utterly hopeless cook, a staffer will mind your meal for you, but you'd miss half the fun. Full bar, no reservations. Open nightly. Inexpensive to barely moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

La Mesa Ocean Grille And Seafood Market 5465 Lake Murray Boulevard (at Maryland Street), La Mesa, 619-463-1548. This spot speaks seafood in several accents - Italian, Mexican, Cajun, and "Continental." One part of its menu is devoted to basic fare, such as seafood sandwiches, tacos, and various simple fish prepara-tions (fried, blackened, "wraps"). Then there are the more elaborately saucedand-garnished seafood dinner entrées, most with pasta accompaniment. Fisheschewers will find chicken and veal in classic Italian treatments (scaloppini, piccata, etc.), plus nightly specials. Seafood here is very fresh and properly cooked, although there are occasional missteps — too much salt in the black-ening, a hollandaise that tastes of lemony mayo. Salads are fresh but iceberg-standard; hot rolls are delicious sourdough, and the halibut ceviche is - cool, refreshing, and slightly tart. Baked Maryland-style crab cakes in a thick red-pepper sauce are gooey-rich and tasty. The ambience, too, is a mixture of styles — from the encyclo-pedic fish posters of a basic fish house, to the lace curtains and tablecloths of an old-style seafood restaurant, to the slightly hip modernity of charcoal-gray ck-lighting and black-backgrou fish-design upholstery. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate. —

3983 54th Street (at University Avenue, in Kmart Shopping Mall), College Area, 619-229-8228. The Cantonese and Mandarin menu runs to 225 dishes, not to mention the dim sum lunches from roving carts bearing goodies. The huge room is perfect for

May Day Cafe 1860 Joe Crosson Drive, El Cajon, 619-448-2707. Talk about hidden jewels: This place is in a hangar at Gillespie Field next to a road hardly anybody uses. Yet go early for breakfast and TV news, country music, and a relay from Gillespie tower make it feel like Grand Central Station Then you'll notice most everyone else there is talking planes. This is a fliers' hangout. The menu is simple, and cheap. Eggs and toast a couple of bucks, "May Day Melts" (sourdough bread with eggs, cheese, ham), not much more. For lunch, it's hot pastrami or a grilled ham and cheese sandwich. But what you're really here for is the talk. Take-off's, landings, getting lost. Breakfast and lunch. — E.B. (5/03)

Calendar RESTAURANTS

Sunny Garden Cuisine Of China 5500 Grossmont Center Drive (next to Target), La Mesa, 619-464-2288. Decent Chinese food, in East County, in a mall? Yes. Fans of fried goodness will of course swoon over tempura shrimp - panko-crusted, huge and tender — but they might also start with the smoked chicken: smoky meat swaddled in an orangey fried coat, served atop a deeply munchable bed of saltysour fried mustard greens. The menu is typically broad. Chicken, shrimp, beef and pork are all given the mu-shu treatment - mixed with bamboo shoots, bean sprouts, and thin, chewy mush-rooms and wrapped tableside (if you like) in papery pancakes. Yu-hsiang (with shrimp, beef, or pork) includes vegetables that are flavorful (not afterthoughts) in a refreshingly non-sweet vinegar sauce. Specialties include Peking duck and fried noodle nests filled with either seafood or beef. Open seven days, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — A.M. (4/02) Valley House Restaurant 10767 Woodside Avenue, Santee, 619-562-7878. This is for Cornbelt folks, plus wannabes who enjoy plainspeaking, plenty-of-it Iowan food. Take the morning special, "Iowa Breakfast": breaded pork tenderloin, two eggs, and hash browns, fries, or grits, plus a choice of biscuits, muffins, or toast it's delicious. Lunch or dinnertime you can't go wrong ordering the signature "Iowa Porker" hot sandwich (breaded pork tenderloin in a bun with soup, otato salad, or steak fries) or the "Iowa Beefers" (seasoned ground beef simmered in chicken broth, piled into a burger bun). Open three meals, seven days, Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/01)

FAR EAST

Burning Tree Native American

Grill 40080 Old Highway 80 (at the end of Highway 94), Boulevard, 619-766-3442. This place feels like someone's baronial country retreat. Since 1917 it has sat under a grove of California live oaks 60 miles east of downtown. It once housed the Chateau Basque restaurant. Elk heads, dark timbers, mottled yellow windows - you start wishing you'd brought your tie. But don't worry. Jim Buel and his family keep prices reasonable and attitudes casual. They collected Native American recipes throughout the Southwest to create an interesting fusion of Amer-ican Indian recipes. Try Comanche fried frogs' legs in a cornmeal crust, or hunter's stew with venison and rabbit, sirloin of buffalo, or "Skokomish Huckleberry glazed duck." Open Wednesday through Sunday for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to expensive. — E.B. (9/01)

Dulzura Cafe Highway 94 at Dulzura, 619-468-9591. Think Grapes of Wrath, Okies, the 1930s. Dulzura Café is the real thing, serving big, hot meals to weary westerners since 1910. The walls are cluttered with license plates, pots, brass cream-separators, corn-shuckers, horse collars, railroad lanterns, ancient egg-beaters, six-foot snake skins, deer antlers, and a seedy stuffed bobcat head. The food's for fill-ing. Big, juicy hamburgers with lanky home-cut fries, thick slices of meat loaf, or if you arrive early, steak and eggs or a hefty Denver omelet. This is frontier food before slim spelled "success." Breakfast and lunch Monday through Thursday, three meals on weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

La Posta 32337 Old Highway 80, Pine Valley, 619-478-5600. Is the Wild West dead? Not out here. Swagger in past the rocking chairs on the wooden porch, by the "NRA meets here, every 3rd Wednesday, 7 p.m." sign, past bows and arrows, dream catchers, lariats, and brass spittoons, and swing into a chair Now think vintage American food. Hefty anytime-breakfasts include two eggs, hash browns, biscuits, and coffee or eggs with chicken fried steak or a bulging veggie omelet. Their sour-dough cheeseburger with fries or potato salad is big, or delve into a bowl of chili. Folks hereabouts talk about that chili in low, reverent voices. For dinner, the rib eye steak or pork chops is good enough to make city folks swoon. Three meals daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Potrero's Cafe 25125 Highway 94, Potrero, 619-478-2694. Watch for the three great old Live Oak trees. This café sits under them and looks straight out of a 1930s Western movie. Lot of good old boys in ten-gallon hats gather here. The menu's non-PC. It features ribsticking food from biscuits and gravy to a mountain of hot cakes, or the famous mushroom-and-onions hamburger with baked beans. Open for breakfast and lunch; closed Monday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/01)

LIPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Adams Avenue Grill 2201 Adams Avenue, University Heights 619-298-8440. The frequently change Heights, ing menu tries to embrace several dis parate styles, and can't quite get its arms around any of them. The dishes are often ambitious; a few soar, but many falter due to flaws in conception, execution, or both. Largely ho-hum wine list needs selections with enough sweetness to stand up to items featur-ing Asian spice — where are the Rieslings? Still, the place seems full of hap-piness and friendliness: yellow and orange walls, plenty of smiles amid the bustle. Soups receive lavish attention, and sometimes live up to their billing — the blood orange and roasted butternut squash soup is delicious, dark and complex. The generous, marvelous lavender-infused crème brûlée makes this a dessert destination — pause to sniff a spoonful before slipping it between your lips. Inexpensive to moderate. — A.M. (4/01)

Bread And Cie 350 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-683-9322. At least twenty breads emerge daily from this bakery's 10,000-pound French stone hearth oven. Most are dense, crusty, and delicious French or Italian peasant breads, including the outstanding anise-fig and black olive loaves that are served in many top local restaurants. Scones, brownies, muffins, banana bread, and cookies are the sweet side of the house. Focaccia pizza and sand-wiches (many with thick-sliced bread and rather thin fillings) are available to take out or eat on the spot — inside the café or on the sidewalk patio. Open daily, breakfast through early dinner. Inexpensive. — N.W. (6/02)

Cafe On Park 3831 Park Boulevard, University Heights, 619-293-7275. Okay, it's trendy, from the rusty spoonand-fork sign at the door to the PC industrial interior (concrete walls, exposed plumbing). But don't expect PC food. The plates are huge and over-flowing with fodder. Breakfast scrambles are popular with add-ons such as smoked salmon, artichoke hearts, or brie cheese. Health nuts choose the Park Porridge stuffed with apples, raisins, and honey. But the prize may be the dish that Placerville, California, miners ordered when they came down from the mountains with pockets full of gold: the Hangtown Fry - luscious marinated sautéed oysters scrambled in eggs. Lunch has deals too: the roasted eggplant is cheap and good. Three meals weekdays, only breakfast and lunch (and a line at the door) on weekends. — E.B. (10/01)

Cafe Pacifica 2414 San Diego Ave nue (next to Old Town graveyard), Old Town, 619-291-6666. The fare here is mainly very fresh seafood, either fusioned up and somewhat chancy, or grilled simply and reliably excellent. Among the highlights are a cleanlimned clam chowder, some amusing yellowfin-stuffed wontons, crab-stuffed portobello mushrooms, and luscious mustard-crusted Oregon catfish. On the downside, Mexican pink abalone are tiny, over-breaded, and overpriced. Several good grilled meats are available for fish-scorners. Optional valet parking $4. Wheelchair lot and ramp behind restaurant (ask valet to direct you). Often very noisy. Serious, rather steep California wine list; full bar. Daily, dinner only. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (10/02)

warm, cozy cottage near Balboa Park offers once-radical dishes that have long since turned into familiar California comfort cuisine. The menu changes only slightly and the kitchen has the dishes down so pat that execution is almost inhumanly flawless. It's a little like an ideal airplane dinner on the Concorde, say. Highlights include spicy duck soup, tender stuffed chicken breast, melting calamari steaks, and mustard-coated catfish. Most weeknights, couples can opt for a "wine dinner" that includes four courses and a decent bottle of wine — a great bargain. Full bar, reasonable Californiadominated wine list. Good pre-theatre dinner spot (near the Old Globe); let server know your curtain time. No wheelchair access to rest rooms. Dinner nightly. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (2/03)

Hamburger Mary's 308 University Avenue (at Third Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-491-0400. All the action is on the patio, under ficus trees, ferns, the palapa bar, and white umbrellas. Bougainvillea bursts out of tables. Hamburger Mary's mural comes at you in a Stetson, wild red hair, big blue eyes, and a plump butt. Basically it's a gay rendezvous, but everybody's welcome The burgers are way-big with funky ti-tles like the "I'm Sooo Bleu" burger with bacon and bleu cheese crumbles, or the "Two Tons Of Fun," a six-inch-high double-burger with mushrooms, bacon, lettuce, cheese, and onions. The kicker is they're all served between wickedly crisp, sweet slabs of golden Hawaiian bread. Open daily until 2 a.m., grill until 11 p.m. Moderate. E.B. (3/01)

