When Your Hair Is Gone, You'll Be Surprised How Tiny Your Head Is

I begin, sounding very much like a ticket agent, by saying, "Let's see, we've got bald men, chemo people, people who cross-dress, and transsexuals. Who else?"

"Well, there are also women," says Donna Good, "who lose their hair and people with alopecia."

Ms. Good should know, since she's been in the hair business since 1968 and in the wig business since 1974. She is presently with Elements Day Spa, which can be found in the 3300 block of Third Avenue in Hillcrest.

Good shrugs. "It's loss of hair. There's no gender anymore. There is a huge increase in women who are losing their hair, even malepattern baldness happens to them now. I've seen a 30 percent increase in women's baldness over the last ten years. More and more women in their 30s and 20s are going bald. Nobody knows why."

Donna Marie Good was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, raised in Azusa, California, and arrived in San Diego 33 years ago. She's five foot two inches tall and has a personality that stands six foot three. Good has brown hair, brown eyes, a Roman nose, full lips, and a default countenance that declares, "You should eat something."

We Deserve Pro B-Ball

Thank you so much for the beautiful soliloquy on local B-ball by Geoff Bouvier ("B-ball," November 6). While it was a wonderful piece on the local venues and the alpha males who inhabit them, it was one of the best pieces I have read on the game itself.

The statement that "the true beauty of basketball lies in the fact that you must keep your opponent from scoring without touching him" is one of the finest points ever made about the mysterious attraction of B-ball. It also explains why the finer points of the game are lost on Godzillas like Shaquille O'Neal and Karl Malone, who have based their entire careers on physically - rather than psychologically — overwhelming their opponents.

Most importantly, the article reminded me how much I miss living in an area with a professional basketball team. While pickup ball is a wonderful outlet for those who play, rarely does it allow a fan of the game to follow the same players as a team battling against other teams. San Diego is a major metropolitan city. We deserve a professional basketball team. It certainly couldn't hurt the city's standing in light of how the Padres and the Chargers have been doing.

Attention Grabber

Just want to express my appreciation for the cover article on basketball at the P.B. Rec Center ("B-ball," November 6). Not only does the writer have a talent with words and a marvelous sense of humor, he also knows his basketball. He held my attention from start to finish. I'd read anything he writes.

Frederick Regenold

B-Ball Evolves

I really enjoyed Geoff Bouvier's article ("B-ball") on pickup basketball in your November 6 issue, despite his somewhat aimless, zigzagging prose and his omissions. It reminds me of when Oliver Stone did a movie about the Doors: it wasn't really true to the Doors, in my head, and I couldn't stand Val Kilmer as Jim, but watching a movie dedicated to such an important subject was still great. Actually, basketball has less to be angry about in Bouvier's article than Morrison does, shifting in his grave over Stone's flick.

The sound of the ball on the hardwood or the blacktop. Dribbling, dribbling. To hear that sound is divine; many times I can remember being irresistibly drawn to the door of a gym by that sound. And though I fault Michael Jordan for betraying the game by ever wanting to be away from it two years, missing his chance for even more records and an even more exalted place in the pantheon of basketball history (not to mention his sitting out the last day of the season à la Ted Williams so his batting average would round up to .200), I too have strayed, wanting to run or swim or cycle my way to better fitness, knowing basketball would keep me from those goals — and whenever during those periods of "fitness only" I heard that sound coming through the gym doors, it was torture — a siren song calling me inevitably back to the court.

He left out calls. He left out the big difference between pickup ball and organized games with refs you don't run out of fouls at five or six, and you argue calls. The collective will of the group has to make or take the calls. It's like a microcosm of the way the world and history works. When a call is made and a call is disputed ("I didn't touch you!" "You initiated the contact!" "You're crazy!" etc., etc.) a fascinating dynamic takes place. The collective will of the ten guys on the court dictates who gets the call whichever way the ten start to move up or down the court decides nearly all disputed calls. The variations are endless. One guy insists on the call and is left at one

No burn zone Before the big fires, ex—county supervisor Jack Walsh cut brush around his mountain retreat without talking to the forest service. He ended up paying a $4000 fine ... The San Diego City Schools Police Officers Association, the union representing school police, is blasting school chief Alan Bersin for slashing cops at some of the district's biggest schools, including La Jolla High, Scripps Ranch High, and Clairemont High. "We have been told that the 12 positions were 'inadvertently removed from the budget you approved in May of 2003," says a letter to the board of education last week from union president Alfonso Contreras. "A loss of 12 budgeted positions is a 30 percent staffing decrease in direct police and safety services to our schools. Already this year, there have been five school-related shootings in this country, including one in our district." Alfonso goes on to say that school administrators are already planning to make the cuts permanent in next year's budget. Insiders note that there have been no school drug busts during Bersin's tenure, reflecting a serious lack of enforcement ... Meanwhile, San Diego Unified staffers are ramping up their effort to develop a big chunk of district-owned property on Commercial Street in Barrio Logan. Next Wednesday night, the public is invited to a district-sponsored review of two contenders for the site: MAAC Project and Bronze Triangle.

Ralph Inzu

MAAC's ex-chairman is current city councilman Ralph Inzunza, and the nonprofit group is believed to have the inside track. The multi-acre site is said to be worth millions of dollars, and district chief Bersin is expected to argue that the district needs the money to balance its troubled budget, reported to be currently $14 million in the red ... Bob White, the ex-Pete Wilson aide from San Diego playing a big role in governor-elect Arnold Schwarzenegger's new administration, is reportedly heading back to San Diego to set up his own political consulting and lobbying practice. But White, known as a dandy-dressing European shoe hound during Wilson's mayoral days here, has another headquarters, this one at his own $750,000 second-home hideaway purchased last year in ritzy Palm Desert ... Ex-GOP congressman Claire Burgener, who developed and named Clairemont after himself, is now a victim of Alzheimer's disease and is being honored at an upcoming fundraiser by the Lincoln

Disconnect The signs around downtown say "Bandwidth Bay," but computer-savvy travelers attempting to log on to the free wireless computer network purportedly offered at the Santa Fe Depot say they're unable to connect. Not to worry, says Matt Spathas of Sentre Partners, which has set up promotional wireless "hot spots" at office buildings and other public places around downtown. Spathas promised to investigate, explaining the depot is served by DSL, which he says is more prone to trouble than the rest of the system, but as of two weeks after he said he'd look into the matter, the depot's wireless was still off-line ... Mitz Lee, wife of Jeff Lee, who narrowly lost his 2002 school-board bid to Katherine Nakamura, is running for an open seat in district A, which was redrawn by allies of Superintendent Alan Bersin to evict incumbent Frances O'Neill Zimmerman. After his defeat at the polls, Jeff Lee gave up politics and is now enrolled in professional culinary classes at Grossmont College, where he has a scholarship from a national chefs' organization.

Corporate effluent It's a wake-up call for those naïve enough to think that the plan to turn raw San Diego sewage into drinking water is really dead: the San Diego regional chapter of the "Water Reuse Association" scheduled a luncheon meeting yesterday at Cuyamaca Gardens in El Cajon. The major topic: "Beneficial Reuse of Reclaimed Water for Industry, Irrigation, and Aquifer Recharge in the State College, Pennsylvania Area," by David Yoxtheimer, of USFilter, the huge water-treatment contractor. Also on the bill was a speech by John Ruetten of Resource Trends: "Public Perception of Indirect Potable Reuse." Decoded, that means "toilet to tap": taking sewage effluent and treating and filtering it enough to be put into the groundwater supply for later pumping as drinking water. An attempt by the Susan Golding—led San Diego City Council to set up a similar toilet-totap plant was beaten back by adverse public opinion, but that hasn't stopped engineering companies like USFilter from continuing to pitch the idea. Public officials attending the water-reuse presentations in El Cajon were invited to a free lunch by the company ... Much has been made about the late Joan Kroc's donation of $5 million to local public broadcaster KPBS and $200 million more to National Public Radio. There was a glowing write-up in the New York Times of how KPBS fundraiser Stephanie Bergsma repeatedly chatted up the hamburger heiress in the months before her death. No mention in any media, however, of the fact that KPBS is not a nonprofit institution per se, but actually licensed to state government and ultimately run out of the office of SDSU president Stephen Weber.

Smoke Blowers

s politicians, real estate developers, and other sharks know, voters will fall for con jobs about creation of jobs.

That's why, as the postfire rhetoric heats up, we must discern who is blowing hot air, particularly when a developer blames the fires on environmentalists and then pours in from the outside. That's normal: disasters bring growth.

San Diego tourism, which has been just about the best in the country, will be dented claims that his proposed housing tracts will create jobs.

First, keep in mind that the San Diego economy already outperforming the state and the nation — will spurt even more as money somewhat, but not for more than a month, according to Jerry Morrison, a La Jollabased hotel guru. Then it should boom again.

The hiking/camping market will suffer some lasting effects, but it's not a large piece of the pie, says Alan Gin, an economist at the University of San Diego. Immigration will probably pick up, largely because the tractobsessed construction industry doesn't have the manpower or skills to replace structures "one house at a time," he says. Labor will have to be imported. Although some insurance prices may rise, the housing market should continue to boom indeed, "It might have even gotten tighter" with elimination of some homes, says Bringing in bushels of money to San Diego will be one of the nation's great publicity/politics machines, the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). This agency rushes into purportedly disaster-stuck towns and shovels out aid such as lowcost loans. Arriving simultaneously is the president, followed by the sycophantic media. Bill Clinton used FEMA the way he used FE-MALES. As soon as he took office, the number of disaster-area declarations soared. His first year, the New York Times and USA Today ran a picture of him hugging a sobbing 24-year-old woman who was a disaster victim.

Tijuana's Big Bus Quandary

By Ernie Grimm

of three ways. One is route taxis, also known as collective taxis. They are the 1980s station wagons that prowl up and down fixed routes on Tijuana's major boulevards and avenues. Riders have to share the cab with seven or eight others and sometimes must sit in the rear-facing back seat. And a commuter from east Tijuana would have to take two different route taxis to get into downtown. The ride would cost about a dollar and take about an hour.

The second option facing the commuter is to take a bus. It would cost half what the route taxis cost, but the ancient buses are slow, crowded, and uncomfortable. And they only run twice an hour. Including waiting time, it's an hour-and-a-half

The last option is to take one of the recently introduced taxis libres, free taxis. The orange or white cabs are smaller and more modern than the route taxis. They have meters, unlike the route taxis, and can travel anywhere in the city. They carry one fare at a time. A clever driver can shorten the trip to 45 or 50 minutes, but it will cost more than a route taxi.

Seeking an alternative to these methods, the municipal government spent most of a decade and five million pesos ($500,000) studying the idea of a light rail running from the San Ysidro border port, through downtown, and out to the eastern neighborhoods of the city. After several junkets by municipal officials to study light-rail systems in foreign cities, the idea was scrapped earlier this year. "The lightrail project," explains Máximo García López, Tijuana city councilman and president of the city's Economic Development Commission, "was too expensive, there weren't enough people interested, and the people that were interested decided the returns wouldn't be high enough to compensate for the investment. It got to a point where the city simply decided that it wasn't within the view of the city right now. It just requires too much money."

Now the city has presented a new mass transit idea, which they're calling the ruta troncal, which translates literally to "trunk route," loosely to "main route." Garcia describes the project. "What we are trying to do is transport more people faster and alleviate the traffic along the main east-west boulevard by using articulating buses. What we are trying to do is to be more efficient, organized, modern, and cheaper — to be cheaper for the user."

"Articulating" buses are the double-long buses, sometimes seen on heavily traveled routes in San Diego, that bend in the middle. But the proposed ruta troncal project goes beyond simply buying new, longer buses. The two center lanes from the border, out Boulevard Agua Caliente to the eastern end of the city, will be set aside for the articulating buses exclusively. Garcia, a trim, well-dressed man in his early 30s, explains, "That will leave the right lanes, which are the most traveled lanes, for the rest of the traffic."

The center-lane plan creates the need to build pedestrian bridges from the sidewalk to stations built in the middle of the street. Passengers will pay their fares in the station instead of to the driver. The idea, Garcia says, is to simulate a rail system, such as the San Diego Trolley, using buses instead of trains or trolleys. From behind the desk in his richly furnished city hall office, he explains, "This model, that they are trying to implement here, is already being used in Bogotá, Colombia, and it was just inaugurated in Guanajuato, here in Mexico."

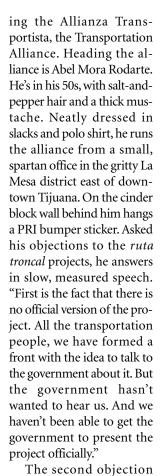

The projected cost of 50 to 80 million pesos is a quarter to a third of what would have been spent on the abandoned light-rail project. "Five million pesos," Garcia says, "or $500,000 will be for studies to determine things such as where the stations will be, because we don't want it to be, 'I want one here... I want one there.' We want them where they are most needed. The rest of the money will be used in the actual construction of the project: acquiring the buses, pavement improvements, and building the bridges and stations. Some streets will have to be widened as well."

The city's proposal calls for the route taxis to be taken off the ruta troncal to lighten the traffic on the route. Not surprisingly, the whole idea is meeting resistance from the existing transportation industry, including the powerful taxi unions and bus line owners. To combat the city's designs, these groups recently formed an umbrella organization that they're call-

Mora mentions has to do with infrastructure difficulties. "We have spoken to the engineers association, the architects association, and what they have told us is that Tijuana doesn't have the capacity on the streets to handle those double buses the articulating buses that the government wants to use in the transportation system they are trying to implement."

Shrugging his shoulders in mock incredulity, Mora says, "We have very few lanes on the streets, and they have the idea to take two lanes for exclusive use of these buses?"

Mora continues, "Another problem we have with the project is unemployment. We have approximately 2000 taxis along that route. Those 2000 taxis, upon which 6000 families depend, would be eliminated."

"Part of the master plan," Garcia responds, "would be to convert a lot of the route taxis into free taxis that can operate anywhere in the city."

Mora and his alliance also see the city's move into mass transit as a power grab. "Transportation used to be a state-administered service," Mora explains. "The state would give you the permits and all that. Since the state government couldn't directly provide the service, they leased it, or franchised it to private organizations. Now, the municipal government's plan establishes the basis to monopolize and absorb all the different companies that are established; they want to be the only administrator of all transportation. The ruta troncal is a guise for the municipal government taking over the transportation system."

"The state government," Garcia responds, "did have control over transportation. But changes to the law were city more regulatory power over local thin over local things such as E transportation, permits to sell alcohol, and others."

Mora also accuses the city $\frac{\tilde{g}}{2}$ of getting into transportation to generate revenue for $\frac{\omega}{2}$ city coffers. "There's a mil-photo of him hugging a young lady who had lost her home made papers across the U.S. Among local politicians, Supervisor Dianne Jacob has made the most media mileage from the fires.

But the Federal Emergency Management Agency, by giving fast, low-interest loans so that people can rebuild, simply sets up communities for the next disaster. Sums up James Bovard of the Cato Institute, "The Federal Emergency Management Agency is good at winning headlines. But do we really want to help rebuild homes and government property in areas that should never have been built on in the first place?"

Through its low-cost loans, subsidized insurance, and other devices, the agency encourages people to relocate homes and businesses in areas that are chronically disaster-prone — flood plains, for example. Will San Diegans get government loans to rebuild homes with shake roofs on ridge lines or steep slopes? Don't laugh. Until a couple of years ago, a fire station on Mt. Helix had a shake roof.

Economists Thomas A.

Garrett of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank and Russel Sobel of West Virginia University did a long-range study of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. One of the major conclusions: "States politically important to the president have a higher rate of disaster declaration by the president." Sums up the study, "Nearly half of all disaster relief is motivated politically, rather than by need."

No surprise there. This is how bureaucracies burgeon: maximizing press coverage of the societal problem they are supposed to address but never making a dent in that problem lest they are so successful they work themselves out of their jobs.

It appears that San Diego will escalate the century-old debate of smokestacks versus geraniums, quantity of life versus quality of life, fast growth versus slow or no growth. Both the real estate industry and the environmentalist/slow-growth coalition will use the fire to advance their causes.

Already, the building industry is screaming that governmental red tape must be cut so that people can get new homes built quickly. But as former councilmember Bruce Henderson points out, "slashing red tape" is a code phrase for making sure that permits are approved without rigorous environmental enforcement — including insistence on fire protection.

Developers and their media lackeys blame the blazes on environmentalists, and with no evidence, on eco-terrorists. John Fund of The Wall Street Journal's online editorial page quotes two San Diegans decrying environmental rules that purportedly kept the flames going. Then Fund comes up with this startling statement: "Authorities say most of the ten fires in Southern California were started by arsonists, either thrill-seekers or eco-terrorists opposed to new housing developments." (Italics mine.) Really? What authorities? I know of none saying that. You can expect redneck radio to blame eco-terrorists in an attempt to besmirch environmentalists

You have to understand the Journal's editorial page. An excellent story in the November 3 New Yorker puts it in perspective. During the Whitewater/Monica Lewinsky years, the Journal's edit page gave the scandal a staggering 3000 pages of editorial and op-ed columns. Later, they were all packaged in six volumes. But a reporter asked Robert Bartley, who ran the edit page then, whether his page would have supported or attacked Newt Gingrich for similar peccadilloes. The paper would have defended Newt's activities, Bartley said laconically. "That's the way it is."

Yes, that's the way it is locally, too. County Supervisor Bill Horn immediately stated that the areas that burned most severely were open spaces that are required of developers — who have Horn and other local pols stuffed neatly in their pockets.

Then there is the idea of building high-rise apartments and condominiums in core areas, such as down-towns — part of the socalled "smart growth" strategy. "Heretofore, everyone in San Diego has been trying to make a bundle of money off of land conversion," says Duncan McFetridge, backcountry supporter and head of Save Our Forests and Ranchlands. "Now we're getting signals from builders and realtors who see apartments in downtown San Diego appreciate in value."

But there are nagging problems that arise when governments stress and subsidize core city development. First, there is usually overbuilding — a risk in San Diego right now. And look at East Village. "The Padres deal is the biggest scandal in the history of San Diego," says Jim Mills, who was president pro tem of the California Senate between 1971 and 1980. "Is it about a ballpark? No. It is about giving [Padres majority owner] John Moores a great deal of property at low prices so he can make an enormous amount of money."

Remember, jobs were a prattling point in the selling of the ballpark, too, although it was obvious that the only significant jobs that would be created were those in construction, which are shortlived. Hamburger flippers and beer vendors would simply move over from Qualcomm to take low-paying jobs at a new location.

Growing up (high-rise) instead of out (sprawl) presents natural risks, too: earthquakes, for example, notes Henderson.

All things considered, McFetridge is proposing the most sensible solution for San Diego: a Rural Lands Initiative that would restrict the number of houses to one per 40 acres in areas just east of county cities, one per 80 in rural areas, and one per 160 in areas outside the County Water Authority boundary. "It's good for the preservation of water resources more water will flow into drinking-water reservoirs," says McFetridge.

"It's also helpful on the fire front," he says. "If there is a wildland fire, firefighting resources can manage that, not be diverted to structure protection."

The matter is headed for the ballot in March. Developers and agricultural interests are already lining up money to fight it. They may pull out an old one: save the family farm. But that was always an emotional non sequitur. What the developers have always wanted is to pave over the county, à la Manhattan. They will subliminally note that concrete doesn't burn.

CITY LIGHTS

Developers "are already talking the economy, jobs," says McFetridge. They are blowing smoke to exploit a tragic fire. ■

Big bus quandary

lion dollars a day generated in transportation," Mora continues. "A million users spending about a dollar every day is a million dollars gross. That's another reason the municipal government is so interested."

Garcia counters that the taxi union leaders are trying to preserve the flawed system to keep a good monetary thing going for themselves. "They can make, with the current system, much more money than with the system we are proposing. They don't want free taxis because it would eliminate the sitios, the places where the route taxis park and pick up fares. And that represents $500 per taxi to them, because each taxi pays $500 a year to be able to park there. With 6000 taxis in the city, that's $3 million a year."

Though he acknowledges the current transportation system in Tijuana isn't perfect, Mora says that polls show 70 percent of commuters are satisfied with it. "They don't know any other way," Garcia responds. "There hasn't been any other system, only the inefficient, disorganized, and expensive one we have. It would be worthwhile to see where they did that survey, if they could validate those figures. Because if you talked to passengers at any taxi station, you would see how dissatisfied they really are, especially when they have to ride in the back part of these station wagons that were designed to carry your groceries, not to carry people." ■

Hevmatt:

Why is it that I can balance myself on a bicycle when it's moving, but I can't when it's stopped. When you think about it, that doesn't make sense. Or does it?

— Bikeman, Bay Park

Depends on who's doing the thinking, apparently. The answer used to be simple, but for some reason, that wasn't good enough. You should have asked this a couple of years ago, before some big thinkers got ahold of it. The elves won't give up their training wheels, and they don't care what the answer is, so I'm on my own here.

I assume there's no mystery about why a stationary bike is so unstable. Same reason twolegged bar stools never caught on. You're trying to balance yourself along a line that runs from the contact point of the front wheel to the contact point of the back wheel. You're perpetually a victim to gravity. If somehow you do manage to find the precise point of balance, all you have to do is switch your bubblegum to your left cheek, and you fall to the left. But when the bike's wheels are spinning, the physics of the situation changes. The front wheel acts like a gyroscope, and one thing a spinning gyroscope wants to do is remain stable. Now if you promise to go along with me on this explanation, I promise I won't go into the bloody details of angular momentum. Nobody wants to hear that, believe me.

So this time the bike is moving when you shift your gum (and the center of gravity of you and your gum and the bike). In response, the bike tilts slightly to the left. But instead of caving to gravity, the stabilizing influence of the gyroscopic front wheel (the steering wheel) causes it to turn automatically to the left, under the moving center of gravity. It's the effects of the angular momentum of the wheel and the pressure of the ground against the wheel that cause the shift. The faster you're moving, the more stable this system is. The design of the bike frame and the wheel fork also influence stability. The fork creates a steering axis, and when the moving bike tilts to the right or left, off this axis, the wheel automatically tries to correct itself by turning into the direction of the tilt. You can see this even when the bike is stationary; tip it to one side, and the front wheel will pivot to that side. All in all, riding a bike is sometimes described as a whole series of these tiny automatic corrections being made continuously as you pedal along. Personally, just thinking about all this is plenty exhausting, and I'm going to take a nap.

Matt:

I bought one of those wireless doorbells for my home a few days ago. A neighbor three houses down apparently bought one too, and whenever someone rings their doorbell, mine rings. Last week a guy from SBC was working on our telephone pole and my doorbell started ringing nonstop without anyone pressing my neighbor's or my doorbell. It stopped happening until early this morning, when my doorbell woke me up at 5:00 a.m. There was no one at my door or my neighbors'. What gives?

— Sleepless in Clairemont

Welcome to Wireless Wonderland, a cordless world where appliances have a life of their own. Takes me back to the days of the big garage-door-opener uprising, where no home was safe from stray rays. Theoretically, Sleepless, your wireless doorbell should behave itself. It's a lowwattage transmitter in the button, and a receiver at the ding-dong end. The radio signal generated when somebody pushes your button is broadcast around your house, able to penetrate wood and glass, to reach the receiver and ring your bell. But it shouldn't be powerful enough to leak over to the neighbor's house, assuming his receiver is more than 150 feet away. But obviously that's just theory. The SBC guy might have been generating a signal with a cell phone or other piece of equipment. Who knows what wireless device set off the 5 a.m. wake-up bell. If you check the doorbell's instruction book, you'll probably find that you can set your system to any of 100+ transmit-receive channels. Maybe you can find one that doesn't match your neighbor's or somebody's walkie-talkie or baby monitor or Internet connection or other wireless, radio-controlled device.

The feds are wrestling with the problem of reallocating broadcast pathways. It used to be a relatively simple matter, and frequency assignments were even given away as political perks. But with the wireless revolution, things are changing fast. Unfortunately, these days, most of the low-powered devices fall into an essentially unregulated spectrum, and it's up to each manufacturer to build in enough flexibility to ensure these devices don't share radio frequencies and interfere with one another. The FCC calls these "rules of etiquette," not laws. So far, things are kind of impolite, and some consumer tinkering is usually required. And if history is any predictor, it will only get worse. We seem to love anything wireless. So when your radiocontrolled lounge chair sets off your radio-controlled washing machine, you may long for the good old days when all you had to worry about were your phantom doorbell ringers.

A Sinkhole of Lies

This is where the lying starts. "This," being that slick spot on the road where money, jobs, and reputations intersect. In this instance, Messieurs Alex, Dean and Michael Spanos, Chargers head coach Marty Schottenheimer, Chargers general manager A. J. Smith, Drew Brees, and Doug Flutie have found themselves sharing identical pathological suites. No one can tell the truth.

This is what a great gob unexpected success can do for you. In their heart of hearts, Sunday's demolition of Minnesota must have disappointed the entire gaggle of millionaires save for Flutie. I don't believe the other fellas wished that the Bolts would lose, I'll give them that, but all must have been saddened to see Doug Flutie destroy a legitimate NFL team, particularly one with a winning record and holding fast to first place in their division.

While we're here, I will note that the Box will not seek to diminish the Minnesota Vikings, as many sportswriters in the captive press have. The Vikings currently lead the NFC North by two games. San Diego has won two games. Here's the point: the Chargers scored 42 points, a total San Diego has not managed since the United States prison population stood under one million. Those 42 points came from the same team that has compiled a .375 winning average since December of 2001, or, to put it another way, since the day

Doug Flutie was benched. Amazing.

Drew Brees has started 24 games, one right after the other, since his December 2003 inauguration. San Diego lost 15 of those 24 games, good enough for last place. And now this team scores 42 points behind a 41-yearold quarterback who has been written off everywhere he has gone during his - choke -18-year professional football career. Flutie has two God-given qualities: the ability to scramble and the knack for being written off. Actually, many of us thought the Dougie was dead. But, by golly, turns out the little tyke has been collecting his paycheck while the rest of us were watching San Diego lose football games. Nice going, Doug!

But as we know, nothing good lasts. By winning, by stomping a division leader, by improvising, running, passing, skipping, jumping, hopping, and doing all of it on a level Drew Brees can never hope to approach, Flutie brought some unpleasant questions to the party. The foremost is, "Why hasn't Dougie been playing before now?"

That's the question a fan would ask. A simple, straight-ahead question. A fan roots for his team, a fan wants his team's best players to play so his team has the best chance of winning. Winning makes the fan feel good. But winning is not what the aforementioned gaggle of millionaires are thinking about. In fact, winning is pretty far down the list of their most frequent one hundred thoughts. And this is where the lying begins, because no one can admit to that.

Brees has endured nightsweats since Sunday's game. Flutie showed him up — worse, showed mankind that the Bolts can win...with a good quarterback. Maybe the Chargers aren't that bad, maybe only Brees is that bad, maybe we don't need Brees any more. Brees went to the bench with a 65.6 quarterback rating, a little less than, say, not-a-household-name Aaron Brooks of New Orleans with his 85.7 rating and certainly not Flutie's 112.3 rating. But, to be fair, Brees is ahead of Ryan Leaf. Leaf quit the NFL, after four years of sucking money, with a quarterback rating of 50. Brees has been on the Chargers payroll for three years and has lost his starting job. Quarterbacks don't come back from that. At least, not while playing for the same team that demoted him. He won't be here next year.

Marty Schottenheimer is outraged. Flutie's game is the exact opposite of Martyball. Martyball is, in its essence, boring your opponent to death, or at least, boring your opponent into a 6–3 overtime loss. Marty and Doug. Over controlling vs. improvising. Magic vs. slog. Every time Flutie does something beautiful, Marty is shown for the life-hating football hack he is. Of course, on a technical note, Sunday's game doesn't say much — make that, says too much about Marty's ability to coach. His team went from reliable doormat to playoff caliber with the insertion of a single player. Now, tell me, what, exactly, do we need Schottenheimer for?

Nobody can say what they're thinking. Brees can't say, "The fucking toad Flutie has cost me my career." Marty can't say, "Ball control." Spanos, any one of them, can't say, Look, it's about real estate. I got Schottenheimer for chump change, the Washington Redskins had to pick up millions on his contract after they fired him. I don't care who wins or loses." And Flutie can't say, "It's been two years since I've played, I'm 41 years old, and I'm still the best quarterback you've seen since the prison population was under one

Senior pastor: Reverend Paul Kim

Services: Sunday worship, 11:00 a.m.

"We're called the Israel of Asia," Reverend Paul Kim of Calvary Prayer House told me last week. "Israel endured many invasions and occupations. Israel's history is one of suffering and survival. The Gospel came out of Israel, out of Jerusalem. Korea has had a similar history of invasions and occupations and persecution.

"The real miracle is that at present Korea is 40 percent Christian. That fact alone makes us feel that, like Israel, Korea has a special role to play in the world, in bringing the Gospel to the nations of the world."

Calvary Prayer House is a church within a church, the English-language ministry of San Diego Calvary Korean Church in Linda Vista. When you walk into San Diego Calvary Korean's main building, you get an odd sense of the future. Roman Catholics today speculate about the election of an African or Asian pope. The majority of Anglicans are African. This year the Mormons announced that the majority of their members are not English speakers, San Diego Calvary Korean has decorated its walls with large posters illustrating its missionary efforts. Smiling Korean faces dot maps of Russia, the former Soviet republics, Mexico, South America, and Asia.

"After North America," Reverend Kim told me, "Korea sends out the second highest number of missionaries in the world."

Last Sunday morning at Calvary Prayer House, I got an idea of what's behind this zeal. Backed up by a three-person band, Reverend Kim closed his eyes and in a gutsy tenor started to sing one of those rock-influenced hymns that are a popular part of contemporary worship. These hymns usually leave me cold. But Reverend Kim poured himself into the hymn with such ardor that beads of sweat shone on his brow. He had the sort of force and conviction that you hear in the best African-American gospel. By the hymn's end, Reverend Kim's light blue shirt was mottled with sweat.

His sermon, too, was ardent. He based his remarks on John 18:18–25, the story about how difficult it is for the rich to enter the Kingdom of God. In Reverend Kim's telling, this story explained how "there is no way to experience God without experiencing personal sacrifice. Jesus tells the rich man, 'Sell all that you own and follow me.' Jesus doesn't say sell half, or 99 percent. He says all. And yet most of us believe that 99 percent is good enough."

Reverend Kim jabbed his fist in the air to emphasize his points. He clapped. He darted about the podium. For added emphasis, his voice descended to a growl and then floated to a higher register, almost song-like. Once again, I thought of the African-American Christian tradition.

"Most of us have some little thing, some little sin, desire, or fear, just a small part of ourselves, maybe just one percent of ourselves, that we can't give up. But God wants all of who we are. This isn't supposed to be easy. It's supposed to take work. Unless we die unto ourselves, until we let our old selves die, we can't experience God. We can't enter into his kingdom. No matter how painful or difficult this may be, we must surrender our entire selves to God. No pain, no gain."

This understanding of pain seemed to me very Korean. Decades have passed since I, as a student, first learned about Korean history from Korean Presbyterians in Japan. The Japanese brought Koreans to Japan as slave labor. The Japanese still regard them as inferior. The Christian Koreans I knew in Tokyo taught me about Japan's brutal occupation of Korea and about the horrors of the Korean War. These were quiet people who were almost secretive about being Korean.

Korean.

"It's very interesting if you look at Christian history," Reverend Kim told me after the service. "Christianity starts in Palestine and moves west into the Roman Empire. The Reformation, with Martin Luther and the Church of England, happened further west. Christianity then came to America, and from America into Asia. We believe that we're going to bring Christianity even further west, west of Korea, into the Muslim world. Even now we have missionaries working in dangerous parts of the Muslim world.

"I go to Egypt very often. The last time I was there, I was sitting in front of the Museum of Egyptian Antiquities and this man came up to me and asked if I was Korean. I said yes. He said, 'Oh, you Koreans have pure hearts.' So, you see, we're able to spread the Gospel in a way that Europeans and white Americans can't. In the Muslim world, there's this idea of conquest and confrontation attached to Christianity. But those people know that Korea, and Koreans, have no desire to conquer them. They look at us as people who have suffered. They want to listen to what we have to say."

Dear Aunt Trudy,

My sister's best friend has a son who began college at my alma mater a year ago. I've met him a few times and I know his mother slightly, but I don't know her that well and barely know her son. My sister is beside herself because this bright, talented son of her friend whom she has known since he was a baby has just been diagnosed with bipolar disorder. He has had to take a leave from college and move back in with his parents. My sister is now calling me every day demanding that I phone this young man and "talk to him." She seems to think that this will somehow be helpful to him — I guess because the two or three times I met him, we had nice conversations about what he was studying at college. I told my sister that while I'm sympathetic, I don't know what I can say to this poor soul — I'm not a doctor or psychiatrist and have no first-hand experience with mental illness. I barely know what bipolar disorder is. He also hasn't expressed any desire to talk to me. I told my sister that she could tell him or his mother that if he wants to chat or email me, I'd be happy to talk to him. Now my sister is angry with me and insists I must call him and offer my services immediately. I'm not even sure the young man in question would be comfortable knowing I've been told that he has been diagnosed with this disease. Am I being hard-hearted as my sister claims, not to rush in and contact this guy, or am I right to say I'm here if he wants to talk, and my sister can convey that if she likes, but I don't want to force myself on him at what must be a very difficult time?

PERPLEXED NORMAL HEIGHTS BROTHER

Dear Perplexed,

If the young man in question hasn't asked to speak to you and no members of his family have requested you call or have even talked to you about this problem, then I agree that you are acting appropriately by hanging back. Your sister can tell the young man's mother that you're awfully sorry to hear about their troubles, and if there's anything you can do, or if the young man wants to talk, you'd be glad to speak with him. Otherwise, respecting the young man's privacy seems like the sensitive thing to do at this time. I'm sure your sister's intentions are good: she desperately wants to help and can't think of how to be of service. However, pushing you to make contact when it may not be wanted is not necessarily constructive. If you and your sister want to learn more about bipolar disorder, the National Institute of Mental Health has some very readable information on their website (as do other organizations). One of the NIMH links for this information is www.nimh.nih.gov/publicat/bipolar.cfm

Dear Aunt Trudy,

I'm behind in reading your column but thought I would respond anyway to Dear Speechless, the woman who had been on Prozac and was battling depression. She wrote that her family was urging her to begin taking Prozac again because they didn't like her behavior at a party her aunt had thrown for her. I agree with you that the family dynamics in this group as described in Speechless's letter are beyond sorting out without knowing much more about the individuals involved. And certainly it would have been nicer and kinder if family members had dealt with Speechless in the manner you described — showing interest in and concern for her happiness rather than showing irritation and being judgmental. Ah, were we all able to deal with aggravating relatives in such a rational manner, it would be a more peaceful world. What I'm not sure about is why Speechless felt that stopping to pick up ice cream for her aunt on the way to a party, even a party in her honor, felt like such an onerous chore. This whole drama would not have taken place if she had simply been gracious and helped out her aunt, who undoubtedly had gone to a lot of trouble to host this family gathering. Sounds to me like Speechless was looking for a drama, and if it hadn't been the ice cream, it would have been something else. I think that you may have fallen into Speechless's trap: she manipulated you into giving her sympathy, where none was probably due, as evidenced by your statement, "Sounds like you need and deserve a break from your kin." I suspect the kin may be the ones who need a break.

-EVE KELLY

"My machine loves the Mettler. It is like the gourmet thread."

"I love the Mettler. My machine loves the Mettler. It is like the gourmet thread. We also sell the Guttermann thread, which is another nice thread. I personally would say it is a step down from the Mettler, but it does rank right up there." Guttermann Quilting Thread costs $3.39 for 220 yards. Guttermann All Purpose Cotton Thread costs $1.75 for 110 yards and $3.45 for 273

A supplier restocking the shelves at Yardage Town in La Mesa, who didn't want his name mentioned, filled me in on a few thread differences. "Most of the sales are in the all-purpose thread, for your basic sewing," he explained. "The shiny rayon threads are for your machine embroidery. There is also the topstitching thread, which is a polyester thread that you'd find on your jeans or something like that. It's a decorative thread. Then there is the machine embroidery, a lightweight cotton-covered polyester thread, what they used to call lingerie thread..

"Thread," he continued, "is gauged, like wire. The gauge used to be stamped on the spool of thread. They don't really gauge it anymore. The lighter the weight of thread, the higher the number. So if you have a number eight, it is real heavy-duty stuff."

Yardage Town sells the Coats & Clark brand thread.

"The All Purpose," remarked manager Elaine Luker, "is a cotton-wrap polyester, and it is for basic sewing. I use it for everything. Their Button and Craft thread, which is a real heavy polyester, is usually used for sewing on buttons, when you want something really strong.

The hand-quilting thread has a wax on it, so it doesn't work in your sewing machine, but it is great for putting on appliqués and hand-quilting. It is a cotton-covered polyester, it has a glaze finish, it is stiffer and easier to work with, and it doesn't tangle up. I like it for doing appliqués on wedding dresses." Yardage Town sells their 300-yard spools for $1.95 and their 500-yard thread for $2.85. The specialty threads range in

"We sell two brands, Guttermann and Sulky, that I would recommend," said a saleswoman at JoAnn Fabrics & Crafts. "I prefer the Guttermann because it is a little bit stronger." JoAnn's sells their Guttermann Sews All Fabric thread for $1.55 for 110 yards, $3.15 for 273 yards, and $4.85 for 547 yards. The Guttermann Quilting thread costs $3.39 for 218 yards. The economy spool of decorative Sulky Metallic Foil Thread cost me a whopping $13.99 for 1000 yards, and the Sulky Polyester Bobbin Thread cost $3.49 for 475 yards.

In my younger years, sewing was therapeutic for me. Hours would float by as I created quilts, embroidered pillows or dresses. Since the arrival of my Kelly munchkins, I have not touched a needle. That is not to say there haven't been sewing needs. Husband Patrick's pants need hemming, the kids' shirt buttons need replacing, and I am anxious to pick up quilting again to whip up a baby quilt for a friend's newborn. I have decided that housework will be put on hold for at least an evening a week for sewing.

An information nerd at heart, I called a few sewing stores to get some skinny on sewing threads. If I was to devote a night a week to sewing, I want to be using the correct threads. I would rather not keep replacing shirt buttons due to bad thread. And if I'm going to spend hours quilting, those quilt stitches had better last.

I started with Rosie's Calico Cupboard Quilt Shop. One of the managers, Ginny, filled Metallic me in on some quilting scoop. 143- 7021 'Quilters usually use cotton 1609 YDS fabrics," she explained, "and they prefer to use 100 percent cotton thread versus polyester thread because the cotton thread wears at the same rate as their fabric. Polyester thread will outlast the fabric, and eventually, as the fabric begins to deteriorate, the polyester thread will act like a fishing line and begin to tear the quilt. So it is better to have the thread and the fabric wear at the same rate.

Are there differences in the cotton threads?

"Yes, there are differences," Ginny continued. "The Mettler brand thread is one that we use here that we really like a lot simply because it has the silk finish and it is more slippery and therefore it doesn't tend to knot up. Mettler is 100 percent cotton. It isn't actually silk, but it has a smooth, silklike finish on it." Coats & Clark Ow Over ... Rosie's Calico Cupboard Quilt Shop sells Mettler All Purpose thread for $2.20 for a spool of 164 yards, and $5.50 for 547 yards.

"We also carry hand-quilting thread, which is a little bit heavier weight version of the cotton thread. That is used to sandwich your quilt together with the top, the middle batting, and then the backing.

What thread do you like to use?

It wasn't really the kind of rodeo I had grown up with. The ones I went to years ago in another California small town were much more intimate — a hundred people or so standing around the ring, my uncle riding out and his friends around the ring yelling at him, razzing him. "Hey, Barton, hey boy, look out!" He'd bring his calf down and would turn it over and tie it up and when the judge said okay, he'd yell out really loud, EEEE-HAH San Antone! I never knew why my uncle yelled that but it seemed to sum up for me his cowboyness more than anything else.

In case you haven't noticed, or have purposely averted your attention elsewhere to avoid embarrassment, Timothy Leary has been actively campaigning for a widespread emigration to other planets. Convinced that man's future lies in the colonization of the universe — a notion strangely similar to that proposed by NASA for the last twenty years — Leary has appointed himself mouthpiece for his organization, Space Migration, Intelligence Increase, and Life Extension

Throughout all the recent commotion about stadium rock concerts, one city politician was strangely silent: Mayor Roger Hedgecock. And that seems a bit ironic, since of all city officials, Hedgecock's background in rock and roll is the strongest. After graduating from Saint Augustine High School here in 1964, Hedgecock enrolled in San Diego State College to study political science. During that time, he managed a local band called Marsha and the Esquires and frequently got them bookings at dances through promoter James Pagni, who since 1961 had been San Diego's major concert promoter. The two men's friendship grew, and when Hedgecock transferred to the University of California at Santa Barbara two years later, Pagni appointed him his campus representative there. In 1967 Hedgecock teamed up with classmate Scott Piering to book concerts on campus as the Hedgecock-Piering Company; with Pagni's help, the duo presented such acts as the Jefferson Airplane, Ray Charles, the Doors, Big Brother and the Holding Company, and Peter, Paul and Mary.

Petty theft; Item: zucchini puffs; Location: Law St., San Diego; Date: 09-04-88; Time: 2100 Victim Statement: Paula S. told me she was holding a party for her husband. Paula S. had set up a BBQ and a number of tables holding prepared food. Throughout the evening, Paula S. said a group of four people disturbed the partygoers. John C., Kimberly B., Jennifer D., and Dan P. made "cat calls" and yelled names at the partygoers to such a degree that Paula S. said she nearly shut the party down. At one point, John C. approached the group and stole some food (specifically zucchini puffs) off of a table. Paula S. was disturbed by this and warned all of the women to pick up their purses in case he tried to steal something else....

I was oblivious. To everything. To things supposed to happen. To things not. See, I wasn't a regular ground-pounder. I was a cook. The regular ground-pounders, the grunts, knew more what was goin' on. Shit. Even those kids were scared to death. If they weren't scared, they were fools. There was a few around, old-time Guadalcanal guys and the officers. And, hell, the officers were gettin' knocked off. Seemed everybody was gettin' knocked off. Seemed forever to wade in.

The drive to Noel Allan's duck-hunting spot near Niland in the Imperial Valley takes about three hours from San Diego. The last section, between Highway 111 and the eastern shore of the Salton Sea, is a rutted dirt road, and my Toyota Corolla bottoms out every 50 yards or so.

Allan has been hunting this spot for 20 years. During the fall waterfowl season, he and his black Labrador, Moko II, spend five days of every week here, hunting ducks and geese by day and camping out at night. A wiry man in his early 60s, Allan's thinning hair hides beneath a camouflage fishing hat. He's telling Fink about last Saturday's duckseason opener, which Fink missed due to illness.

"It was spectacular. All kinds of ducks were flying. I took the limit, and all the hunters in this area took limits. I got a nice mallard drake."

EMPTY JACUZZI

by Josh Board

y few gay friends have been open to letting me tag along and write about what's going on at their parties. And when my friend Bob told me about a party he was going to, I couldn't help thinking about a story I read about the group Queen. Freddie Mercury, their bisexual lead singer, threw a party that cost over $500,000 and had magicians, midgets, naked women swallowing swords. and other debauchery. So it was a surprise when I showed up to Craig and Steve's house in University Heights. They've been together nine years and have had this house for four. Craig told me, "We used to have parties at least once a year, but we did so much remodeling that this is our first one in a while. We bought some heaters for the deck."

The deck was very large and impressive and could easily hold fifty people. It had a beautiful view of the canyon, which two months earlier had a large fire. It stopped right where the ice plant started on their property. There was a Jacuzzi to the right, and I asked Craig why nobody was in it. He laughed and said, "It's really old and uses propane. To get it going, we would've had to start it at noon for this 5:00 p.m. party. And since there was a Santa Ana recently, I figured it was too hot."

Although there was a lot of food — cold cuts, cheeses, chips, quesadillas, and lots of desserts — it was an apple cobbler Bob Clayton brought that was the big hit. He told it, I got rid of the apple peeler. I may need a new one before I do this again."

Bob also brought pictures of when he sang with the San Diego Men's Choir. There were a number of people there from the Choir, and they were looking at pictures from a few years ago, when they got to sing backup for Barry Manilow at the Del Mar Fair. I asked them if Manilow was gay, and they looked at me as if I asked whether Spike Lee was

Whenever people would enter the party, they were hugged and kissed. I don't know if it was because they knew I was straight or because they didn't know me, but I usually just got a handshake.

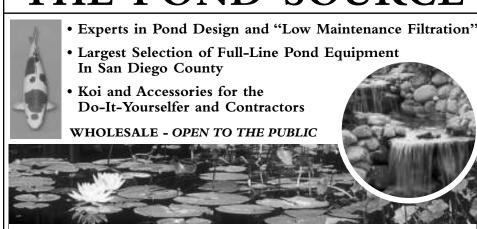

One guy at the party, Milo Shapiro, was talking a lot about improv comedy. He works for a company that does motivational speaking, and he also performs with an improv comedy troupe. "I made it onto the radio at Star 100.7 for a two-hour air shift, during that 'big mouth' competition. I made it past the first round but lost in the second."

I met a tall, older gentleman named Bob Ames. He was doing a lot of cooking in the kitchen. He said, "You're a writer? I started the first gay magazine in New York in the early '70s, called the Gotham Ledger. It later became just Gotham and lasted for three or four years. That was before the Internet, although now I have two websites. One is e-elmer.com. It's the cyber community for gay men. I have another one that has to do with old cars." We talked a little about old cars, and he told me he had a Rambler.

When I went to get a drink, I was surprised by how large the variety of alcohol was. Champagne, beer, vodka, and about 15 other bottles. I asked Craig about the booze, and he laughed and said, "Sometimes we have all this alcohol, and everyone ends up drinking soda. We try to have a variety of everything, so no matter what somebody wants, they have it."

"You have a lot of food and drinks. How much do you spend on your parties?"

"We spend from $300 to $500. It's not a big deal. These are all our friends."

There were three women talking at one end of the back yard, and one of the straight guys said to me, "You know how good our chances are at a party like this? We're the only straight guys here." I replied. "I don't know. The women could look at all those guys and wonder why they are in such good shape, and muscular, and look back at us and not care that we are heterosexual."

We left after a few hours, and one of the guys at the party asked, "How is it you're so comfortable talking to gay men?" I said, "It's like talking to anybody else. I'd rather talk to a gay guy who had something interesting to say than some silly blonde woman. And it's not like you guys are going to attack me. like a scene out of Deliverance." One guy walking by said, "You never know."

The next party I went to was put on by the Art Glass Association of Southern California at the Spanish Village in Balboa Park. They've had this show for 21 years. I was invited there by Leslie Perlis, whom I had met at an art gallery in La Jolla. She ended up winning "Best of Show" for a lifesize woman she had created. It took her a year, working every day, to complete the project. Leslie told me, "We're the largest group like this in the country. We started with 50 members in 1981 and have about 150 now. We're a nonprofit organization that encourages education of the glass arts through shows and workshops."

To me, glass art was either the Corona bottles with the long, twisted necks that you see at the Del Mar Fair or the beautiful stained-glass windows you see in churches. Leslie said, "We started as the Stained Glass Guild, with only stained-glass panels in our shows. We now have six categories for judging, and we usually have a special category. This year it's 'games.' "

In the game category. I saw one piece that had a few playing cards. Another was a beautiful New York Times crossword puzzle in a round frame. One piece that won a prize had a baseball going through a window, with different pieces of broken glass around it. It was titled There Goes My Allowance. It had a sale price of only $200, and I overheard one couple say they were going to snatch it. There goes their allowance.

Marti Blair, the president and one of the founders of the group, had an interesting story when I asked her about pieces being damaged. I had seen some kids at this party and wondered if anything had ever been knocked to the ground. She said. "I had a piece called Courting the Sphinx, and when it rolled off the pedestal and hit the floor, crashing into many pieces, due to the floorboards being uneven, it seemed kind of ominous. Mavbe vou're not supposed to 'court the sphinx.' Or maybe there really are ghosts in the Villa Montezuma."

Leslie says these parties have been at the Spanish Village in Balboa Park for the past six years, and they usually have to reserve it a year in advance. "We'll go crazy and swear we'll never do it again, then it's time for next year's show," she says. "Marv Miles is in charge of the drinks, and it's a potluck. Pat Warren brought lumpia. Marty got taquitos from El Indio. We supplement with extra stuff. I baked a hundred chocolate-chip cookies."

When Leslie slipped a small bag (of cookies) to bassist Glen Fisher, a local musician who's played with some big names, I hit him up for a few. We ate cookies and talked music. I said. "I never heard a version of 'Eleanor Rigby' with steel drums. It was great." He pointed to the steel drummer (who I found out later has a platinum record for work he did with the Beach Boys). Glen said, "He's a big Beatles fan." I said, "Then why not play the Beatles song 'Glass Onion' for this event?" He laughed and said, "That's the third song on the White Album." We ended up talking Beatles for a while.

The drummer for this little trio was 15-year-old Eric Pratt, a sophomore at Point Loma High. I was surprised at how much he knew about drummers, both from current bands and older ones. I was even more surprised to find out he was the son of Leslie Perlis. He's been playing drums since fourth grade.

It wasn't until I got home that I thought to ask whether his hitting everything in the house with drumsticks and her making things with glass ever created broken artwork. I guess not, or he would've been playing a cello at this party. ■

ask,

"How about men? Anything different there?"

"Men go for hairpieces to cover a certain area first," Good says. "They've looked in the mirror and thought they were ten years older than they are. That's fine if you have a baby face, but if you're 40 and look 50, or you're 30 and somebody thinks you're close to 40, it's not the most flattering thing.

"With all the commercials on TV there isn't much stigma to wearing hairpieces anymore. You either want to try one or you don't. Most people want to be well groomed, and a piece does make a difference. Until you use a hairpiece, you think, 'Oh, I'll never wear one.' But when you see yourself in a hairpiece, especially when you're used to seeing yourself without hair, the look is..."

I think, "Like a middle-aged man wearing a wig." I say, "Do men often stop wearing a wig after they've worn one for a while?"

Good laughs. She has a from-the-bottom-of-her-stomach rolling laugh. "I had a wonderful man in here. He was working on the Navy base. He needed a new piece, and he'd seen me teach a class to Navy barbers on how to make molds. In fact, I used him as a model in the class

"Well, he came in for quite a while after that. And then, all of a sudden, he called and said, 'I won't be wearing it anymore.' I asked, 'Why?' He said, 'I had a girlfriend, and my wife found out. She thinks it's because of the hairpiece. So I'm not allowed to wear it anymore.'

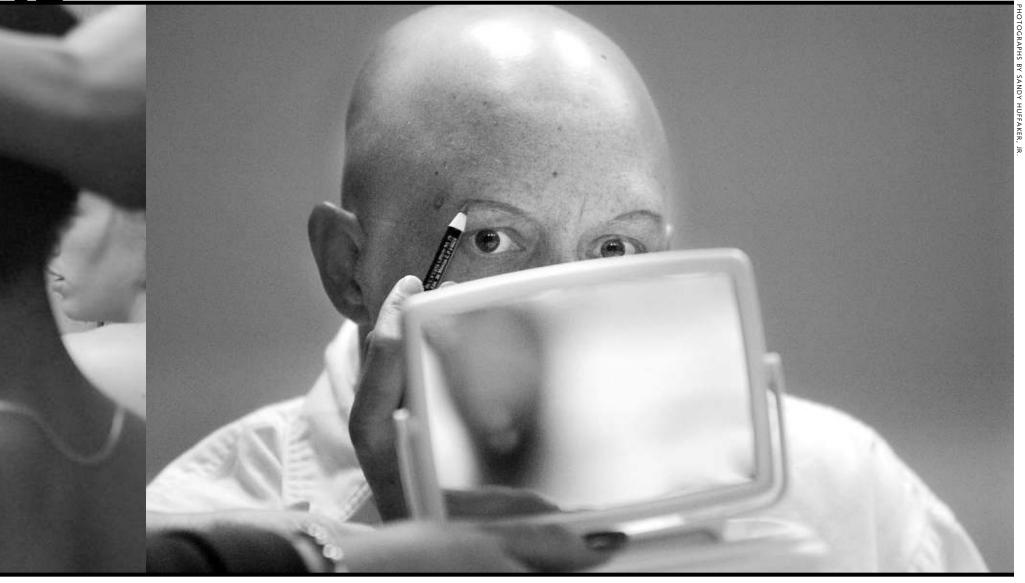

"His wife runs a merciful court." I look past Good to a wall-mounted mirror and note that 30 percent of my hair has been devoured by male-pattern baldness. "Have many male clients gone back to bald?"

"It's rare. When that happens it's normally due to their wives."

Actually, I think it's more like 35 percent. Hmm.

Look Good...Feel Better class

Sigh. Heave. "People buy wigs to hide their baldness or illness. Does anyone come to you who wants a wig just to flat-out party?"

"Cross-dressers or transvestites or transsexuals or whatever are always making themselves look better in whatever role they choose to play," Good says. "I had two of them in. They were truck drivers. They were going to have the surgery and had to go through therapy. It's a big deal. I think they have to be tested to see if they're more to the female side. They have to do hormones and take shots."

"What did they look like when they walked in?" Good considers the question, then replies, "Like men trying to look like women."

"Were they wearing dresses?"

"Pantsuits. But some of them wear dresses, and they look beautiful."

Silence. "Beautiful?"

"Good-looking, some of them, but they're always going to have that..."

"...big wrist?"

Good smiles and moves on. "These two were hoots. They were really nice."

"Since they were cross-dressing, they must have been wearing wigs when they came in?"

"They were, and they were tired of them. They wanted to know what else they could do. That's when I showed them the integration, which they really, really loved."

"What's integration?" This is asked in a where-dobabies-come-from? tone of voice.

Good picks up what looks to be an oval, webbed yarmulke. "Instead of wearing a heavy wig, you integrate the piece into your own hair. That makes it nice."

I get it. You stick the oval thing to your skull. Wig hair is laced into the oval thing. Natural hair is "integrated" into the wig hair. "What happened to the truck drivers?"

"They were getting ready to get the operation, and I had to get my big hug. I don't care who you are, getting that operation takes a lot of guts. So I gave them a hug and said, 'You know what? You guys have more balls than I do.' And they go, 'We won't have them for long.' "

"I DON'T CARE WHO YOU ARE, GETTING THAT OPERATION TAKES A LOT OF GUTS."

I wince...and wince again. "Were they happy about getting the operation?"

"They were thrilled. They'd been wanting to do it forever. It wasn't expensive either. I was shocked, it costs 10, 15 grand, and they only stay there nine days."

Still wincing, but manage, in mid-wince, to say, "Then they go home and return to driving a rig. How does that work?"

"Well, there are a lot of lady truck drivers. They were partners. They were together. They weren't lovers; they just drove the truck together. I think they felt protected by that. And they're big. They could probably hold their own."

I visualize two large, wide-shouldered truck drivers climbing down from a Freightliner cab wearing blond wigs, pink blouses, ruby hot pants and say, more to myself than to Good, "Makes being gay look like Christmas morning."

I mean, all you'd have to do is tell everyone you know there's been a mistake: you were given the wrong sex at birth. Then after your parents, siblings, relatives, friends, acquaintances, and coworkers are through with their declarations of praise and understanding, hand over thousands of dollars to a surgeon (why did he pick this particular specialty?) and have him amputate your sexual content.

Good says, "It's a very hard thing to do. It's very difficult. I have one in Washington D.C. He goes to work as a man. He's almost ready to retire, and once he retires, that's it, he'll have the surgery and that will be the end of it."

The end of it, indeed. "How about men in general. How are they as clients?"

"They're really faithful. I don't care if it's a man who's wearing a toupee or a full piece. Men are faithful, even with their barbers. I had a 25th anniversary party five years ago, and some of the people there had been with me since I moved to San Diego in 1970."

I don't change barbers until they die or are imprisoned, because looking for a new barber ranks right up there with standing in line at the DMV. Still, I can see how wig loyalty would be different, more of a co-conspiracy foxhole. This leads me to wonder, "Have you ever had a customer walk into your store and thought, 'This person shouldn't have a wig'?'

"Absolutely." Good moves toward a ringing telephone. "They can do what they want — it's their money — but if they're not ready, or they're expecting too much, they shouldn't buy a wig."

Kelly

"Expecting too much? Expecting to be 25 again?"

"They're expecting to have their hair back."

* * * *
"When was the first time you wore a wig?" I'm speaking to Moné, an exotic dancer at Exposé, a Miramar Road strip club.

Moné replies, "A wig?"

taking place in the back, way back, of the club. To get here, you walk through the front door, go past the bar, beyond the stage floor, open a black metal door, travel down a narrow passageway, and turn left into a storage area. Three of us sit on metal chairs placed alongside coolers and cardboard boxes. I've asked the club's owner, Dino Palmiotto, to sit in.

Moné is young, just on the right side of legal, and small, maybe five foot two. An inventory of her working tools includes an oval pubescent face, large brown eyes, full breasts, flat stomach, diminutive waist, wide hips, firm ass, and proportionally long legs.

I ask again, "When was the first time you wore a wig?"

Moné says, "You mean a wig, like, for wearing, or a wig as in costumes, or...?" "Doesn't matter. The first time you wore a wig. Anytime. Anyplace." My voice sounds too cop.

Moné seems confused. I repeat, s-l-o-w-l-y, "When was the first time you put a wig on your head, for any reason?"

"I was, like, five." Moné makes a little-girl smile. "I was a witch for Halloween."

"Where did you get the wig?"

"At Target. It was a costume wig."

"Did you pick it out or did your mom?" Oozing warmth here.

"I went to the store and picked it out. It was long and black, with white stripes that glowed in the dark." Moné stops, thinks for a moment, says, "I was a witch."

I'm beginning to sense the presence of a conversational black hole. "So there you were, you're five years old, you've acquired the wig, brought it home, put it on, and looked in the mirror. What did you feel? What did you think?"

"I thought I looked

"Did you think, 'This is cool'?"

"Yes. I loved it." "Did vou feel like another person?"

"Yes."

"What kind of person?"

"I don't know. I'm five. I felt my character. I was a witch with long hair and a broom."

I am adrift in a monosyllable bog. "So you went trick-or-treating, came back home, and took off your wig. Did you feel different after the wig came off, like, 'Okay, showtime is over'?"

"Yeah."

It's lonely in the bog. "When did you get your next wig?"

"Man, I was a witch for, I don't know how many years, and then I turned into Catwoman. I got a Catwoman wig for Halloween. That was high school."

"Did you ever wear a wig other than on Halloween?" The bog doesn't appear to have a beginning or end to it.

"I got a real wig during my sophomore year. I actually wore it. I used to trip people out because it was a short wig in a bob. I wore it when I didn't feel like combing my hair."

Land ho! Four complete sentences. "Which high school did you go to?"

"Kearny High School. I graduated in

2001."

"How did you come by the high school wig?"

"From my mom, because she goes to wig stores sometimes."

Got a rhythm going now. "Whose idea was it to get you a wig?'

"I brought it up to

"Did you say, 'Mom, I'd like to have a wig'?'

"Oh, yeah, I was, like, 'Girl, let me borrow that wig.'

The shoreline has disappeared. "What did that wig look like?"

"That one had a short bob, came down like that." Moné touches her forehead.

There will be no coming home from the monosyllable bog for me. There will be no hot meal and toasty evening in front of the fire tonight. "What color was the wig?'

> "It was black." Who will feed my dog? Who will fix the kitchen door? "Was the wig made out of human hair?"

"No, it was synthetic."

And what about lawn care, particularly that brown section by the barbecue pit? "How did you attach the wig to your head?"

"It had a little Velcro snap," Moné says. "You pull on it and snap on the sides to make it tighter."

It isn't fair. There was so much more I wanted to do with my life. I wanted to learn French...hold it! Maybe there is a way out of here. Indeed. Yes. I'll answer my own questions!

directly into placid brown eyes, and say, "I wonder, back in high school, when you got up in the morning, if you had a thought or a feeling that made you decide, 'I'm going to wear my wig today.' Maybe you thought, 'I don't have time to do my hair,' or 'I don't want to do my hair this morning,' or 'I want to be sexy today." I beam as if this is the happiest moment of my life and then bark, "PICK ONE."

Moné smiles, shakes her head, and says, "I don't know if you want to ask me that question. I got a whole lot of reasons, different reasons, a lot of different reasons."

ZOUNDS! "Tell me every one. Don't hold anything back!"

Moné settles into her chair. "It depends on how I feel when I wake up in the morning. Sometimes I look at myself in the mirror and be like, 'Hmm.' Or maybe I feel like I need to be adventurous. Or maybe I'm going to have to do a whole lot of errands and I feel like being cute. Or I ain't really going nowhere, but I still need to be cute. So I might throw on a wig, just to do something different."

I have witnessed a verbal avalanche. "How many wigs do you own now?"

"I have two since I moved out of my mom's house. She has three. We used to rotate them. She goes for the shorter, flipped, more sophisticated style. She's a nurse, so it has to be short and clean. They be cute. For me, I wear the short one in public, because it's more calm. You know what I mean?"

I nod my head with great enthusiasm.

"The other wig I wear to work sometimes. It's long. It comes down to here," tiny fingers touch tiny shoulder tips, "and it has a little bang thing. But I don't mess with that. I just brush some hair over it, make me a little swoop, and then let it hang down."

Of course. Precisely so. "When you're dancing, do you like one style of music when wearing one type of wig and another kind of music when wearing another kind of wig?"

"The wig I wear to work, the long one, the one I wear my purple dress with, well, I'll tell Lou to put on something upbeat, you know what I'm saying? Music like that. Because normally I dance to a lot of reggae with the braids." Completely engaged now, Moné chirps, "It changes with the hairdos. I change my hairdos, which makes the music change."

So that's how it works. I wonder if wigs "affect your money, since the way you look influences how men react to you, and how men react to you determines how much money you earn." Moné's face is blank. I resize the question. "Do you get more tips wearing a short wig or a long one?"

"Hmm." Moné takes a moment and considers the implications. "I haven't noticed. It doesn't matter, to be truthful. My face is soft, it has that little-girl quality. So no matter what hairstyle I have, it's not..."

"Men are attracted to the face and not the hair."

"Right."

So much for my wig unified field theory. "Everybody I've talked to who wears a wig has a story about the time it fell off..."

Moné interrupts, "I was onstage. I was getting dressed." Full stop. "Was I getting dressed?" Stop. "How did I bump the wig?" Long stop. "Oh, yes, I was taking my clothes off. It was the second song. Everybody was looking because I'm about to get naked. I was taking off my dress, and I bumped my wig and," Moné giggles, "I looked in the mirror to see who's looking at me, like I usually do, and saw that my wig had come off. So I played like my dress was caught on my hand or something. I pulled my head down and started taking my dress off and got the wig back on."

maneuver. "If you could buy any wig, which one would you buy?"

Moné says, "It's just way bad. It's brow level, and it's layered in front, and it has that human part down the middle. It's human hair. That's a bad wig."

I look down at my leg and beam as if a little human-hair wig were sitting on my knee. "What color would the wig be? Purple, blond...?"

"Lime green." Green is good. "When you wear a wig, do you feel more confident?"

"I feel that. But number one, I feel it's different. It's different without having to do too much. Or when I'm lazy, it's like, 'I'll throw this one on and go to the store.' Or if I feel like clubbing...it's a lot of things.

Moné adds, let me stress, she adds voluntarily, "Let me tell you something. I wore a wig here. I was going to school. I have to shoot from school to here and I don't have time to do my hair. But I'm out in the daylight. I can't have everybody thinking, 'She's wearing a wig.' The wig I have has the little fake human part in it. So I part it, put a cute little barrette on, and no one knows."

That's the question, isn't it? Why wear a wig if everybody knows you're wearing a wig? I ask, "What about sex? You're being intimate; people's hands are in people's hair. At the appropriate moment, do you drop a 'Hang on, baby, while I take off my wig'?"

Moné, sounding for the first time like a full-grown woman, says, "If I'm having sex with you, I'm very comfortable with you, and we're very comfortable with each other. So I'll go into the bathroom and take my hair off, and when I come back, it's going to be gone."

"When I measure a head for a wig," Good says, "I have to measure a little smaller. When your hair is gone, you'd be surprised how tiny your head is."

I'm back on Third

Avenue talking to Ms. Good. She's explaining how things work. "Most wig stores do not employ a licensed cosmetologist or barber. The state of California does not require that. You," Good points to my chest, "can cut on a wig. I can teach you how to cut a wig, but you cannot cut a person's hair without a license."

Got it. No cut human hair. I ask about matching a person to a wig. Good retrieves several catalogs containing wig lore. Many pictures. Actually, many more than many pictures. In fact, after perusing only a few volumes of the styles and colors and lengths and sizes and manufacturers of wigs, I've come to believe there must be vast sections of our country inhabited solely by bald-headed people.

Good says, "Let's say you've been coming in for three years and you're wearing a hairpiece. But your hair starts to shift; you're getting older. So instead of this color [auburn] with 1 percent gray in it, you might have the same color but with 10 percent gray."

> "I...don't...get...it." "They look like two different colors, but they're not, because your base color is still there. Very rarely does your base color change. So we just add more and more and more gray to the hairpiece. Redheads are the hardest to match. Their hair might look like it's a solid color, but if you hold it in the light you'll notice lots of

I decide to accept this as a fact.

Good shows me a photograph of what looks to be a rust-belt factory and says, "New Man and New Woman, been in business 35 years. I'll send them a hair sample and they'll match the color perfectly. They might mix together 8, 12, 15 different colors to make that one color. They'll custom blend anything you

"They have barrels filled with raw colors. They'll say, 'Make number 44,' which is very popular, or 'Get two ounces of that and three ounces of that,' and they'll mix. All the dyeing is done by hand. It's an art."

"Where do they get the hair?"

"The factory buys human hair that is not overly brushed, and then they strip all the color out of it. Somebody who grows hair fast can grow a half inch to threequarters of an inch of hair per month. That's fast. Six inches takes about two and a half vears."

Good graduated from Gladstone High School in Azusa, California. The year was 1967. "I'd already enrolled in beauty school going into my senior year. By the time I graduated from high school, I only had a few more hours to do. That September I got my beauty license. In '69 I went back to school at the Pasadena Barber College for my barber's license. Vidal Sassoon was in: businessmen were getting pedicures and manicures. The hair business was starting to turn. I could see that."

Ms. Good moved to San Diego in 1970. "I was 21 years old. I had a girlfriend here. I told her, 'Look, I want to go to an upscale salon. I've been trained, and I don't want to go to a greasy flattop shop.' My girlfriend said, 'The only place I know is in Fashion Valley. It's pretty new.'

"It was the first upscale salon in San Diego. It was called the Razor's Edge, and it was in Fashion Valley. The boss, Jerry Piatt, who's down the street now, was a Roffler dealer. They specialized in men's razor cuts.

"So I went over and saw this gorgeous salon and thought, 'Oh, my God, this is, wow, bigtime.' I begged Jerry for a job. He didn't have an opening for a stylist. I said, 'Hey, I'm a barber and a beautician. I can manicure. I am excellent?

"I was hired as a manicurist. I wasn't there a day before one of the guys didn't show up for work, so I spent the day cutting hair, and it was, 'Okay, you're hired.' And that was it until two vears later when I opened my own shop, the Captain's Quarters, in the Cabrillo Building."

"Tell me about the Captain's Quarters."

"All the rooms were private. I had a sign on every room, 'Closed/Private.' Women loved it because each room had its own sink. My rent was 350 bucks a month. I put 18 grand in the shop. It was buffed. We were written up in articles all the time. Two guys came with me from the Razor's Edge. One went into the beautysupply business, and Teddy moved away. salon with all-girl barbers. I had the shop for eight years."

Girl barbers, razor haircuts during the day. Disco fever at night. "I don't hear anything about wigs."

"Before I left the Razor's Edge, a boss there were two of them — was selling hairpieces. That was his thing. He was a real country boy. People thought he was as sweet as pie."

"I don't understand. You're working in a hip barber shop, and one day you decide, 'Gee, I'll sell wigs."

"Because men were coming into their own. They wanted hair replacements, discreet ones. My boss used to sell those pieces, but he wasn't always kosher about it.

"That's what used to drive me nuts. I thought, 'I'm going to learn wigs. I'm going to pick his brain, and I'm going to work right next to him, and when I open my shop, I'm taking his clients.'

I have zero doubt Good acquired his clients. "So when you opened Captain's Quarters, you sold wigs as well as the customary services of a salon?"

"Yes, for what little clientele I had. It's a hard business to build."

During this interval, Good "entered a hairpiece competition at the Town and Country Resort [in Mission Valley]. I won first place, and it just so happens someone from the [Roffler] factory was in the audience. He was looking for a new rep and offered me a job teaching the Roffler razor cut.

"I would work my salon, and on weekends I'd fly to wherever they told me to, like Boston or Lubbock, Texas. I was a 'guest artist.' I would check into a hotel, the dealer would pick me up, and he'd invite all the Roffler stylists to come in, give them crappy hairpieces that were rejects, and I'd show them how to cut them in."

"Roffler made wigs?"

"They did men's razor cuts — that's what they were known for. They brought it in from Italy. We're talking the '60s here. They [Roffler] decided, Why not do men's hairpieces? What a market.' So they shifted from razor cutting to men's hairpieces. That's when Terry Bradshaw came in with us. I did it for six years. What an honor. I got so much education."

Good owned the Captain's Quarters for eight years, sold it, leased back a booth, and stayed there until 1991. She's been at Elements Day Spa for the past seven

I wonder how many fashion cycles Good has seen, which leads to the question, "What about going the other way, shaving all your hair off when you begin to bald? I'm thinking of Shaq, Jerry Tarkanian, and Bruce Willis. Has the voluntarily bald fashion blip cost you business?"

Good maintains professional neutrality. "It's been very popular with balding men in their 30s and 40s. They'll say, 'The hell with it. I'm not going to wear a hairpiece. It's not important.'