Khyber Pass 523 University Avenue (at Fifth Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-294-7579. The room's very modern, but Afghan cuisine is full of history, carrying echoes of both Persian and Indian foods, with even a hint of Greek (Alexander the Great conquered the region). Dinners feature kebabs, tandooris, curries, and some unique regional specialties. Flavors are exotic but oddly comfortable to the cosmopolitan palate. Among the don't-miss items are the outstanding aushak (spring onion ravioli) and mantu (ground-meat ravioli) — both with lively yogurt sauces — and zamordd chalow, a spicy lamb-and-spinach stew. Save room for the sexy desserts. Can be noisy inside; small sidewalk patio. Private dining room upstairs bookable for parties. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (9/02)

Liaison 2202 Fourth Avenue (at Ivy Street), uptown, 619-234-5540. This French restaurant with its romantic atmosphere offers an à la carte menu and fixed-price meals. Pleasant food, excellent service. Patio dining, weather permitting. Open Tuesday through Sunday for dinner; closed Monday Low moderate to expensive. E.W. (3/00)

Mister Sisters 3805 Fifth Avenue Hillcrest, 619-299-4647. You somehow think "Chicago" when you walk into this cool, dark-woody place. The idea is a kind of social get-together locale "where the food tastes great and is not so good for you," according to the twin sisters and the mister who started it. They are trying to recreate small-town West Virginia, where they're from. The big deal is Happy Hour's "Pint & Pound," a pint of draft beer and a pound of wings. Sandwiches have Hillcrest-type names: "Stacked Up Sister,"
"The Queen of Hillcrest," "The Priss,"
"The Tomboy." If in doubt, check out the Philly cheese steak. It comes with "Whiz" cheese. Lunch, dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Ono Sushi and Pacific Spice 1236 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-298-0616. If you are searching for huge portions, fresh tasty food and reasonable prices, don't overlook this colorful Japanese/Pacific Rim café. Excellent specialty rolls, entrées, appetizers. Very crowded weekends; lively young crowd. Dinners nightly; open for lunch Saturday and Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W. (11/98)

Rice Jones 3687 Fifth Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-291-1887; also 6618 Mission Gorge Road, 619-528-8301. It's probably no coincidence that Anglo-Asian families seem to come here. Rice Jones' owner Anh Long had two good ideas: One, to provide rice with just about everything. Interesting rice, usually sautéed with mushrooms and herbs, so customers can fill up without busting the bank, and two, to bridge the taste gap between Vietnam and California. She offers lemongrass chicken next to California bruschetta (sautéed mushrooms and tomatoes on toast). Or, a turkey burger next to a Vietnamese grilled eggplant. Most exotic: "shrimp wrap," a shrimp patty wrapped around a sugarcane stick with rice noodles. It's a cliché, but they treat you like family here, no matter which side of the pond you come from. Sassafras 3667 India Street, Mission Hills, 619-295-4745. This restaurant claims to serve "Continental Americaine" (whatever that is), but chef-owner Andre Bellard is a son of Lafayette, Louisiana, and knows his Cajun flavors inside out. He's pioneering "new" Cajun cooking: kinder, gentler, and more sophisticated. His Acadian seafood gumbo, which includes spicy house-smoked andouille sausage, one of the best in any town; oysters Bienville feature barely-warmed oysters with a lush spinach topping. Also superb: paper-wrapped shrimp, seafood Evangeline, and crab-corn soup. Among the entrées, the must-try is the signature Sassafras Chicken, stuffed with jambalaya. On Wednes-day nights during the season (January to June), there's an exuberant crawfish feast on the enclosed patio, with mud-bugs shipped live from Louisiana cooked with andouille and corn in a tasty house-made "boil." Dinner nightly. High moderate. — N.W. (2/02)

Terra 3900 Vermont Street, Uptown Center, Hillcrest, 619-293-7088. Coowner Jeff Rossman, formerly in charge of the front of the house, has moved into the kitchen to serve as chef at this comfortable neighborhood spot, serving venturesome, if uneven, tropical-influenced American cooking. You can settle in a spacious southwest-tinged dining room or people-watch from a sheltered outdoor patio (with smoking permitted). Generously sized tapas can serve as appetizers or as a sustaining bite before venturing into Trader Joe's across the street. The dinner menu changes seasonally, featuring barbecue items during the summer, comforting fare in colder weather, and special dinners on all major holidays. Good wine list with several flights available, full bar with tropical cocktails (Pisco Sours, Caipirinhas, et al.). Reservations advised, especially for weekends, holidays and special events (e.g., Sunday "blues and barbecue" during the summer). Open daily for lunch or brunch, snacks, dinner. Moderate. — N.W. DOWNTOWN

Assaggio Italian Bakery 835 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-234-6538. Ciao, baby. How's the Vespa? Cool people bop in and out of here like it's their neighborhood café. Maybe it's the free focaccia bread. Or the reasonable Tuscany breakfast (toasted bread, two-egg cheese omelet) with Segafredo Zanetti coffee. Or sandwiches such as the Assaggio (assaggio means "the taste") of ciabatta bread with turkey breast, Italian sauce, greens, and tomato) or the Parma (prosciutto ham, goat cheese, and arugula on Toscano bread) or, best of all, a crespelle (crepe stuffed with Gorgonzola cheese, broccoli and béchamel sauce). The Mediterranean salad (chicken, artichokes, and prosciutto) and Spaghetti Bolognese (with bread) are both filling; a slice of pizza is the fallback when you're broke. Lunch and dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Athens Market 109 West F Street (between First and Front), 619-234-1955. Alex Spanos and lots of local hotshots come here for honest Greek home cookin'. Yes, it's classywhite table cloths, linen napkins — but you can fill up on just a bowl of fakee, owner Mary Pappas's "secret recipe" lentil soup, and an appetizer, like spanakopita (spinach and cheese pastry pockets). And entrées like arni psito — roast leg of lamb — are guaranteed to stuff you. They come with rice, roast potato, a vegetable, soup or salad, and French bread and butter — all at a darned good price. Oh, and don't despise the gyro. Meat flavor's great, and it takes a football player to empty this plate. Lunch Monday through Friday; dinner nightly, to 10 p.m. on Friday and Saturday. Inexpensive to moderate. - E.B. (2/03)

Blue Point Coastal Cuisine 565 Fifth Avenue (at Market Street), Gaslamp, 619-233-6623. Very classy atmosphere and menu - mostly fish and seafood — to match. You can eat appetizers at the bar, but best bets are nightly fish entrées or steak and crab cakes served with lots of organic vegetables. Dinner only, from 5 p.m. Expensive. — E.W.

Cabo Cafe & Grill 808 West Cedar (near Pacific Coast Highway), Little Italy, 619-595-1618. This miracle restaurant is run by homeless kids from the Monarch School Project next door, with a little help (okay, a lot) from Ru-bio's and its founder Ralph. He helped raise a million dollars to get the school and the restaurant running. Think Star-bucks meets Taco Bell (oops, sorry Ralph). The place is like its kid-staff: smart, cheery (they painted all the seals and porpoise murals), with a great fountain-gurgling patio outside. Try the grilled burrito (grilled chicken or steak with guacamole, roasted salsa, sour cream, black beans, Mexican rice, and melted lack cheese in a warm tortilla) or, as a great filler, the Cabo Maestro Bowl, with marinated grilled chicken or steak in a bowl with black beans, Mexican rice, cheeses, guacamole, and shredded cabbage. And yes, they do make the Rubio fish taco. Daily specials. Open weekdays, breakfast and lunch. Inexpensive. E.B. -E.B. (5/02)

Candelas 416 Third Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-702-4455. Don't look for tacos here — Chef Eduardo Baeza specializes in "la nueva cocina Mexicana," a luxurious, inventive update of tradi-tional Mexican fare, combining French techniques and Latin ingredients into a sophisticated new cuisine that you've never tasted before. In a romantic Spanish-style dining room with extremely gracious service, the menu emphasizes seafood, including jumbo prawns flamed with three tequilas, sea bass with huitlacoche (mushroom-like "corn fungus"), and a signature dish of luscious stuffed Maine lobster. Plenty for meat-lovers, too, including a thick veal chop with a rosemary-mole sauce. Reservations advised, slightly dressy. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly until 11 p.m. Expensive. — N.W. (11/00)

Caparell's Cuisina 1428 First Avenue (at Ash), downtown, 619-237-8081. This place puts on a good show of being Italian, except Greek flavors keep popping up in items like "Caparell's Mediterranean Pesto Pizza," with grilled chicken, tomatoes, onions, kalamata olives, and feta. Confusion? No, fusion: Turns out owner Sam Caparell's dad is Italian but his mom's Greek. And there's plenty Italian. His "Sam's Calzone," a fold-over with Canadian bacon, sautéed mushrooms, onions, cheese, pepperoni, and a meatball, is scrumbo, and his half-and-half spaghetti-lasagna dinner would satisfy the Colossus of Rhodes, Outside is scrubby, waiting for the developer's ax, but inside it's smart, varnished wood with low art-deco chrome lamps, and a satisfyingly long bar. Honest Mediterranean food. Lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (9/03)

Edgewater Grill 861 W. Harbor Drive, Seaport Village, 619-232-7581. An easy walk from the Convention Center, the dining room is spacious and handsome, and the view from the crowded dining terrace is optimal (the bay, the Coronado Bridge, a park, etc.). The menu, though, is convention-centered — like a Howard Johnson's for the 21st century. The fare features middle-of-the-road faux-fusion salads, seafood, grilled steaks, pastas (most with shellfish), and individual pizzas, plus daily fin-fish dishes listed on a card in a plastic holder on the table. The lighter dishes are the most successful this is not a bad place to "graze" on appetizers and a mini-pizza when you're starved for a view. Difficult wheelchair access to terrace. Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Entrées high moderate to very expensive. — N.W. (8/01)

Fat City Steakhouse 2137 Pacific Highway (at Hawthorne Street), downtown/Little Italy, 619-232-9303. In the Deco "pink palace" at the edge of downtown, the USDA Choice steaks (and one velvety Prime cut) are cooked over mesquite charcoal, which lends them a deliciously smoky campfire fla vor. Don't like beef? You can choose nicely grilled chicken, pork, or salmon, or two vegan pastas (the puttanesca is better than the marinara), or scampi. The appetizer list is mainly trite pubgrub, but the fry-cook does a great job with calamari. And in fair weather, the lush garden dining patio is a little piece of Eden. Full bar, rather basic wine list. Casual ambience, above-average wheelchair access from large, free parking lot. Dinner nightly. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (12/02)

Greystone 658 Fifth Avenue (at G Street), Gaslamp, 619-232-0225. The Italian steakhouse fare here centers on dry-aged prime beef, game meats (including exceptionally tender bison), lobster, and pastas as the main draws, with indifferent starters and desserts. An impressive wine list offers rewarding California and Italian bottlings at $35 to $50, but roars up to the stratosphere of first-growth Bordeaux, su-per-Tuscans and scandalously overpriced Napa reds. Bossy, priced Napa reds. Bossy, sometimes-abrasive waiters push higher-priced choices. Patrons are mainly "suits" with deep expense-ac-count pockets, loudly talking business or enjoying raucous office parties in a testosterone-high atmosphere. Wheelchair access to the street patio and bar area only (dining rooms are up or downstairs). Reservations urged, but may not be honored promptly. Dinner nightly. Extremely expensive.