"The ones who are the most fearful about wearing a wig are the ones who would love to have hair, but for whatever reason, they won't allow themselves to think about a hairpiece. I don't believe they've accepted being bald. They don't want to be bald, and I can't blame them."

For the first time I notice, really notice, I'm in a wig store, surrounded by wigs. It's a little like waking up in a primate exhibit. "I assume most people who come into your shop have passed the threshold of whether to wear a wig or not."

"I think so," says Good. "The men, seems they've been thinking about it for quite a while. They'll wind up saying, 'Let's do it, let's just do it.' For a man, it's a $500 or $600 investment. He might never wear it, but it's done, it's over with, it's in the box and out the door."

"Being a woman is something that's hard to get used to. Women don't seem to have a problem touching me. I'm a little nervous yet about touching them."

Speaking is Gayle No-Last-Name, who, as they say in the gender business, is "living as a woman" and is a patron of Donna Good's. I'd asked Good to introduce me to a sample of her clients and within a few days was presented with a list of names and phone numbers. Gayle and I have been discussing the difficulties of learning how to act like a female after a lifetime of being male. I observe, "Male humor is very different than female humor."

"Yeah. And bathroom etiquette. Public restroom etiquette is totally different. These are things you need a tutor for."

At first glance, the list of differences appears immense. "What about expressing annoyance, then moving on to irritation, frustration, exasperation, and anger as a female versus the way men do it."

Gayle says, "And swear words."

"What's the difference there?"

"It's mostly a matter of holding it in."

So...much to learn. "You'd have to become aware of all the unconscious characteristics and quirks peculiar to men and then be able to suppress those and learn a like number of unconscious characteristics and traits peculiar to women and express those. Learn how to walk. How to sit. How to eat. Makeup. Hair care. Clothes."

"Yes." Gayle's "yes" has the sound of hardearned knowledge. "One of the problems I've had," Gayle says, "was my fingernails. As soon as I started on hormones, they went to hell. They turned brittle and cracked and broke. If you grow up with one set of hormones, you're fine. But if you change, it can affect your nails. For a long time, my nails were broken off at the nail bed. And that doesn't look good on a woman."

Looking back, I don't believe I've ever told a girlfriend, "Baby, your fingernails are magnificent." Even so, I do have a murky sense that fingernails are important Over There. Moving on, "When I see women put on makeup or do their nails, I'm looking at a pro. I'm looking at somebody who's put thousands of hours into that activity. How long has it taken you to learn how to apply makeup?"

"I'm still not very good at it." Gayle is chemistry-test serious. "The basic face makeup isn't very hard. What is difficult is eye makeup, putting makeup around your eyes and mascara and stuff like that. I'm still struggling with it. My sister had to show me how. For the most part I don't wear much eye makeup. I put on foundation, lipstick, a little blush, and it looks pretty good. But eye makeup takes a while. Of course, girls learn how to do that when they're 12 years old."

"What else have you learned?"

"How to get in and out of a car wearing a skirt. That's an experience. The way you do it, you sort of sit down and swing your legs in and grab your skirt with your outboard hand."

"Do you wear high heels?"

"Low high heels." "How's that going?" Gayle says, "Heels up to two or two and one-half inches aren't a problem. As soon as you get up to three inches, then it becomes a problem. I'm six foot one, so I can't wear high heels. I'll wear a one-inch heel, something like that. It looks more dressy, but it doesn't raise my height. With three-inch heels you'll tend to not stand up straight. You tend to flex your knees, and you can't do that as a Listening to Gayle, I'm not sure if I hear a woman's voice, but it's definitely not a man's, and it's not effeminate. I ask, "What was that first day like? Did you say to yourself, 'Okay, on the 15th of January I'm going to live like a woman, and that's it'?"

How many people would you have to tell? How far down the acquaintanceship chain would you need to go? Would you tell the mailman, the guy at the dry cleaners, the supermarket checkout lady, the gas station cashier, the jerk at the hardware store, your dentist's receptionist, your pharmacist, your mechanic? Continuing that thought out loud, "Lots of stuff to change. Social Security card, driver's license, car insurance, medical insurance, bank and credit cards for openers."

Gayle says, "Social Security and DMV have been through this before. Basically, you get a letter from your physician saying you identify with the other sex, you're under his care, and he's been prescribing hormones. You get your name changed through court order and go to the DMV and Social Security offices, and they say, 'Okay.'"

"It can't be that easy." I am more certain of that than I am of tomorrow's sunrise.

"Well, it comes and goes at being tough. Last summer the Social Security office and the DMV office were extremely concerned about identity theft. The DMV said, 'We're not going to change the gender on your driver's license until Social Security does.' And Social Security said, 'We're not going to change it until you have a new driver's license.' Everything came to a complete stop for four months."

Only four months? "Who gave in first?"

"They sort of cooperated."

I inquire about a stash of wigs. Gayle replies, "I buy a new one and give one away. I've probably never had more than two or three wigs at any one time."

"Did you buy the same color but different styles?"

"Generally. The color varies a little bit, but mostly it's a difference of styles and length. It's very difficult to change the style of a synthetic wig. You can easily change human-hair wigs, but synthetic wigs need a heat treatment to effect a new style. So the style you buy is the one you're stuck with."

"What don't you like about wigs?"

"They're somewhat uncomfortable. Scratching my head feels different because I'm not really scratching myself, I'm scratching the wig. Now, the one I've got on right now, the webbing is very wide open toward the back. So if I scratch my head in the back, I can scratch my scalp, but up in the front of the wig — the front of my scalp — if I scratch there, I'm not scratching up there." my head."

"And what do you like about wigs?"

"Well, when I look in the mirror I look like a woman. That's what I like best about it."

Honest answer to a stupid question. "What else has surprised you about womanhood?"

"I don't feel as free going out alone, like going out to a store or having a meal by myself. I feel more comfortable if I'm with somebody else. Then another strange thing," Gayle says, "I've always been a handyman around the house. I had to laugh and the neighbors laughed. They're used to seeing this guy mowing the lawn or up on the roof trimming branches. Now they see a woman

Women in trees. Landscaping triumph or suburban blight? "How old are you?"

I would have guessed mid-40s. "Why are you going through all the expense and difficulty of an operation rather than, 'What the hell, I'll just ride it out the way I've been riding

"Well, what can I do with the rest of my life that will mean something to me? Do I continue to live in San Diego? Do I move somewhere else? Do I go on a world cruise? I've got my savings. I've got a certain number of years. What can I do that I've always wanted to do? This is something I've always wanted to do.

"I could have lived out my life as a man, and sometimes, when I've looked at the seriousness of this, the commitment of this, I've said, 'Whoa, maybe I should wait a minute.' But I'm glad I'm doing it. I'm having a ball."

"The emotional feeling of being part of society. I feel more empathy toward other people's problems and how they might feel, how they might react to things. I've always been a loner, always felt like I was a loner. I felt like I didn't belong. Now I say, 'Okay, I'm a loner, but I really do belong. I'm part of society. I fit in somewhere.' "

"You've worked with teenage girls who were dying?" I'm back in Good's shop. It's noon and she's between appointments.

"Teenagers come in until they don't need me anymore. They're in remission and they're fine, or they're gone."

"Does someone come to mind?"

Good exhales. "Oh, I don't know. I had a girl with a brand-new baby." Pause. "And who else? My neighbor sent me a friend who raised two children by herself. Then she found out she had cancer. It was terminal. She came in just before Christmas.

"She was seeing a wonderful guy who adored her. When he found out, he said, 'We're getting married.' So they got married. They'd been married for a month, and then she started with all the cancer treatments.

"She was so fighting me. Everybody pushed her to come in. She'd stand me up. She'd blow me off. I said, 'Honey, when you're ready, you know where I am. It's okay. You come when you want to come.' We finally got her a piece. She looked so beautiful."

Good sighs. "As my chemo patients lose their hair, I try to trim what's left. I like them to keep their hair as long as they can."

"I'm feeling the same thing they're feeling. I'm hoping that maybe they won't lose it all. I hate to shave their heads. I just hate it. If I can scissor their hair, they can feel like there's a lot going on. If they can keep some hair, it gives them some hope. Then when they're home with their husbands they can fake it a little bit. And then their chemo is over, and they start to grow their hair back."

Suddenly, selling wigs doesn't seem so lighthearted. "What's that first 60 seconds like? A customer walks through your door, probably feeling shame, guilt, and fear. That first minute must be tough."

"It's very tough. The hardest thing for all of them is losing their hair. I don't care if it's cancer and they've got three weeks to live or what. When they see their hair going..."

I say nothing. Good continues, "We have a lot of tears in this place." Silence. "I'll say, 'Don't worry, it's fine. Your hair is less today, but let me cut it short. Your wig's ready to go.' And then I get so many hugs it's unbelievable." Silence. "And some come here in total denial. They're angry. They don't want to be here."

One more medical humiliation. "Do people usually come in alone or with friends?"

"I'd say half come in alone, brave souls. The rest are referred. Someone has told them to come in."

"Do you get a lot of 'I'm only here because my damn doctor told me to come'?"

Good says, "Or their nurses, hairdressers, whoever. If they're in denial, I'll say, very nicely, 'Honey, I've got it all. I've worked on your size, your color. We can get everything here in three days. Don't worry about it. I'm on a mission. If you don't like it, you don't have to buy it.' Then they relax."

A thought jumps up. How does Good get the right hair color for a bald woman? "Do you ask to see photographs of what she looked like when she had hair, or do you work from what she looks like when you first meet her?"

"Normally, I take it from the first moment I see them, even if they've got this much hair," Good rubs her forefinger and thumb together. "If they wait until all their hair goes and bring in a picture that was taken ten years before, even if I matched the picture perfectly, it wouldn't work because they've changed.

"So if I'm on the phone talking to them or one of their friends, I'll beg, 'Please, there's no charge, let me see you, let me make some notes. If you never come back again, it's okay.' It takes a hell of a lot of pressure off me and a lot off them, and pressure is the last thing they need."

I had...no idea. I came in thinking selling wigs was like selling hats, only funnier. "Is there a moment for a chemo patient when things are okay, or at least they are no longer living in hell?"

"The moment when they're done with their treatments or they're in remission, or the doctor says, 'That's it for now.' Then their hair grows back. In four months you'll see an inch, an inch and a half of new hair.

"Then we can pick through their hair." Good smiles. "They look cute. They can start dyeing their hair if they want to. Because for most of them, hair comes back curly and stays that way for a year. The chemo does that. And the chemo makes it grow fast when it does come back. You think chemo is bad, but it's also good in strange ways."

I make an idiotic, reflexive smile as if to say, "Good chemo, good boy."

Good continues, "At first they'll choose to get a full wig, because the integration won't work if they're totally bald. Later on, we put them with an integration for six to eight months. They can always keep the integration and the wig if, God forbid, they have to go and do chemo again, because it does come back."

American medicine is just another fast-food outlet. The sevenminute, make that the five-minute doctor's appointment. The endless hassles with HMOs. The endless hassles with insurance companies. I wouldn't be surprised if Good spends more time with cancer patients than their doctors do.

Good says, "I do what they call 'Look Good...Feel Better' classes for the American Cancer Society. We celebrated our tenth year. It's nationwide. It's in every tiny town you can think "We're three sisters: the cosmetic industry, the toiletry industry, and the National Cosmetology Association. The American Cancer Society sponsors the program and gives us a place to do the class. I'll be teaching a class on Monday."

The toiletry industry. Has a ring. "What's the class about?"

"The women get the most beautiful kit of makeup, over 300 dollars' worth, unopened. The kit has their colors, their lipstick, and their foundation. And we show them, step by step, how to put makeup on when they have no eyebrows and no eyelashes."

My stomach tightens. "For cancer patients?"

"For ladies, because men do not wear makeup. The ladies are our guests for two and one-half hours. It's free. A lot of nurses refer women, and we have notices in every hospital, from Balboa Hospital and Grossmont all the way to Palomar.

"There are women in these Look Good...Feel Better classes who are in their 30s and 40s, successful women, women who wear no makeup. We tell them they need to put on a little blush, because they look so pale they look sick. Depending on the group, sometimes I'll make a joke, like, 'You're not dead yet.'"

I can see Good getting away with that. "Have you found, after years of dealing with the cancer patients, that your compassion has grown?"

"Oh yeah." Good takes a moment. "I always felt if I did my good deeds cancer would never hit me. I'll tell you a story. My husband's surgeon was a total jerk. He never met my husband and didn't know what the results of his tests would be, and yet, when he talked to us for the first time, he used the words 'death' and 'cancer' in the same sentence. If I hadn't been through the same thing with my wife. She has ovarian cancer and breast cancer.'

"Well, believe me, he'd put us through some pretty nasty, sleepless, and angry nights because of his behavior, but after he told me that our views changed. And all of a sudden compassion came back. We went and got a get-well card and gave it to him. He said, 'I never thought it would happen to me, because I was doing my good deeds.' And I said, 'Yeah, just like me.' So it comes home for everybody."

"Did he wind up being a pretty good guy?"

"His wife was going to have surgery the next day. We talked to him on the phone a few weeks after that, and he was a total... I don't want to go there again. The nurses said that had been his personality before the operation."

The unpleasant return to authentic self. "Did you have this developed sense of compassion ten years ago?"

"Yes. Yes. But it drains you." Silence. "But they are so thankful. I'm on a high."

"The high is because you're helping?"

"It's a gift. I know it's a gift. Not everybody can do this. I have friends who say, 'How do you do it?' and they're in the nursing profession. My husband says I'll always be doing this, because I love people. When I got married four years ago, I had 145 people show up at my wedding. I'd say 100 of them were clients. I've been through their children's deaths..." Good shrugs. "It's a family, my customers are family. It doesn't mean I can please everybody, but it's like a party for me. I remember how their aunts are doing. They invite me to their children's events and graduations." Good shrugs again. "I'm Italian.

out and try something else. The average person spends about ten years in the hair business. After that they burn out. I've never wanted to switch careers, except, if I could do anything, I'd be a detective. I'd like that."

"What do you call hem?"

"A hairpiece."

My voice tightens. "Are you talking about one of those wigs that are very small and light and intertwine into your hair?"

"Yeah. I cover the part of my skull that doesn't have any hair."

I get it. The bald place. "Did you know the kind of wig you wanted the first time you saw Donna?"

"No, but I had some ideas about maintaining what I'd always looked like, so to speak."

"How much of your hair had you lost at the time you acquired your first wig?" Wig, wig, wig, wig, wig.

"I've never thought about how much."

"What made you say to yourself, 'Gee, I'd better get a wig'?"

ber that was."

"When did your hair start to fall out?" Note the graceful transition.

"My first wife got my hair. As well as the house. I was 32 when I went through my first divorce. That was in the early '70s to mid-'70s. My barber felt I had a personality that could handle a hairpiece. He was right, and I've been happy with it ever since."

"Buying a wig 30 years ago, wasn't that a bit bold?"

"It might have been," Cote says agreeably. "It might have been."

"How do you attach your wig?"

"There's various ways of attaching. When I first started out, a friend told me the best thing to use for attaching a hairpiece was Velcro."

"Velcro your skull?"
"Yeah, put a sticky piece on your skull. I use

"Velcro sticks to your skin?"

"It sticks, it stays.
After ten days or so the adhesive tends to weaken. By then, oils in the scalp or skin interact, and the Velcro can lose its stickiness. So it's time to change. It's very, very inexpensive and effective."

I envision Cote wearing a Velcro sports jacket. "Here's the part I don't get. Many people, and all women, can tell if you're wearing a wig. That being the case, why bother?" "The first thing is, if you think you're fooling anybody, you're not."

"Then why buy a wig in the first place?"

"If you accept the fact that everybody knows you're wearing a piece, then you don't have that hang-up of 'What happens if I'm exposed?' because you know the trained eye will eventually observe a slight difference."

And again, back into the breach: "If everybody knows, then why wear a wig?"

"Well, maybe not everybody, but if you're going to get close to somebody, don't try to fake it."

"What happens when you get close to somebody? Do you say, 'By the way, baby, I wear a wig'?"

"You could always surprise her, I suppose. You could whip it off, throw it, and see if you could make it land on the bedpost. You could say, 'By the way, honey, there's something I've been meaning to tell you,' and when you tell her it's about your hair, she goes, 'Oh, my God, I thought it was something worse.'

Rolling on. "How long does it take to put on your wig in the morning?"

"Doesn't take long. Just touch it to the hair, pull it back, then ruffle your hair on the sides and the back. They blend."

"What do you see

when you look in the mirror?"

"Versus what you see when you don't?"

Excellent. Got me. Fair and square. "At the end of the day, what's good about wigs?"

"I don't know anything else that will do the job with as little hassle. I mean, you get measured, select the style you want and the color, they make a crown for the base, a few weeks later it's done. You throw a little Velcro on your head, stick the piece on, and go do your thing."

"Do you wear a wig every day?"

"Yeah."

"Do you ever say to yourself, 'One of these days, the hell with it'?"

"Yeah. I said that to my wife, and she told me, 'No, forget it, keep it on.' She likes it on. I have a younger appearance. She's a babe, and she doesn't want us to look like there's an old dude hanging with a young thang."

the room, five cafeteria tables have been pushed together to form one large conference table around which sit six cancer patients. Actually, make that five. Kelly, who is 14 years old, has cancer. She's here with her mother, who is not sick

Donna Good and Mary Kitchel are the instructors. Sitting in on the class is Donna Davidson, breast-care coordinator for the hospital, and Mary Wendt, from the American Cancer Society. As Good said, the class is courtesy of the Cosmetic, Toiletry, and Fragrance Association Foundation, the National Cosmetology Association, and the American Cancer Society. A handout tells me "the free, two-hour, hands-on workshop includes a 12-step skin care/makeup application lesson, demonstration of options for dealing with hair loss, and nail care techniques."

Which doesn't describe what's happening. What's happening is four women and a girl who have serious cancer. All of them are losing hair or have lost all their hair. All of them are living with the kind of death-fear torment only participants understand. Some of them, odds are, will be dead by the time this is published.

At my request, Ms. Wendt has written a one-sentence background on each of the women.

Ethel has breast cancer and she is in chemotherapy.

Rhonda has ovarian cancer and is in chemo.

Kim has breast cancer and starts radiation tomorrow.

Karen didn't share any info other than that she has never worn makeup.

Kelly has a tumor in the muscle of her arm. She is going through chemotherapy.

IRRITABLE BOWEL SYNDROME

Every day, research uncovers new information about medical conditions and possible therapies. Your involvement in clinical studies could help in the development of new medications. You and many other people may benefit from your willingness to become involved

What is a clinical study?

A clinical study is designed to test the effects of a medication, medical treatment, or devices in a group of volunteers. Clinical studies are an important step in making new medications available. They measure the drug's ability to treat a condition, its safety and its possible side effects.

The information helps doctors and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) decide if a drug is safe and effective for patients. The FDA requires that a drug be proven safe and effective for an illness or disease before it is made widely available to physicians and patients.

During an individual's participation in a clinical study, he or she will see doctors and nurses frequently. In many clinical studies, participants may receive either the drug being studied or a placebo (dummy or inactive substance). Study-related physical examinations, laboratory tests, and study medication are usually provided at no cost throughout the trial. In addition, travel and other expenses incurred during the study may be reimbursed.

What are the symptoms of IBS?

Irritable Bowel Syndrome, also known as IBS, is characterized by multiple symptoms:

- Abdominal pain and discomfort
- Irregular bowel function, including diarrhea, constipation, or a combination of both
- Urgency (a feeling of having to go to the bathroom)
- Bloating
- Passage of mucus
- A feeling of incomplete elimination after a bowel movement

Some people with moderate-to-severe symptoms find that IBS can affect many aspects of their lives, from the most public (including the ability to work, attend social events, and travel) to the most private (including relationships with family and friends).

Who qualifies for this IBS study?

Although the exact causes of IBS are not well understood, one way to identify new treatments for this disorder is through clinical studies. Women at least 18 years of age who suffer from severe diarrheapredominant IBS may qualify to participate.

For more information about the study, please contact:

paper and study Kelly, the 14-year-old girl who has a tumor in her arm. Later her mother will tell me she has a 65 percent chance to live.

Grown men are not supposed to notice gorgeous 14-year-old girls. Of course, we do notice; we just don't let on that we notice. I'm saying this because Kelly is the most beautiful 14-year-old girl I can remember ever seeing. The cliché is true. Her beauty is so intense that it hits me in the stomach like a fist.

On the table in front of each woman is a pink plastic cosmetic kit containing a mirror, blush, foundation, lipstick, lip pencil, eye pencil, powder, Q-tips, cotton balls, face cream, lotion, and more. Good, standing at the head of the table, explains, "You put the makeup over the foundation. It takes practice adding and feathering.

You want to make sure the foundation is the same color as your face, not a different color, not lighter or darker. Otherwise, when you get to your jawline, when you feather it down, if it's dark it's going to show a line; if it's light you're going to look like a ghost."

Mary Kitchel, the other instructor, says, "Makeup is meant to blend with your features, not cover them. You're not making a mask. You want to put makeup on your eyelids, under your eyes, and on your lips too."

Women buzz. I hear someone murmur. "Where do you start?"

"I know it seems like a lot," says Kitchel. "Some people might feel they don't want to put on eye shadow, they just want some mascara. Whatever is comfortable, that's the most important thing. There's no right or wrong way of doing this."

The room is quiet. Good, the pro, softly says, "I don't know about that."

Women laugh. Karen says, "That's why we're here."

Kitchel waits for the room to quiet. And begins, "What powder does is set the foundation. You all have moist foundations on right now. Powder is going to make it feel like velvet, so when you put on dry cheek color and dry eye shadow, they'll sprout like cherries."

Polite chuckles. I picture cherries growing out of faces.

Good asks Rhonda to volunteer as wig model. The startled conscript appears to be in her early 30s, but it's impossible to tell: she is utterly hairless. Rhonda blushes, but after an easy nudge allows a barber's bib to be put around her shoulders and jokes, "I was a blonde." Stop. "I have no way of proving it to you guys." Some laughing. "I'm sorry, I've lost every hair on my body." Full stop. "I have my ID." Everyone laughs.

Good begins working on Rhonda's face, says, "You can use a cotton ball, but I like using powder. Put powder on your lips and your eyelids too. It will make your lipstick and eye shadow hold better."

I note Rhonda is following...every...single...word. In fact, all the women are. The desperate emotional overlay of cancer has fallen away, and enjoyment of being with others who are busy about the same task takes hold.

Good, eyebrow pencil in hand, is hovering above Rhonda's eyes, explaining how to do the job "in case you don't have any eyebrows or if you have light ones like Karen and I do." Good stops in midstroke and instructs, "Start from the corner of your eye and the corner of your nose, go straight up, that's where it should start. Go to the far corner of your eye, go straight up, that's where it should stop."

"Looks great," says Kim.

"Ex-beautician," says Rhonda.

A ten-minute break is announced. Women mingle and chat. Very quickly the room fills with buzz and polite laughter. I walk over to a table holding snacks and small plastic bottles of spring water. Along the way I overhear Rhonda say, "Took a really long time for my eyebrows to go. Three to six months."

Kelly asks, "That long?

"Yeah, before you lose it."

Three months later, I'm on the phone talking to Good and I inquire about Kelly, the 14-yearold girl. Good says, "She was going to chemo during the week and once a weekend every month. She had 40-some treatments of chemo."

"Have you seen her since the class?"

"No."

The conversation moves to other topics, back to the class, and then, returning to Kelly, I ask, "How did you meet

"When Kelly and her mom first came to me it had only been three weeks since she'd been diagnosed. The mom couldn't sit still for two seconds. I could see tears in her eyes. I'm thinking, 'Oh, my God, this is serious.' That was my gut feeling, and I didn't want to think that, because she's so beautiful."

"Go on."

"I knew it wasn't good," Good says, "because the mom was so emotional, and she was trying to hide it from her daughter. And, of course, when Kelly's hair started falling out, I was in tears. Later, when I got home, I had to call her and tell her she was the bravest soul I'd ever met and I was honored to work with her. I didn't know what I was supposed to say, because I was afraid I'd put the little girl into a depression. But I just had to call. I've never done that, that's how strong I felt about

There is something about Kelly. "How long before the Look Good...Feel Better class was that?"

"Two weeks, maybe."

'Was she bald then?"

"No."

Silence. And more silence. "She lost all her hair in two weeks?"

"She lost it in my hands. In my hands." Good hurries on, "She came in and I saw how she wore her hair. I said, 'Come back, honey, and I'll get some wigs for you to try on.' When we tried them on, her hair was already starting to ball up in the back. She was afraid to lose it because her school was taking class pictures that next week. I said, 'Don't worry, sweetie, we'll have a wig ready for you.'

"She came in on a Wednesday in her little soccer outfit. She said, 'I haven't washed my hair in four days.' I could see that it was totally knotted. I said, 'Don't worry, honey, we'll get it out, but I don't know how much hair you'll lose.'

"I leaned her back in the chair, and she asked me, 'Could you wash it?' I said, 'Of course, I'll wash it for you.' So I leaned her back, and it was like a freak show. It all came out. Afterwards, I said, 'You're just going to have to be a brave soul. When I lean you up, don't look if you don't want to.' Her mother was in tears. And I'm trying not to cry. Kelly got up and looked in the mirror and said, 'Oh, Mom, I don't want to go to school. Please, let me go to home school. Look how awful I look.' All she had left were three little strands.

"They were going to take class pictures at school. All her little girlfriends were going to school wearing hats in case Kelly lost her hair, so all of them would be wearing hats for their pictures. I went and got some wigs, and Kelly came in on a Monday. I put a wig on her that day, and she looked fine for the pictures."

"Hello, is Kelly there?" This is the phone call I haven't wanted to make. I've put it off and off until it's become the last thing left to do.

A young girl says, "No, she's busy right now. Can I take a message?"

I hear a loud whoosh of air. It's mine. I'd been holding my breath. I introduce myself, explain that I'd met Kelly at the Look Good...Feel Better class, and state the obvious, "I called to see how she's doing."

"Doing great, actually." Speaking is Kelly's sister, Colleen, who sounds like a younger sister. Colleen says, "She has been off treatment for six months. All her tests have been clear."

"Has her hair come back?"

"Yes, her hair is really cute. It's short and it looks good." ■ nna Vanhorn is preparing for a career with children. Babysitting takes up a great deal of this 12th grader's time, but "it's fun for me because I love hanging out with kids," she said. She plans to study child education and development at USD next year.

Describe your first car. "It's a 1998 silver Hyundai Elantra. It's a basic model, nothing more.... I got it probably about six months after I got my license. I paid for it in cash. I raised the $5000 through working.... I'd been putting aside money for three years."

Where did you get it? "I was looking on autotrader.com, and I called up this one number and went to see it. It was an elderly couple that was moving — a perfect setup — and so I gave them the money and signed the papers. My dad came with me; he's a police officer. He can usually distinguish between the lemons and the ones stolen from TJ and stuff."

Who pays for gas, maintenance, insurance, and repairs? "I pay for everything. It's kind of annoying that everyone else kind of gets everything handed to them on a plate, or so it seems, but I think it's really good for my character. I'm learning to be independent and do things for myself. My parents were really proud that I saved up the money, and they basically told me that it's gonna be my car and my responsibility. I still have a curfew, though."

What do you use it for mostly? "During the school year I have to pick up my sister every day after school. I use it to get to my babysitting jobs, friends' houses, the mall, wherever I need to go."

What's the farthest you've driven the car by yourself?

Anna Vanhorn

"Probably North County, like, Escondido. I always go up to the UCSD area too, because my boyfriend has shows up there."

After you got your car, how many times did you get lost? "Actually, I have a horrible sense of direction, so I constantly get lost. I tell my passengers when I'm driving them somewhere that if they don't tell me where I'm going, I'm gonna just keep driving straight...."

Have you had any accidents? "Not where I've hit anyone. There was one time I was at the beach and I hit a curb. It was a nasty curb, so I caused a little bit of damage, but nothing major. No auto wrecks or anything."

How did your parents react? "I never told my parents about the curb incident. It was just a scratch, so there was really no need for repairs."

Have you ever gotten a ticket or any kind of traffic citation? "Yeah, I've gotten two parking tickets, actually. One was at school; I parked in the staff lot, and they caught me at that. The other one was where my boyfriend and I were eating dinner at Hillcrest, and the meter ran out and I got a ticket. I never told my parents about that either — they don't need to know."

How long did it take you to get your license? "I got it on my 16th birthday"

How did things go on the day of your driving test? "It actually went really well, except for...well, it's really embarrassing. I was leaving the driveway with my instructor to go to my test, and I bumped off the curb. That's supposed to be an automatic failure, but the guy only took five points off, and that's all I missed on the entire test."

What's the fastest you've driven your car? "Actually, I'm a pretty fast driver, especially on the freeway, where I'm always in the fast lane. I'd say the fastest I've probably gone is 100 on the freeway, getting to where I wanted to go."

Did you ever drive when you thought you shouldn't? "No, not really. I'm always the designated driver when I go out with my friends and stuff...."

Have you ever experienced road rage? "Well, there's always the occasional person who cuts me off that makes me mad, but I've never flipped anyone off. When someone pisses me off, I just kind of take a deep breath and let it pass. But I've gotten flicked off maybe two or three times."

What's your favorite snack to munch on while driving? "Protein bars, because they're so easy to hold. I would never try to eat something like a burrito when I'm driving. I usually don't eat that much when I'm driving, anyways."

Do you know basic car maintenance? "I know how to take it to the repair station; that's about it. I guess I never learned; no one ever taught me."

What's the worst thing that's ever happened to you in/with your car? "Probably when I hit the curb and the paint came off; it was really painful...."

What's the best thing that ever happened to you in/with your car? "Probably getting it. I had to wait six months to do it. The night I got it, I drove home completely giddy and beside myself. I didn't really throw a 'Welcome Home, Car' party, though."

Do you think your car helps you attract members of the opposite sex? "It's not like a sports car or anything; it's not that great. I dunno...maybe the fact that I got it on my own shows my independent personality or something. The first things guys notice, right?"

What's the one thing you want in your next car that you wish you had now? "Power locks and power windows. Everything's manual in my car. Oh, and a CD player."

What kind of music do you listen to while in your car? "I listen to pretty much everything, but I'm kind of getting sick of the radio. Lately my boyfriend has been making me tapes, because I have a tape player. In general, I love rock, punk rock, pop rock, but I can listen to anything. When my passengers are in the car, I always tell them they can listen to whatever they want."

an Nguyen, a senior in high school, says, "I like to play golf and tennis; I'm a big sports guy." He works at golf courses as a cashier and cart attendant.

Describe your first car. "My first car is a 1993 Toyota pickup truck. Actually, when I got it, it was gray, but we went to Tijuana to paint it green. It was in really bad condition when I first got it.... I got it July 31, 2002, when I got my license. Since my dad's a bail bondsman, we got it as collateral, as a form of payment for the bail, and since they never came to retrieve it, I got it. It was probably worth a grand then, but it's worth more now...like, $2500 or $2600."

Who pays for gas, maintenance, insurance, and repairs?"I pay for the gas and that other stuff, but my parents pay for insurance."

What do you use it for mostly?" Mostly just to get from point A to point B, and since it's the only truck in my family, I'm pretty much the person who tows everything around."

What's the farthest you've driven the car by yourself? "Probably Carlsbad. I've taken it to L.A. with other people."

After you got your car, how many times did you get lost?"Oh, man...well, when I came back from TI when it was first painted, there were signs pointing to the United States, but I couldn't get in, there was so much traffic. So I went down and I got lost in Mexico for a good hour, and then I finally found the signs back to the United States...."

eight — and then the second time I passed with missing eight, so I just made it."

How did things go on the day of your driving test? "It was pretty easy. I don't see how someone can fail that test; I know that people have, but I just don't see how you could. I did well on it."

What's the fastest you've driven your car? "Well, see, the fastest my car can go is around 85, so probably 85, maybe 90 on the freeway when there's no traffic."

Did you ever drive when you thought you shouldn't?"Oh, geez, yeah. I was coming back from a wedding, and the night before I had worked an eighthour shift.... I drove up to Carlsbad and back, and along the wav back I was so tired I almost fell asleep on the road. It was horrible. But the good thing about a stick shift is that you have to keep shifting, so you can't really fall asleep. I also bumped up the radio and rolled down the windows to keep me awake."

Have you ever experienced road rage? "I'm a pretty calm driver, but when I was first driving and getting used to the stick shift, I had trouble getting the car started again. So the guy in back of me started honking and getting real impatient. But what can you do? You can't worry about other people, you just have to worry about yourself."

What's your favorite snack to munch on while driving?"I avoid eating at all costs in the car, because you have to have one hand on the wheel and the other on the stick. There's no real time to eat; that's why I don't talk on the cell phone either."

Do you know basic car maintenance? "Yeah, I can do all the simple stuff. It's not something I strive to do, but my uncle is a big car guy and I spend a lot of time with him, so it's something I just picked up on."

What's the worst thing that's ever happened to you in/with your car?"I was driving someone home one night; it was rainy, and the roads were wet. I didn't see an approaching stoplight, so when I got there, I had to brake really hard and the car skidded. It wasn't anything dramatic or scary for me, but I felt bad for the person in my car because when you drive someone home you're responsible for their

What's the best thing that ever happened to you in/with your car? "Probably driving people around and talking to them."

Do you think your car helps you attract members of the opposite sex? "Oh no. Not at all. My car is so ghetto. I don't think if I had a better car it would help either. I don't think cars make that big an impression on girls."

What car do you want in the future?"I don't really care. If I had a dream car, it would probably be a nice luxurious car, like a BMW. But for my next car, it doesn't matter. Whatever is reliable and will get me from point A to point B"

What kind of music do you listen to while in your car? "Actually I don't listen to music in the car; I turn off the radio. Since I drive an awful lot, it helps me escape the everyday stress I encounter, and gives me some time to think."

llison Davidson, an 11th grader, loves to swim, play tennis, shop, and plan parties for her friends. She also volunteers at Scripps Hospital and is trying for her Girl Scout Gold Award.

Describe your first car. "My first car is a 2002 white Toyota Tacoma [truck]. It only has three seats, and it's an automatic. Sometimes I call it my baby. For a while I had decals on the window, but my dad made me take them off because they were Hawaiian flowers, and he was all, like, 'I'm not going to go down to the dump with Hawaiian flowers on the car'.... I got it on my 15th birthday. It was a gift from my parents. It cost $15,000."

Who pays for gas, maintenance, insurance, and repairs? "My parents. They pay for everything, pretty much. Sometimes I feel a little guilty, but I know that they want to do it for me, that they want to give me a good start, and I just hope that I can afford to do that for my kids too."

What do you use it for mostly? "Commuting to and from school."

What's the farthest you've driven the car by yourself? "I dunno, a couple of hours away. I'm not really up for cross-country adventures yet."

After you got your car, how many times did you get lost? "Oh, my god! Oh no! Too many to count, probably, like, 26 or something. I get lost real easily...."

Have you had any accidents or close calls? "Oh, yeah. Somebody was running a red light when I was turning left on a green arrow and they almost slammed into me. I had to, like, swerve into the other lane — luckily there was no one in the other lane — to avoid it."