Kansas City Barbecue 610 West Market Street (at Harbor Drive), downtown, 619-231-9680. Scrumptious smells waft across the tracks at the Seaport Village trolley stop — bar-becued pork and beef. And yeah, this is the joint where Tom Cruise and Kelly McGillis did their "sleazy bar scene" in Top Gun. And it is kinda sleazy, especially in the shadowy horseshoe bar, with memorabilia like hanging bras, Czech license plates, and stickers ("Grow Your Own Dope: Plant A Man"). The beef and pork ribs (or rib tips or chicken breast) are worth it. They're cooked over an oak-fueled fire. Nice long Happy Hour (3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., at bar only) has great food/grub deals. Open daily, lunch until late, serving until 1 a.m. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (3/01)

Avenue, Barrio Logan, 619-234-4460. This isn't a restaurant, it's a legend. The same Estudillo family has been serving old-fashioned Mexican food here for three generations - seventy years. Rice, beans, pork tacos (they don't serve beef), pork tamales, chorizo with eggs — that's about it. So how come they have lines outside every day? Blame a potent mixture of sentiment and the lard they refuse to abandon Folks say that lard flavor is the real Mexico. Also famous: their Saturday menudo. Warning: go easy with their deep wine-colored hot sauce. It's room-rocker strength. The name? From a famous mariachi song, "The Four Cornfields." Open morning to mid-afternoon, Monday to Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Pete's Quality Meats 1742-1/2 India Street, Little Italy, 619-234-1684. Pete's Meats was just a butcher's shop until Pete's daughter and sister-in-law got the idea to set up a grill there. Now aficionados line up for Sicilian specialties like Italian-sausage sandwiches, steak sandwiches, and especially spi-tini— veal rolled around two cheeses, onions, tomatoes, pine nuts, currants, parsley, prosciutto, and breadcrumbs. Pete stuffs all of that into a hot bun with marinara sauce, sautéed peppers, and onions as packing. Nuff said? Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Rei Do Gado Churrascuria 939 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-702-8464. The meats just keep on coming at a Brazilian rodizio: skewer after skewer of churrasco (Brazilian barbecue), a near-endless procession of ro-tisserie-grilled meats and poultry. At each table there's a wooden cone with one end red and the other end green. Turn the green side up to start the

Bino's European Coffees and Crepes 1120 Adella Avenue (just off Orange Avenue), Coronado 619-522-0612. This little round-the Coronado. corner café (south of the Post Office) has to be good: it's a favorite retreat for local chefs. Bino bakes his own breads and croissants daily and creates great crunchy sandwiches. Try the Brie Fantasy (chicken breast, roasted marinated peppers, double cream Brie cheese) or the roast beef and jack cheese. Even the veggie sandwich squishes with luscious eggplant, and the crepes are delicious and filling too. Bino's wife is Austrian and makes great Viennese-style coffee. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Hanaoka 1528-C Sweetwater Road, National City, 619-477-5173. Second branch at 1203 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 959-274-9755. Mr. and Mrs. Hanaoka's Japanese restaurant has the feel of those country inns you read about in a James Michener novel, with a sushi counter, lots of paper lanterns, and sunken tables where you can sit lotus-fashion or drop your legs in the space below. The luncheon specials are a great buy. Try chicken teriyaki and gyoza, with rice, salad, and miso soup. "Hanaoka" means "honest," and portions are honestly generous. Dinner nightly. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Island Wok 922 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-6835. This tiny indoor-outdoor-takeaway café is a standby with locals, especially the high school crowd. It serves good Viet-namese-Chinese food, and plenty of it. The owner, Xuan, makes scrumptious fresh (not fried) Vietnamese spring rolls wrapped in rice paper with shrimp, pork, or chicken and vegeta-bles in the middle. But most customers go for the steam-table combination plates. You always get chow mein, fried or steamed rice, and a fried spring roll to start off, and then you can add entrées like orange chicken, kung pac chicken, or sweet-and-sour pork. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/01)

all-encompassing jukebox, or smoking under a roofed front "patio." Or chowing down on industrial-grade pub grub, made largely of restaurant-supply products (including the vaunted corn beef, bland as packaged ham). But the fresh vegetables are surprisingly good, so choose something that includes the luscious mashed potatoes and look upon the rest as garnish. No wheelchair bathroom. Open daily, serving to about midnight. Inexpensive. — N.W. (4/01)

Moonlight on the Sea/Club 13 640 Civic Center Drive (under I-5 at McKinley Avenue), National City, 619-477-2851. Is this what sailors dream of when they're at sea? The little blue under-the-freeway shack has been serving up cervezas, BBQ, and burgers to sailors and shipbuilders since 1934, most of the time as "Club 13." Traditionally, Hell's Angels visited it on their north-south tour of Califor-nia's oldest bars. In 1993, Linda, the latest owner, added the romantic 'Moonlight On The Sea" moniker. She prepares and hand-rolls her own lumpia, and it shows. It has a nice fresh veggie, marinated-meat taste. And of course the grilled cheese sandwiches, wings, cheeseburgers, and dinnertime doubleburgers fit right into this wonderful throwback bar, Lunch, dinner seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

Peohe's The Landing, 1201 First Street, Coronado, 619-437-4474. This gorgeous, view-endowed restaurant offers upscale, Hawaiian-inspired fish and gargantuan steaks in a plush trop-ical-style setting with indoor waterfalls and three separate patios. Given the visual splendor, much of the food is better than it needs to be, featuring topquality seafood prepared with care, e.g., halibut in a lush, sassy Frangelicotouched macadamia beurre blanc. A chocolate shell filled with macadamia nut ice cream may be worth the calories, too. Full bar. Reservations advised. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Expensive. — N.W. (3/01)

Swaddee Thai 1001 C Avenue (10th Street), Coronado, 619-435-8110. Tourists never stray to Swadee's quiet residential location a block from the bright lights of Orange Avenue. Their loss is the locals' gain. The dining room is a quiet, lovely haven from the hustle; the service is caring and gracious. Even if the long list of Siamese specialties is merely standard, the kitchen, too, is devoted to the art of gently giving pleasure. The peanut sauce accompanying the satay, for instance, is classically balanced; the complex but soothing co-conut-chicken soup can wash away all cares; and the calamari in the many seafood arrays is cleverly knife-scored to achieve sheer tenderness along with good looks. Even the jasmine rice is an exceptionally fragrant brand. Unless you specify otherwise, spicy dishes have a nice nip tuned to brave but tender farang tastebuds. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. From the United States use the prefix 011-52-664 when calling Ti-juana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's seven-digit number.

El Rodeo 1647 Blvd. Salinas, Tijuana 686-5640. Steak lovers will have a field day here with a variety of cuts, some cooked right at your table. The accompaniments are wonderful: an appetizer and quesadilla, a crisp salad, beans served in their own liquid — even a dessert is included in the price of the entrée. Cheese soup, burritos, and tripe are also available. Vaquero decor, wood-paneled rooms. Good value if you like beef. Open daily from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Take Revolución until it bends to the left to become Agua Caliente; turn left just before the twin high-rise towers, and left again, onto the one-way street, Blvd. Salinas. El Rodeo is on the right side of the street. Highly visible and easy to find. Moderate. — E. W.

La Costa 8131 Galeana (Seventh Street between Revolución and Constitución), Tijuana, 685-8494 or 685-3124 An extensive menu, consistently fresh product, and huge portions have made La Costa the reigning seafood house for Americans. Identical lunch and dinner menus offer lobster, shrimp, grilled fish, fish with sauces. squid, abalone, and oysters, all in a variety of preparations. Price of entrées includes soup, salad, rice, dessert, bev-erage, and after-dinner drink. Almost always crowded. Open Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to midnight. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

Los Nortenos Plaza Santa Cecilia (at 2nd Street, opposite McDonald's), Tijuana. Yes, it's a tourist trap, but think of San Diego's Old Town or LA's Olvera Street — by comparison, Plaza Santa Cecilia is the real thing. And Los Nortenos, the café with it s stylish pillars and solid terrace seating, is one of the classier places. Their garlic shrimp soup or burrito plate (it comes with refried beans and avocado salad) is great. And the vegetable soup alone will fill you up. It's stuffed with potatoes, carrots, zucchini, chayote, etc. No beer or alcohol, but just watching the world go by as the antique lamps light the evening is a thrill. — E.B. (8/03)

Original Ortega's In Puerto Nuevo, next to Casa de la Langosta, on the first street to your left (Calle Principal) after entering town through the entry gate. Open since 1952, this is the orig-inal "Lobster Village" restaurant, and not much has changed. Eventually Ortega's grew into an octopus with multiple arms in Puerto Nuevo and Rosarito Beach, all pretty similar. The menu is longer than most, with numerous starters (including a tasty ceviche and an excellent tortilla soup), varied seafood entrées and antojitos, desserts, and even fancy coffees (including "Viagra," which features reputedly aphrodisiac Damiana herbal liqueur). The spiny lobsters (once local but now from who-knows-where) are first fried in lard, then finished off on the grill, and simply seasoned pork, poultry, ribs, sausages, and numerous cuts of beef. Turn the cone red side up to take a break from the protein parade. The gar gantuan spread includes a buffet in the front of the restaurant with a changeable array of alluring side dishes, salads, fruit, and such intriguing hot entrées as Brazilian oxtail stew or seafood in co-Las Cuatro Milpas 1857 Logan conut milk, with exotic but oddly comfortable flavors. There's always a potful of feijoada, the national dish slow-cooked, meaty black beans (in a somewhat bland version, which you can liven up with a splash of hot sauce). No matter how often you eat here, you'll never have the same meal twice. Reservations advisable for weekends. Full bar (have a Caipirinha). No dog-

> The Westgate Gourmet Delicatessen Third Avenue, between Broadway and C Street, downtown, 619-557-3698. This is where you take your respectable Aunt Martha for lunch. The place reeks of gentility. Green carpets, white linen cloths, fresh flowers, chandeliers, giant potted palms. It's part of the Westgate hotel, and looks like a grocery for the rich who just can't live without specialty olive oils and expensive wines. But prices for sandwiches, light breakfasts. and lunches are down there with the best Market Street liquor-deli. The Hawaiian chicken salad (with walnuts, pineapple, chutney, fresh seasonal fruits, and non-fat mayo) is filling and healthy. But the best deal is the soup and half-sandwich combo, especially the Friday cioppino: a tomato-based soup filled with fish such as sea bass, shrimp, shark, lobster, and scallops Open Monday through Friday for breakfast and lunch. Wildside Cafe & Rebel Juice Bar 1048 Seventh Avenue, (at C Street), downtown, 619-696-1466. Now here's a place that actually makes healthy food seem cool. Partly it's the names: "lu-natic lentil soup," sandwiches like "turkey tantrum" (roast turkey with salsa), "tuna scandal" (tuna mushed with egg whites and no-fat mayo), or our two favorites: "veggies on a bike" (cucumbers, spinach leaf, tomatoes, red onion) and "bagel without a cause" (bagel, cream cheese, fresh fruit). Actually, all come with fresh fruit. And do like the local lofties: take your daily shot of fresh-squeezed wheat grass juice served with a greasy-tasting melted "Kitchen Maid" margarine blend, frijoles, rice, tortillas, and salsa. Full bar, English menu, staff marginally bilingual. Moderate to high, but with low-moderate specials. No reservations, cash only. — N.W. (11/02)

Rosticeria Los Pollos Avenida Streets, Tijuana. Relatives of prisoners in the Tijuana jail (one block south) come here to buy treats for their locked-up loved ones. The cops come too, for the cinnamon-flavored fried chicken. Think KFC, but a little sweeter. And with more variety: You can eat just chicken necks if you want. Taurino Steakhouse 7531 Sixth Avenue (off Revolución), Tijuana, 685-7075. Located in the heart of the old section of Tijuana, three blocks west of Revolución, this restaurant provides superb value in an excellent setting. Basically a steakhouse, it also offers fish. seafood, and fowl. The price of the en-trée includes grilled quail, soup or salad, and mammoth amounts of the main course. Almost everyone orders cabreria, or try empapelado, fish and shrimp cooked in silver foil. Superior service. The menu is printed in Spanish and English, and the maitre d' speaks per-fect English. First-rate bargain for high quality. Open daily, noon to midnight. Continuous service. Inexpensive to moderate, except for lobster. — E.W.

Tortas la Vuelta 1961-ZC Avenida Revolución, Tijuana. Don't expect atmosphere unless you're into mufflers and transmissions. This place at the top of Revolución sits next to Tra Continental. It is not part of the classier La Vuelta restaurant across the street, but it does serve up classy tortas (large round buns filled with good things like beef loin), carne asada, pierna (pork leg), milanesa (veal), chicken, ham and cheese, or even vegetarian fillings. There's something about sitting in this little dark recess surrounded by cars and the oily-handed mechanics who service them. La Vuelta also does hambur guesas with fries. But no burger matches a mula ("mule"), a large folded tortilla with carne asada, ham, avocado, and tomatoes. Seven days, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Vallarta Natural 1252 Boulevard Agua Caliente, Tijuana, 686-1560, Vallarta Natural makes travel to Tijuana really appetizing, serving only the healthiest, freshest ingredients. The kitchen makes its own bread and rolls, soy chorizo, vegetable stock, and gluten daily. Recommended are goblets of fresh juice, caldo tlalpeño soup, taquitos panzones (soft tacos) filled with sautéed mushrooms or soy chorizo, and especially milanesa. The milanesa is made from fresh gluten and is almost indistinguishable from veal — breaded, fried, it is delicious. Cool, clean, pleasant atmosphere. Open daily. Inexpensive. — M.N. (9/98)

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

Buca Di Beppo 705 Sixth Avenue (at G Street), Gaslamp, 619-233-7272. Also at 10749 Westview Parkway, Mira Mesa, 858-536-2822. Family-style,

Southern Italian cooking in a dining room seating 305 people. Food is simple (one sauce fits all), portions huge, and roaring-loud ambiance is child-and teenager-friendly. Go for plain fun, not gourmet dinners. Meatballs and spaghetti the best bet. Dinner nightly, lunch Sundays. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W. (6/00)

Bully's East 2401 Camino del Rio South, Mission Valley, 619-291-2665. Also at 5755 La Iolla Boulevard, La Iolla (858-459-2768), and 1404 Camino del Mar, Del Mar (858-755-1660). Despite the plasma TV sports screen, this place is very sixties. For example, dark, woody, plush red booths. And always crowded. Word is, they serve more prime rib with au jus and horseradish than any eatery in San Diego. The "Petite Cut" 8 ounce, their smallest, fills you plenty, with its baked potato and salad. But just once, come here with your main squeeze and order up the "full cut for two." It hangs ten over the edges. Or go bonkers and order the 32-ounce cut - just to watch your neighbors' eyes bug out. Not flush? Try the "Bully Burger," French Dip sandwich, or calamari sandwich. Lonely? Go to the horseshoe-shaped Low Bar Lunch and dinner daily. The price ranges. — E.B. (2/03)

El Pollo Loco 2795 Main, Logan Heights, 619-595-0847. Additional locations in College Area, Midway, Carmel Mountain, Chula Vista, El Cajon, Lemon Grove, National City, Poway, and more. This Mexican-style chicken chain offers healthier, tastier fast food. The flame-broiled poultry has crisp, richly seasoned, very salty skin; the flesh can vary from barely done to overdone, but usually is just right. The bird (or any assortment of its parts) comes with sage gravy, tortillas, and a choice of side dishes that includes rich, sweet black beans, crisp and clean coleslaw, great gooey-cheesy macaroni, and passable mashed potatoes. Help vourself to salsas (there are four vari eties), chopped onions, lemons, cilantro, hot peppers. But stick with the chicks — the taqueria-style choices are barely better than Taco Bell. Check for daily specials, wherein a small amount of cash will buy a huge amount of highly palatable poultry. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. -

Popeye's Chicken & Biscuits 2333 Highland Avenue (at 24th Street). National City, 619-477-5605; 2210 E. Plaza Boulevard (at Euclid Avenue), National City, 619-470-3002; 3489 Santo Road (at Aero Drive), 858-573-0035; Metropolitan Center, 1737 Euclid Avenue (north of Federal Boulevard), Chollas Creek, 619-527-6565; and 6095 El Cajon Boulevard (at College Avenue), 619-286-3322. This is the one major national chain to cling firmly to a regional American identity: Wherever you go, if you find a Popeye's, you'll be eating Louisiana flavors. But some fla-vors travel better than others in fastfood translations: The spicy, crisp fried chicken and air-light drop biscuits are fine as can be. The etouffee (whether of chicken or crawfish, when available) is surprisingly decent. The gumbo is weird — flavors aren't bad, but it's more like a Creole risotto, with wet rice instead of liquid (where's the soup?). Dirty rice and jambalaya are nasty and dry. Food quality varies subtly from branch to branch, as does the attitude of the counter-persons. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive. — N.W. (2/02)

uentin Tarantino, with a lot of encouragement from critics and fans, appears to be convinced of his own great significance. I remain unpersuaded. No doubt his freshman and sophomore efforts, Reservoir Dogs and Pulp Fiction, within two years of each other in the early Nineties, have made him a useful reference point in the discussion of other films and filmmakers — out of all proportion, in my view, to his actual achievements and his worthiness of imitation. And as an arbiter of taste, much of it bad, he is at least as influential a figure as the "drive-in" movie critic Joe Bob Briggs, with whom he shares a good deal of his bad taste, and whose stamp of approval has similarly been employed to market videos. As a practitioner, meanwhile, he needs more practice. After what seemed at the time to be a lengthy wait of three years, Jackie Brown struck me as a sizable step forward, right up to within hollering distance of maturity impression aided by the ages of the two leads, Pam Grier and Robert Forster. But now, after a wait of twice that length, we find out that he felt he had let down his fans (if not the critics) with that one. And so his new one, Kill Bill, Vol. 1, seeks to rectify the situation by taking several steps backwards, into the more congenial realm of puerility.

Fans like Tarantino's, to whom maturity must be a dirty word, could not be expected to keep pace with an advancpace with an advancing artist; the artist, if he wants to stay in touch with them, will have to fall back to the pack and stop kidding himself he's an artist. For the rest of us, a wait of six years no longer seems too long. Forever would not have been too long.

An odd blend of pretension and triviality, the movie posits a comicbook world in which there can exist a Deadly Viper Assassination Squad, whose mostly female members have code names such as Cottonmouth, Copperhead, and Black Mamba (the black woman on the team envies that name, the way Mr. Pink in Reservoir Dogs envied everybody's name), and are trained in the gravity-defying martial arts of Hong Kong kung-fu fantasies and the blood-gushing swordplay of Japanese samurai epics. In such a world, the heroine (the long, lean, though not particularly lithe and athletic Uma Thurman) can have her hands full in a catfight with one of her sister Vipers ("C'mon, bitch! Bring it on!"), and then, as the need arises, can mow down scores of similarly trained assassins in quick succession, showing no ill effects in either instance of having gotten herself shot in the head and lying for four years in a coma, the sexual plaything of a night-shift hospital orderly ("My name is Buck, and I came here to fuck!"). It should already be apparent that the number of prospective moviegoers who will find this material interesting in itself, or as an hommage to a deserving genre or genres, will be severely restricted. In the words of one

Tarantino wastes no time in establishing his bona fides as a connoisseur and a curator, starting things off with a couple of cinematic objets trouvés, an old ShawScope logo torn from a widescreen Hong Kong action film, and then (out of proper order, as is his wont) an outdated theatrical title card announcing "Our Feature Presentation." Then, following a mock literary quotation — "Revenge is a dish best served cold," attributed as an "Old Klingon Proverb" — he gives us a brief sequence in black-and-white before he reverts to more printed matter, for the most telling credit of the film, the one that hints at the extent of his selfregard and his loss of perspective: "The 4th Quentin Tarantino Film." The standard credit, simply and merely "A Quentin Tarantino Film," would not be enough for him. Tarantino is keeping score and keeping us posted, unaware of how unimpressive are four films in eleven years, let alone how unimpressive are the four films themselves. (Will he have the nerve, when Vol. 2 rolls around next February, to bill it as "The 5th Quentin Tarantino Film"?) In this fourth one, far more than in any of the previous three, we can never really get past Quentin Tarantino and into the film.

The obstacles, the boulder-sized reminders of who is calling the shots and of how much attention he craves, are constant: the needless bleepingout of the heroine's name, on her own tongue and on the tongue of another, so that she may be known mysteriously as just The Bride; the culling of the musical score from other soundtracks, largely and incongruously those of spaghetti Westerns (besides a curator and a connoisseur, Tarantino is a pillager and a plagiarist); the facetious "chapter" headings (one of which borrows the catchy title of an obscure Spanish vampire film, The Blood-Spattered Bride); the variously colored subtitles (one of which ungrammatically reads, "Whom in Okinawa made you this steel?"); the extended, narrated anime segment to fill in the backstory on one of the villains ("By twenty, she was one of the top female assassins in the world"); and of course the arbitrarily scrambled time line, a Tarantino trademark. But then again, the entire film, in its very conception, is just such a reminder: a cut-and-paste construction from the filmmaker's private video library, a Frankensteinian composite without the unity or integrity of any of its individual sources, a braying declaration of a hard-toshare taste.