How did your parents react? "My mom was a little scared, saying, 'Oh, we're sending my baby out into this world with all these irresponsible drivers' and da-da-da-da. My dad just told me that he was glad I'm okay and to just make sure I look out for other stuff like that, because people drive crazy."

Have you ever gotten a ticket or any kind of traffic citation? "No, but the first day I had my license I drove to school and I parked in the teachers' parking lot. It was on accident, but I guess they do cite you on that — the tickets are, like, 60-something dollars."

How long did it take you to get your license? "I got my license on my 16th birthday."

How did things go on the day of your driving test?"Really good, except during the road test, I was turning right, and this guy...cut right in front of me, and I swerved and ran right over the curb. My instructor was, like, 'Oh, I know that one thing wasn't your fault,' so it was okay. Then he kind of critiqued my driving and suggested that I tell my other friends not to come on their birthdays because if they end up failing it'll ruin their whole birthday."

What's the fastest you've driven your car? "I don't really go that fast...maybe, like, 80 on the freeway."

Did you ever drive when you thought you shouldn't? "No."

Have you ever experienced road rage? "Someone else got pretty pissed off at me before. They started honking their horn, flipping me off, and cussing at me, and I didn't even know what I did wrong. I still don't really know. People drive really badly, and you have more close calls than you'd like to. One time I was driving on the freeway and this lady had headphones on, and she was rocking out on the freeway with her eyes closed, and she merged right into me. She would have sideswiped my car, but there was nobody in the other lane, so I just moved over. But, yeah, that made me pretty mad."

What's your favorite snack to munch on while driving? "Raisinettes. It comes in a bag that I can leave open, put in the cup holder, and just grab with one hand."

Do you know basic car maintenance? "No idea. I think more than anything I'm afraid that I'd just mess it up and make the situation worse. So, if it's something like changing the oil or having the tires rotated, I just take it in. But, if I were, like, on the side of the road, I have AAA."

What's the worst thing that's ever happened to you in/with your car? "Probably all those little near-misses. They're pretty scary."

What's the best thing that ever happened to you in/with your car? "I dunno. I guess it's just the fact that I don't have to ask anyone to take me anywhere; if I want to go somewhere, I can just go."

Do you think your car helps you attract members of the opposite sex? "I think so, only because it's one more thing you can strike up a conversation about. It's one of those icebreaker questions, like, 'Oh, what kind of car do you drive?' to kind of get the conversation going."

What car do you want in the future? "I'd want any type of convertible. I definitely want air-conditioning, a CD player, and more than two seats."

What kind of music do you listen to while in your car? "It depends what kind of mood I'm in. I try not to listen to anything that's too angry, because I'm afraid I might drive angry. I usually just listen to soft-core stuff, a lot of emo."

Describe your first car. "It is a beautiful 1995 cream Infiniti J-30.... I got it before junior year, because I needed a car to drive to school, and that's when I got my license. It was a car [my family] had had before, so my parents bought it. I'm not sure how much it cost, but it was less than $20,000."

Who pays for gas, maintenance, insurance, and repairs? "Oh, I pay for nothing. At all. It's completely my

What do you use it for mostly? "Going to the beach."

What's the farthest you've driven the car by yourself? "In Riverside - I had to drive to Riverside once, but that was with my family. By myself, UCSD; that's the farthest I've taken that car."

After you got your car, how many times did you get lost?"Well, I didn't really know freeways that much, so every time I went on the freeway it'd be an adventure. I never knew exactly which way to go....'

Have you had any accidents?"I had a fender bender once. I was in my friend's driveway, and we were all in his car 'cause we were gonna go somewhere, and he backed up, but he didn't realize that my car was there, so he hit the side of it. I'm getting that fixed right now. He's a good friend of mine, so I was, like, 'Yeah, I understand — but you're still gonna have to pay for it!' "

How did your parents react?" My parents were upset. They always tell me that it's a good thing they didn't get me a good car, because I would have had it all nicked up by

Have you ever gotten a ticket or any kind of traffic citation? "Oh, gosh no — knock on wood — although I'm constantly not stopping completely for stop signs, you know."

How long did it take you to get your license?"I got it 13 days after my [16th] birthday. I only missed four on the test!"

How did things go on the day of your driving test?"It was good. I really liked the lady. She seemed really cool. I had the AC on because it was a really hot day. I just made sure to over-exaggerate the motions."

What's the fastest you've driven your car? "I don't like pushing my car to the limits, just because I feel bad for it. My car is like my baby. I think the fastest I've ever gone has been 85 on an inclined highway. I was pushing Did you ever drive when you thought you shouldn't?"Oh, never. I play it safe. Dying is not a game I play.'

Have you ever experienced road rage? "Oh, my friends constantly have road rage, honking at people for no apparent reason. I myself am more laidback. My own way of being angry is by commenting on people's driving.... One time someone gave me the finger, and I was just, like, 'Aaaaay, that's cool.' Also recently someone called me a iackass because I was trying to merge on the freeway. I just rolled up all the windows and pretended not to hear him."

What's your favorite snack to munch on while driving? "Fast food. Combining driving and eating is like a challenge; it's, like, you never know what's gonna happen. It's very dangerous. Usually I go for food that you can multitask, like a burger, which you can eat with one hand and still keep driving."

Do you know basic car maintenance?"I think if I had to change the tire I'd...die. Besides that, no, I have What's the worst thing that's ever happened to you in/with your car? "The recent accident, when my friend was pulling out of the driveway. It's such a big dent."

What's the best thing that ever happened to you in/with your car? "That's unprintable, I'd say...let's just say I went the distance...oh, that's so wrong. Well, I got to know a girl a lot more than I had before. Let's leave it there."

Do you think your car helps you attract members of the opposite sex? "Oh, usually if I see an attractive girl walking down the street, I'll roll down the windows, take off my shirt, put the music on really loud, and ask her if she wants a ride. So, yes."

What's the one thing you want in your next car that you wish you had now? "I'd like a truck, just so I could transport stuff in and out. But as long as I have a CD player, so I don't have to listen to the radio — because I can't stand the radio -I'll be fine. And as long as it takes me from point A to point B, I'll be happy."

What kind of music do you listen to while in your car? "Depends...I have certain music that I listen to with certain moods. If I'm really angry, I'll listen to something upbeat. If it's a Sunday cruise, I'll listen to something really laid back."

What do you use it for mostly?"To go to wild, drunken parties...I mean, to go to school and appointments."

What's the farthest you've driven the car by yourself?"To Palm Springs."

After you got your car, how many times did you get lost?"I got lost about 10 or 15 times. I got lost one time looking for a fishtaco restaurant in La Jolla. After a while, I just called someone who knew where it was."

Have you had any accidents? "Yes, one. A lady rear-ended me. The light turned yellow, and I slowed down to stop, but she thought I was going to go through it, so she hit me. She ended up paying off the damages and stuff...."

How did your parents react? "Well, I called them crying, so they were pretty supportive. They weren't really mad."

Have you ever gotten a ticket or any kind of traffic citation? "Yes. I didn't come to a complete stop at a stop sign. But, since my dad is a policeman, I only had to pay for $10 for it because he wrote me up as having a missing front license plate...."

How long did it take you to get your license?"I got my license on my 16th birthday."

How did things go on the day of your driving test?"I was nervous, but I got to the DMV very early, so I got out of there pretty quickly too. I passed the test; I think you can miss, like, 16, and I

What's the fastest you've driven your car? "Ninety. I was on the freeway. And in a hurry."

Did you ever drive when you thought you shouldn't? "Nope. I'm a safe driver."

Have you ever experienced road rage? "Yes, this lady was going really slow, so instead of going straight, I took a side path to go in front of her, and I ended up cutting her off. So then she went ahead of me and cut me off, and the light was green, and she went really slowly and then it turned yellow, and she stopped. She didn't even go through it, so I had to wait until the next green light."

What's your favorite snack to munch on while driving? "Probably caramel corn. It's crunchy and it keeps me from being bored."

Do you know basic car maintenance? "No, not really. My dad's tried to show me, but I don't like doing those kinds of things. My dad does them for me."

What's the worst thing that's ever happened to you in/with your car? "Probably when I got pulled over for that stop sign."

What's the best thing that ever happened to you in/with your car? "Flirting with guys. It's fun when you see a cute boy and he smiles back at you — as long as you don't look at him too long...."

Do you think your car helps you attract members of the opposite sex? "I would say so, because it's a girly car."

What car do you want in the future? "I'd like a Porsche Cayenne. I'd want heated leather seats, a sunroof, and a loud sound system."

What kind of music do you listen to while in your car? "Mostly music in Spanish or alternative rock." ■

LISA MAKES SUNDAY DINNER

"I THOUGHT YOU WERE GOING TO BRING YOUR WIFE!" SAYS LISA AS I ARRIVE AT THE FRONT DOOR OF HER SPRING VALLEY HOME. "I wanted to meet her! This is a family thing." "This" is Sunday dinner at Lisa's, the continuation of a tradition she learned from her grandmother, Gladys Walker Gay. "My grandmother was from Nashville. She lived in a little red house at Imperial Avenue and 61st Street," recalls Lisa. "We used to go over there every Sunday and every holiday. It had to be at least 30, 35 people, because it wouldn't just be family. Everybody's friends wanted to come and have her food. Gosh, that woman could cook! She was the traditional older Southern woman. It was always Southern food. She would throw in an occasional change — instead of turkey or ham, we'd have fried rabbit or frogs' legs — but it was always pretty much the same thing. But we loved it; it was fun. Mainly, we were just all together. We'd sit and play cards, the kids running around, everybody eating and cooking and food all day."

> After a greeting like that, there is nothing for it but to turn around, head home, gather the wife and kids, and head back for a family thing. By the time I arrive again, Lisa's cousin Ebony is there with her husband Cecil. They've been driving all day from Arizona, but they overshot their home in Alpine to join us for dinner.

"Are you here every Sunday?"

"Every time she cooks," says Cecil with a grin.

Lisa Gay

Their daughter Brandy joins my kids in the bedroom belonging to Lisa's daughter Britany to watch cartoons. Britany, who is 13, will not be joining us this evening. "We spent the entire day together yesterday, from about 10 o'clock in the morning until about 7 o'clock. We went to two or three different malls, we hit the grocery stores, and then Wal-Mart. I think I blew it for her yesterday, so that's why she's out with all her buddies tonight. She was, like, 'I can only deal with you so long.' She had some girlfriends spend the night, and then the mom took them to the movies. They'll see two or three different movies." Lisa's other child — 17-year-old Brandon — is at a birthday party. "There's usually different groups here. My mom may not be able to come. I may have my sister and her three kids and her husband or some other friends." But though her attendance was in doubt, it isn't long before Mom arrives, just in from Ohio and doing valiant battle with jet lag.

"She actually cooks better than I did," attests Mom, "because she likes to experiment. I'm more, 'This is good; I'll do this.' But she'll try new things. She's actually a better cook than I am, except for homemade rolls. That's my mother's recipe."

"You make them, but your mom makes them better," says Cecil to Lisa.

"We all have it, a little bit of grease — bacon fat or something that we put in for a little flavor."

"Mine are flatter, not as fluffy," admits Lisa.

"What did you teach your daughter to make?" I

"I'm trying to think..." "Just showed her where the kitchen was," suggests

"My cooking is a combination of the way my mother cooks and the way my dad cooked. He did Cajun and Creole, deep down-South Southern Creole. Daddy used to make the best greens. When I first started out, I was 18 years old, and I called my dad in San Bernardino and asked him how to make greens. He said, 'Salt pork. You use some seasonings; put a little of this in there, a little of that.' So I put salt pork in, and I used some salt, and I put in some onions and nothing else. It was like somebody took a cup of water and dumped a whole thing of salt in there; it was awful. My friends were trying to be so nice; we ended up trying to rinse them off."

Now, her greens are her pride. "My mother makes me make the greens now. She says she doesn't know what I do to them. I once had an elderly person come up to me and say, 'I have never in my life had greens like this before. I thought my family could make greens."

Southern Mixed Greens

6 bunches mixed greens: collard, mustard, turnip, and turnip roots 1 small head cabbage a smoked turkey leg and wing 2 turnips, cut up 2 chopped white onions 2 chopped jalapeños 2 packages dried, minced garlic garlic powder Lawry's seasoning pepper ½ cup used cooking oil water

The first thing you do is put the smoked turkey in a pot or a pressure cooker half-filled with water. Add turnip roots, half an onion, and salt and pepper. Cook until meat is tender and falling off the bone. It should only take 20 minutes in a pressure cooker. Remove meat from the pot and let it cool; then pick the meat off the bone. To the water, add the remaining onions and the jalaneños.

Clean the greens well, making sure to remove all dirt. Do not use a colander, because the grit just lies at the bottom. Chop greens and cabbage, discarding the stems. Add greens to water a little at a time, covering the pot and waiting until the greens wilt. After all greens have been added, return meat to the pot, add garlic and seasonings. Stir well, cover and let greens come to a boil. After about 30 minutes, add oil and let cook for 15 minutes, then lower heat. Cook for another one and a half hours. If you need to add more water, do so, but just a little at a time. Greens should be good and tender.

(Recipe taken from Lisa's Slap Yo' Mama Hot Wings and Other Recipes, published 2002 by Hats Off Books.)

That's the official version. At home, however, variation creeps in. "I add apple cider vinegar," says Lisa. "And I use one little habanero chile; I let it cook in there for a little while, but I take it out before the greens get too hot." The "used cooking oil" gets a fuller account. "Just like any other country kitchen -Mother, you know, you still have it sitting on the side of the stove — there is a grease pot. We all have it, a little bit of grease — bacon fat or something—that we put in for a little flavor." And the cooking time gets stretched. "It depends on the culture. Some people may fry their greens; I've done it, and it's okay. Some may cook them for two or three hours, and that's it. I cook mine for six or seven, to make them really tender."

Variation is dear to Lisa's culinary heart. "My big thing is I change people's recipes around. My sister Diedre used to put cinnamon in the cornbread. I took it a step further and started adding vanilla and a little bit of nutmeg and sugar. People say it isn't cornbread; they call it 'cakebread' or something. I say, 'No, it's cornbread. It's Jiffy right out of the box, just with other stuff added in. You can do just about anything with boxed or canned things, doctor them up and make them taste good." Or consider her mac and cheese. "That macaroni and cheese is my grandmother's original recipe, and I got it from my mother. But she puts in one cheese. I put in Monterey Jack, Velveeta, cheddar, and extra sharp cheddar. I put garlic in; she doesn't do cheese has become her second-greatest triumph. The Sunday dinner lineup varies from week to week maybe Southern, maybe Korean, maybe Filipino, depending on her mood but everybody always wants the comforting, cheesy pasta. "My girlfriend is moving to Las Vegas on the ninth. She wants chicken adobo, fried cabbage, and macaroni and cheese — one extreme to the other. But this is what she's asking for, so okay — 'Whatever you want, I'll do.' "

Creamy, Cheesy Mac 'n' Cheese

1 lb. small elbow macaroni 1 lb. each mild and sharp cheddar and Monterey Jack cheeses, grated 4 sticks butter ½ to 1 cup flour 2 cups milk, more if needed 1½ tsp. garlic powder 2 tsp. salt 1 tsp. pepper paprika

Cook macaroni noodles according to directions and drain. In a large pot, melt the butter and stir in the flour a little at a time. The mixture should be creamy, not lumpy. Add milk a little at a time, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and becomes creamy. Immediately remove it from the heat, or it will begin to form lumps at the bottom, but continue to stir and add salt, pepper, and garlic powder.

Dot the bottom of a deepdish baking dish with butter. Pour cooked macaroni into pan, and mix grated cheeses with it. Save a little cheese to put on top. Slowly mix cream sauce in with the macaroni and cheese. Sprinkle remaining cheese on top, dot with butter, and sprinkle with paprika for color.

Bake at 350 degrees for an hour, then remove from oven and let rest for 10 minutes before serving.

However much they are celebrated, these two dishes are merely ensemble players this evening. They play alongside "homemade cornbread-sausage stuffing. You use fresh cornbread, and you get some Jimmy Dean's sausage and bell peppers and onions and butter and chicken broth. You dice everything really tiny, then you mix it up, and bake it in the oven." They play alongside corn, the "cakebread' cornbread, potato salad, and deviled eggs. "Some people use regular mustard, but I think it has too much vinegar in it. I use Coleman's powdered mustard and a little bit of sugar." And they surrender star billing to the proteins: "I've got red snapper and catfish. I soak the fish in milk overnight you can use buttermilk or just plain milk — to make it really tender. That's from Nashville. I use an egg batter and a combination of Louisiana fish fry, corn starch, and different seasonings."

And finally, everybody's favorite: "I do roasted chickens. I use a meat injector. I mix butter, brown sugar, and soy sauce, and a little bit of garlic powder, and inject it into the chicken. I pour the sauce into a bag with the two chickens and let them marinate for at least 24 hours. Then I bake it with all the juice.

"I know what it's like to be in the military, to be away from home and be lonely."

"I've been injecting my meat for years. I'd go to different places and taste different meats and say, 'Oh, I want that type of flavor.' She happened to see a Cajun chef using an injector on a televised cooking show and was fascinated. "I couldn't find one anyplace in San Diego until finally, a friend of mine took me to this little place in Old Town. You had to go through stuff to find it; it was a little plastic injector, 16 bucks." (She has since upgraded to a much larger metal one ordered from Louisiana over the Internet.) She uses the same solution for her smoked turkey, which has become a Christmas staple.

"If I can find a 30-pound turkey, I'll buy it. I'll do a roast and the biggest ham I can find. [She finds that a Coca-Cola marinade will help draw the saltiness out of the ham.] I do mac and cheese, of course, and oyster dressing. I've had so many people here. I'll

I work at Balboa Hospital, so I work around a lot of military. I know what it's like to be in the military, to be away from home and be lonely. So every year, I send out an e-mail, and I tell them, 'You're more than welcome to come to my home.' And people come, on top of my family and my friends. It's standing room only; we're all over the place. I've got two patio tables. My daughter and all her friends go in her room; I let my kids invite their friends and their friends' parents. Everybody always knows it's Christmastime in Lisa's house. Everything's all lit up; you could probably spot my house a block away, because I've got lights Tonight, there is only one food table, albeit a stuffed one, set up in the corner of the small, square dining room. Next to it is a high black bar table and stools with chrome legs. The dining room serves as a passway between the kitchen and living room, where trays have been set up in front of the couch. Anaheim is playing Boston on the big TV with the volume turned low. "Normally, if I was at home by myself, I'd be down on the floor. I sit on the floor and watch TV while we eat, myself and my daughter. I cook two or three nights a week for the two of us. 'Oh, Mom, fry some fish,' or, 'Make some wings.' Just really whatever she wants.

candy canes."

I go all out. Once my grandmother got too old to cook, we started going to my mother's for a little while. I think that once I got my own place and people said, 'Okay, she can cook, too,' that's when they started coming over for Christmastime. And a couple of years ago, my mother was, like, 'We will get together on Sundays. We will do this and we will do that, and you all will be there.' So we did exactly what she told us to do. After a while, it kind of shifted from her place to mine. I don't know how that happened, but they've been coming to me ever since. I don't mind. We don't see a lot of each other during the week. I like seeing everybody, and everybody can get together. That's all that matters."

Conversation reveals one possible reason for the change of venue. Lisa washes dishes as she goes, partly out of a need to preserve prep space, partly out of fear of an after-dinner disaster area. "I'm not looking at stacks and stacks of dishes, saying, 'I'm too tired to clean this.' My mother, whenever we come to her house, she makes us all clean before we leave. Somebody will wash the first portion of dishes, then somebody will do the second part, then somebody will dry and put

"That's right," chimes in Mom. "I'm old."

"They come over here to eat because I don't make them clean up."

"We don't go to Grandma's house," says Cecil.

Ebony adds, "Me and Brandy got stuck washing dishes so many times; I hate going over there."

"I got stuck on Thanksgiving," shudders Cecil.

"And she doesn't discriminate," warns Lisa.

"You come over to my house," Mom says to me, "I'll have you do dishes, too. Everybody does the dishes."

"See, that's what Britany's for," explains Lisa. "When she gets home, she's going to clean the kitchen. She's responsible for Monday through Friday, and I do them on the weekends. But sometimes I'll clean up during the week, and she has to do one of the weekends. I usually make her do it on Sundays, because I hate to clean up afterwards. She's a typical teenager. She'll come in and say, 'I'm starving; where's the food?' She'll go into her room and close the door and pig out, and then she'll clean the kitchen and get herself ready for school."

Beyond the actual dishes and silverware, it's hard to see what Britany will have to do to clean up. The kitchen is immaculate, if well-used and stuffed to the point of overflow. It is not a large room. "I'm renting this place, waiting until I get the chance to use my VA and buy something. I could use this entire space" — she gestures to the dining room — "for a kitchen, with an island in the middle. I would love to do that." For now, she manages to produce these gargantuan meals from about six linear feet of counter space, a sink, and a stovetop. She covers the burners with jelly-roll pans when not in use to create more storage, and a stand at the counters' edge holds a microwave and a small television. The '40s-plaster walls and cabinets are painted with cream-colored industrial-strength paint; the floor is pale vinyl or maybe linoleum. The big fridge in the corner is flanked by a two-door stand-alone pantry, its top lined with cereal boxes. The fridge top is home to her two pressure cookers — the big one for rice when company comes, the little one for when it's just her and Britany. Down on the floor by the pantry is her rice cooker, "straight from Japan. It measures out the rice for you in cups; I always keep 20 pounds of rice in there. I make a good fried rice. The bamboo basket I use for my sticky rice I actually got from Thailand."

The attachment to Asian food came partly through a Korean aunt-bymarriage, but more through several years spent in Korea with the Army. "I was 17; I wanted to see things." She saw Texas, South Carolina, and Georgia on her way to becoming a satellite communications operator, but the best and longest stint was overseas

The women busy themselves making plates for the kids — "We always serve the children first" - and pouring them drinks from one of the five bottles of soda on the counter. The children take their plates back into the bedroom, and then the grownups dish up and dig in. There is some talk, some laughter, but mostly quiet consumption. The guests have been traveling all day; hunger and exhaustion are having their way.

'You look like you're kind of full," observes Lisa.

"I'm slowing down," I admit, admiring the remaining mac and cheese on my plate.

"Take a deep breath, push down the food, and dive right back in," says Lisa with a laugh. "Relax for a minute."

"Ooooh, I'm full," moans Ebony, wandering over from the bar table. "I wanted to eat more, but I just couldn't."

Cecil does not speak, just moseys over and collapses onto the love seat, smiling. "That's what everybody does," says Lisa. "They lay around and fall asleep." But sleep must wait; dinner is not over. There is still dessert to come. "There'll always be room for that," she says as Cecil rouses himself for the final round.

Dessert is called Not Ouite Better than Sex. It arrives from the fridge in a deep stainless-steel casserole pan. Four layers: a cookie-crust bottom, then a layer of cheesecake, then a layer of creamy chocolate pudding, then a blanket of Cool Whip over everything else. Sometimes, Lisa will substitute banana pudding and sliced bananas for the third layer, a particular favorite of her son's.

Not Quite Better than Sex, together with her turkey, greens, and mac and cheese, is what convinced Lisa to start her catering business, B and B's Country Cooking. She used to work at North Island, and "Whenever we did potlucks, I made the bulk of the stuff, and everybody else brought the little sides. When I left that job and went to Balboa, the North Island people would call me during the holidays and say, 'We want to hire you!'

Business has come by word of (happy) mouth. Clients have ranged from elderly couples celebrating anniversaries to ministers' gatherings to political fetes, and at least one has picked her up as a regular vendor.

The gentleman pictured on her business card is ministering to burgers and dogs on a grill, and it seems clear that Lisa's culinary roots tend in that direction. Her stand-up freezer is packed with meat. "I probably have 11 slabs of ribs in there. I like them smoked. I don't put a sauce on; I'll do a dry rub or I'll just marinate it really well and let it smoke until it's pink on the inside — cooked pink. If you want sauce, it's right there. I'll make a homemade sauce — a little spicy and kind of sweet. If you want it, then you put it on there, but you can taste it and tell that it doesn't really need anything."

But she has also made extensive forays into various Asian cuisines and prides herself on her versatility."I keep my menu on my computer at work, and I fax it to people. I say, 'This is just a few things. If there's something you want that's not camole, homemade salsa, tomatillo sauce, fried tacos, cheese enchiladas." Her son gets lasagna, "Seven layers. Five types of meat, every cheese I can think of."

That versatility shows in her cookbook, Lisa's Slap Yo' Mama Hot Wings. The small book is a sprawling collection, taking in recipes from family, friends, neighbors, and far-off places. In

"I don't measure anything; I just pour and taste. By the time people sit down, I'm usually too full to eat, because I sample while I'm cooking."

on here, tell me what it is. If I don't know how to fix it, I'll learn how to fix it, or I'll get somebody who does know how to fix it. Whatever vou want is what I'll do.' Cooking for her family has prepared her for the experience. "My daughter just had her birthday last week. She loves Mexican food, and we had the whole spread: Homemade guathe Appetizer section alone, Hush Puppies bump up against Chinese Pot Stickers, which bump up against Tortilla Rolls, which bump up against Longaniza Lumpia. Many recipes give credit to the source, but many have been altered slightly according to Lisa's wont and custom. She'll play with recipes she pulls off the Food Network website. She'll dissect restaurant dishes, and if she can't figure them out, she'll badger them for the secret. "There's this one restaurant in Point Loma that makes this white jalapeño cheese sauce for their chips. They finally printed it out for me. I'm not going to use it just for chips; I'm going to make some kind of pasta and chicken - something."

The cookbook grew out of an attempt to answer friends who asked, "How do you make that?'

"Every single thing I knew was in my head. I don't measure anything; I just pour and taste. By the time people sit down, I'm usually too full to eat, because I sample while I'm cooking. But I kept telling this one friend, 'I'm going to write these down for you.' Finally, I sat down at my computer. I would cook something and say, 'I've got to go write that down!' It took me two years to put together."

She sent it to an editor in Arizona, and he thought it might be good enough to publish. "He asked if it would be okay to forward it over to Wheatmark Press, and the next thing I knew, everything just kind of started rolling. In two or three months, the book was out. It doesn't seem real. I haven't even done a booksigning yet. I'm going to do one, but I want to cook some of the food when I do the signing, have people sample it so they'll know it tastes okay." For now, it's available through Amazon.com, bn.com, and Borders.com, where its title, taken from a man's reaction to the heat on Lisa's chicken wings, has attracted the attention of at least one curious Web surfer. "One of the doctors at the hospital saw the book and thought it sounded interesting." The book, together with her fledgling business, her graduation from the University of Phoenix with a degree in business management, and her volunteer work with several organizations earned her the San Diego Urban League's award for Young Professional of the Year for 2002. She is proud of the

Mom and Ebony and Cecil are stuffed and sleepy. Lisa fetches polystyrene trays and begins loading them with leftovers for everyone to take home. "My daughter and I can only eat so much." They say their thankyous and their goodbyes and head off into the early evening. Ebony and Cecil have to head out to Alpine, but Mom does not have far to go. "I've always lived around the corner from my mother; we can't seem to get away from each other. At one point, we lived practically across the street from each other. I moved away, and she sold her house and bought one over by the reservoir — by the swap meet. So I'm thinking I'll probably end up buying something right over there. It's nice, having all my family around."

Just now, Lisa's son is living with her mom -"You know, mother and son butt heads. I said, 'Okay, go stay with your grandma for a little while. But he's almost 18; he's talking about getting a place with his friends. Me and my mom are already thinking, 'Okay, we're going to have to cosign for it. We're picking out furniture; I've got a garage full of stuff he's going to need: dishes and a television and all this stuff.' He plans to enroll in City College in the fall. He wants to take classes in computers, and his dad builds them. His dad thought it would be nice—'Oh, we can go into business together or something.' I'm thinking, 'Yeah, right, that's if you guys move out here. I don't think he's going to want to be in Ohio, where it snows.' But he wants to go to college, and that's good."

Except for her stint in the Army, Lisa has lived in Spring Valley all her life. "My mother thought about Temecula, but I told her, 'If you move up to Temecula, you won't be seeing me too much.' " Sister Brandy bought a house up there. "They stayed for six months, then they sold it and moved back down here. She worked in La Jolla and he worked in El Cajon, and he was spending $350 to $400 a month on gas — just for him. It was just too much." Two sisters have, however, moved to Atlanta, and Mom makes noises about joining them when she retires in six years. "She's just put a bedroom and a bathroom and a hallway on her house. She says that when she sells, the equity will be outstanding, and when she moves there, we're going to move, too. I said, 'Oh, am I?' And she said, 'Yes, you are. All my girls will be with me when I retire.' I said, 'Well, you can always come and visit here.' She said, 'No, my girls will be with me.' 'Okay, we'll see about that.' "

She does not deny the possibility of the move, but for now, her heart and her plans are here. "I'm staying in this house until I can get ready to buy or open up a café or something. It would be nice to find a house that had a little something added onto the side, where I could live in one area and work in the other. It could be just six tables as long as the kitchen was big enough. There's a good Jamaican restaurant over on Market; they've got their kitchen, and they've got six tables, and people wait around the corner to get the food. That's what I want. Union Bank told me that whenever I'm ready to come and sit with them, they'll see what they can do as far as a minority female small-business loan. But financialwise, it's really difficult." She says she would take the leap only if her catering business had enough regular customers that she could do better than she does in her current iob at Balboa.

If that day comes, she'll be ready. "I've been doing some homework, studying location." Spring Valley has seen too many places come and go. "They had a Barnes Barbecue over in the Casa de Oro area, and it closed. I've seen too many places open up and close over there." Lemon Grove, which gets trolley service, seems more promising. "People will eat good Southern food," she says. "If the food is good enough, people will come. I drive to Kearny Mesa to this one Vietnamese restaurant, because they have this soup and these rolls. I would love it. But in the meantime, I'm just, 'Whatever comes my way, I'm blessed.' I've been given, I think, a really good gift of cooking. Some people can't stand to get in the kitchen." ■ end of the court, or moves toward one end of the court, his buddy backs him and starts to move that way, but the other eight remain and the two are reeled in by the force of will in concert with the circumstances (importance of the call at the time; who's ahead by how much; who made the call; and do they make a lot of calls; etc.). To me, this mirrors the machinations of the human race on earth — the collective will of the billions of people on earth dictating the flow of history as we push and pull each other in various directions.

Then, too, pickup-game

scenarios are not always fair. I play at a place now where it is extraordinarily fair. Three guys are waiting to play; then the five who lose shoot it out and two of them join the three to come on next. One guy who has "next" waiting for someone strong on the losing team and snubbing someone who's waiting fair and square out of the next game is unheard of. But the law of the jungle prevails on the playground and in many gyms. Admittedly, back in the day I allowed myself to be the beneficiary of one or two injustices, feeling bad but unable to stop myself from being picked from a losing team to join the challengers right then and there ahead of other players waiting their rightful turn. (Great woe, it is, to be passed over and the will of the place won't even let you on the court. Such desolation!) "Get my man here, he's like Larry Bird," or "he's pretty good for a white guy," locals said. Or just "White Guy" — that was my name in one pickup game in L.A. one day. Most often they called me "Laimbeer," but who among us is without faults.

I don't know that ball is all that different on the East Coast from here. I spent three years away from San Diego in New Jersey, and I didn't see a whole lot of differences, except that it's the only place I personally saw a brawl break out on a court (with several guys swinging at each other, swarming off the court into the park, and then in one minute we were all playing again, one guy all when it was 34 degrees in cap and sweats with one other crazy guy playing one-onone. Bouvier is right: ironically, there are plenty of indoor gyms here, but back East where you'd think with the weather there'd be indoor gyms galore, I couldn't find anywhere to play inside. One day I just came out and asked a stranger who looked like he played where I could go — and I was right, he played! — and for a few Sundays I snuck into the gym on Fort Monmouth Army base. But in the end, I stuck to the outside court in the park adjacent to my house. There was a line of trees I could see through, and I'd run out when I could see the number of guys was approaching ten. One day one of the young guys (the court had 80 percent guys 14 to 19 years old, kids) looked up at me and said, "You know what they call you?" "What?" "Field of Dreams" (because I would appear through the line of trees). But as I recall, "Fat Old Man" was my primary name on that court.

bloodied) and that I found myself out there one day

Bouvier devoted little ink to the "gym rat." These are guys (like his Lenny, like Bouvier himself) who play constantly, who are always there, who will be in the gym playing ball till the day they die. And other strange denizens of the courts. I've seen guys with dress shoes and slacks out there playing on the playground sweating up a storm, and a guy who must have been 60 call me a "pansy" for a weak call. And injuries — he mentioned a couple of ankle sprains; well, we all have a litany, don't we? Five severe and a dozen moderate sprains of the left ankle. The broken nose. The lost tooth. To name a few. We forgive those who trespass against us, and may those I have injured forgive me! So strange to cuss someone or be cussed by someone to within an inch of your life on the court, but you run into them in real life and grin and you're the best of buddies because you both know of what Bouvier speaks. ("I know that dude.") You've been out there.

He mentioned the smell of the gym. Memories of Helix High School gym, where I played my first organized rec league ball, where I saw Bill Walton play, and my older brother play with Ralph Drollinger against Wilbert Olinde, and where I once sustained a concussion in second grade diving after a ball. You close your eyes and you smell that musty old smell of the sweat of decades oozing from the walls and the popcorn in the lobby, and you hear the fans cheering and the coach yelling and the sneakers squishing and the ball bouncing, and you're in basketball heaven.

nagling teams: so often the game is lost in the draft! Bouvier and Lenny know you want the guys with fundamentals — the guys who will rebound and play defense and fight and who, like you, want to win — or more precisely, can't stand to lose. Sometimes I catch myself watching every guy who walks in, and with each new body tinker with the combinations and pecking orders of who I want on my squad. And as in an old small town in the West where the stranger is most feared, a new person, an unknown, fills you with dread — a wild card. To trust in appearances or not? Yet, you can tell by how they carry themselves, how they move, the style of their shot, their facial expression, how much talent they have. Al McGuire once said each game of basketball is like pick-up sticks, like throwing down ten sticks and they will coalesce differently each time you throw them down. You have to know the combinations, who you want guarding whom, and what will make the difference when the game is on the line. And who will show up that day? Will you have enough to play? It's always a different set of faces, a different new game, a new

They say Naismith wanted a game his students could play inside in bad weather, a game where there was no physical contact. But Naismith's game, with its peach baskets tacked to the wall and the janitor on a ladder retrieving the ball after each score, has changed; it's evolved. And now there is plenty of physical contact, and it's a fine line when and what type of contact is too much. It is a beautiful ballet out there, where you are pushing your opponent to his or her limit, and where they are pushing you, and a ball falls or doesn't fall through a ring. Bouvier and Lenny say the kids today don't know the fundamentals. Maybe most do not. Is this due to the fall of Western Civilization? The macho mystique of the slam dunk? The three-point line (what a sham! why not a ten-point bonus circle at half court?...)? Or is it simply sour grapes of old gym rats with creaky joints being beaten now by young bucks? I can't stand it when people don't see that the level of ability of athletes in the sports they are playing is steadily improving. No track and field record lasts. The Spurs or Lakers would crush the great teams of old, because athletes are bigger and faster and better. But has something been lost? Certainly. Yet we have to accept the game will continue to evolve as we get old. We can only rage, rage against the dying of the light. And remember that youth and strength can oft be trumped by savvy and wisdom. As well as a hard foul at an opportune time.