Even if the taste could be shared, the dish hardly amounts to a satisfying meal: revenge served very cold indeed, uncooked, and in small portions, without garnish, on paper plates. Split into parts, not by original design but purely as a practical matter (or in other words, an economic matter), after the dimensions grew unwieldy, it delivers a first installment of average length and unambitious scope, with no shape, no pace, no proper end, just a pause in the action. (The scrambled time line is no help with the shape and the pace.) The plot is no more than a to-do list, or more exactly a to-kill list, to be resumed in Vol. 2, with presumably a word or two of explanation as to why The Bride had a bullet put in her head in the first place. The language is flat and foul, the direction fitful and flighty. (Like Robert Rodriguez, his acknowledged "brother" in the final roll of credits, Tarantino creates some splashy shots but no steady flow, no tugging current, no rhythm.) Some of his enthusiasm, some of his manifest love for movies, will nevertheless survive his own limitations and come through to his followers. Trickle-down aesthetics are bound to be better than none at all. Or to phrase it another way, the least I can say for Kill Bill is that, as a latecomer in the kick-ass-chick fad, it is better than the Charlie's Angels films. There was a time — any time in the past six years, even the past twelve — when I thought I could have said more than

With so many tense and exciting baseball games throughout the playoffs this month, and so many of them lasting four hours, I have had a hard time keeping up on my critical duties. The House of the Dead and a remake of The Texas Chainsaw Massacre looked unlikely to match the horrors of the twin curses on the Cubs and the Red Sox. Stuff like Runaway Jury and Out of Time, when I could find the time for them, failed to make the same dent on my consciousness as a Pedro Martinez beanball or a Pudge Rodriguez collision at home plate. Please try to think of it as applicable research in the fields of drama and entertainment, and excuse me if you can. ■

Altered States — The traditional mad scientist dressed up in new clothes, or rather, divested of his clothes and floating naked in an isolation tank. That's just for starters. It's quite nice the way the metaphysical odyssey of this so-called "Faust freak" keeps expanding into new territory, moving through a Dr. Leary psychedelic phase to a Dr. Jekyll metamorphic phase (clever use of a video screen, at one point, to effect the transformation), and well beyond that, to terra incognita and very much infirma. And it is uncharacteristically courteous of Ken Russell to confine his most convulsive stylistics to hallucinatory moments, rather like occasional epileptic fits, and to leave the rest of the movie and the rest of the world in relative peace. The original script by Paddy Chayefsky almost certainly intended more humor than comes through here, and the heaviness of Russell's touch, as well as his disregard for the spoken word, must have had a lot to do with Chayefsky's decision to remove his name from the project. The humanistic, sentimental, and unexpectedly affecting finale may indicate a final triumph for Chayefsky, or at least a touching of a previously dead Russell nerve. With William Hurt and Blair Brown. 1980.

Better Off Dead — Youth comedy, slightly loonier than most: teenage suicide as a running gag, anthropomorphized hamburger buns, a Living Dead horde of paperboys. And, with a couple of direct lifts from Woody Allen and Albert Brooks, loftier in artistic aspirations, too. But no funnier, for all that. And there is still the fat kid in mismatched plaids, the bullying Big from a resident who may or may not be the real Elvis (weighing how he got there, you'd have to guess not) and another resident who believes he is JFK (as he's black, there's not much question). Ossie Davis, Jr., sounding new depths of gravity, has an easier access to absurdity than has the heavily made-up and heavily imitative Bruce Campbell: what's the difference between playing Elvis and playing an Elvis impersonator? The mock-horror element is very much the element of director Don Coscarelli (the Phantasm series); the mock-heroic element proves to be more of a reach. 2003.

Casa de los Babys — The name of the movie is the name of a Mexican resort hotel-cum-hospital where half a dozen gringas await their turn to adopt native newborns; more bluntly, where the haves take from the have-nots. Or still more bluntly, where the Left-leaning John Sayles can show off some of his right thinking (note the lowercase "r"), to say nothing of some of his false-sounding dialogue. At a mere hour and a half, it is underdeveloped by Sayles's latter-day standards, yet each of the principals (Maggie Gyllenhaal, Daryl Hannah, Marcia Gay Harden, Susan Lynch, Mary Steenburgen, Lili Taylor), if they don't all get a turn to adopt, do get a turn to act. 2003.

Un Chien Andalou — The surrealist

fashion plate, jointly made by Salvador Dali and Luis Buñuel (his first movie, and already several of his staples are on display: insects, donkeys, razor blades, comical clergymen). Very exciting for the dream logic that allows a portion of a scene to change course while the remainder of the scene continues on as before; undoubtedly less shocking now than it was in 1928, but still rude and hurtful to anyone who is especially touchy about eyeballs, armpits, and other such sensitive spots; short enough and full enough to be viewed over and over without ever growing weary. ★★★★★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 10/25, 1 AND 7 P.M.)

Demonlover — Corporate espionage in the slimy world of cybersex. Writer-director Olivier Assayas sidles up to the skulduggery in casual fashion, dallies among the ambiguities and amoralities, never really hits his stride. The Danishborn Connie Nielsen (who has made movies in France before) and the American Chloë Sevigny speak impeccable French, and sport excellent haircuts. With Charles Berling and Gina Gershon. 2002.

adolescent (Jake Gyllenhaal of October Sky) who has an imaginary friend in a demonic bunny suit giving him mischief-making orders. (The bunny's end-of-the-world forecast, however, carries little weight when the action is set in the thick of Dukakis's run for the Presidency.) First-time filmmaker Richard Kelly, age twenty-six, reveals an individual voice and an eccentric sense of humor (i.e., sometimes actually funny), and even when he hits predictable notes (e.g., the Grundy-ish old crone on the high-school faculty, who, when asked whether she knows who Graham Greene is, responds, "I think we have all seen Bonanza"), he hits them at his own unforced pace. Much the same can be said for his frugal use of special effects. The time-travel resolution is nonsensical even by time-travel standards, and it has the effect of wiping the slate clean in the chicken-hearted fashion of the it-was-all-adream convention. "Clever" is the compliment it was fishing for. "Gimmicky" might be the reasonable compromise. Jena Malone, Drew Barrymore, Mary McDonnell, Patrick Swayze, Noah Wyle.

Duplex — By increasingly foul means, a yuppie couple attempt to root out their upstairs Neighbor-from-Hell, a wizened Irishwoman with a deceptive grandmotherly twinkle. Director Danny DeVito has been toiling too long in the same black-comic mine (Throw Momma from the Train, The War of the Roses, Matilda, Death to Smoochy), and there was never that much coal down there to begin with. The trucking-in of trendier gross-out nuggets — Drew Barrymore throwing up in Ben Stiller's face, and the like — tacitly acknowledges the depletion. Freaky Friday — Disney remake of the magical, mystical mother-daughter switcheroo, adjusted for youth's further usurping of the culture since 1977. The ostensible original idea was for the representatives of both generations to see through the other's eyes, but the bias in the remake tilts strongly toward the younger. The girl is a little older this time, and the casting was better the last time (Barbara Harris and Jodie Foster vs. Jamie Lee Curtis and Lindsay Lohan), and it's still a confusing situation — not just for the two who swap bodies, but for us and the scriptwriters as well. ★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 10/23, 7 P.M., AND 10/24, 3:10 AND 9:10 P.M.)

Intolerable Cruelty — The Coen brothers film with the widest, the broadest, the massiest appeal to date, or in the common phrase their "most accessible." Two glamorous A-list movie stars of opposite sexes, George Clooney and Catherine Zeta-Jones, looking their respective bests, sugar-cured and honeyglazed, and none of the Coen "regulars" no McDormand, no Goodman, no Turturro, no Polito, no Buscemi. What's more, Joel and Ethan for the first time share the screenwriting credit with a couple of other guys. (Robert Ramsey and Matthew Stone by name, co-writers of the Eddie Murphy and Martin Lawrence comedy, Life, as well as the Dave Barry literary adaptation, Big Trouble.) Have they at last gone straight? gone soft? gone safe? Have they given up the good fight in pursuit of the brass ring? Fear not. As Hollywoody as this might look on the surface, or from the outside, it remains no less subversive from within — not as directly and explicitly anti-Hollywood as Barton Fink, but nor as obliquely and metaphorically as Fargo, The Hudsucker Proxy, or The Big Lebowski. The setting of this cold hard look at the divorce racket — the reduction of marital relationships, mutual alliances, common bonds, to cold hard cash — is specifically Tinsel Town and its mansions, its swimming pools, its health spas, its supper clubs, its nearby playgrounds, even though only one of the litigants has an actual toehold in show business: producer of the daytime soap, The Sands of Time. Unflaggingly speedy, snappy, fresh, and funny, the film is as tightly constructed as any Coen film before Lebowski (the point at which they started to overload and overstuff), homing in on the whole culture of divorce, a world unto itself, a total way of life, with its lore and legend, its luminaries and lesser lights, its legion of interchangeable face-lifted and liposuctioned ex-wives (the Stepford exes), even an annual convention in Vegas (where better?) for the National Organization of Matrimonial Attorneys Nationwide: "Let N.O.M.A.N. put asunder." Billy Bob Thornton, Geoffrey Rush, Edward Herrmann, Cedric the Entertainer. 2003. ★★★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN: CHULA VISTA 10: ENCINITAS 8; FASHION VALLEY 18; FLOWER HILL 4; GALAXY 6; GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT CENTER; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE 16; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18;

Levity — A falsely modest title, or falsely lightweight, for a pious parable about a contrite murderer in quest of atonement: cozying up to his victim's sister after twenty-three years in confinement, carrying her groceries, presenting her a rose, keeping his identity to himself. Billy Bob Thornton plays the slow-witted, humor-impaired protagonist as if he were the Holy Ghost or a Wim Wenders angel. Fine, focussed support from Holly Hunter and Morgan Freeman; flibbertigibbet support from Kirsten Dunst. Written and directed by Ed Solomon. 2003.