Mike Davis's new book, Under the Perfect Sun ("Under Our Perfect Sun," October 16). I just finished it, and boy, what a wealth of information that was! Both Bauder and Davis are on to something here, as it seems the politicians in San Diego have taken advantage of the blinding effects of the sun to rip off the taxpayers, but especially the people who just lost their homes and, more importantly, their loved ones. We didn't need a stateof-the-art ballpark and we don't need a new stadium, especially since USA Today voted Qualcomm Stadium best place to watch the game. All we are doing is creating

All we are doing is creating opportunities for developers at the taxpayers' expense.
We need services to support

Downtown Favoritism

Don Bauder's November 6 article ("City Lights") mentioned that San Diego's downtown redevelopment agency owed $100 million to the city's general fund. But the city sunglasses and let's get to work to make this city the council didn't tell the agency to pay any back, while they cut the budgets for the police and fire departments.

It would seem the council values downtown above the rest of the city's public safety needs. One example of downtown's "essential" projects is remodeling the Balboa Theatre — cost: $11 million. Another is donating half a block on Broadway to the Housing Commission so that they can have a new office building for themselves — cost: $3 million. These are just two reasons that our fire and police departments are miserably short on staff and equipment.

My own uneducated opinion is that the council doesn't really care about the downtown buildings, but they do care about the Downtown San Diego Partnership, a business group that actively lobbies for unlimited funds for downtown. Many, many thousands of dollars of campaign contributions come from the partnership's officers and directors, such as Burnham Real Estate, San Diego Padres, San Diego Chargers, Ace Parking, SDG&E, Cox Cable, Roel Construction, just to name

The chair of the down-town partnership is Chris Veum, who just happens to be the architect for the office building to be built for the Housing Commission on land donated by the city. The secretary of the partnership is from the law firm of Luce, Forward, a major campaign contributor to the mayor and other councilmembers.

Perhaps a major disaster will change the ill-conceived budget priorities of the city council. Will the next year's budget force downtown to repay some of the $100 million they owe? Stay tuned.

Mercy Disservice

Ernie Grimm's article on bathhouses, in the last issue, immediately starts out with gross inaccuracies about AIDS treatment at Mercy Hospital ("Bathhouse Quagmire," "City Lights," November 6). Mercy does have a medicine clinic in which, among other things, people with HIV/AIDS are treated. It is an outpatient clinic only! This means you won't find people in hospital gowns or with IV poles "milling around" in front of the clinic or hospital.

It is true that from time to time, some of the inpatients will get passes to leave the floor they are on to get fresh air (some may even smoke), and some of these may, but most likely not, be HIV positive. Folks that are in the hospital with AIDS-related infections are generally too sick and weak to get out of bed, much less go outside.

Not only do you malign Mercy Hospital by your lack of adequate research and understanding, but you do a great disservice to the health-care community. At the very least, one would expect an apology and correction...it's the very least a writer/reporter of any integrity would do.

I have worked at Mercy Hospital for ten years and I work with AIDS patients, so I do know what I'm talking about.

Name Withheld

Ernie Grimm responds: My statement about Mercy Hospital was based on personal experience. I spent three days going in and out of the hospital recently. Each time, I saw hospital gown-clad patients whom I judged, by appearance, to be suffering from AIDS. And, yes, I did see some patients pulling IV poles along with them, and, yes, they were usually smoking. In fact, I was asked for a cigarette on more than one occasion. Twice I spent a few minutes in conversation with one patient for whom I eventually bought a pack of Marlboros. Based on those conversations, their appearance, and the knowledge that Mercy runs an AIDS clinic, I judged them to be AIDS patients. If I was wrong, I apologize. Mercy could have cleared up any confusion had they not refused to comment when I called.

Trick-or-treating is much older than Steven Pirie-Shepherd's recounting of 19th- and 20th-century practices in Scotland and Northern Ireland (Letters, November 6). As he states, Halloween has its roots in the old Celtic festival of Samhaim. It was thought that on that day, October 31, the spirits of persons who had died would return to their homes. Bonfires were lighted to show them the way, and relatives went to neighbors begging for cakes to feed them.

No longer are our Halloween costumes limited to white sheets suggestive of ghosts or spirits, and now trick-or-treaters usually get, not cakes, but candy.

Joy

It was a joy to find myself so appreciated in John Brizzolara's "T.G.I.F." column on my performance (October 9). It was my very first public appearance since moving here only three months ago, and to be so immediately acknowledged after battling the "player hater wannabes" of Los Angeles was good medicine.

One correction, though: there is no h in my name (Sara). If Reader readers want to check out my music and where I'll be performing, I hope they'll look for me at www.saramessenger.com.

Way to feel welcome in San Diego! Thanks.

Publicist Error

The "Gotta Be Love" article (Pop Music), which appeared in the October 23 edition of the Reader, contained a factual error concerning Crows Feet Productions. We are not the publicists for XM Satellite Radio, nor have we ever been. PainePR was the national public relations agency of record at the time of XM Satellite Radio's launch in San Diego. PainePR contracted CIM Incorporated, a San Diego-based public relations firm, who in turn subcontracted Betsie Brown and Michael McClune to assist with media efforts.

Fun Crypt

In response to "Too Close," the article by Ernie Grimm in this week's issue ("City Lights," October 30):

When I was studying to be a journalist in the '90s, I was taught that it was very important to get all sides of every story, especially controversial ones, regardless of my own opinion. This was in order to be able to craft an objective and impartial story, informing my readers and allowing them to form their own opinions.

I see no quote from (or attempt to contact) the "adult" store owners, customers, or employees. In the interest of journalistic fairness, let me assist. The following is my own opinion and not that of my employers.

I work at the Crypt the one with the tarty mannequins like the one pictured on page three posed in our window. As the esteemed Mr. Ackerman (et al.) has not attempted to show any harm our presence causes to the local community or the minors that are not allowed inside our shop, he must merely be seeking to oust our store based on perceived violations of code — obviously to ensure fair and unbiased enforcement of the law, which is clearly a laudable aim. His crony James Hartline (inexplicably identified in the article as "Christian activist and former homosexual") states that while we have kept our legally adult content to under 15 percent of the store, the other merchandise should also be counted. As Mr. Grimm paraphrased, "[the clothing is] for sexual purposes and, according to code, should be counted as adult merchandise."

Well, of course. How silly of us. But as fair and unbiased enforcement of the law is the aim, Victoria's Secret needs to be judged an adult store as well. If our selection of condoms is in the lineup, then drug stores should be measured. Any bookstore with an adult section or copies of The Joy of Sex, any video store with romantic www.shumwayinstitute.com 9834 Genesee Avenue, Suite 225 Scripps La Jolla Hospital comedies, any chocolatier should also be so judged. With a sufficiently dirty mind doing the judging, Home Depot and Ralphs grocery store can be closed down.

In truth, these stores do no harm, and the fact that they have a large clientele shows fairly conclusively that they fit local community standards. In the case of the Crypt in particular, our Park Boulevard location just had a record-breaking night — on Halloween. Is Halloween a sex holiday? Not last I knew. The biggest night of the year for us is not Valentine's Day, balmy Sundays in June, or Pride Weekend — it's Halloween. Let that be a sign of what kind of store we are: a store where people can find things to help dress and behave out of the ordinary, to take a break from their cubicle jobs and act out of character for an evening.

After 9/11, we were one of the first businesses in Hillcrest to recover. The recent fire barely slowed us down.

A local paper recently refused to run our ad, stating (or so the grapevine attests), "We know what kind of store you are." Well, what kind of store are we? A store where consenting adults can shop in peace in a well-lighted, friendly atmosphere for costumes and supplies and toys and gifts and literature — for no other purpose than to have fun Shame on us. PS: Really, a cosmetology school? Doesn't that seem like just a teensy bit of a stretch?

Lingerie Freedom

I read the recent article "Too Close" ("City Lights," October 30), written by Ernie Grimm, with a considerable amount of trepidation and dread.

Let me get this straight... religious organizations who do not pay taxes have organized and are pushing their political agendas onto our government by way of suing the City of San Diego and, therefore, the tax-paying constituency!

How does this happen in this community of our great military and its veterans who have put themselves in harm's way defending our freedoms so that we do not end up like other countries across the ocean where leadership is a constant battle between religions?

The facts of the matter are, these stores are selling 100 percent legal merchandise that is taken home. There have been no proven secondary effects to the communities by stores that carry adult merchandise. Therefore, they should not be governed (or even restrictively zoned) by the cities.

These zoning ordinances that were put into place several years ago were wrongly lumped together with adultentertainment establishments, where the value of the purchase is on premises. The kinds of language in these ordinances are scary to say the least: "where significant or substantial merchandise is allocated adult," or in this case 15 percent. Why 15 percent? Who determines what comprises the 15 percent? Condoms? Lubricants? Gag gifts (which are not used for sex)? Chocolate sauce? Marital aids? What person (code enforcement officer? city councilman? judge?) will act on behalf of all its constituency to determine these things?

I could not believe one of the statements made by Mr. Ackerman of the United States Justice Foundation that the "lingerie should be classified with the adult merchandise since it's used for sex." Good grief! Does this scare anyone else? I am not proud to be lumped in the same "Christian" religion with people like this. There are so many other positive ways to assist in society's illnesses without reverting to dictating what people can buy for use in the privacy of their own homes.

The beauty of the freedoms that democracy has brought to our country is capitalism. If these businesses were not being patronized, the stores would close. The fact of the matter is they are being patronized and these customers are not all "weirdoes" or bad people — and they do or can vote. Do you all hear me?

It's time that the every-day Joe wake up and smell the coffee and know what some of these so-called religious organizations are doing in the political world. Maybe it's time to take a look at the tax-free status of these organizations that choose to mix religion with politics. My God would work with the hearts of the people, not by coercion and blackmail.

Foul Artists

In response to the October 30 "Sketched Out": Appropriate title, as it is the slang for a meth head. Every aspect of this irresponsible article rubbed me the wrong way, from liking to do "throw ups" (another appropriate slang) because San Diego is "too clean" to showing "the rich people." You are right in one sense, lots of people think it is bullshit, because it is that, and more.

The taggers (hardly "artists") and groups that foul our city with stickers (also illegal under graffiti code) to pacify their egos should suffer the full extent of their crimes and receive maximum fines and be forced to do community service by removing their messes as well as others'. Our code officers should enforce this.

If you vandals truly feel you need to "reinvent" an area visually, or you have some obligation, pick up some trash or remove posters, stickers, and crap from your neighborhood so it may have a chance to be something more than a blight. I'm tired of hearing demands for "respect" when the same individuals destroy other people's property and infringe on the communities' rights to enjoy a clean environment.

If there was indeed any talent, these so-called artists would "bomb" a canvas and see if they could get a gallery to hang it, much less sell it.

You Women Look Just Like The Reader Cover

Regarding the article "What Do Women Want?" (October 2), I found the article rather predictable with no great insights. It is forgettable. What I wish to discuss is my fascination with the responses to the article found in the letters section of October 9. I must address each one of the responses as needed.

"Offended," you are a woman and are in denial.

"Hideous Monsters," you're not giving your name, not because you don't want to give the satisfaction; you're doing it because you're a woman. I know this because any definition of a woman is someone who says anything they feel like saying but accept none of the responsibility for saying it. I've found this to be true over and over again. The corollary is that a man is responsible for what he says. Regardless. (And, yes, this world could use a few more of them.)

When I saw the cover picture, I considered the roles reversed: a man yelling at a woman. What kind of a response would that have generated? You ain't seen nothin'. But I looked at the cover, gave a little chuckle, and thought to myself, "Yeah, I've been in that guy's shoes" more than once, and, like him, I didn't know why. Women do go into nonsensical tirades. It's a fact. And a man stands there and sucks it up. Been there, done that. And, "Hideous Monsters" Name Withheld, ma'am, you'll be reading this.

"Women Want Wealth": now we're starting to get objective. Good job, Mr. Bloom.

"Not Monsters": listen, Ms. Name Withheld, Paul M., Sing Yu, et al., gave their women what they wanted, and what did they get in return? I refer you back to the cover.

"Captain Single," when does your boat leave? I want to make sure I'm on it. You're the man

"Crazy Desires?" See "Not

Monsters" above. I'll bet tears laced your face as you wrote your note. You showed it to all your girlfriends and they all went "Aaaaaah." The Ronco Magic Eightball says Try Again Later, Terri.

"Horrible Cover," my dear Miss Name Withheld: what do you call a woman who can't get past a cover picture? How about short-sighted, simpleminded, pathetic, and completely frustrating. (You hear an echo?) You guys suck? Don't look, but your sexism is showing.

"Phoney Macho Image": Tanja, why don't you discard your phoney macho image and enjoy life as it is?

"Men Want Porno": Miss Ellyn, I enjoyed your ability to pull percentages out of the air and try to somehow use them to validate your point, whatever that was. And, yes, I am truly concerned about what women want, but to have a woman write it from an intellectual perspective is an oxymoron. You try it. Betcha can't.

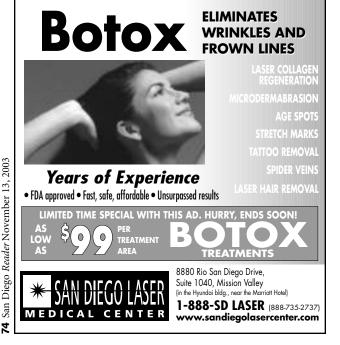

"Contextualize Suffering": Miss Robin, obviously you got out of the article exactly what you wanted: I didn't see your point of view at all after finishing reading it. Why don't you try being the feminist you only wish you could be and write that article about a historical and/or institutional analysis of the power dynamics of patriarchy. Try it. Betcha can't.

"Navel Numbness," another Missy with her name withheld. Surprise, surprise. I find it mind-numbing that a woman suggests to a man to find a purpose bigger than himself and dedicate his energies towards that; honey, almost all men do. It's called wife, family, job, country. It's pointless to ask you to take your own advice. Oh, your brain called, it's wondering when it can come home from vacation.

It's amazing. All you women writers wound up looking just like the cover. And me and my brothers are still the little guy with his hands thrown out in quiet resignation.

Ski & Snowboard Show

re you or is someone you love thinking of taking up snowboarding? Bring your wallet. To outfit one person for snowboarding, even on the cheap, you need about $400, says Tim Hackett, marketing director of SnowJam 2003. That is, it's about $400 if you take advantage of discounts available from the vendors at the seventh annual trade show that attracted 16,000 attendees last year and is expected to attract 20,000 this year.

The list of cut-rate gear and the prices are these, according to Hackett's math: "A snowboard with bindings, $200. Boots, $60.

pants, jacket, another $120. Goggles, $10. Gloves, $10."

But you also have to get to the slopes, Hackett is reminded. "Yes, and you have to buy a lift ticket. And lift-ticket prices do keep going up; they're going to be $48 at Big Bear Mountain resorts this year. But at SnowJam, with the cost of admission comes a free lift ticket to Big Bear."

Okay. Add $13 (cost of admission to SnowJam) to the total cut-rate outfit bill, and we're up to $413.

But then there's the helmet that Hackett recommends. "You could get a helmet for $30," he says.

In addition to the helmet, beginners should wear wrist guards, says Hackett. So add another $10 for a pair, and the total now is $475.

Just for comparison's sake, what's the upper limit that one might spend on gear? Hackett is asked. "You could spend $400 to $500 just for the board, with the bindings. That's for a superduper high-performance snowboard. The boots don't tend to get that expensive, but you could spend more like $150. As for the clothes, of course, you can always spend a lot on clothes. So you could double the price of all that stuff and be closer to a grand for all top-of-the-line stuff."

It's still probably cheaper than skiing, says the 45-year-old father of two boys. "I skied for years and years, but my kids are now 14 and 11, and three years ago, when it was time for them to go to the mountains, they didn't want to ski. They wanted to snowboard. So I decided that, if I was going to go with them, I should learn to do it, too."

Lots of comparisons are made between the two snow sports, even though the skills required for snowboarding are more akin to those required for surfing and skateboarding. ("The first thing you notice when you first try to snowboard, as opposed to ski," says Hackett, "is that you can't move your feet independently...") The federal government's Consumer Product Safety Commission has compared the injury rates. In its most recent study, it found that while overall hospital emergency-room-treated injuries associated with skiing declined substantially between 1993 and 1997, snowboarding injuries nearly tripled, and the number of head injuries from snowboarding increased fivefold. (The number of head injuries from skiing remained relatively constant.)

Bring wallet. Bring health-insurance card? Head injuries were only one cause of the more than 70 snowboarding deaths that have been reported to the commission between January 1991 through October 2003. Commission spokesperson Mark Ross reads from the list of causes by phone from his office in Maryland: "'Struck from behind by a skier.' 'Hit a tree.' 'Fell face down into deep snow.' 'Fell into a tree well.' 'Multiple injuries received in a fall.' 'Avalanche'..."

The ages of the accident victims are "what you would expect," says Ross. "Late teens, 20s, early 30s. But, wait, here's a man who was 74. 'Killed in a fall' — at Mammoth Lakes, California, in 1995."

The upper age limit of snowboarders is being extended as time goes by, says Hackett, because those who started the sport when they were younger don't seem to relinquish its thrills when they get older. It's also true that the age at which people start to snowboard is dropping. "You could put a four- or five-year-old on a snowboard," says Hackett, who adds that at the trade show there will be "kidsized" boards, which are still "a little hard to find."

There will also be a snowboarding simulator ride — "a mechanical bull kind of thing, which you ride while somebody else controls it."

And a simulated medevac helicopter poised at the side?

"Like in any motion sport, the first thing you need to learn is to stop," says Hackett. "And if you stay within your ability level and don't do anything crazy, you're going to be fine." Perhaps. In February professional snowboarder Jeffrey Anderson of Mammoth Lakes fell to his death in Japan, where he had gone to compete in a snowboarding championship. The fall occurred at 3:15 a.m., while Anderson was attempting to slide down the banister of the five-story spiral staircase in the hotel where he was staying. He was 24.

Santa Ana Winds in San Diego County often reach their greatest intensity during November, particularly at the mountain passes, where dry air from a high-pressure area over the interior deserts swoops coastward toward a lowpressure area offshore. The subsiding air warms rapidly while it descends, resulting in 80°-90° temperatures close to the coast. While passing over the mountains, though, the dry air can be surprisingly cool — 60° or less in the

and the Rocky Mountains. Some 25 of the 260 wintering sites on the West Coast lie within San Diego County. The local sites include Presidio Park in San Diego, the UCSD campus, Quail Botanical Gardens in Encinitas, and Hosp Grove in Carlsbad.

Atmospheric Ice-Crystal Effects are often observed, starting about this time of year, because of the frequent appearance of high clouds made of tiny bits of ice. The most familiar of these optical effects is the 22°-radius halo, or ring, around the sun or the moon. Less often seen is a "corona" (a colored disk around the sun or moon not the same as the solar corona seen during total eclipse); "sundogs" (colored arcs left and right of the sun); the sun pillar (a vertical column of light above the rising or setting sun); and a host of other rare and inconspicuous optical phenomena. All of the optical effects mentioned are a consequence of sunlight or moonlight refracting through or reflecting from the tiny facets of ice crystals in cirrus and other types of high clouds.

Roam-O-Rama

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond • By Jerry Schad

Now that San Diego County's historic megafires are extinguished, outdoor-oriented folks — and the just plain curious — are anxious to get out there and do some sightseeing. The full recovery of the natural landscape will take a decade or two for the chaparral-dominated zones and half a century or more (if ever) for the oak/evergreen-forest of the Cuyamaca Mountains. Obviously, there's no big rush either to marvel at the abrupt transformation we've just had or observe the long-term natural recovery.

From a recreational standpoint, the loss of opportunity for San Diegans is immense. The 25,000-acre Cuyamaca Rancho State Park was completely burned over, with only singed islands of old-growth vegetation and certain campground and picnic structures remaining intact. One of the brightest gems in the San Diego County park system, William Heise Park, was heavily damaged. Acreage in some of the county's open-space preserves was swept by flames. So were certain sections of municipal recreation areas such as Escondido's Daley Ranch, Poway's Iron Mountain, and San Diego Mission Trails Regional Park, A substantial fraction of the entire Cleveland National Forest was burned over.

Most of these areas will be closed for weeks or months to recreational use for assessment of fire damage and erosion potential. Stay out of these closed areas even though it may be easy to walk into them by way of unfenced boundaries. Once these park areas are open again, be sure to stay on established trails. Don't make new paths across the fire-denuded landscape or cut corners along switchback trails, even though it may be very tempting to do so

The silver lining on the dark cloud loom ing over our county landscape is the promise of extravagant displays of fire-following wildflowers a few months from now. With the return of repeated soaking rains, which looks likely this winter season, the period between February and May could result in vast wildflower carpets coating hundreds of square miles of foothill and mountain landscape. The seeds of up to 100 species of ephemer al plants have been lying dormant in the ground in the fire-swept zones, ready to germinate as soon as the right combination of wildfire, ash, and soaking rain arrives.

If the rainfall comes up too short this winter season, the regenerative process will be delayed. For example, March and April 2003 saw a lavish bloom of native California poppies, Canterbury bells, popcorn-flower, and non-native mustard on slopes overlooking the Santa Margarita River just north of Fallbrook. More than two years had passed before the rainfall was sufficient to trigger the massive germination of seeds.

SONG OF MYSELF

I celebrate myself, and sing myself,

And what I assume you shall assume,

For every atom belonging to me as good belongs to you.

I loafe and invite my soul,

I lean and loafe at my ease observing a spear of summer grass.

My tongue, every atom of my blood, form'd from this soil, this air,

Born here of parents born here from parents the same, and their parents the same,

I, now thirty-seven years old in perfect health begin,

Hoping to cease not till death.

Creeds and schools in abeyance,

Retiring back a while sufficed at what they are, but never forgotten,

I harbor for good or bad, I permit to speak at every hazard,

Nature without check with original energy.

Houses and rooms are full of perfumes, the shelves are crowded with perfumes,

I breathe the fragrance myself and know it and like it,

The distillation would intoxicate me also, but I shall not let it.

The atmosphere is not a perfume, it has no taste of the distillation, it is odorless,

It is for my mouth forever, I am in love with it,

I will go to the bank by the wood and become undisguised and naked,

I am mad for it to be in contact with me.

The smoke of my own breath,

Echoes, ripples, buzz'd whispers, love-root, silk-thread, crotch and vine

My respiration and inspiration, the beating of my heart, the passing of blood and air through my lungs,

The sniff of green leaves and dry leaves, and of the shore and dark-color'd sea-rocks, and of hay in the barn,

The sound of the belch'd words of my voice loos'd to the eddies of the wind,

A few light kisses, a few embraces, a reaching around of arms,

The play of shine and shade on the trees as the supple boughs wag,

The delight alone or in the rush of the streets, or along the fields and hill-sides.

The feeling of health, the full-noon trill, the song of me rising from bed and meeting the sun.

Have you reckon'd a thousand acres much? have you reckon'd the earth much?

Have you practis'd so long to learn to read?

Have you felt so proud to get at the meaning of poems?

Stop this day and night with me and you shall possess the origin of all poems,

You shall possess the good of the earth and sun, (there are millions of suns left,)

You shall no longer take things at second or third hand, nor look through the eyes of the dead, nor feed on the spectres in books,

You shall not look through my eyes either, nor take things from me,

You shall listen to all sides and filter them from your self.

I have heard what the talkers were talking, the talk of the beginning and the end But I do not talk of the beginning or the end.

There was never any more inception than there is now,

Nor any more youth or age than there is now,

And will never be any more perfection than there is now,

Nor any more heaven or hell than there is now.

Urge and urge and urge,

Always the procreant urge of the world.

Out of the dimness opposite equals advance, always substance and increase, always sex,

To elaborate is no avail, learn'd and unlearn'd feel that it is so.

Sure as the most certain sure, plumb in the uprights, well entretied, braced in the beams, Stout as a horse, affectionate, haughty, electrical, I and this mystery here we stand.

Clear and sweet is my soul, and clear and sweet is all that is not my soul.

Lack one lacks both, and the unseen is proved by the seen, Till that becomes unseen and receives proof in its turn.

Showing the best and dividing it from the worst age vexes age,

Knowing the perfect fitness and equanimity of things, while they discuss I am silent, and go bathe and admire myself.

Welcome is every organ and attribute of me, and of any man hearty and clean, Not an inch nor a particle of an inch is vile, and none shall be less familiar than the rest.

I am satisfied—I see, dance, laugh, sing;

As the hugging and loving bed-fellow sleeps at my side through the night, and withdraws at the peep of the day with stealthy tread,

Leaving me baskets cover'd with white towels swelling the house with their plenty,

Shall I postpone my acceptation and realization and scream at my eyes,

That they turn from gazing after and down the road,

And forthwith cipher and show me to a cent,

Exactly the value of one and exactly the value of two, and which is ahead?

Trippers and askers surround me,

People I meet, the effect upon me of my early life or the ward and city I live in, or the nation,

The latest dates, discoveries, inventions, societies, authors old and new,

My dinner, dress, associates, looks, compliments, dues,

The real or fancied indifference of some man or woman I love,

The sickness of one of my folks or of myself, or ill-doing or loss or lack of money, or depressions or exaltations,

Battles, the horrors of fratricidal war, the fever of doubtful news, the fitful events;

These come to me days and nights and go from me again,

But they are not the Me myself.

Apart from the pulling and hauling stands what I am,

Stands amused, complacent, compassionating, idle, unitary,

Looks down, is erect, or bends an arm on an impalpable certain rest,

Looking with side-curved head curious what will come next,

Both in and out of the game and watching and wondering at it.

Backward I see in my own days where I sweated through fog with linguists and contenders, I have no mockings or arguments, I witness and wait.

I believe in you my soul, the other I am must not abase itself to you, And you must not be abased to the other.

Loafe with me on the grass, loose the stop from your throat, Not words, not music or rhyme I want, not custom or lecture, not even the best, Only the lull I like, the hum of your valved voice.

I mind how once we lay such a transparent summer morning, How you settled your head athwart my hips and gently turn'd over upon me,

"Journey to Crystal Cave" with Emmy, Max, and their dragon

And parted the shirt from my bosom-bone, and plunged your tongue to my bare-stript heart, And reach'd till you felt my beard, and reach'd till you held my feet.

Swiftly arose and spread around me the peace and knowledge that pass all the argument of the earth,

And I know that the hand of God is the promise of my own,

And I know that the spirit of God is the brother of my own,

And that all the men ever born are also my brothers, and the women my sisters and lovers,

And that a kelson of the creation is love,

And limitless are leaves stiff or drooping in the fields,

And brown ants in the little wells beneath them,

And mossy scabs of the worm fenced, heap'd stones, elder, mullein and poke-weed.

A child said What is the grass? fetching it to me with full hands,

How could I answer the child? I do not know what it is any more than he.

I guess it must be the flag of my disposition, out of hopeful green stuff woven.

Or I guess it is the handkerchief of the Lord,

A scented gift and remembrancer designedly dropt,

Bearing the owner's name someway in the corners, that we may see and remark, and say Whose?

Or I guess the grass is itself a child, the produced babe of the vegetation.

Or I guess it is a uniform hieroglyphic,

And it means, Sprouting alike in broad zones and narrow zones,

Growing among black folks as among white,

Kanuck, Tuckahoe, Congressman, Cuff, I give them the same, I receive them the same.

And now it seems to me the beautiful uncut hair of graves.

Tenderly will I use you curling grass,

It may be you transpire from the breasts of young men,

It may be if I had known them I would have loved them,

It may be you are from old people, or from offspring taken soon out of their mothers' laps, And here you are the mothers' laps.

This grass is very dark to be from the white heads of old mothers,

Darker than the colorless beards of old men,

Dark to come from under the faint red roofs of mouths.

O I perceive after all so many uttering tongues,

And I perceive they do not come from the roofs of mouths for nothing.

I wish I could translate the hints about the dead young men and women, And the hints about old men and mothers, and the offspring taken soon out of their laps.

What do you think has become of the young and old men?

And what do you think has become of the women and children?

They are alive and well somewhere,

The smallest sprout shows there is really no death,

And if ever there was it led forward life, and does not wait at the end to arrest it, And ceas'd the moment life appear'd.

All goes onward and outward, nothing collapses,

READING

Reading New York: A Celebration of New York Writers, the Essence of the City, and the Transforming Effects of Reading

ohn Tvtel

Alfred A. Knopf, 2003; 337 pages; $25

FROM THE DUST JACKET: Part biography, part memoir, part belles lettres — this book celebrates the act of reading, the writers whose work awakened the soul of a young man growing up in New York in the 1940s and '50s, and the history of the city itself.

Reading New York opens with 12-year-old John Tytell, confined by eye problems to a darkened room, discovering Billy Budd, sailing Melville's ocean by flashlight in bed. Tytell vividly captures the excitement of his first encounter with a masterpiece, and goes deeper to expose the heart of Melville's story and of the writer's life. He weaves the same kind of spell — from memory, language, and experience — in evoking his encounters with the work of the other New York writers who figured as milestones in his own coming-of-age: Poe, Whitman, Henry Miller, Henry James.

We watch Jack Kerouac write On the Road at white heat on a scroll so that he wouldn't have to stop to put a new sheet in the typewriter, measuring each day's productivity as if it were baseball statistics. We learn that Lemuel Shaw, Melville's father-in-law, so generous and revered, was also the judge on the Massachusetts Supreme Court whose ruling in support of school segregation was cited as precedent for the next hundred years. We discover that Walt Whitman was the only writer to attend the laying of the gravestone to mark the place where Edgar Allen Poe is buried.

"Reading is a form of decoding," Tytell says, and in Reading New York it is also a celebration. Those who love books know they have to a great degree been formed by them. The influence is pervasive, subtle, mysterious. Tytell describes it enthusiastically and with immense erudition. He writes not just about the encounter with an author, a work, or a defining creative moment, but shows us, as well, how a masterpiece wears as experience accumulates and understanding matures.

Completing the book's vivid narrative is Tytell's own story: his family's flight from Antwerp after the Nazi invasion, his own life in New York — as a child, as an adolescent, and as an adult still moved by the books that helped shape him.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY: From Booklist: Tytell, a professor and biographer, grew up in New York City, immigrating there as a child with his parents, who, as Jews, fled the horrors unfolding in 1940s Europe. New York did not so much stamp him as create him. And that was true, also, of his reading experiences; he read precociously and voraciously since the time he learned how. This book is a remembrance of a life centered in New York, always having in hand a work by one of his favorite writers, who, like he did, enjoyed a connection to New York, from Melville and Poe, to the Henrys James and Miller, to Allen Ginsberg and Jack Kerouac. The gist of his book, then, is an accounting of how the lives and works of the writers most important to him exerted lasting influence. Tytell's confessions, observations, and obsessions as he recalls growing to manhood come borne on lush but not bloated prose. Readers like him, who have always turned to books to inform themselves about place and self, will be captivated.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR: John Tytell was born in 1939 in Antwerp, Belgium. In 1941 he came to the United States with his parents. His father was a diamond merchant and his mother a housewife. The family settled in New York City and Mr. Tytell attended local schools. He received his B.A. in English from City College of New York in 1961, his M.A. from New York University in 1963, and from the same institution, his Ph.D. in 1968. Since 1973 he has been associated with Queens College in New York; he is currently a professor of English there. Professor Tytell is author of numerous books, including Naked Angels; Ezra Pound: The Solitary Volcano; The Living Theater: Art, Exile, and Outrage; and Paradise Outlaws: Remembering the Beats. He and his wife, a photographer, split their time between homes in Manhattan and Vermont

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR: On the afternoon that we talked, Professor Tytell was at his West Village home. I said that his newest book was difficult to describe.

He agreed. "It's a very unusual book. First of all, people that write the kind of books that I write usually do not reveal themselves because they're afraid that somehow that will compromise credibility. I try to be very honest. So what you've got here is right from the beginning something that is a real departure. A lot of people want to compare me in this book to Alfred Kazin. I think there's a more apt comparison, and that is Leslie Fiedler. Fiedler always took a contradictory view to things."

The book begins with young Tytell's discovery of Melville. About Melville's journeys at sea, journeys that were the mate-

From ancient times, jades in China were treasured as talismans, worn on the body either as final adornments in death or as ornaments in life. rial for his earliest books, Professor Tytell said, "These journeys were not like a cruise on the Carnival line. The men on these ships were rough and violent, and the conditions were awful."

In Melville's first books — Typee: A Peep at Polynesian Life (1846) and Omoo: A Narrative of Adventures in the South Seas (1847) — Melville wrote what he saw and heard on his voyages. He did not look favorably upon the missionaries sent out to "save" the South Seas natives. The people Melville came to know in the South Seas, said Professor Tytell, "were not savages. But many of the American critics wanted cannibalism and blood, rather than what Melville gave them. They certainly did not want criticism of the missionaries."

Mr. Tytell writes that reviewers castigated Melville's accounts of the South Seas natives as "profligate" and "voluptuous" and "perverse." We talked about Melville's awful despair when Moby Dick was met with disinterest and a year later, 1852, Pierre called repulsive. Melville drank heavily and began to be physically rough

In 1856 Melville's father-in-law funded Melville's pilgrimage to Jerusalem. Professor Tytell reminded me that Melville had written a long poem based on this pilgrimage, "Clarel." But basically, after Pierre, Melville gave up. "I think," said Professor Tytell, "what's also amazing is that the great imaginative talent of our culture before the Civil War decides to shut up and stop writing for ten years. I think that's amazing. When Melville visits Hawthorne in London on the way to Jerusalem, Hawthorne writes in his journal, about Melville, 'He pretty much made up his mind to be annihilated.' And Hawthorne means spiritually annihilated.

"After this pilgrimage to Jerusalem, Melville spends 20 years working as a customs clerk, scribbling; it means nothing, this kind of writing. He becomes 'Bartleby the Scrivener,' the copyist in his 1853 story. This is a kind of prophecy, perhaps, this story. Melville's life is tragic because this was a giant talent that was discouraged by the critics, and it happened to be that most of the critics who hated him were intolerant people.'

Mr. Tytell was a youngster when he began reading Melville. This was the period when Mr. Tytell's vision problems were severe. "Yes," he said, "Melville's was the first great voice for me. Because my mother presumed that Melville on his mother's side was Dutch, and I'm a little Dutch boy, Melville seemed fine to her. As to my eyes, I wasn't literally blind. But my eyesight was suffering, and what does a 12-year-old know anyway, you know?'

'Now 12-year-olds know amazing things.'