★ (SAN DIEGO PUBLIC LIBRARY, 10/27, 6:30 P.M.) Lost in Translation — Sofia Coppola's sophomore effort marks an advance over The Virgin Suicides: a phlegmatic comedy about two American outsiders who fall into an ill-defined relationship in Tokyo, a bond forged of loneliness and misery between an over-the-hill Hollywood action star (a sadsack Bill Murray, who surely should have been written as an over-the-hill comedy star), in town to collect a cool two million for a series of whisky ads, and a neglected young wife (the seductively throaty Scarlett Johansson), who spends a lot of time lolling around her hotel room in transparent pink panties while her photographer husband (the dependably dreadful Giovanni Ribisi) busies himself with work. The "satirical" touch tends to be lighter this time, with perhaps a few exceptions: the suspected anorexic blond starlet (with so many to choose from, couldn't a better fit have been found for this role than the robust Anna Faris?), the tutti-frutti television host misleadingly labelled "the Johnny Carson of Japan," the S&M call girl ("Lip my stocking!"), and the imported guitar-and-vocal lounge act billed as "Sausalito." Truly on the lighter side, however, there are large numbers of points scored, even if easy ones, with the advertising campaign ("For relaxing times, make it Suntori time"), the language difficulties, the faxes and FedExes and phone calls from the all-business wife in California, the exercise machine, the local cuisine, and the inevitable karaoke bar soup-ladle renditions of Elvis Costello's "Peace, Love, and Understanding" and Roxy Music's "More Than This"). And the touristing in and around Tokyo is pleasantly relaxed. Coppola's uncertain visual style, vacillating between a fussy precision and a fumbling offhandedness, could never be mistaken for her father's. Which, for purposes of independence and the establishment of a separate identity, would be a good thing if only the style could be recognized as distinctively Robbins, and their highly emotional tearful, unstoical, un-Eastwoody histrionics.) Although formulated as a murder mystery, it is not narrowly focussed on the investigation, but divides its time more or less evenly among three main characters, and expands continuously into the specific milieu, the complex personal relationships, the affected and ongoing lives, in fact life in general, life with a capital "L." All throughout, it sustains a tone of lamentation, underscored by the churchy musical theme composed by Eastwood himself (albeit orchestrated by his trusted collaborator, Lennie Niehaus) The retributive anger never supplants the sorrow; the release never comes. Admittedly, the outcome of the case depends upon a fortuitous coincidence that reeks of mystery-making for its own sake: a previously unrevealed second murder on the same night as the first. Yet the solution to the original murder is not overly tricksy, is perhaps even overly obvious; and the mood of the moment in any case is not one of parlor games and "gotcha." The honest — the aggrieved — the penitent emotionalism of the film makes up for either the fortuitousness or the obviousness, as necessary. Kevin Bacon,

Once upon a Time in Mexico — It is one of the mysteries of cinema: the production can be slick as a hockey rink, the camera movements agile and athletic, the angles exalting, the action unrelenting, the overall direction giddy with the joy of creation, and still the movie can be stupefyingly dull. This second sequel to El Maricahi, colloquially billed as "A Robert Rodriguez Flick," as well as "Shot, Chopped, and Scored by Robert Rodriguez," in addition to simply "Written and Directed by Robert Rodriguez," serves to illustrate, if not illuminate, the mystery. No doubt the shooter, chopper, scorer, writer, and director has come a long way since the hand-crafted crudities of Mariachi, and yet the persistent dullness indicates that the mileage has been piled up in a tight spiral around a fixed point. No doubt, too, he has accomplished exactly what he set out to do in this selfconsciously, tongue-in-cheekily mythologizing pageant. ("That," as a line in the script puts it, "is truly unbelievable.") No doubt he himself finds a Hong Kong action film by John Woo to be a completely satisfying aesthetic experience, and no doubt he would feel flattered to be included in the same sentence. One is tempted, then, to try to explain away the mystery by the absence of what once would have been called the human element: back before, that is, every fledgling filmmaker had to add Joseph Campbell's The Hero with a Thousand Faces to his basic library, and mere heroes began to be crowded out by superheroes, one-man armies, instant legends, franchises. One needn't be a believer in Pure Cinema, though, to suspect there's more to it than just the total absence of humanity. Topmost among the director's glaring limitations is his propensity, like a muscle-bound headhunting prizefighter, to think in terms of one shot at a time: no combinations, no strategy, no pacing. The very definition, inside the ropes, of a palooka. Antonio Banderas, Johnny Depp, Willem Dafoe, Eva Mendes, Salma Hayek. 2003. • (PALM PROMENADE 24)

Out of Time — Familiar situation (in movies, not in life) of the framed lawman steering a murder investigation away from himself, staving one step ahead of his estranged wife, the newly appointed homicide detective. For a while the movie feigns an interest in human relationships — a romantic triangle or quadrangle, depending on how you're counting — before it settles down to clickety-clack mechanics. It maintains sufficient speed to evade close examination, and features a hair-raising fight on a seventh-floor hotel balcony. Party Monster — A true tale of disco decadence — drugs, debauchery, Ringling Brothers costumes, and ultimately murder, to say nothing of the low-grade video on which it's recorded — concerning "the king of club kids" and his mentor. (Says the kid: "You're the Yoda to my Luke." The mentor offers a different view: "You're the Paula Abdul to my Janet Jackson.") Macaulay Culkin and Seth Green, an uncharismatic duo, affect homosexual drawls that sound like nothing but bad accents, and the subsub-sub-Wildean witticisms aggravate the pain: "I'd rather suck on a urinal cake." Chloë Sevigny, who can do no wrong apart from her choice of material, comes in late, to little effect. With Dylan McDermott, Wilmer Valderrama, Wilson Cruz, Marilyn Manson, and Diana Scarwid; co-written and co-directed by Fenton Bailey and Randy Barbato. 2003.

Pieces of April — Thanksgiving-from-Hell comedy wherein a rebellious daughter, living in a bad neighborhood in the big city, tries to prepare her first holiday meal for her barely functional family from the suburbs. Small but broad, cheap but commercial, with a movie-stealing performance by Sean Hayes as the prissy upstairs neighbor in possession of a superior oven. Katie Holmes, Derek Luke, Patricia Clarkson, Oliver Platt; written and directed by Peter Hedges. 2003.

Pirates of the Caribbean: The Curse of the Black Pearl — Now that the "ride" — as in "wild ride," "thrill ride," "rollercoaster ride" — seems to be an accepted film category, if not quite a genre, it makes sense that a film would be modelled after, or at least named after, an actual amusement-park ride. But Pirates not the first Disney movie to bring to the screen a Disneyland attraction, if you count The Country Bears — is more of a long ride than any other kind of ride, a two-and-aquarter-hour kiddie film, loud and broad, about ratchet-voiced, pasteboard pirates who turn out, to the detriment of the sword-crossing scenes, to be really the ghosts of pirates. (Trying to kill the already dead is a tedious business.) The visual effects of these pirates turning from flesh to bones as they pass in and out of moonlight are marvelous to behold, as is the effect of their stealthy advance on foot across the ocean floor. But director Gore Verbinski, fresh off the throat-clutching frights of The Ring, cannot hope with this one to scare a five-year-old. Orlando Bloom, on the team of humans, looks as stoutheartedly heroic as in the Lord of the Rings films; and Keira Knightley nimbly makes the leap from proletarian jock in Bend It Like Beckham to cosseted, corseted aristocrat: or in more practical terms, from little "indie" to highstakes blockbuster. And Johnny Depp, with raccoonish rings of mascara around his eyes and a perpetual Dean Martin slur in his speech, lets you know in every way possible that he's not taking any of this seriously, other than his paycheck. With Geoffrey Rush and Jonathan Pryce. 2003. ★ (FASHION VALLEY 18; PARKWAY PLAZA 18)

The Princess Blade — Japanese liveaction comic about a band of futuristic samurai called the Takemikazuchi, and the emergence of their rightful ruler, Princess Yuki, at the ripe age of twenty. Flashes of style, even of emotion, but nothing sustained and persuasive. With Yumiko Shaku and Hideaki Ito; directed by Shinsuke Sato. 2002.

★ (HAZARD CENTER 7, FROM 10/24)

Radio — Sanitary human-interest story of a high-school football coach in mid-Seventies South Carolina (Ed Harris in a Bear Bryant hat) who takes a retarded black man under his wing as an assistant, sending the team on an immediate losing streak and raising the question of "Why on earth are you doing this?" Racial issues do not really come into it; issues of moral values, proper priorities, do. Nice use of the local barbershop for postgame analyses and town meetings. The real people on whom the characters are based are seen in archival footage at the end. Cuba Gooding, Jr., Debra Winger, Alfre Woodard; directed by Mike Tollin. 2003.

The Rundown — The Rock, erstwhile professional wrestler, here plays a "retrieval expert," a mob free-lancer who declines to work with a gun and looks forward to a future as a restaurateur. In the opening scene, in order to collect a little collateral on the gambling debts of a pro quarterback, he takes on a team of bodyguards composed of "the entire offensive line," and leaves the quarterback unprotected against next Sunday's pass rush. After that, you may rest assured that nothing worthwhile will happen on his ensuing escapade in Brazil, with a treasure-hunting college dropout (Seann William Scott, further assurance of worthlessness), a capitalist slave driver (Christopher Walken), and an undercover rebel leader (Rosario Dawson) disguised as a barmaid. Though he looks as if he stepped out of a comic book, The Rock can handle not only an offensive line but also a line of dialogue, and if nothing else the movie serves as an application for a better job. Directed by Peter Berg. 2003.

School of Rock — An imposter substitute teacher, and local laughingstock rocker, instructs a class of grade-schoolers in What He Knows: rock-and-roll, history and practice. The participation of director Richard Linklater (Slacker, etc.) and screenwriter Mike White (The Good Girl, etc.) might raise expectations slightly, and similarly raise the results: head of the class of boneheads. Their plunge into the commercial mainstream - for a sort of Adam Sandler movie sans Adam Sandler has left them relatively unbefouled, maybe with just a faint scent of oil and sewage. A smarty-pants answer to things like Mr. Holland's Opus and Music of the Heart, the movie nevertheless boasts the "sweetness" for which Sandler is abundantly famous and grudgingly indulged. The hero does end up teaching something, and of course learning something himself: a feel-good movie, but a feel-cool, too. Jack Black, in his plummiest role to date, throws himself into it body if not soul. He appears more eager to connect with those in the multiplex than with those in the classroom, thus coming across as grovelling and aloof at the same time, albeit in different directions. With Joan Cusack. 2003.

movie projectionist projects himself onto the movie screen is about as far in that direction as he ever went. The movie has some laughs, too — in the pool game with an explosive 8-ball and in the obligatory chase, 1924.

The Station Agent — The rare feature film to be built around a dwarf — a taciturn loner who moves into an abandoned train depot in a remote corner of New Jersey to get away from other people ("Hey, buddy, where's Snow White?"), and who instead falls into a web of new relationships with an insatiably gregarious hot-dog vendor, a tormented female artist, an unmarried pregnant librarian, and a black schoolgirl. Modest, offbeat, a bit stiff and clunky, with a restrained and dignified central performance from Peter Dinklage, and a smattering of railroad knowledge. Patricia Clarkson, Bobby Cannavale, Michelle Williams, Raven Goodwin; written and directed by Tom McCarthy. 2003. ★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Step into Liquid — Dana Brown, son of Bruce Brown (The Endless Summer and The Endless Summer II), has grabbed a camera and followed his father's footprints into the surf, assembling a workmanlike testimonial to the religion of riding the waves.

Runaway Jury

Inspirational illustration is evenly balanced with interview and voice-over pearls of wisdom: "The cut-and-dried has no place in liquid." 2003.

★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE; LA PALOMA)

loyal butler in a Gothic mausoleum. As irresistible as gossip. With Gloria Swanson, William Holden, Erich Von Stroheim; directed by Billy Wilder. 1950.

memoir of a San Francisco divorcée who inherits a ten-day gay tour of Italy (Gay and Away) from a pregnant lesbian no longer willing to fly, and who then makes an impulse-purchase of a dilapidated villa in Cortona, cooks meals for her Polish immigrant construction crew, receives spiritual guidance from a flighty Englishwoman claiming acquaintance with Fellini, and embarks on a rejuvenating affair with a younger Italian reminiscent of Rosanno Brazzi in puckery sensitivity: "Francesca, I'm going to make love all over you." (Try not to visualize something triple-X.) Though the pallid color scarcely does justice to the setting, the narrative events go down easily, almost liquidly, if none too fillingly. The tallest part of the tale, a lightning storm that launches a washing machine into midair and deposits an owl in the bedroom, is so fantastically Brothers Grimm that it could only be true. Diane Lane, in the lead role, continues in her Unfaithful vein of forcing every little twitch and tremor of interior life out onto the surface. And Sandra Oh, as the expectant lesbian, provides the solid support that seems to be her lot. Lindsay Duncan, Raoul Bova. 2003.

Underworld — Kate Beckinsale (The Last Days of Disco, The Golden Bowl, etc.), in a remarkable display of range and versatility. makes herself right at home as a musicvideo Vampirella, dressed in dominatrix black leather, photographed in deep-freezer blue, mired in a moronic blood feud between high-tech vampires and werewolves. Alongside the snarling supporting cast, she looks like a goddess, just not too smart a one. Scott Speedman, Michael Sheen, Shane Brolly, Bill Nighy; directed by Len Wiseman. 2003.

• (MISSION VALLEY 20; PALM PROMENADE 24)

Veronica Guerin — A "prestige" film from producer Jerry Bruckheimer, the true story, slickly told, of the martyrdom of an Irish journalist who seems to be the only citizen in the country who cares about the Dublin drug trade: "Somebody's going to have to get after these bastards." Cate Blanchett struggles valiantly to keep her head above the pieties, with an especially human and unheroic reaction to getting socked in the face. Showy cameo by Colin Farrell as a skinhead soccer fan — a favor, maybe, to director Joel Schumacher for his starring role in the latter's Phone Booth. With Gerard McSorley, Ciarán Hinds, Brenda Fricker, 2003.

★ (GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT CENTER; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION VALLEY 20)

Wonderland — A trip down Memory Lane, or Memory Back Alley, to the drugrelated multiple murder in 1981 in which porn star John Holmes (past his prime) had a hand. It's clear which version of events the movie favors (between the conflicting accounts of scumballs), but the jittery, jumpy, hopped-up acting and directing seem content just to wallow. Not to be confused, clearly, with the Michael Winterbottom film of the same name, only three years earlier. Val Kilmer, Kate Bosworth, Lisa Kudrow, Dylan McDermott, Josh Lucas, Franky G, Ted Levine; directed by James Cox. 2003.

San Diego Fast Dating is the largest event of any city in the U.S. Jaime from Channel 933 went to our event as a test and now has a boyfriend as a result of our event. Here is the latest excerpt from her diary:

Dear Diary,

This weekend I'll be going out with this new guy I met through S.D. Fast Dating!

He said he wants to surprise me and that I should pack a bag, as he's planning on taking me out of town. He said I could think about it and if I'm not comfortable we can plan something else. I'm torn — it does seem a little soon to be going out of town with this guy, but how often do I do something like this? It's kind of exciting! I have to say, however this ends up, this guy is the most incredible gentleman I've ever dated.

More next week...

Who Wants to Marry a Millionaire?

Model Quality Introductions represents the most successful eligible men from L.A. to S.D., who are seeking long-term relationships with "model quality" women Here is our catch of the month:

ABOUT HIM: Handsome Mickey Rourke type, SWM, 40, 6'1", in great shape, seeking a long-term relationship leading to marriage. He's very easygoing, humble yet confident, with a good sense of humor, adventurous, intelligent, hopelessly romantic, very honest, ethical and affluent founder-owner of a successful corporation. He is a devoted father, divorced, and has everything that life has to offer except for the centerpiece. You will see that he is a handsome good guy with an edge! He works out daily, enjoys fine dining, dancing, flying to New York for a Broadway play, concerts, movies and socializing.

ABOUT HER: You are an honest 28-38 year old, single or divorced female, with or without children. He is looking for San Diego County only, extremely attractive, up to 5′10″ and up to a size 4 or 6 maximum. He appreciates a sweet and easygoing girl who likes being pampered. He is fine if you want a traditional role as he is financially set. He does like to cut loose outside of work, so prissy or prudish would not be preferred over outgoing and open-minded.

PICTURE STORY

Photograph from the San Diego Historical Society

Ceventeen-year-old Randy Gardner (flanked Oby Joe Marciano and Bruce McCallister) does pushups while on his way toward setting the world record for sleep deprivation, January 2, 1964. Gardner's buddies threw him footballs, basketballs, had him type, listen to loud music, and submit to patella knee-reflex tests and cold showers; they took notes and presented the data as their science-fair project. It was no easy "A" for Gardner, though; he stayed awake for 11 days (264 hours and 12 minutes), after which he was "cognitively dysfunctional," according to scientificamerican.com. After succumbing, Gardner slept for 15 hours.

Last year, Gardner, then 56 (and still a San Diegan), told a Washington Post reporter, "I wanted to prove that bad things didn't happen if you went without sleep, that you wouldn't go insane."

LEAD STORY

The Federal Communications Commission ruled in October that the "F word," used as an adjective with the "ing" ending by U2 singer Bono during the live telecast of the Golden Globe awards ceremony in January, was not obscene language because Bono was not using it sexually but rather to enhance the word "brilliant." Two weeks later, Texas's 3rd Court of Appeals ruled that making the well-known middle-finger gesture is not illegal because it is not so provocative these days as to incite immediate violence.

So Hard to Be a Student Nowadays

 Brandon Kivi, 15, was suspended from Caney Creek High (Conroe, Texas) in October for possibly saving the life of his girlfriend (a fellow classmate) by lending her his asthma inhaler after she had misplaced hers; that was delivery of a dangerous drug. ... Raylee Montgomery, 13, was suspended from school in Duncanville, Texas, in September when her shirttail became untucked, a violation of the dress code (raising the number of dress-code-related suspensions in her 3500student school to more than 700 in just five weeks).

Questionable Judgments

- In April, community activists and other volunteers established a "safe injection site" in Vancouver, British Columbia, so that addicts can bring their heroin, crystal meth, or cocaine and prepare and inject it with clean equipment in an environment free of hassling by police, who have been reluctant to close the site down. Often, there is a volunteer registered nurse on duty to provide advice on injection technique.

- Marion, Ohio, inmate Willie Chapman got permission to delay his scheduled parole by one day until Aug. 12 so he could attend a prison meeting of the religious/personal-responsibility organization Promise Keepers. Chapman's inspirational decision made the newspapers, inadvertently alerting his manslaughter victim's family, who complained to the Ohio Parole Board that Chapman should not be free at all. Consequently, the board reconsidered Chapman's parole and delayed it 991 days, until May 1, 2006.

Police Blotter

- In Knoxville, Tenn., in September, Thomas Martin McGouey, 51, left a note and painted a bull's-eye on his body before arranging a standoff in which he pointed a gun at police officers so they would kill him in self-defense. McGouey's scheme failed because Knox County sheriff's deputies, who fired 28 shots at him, missed with 27 and only grazed his shoulder with the other. From recent newspaper police logs: (1) Wayne Leonard Hoffman, 45, was arrested for DUI (0.39 reading) at a gas station in Minnetonka, Minn., where he was "attempting to add air to his vehicle's tires using a vacuum cleaner hose" (July, Lakeshore Weekly News). (2) Two Wilson, Wyo., men were feuding over a parking space at a Kmart when one drove alongside the other and spit at him through his open window. According to the police report: "As [the victim] saw the projected body fluid traveling through the air, he dropped his jaw in shock, and the phlegm landed square in [his] mouth where he swallowed it in a gag reflex" (August, Jackson Hole News & Guide).

- NYPD officers Paul Damore and Farrell Conroy were briefly suspended without pay in July for their conduct in the 45th Precinct station house in the Bronx; the pair got into a fistfight over which one would get to be the driver of their patrol car.

Unclear on the Concept

- In August, the Arab League (22 nations, all of which are governed by monarchies, clerics, or military dictatorships) charged that the new American-installed Iraqi Governing Council was illegitimate because it was not freely elected but consisted only of appointed representatives from various interest groups. The league's secretary general announced that Iraq's former seat in the Arab League would therefore remain vacant until the country has an elected government (which would then make it the league's only elected government).

 Thailand's leading massage-parlor/prostitution entrepreneur, Chuwit Kamolvisit, reacted with outrage when he was charged this summer in connection with two criminal cases because, he said, he has paid police the equivalent of $2.5 million in bribes to get immunity. Chuwit called a series of press conferences in July, at which he released information on whom he had been bribing and who some of his customers were, and in September he announced he would form a new political party to put an end to Thailand's culture of official corruption.

 In August, the city of Edmonton, Alberta, ordered the owners of Keep It Simple, a nonalcoholic "bar" catering to recovering alcoholics by creating the ambience of a tavern without the temptations, to enforce the city's no-smoking law for businesses. However, smoking is a popular crutch for recovering alcoholics, and the owners sought an exemption from the law in order to retain their customers, but the city said the only legal exemption on the books is for establishments that serve alcoholic beverages. (In September, Keep It Simple applied for a liquor license but said it would still not serve alcohol.)

Recurring Themes

- For many years, "News of the Weird" has covered charity-sponsored "cow-patty bingo" competitions (a field divided into squares wagered on by contestants, a cow released to answer nature's call, the grand prize going to the owner of the lucky square), but in July, a variation called "Moulette" (sponsored by Dunlop Tires in Toronto) drew criticism because an actual 50foot-long roulette board was to be used instead of a field. Critics charged that, despite the charitable aims of the contest, it was "cruel" to deprive a cow of the convenience of dirt and grass on which to conduct her business.