"I think they're more evolved now. But as I say in the book, I should have been reading White Fang and Call of the Wild and stories that kids read, not Melville. I taught Melville for years in the university, and those students struggle with him. In fact, I regularly teach exactly the stories that I read when I was 12, Billy Budd, Benito Cereno, and "Bartleby the Scrivener." But this is something that I've been doing for many, many years. I know how difficult Melville is, because first of all, he's got a very sophisticated vocabulary and very intricate sentence structure. He doesn't write like Hemingway. He's hard to read."

"Also," I said, "in Melville there is so much description of so many arcane items."

"Right, when I assigned Moby Dick, all my students complained about how much description there is of things that no longer exist.'

Professor Tytell also is author of a book about the Living Theatre, founded by Judith Malina and Julian Beck (The Living Theatre: Art, Exile, and Outrage). I asked about his research for that book.

"Oh," he said, "they were incredibly interesting people but hard to be with some of the time. Judith Malina, who must be 75 now, she's an absolute dynamo of a person."

"I should have been reading White Fang and Call of the Wild and stories that kids read, not Melville."

Did you and your wife ever invite Judith Malina to dinner?'

"Not really to dinner, but she has certainly been over here. In fact, let me just tell you this one little story. When the galleys of my history of the Living Theater came out I invited Judith here because I wanted her to get a copy so that she could check for errors. And she came over, and I had two bottles of champagne, which we consumed. I was really, really woozy after this. And she looked at her watch and she says, 'Oh, John, it's 9:00, and I've got to perform at 9:30 across town. So I help her downstairs — I live in a brownstone — and we walk down the stairs. I can barely make it. We get into a cab, we go cross town, and she gets onstage and performs without missing a beat. I could barely stand.

"Judith is an incredible human being. And one of the most dedicated and, I don't know — maybe this is off the track, but when she was in The Addams Family, number one, she organized a protest against the war in Iraq, which cost her being in

We returned to discussion of the professor's newest book. "Whitman," Professor Tytell writes, "appears as a figure in 14 of Ginsberg's poems and that the

San Diego Reader November 13, 2003

epigraph of Howl is the seminal image for freedom in 'Song of Myself.' "

I asked the professor, "When you're teaching students, what do you say to them about what Ginsberg learned from Whitman?"

"I have a very mystical understanding of Ginsberg. I don't know whether I can literally believe in reincarnation. I know Allen didn't. That was part of his problem with Buddhism. But it seems to me no accident, unless it's all his own design, that he wrote Howl exactly a century after Whitman wrote Song of Myself. And it seemed to me no accident that in Ginsberg's bedroom, over his bed, he kept a photograph of Whitman. For as long as I knew him that was there. In fact, that photograph was one of the items that was auctioned off at Sotheby's when they had that auction of his personal effects."

"Did you buy anything at the auction?"

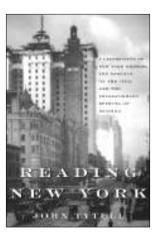

"No. I didn't buy anything. Allen had given me things over the years, and I have those, and I treasure them, but I wasn't going to buy anything at a Sotheby auction. Actually, however, my wife, who had photographed Allen over the years, sold a whole portfolio of her photographs at that auction. Photographs of Allen."

We talked a bit about Professor Tytell's excellent, now almost three-decade-old book Naked Angels: Kerouac, Ginsberg, Burroughs.

"What's amazing about that book is that it's never gone out of print in this country. And it came out in 1976 originally. In 1986 Barney Rosset republished it as his last act at Grove Press. It's stayed in print with Grove since then, so it's always been available to students and to general readers."

I confessed that I sometimes think of the Beat writers as rather like our Bloomsbury group. Not only are we interested in reading what they've written, but we want to know about their lives.

Professor Tytell agreed. "Well, they are, they are. They're also a very New York story, even though Kerouac is from Lowell, Massachusetts, he wants to come here to study at Columbia. And even though Allen was from Paterson, New Jersey, that's just across the river from Manhattan. And William Burroughs, even though he's not from New York, certainly identified with them here on the Upper West Side"

"Burroughs must have been so difficult to be with."

"He was one of the most difficult people I've ever been with. He could be cutting and mean as well. Certainly hard for someone like me, who's trying to learn about a subject, because he'd be so resistant and so belittling some of the time. So, yes, he was very hard to be with. I have to admit. Allen, on the other hand, was very warm and very giving."

"Burroughs," I said, "seemed deeply enamored of Ginsberg."

"Oh, I think at one point he was totally in love with him. At several points, I would say in 1944 and also about a decade later. But they were very close friends until the end. And how mysterious that they both died within months of each other." "What else do you tell your students about Ginsberg?"

"When I'm with my students I'm with them for 15 weeks, so I have a lot of opportunity. It's hard to give you a Zen formulation. I tell them, about Whitman, that as Whitman said [in Section Five of Song of Myself], 'a kelson of the creation is love.' Kelson is a very interesting word. It's a word we don't use anymore. But it's the keel of the ship; it's the form that holds the ship together. I think that that's a very important announcement in any literature. Whitman really is the first to make it in ours."

"And also," I suggested, "one of the first American writers not to write about love in the way that English Romantics did"

"No, not at all. Also, I think there's much more of a spiritual dimension with Whitman. And the fact that he was gay, for one thing, although gay at a time when there was no such word. Even 'homosexual' wasn't a term that was used."

"Nor invert."

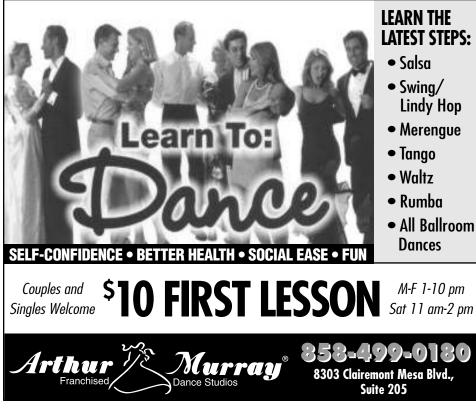

"No, no. None of these words, and none of these classifications. So I think there's a very strong spiritual dimension in this attitude of fraternity or bonding or being together in Whitman and also in Ginsberg."

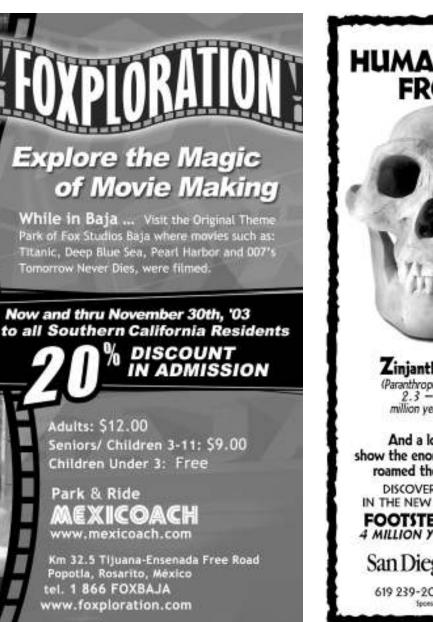

"Ginsberg and Whitman,"

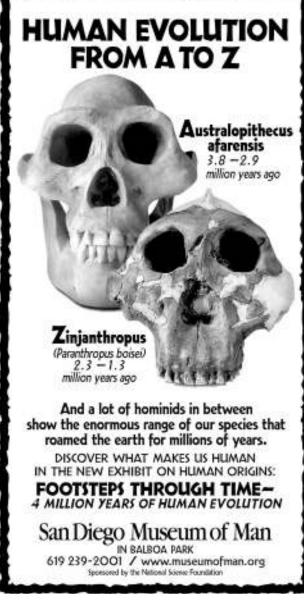

I said, "also have in common the exceptionally long lines."

"And a lot of rhythm, a lot of rhythm."

REVIEW

JONATHAN SAVILLE

Where was the whimsy, the impulsiveness, the spontaneity, the impression of immediate, unpremeditated emotional experience?

he young Norwegian pianist Leif Ove Andsnes gave a recital at Sherwood Auditorium that the La Jolla Music Society audience raved over, but that I — alas! — found more or less boring.

Andsnes, I must tell you, has been a favorite of mine for a number of years. I have heard him play the work of diverse composers, in the concert hall and on recordings. What I have heard is a vigorous, powerful, driven artist, with an astounding command of the keyboard. His tone is gloriously expansive and richly modulated. His agility takes your breath away. His concentration on the music he is playing has the austere magnificence of a Cistercian church. In reviewing his Sherwood recital here six years ago, where I found similarities between his manner and that of Rudolf Serkin, I commented that "the whole experience was like being struck by thunder.'

It was specifically Andsnes's Beethoven that I was referring to in that phrase. But the pianist has shown himself equally compelling in music of quite different styles. His Haydn sonatas are dazzling, and if they are flawed by a tendency to rush things at times, the brilliance and the irresistible momentum of the playing silence any criticism. His Grieg is justly famous, not only in the Concerto (which everyone plays convincingly) but also in the Sonata (which in many performances does not come off very well) and in the Lyric Pieces (in which Andsnes's finely crafted readings seem to me better than Gilels, better than Katin, better than Gavrilov, better than Richter). I haven't encountered a performance of Grieg's "Wedding Day at Troldhaugen" so grand and invigorating as Andsnes's. He has also played Liszt with fire and subtlety (listen to his sensational recording of the Mephisto Waltz, No. 1). His CDs of the three sonatas of Chopin are gripping, and full of original touches. His live recording of the Rachmaninov Third Concerto is thrilling, both because it is played with such authority and because Andsnes's Rachmaninov is never quite like anyone else's. He is particularly impressive in the way he makes structural and emotional sense of oddball modern composers like Janáček, Nielsen, and Fartein Valen.

Andsnes is also an exceptional collaborator. On the CD of Rachmaninov songs sung by Dimitri Kharitonov, which I mentioned a couple of weeks ago, it is Leif Ove Andsnes who accompanies at the piano — if stupendous playing of this sort can be called "accompaniment." (One has the sense that Kharitonov was inspired by the pianist and reached new heights because of him.) In Andsnes's accompaniment of Ian Bostridge in Schubert songs, the pianist far outshines the prissy British tenor, but even there Bostridge seems to take inspiration from Andsnes's artistry. One of the pianist's most successful collaborations was with violinist Christian Tezlaff, in the wonderfully quirky sonatas by Janáček, Debussy, Ravel, and Nielsen (composers for whom Andsnes shows a special affinity). There is also a recording of the two Brahms Viola Sonatas, with Lars Anders Tomter, that is among the best I have heard, with Andsnes excelling in the Brahmsian qualities of nobility and passion, and playing throughout like a consummate master.

"So how could a concert by such a pianist be boring?" you may well ask. The problem was the program, which was devoted to Schumann and Schubert, presenting masterpieces by each: Schumann's Faschingsschwank aus Wien and Schubert's last great Sonata, the B-flat, D. 960. They were beautifully played; the sounds Andsnes drew from the Steinway were gratifying in themselves; there were no technical faults; and the pianist's keen intelligence and almost fanatical commitment to the works was palpable at every moment. But somehow Andsnes missed the essence of both pieces, which appeared to be speaking a language alien to him.

In the Schumann, he exhibited once again that intermittent impulse to play too fast, getting ahead of the musical thought. But a deeper defect was his pervasive lack of sympathy for the composer's Romanticism. Where was the whimsy, the impulsiveness, the spontaneity, the impression of immediate, unpremeditated emotional experience? These are the keynotes of Schumann's musical personality, in all his numerous collections of character pieces — and nowhere more so than in these "Carnival Pranks from Vienna." What Andsnes gave us was a performance that emphasized structure more than imagination, and that eschewed to an unbelievable degree the expressive rhythmic flexibility that this music imperiously demands. Schumann, more than any other composer I can think of, relies on rubato and on subtle inner changes of pulse to convey his meanings. But Andsnes, for all his magisterial understanding of the notes of the score, insisted on a straightforward, unyielding, rigidly unsentimental approach, that repeatedly left the real music Schumann wrote lying high and dry. And that was what made this Faschingsschwank so boring.

Schubert's B-flat Sonata is a horse of a different color. In Schumann, the momentary, the fragmentary, the fleeting divagations of the spirit hold sway, and the performer must internalize that attitude and make it his own. In the late works of Schubert, in contrast, there is an immensely longrange architecture, a development of profound ideas stretching over vast abysses of time, a plumbing of the human condition that goes so deep it can be terrifying. Here, the performer's problem is to intuit the spiritual itinerary that accounts for those cosmic longueurs, those pregnant pauses, those strange changes of tone, that sense of endless exploration, those abrupt changes from serenity to melancholy, from bottomless despair to insouciant gaiety — to intuit all this, to relive it, to communicate it to the listeners, and to induce them to relive it too. It is not an easy task.

Leif Ove Andsnes, piano Sherwood Auditorium (La Jolla Music Society)

Schumann, Three Romances for Piano, Opus 18, and Faschingsschwank aus Wien, Opus 26; Schubert, Piano Sonata in B-flat, D. 960

The reaction that the B-flat Sonata, all 45 minutes of it (with the repeats), is long-winded, unfocused, rambling, and...yes...boring is not an uncommon one. Schumann's attitude toward the late Schubert Sonatas, while more politely expressed, amounts pretty much to this opinion. No pianist, however inept, can make Beethoven's "Appassionata" boring. But to make Schubert's D. 960 sound boring is as easy as falling off a piano bench: all you have to do is play it without really understanding it — and it will seem to go on forever. It is a work I love intensely, and I have heard it played (by Schnabel, Rubinstein, Kempff, Pollini, Kovacevich, Perahia, Afanassiev, Kuerti, Clara Haskil, Andras Schiff, Annie Fischer, Imogen Cooper, Cecil Lytle) in such a way as to make me believe, while I was listening to it, that there had been no greater piece of music (or work of art altogether) in the history of the human race. But in Andsnes's performance, after a while I found myself in agonized longing for this great work to come to an end, the sooner the better.

I wish I could say what was wrong about the performance, especially since so many other listeners in Sherwood Auditorium professed themselves to be entranced by what they had heard.

In Andsnes's Schumann (not only the Faschingsschwank but also the C major Fantasie and the First Piano Sonata) I can at least give some precise reasons for my discomfiture: too fast, lack of rubato, absence of whimsy, etc. In the Schubert, every detail sounded right, exactly the way a great pianist (and Andsnes is that) would play it. Nevertheless, to me the work as a whole never found its direction or its meaning, and aside from offering this subjective judgment I can't think of any specific evidence to offer. Can I simply have been uncomfortable in my seat? Maybe so....

Still, I'm not giving up on Leif Ove Andsnes. I'm not even giving up on his Schubert. Let's see what he does next time. ■

Twin Bombs

"We're better off with no theater at all."

replev opens The Seagull with a budding playwright's complaint: the "sacred" theater of his day is dead. It's just threewalled box sets; people eating, drinking, walking, and loving; all tied together with a cozy moral, "something you wouldn't mind having around the house." Treplev wants "new forms." If not, "then we're better off with no theater at all."

Sound contemporary? Anton Chekhov wrote The Seagull a century ago.

Kevin Judge's scenic design for UCSD's Seagull combines old and new forms. An ancient box set surrounds the stage, mildewed walls and peeling paint, the color of sour milk. The fourth wall proscenium bar hovers over the audience. It's as if Judge hauled in an original, bought at a theatrical thrift shop, and propped the old codger up.

Inside's an art gallery: a tall painting, maybe 20 feet, of a white birch; piggyback landscapes, like Dutch doors, of tree trunks; and in the rear a 40-foot-wide, sweeping lake vista. During the fourth act — when people eat, drink, play lotto, and commit suicide waves on the lake ripple.

Judge's design — and Shirley Halahmy's lighting, which includes daguerreotype-like flash-freezes — delights in hybrids. He reverses outside and inside, art and nature (although a new generation of Treplevs has already begun to condemn double-coding and unlikely yokings as old-hat postmodernism).

Larissa Kikernot's direction of Seagull, however, segregates acting styles — external in the first three acts, internal in the last — and the production unfolds more like student exercises than exploration of things Chehovian.

In Acts One through Three, actors do everything that Hamlet, in his speech to the Players, says not to: they "saw the air" with their hands; their passions "whirlwind" at full volume. Choices get stretched, subtexts played front. Few people make an entrance without tripping, or leave without a grand exit (at one point Masha, her foot asleep, limps 25 yards offstage: it's a show-halter, the laughs generated not worth the pace killed). Like young actors afraid they aren't coming across, the cast makes scenes and plays them past the hilt.

Hamlet-the-director tells the players, "Now this overdone [style], though it makes the unskilled laugh, cannot but make the judicious grieve." After a late intermission, Act Four's done for the "judicious." The acting goes internal. The cast suggests rather than slams. And something resembling Chekhov takes shape, at least until Treplev starts tearing paper, and more paper, and more...

We're obviously in the midst of some concept: melodrama versus contemporary approaches; innocence and experience. The playwright, famous for his "Chekhovian" blending of genres, gets bipolarized first as sitcomical, then tragic. Although it allows actors to show their versatility, we get too much concept (the first three acts mock The Seagull by cartooning the characters) and too little Chekhov. The question shouldn't be how to "do" Chekhov but rather what is Chekhov "doing."

The before/after take does have a payoff. When Nina (Christina Albright) performs Treplev's play in Act One, she's a giant pinwheel, white sheets dangling from long poles. She recites the lines with ardent heart and zilch technique. In Paul Schmidt's translation, Nina repeats much of the speech in Act Four. She's paid two years of dues. She's lost her life but found her art. Christina Albright resonates the speech, as does the memory of Nina's fledgling first attempt wavering ghostlike behind her.

Nina's painful growth recalls a story, attributed to various sources. An actor went to a famous teacher, said, "I want to be a great artist." The teacher said that was doable, "but first I must break your heart.'

After I begged for weeks, the North Coast Rep let me dra-maturge its 1999 production of Tom Stoppard's Arcadia. Richard Baird played the disgruntled math student Valentine Coverly. Lisa Guzman played modest math genius Thomasina Coverly. Baird and Guzman were 18 (she reluctantly missed a rehearsal to go to her senior prom) and two of the best young actors I'd ever seen. Now 22, Guzman is artistic director of Vox Humana in Los Angeles and currently playing Wedekind's Lulu. Baird, also 22, is artistic director of Poor Players Theatre and currently playing Hamlet in San Diego.

The Hamlet is bare-stage, modern dress: soldiers in camouflage fatigues; Polonius dons a three-piece suit and yammers into a cell phone. The acting ranges from rank amateur to passable. Nuances are few, and too often a Laertes or a Horatio or a Gertrude will glissando through a line, substituting speed for sense. Nick Kennedy's direction has some imaginative touches. One example: Hamlet does most of the "to be or not to be" speech in the dark, occasionally flickering a cigarette lighter ("to be": on; "or not to be": off). The pitch-black stage forces attention to the words and recalls how Orson Welles directed Macbeth's big speech in the movie. Welles fills the screen with a black-andwhite marble facade. The audience hears about a tale told by an idiot unimpeded by distracting visuals.

At the end of Hamlet's speech, lights come up and he's holding a gasoline can.

Most actors don't dare play Hamlet until their hair begins to gray. Then they bleach it and technique their way through the role, playing memories of youthful energy and not the thing itself — whence cometh the verb "to branagh."

Also it's one thing to hear a 45-year-old actor, his life more than half over, mull Hamlet's speculations about death, and quite another to hear the 20-year-old Dane, with such a promising life ahead of him.

Richard Baird is close in age to Hamlet. And in temperament. At times his performance becomes mannered — an impish Peter O'Toole peeks out — and others when the seams show in Hamlet's "north by northwest" madness. But then Baird and Hamlet aren't seasoned pros. They're young actors attempting the toughest roles of their lives. And for the first four acts, both have a brash rawness — unlike other Hamlets, neither is in control — culminating in the "readiness" that is "all."

Skittish, stormy, a spoiled brat yet worthy of angels' flights, Baird's moving Hamlet becomes a neophyte Magellan, probing mapless seas. In effect — and I've never seen this emphasis before — both Hamlets awake into the actor's nightmare. Everything is "out of joint," and they must improvise each moment anew. ■

All the Great Books (abridged)

Reduced Shakespeare Company's sprint through the literary canon clobbers sacred cows, especially of the Dead European White Male variety: Dante's Divine Comedy "is not funny"; blind Homer's Illiad and Odyssey become the "Idioticy"; and Marcel Projet's seven-volume A La Recherche Du Temps Perdu gets three words, "I like cookies." Ostensibly All the Great Books is a crash course for remedial students. The test is in an hour and 45 minutes (class is in the theater because it's the only schoolroom big enough for so large a group). Doing instantaneous costume changes, flying through doors faster than farce, Austin Tichenor, Matthew Croke, and Reed Martin slam and shave - and sometimes revere — 89 famous texts in ways that make Cliff's Notes read like sculpted prose. Odvsseus becomes Captain Kirk, and Molly Bloom's a spat between male and female inner monologists, the male getting the final "yes." Great Books is goofy, irreverent fun. You get the sense that the trio's performed it many times (a shopworn drop of bookshelves suggests as much). Thus the show's funniest moments, which also freshen things up for the cast, happen when one of them goes "up," forgets his place, and must ad lib back into rhythm. Worth a try.

Beehive

Those tall cans of AquaNet spray are back in the spotlight. As are the gigantic domes of hair, worn by the "Hives," in the Theatre in Old Town's reprise of its 1992 hit show Beehive celebrates the women singers and "girl groups" of the 1960s. But if you caught only the first half hour, you'd swear something's amiss. The six talented performers parody every song and vocalist. As in melodrama they exaggerate gestures and tones, from Lesley Gore to the Supremes (who break up before our eyes) and Patti LaBelle (who, when she sold her heart to the "Junkman," was far more serious than this!). Directed by Paula Kalustian, the production abandons its aura of overkill-silly as the '60s lose innocence. And the second half includes first-rate solos: especially Renae Mitchell as Aretha Franklin, Lisa Payton-Davis as Tina Turner, and Joy Yandell as Janis Joplin. The show captures some of the texture of the era. Iill K. Mesaros's costumes are a history lesson (the times weren't the only thing "a-changin' " back then; styles made 180-degree turns about every three years). Jasper Grant's four-piece band keeps the evening cruising. To the young, however, Nick Reid's set may require an explanation. Those big black round things all over the place? Phonograph records. The ones with big holes in the center were 45s. And for the generation of the '60s, they were minted cur-Worth a try.

service coordinator, may have been on the job - which resembles raising quadruplets — far too long. It cost him a marriage and now may steal his only real family. Many years ago, Lamb's Players staged Tom Griffin's comedy-drama at their National City theater. It was a signature show. Although there are times when their current restaging verges on cartoon, or threatens to stratosphere, there are also moments of magic. As when Robert Smyth's rotund, smitten Norman dances with Deborah Gilmour Smyth's mentally challenged, spiritually radiant Sheila. When they dance we see from their perspective: embraced by swirling stars, they feel like Fred and Ginger. Jack said earlier that chaperoned dances are either the happiest or saddest places on earth. For the most part, the Kerry Meads-directed show captures this duality. Much of it's sitcom, coming from the dreamlike logic of the characters (to hide an accident in the men's room, Arnold pours water all over himself). At the same time, without ever using the patronizing word "special," Boys depicts the terrors and elations of unconditional innocence, which may indeed be the most bipolar condition of all. Worth a try.

But Can He Dance?

Lookin' for love in all the wrong dance clubs. "She" is a thirtysomething Asian-American, successful in everything but relationships. She (an engaging Tiffany Loui) has dated a remarkable group of people: an African-American writer (G. Madison), a Latino heartthrob singer (Juan Manzo), a lesbian professor/dominatrix (Susan Hammons), and an allegedy meek Asian man (Jeff Lorezco) — but has had no luck. As Dorinne Kondo's play proceeds, her exes cluster around She like a Greek chorus, recalling her past and offering advice. She "confuses passion with love" and is "emotionally unavailable" (the play partakes of the psychobabble it decries). Like She, Dance is reticent to probe too far (the script would be far more appealing if its primary intent weren't to be appealing). The Asian-American Rep's energized production frustrates: it's so sharp, so visually alive (on a translucent screen silhouettes make gymnastic love backlit by flaming reds), it merits stronger material. The program says this is Anne Tran's "solo directing debut." No way!! Combined with Annette Nixon's eclectic choreography there's so much movement, the show could qualify as "dance the-— Tran's directorial choices are always savvy.

Comedy of Errors

Aquila Theatre, company-in-residence at NYU (and earning an international rep for staging the classics), wads up Shakespeare's text, and punts it out the door. Director Robert Richmond and his cast offer visual, athletic correlatives for emotion. Heads snap, bodies twist, hearts beat on sleeves, all in sync, and the timing is stopwatch exact. And though there are times when you'd wish Aquila hadn't wadded up the more serious parts of the text — a brisk comic attack has sole priority — the show is a circus of precise, choreographed antics. The goys from Syracuse, Antipholus and his bondsman Dromio have come to Ephesus to find longlost twin brothers. Luckily for the foreigners they resemble two locals, with the same names. This "awkward fallacy" saves their lives since the two cities are mortal enemies - but almost drives them loopy. The actors cartoon Shakespeare's steeplechase of mixed identities with verve. They're so expert they do kind of in-joke showing-off: Lindsay Rae Taylor, for example, leaps, dances, and shuffles with gymnastic agility — all pigeon-toed. The program says two sets of twins play the sets of twin brothers. All four have bios in the program. In fact, Louis Butelli is both Dromios and Richard Willis is both Antipholuses. The actors perform with such dexterity it's easier to believe the program than the truth.

Grassroots Greeks

6th @ Penn's former "Seven Weeks of Greeks" has become so popular it's a regular series. And what a great idea! To reacquaint local audiences with the masterworks of ancient Greek drama, Linda Castro and David Cohen offer staged readings. The approach is refreshing. There's no attempt at polished work or choices set in granite. Instead, the actors treat the text as if this were the first day of rehearsal, the threshold of exploration. They read in a semicircle. There's some movement, a suggestion of costumes, and (re)acting, but the emphasis is on the word and, as in all Greek drama, on an unfolding story at once hair-on-fire irrational and as logical as a courtroom debate. It doesn't take long to see how pertinent and compelling these plays are. An informal discussion follows the reading, and admission is free — though 6th @ Penn greatly appreciates donations. Also: since space is limited, the theater recommends reservations in advance. Next reading: Euripides' Ion, Monday, November 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Late-Night Catechism

Every Monday night, during summer, the Laguna Playhouse stages the popular "interactive adult cate-chism class," taught by a sister from the old spare-not-the-rod school. The concept doesn't sound like much. The sister is substituting for the regular teacher (it's his poker night, don't tell a soul). She used to have the job but was deemed too strict for contemporary students. And the class is just that, part of a course on Catholic doctrine. But the sister's authoritarianism takes it to unforeseen places (you can hear cries of recognition from the audience, espe cially when sister brings out a hard ruler and taps her palm). The results, the two times I've seen the show: a.) an almost nonstop evening of comedy; and b.) a thought-provoking look at education, religion, and much more. The sister, it turns out, is not kidding [note: the Laguna Playhouse has extended the show's run three times].

National Comedy Theatre

ComedySportz changed its name, but its methods (and madness) remain the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked Priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone's TheatreSports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on ActroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a "challenge match" against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played "Emotional Sympathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit, rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledged failure, abundantly, then forgot it). It made for a lively, often quite

Nu

This could be the start of a new, physical vocabulary for Sledgehammer Theatre. At the same time these "plays without words" are just a start, and often balky. Three pieces, Mr. Phosphorescent (office politics), Echoes Traveling (a woman tries to shed a chrysalis-like past), and Wintering (from Sylvia Plath's Ariel) use gesture, movement, and music in ways resembling Meyerhold's "biomechanics" and Anne Bogart. The body talks. Overall, however, the work doesn't feel fully realized, the most arresting moments occurring in tableaux, when David Lee Cuthbert's expert lighting zones in on stillness. Too often, they have a lag factor: performed by a cast of varying skill, physicality's at the mercy of the music (which makes for slow stretches - got 16 more bars to fill — and more repeated stage business than the story needs; movement should dictate music). At times the stage flashes with voiceless communication. At many others, the production is in a nether realm, not dance or theater, just movements unequal to powerful music upstaging them. Focus, surprisingly, is also a problem (in Wintering, for example, the man in white, like the sun creeping imperceptibly across the sky, steals the eye; one follows his feet inching ahead rather than the angst below) For such an important project, you wish directors Kirstin Brandt and Jessa Watson and their cast had world enough and time to forge their theatrical lexicon in some Grotowskian retreat. San Diego Theatresports

A cross between improvisational comedy and Family Feud. Improv, making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add competitive scene making, with the audience awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odiousness of comparisons used in this format, but San Diego Theatresports' "game show" is a hoot. The 90-minute evening offers different bits. The show I caught had "Team Sports" - two pairs of players competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla Theatre" - five directors invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit" (other formats include "Micetro" and "Improv Survivors"). Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, callow youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group makes the hits much more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, has written one of the few brilliant books (Improv) I've ever read about making the ater. And they put his pearls to good use. Their motto: "Remember, when it's not funny, it's art." Worth a try.

Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffee house 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend 'Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard,' or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" – Hugh plays '70s tunes on the piano. to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they admit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept characters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackeriack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficulties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudodrama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. Guitarist Cheetah Chrome was talking about his band that existed only seven months in 1975 but was credited by music critics with helping to create the punk rock template before the Ramones or the Sex Pistols.

Although they never released an album or played outside Cleveland, bootlegs of such Rocket from the Tombs proto-punk classics as "Life Stinks," "Final Solution," and "Down in Flames" were covered by Pearl Jam, the Replacements, Guns 'n' Roses, legend encouraged former Clevelander Frank Mauceri to issue the band's first album, The Day the Earth Met Rocket from the Tombs, on his Renobased Smog Veil Records. "There were only third- and fourth-generation bootlegs out there." To go along with the release of that retrospective collection, and in anticipation of a newly recorded Rocket Redux to be released next year, he encouraged Rocket from the Tombs to regroup.

Rocket from the Tombs' first national tour kicks off in San Diego at the Casbah Tuesday — ironic, since this is the hometown of the band that named itself in honor of the long-dormant 28-year-old band.

"I take it as a compliment," said Chrome about Rocket from the Crypt. "I've never met them, but I've heard their music. We know some of the same people.

some 200-plus extras. Foley said a class system developed between the extras. "There was a separation didn't happen. They had rotten teeth and nappy hair after makeup."

The 50 full-time extras and crew stayed at the Hotel Corona Plaza in Rosarito.

"Every Friday night everyone went to a bar called Ricky's near K-38." Foley said no partying extras were arrested.

"I think the studio had a deal with the cops, plus we were told to be on our best behavior. The cops knew who we were.

between the three groups. There were the people who stayed down there for all five months, there were people who came down a couple times a week, and then there were the people who came down only a couple times. A lot of the extras were very anxious to get on camera. They would sometimes push the others out of the way."

I wondered if it seemed odd that all the extras who played common sailors looked like models. "They made sure that FOLEY PIPES FOR CROWE

We brought so much business to the city."

Foley said he was surprised that the press never heard about Crowe hanging out at Ricky's. "There were never any paparazzi there when [Crowe] was there.... Whenever people ask me about Russell Crowe, they want to hear some dirt. People are disappointed when I tell them he was a regular guy. I didn't interact a lot with him. He was cool to people."

The pay, says Foley, was "adequate." He says his biggest disappointment is that he couldn't join the Screen Actors Guild.

"If the film had been shot in L.A., I would have been eligible to join the union. But when the studios take it to these Third World countries, they escape a lot of expenses like union fees."

Foley also plays in the Irish group Skelpin ("It means to spank"). The band played for the movie's opening party last Sunday on a boat that was used in the movie.

Very little alternative...

On Monday, 92/1 DJs Rand DeWitt, Jeremy Pritchard, and Rick Roome were told independent alternative station 92/1 was going off the air and the 92.1 frequency would begin simulcasting country station KSON at 3 p.m.

"Go to breakfast at any diner in Escondido and you can just tell North County is a great community for country music," said Darrel Goodin, general manager of KSON (owned by Jefferson-Pilot). He says a half million people have trouble picking up any country-music station in North County. That's why he said Jefferson-Pilot purchased KFSD, 92.1 FM for what one insider said was between $15 million and $20 million.

With the format change, the count of San Diego's alternative stations goes from three to two. Clear Channel's 91X and Jefferson-Pilot's FM-94/9 remain.

Goodin said there were no plans to carry the call-in program "Sex Advice with Heidi Fleiss," which was heard from 8 to 10 p.m. during the week. "But we pledged to [KFSD owner] Art Astor we would get to know every one of [the 92/1 DJs], and it would be our desire to place as many of them in our organization as we can."

The 92.1 frequency, which emanates from a tower in Escondido, used to be home to country station KOW-FM in the '80s and early '90s.

"I just saw a sign in front of the Rox. They just modified their dress code to say no sporting gear or velour jumpsuits." Chris Reyes is one of the members of Soul Survivaz, an all-Latin trio. Reyes says that while some downtown venues like Rox or E Street

Alley may spin music by Obie Trice and 50 Cent, hip-hop clothing is not welcome.

"These clubs say you can't wear any kind of hats at all. They regulate how baggy your pants are. We sat and watched people get thrown out because their pants were too baggy. It's like that everywhere [in San Diego] now."

Fellow rapper Charles Quimiro agrees.

"We try and get in clubs, but we're not allowed. A couple clubs downtown show us love, but the rest of them won't allow you in unless you are wearing slacks, shiny shirts, and shiny shoes. But that's just not hip-hop."

Rox general manager Damien Cobler said, "We're a nightclub in downtown San Diego. We think you should dress like you are going to a nightclub in downtown San Diego. Jerseys and caps are for ball games."

Jumpsuits, he adds, are also not meant for nightclubs.

"It has nothing to do with the type of person you are. You should come here to look nice."

And even though Rox has no live bands, Cobler told me, "We allowed South Psycho Cide to pass out CDs here."

He said baggy pants and jeans are allowed, "as long as they look nice."

The Soul Survivaz (www.soulsurvivaz.com) appear December 6 at the Knitting Factory in Los Angeles.

"It's not that I was tired of the business," says 4th & B principal owner Bob Speth about his selling of the venue. "I was just tired. I guess I'm getting a little too old for this type of stuff."

Speth, 57, opened his first bar in 1967, a small tavern on 69th and University called the University Inn. In 1970 Speth opened Zardi's on Morena Boulevard (currently O'Connell's). In 1975 he built the Bacchanal in Kearny Mesa, which seated 500 and presented such national acts as Nine Inch Nails, America, Tracy Chapman, Warren Zevon, Todd Rundgren, Ian Hunter, Devo, Deborah Harry, Marie Osmond, and even locals the Beat Farmers and Mojo Nixon. After Speth sold the Bacchanal in 1988, he sailed to Fiji with his wife, lived there for three years, continued sailing around the world for another three years, then returned to San Diego to open 4th & B at the end of

I asked Speth if recent problems with lawsuits had factored in his decision to sell the venue.

"Not at all," he replied. "Almost anyone in business has lawsuit problems, and they really distract you from doing the work that you could do. Sometimes people think you are rich — which I am not and they deserve a certain amount of your money. But I'm not going to whine about all that. Part of the job is fending off those types of people. No, the reason I'm selling is because I'm getting older. It's hard work, going in day and night, seven days a week; constantly negotiating with bands, dealing with everything you have to deal with, all the chances you have to take.'

Rumors have been flying that it is the owner/operators of Margarita Rocks who are buying 4th & B. The name of the buyer's corporation is Pacific Entertainment LLC.

The two principals of Pacific Entertainment are Dale Polselli (a real estate broker in North County) and Eric DeBlasi, Mr. DeBlasi was unavailable for comment; however, Eric DeBlasi is listed as an owner and liquor licensee for the three Margarita Rocks clubs (located in Pacific Beach, Oceanside, and Tempe, Arizona) that I checked. Dale Poselli is not named.

According to Ray Johnson, an employee of Pacific Entertainment and soon-to-be general manager of 4th & B, Mr. DeBlasi does have a relationship with Margarita Rocks.

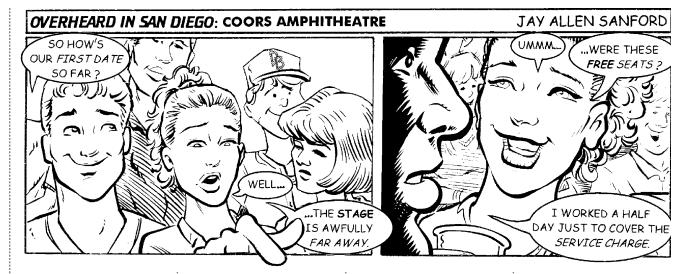

I remind Johnson that DeBlasi is the owner.

You'll have to ask him," said Johnson. "I don't know the details of his relationship with them, so I'd be out of place even talking about it."

"What are your plans regarding 4th & B?" I asked.

"At this point in time we intend to keep the current format, which includes live entertainment, corporate and private events, and the occasional club event. We're going to make a sizeable capital investment to try and give 4th & B more of a 2004 look. We have extensive experience in managing this type of venue and like to think we bring a fresh, new energy that will hopefully bring this thing to the next level.

I asked Speth if he had any parting advice for the new owners

"I've found in dealings for the past eight years, the straighter you are, the straighter it comes back to you. There is a lot of conning and manipulation in the concert promotion business, but this town isn't like that. The other promoters in San Diego are great people."

So what are your plans

"About 40 years ago, if you can believe this, I used to skateboard. I know it sounds impossible, but they really did have skateboards back then. Anyway, Paul Nichols from Osiris approached me and asked if I would try the double loop on a skateboard. Tony Hawk only did the single loop, I'm going to try the double."

No Way to Treat A Lady

"We pay more for haircuts and for clothes. Who can we sue about that?"

MEN'S CLUB

hen I contacted Olé Madrid to see how business was faring now that the club could no longer sponsor ladies' night, they told me, "We have new owners. It was the old owners who ran the ladies' night. We don't have any comment on what they previously did."

Olé Madrid was not the only club forced to stop its ladies' night promotions (which was called by the two lawyers who filed a lawsuit against such promotions "a pervasive problem throughout California").

Seven clubs were included in the suit: Olé Madrid, 5ifth Qtr., Have a Nice Day Café (which has since gone out of business but not because of this), Pure Nightclub, Fusion, Neimans, and Martini Ranch.

Now, according to the San Diego Union-Tribune, Erik C. Jenkins and Randal L. Glaser are filing a similar lawsuit against Orange County nightclubs. Jenkins and Glaser filed this suit on behalf of Steven Surrey and Alfred Rava. According to the Tribune, one of the plaintiffs is "a California Western School of Law classmate of the two lawyers who filed the suits on their behalf. The other is a paralegal."

Surrey and Rava won because the California Supreme Court ruled in 1985 that ladies' night discounts violate the Unruh Act. "The legality of sex-based price discounts cannot depend on subjective value judgments about which types of sex-based distinctions are important or harmful," wrote Chief Justice Rose Bird.

Wanting to get some opinions on this from the List of Seven, I called the clubs above, but no one would return my calls. One person I did talk to said, "We don't really want to comment, because who knows? If we talk about those guys being idiots, they might sue us for saying that. Defamation of character or something."

I did talk to Marilu Glassman, who is the manager at 5ifth Qtr. and is also in charge of marketing. She was pretty fired up about the whole thing.

"What are they going to do next?" she asked. "Sue people who use the phrase 'king of the road' because there is not a 'queen of the road'? Where does it end? We never had a cover before 10 p.m. anyway. It was just a phrase that was coined, to have drink specials and things for the ladies. I don't think any of the other guys ever thought there was a hint of discrimination."

I talked to Dan Flores, the associate executive for the Gaslamp Quarter's board of executives. I asked him if he got involved when this lawsuit first went down and if he told clubs what they should and shouldn't do.

"We are like a chamber of commerce, and we don't tell clubs what to do," Flores told me. "We do more to promote the Gaslamp district and don't get involved in what promotions the clubs run. And there isn't much we can do. If somebody would have complained to us, we would have them submit a form to the board of directors. If there was a way we could help, we would. The clubs are independent organizations. If it's safety related, like something that had to do with fire exits, or capacity levels, we would be involved, or get the fire marshal involved. If there's something involving the parking meters in the area, we are involved."

I asked if they had gotten complaints about the ladies' night promotions, and he said, "No, we never got complaints. We never heard from those two guys. If we would have, we would have had the board vote on it and took a position. That didn't happen in this case."

Ladies' nights have become so popular for a variety of reasons. A group of women outside the Martini Ranch (none of whom wanted to be identified) said, "We would rather dance or hang out at a club that didn't just have a bunch of men. When there was a ladies' night, usually that meant a mix of both sexes. You hate to dance when it's a bunch of men that just think of it as a meat market."

Another lady said, "We pay more for haircuts and for clothes. Who can we sue about that?"

Her friend piped in, "And men don't have to buy tampons. The government should give us some tax break for that shit."

One lady was quiet while the rest complained. I asked her opinion. She said, "Hey, I don't care. I usually have a man buy all my drinks and pay for me anyway."

In TV Guide on August 23, there was an interview with Chris Rock. Rock said, "I was driving the other day, listening to the radio, and a club had men's night. Men's night?!"

This situation got me to thinking about movie theaters. They have discounts for senior citizens and for children. If ladies' night discriminates against men, don't these price differences discriminate as well?

Marilu Glassman and friends

I called the Pacific Theatres in the Gaslamp and talked to a guy named Danny (who told me he wasn't allowed to give out his last name). He's been a manager for four years. He said, in response to my question about ticket price complaints, "No, we've never had anybody complain. Sometimes you get a person that tries to lie and say they are old enough for the senior discount when you can tell they aren't 60 years old. We have had disabled people that complained about things, but we have seating for wheelchairs, and for hearing impaired we have closed captioning, and these headsets that can control the volume if they want it louder." He went on to tell me that there are different rules for the theaters in Hawaii, and he's not sure why. He gave me the number for Pacific Theatres' corporate offices, but they never called back to

I asked the opinion of a lawyer friend of mine who writes for San Diego Lawyer magazine. She thought it seemed odd that these guys prevailed. One of her lawyer friends said it might have to do with places that serve alcohol, since laws are so strict and varied in that area.

I called my childhood friend Jim Souza, who's a lawyer with Kennedy Law Firm downtown. He said, "I haven't researched it, and I only know a little about this case. But it seems to me that this doesn't pass the smell test. For there to be discrimination, there has to be a group that is discriminated against. It could be race, religion, things like that. I don't think 'men' qualify as a class that can be discriminated against. And for clubs to be told by the government that they can't do something, there has to be a good reason. And if there's an economic reason that a club does something, the law will usually be on their side. And since when have 'men' been discriminated against? Another thing you have to wonder is, what are these two guys' motivation behind this? For there to be needless time, energy, and money going to this case, you have to question the motivations behind these guys and what good comes from this."

I ask if these guys can sue the movie theaters because they have to pay the full admission price. Souza says, "Letting children pay less, who does that discriminate against? Adults? They are not a protected class. They would never win that lawsuit."

But they did win this one, and before it ever went to court. The seven clubs agreed to pay a total of $125,000 to Surrey and Rava, the two men who accused the clubs of violating a decadesold California civil-rights law. Clubs don't want to violate the Unruh Act because each incident of gender-based discrimination carries a $4000 fine

The strip club Pure has a sign that reads, "Military Free." You have to wonder when that will be challenged.

One of the local DJs said on the air, "These two guys are the ones that need something like ladies' night. They probably have a hard enough time trying to get laid. It would help them to have a higher ratio of women."

Interestingly, it appears that attorney Al Rava was also involved in San Diego's music scene when he placed two citizen's arrests on Trey Brady, owner of the now-defunct Juke Joint Café. As written in the "Blurt" section of the April 25,

2002, issue of the San Diego Reader:

Trey Brady, owner of the Gaslamp's Juke Joint Café, said, "The cop came up and made [attorney Al] Rava stand in front of me and say, 'I am placing you under citizen's arrest.' The cop then gives me a citation. It is a misdemeanor. I have to go to court with an attorney for each citizen's arrest. My legal fees continue to rise.'

Rava, who lives in the Pioneer Lofts next door, represents four clients who also live there. They are suing for $800,000 in damages over the music emanating from the Juke Joint on Fourth Avenue.

Rava already lost one round in court when Judge Sheridan Reed failed to find Brady in contempt of court for violating a temporary restraining order. At that March 15 hearing, Reed ordered Rava's clients and the Juke Joint to mediation. Brady says he is more than happy to participate in mediation.

Brady said every time Rava's clients have called the police or the city, those clients were told Brady was breaking

"I don't think he has any interest in working things out, said Brady about Rava. "Our first mediation hearing is May 6, and he just placed me under citizen's arrest for the second time last night [April 17]. He can't seem to wait. He's very disingenuous. I want to resolve this issue. If he wants to resolve this, why is he asking for $800,000?"

A call to Al Rava:

"Why did you place Trey Brady under citizen's arrest last night?"

"I can't talk about pending litigation," said Rava.

'What does the citizen's arrest have to do with your

The Juke Joint Café closed in October of 2002.

A class-action lawsuit against Club Med was recently filed because Club Med had offered a "Ladies Fly Free" promotion to its clubs in Cancún this past June and July. Women were offered free or discounted air fare.

And whom was the suit filed on behalf of? Alfred G. Rava. He and his female companion purchased a vacation package in July from On the Go Travel Services in Rancho Bernardo. He was charged $1462, and she was only billed $1062.

According to Gail Diane Cox of the National Law Review, "Jenkins told the San Diego Union-Tribune, ladies' night discrimination was like that suffered by blacks in the South. We can't wait to hear what his international analogy will be." ■

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

The new Spiritualized album, Amazing Grace, opens with a song titled "This Little Life of Mine" and follows that up with one called "She Kissed Me (It Felt Like a Hit)." It's tempting to say that these two titles sum up bandleader Jason Pierce's approach — one song plays on the title of an old spiritual, the other on an especially weird Phil Spector production, with a drug reference thrown in. The problem is that other song titles on the album, such as "Hold On," "Oh Baby," and "The Power and the Glory," don't sound like deconstructed classics so much as unreconstructed clichés.

One should not judge a song by its title, but the music doesn't do much to help matters. After the sweeping drama of Spiritualized's great 1997 album Ladies and Gentlemen We Are Floating in Space and the 100-person band on the somewhat overwrought follow-up, Let It Come Down, Pierce promoted Amazing Grace as a back-to-basics, White Stripes-inspired garage-rock manifesto. He keeps that up for the first two or three songs, which sound like the work of a Stooges tribute band. After that, he's mostly back to his old tricks with slow tempos, horns, strings, and a gospel choir. Truth be told, he's better at ballads than rockers, but these songs sound like outtakes from the last couple of albums that were rejected because their drugs-andredemption lyrics cover ground Pierce has already trod.

And that's too bad. Pierce can be a great arranger. One of these days he's going to record something truly amazing, if he doesn't kill himself with drugs first. In the meantime, we have the still-stellar live shows.

BY DAVE GOOD

I've scoured the lyrics to "Bridge Over Troubled Water," and for the life of me, I cannot figure out why the Clear Channel guys included that song in their advisory list of 150 or so recordings for their programmers to temporarily omit from radio playlists. This from an MTV news source that claims that a local Clear Channel manager helped to draft that advisory in the days following 9/11. For my money, an old and gentle song like that one would be the hot ticket for the masses during such uncertain times. MTV says various songs made the suggested drop list because they contained references to explosions, terrorism, airplanes, skyscrapers, New York, the Middle East, and even Tuesday. But I found no such mention in what was one of Simon and Garfunkel's bestselling songs.

Simon and Garfunkel have been breaking up regularly since they first recorded in 1957 as Tom and Jerry. They were heavy gravity during my senior year in high school. Actually, we were a couple of years late (Simon and Garfunkel's biggest moments had already come and gone). But then, we were late for everything else, too: Vietnam, the Civil Rights movement, Woodstock. Eventually, Simon and Garfunkel's grip on our emotions faded because they stopped singing the truth. we quit believing in the power of their music,

SIMON & GARFUNKEL, Cox Arena, Saturday, November 15, 8 p.m. 619-220-8497 or 619-594-0429. $58.25 to $228.25.

Along with his debut album, singer/songwriter Peter Bolland offers a word of advice for listening to his music: "It sounds good loud," Not only does it sound good loud, it sounds good period.

A veteran of the Southern California alt-country scene, Bolland and his band Broken Hills create a sound suggestive of Tom Petty and the Heartbreakers. Euphemized by Bolland as "simple songs about complex things," the words to a majority of the tunes are darkly humored. In "Coronado Bridge," Bolland sings, "I really want to hold your hand / I want to hold you close / But it's a little hopeless now / 'Cause you're only a ghost / I wish you would have called me / From that phone out on the bridge/ I would have liked that better than that note taped on the fridge."

It's difficult to create 12 tracks of solid rockers or lasting ballads, and those of Bolland's songs that are filler have a tendency to drone on, especially when centered on festering dejection. Luckily, this is only the case in about three of the tracks. Bolland's sound should appeal to country and classic-rock fans as long as they consider the admonition that Frame is not something to lift anyone's spirits. On second thought, maybe it does sound more positive if the volume is cranked up.

QUOTABLE ➤ "I saw Candy Kane play here. There was barely enough room for her and her breasts."

It's not just local legends who play here. Even Ike Turner, who wrote what many consider the first rock song ("Rocket 88," a hit in 1951), has played here.

They have music every night (after 8:00 p.m.). A sign says, "Shhh! Please respect my neighbors." Luckily, the owner has the closest house to the restaurant.

Four girls were having a birthday party and getting drunk. When the band started playing "Who Do You Love?" one started singing "Willie and the Hand Jive" and another sang "I Want Candy." That great Bo Diddley beat leaves everyone guessing.

Go East, Young Man

(Editor's note: This review was written before the fires. Mediterraneo escaped unscathed; the view from the restaurant is unchanged, as does the menu, except for the potstickers.)

Mediterraneo served as celebrated local chef Deborah Scott's maiden restaurant. The owner wanted a pizza joint; she decided to step things up and propose a Northern Italian trattoria instead. "Alpine already had pizza shops," she told me. Scott, never one to gather moss when she could be gathering Oaxacan herbs (as she did before starting Indigo Grill), lasted little more than a year before moving on. But Mediterraneo is still going strong: still anchoring one end of the low-slung, country-comfy Alpine Creek Shopping Center, still offering a cypress-framed view of the sunset's golden haze over the hills, still offering gnocchi and tutto mare to hungry Alpinians (Alpiners?). And whatever Chef Scott's original vision, these days, they're serving some outstanding pizza.

In fact, the pizza proved to be my favorite thing on the menu during my first dinnertime venture to this East County culinary outpost. My wife Grace and I went on a friend's recommendation, turning right instead of left as we left La Mesa in search of Somewhere Else. The restaurant's decor is a designer's vision of tasteful rusticity: mottled mustard-gold paint in varying shades with one deep-red wall thrown in for contrast. The metallic cool of the partially exposed stainless-steel kitchen shone out amid the space's warm embrace, and everyone we spied working within seemed remarkably young, as did our friendly and cheerful waitress. R.E.M. played on the sound system, setting a musical mood that devolved into harsher, less ambient rock only once or twice as the evening wore on. An air of happy fun pervaded, due in part to a large contingent of middle-aged ladies making an early night of it. "You're not a foodie," said one to another, her tone indicating praise. "But I like my ahi," came the response.

The good vibe took on edible form in the focaccia that opened dinner — soft and dense, chewy without heaviness, enlivened by rosemary and olives. For topping, there was butter — whipped white and weightless and laced with rosemary leaves — and a cumin-inflected hummus that boomed of garbanzos. With a bottle of Beringer Pinot Noir, we were primed for our appetizers.

I caught a whiff of Chef Scott's cuisine-bending whimsy in the Portobello Potstickers (a holdout from her original menu). A hefty array of oversized wonton skins, folded over and fried shut to form an ultra-crispy seam, served as casing for a soft paste of blended portobello and gorgonzola. And in a show of saucery that evoked my memories of '80s extravagance, caramel-thick teriyaki divided the plate into cross-hatches, some of which were filled by pools of sweet chili glaze. Funky fun. Grace's Shrimp Involtini, a return to the more expected, might have matched the potstick-ers but for the bear hug of too-thick prosciutto wrapped around each hapless crustacean. Long after the shrimp had disappeared down her gullet, sometimes all but unnoticed amid the fancy ham, she was left chewing a mouthful of meat. But she adored the execution and combination of the sun-dried tomatocream sauce and mound of chopped arugula.

A "true margherita" pizza — sliced tomato, fresh basil, and fresh mozzarella — provided our middle course, and it both affirmed Mediterraneo's promise and served as warning for the road ahead. The crust was a wonder: thin, silken, and deliciously crisp and bready at the edge. Grace, who usually throws her crusts to her scrap-munching dog of a husband, devoured the golden-brown rims. But a mild pizza depends on a flavorful tomato for zip, and the great pale rounds that lay atop the cheese added nothing but a change in texture, despite a dusting of salt.

Perhaps it was our fault for ordering so late in the season, but Grace's Penne with Salmon suffered from more anonymous tomatoes, this time appearing as oversized chunks so pink that she initially mistook them for fish. "I'm just going to pick them out — there's no point to them," she sighed. Gummy, overcooked pasta sealed the doom of a dish that coulda been something, as evidenced by the rich, soft salmon and restrained sherry sauce. (The little asparagus logs were too unevenly cooked to help matters.)

At least in its conception, the penne was a fine, simple idea, unlike my Pork Tenderloin ("medallions of pork wrapped in pancetta with pesto and caramelized onions, served with wild-mushroom risotto cake, bell peppers, and asparagus") — a too complicated affair. Bad produce struck again here: the asparagus, arched over the risotto cake (itself speared with a branch of rosemary) and anchored by the four pesto-mounded medallions, was woody and bitter. Ham-tender pork was obscured in a cloak of sweet, chewy pancetta, and a scattering of roasted red peppers orbited the whole like distant, scarlet moons.

Even the better-conceived elements suffered from the surrounding chaos. The dark, sweet onions should have provided a lively counter to the pungent pesto, but the combination instead produced strained opposition. (This may have been the pesto's fault; though plentiful, it lacked flavor, and what we did detect was sour.) The risotto cake, while fried to perfection, was overly moist and seasoned to the point of tasting like it came from the Colonel's.

'Good grief," exclaimed Grace when we received our desserts, "they're bigger than my breasts!" Grace is not normally given to such comparisons, but there was something egregiously large about our sweets. She had ordered Apple Crispa, described as "a crisped almond tortilla shell with a layer of cinnamon apples and sweet vanilla cream cheese topped with a hot kahlua-caramel sauce and whipped cream." It proclaimed itself too much and it lived up to its proclamation. Among indulgences, Grace loves whipped cream the best, but the great spheres of it here proved too stiff and too oddly flavored to entice her. (Only the chef's assurance convinced us it was not canned.) Besides the cream and the unbearably tart shards of Granny Smith apple, our chief impression of the Crispa was sweetness. The kahlua, cinnamon, and almond — even, to some extent, the sweet vanilla cream cheese — were lost in a blinding sugary blizzard. My chocolate bread pudding fared better — Mediterraneo serves it in slices of near-uniform texture (save for the nuts), and the chocolate whispered of unpunishing bitterness. But there was that whipped cream again, and the whole affair came across as gooey.

When Grace and I next met the friend who had recommended the place, she confessed that she only ever ordered the outstanding Applewood Pork Salad. A return visit was necessary. Grace thought that I should try the pork salad with a masculine companion, so I corralled Hank, a pal with a fondness for grilled pork.

This time, we were seated outside on the patio where we watched the sun go down as four or five cats frolicked and lolled on the adjacent lawn. When we dove into the pork, I understood why our friend had spoken as she did. As we cut into the slices of tenderloin, aromas of warm apple oozed upward; suddenly, we were starving. Even more apple flavor, tempered now by proper pork taste, broke forth as we chewed. Hank is normally wary of mixing meat and greens, but he jabbed his frisée with gusto and was not disappointed. The raspberryhoney-dijon vinaigrette glistened on the leaves but did not soak them. The spiced pecans gave good smoke, and the chunks of raw apple worked to tart effect.

The pizza — pepperoni and sausage for us manly carnivores shone again, though in a slightly different light. This time the undercrust was crisper, the edge puffier and less bready, but the variation brought no less pleasure. "It reminds me of a hot sourdough roll on a cold day," marveled Hank. Great slices of thin-sliced pepperoni sprawled across the top. The sausage was light and springy and not overburdened by fennel. The marinara seemed a little too sweet, but it was no great matter.

Alas, our promising start drifted once more into murkier territory. Hank ordered the gnocchi, served in a tomato-asparagus ragout with chicken confit, and gave up after a few bites. "Gnocchi are tricky," he mused. "You don't want them to offer too much resistance, but at the same time, you don't want them to paste up and stick on the roof of your mouth." The heat of the sauce obscured everything about the chicken except its texture, somewhat on the dry side of chewy. The chicken in my Fontina and Wild Mushroom-Stuffed Chicken with Gorgonzola Polenta and Wilted Spinach was not dry. It was, as advertised, "roasted to perfection," if a little pale without its skin and a little light on flavor. ("It looks so naked," said Grace when I brought some home to her.) Everything, in fact, was as advertised, and everything worked, except maybe the Gorgonzola in the polenta, which rendered it incapable of soaking up the sage demi-glâce. But I shouldn't gripe; the crust on the polenta was good enough that Hank carved it away from the part that was supposed to be mine.

I left with the feeling that Mediterraneo, for all the years that have passed since its opening, is still a young restaurant. The staff is young. The chef is young and still making his mark on a menu stocked with inherited favorites. And if there were miscues, there was still goodness and that great blessing of youth, promise.

ABOUT THE CHEF

Chris Schumacher, now 25, started working in a restaurant in Southern Illinois when he was barely a teenager — his uncle was the general manager. "I kind of fell into washing dishes, and then he started showing me stuff. I just got totally interested in it." From there, he attended Johnson & Wales in Rhode Island, landing a job at the Italian restaurant Raphael's in his junior year. "I did more of a classic Italian [there] not so much Italian-American," and he fell in love with the cuisine. Now, he says, "it's just fascinating for me, blending everything together with Italian." He came to San Diego to do an "externship" and planned to work at (small world) Chef Scott's Kemo Sabe in Hillcrest. But there was a snag, and after shopping his résumé around town, he landed at Mediterraneo.

He estimates that about half the restaurant's menu consists of unchanging favorites, "things that, over the years, the chefs have left here." He works with the owner to determine new additions, and occasionally takes input from the customers. "A lot of people asked for Fettucine Alfredo. I changed it to Chicken Primavera; I thought, 'Throw a little bit of vegetables in there, make it a cream sauce...' It's one of our best-sellers now." ■

ook 'em, Danno." Hank says it automatically 'cause the Hawaii Five-O theme's playing as we enter through the door. Then he notices some real detectives, all packing heat, munching into barbecue sandwiches at a table by the window. This is Hank's find: Geno's. It used to be a Taco Bell. Now it's painted cream outside, with a white-tile surfer-dude atmosphere inside. Fishnets hang from the ceiling, surfing pictures bump against surfer road signs ("Longboarder

"Get it?" says Hank.

"D'agh — oh, yeah. Rib-it. I get it." It's crowded.

"First time?" says the guy at the counter. "Yes," I say. And he launches into a first-timer briefing about how they slow-cook their barbecue meats for up to 18 hours, how nothing comes frozen or pre-prepared, how they make their own barbecue sauce and bottle it. He turns out to be Geno

We grab paper menus and head for a table. I look for ribs. They have "Shortboards," pork loin baby back ribs, but I ain't gonna be able to pay their $10.99, $14.99, or $20.99 asking prices. There's a Tailgater quarter chicken for $4.50 (like the ribs, it comes with bread and two sides, such as beans, dirty rice, macaroni). A deal, although if you want chicken breast, it's $7.99, or three pieces for $8.50. The dream item is the D.I.E.T.

("Did I Eat Today?"). It is big enough for two. Half a rack of pork ribs, three pieces of chicken, salad, and cobbler, $24.99. Sigh.

Meantime, Hank's trying to sell me on a salad. "Last time here I almost went for it," he says. "Next table had one. See? 'Fiesta Island, mixed greens, shredded carrots, cabbage' — it's got everything, dude! 'Cheddar cheese, tomatoes, mushrooms, baby corn, pineapple chunks, sautéed onions and chunks of chicken breast or thinly sliced steak, with honey mustard.' Dude, have it. I'll give you half what I'm having.'

"Yeah, but what's that, dude?"

"Wipe Out."

It's number 5, from the sandwich column. Pulled pork and slaw, $5.50. "Plus, dirty rice. You've got to have that here," Hank says. "Geno puts his barbecue sauce in it. Awesome.

In the sandwich column you're paying anywhere from $2.50 for the basic beef dog (number 1, Rip Curl) to $7.50 for number 13, Cajon's Own, chicken-breast sandwich with jack cheese, or number 16, the Un-Burger, basically a Philly of Hmm. I think about Hank's salad, but no. I want something barbecued. I settle on number 9, the Finest City Deluxe sandwich. It has shredded beef, melted jack, and sautéed onions inside.

At the counter, I add a large dirty rice ($2.25) and a corn bread (99 cents) to our order and two small beverages ($1.19 each). ("Get the small," Hank says. "Why pay for a large when you can

I see an old guy is eating a number 9. Name's Ed too. "I'm 92," he says. "I'm from Wichita, Kansas, and this is as good as we got back there. Marion and Philip, munching next to him, nod in agreement. Marion's got a North of the Border burrito with chicken, dirty rice, avo, sour cream ($5.99). "It's huge," she says. "I'm here for Geno's barbecue sauce," says Philip, chewing into his West Coast Philly ($5.99). "It's real hearty."

That's Geno calling from the counter. I go pick up our stuff. We each get big toasted buns wrapping our shredded meats. Mine is great. I mean guer-r-r-eat. You have three choices of Geno's barbecue sauce: Round-up (mild), Giddyup (spicy), or Stampede (hot). None of them is dive-in-the-pool hot. But taste? They have it, and it's infused into the meat, and the meat's tender, and it squishes well with the melted cheese and sautéed onions. I swap half with Hank. And, oh, yes. That pulled pork is to die for.

Take this before I eat it all," says Hank. He hands me the pot of dirty rice. That barbecue flavor's there too. What with the corn bread, you really need the coffee I got to swill it down.

Turns out Geno closed the place during the fires. "We shut the restaurant down and took our catering trailer on the road and just started cooking food for the firefighters up there," says Geno. "Then for the SDG&E boys. You can't believe how grateful they were, and I was trying to tell them we were the grateful ones. They were risking everything on the front lines for us. It was quite an experience."

I notice he has a rack of first prizes for his barbecue sauce. "The important thing for me is not to blow your mouth out with heat, but to enhance the flavors of the meat," he says. "Most folks use powerful chilis like the habanero. But I found a chili nobody uses. It grows wild beside the roads in Mexico. It helps me bridge the gap between ketchup and barbecue sauce. That's why kids love it so much. It's my secret."

He came to restaurant life from corporate America. No regrets? "None. It's like they say about surfing: The best surfer in the world is the one who's having the most fun. I'm having fun."

"I will go through with you and tell you what grapes are in each bottle."

h, Foja Tonda. It's a red wine offering the bitter herbs of the southern Rhone, but in a purer fashion, without the attendant earthiness. It has the high-acid structure so common in Italian wine, but offset by the fleshiness one might find in a California Merlot. Fruit, yes, but deep in the background. A good grape — just complicated enough to be interesting, not so unfamiliar as to be puzzling.

It's a pretty description, and an honest one. But alas, I am no real judge of Foja Tonda. I have tasted only one in my life. I have seen - I have heard of — only one in my life: the one produced by the Albino Armani winery in Italy's Vallagarina region. (This may have something to do with the fact that it is one of the only wineries that bottles Foja Tonda.) It would have been easy to pass through life untouched by this singular wine, had it not been recommended to me by Francesco Pinzauti, the proprietor of Bacchus, a four-month-old downtown wine shop specializing in the wines of Italy.

Pinzauti arrived in San Diego in 1988, after meeting local restaurateur Salvatore Caniglia at a Florentine hotel. Caniglia was having a drink with friends; Pinzauti was tending bar and feeling bored. "I didn't know any English at the time, and I was thinking of going to England to learn. Salvatore said, 'Oh, I have a restaurant in San Diego.' I said, 'Hey, can I come work for you?' He said, 'Sure. Do you speak English?' "Pinzauti exaggerated his expertise a tad, and when he saw Caniglia the next day, he said he was serious about the job. So was Caniglia; when the Italian bartender arrived in San Diego, the restaurateur picked him up and drove him to Salvatore's. There, the two sat down to eat. "He said, 'Okay, let's talk in English now'" and began asking the names of things on the table. Pinzauti successfully shortened forchetta to "fork," and he managed "plate" from piastra. "But the Italian for 'knife' is coltello, which he translated 'colt.' Caniglia gave him two weeks to learn English and put him behind the bar.

He must have learned quickly. Over the next 15 years, Pinzauti worked in a variety of positions at Salvatore's, with stints at a couple of other establishments along the way. Three years ago, he started a day job selling wine for a distributor. He got to know the territory and decided he saw a niche worth filling. He sank his savings into the shop and opened for business in August. So far, he remains hopeful; he has already developed regulars, his tastings attract interest, and several restaurants have agreed to waive corkage for wines purchased at his shop.

He knows he is taking a risk selling wines from only one region, especially when that region is not California, but he says he has reason for hope. "When the first Italian people came over, people considered Italian food to be pizza, spaghetti and meatballs, all that." By the time Salvatore Caniglia opened his eponymous restaurant on the corner of Front and G Streets in 1987, people's gastronomic notions may have expanded somewhat, but still, the only other Gaslamp District Italian eatery Pinzauti can recall from that time is Little Joe's Pizza. "Now, we have 30 different restaurants, just in downtown. People get introduced to new stuff. They know more about Italian food." There is still more, but we've come far enough to allow for Buca di Beppo's self-conscious take on the old red-sauce joints. (Even there, you can find sausage and white beans, utterly bereft of pasta or marinara.) And now that people know more about the food, Pinzauti thinks they may be ready to learn more about the

"In Italy, there are more than a thousand different grapes," he says. "There is more to talk about." His setup, in a brick-wall basement space next door to the Pannikin on G Street, is designed to encourage such talk. Because nearly all the wines are Italian, there is no need for sectional divisions along national lines. But Pinzauti makes few divisions along any lines, regional or varietal, red or white, sparkling or still. "I will go through with you and tell you what grapes are in each bottle," he explains. "I am learning my clients' tastes. A lot of people come and ask me, 'What can I buy?' They always ask for new stuff. Even if they don't buy, there are a lot of people who really spend time. They are surprised there are so many wines, and they want to know more.'

Pinzauti is banking on that curiosity. The shop offers a tongue-tying array of obscure, not to say unheard-of, varietals to accompany the more familiar Barolos, Barbarescos, and Chiantis.

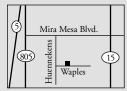

Francesco Pinzauti

But even among the latter, he says, "I don't carry big names, because there is no reason for a guy to come to me and buy it. He can go to the Wine Bank or some other place. Also, I don't think the price is what the wine is really worth. If you spend $300 for a bottle of wine, sure, it's going to be a great wine, but I think it's mostly the name. I can put another Barolo right next to Gaja's, and I can tell you that you'll probably like the other one better and spend $150 less." He is happy to go after collectible wines should the customer ask for them — and there are plenty of expensive bottles — but his focus is less on cellarworthy blockbusters and more on shorter aging and more bang for the buck. "You can pay eight bucks and have a unique, enjoyable wine from Italy," he attests. "If you're talking about a boutique winery from California, you're talking thirty or forty dollars."

In Pinzauti's view, Italy has the advantage over California across the board - price, variety, and rewards for those questing for the New. "I think people who are buying California wine are getting tired of what they're finding, because they're all tasting the same. And do you want to put a sixtyor seventy-dollar California Cabernet up against a Brunello di Montalcino? I have Brunello" — a much-lauded clone of Sangiovese — "for $37." And now that many Italian winemakers are gearing their product more toward the American palate — bigger body, more forward fruit — he hopes American interest in wines like Foja Tonda will only increase. ■

Amici 564 South Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-753-9050. You'll feel like a guest at an intimate party, eating a leisurely dinner in this small, noisy, pretty dining room. Chef Monica Szepesy and her brother, Michael, offer personalized, home-style renditions of South American cuisines, including house-made breads and beverages. (Be sure to try the house's chicha morada, a tangy soft drink made from Peruvian purple corn.) The fare includes nu-merous types of empanadas, tapas-like small plates, and full-size entrées, most from the family homeland, Peru. Desserts vary nightly, and can include a cloud-like tres leches cake. Vegetarian and allergy-restricted diets accommodated. Dinner Tuesday through Saturday; special wine dinners Friday nights, 10 p.m. to midnight. Reservations necessary. Moderate. — N.W. (2/02)

Bistro Soleil 641 South Coast High way 101, Encinitas, 760-942-9549. The fare here is French but not too "Frenchy," in the sunny Provençal style that seems closer to Italy than Paris, with more olive oil than butter, more tomatoes than truffles. Owned by Claude Barrare, a surfing fanatic transplanted from the Atlantic beach town of Biarritz, the bistro recreates the laidback atmosphere of its cousins overseas. Naturally, the Gallic comfort food here is more free-form and Californiafied than you'd find in southern France. Highlights of the seasonally changing menu include classic poached foie gras, an unconventional but tasty bouillabaise, and, when available, a luscious mushroom cream soup. Save room for the ethereal fruit desserts. Dinner, Mondays through Saturdays; reserve on summer weekends. Upper moderate. — N.W. (8/03)

Look for the sign: "Organic Restaurant and Espresso Bar" in front of a restored yellow-and-white Victorian house from O'side's past. All their meats, poultry, fish, and veggies are organic and the menu is full of healthy dishes: tofu/spinach breakfast scramble, frittata espinaca ("Greek eggs") and pain perdu (for us peasants that' French toast) with fresh fruit and syrups. Pescado Veracruz (fish marinated in lime juice and garlic with rice, beans, and green salad) is good. The roasted chicken is delicious. When the sushi bar is free from the weekend rush, the quality can be amazing: stunningly fresh uni, world-beating silky toro. The sushimaster also keeps an eye on the restaurant's seafood purchases, so they meet exacting standards. What the Chef Eats

SCAMPI ALLA DIAVOLO

BY GIUSEPPE "PEPE" VEGA

Chef, Primavera, Coronado

Chef Pepe says Scampi alla Diavolo is taken from an old family recipe and one of his favorite dishes.