Recent Alarming Headlines

- (1) "Flying Bowling Ball Breaks Bone in Woman's Leg" (a July Greensboro, Ga., Herald-Journal story about a driver running over a bowling ball, pinching it out from under a tire with great force, and hitting a woman walking to her mailbox); (2) "Bible Study Group Captures Murder Suspect" (a September Arizona Republic story about six men dropping their Bibles to rush to their host's garage to stop a fugitive from stealing a car); (3) "Flies Are Like Us: Scientists" (a July News Limited story on discoveries by the Neurosciences Institute of San Diego that fruit flies show human-like anticipation of alarm, among various learning, memory, and perception traits).

Recent Tiny Joy-Riders

 Kids who commandeered family vehicles and drove off: Ms. Taccara King's 2-year-old son (crashed a pickup truck into the B Line Transport office; Vero Beach, Fla., July), Rex Davis, 2 (crashed a car into a room at a Red Roof Inn: Tampa, Fla., September). A 5-year-old girl and her 4-vear-old brother (crashed car into a McDonald's; Edmonton, Alberta, September). A 6-vearold boy (drove his baby-sitter's car 30 miles, looking for his mother, hitting only three cars along the way, Luling, Texas, July). A 7-year-old boy, assisted by a 3-year-old girl holding down the gas pedal (crashed into a tree; Hannibal, N.Y., July).

In the Past Month...

- An 18-year-old student with the rare vasovagal syncope syndrome was ordered to begin stuffing himself with junk foods in order to drastically increase his salt intake (Scunthorpe, England). ... A 39-year-old man was arrested for burglary after police found his name-imprinted dentures at the scene, surmising that he had stumbled over something in the dark but was forced to flee before he could find them (Muncie, Ind.). ... A 27-year-old man was charged with poisoning a drinking-water reservoir, hospitalizing at least 42 people, in order to boost sales of his water purifiers (Henan province, China).

"If you allow yourself to make a mistake, the artist will come out of you."

By John Brizzolara

Ah. art. One of a few favorite things I've ever heard said about it or seen written came from Anthony Burgess (the third time I've mentioned him in as many weeks — that's what comes of reading kilos of him at a time). He pointed out that it, art, "delivers the goods religion only promises." A bold statement with enough truth in it that I keep coming back to it.

In these troubled times (mine, that is; I don't know about yours), I'm wondering if I can afford to continue viewing art as a luxury. Religion, psychiatry, and 12-step programs are all being employed to one degree or another with varying effectiveness; but it has been suggested to me by a close friend that I seek out some therapeutic art or craft. What she means, of course, is that I am completely out of my mind; if I were occupied weaving baskets, for example, she wouldn't have to worry about blatant antisocial behavior on my part. A specious and desperate view, but understandable in my case. I had agreed with her that just picking up the guitar recently after a couple of years away from it seemed to have a general salutary effect on my life. At this point she handed me a flyer for the San Diego Art Department, a studio on Ray Street in North Park, offering classes and workshops. I immediately scanned the Friday column and saw that printmaking and pottery was on the agenda for that day. Neither spoke to me immediately, if you know what I mean.

But have I been making what seems to be one of the Great American Mistakes? That is, short-changing art as luxury, nonessential, practical only after everything else in my life is in order? Not a priority?

One thing above all that I learned at college age at the Art Institute in Chicago, where I attended six weeks of a semester, is that when it comes to visual art, I am at best a cartoonist. It is small consolation when you know what fine art is and long to produce the stuff yourself. Still, is that any reason to abandon the whole enterprise, baby and bathwater?

The San Diego Art Department offers classes in beginning painting, pottery, drawing and composition, portrait painting, mosaic tile, stained glass, canvas stretching, clay sculpture, and, as they say, much, much more. Fridays, for example, are Clay Days and focus on the potter's wheel. Fridays also offer courses in printmaking, including drypoint intaglio and firsthand spontaneity monotypes — whatever those might be.

The San Diego Art Department is the labor of love, brainchild, or baby of 40-year-old George Lofland, who says, "I'm trying to create a space for the community to use in the way that I needed something myself here in Southern California. Living in apartments and small, confined areas, I was never able to further my own experience with art." The space he has created for the community is some 3700 square feet, and, he says, he has a reasonable deal on the lease.

While Lofland does not have, for example, an MFA, he has been an artist, artisan-craftsman since childhood. "I think I'm probably becoming more of a painter than anything else." Indeed, his still life of a hibiscus behind him literally backs him up.

In response to those who would discount the artistic impulse as a nonessential luxury or trivial pursuit, he says, "I think it's definitely missing from many people's lives. Oftentimes I find it's because as a young person they were told something negative about something that they had made. A lot of times these people become perfectionists, and I tell them, if you allow yourself to make a mistake, the artist will come out of you. It's there; it's just being held back by this perfectionism. They'll say, well, I can't even draw a stick figure. Well, you don't need to draw a stick figure. I'm a 'developing' painter. Someone came in, was looking at one of my artists' work — he ended up buying — and said to me, 'I have a hard time with these people calling themselves artists.' Generally, he would describe an artist as someone who was no longer living, but their art is still living after they are not. He would say [that] we are craftsmen and artisans, 'developing' our whole life. I couldn't agree with him because the art he did buy, I believe, was done by a true artist — and he was living."

The guy Lofland was describing clearly thought of the word art with a capital A, and I'm not so sure that's always helpful. "It's tough enough," I said, "without thinking of death as an art supply." It did put me in mind of a quote from a journalist I cannot attribute at the moment, but it was something to the effect that only the pretentious speak of art; the more seemly talk of making a living.

'Something I'm working on right now," the craftsman-turning-altruistic-humanitarian says, "is gonna start in November, the teen art program. I want to offer something to teenagers who really don't have a place to go after school." Lofland is speaking of the homeless, specifically. "They are the ones really missing out on all this technology and the progression that we have in general in society. I wanted to create a kind of hip, funky, young hangout and creative atmosphere where they can come and be somewhat responsible for being in a class but also be able just to hang out with their peers and teachers making it fun for them.'

As of November 1, this program should be in place. "Gabriel Reed, our ceramics manager, and I are going to launch this together. I have a friend who is a mentor to homeless teenagers, who says he can get me eight to ten kids at least once a week. I'm also looking for other people on the staff to donate some time." Lofland seems to be looking around for candidates as he speaks. On the other side of the room, local artist Julie Hoey has volunteered to act as a live model, posing for a small group of children. In return, Hoey hopes to access space for her own work.

If Burgess was right about art and religion, then the San Diego Art Department should qualify as a mission of sorts and Lofland, manager Amy Backlund, Gabriel Reed, and others as missionaries. In matters of nurturing the soul, I think, I would gravitate to the Art Department long before visiting the Salvation Army.

Five Kids vs. Sanity

Note to self: Never schedule a business meeting at home at 7:00 on a weeknight. Like almost everyone we know, Jack and I are refinancing our house. You've heard the ads. LOWER YOUR PAYMENTS! CON-SOLIDATE YOUR BILLS! Since we bought our home in San Marcos four years ago, the house's value has nearly doubled.

Last week, I got a phone call from a very nice man named Bill V., who is in the refinancing business. He's the dad of one of Angela's classmates. Earlier in the week, I had seen Bill's wife when I picked up Angela and Rebecca and Lucy and Johnny after school. I told her that Jack and I were thinking about a refi. "I'll have Bill call you," she said.

Bill called. I told him what we wanted to

"I'd love to talk to you," Bill said. "What night this week works?"

I looked at my calendar. "How about Thursday?" I figured out in my head how I could get a babysitter so Jack and I could both go to Bill's "Thursday works for me. What would be a good time for me to come by the house?"

"You'll come by the house?"

"Sure. It's something I like to do to make things easier for my clients," Bill explained. "I know how hard it is to get out when you've got a big family."

I did a quick mental calculation. I'll pick up the kids at school at 3:30. Rebecca has softball practice from 4:30 to 6:30. Jack should be home around 5:30. I'll have dinner ready and feed everyone but Rebecca when Jack gets home. Then Jack or I can pick up Rebecca at practice and be home by 6:45. "How about 7:00?" I asked.

"I'll see you Thursday at 7:00," Bill told Thursday afternoon didn't go exactly as I'd imagined. I had planned to serve pot roast for dinner but forgot to get it into the oven before I picked up the kids at school. "That's okay," I told myself. "I'll pop out when Jack gets home and pick up some Mexican takeout. I'll come home, serve dinner, then go pick up Rebecca while everyone else is eating their bean-andcheese burritos."

Jack didn't get home until 6:15. I tried to drive through our favorite Mexican takeout place after I picked up Rebecca from practice. The line of cars waiting for tostadas and carne asada tacos wound out into the parking lot. "We don't have time to wait," I told Rebecca as I turned around and headed for home. "Mr. V. will be at the house in ten minutes. I'll fix you guys something when we get home."

"NO-O-O-O," Rebecca wailed. "I'm so-oo-o hungry-y-y-y-y-y."

"Sorry, guys," I told them. "It's just not going to work out tonight." When we got home, Rebecca stomped upstairs. Lucy and Angela sat down in the living room and complained to Jack. "Mom said we could get Mexican food, but we didn't."

The line for takeout was too long," I explained. "I'll just fix some bean-and-cheese burritos here."

"Won't Bill be here any minute?" Jack asked. "Yup."

As I opened a can of refried beans, the doorbell rang. Jack went to open the door. I walked into the family room and told the kids, "I'm fixing dinner as fast as I can. I really need you to be on your best behavior while Mr. V. is here. He'll be talking about business with Daddy and me, so you need to be quiet and eat your dinner."

"Okay, Mom," Angela and Lucy and Johnny droned.

Ben followed Jack to the door. I opened a sleeve of uncooked tortillas and turned on the burner underneath my flat griddle pan. "Hello," Ben, my youngest, told Bill. "I have a Rescue

"That's great," Bill told Ben. "How old are

"Free," Ben answered. "Johnny has a Rescue Hero, too. His name's Back Draft. He's a fireman robot."

"See," Johnny joined the conversation. He swooped his plastic Rescue Hero robot through the air while making swooshing sounds with his

"Time to put out the fire, Back Draft," Ben said in a deep, serious Rescue Hero voice.

I grated cheese and slapped the first tortilla onto the hot griddle. Bill and Jack sat down at the dining room table. "I was late getting home," Jack told Bill. "So we're running a little behind. Why don't you fill me in on what you and Anne talked about on the phone this week?"

Bill reviewed his notes and started writing figures on a manila file folder. Jack asked questions. I served the kids dinner at the little table in the family room. "Mo-o-o-mm," Angela complained. "This burrito's burned."

Johnny let out a banshee scream. I leaned in close to the table and whispered in my most grim, scary mom voice, "Stop screaming. Daddy and I are trying to talk business with Mr. V."

Through the rest of dinner, I did my best to listen to Bill's presentation. We're getting our refi, I think.