Randy Rosa, general manager of Primavera, says that the Scampi Diavolo is one of his favorites as well. Rosa says, "Pepe's kind of funny about actually giving anything out. He made this up.

"Scampi alla Diavolo is one of the most requested items on the menu. A lot of the customers come in just for this dish. We get wonderful compliments. It's a bit of a spicy dish, but that's what makes it interesting.

"As far as the marinara sauce, we make our own here. You can purchase bottled marinara down in Little Italy, but I will twist the chef's arm a little bit and get the recipe for the readers.

"I would serve a Chi-anti or a Cabernet with this dish. Something hearty."

HOW TO DO IT

To prepare the marinara sauce, in a four- or fivequart sauce pot add olive oil and sauté onions until transparent. Add garlic and cook until golden; be sure not to burn. Add basil, carrot, bay leaves (to be removed), and sugar. Continue to sauté, adding Italian seasoning and tomato puree. Stir till blended. Add crushed tomatoes and simmer slowly for approximately 45 minutes. Stir occasionally to prevent sauce from sticking. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Place pasta in a large

"Caprese" (tomatoes-plus) sandwich on focaccia bread with a variety of fill-ings, best served grilled and dressed with pesto. For breakfast, they carry sfogliatelle, light, moist, faintly lemony multilayered breakfast pastries (baked by former owner, Rosanna's, which grew up into a restaurant on Highway 101). The eat-in/take-out menu in cludes pizza, pasta, salads, and a host of sandwiches. Open daily. N.W. (8/03)

Via Italia Pizzeria Trattoria 565 569 South Pacific Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-479-9757. Also at 4705-A Clairemont Drive, Clairemont Square, Clairemont, 858-274-9732.

Don't look for spaghetti and meatballs or Alfredo here — the menu features wonderful, authentic dishes from all over northern Italy (not Naples or Brooklyn). The nightly specials and well-priced Thursday night tasting menus are particularly inspired — they're what Chef Alan Martinelli really feels like cooking. The pizzas (whole pies only) are a must — thin-crusts and dressed with perfect proportions of sauce, cheese, and lovely, simple top-pings. The long, helpful Italian wine list includes bottles at every price range. The downside? At the original branch (in the "Food Court" near the Clairemont mall's theaters), the room is noisy, service can be abrasive, and reservations, while recommended, are not always honored timely. Open daily lunch and dinner. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (6/02)

Hernandez' Hide-Away Rancho Hernandez' Hide-Away Rancho and Lake Drives, Del Dios, Lake Hodges, 760-746-1444. The popular bargain-priced breakfast/brunch on Saturdays and Sundays offers steak and eggs, chilaquiles, sausage, beans, and omelets. At dinner, most tables sport pitchers of margaritas to wash down standard So-Cal gringo-Mex dishes Reservations urged, especially for weekends (when non-reservers may have to wait over an hour for a table); ask for driving directions when you call. Weekend brunch; lunch and dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

La Tapatia 340 West Grand Avenue, dido, 760-747-8282. Take a walk on the mild side at this family-owned favorite, in business since the 1930s. You'll find standard Mexican fare in a comfortable dining room or, in good weather, a lovely, arbor-like stone-walled patio. The most celebrated dish is the "cheese crisp," a large tostada covered one-third in ground beef, one-third in beef chunks, and one-third in beans, with cheese, avocado puree, and sour cream over all. Many preparations (grilled seafoods, etc.) are healthy, and veggies taste fresh. Seasonings are rather detuned, but there's a saltshaker and a lively salsa on the table. Moderate. — N.W. (5/01)

The Wayside Cafe 507 South Main Avenue, Fallbrook, 760-723-9633. Locals love meeting and eating in this long low-porched building — partly because it all just feels small-town America. The place used to be Mahrs' Service Station. You can even sit in the old Lube Bay to eat. Count on generous servings, especially the mountain-piles of red-skinned home-fries as a side at breakfast. Open for breakfast and lunch six days a week; closed Mondays. Inex-

Tony's Giant Pizza 122 El Norte vay, Escondido, 760-738-9121. Tony's claims to serve "New York pizza" and they're not that far off the crust is thin enough (if not quite crisp enough), but what's special here is the honest, gooey mozzarella — it doesn't get stringy when hot or rubbery when cool. You can get plain or pepperoni pizza by the humongous slice (it laps over the plate), and fancier (if still pretty basic) toppings on pies of up to 28 inches. There's also a mean meatball sandwich with small flavorful balls and an okay sauce swathed in that yummy cheese. There are video games for the kids and a neighborly atmosphere, although most orders are take-out or delivery. Inexpensive. — N.W. (5/01)

GOLD COAST

Arterra Marriott Del Mar Hotel, 11966 El Camino Real (off Carmel Mountain Road), Torrey Pines/Del Mar, 858-369-6032 or 858-523-1700. Bradley Ogden and his minions — in-cluding Arterra's Carl Shroeder — do the perfect cuisine for executive-oriented hotels like this Marriott, which is situated in an inhumanly corporate neighborhood. The fare is fine, classy, but not excessively demanding of at tention. Ingredients are seasonal and top-quality, creations are pleasing but not radical. It's a great place to take your boss to dinner. Breakfasts, though, are spectacular, e.g., the airy, bitter-sweet tangerine souffle pancakes may just be the ideal way to jump-start the morning. Open daily, three meals. Expensive. — N.W. (4/02)

Besta Wan Pizza House 148 Aberdeen Drive, Cardiff-by-the-Sea, 760-753-6707. This ever-popular North County restaurant which opened back in 1965 is a family operation all the way. Their thin-crust East Coast-style pizzas are famous locally. Also check for the big-pile spaghetti or lasagna specials if you just want to fill up. Open seven days, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/01)

Pizza Port 135 North Highway 101, Solana Beach, 858-481-7332. (Also in Carlsbad.) "Tasty Grub & Grog," says the sign, and that's just what it is. You come here for three things: the pizzas, the beer, and the scene. The place is cavernous, but the tables are commu nal, with long wooden benches. Rub shoulders with surfers, students, yuppies, and locals. Pizza Port brews their own beer (try Sharkbite Red) and flings their own pizzas, New York style. Fill-ing combos can be great, like the pesto, mesquite-grilled chicken, sun-dried tomatoes, artichoke hearts, and feta ("Pizza Carlsbad"), or shrimp, clams, onions, olives, bell peppers, and mushrooms ("Pizza Solana"). Inexpensive.

Red Tracton's 550 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 858-755-6600. Truly mammoth portions of prime rib, steak, chicken, and fish are served in lovely surroundings. Dinners come with corn on the cob (when in season) or baked potatoes or vegetables. Salads are à la carte, but are enough for two people. Open daily, Expensive, — E,W.

Spices Thai Cafe 3810 Valley Centre Drive, Piazza Carmel Shopping Center, Del Mar (east of Carmel Valley turn-off), 858-259-0889. Superb Thai restaurant that's not only elegant but whose food contains no MSG and very little fat. The seafood dishes rate highly. Among other delicacies are duck and frog legs. Put Spices Thai Café at the top of your list. Also in La Jolla. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Barbarella 2171 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla Shores, 858-454-7373. Don't miss this lively bistro that offers sandwiches, soup, pizza, and entrées. Lively atmosphere. Cafe Japengo 8960 University Center Lane, Aventine complex, La Jolla, 858-450-3355. This hopping "meet market" literally overflows with the area's beautiful go-getters on Thursday and Friday nights, and is almost as busy the rest of the week, too. What draws the crowd, besides the crowd itself, is the smashing decor, breezy patio, and beautiful-looking plates of Pacific Rim food — with influences from Japan, China, Hawaii, Thailand, and California. Outstanding appetizers. For entrées, try roasted duck with crispy vegetables or shrimp and scallops with spicy peanut sauce. The sushi bar is one of the city's best (if you can get to it through the mob). Keep an eye on the if you get carried away you may be in for a large bill. Valet parking (or free validated parking in lower-level garage). Open daily. Expensive. —

Forever Fondue 1295 Prospect Street #201, La Jolla, 858-551-4509 Also at 6110 Friars Road, Mission Valley, 619-295-7792. If you stay with the cheese fondue, house salad, or shrimp with spicy cocktail sauce, you'll have a good meal. Steel plates make the food cold. The prix fixe dinner for two is very affordable, but not necessarily a best buy. Same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily for dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

La Jolla Cantina 2161 Avenida de la Plava (at La Jolla Shores Drive), La Jolla, 858-459-5282. The surprise here is that this is one of those casual coast cantinas where you can relax, get a good meal, and not get gouged with La Jolla prices. Huevos rancheros (three eggs, corn tortillas, beans and rice) and machaca (carne asada, eggs, bell peppers, onions, rice, beans, tortillas) are great, but you can't beat their eggs Benedict (Black Forest ham and two poached eggs smothered in hollandaise sauce). The short-stack pancakes or French toast (made with egg bread, dipped in cinnamon-vanilla batter and dusted with powdered sugar) should give you your sugar fix too. Lunch is great out on the sidewalk (carnitas lunch torta, seared ahi with greens, or lamb in chili sauce are good bets), but the really cool time to come is early evening, when all La Jolla Shores is out on the prowl. Breakfast through dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

The Marine Room 2000 Spindrift Drive (off Torrey Pines Road), La Jolla, 858-459-7222. High cuisine, high adventure, high seas — at only moderately high prices. With chef Bernard Guillas as top toque, the Marine Room has become the quintessential great San Diego restaurant. The exhilarating coastal view meets Cal-French-Pacific Rim cuisine that's as exuberantly out-front as the waves whacking the windows. Guillas's oceanic culinary inventiveness with ultra-fresh, exotic ingredients makes ev-ery visit a voyage of discovery, and preparations are so elaborate that each listing on his precise menu reads like a whole tasting dinner. And the tasting dinners themselves (Monday through Wednesday evenings) are something of a bargain — a royal feast for the price of, say, a fill-up for your SUV. Reser-vations required; slightly dressy but not stuffy. Easiest route: Make a right from westbound Torrey Pines onto Roseland or Viking and go left on St. Louis, which runs into Spindrift. Wheelchair ramp to the left of front door. Noisy when crowded. Lunch Tuesday through Saturday, Sunday brunch, dinner nightly. Expensive. N.W. (9/02)

Michele Coulon Pastries 7556-D Fay Avenue (across the street from Vons parking lot), La Jolla, 858-456-5098. The daughter of Don Coulon (retired chef/owner of The Belgian Lion restaurant) and her son preside in turn at this delightful little café/bakery. (Look for it behind the octagonal sandwich shop that fronts its mini-mall.) Every ingredient is fresh and of top quality. Cakes are light, moist, rich, and available as wholes, slices, and even "miniatures," plus you can choose tarts, chocolates, ice creams, and breakfast pastries. At lunch there are European-style salads, house-made paté, fresh vegetables, and two or three substantial entrées — often including ductive quiche Lorraine featuring a light, satiny cheese custard in a crumbly crust. Wine and Belgian ales available. Open daily, breakfast through late af-ternoon; during the summer, dinners available on Friday and Saturday nights until 11 p.m. Moderate. — N.W. (5/02)

P.F. Chang's China Bistro 4540 La Jolla Village Drive, La Jolla, 858-458-9007. The decor and am-biance carry the weight here. Chinese food is only average. This is a place to see and be seen. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Dinner menu available from opening to closing. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

MISSION VALLEY & THE MESAS

King's Fish House 825 Camino de la Reina (west of Mission Center Drive), Mission Valley, 619-574-1230. To find King's in the megamall, go slightly west of Koo Koo Roo and follow the line of cars to the free valet parking. It's a chain, but it's a classy chain, offering fish and seafoods of a quality that's well above average, including crustaceans from a live-tank and a half-dozen varieties of pristine ovsters. Generously-sized entrées come vith soup or salad (including a Caesar that's above suspicion) and two hefty side dishes. The vast menu of American-style preparations changes daily to reflect the fresh catch, and includes some rotating regional specialties (e.g., New Orleans, Hawaii, New England). Don't miss the prawn potsticker appetizer, if available, and for dessert, the miraculously light bread pudding. The atmosphere is good-timey (with two patios and a barroom as well as a dining room), the service is enthusiastic, and the management will accommodate special requests if you call ahead. Kiddie menu available. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (5/02)

Pho Tau Bay Restaurant 7604 Linda Vista Road (near Mesa College), Linda Vista, 858-268-3161. Full name: La Cai Mi Gia, va Pho Tau Bay. The building looks like a converted Mc-Donald's, but the interior is oriental and swanky with large fish tanks, blue carpet, gold metallic wainscotting, silk roses, a golden three-foot-tall laughing Buddha, and a red altar with three black-bearded gods. For lunch and din-ner you can choose such exotics as quail, boar, alligator, and "Spicy Chop duan, boar, angator, and sprey Chop Frog in Coconut Milk and Curry." Breakfast is cheap, filling, and very Vietnamese. Try mi ga, a gentle rice noodle soup with shredded chicken, or order banh mi thit, eight inches of French bread with traditional South Vietnamese beef stew. Puzzled? Ask for Mr. Le. Three meals, daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (11/00)

Sam Woo Bar-B-Q Restaurant 7330 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard #A103, Clairemont Mesa, 858-505-9888. Sam Woo is one of a bunch of restaurants inside the "99 Ranch" Asian supermarket. Great idea — you're never supposed to grocery shop while hungry. Next to the checkout counter you can savor some primo Hong Kong delicacies — without busting the bank. BBQ pork and roast duck rice or the BBQ "Two Delicacy" Combination will fill you nicely.

Tung kong salty chicken or soy-braised pork intestine are interesting. Honey-glazed walnut shrimp is easy to love. But the quickest, healthiest choice is probably jook, Chinese rice porridge. You can get it garnished with pork organs, beef, seafood, sliced pork, preserved egg with duck... this is not your mama's oatmeal. Then there's House Tea With Pearl — iced tea with boba (caramelized tapioca balls) floating in it. You suck the boba up with the tea through the triple-wide straw and chew. Isn't this the way shopping should be? Daily, 9 a.m. to midnight. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

San Tong Palace 4690 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-571-6837. This unassuming, strip-mall restaurant is easy to overlook, but once found, impossible to resist. San Tong's hybrid Korean-Chinese menu draws from these regions' tastiest styles. The Rain-bow Salad demonstrates this combination deliciously, and San Tong's dumplings are outstanding. The seafood dumplings are especially remarkable. For the adventurous, I recommend the jellyfish salad, a novel treat for westerners. At San Tong Palace, curious appetites are rewarded well. Inexpensive. — M.N. (4/99)

Tofu House 4646 Convoy Street. Kearny Mesa, 619-576-6433. This stylish little eatery is proof positive that our city has matured for its specialty ethnic foods. Tofu House is a Korean restaurant serving up specialty tofu dishes. Flavorful, healthy foods. I highly recommend the soontofu soups (beef, pork, seafood, or mushroom) with raw egg drop you drop yourself and a side of tasty fresh kimchee. Deliver yourself from sorrowfully generic foreign

THE BEACHES

Cafe Athena Pacific Mall, 1846 Garnet Avenue (at Lamont), Pacific Beach, 858-274-1140. With a more upscale, eye-catching decor and a longer and more serious menu than most Greek cafés, this is a popular destination, so be sure to reserve for dinner or you'll risk a long wait. The choices include good soups and appetizers (except for a sub-par taramasalata), outstanding moussaka, above-average gyros, and interesting, unusual desserts. There's plenty for vegetarians. Rather noisy when crowded. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (3/02)

Go Greek Cafe and Grill 4501 Mission Bay Drive (mall with 7-Eleven and Sushi Ota), Pacific Beach, 858-270-4487. Located in the same easy-to-miss mini-mall as Sushi Ota, across the street from Rubio's (look for the 7-Eleven sign), this informal Greek café is better than it looks. The taramasalata (codfish roe salad) may not be house-made, but the delicious spread is straight from Greece. Excellent house salad, stuffed grape leaves, lentil soup, saganaki for additional starters; fine homey moussaka and grilled fish are among the entrées (but gyros are ordinary), and the exotic rice pudding makes a light dessert. Vegetarianfriendly menu. Belly dancing Friday nights. Open Monday through Saturday, lunch and dinner; sporadically on Sunday. Low moderate. — N.W. (3/02)

Harbor Island Fuel Dock 2040 Harbor Island Drive, Harbor Island, 619-291-6443. (If dock gate is closed, go to Harbor Island West Marina office by ramp, 619-291-6440, for pass.) You want to flash back to old waterfront San Diego? Come where the real salts eat, at this dinky, little timber shack floating out in the channel on a pontoon. Enter and look for the glassfronted cooler. Your choice: bagel dogs, burritos, a "Pierre Jumbo Flamebroiled Jalapeño Cheeseburger," or Pierre's "Jumbo Bar-B-Q Chicken Breast Patty Sandwich." That's it. Heat in the self-serve microwave, maybe grab a cerveza, go out, sit on a bench, and watch the waterworld go by. Open seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (4/03)

Kaiserhof 2253 Sunset Cliffs Boulevard, Ocean Beach, 619-224-0606. Even on weeknights, crowds fill this restaurant and biergarten, chowing down on hefty, hearty German cooking in a festive atmosphere. Flavors are authentic, but can be monotonous due to kitchen s reliance on commercial products (especially a heavy-flavored beef base that makes all the sauces taste alike). Good schnitzels, potato pancakes. The excellent apple strudel is the only dessert made in-house. Reservations advised, especially for patio seating. Full bar. Lunch Friday through Sunday, dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Moderate. — N.W. (6/02)

Lotsa Pasta 1762 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 858-581-6777. The menu of this large, loud family restaurant offers a clever gimmick: You pick your noodles (from 9 flavors, 6 shapes, plus 7 stuffed pastas), then choose one of 17 sauces to dress them. For a little extra, you can add ingredients such as garlic shrimp, bread-heavy meatballs, or good spicy sausage, or create a pasta-combo. Entrées come with salad or soup (with 3 flavor choices either way) and garlic bread. But don't expect authentic Italian cooking, or even Italian-American; the fare is more small-town American-Italian, with uniformly thick pastas, mainly weighty sauces, and copious wafts of oregano. (The vodka sauce and Thai peanut sauce aren't too bad.) The biggest deal here is timpano, a bread-shell enclosing a cornucopia of pastas, sauces, cheeses, and meats (made famous by the movie The Big Night). A retail counter offers most items for take-home do-it-yourself. Wines are cheap, and taste like it. Open daily, lunch through dinner. Inexpen sive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Reuben E. Lee 880 Harbor Island Drive, Harbor Island, 619-291-1880. This docked faux-riverboat replica serves seafood without a sea breeze the windows are sealed and it can get stuffy when the weather's warm. The food can be inconsistent. Best bets are an appetizer of steamed clams and a surprisingly authentic, zesty bouillabaisse. Otherwise, the cooking style tends to be corporately cautious. No disability access, but you can order from this menu downstairs at sisterrestaurant Jared's. Dinner Wednesday through Saturday. Bargain-priced buffet Friday evening includes all their best items. Otherwise, expensive. — N.W. (9/01)

Thee Bungalow 4996 West Point Loma Boulevard, Ocean Beach, 619-224-2884. The very soul of Ocean Beach resides in Ed Moore's charming, comfortable historic "cottage," where the menu covers classic French bistro fare from pâté to soufflé, including comfort-food entrées like grandmaman used to make. And like mamhre's, the cooking is a little inconsistent. Skip the over-rated duck and head for the seasonal specials, the rich stews, and — of course — the pâtés and soufflés. When the peppery corn soup is on the menu, leap for it. A huge wine list at very low markups is a special blessing. Slightly dressy; reservations strongly advised. Expensive, but with affordable early-bird weeknight dinners. — N.W. (11/00)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Asmara Restaurant 4433 El Cajon Boulevard (at Fairmount), City Heights, 619-563-3666. The fare here is Eritrean (which proves very similar to Ethiopian) and the menu is long and uncommonly interesting. The three-meat combination platter is a terrific array of chicken (tsebhi derho, a.k.a. yedoro wat on Ethiopian menus), beef (gored-gored) and lamb (al'cha), each in a distinctive treatment. From the à la carte choices, consider zilzil t'bsi, chargrilled meat in butter, and kulwa, a sprightly stir-fry. Luscious vegetables, too. A porous pancake, injera, serves as an edible spoon and edible tablecloth — use pieces of it to scoop up morsels. Food is seasoned to your specifications, and "hot" means seriously spicy. Vegetarian-friendly. Rest rooms not wheelchair-accessible. Can be noisy on weekends. Cash only. Lunch and dinner daily. Inexpensive. — N.W. (11/00)

El Morelense 317 Dewey Street, Logan Heights, 619-234-2750. Morelosstyle cooking: more pungent than Cal-Mex or Tex-Mex. The Cecina (a kind of carne asada), served with rice, beans, and tortillas, is richly marinated and filling, as is the carne de adobada (pork dish), caldo de res (beef soup), huevos rancheros, and menudo or pozole soup (weekends only) are worth trying. Owner Santos, a true Morelense, makes all dishes from scratch, including salsas and tortillas. This used to be a tough area, but the new central police station next door has helped change all that. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/01)

Island Spice 2820 Market Street (at 28th Street), Grant Hill, 619-702-9309. Interesting Jamaican specialties are served indoors or on a sunny patio. Breakfast can include run dung (sautéed salt mackerel) and ackee with salt cod. At lunch and dinner there's fine jerk chicken (ask for dark meat, it's moister), but don't overlook lesserknown delicacies such as savory oxtait stew, escovitch (pickled) fish, curry goat, and fish or chicken in a tangy brown stew. Dinner hours and offerings vary, and many patrons get takeout. Call just before you go to learn what's available and place your order. Inexpensive. — N.W. (2/01)

Mailo's Cafe 4095 30th Street, North Park, 619-528-1602. OK, so Mailo's is a Greek café and Mailo and Blanca aren't Greek, they're Mexican-American. On the other hand, Mailo cooked in an OB Greek restaurant for 14 years before he opened here. Plus, the two have made Greek extremely affordable. Prices are definitely down there for their breakfast gyros, with eggs, lamb, tomatoes, and onion wrapped in a hot pita. And they have this great street-corner outside deck to eat on. There's also plenty of American standard fare. Mailo's cheeseburger, with avocado and bacon, is the most popular, with the half-pound steak burger close be-

Sister Pee Wee's Soul Food 2971-1/2 Imperial Avenue, Grant Hill, 619-236-0470. One of the oldest, best soul food cafés in the county, but get there early (it closes at 8 p.m.). Sister Pee Wee says her daily lunch and dinner menu depends on what she feels like cooking that day — you might find big pork ribs with mashed red-skin potatoes, black-eyed peas, collard greens and two-inch-thick corn bread, or Southern-fried chicken, or seafood gumbo, or catfish fillet with all the trimmings. Sister's special is chitlins and catfish. Breakfast includes eggs, bacon, ham, sausages, and hominy grits. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

Izzy's Cafe 1252 Broadway, El Cajon, 619-447-5067. Good-ol'-boy eatery in the middle of Box Town. You're looking for quantity? You've come to the right spot. Izzy's — named after co-owner Lorrie Sellers's middle name, Isabel - is all cream walls, country-scene pictures, little wooden hanging milk bottles. They have great breakfasts, two guaranteed to test your belt buckle: chicken-fried chicken in country gravy, with two eggs, potatoes, and bread; or "Izzy's Frittata Bar," an open-faced omelet with spuds and biscuits and gravy. You can add anything from sausage to zucchini — up to four ingredients - without paying extra. Or, oatmeal or a short stack will fill you just fine and leave you with more walkingabout money. Breakfast and lunch till 2 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (4/03)

Mario's De La Mesa 8425 La Mesa Boulevard (at Grant), La Mesa, 619-461-9390. The man on the burro (seen on the restaurant's sign and menu) holds two flags, those of Mexico and the U.S.A.—very appropriate. Few dishes (except maybe the menudo) will push the paler palate too far in any literature in the second of the control of the second of th direction, but gosh-all, everything is so darn tasty. Tamales are a house special: rich, pillowy clouds of cornmeal surrounding richer shredded pork scat-tered with raisins for a smidgeon of sweetness. Pork also gets loving treatment in the carnitas rojas, big chunks browned to the barest crisp, which falls away to melting tenderness. Great marinade (cumin?) on the carne asada; intense flavor and buttery richness on the "machaca sonora style" (dryroasted shredded beef). Beans are so light as to seem whipped; rice is studded with peas and spicy carrots. Service is fast and friendly. Breakfast and lunch Sundays and Mondays; three meals Tuesdsay through Saturday. In-expensive. — A.M. (7/01)

Orchid Thai and Vegetarian Cuisine 762 North Johnson Avenue #106, El Cajon, 619-447-2819. There's nothing fancy or pretentious about this Thai restaurant, but their food is really, really good. Menu is a mixture of Thai, Lao, and Chinese. Best deal: the fifteen permanent lunch specials, from pep-per steak (given a Thai twist) to chicken yellow curry to Orchid Noodle ("Thai egg noodle, chicken, broccoli celery, carrot, egg and scallions"). Larb, the Laotian ground chicken salad, is delicious and filling, as is the masaman, curry with potatoes, onion, carrots, and roasted peanuts mixed in sweet coconut milk. Other tasty dishes include prik pow beef, som tum (papaya salad), panang curry, and mee ped (roast duck) noodle soup. Because he replaced a Chinese eatery, the owner, Montry Sengsouriya, keeps dishes like chicken chow mein and a Japanese-style beef teriyaki bowl on the menu. Finish up with a tiny bottle of Kratin Daeng, Red Bull. It s a vitamin elixir the Thais and Lao love to glug for energy. Open for lunch and dinner; closed Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (6/02)

Shmoozers Kosher Dairy Restaurant 6366 El Cajon Boulevard (at 63rd Street), College Area, 619-583-1636. Great for vegans! This Kosher eatery promises "all-rennetless cheese, vegetarian food, no meat, no animal fat, certified Kosher, 100% fresh ingredients." Everything is prepared under the supervision of the "Va'ad Harabbonim of San Diego" — meaning, the restaurant is inspected every few days by an Orthodox rabbi to make sure the food is prepared properly. The milk is also checked - Chalav Yisroel — from milking to bottling. Good eats include "Felafel, California Style," balls of seasoned ground chickpeas, tahini (sesame paste), and salad rolled in a flour tortilla; the 16-inch vegan pizza; and breaded whiting fillets with chips or salad. Closed Fridays. Open Saturdays from one hour after sunset until 11 p.m.; Sunday to Thursday, Woodstock's Pizza 6548 El Cajon Boulevard (at Rolando), College Area, 619-265-0999. It's a college pizza joint, but the fare rates well above standard beer ballast. (For that matter, the beers — local Stone Pale Ale, Karl Strauss, Arrogant Bastard Ale, and Wyder's Pear Cider, along with the usual Coors Light and Bud — aren't exactly chug-suds.) Crusts - white or sweetly robust whole wheat — are pressed, tossed, and then folded over at the edge, producing a spongy, crunch-crusted rim. The Mozzarella is rich, gooey whole-milk; the marinara sauce is dark and spicy; and the toppings are fresh, hearty standouts. Watching your weight? Two low-fat combos (half the cheese) are available. Happy hour with cut-price beer, etc., 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. to midnight. Inexpensive.

FAR EAST

The Hideout Steakhouse and Saloon 27413 Highway 76, Santa Ysabel, 760-782-3656. If you're a Harley-Davidson weekend warrior, this is for you: an old dark timbered roadhouse peeking out of the trees, with its own spring-fed water wheel, 3000 feet up the mountains. Back in the thirties, Hollywood celebs (Roy Rogers, Alfalfa, et al.) used to hang out here on huntin' and fishin' trips. Now, bike enthusiasts make it their weekend day-trip destination. It still has a 1920s fireplace roaring at one end, a big pot-belly stove at the other, a honky-tonk upright piano, and a forty-foot-long oakwood bar. Prime rib dinners are the default dish, smoked in hickory and oak, and served with a "Texas-sized baked potato," veg-etables, salad, and squaw bread. Other great eats include a delicious prime rib chili (chunks of smoked prime rib, red beans, cheese, onions) and a halfpound "Posse Burger" (with baked beans). Open Friday through Sunday only. Inexpensive to moderate. -E.B. (5/02)

The Mount Signal Cafe 1201 West Highway 98, Calexico, 760-357-1379. Out in Yuha desert, west of Calexico. this 40-year-old restaurant remains in the era when Mexicali and Tijuana were rivals for the best bullfighters and bulls north of Mexico City. The owner's mom, Maria de Jesus, was a bander-illera, known to fans as "Manolita," a member of perhaps the only female bullfighting team ever. Surrounded by hundreds of bullfighting photos, you'll find traditional casera (homestyle) Mexican dishes. Keep an eye out for old matadors as you dig in. Open Wednesday through Sunday, lunch and early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Owl Cafe 674 Main Street, El Centro, 760-352-3951. This classic American café is over 50 years old and still serves good rib-sticking food morning, noon, or night. Try breakfast special #1: pancakes, two eggs, and two bacon strips. For lunch, the French dip sandwich. Full-plate dinners — and they are full - include roast beef, liver and onions, and chicken-fried steak. Open 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday (bar open until 2 a.m.), 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Sundays. Inexpensive. -E.B. (8/01)

UPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Alex's Brown Bag 2550 Fifth Avenue (at Laurel Street), Suite 171, uptown, 619-231-2912. The reborn Alex's (now in the Mr. A's building) is rightly famous for its "Original Philadelphia cheese steak sandwich" (with fried bell peppers, onions, mushrooms, and mozzarella). Benito Guidagni savs what makes his sandwiches so special is that he has the meat trucked in from cheese steak central, South Philly itself, Other Italian-American goodies include the Italian Stallion (Genoa salami, capocolla prosciutto, and mortadella sausage meat), egg plant parmigiana with hot garlic bread, grilled pastrami, and cheese on rye. Partly, of course, you come to see Benny and his family at oupon per couple. Not valid for small pasta dish, 7" pizza or with any other or specials. Excludes pasta bucket. Dine-in only. With this ad. Expires 12/10/03.

Arrivederci 3845 Fourth Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-299-6282. The chef has cooked at major European hotels and the food is outstanding. You won't go wrong with any of the pastas, and you may order small portions in combination. The appetizers and salads are also excellent. Chicken and shrimp fare well here. Modest physical plant, but it delivers in flavor and light preparations. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Busalacchi's Ristorante 3683 Fifth Avenue, uptown, 619-298-0119. If you like old-fashioned Sicilian-style cook tons of tomato sauce, olive oil, and garlic - then try this converted cottage which serves it. Lots of pasta dishes, veal, chicken, and fish. Lunch, Monday through Friday; dinner nightly. Moderate to expensive.

Gelato Vero Caffe 3753 India Street, Mission Hills, 619-295-9269. A fine spot for Italian sorbettos and ice creams, pastries of all kinds, and cof-fees. Diners can read undisturbed indoors or, weather permitting, outside. Open daily. — $E.\hat{W}$.

Harney Sushi 3694 Harney Street (off Congress), Old Town, 619-295-3272. This friendly little spot on a side street serves as a secret haven of pretty-good sushi just a few steps from Old Town's nonstop tacos and margaritas. You can also get sashimi, Japanese appetizers, and a few mixed-ethnicity entrées (noodles, pasta, teriyaki, tempura) made with seafood or chicken breast. No red meat is served, and numerous dishes are vegetarian. Good sake list. Sound system runs loud inside; patio dining available in warm weather. Reservations for sushi bar accepted but not necessarily honored. Open weekdays for lunch, dinner nightly until midnight, with a DJ on Friday and Saturday. Sushi prices lower than most, entrées inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Jimmy Carter's Cafe 3172 Fifth Avenue (at Spruce Street), Hillcrest, 619-295-2070. This comfy, middleclass eatery has a surprise - great Indian breakfasts (until 11:30 a.m. weekdays, 3 p.m. weekends). Try their chicken curry or pessaratu (mung bean crêpe with onions, peppers, ginger, dhal, and chutneys). Or vegetarian vin-daloo. Jimmy (no, not the ex-pres) does Chinese too — like the Mongolian beef (Chinese vegetables and beef in a hot chili sauce over rice or noodles), or ood Mexican dishes such as chili verde (pork or chicken simmered in spicy tomatillo sauce). But center-stage is his all-American Jimmy Burger (1/3-pound patty with potato or carrot salad). One bonus: a fine tangential view of Balboa Park's lawns and trees. Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Old Town Mexican Cafe 2489 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 619-297-4330. This boisterous café is noted for its excellent breakfasts, served from opening to closing. Try also the rotisserie-roasted chicken, the carnitas, or the fajitas. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Prado House of Hospitality, Balboa Park, 619-557-9441. In a magical space at the heart of Balboa Park, Prado features cute neo-Nouveau decor and a something-for-everyone menu of American-Mexican-Italian-with-Asian-touches cuisine. The food brings few surprises, but is flavorful and served in huge portions. Top choices include meaty crab cakes, a refreshing eggplant "napoleon," and an astonishingly tender, slow-roasted pork loin. A meringue-based banana tres leches cake is everyone's favorite dessert. The bar makes a nice stop during a museumcrawl and offers ethereal fried oysters and a range of gussied-up margaritas. Keep an eye out for special prix fixe dinners that include tickets to museum exhibitions. Dinner reservations vital. Vast interior can be noisy, but heated, umbrella-topped terrace tables are quiet and scenic. Moderate to a little expensive, with reasonable wine list. – N.W. (12/00)

Speakers' Corner British Pub & Grill 2664 Fifth Avenue (near Nutmeg Street), Banker's Hill, 619-232-5456. Think British and most people will go straight to the Shakespeare or Princess Pub. But Speakers' Corner boasts a loyal following of Brits and Colonials — and lots of locals — who come not only to drink, play darts, and exchange job tips, but also to eat. Yes, the food's awfully British, but not that awful. The fish and chips are darned good, with the batter made daily. Curried chicken pizza is clearly a transfer from the Raj, Britain's "Inja" adventure. And, de rigueur to any red blooded Englishman, steak and kidney pie, steak and mushroom pie, shep herd's pie, or bangers (sausages) and mash are always on the menu. Best deal: fish and chips at lunchtime. Lunch to late dinner, six days; kitchen closed Sundays, Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

Sui Shin of Hillcrest 420 Robinson Avenue (at Fourth), Hillcrest, 619-692-9832. At Sui Shin ("Chic Spirit"), you can sit and sip tea for hours between lunch and dinner. But early evening, make way for cool San Diego's lotus eaters and sake drinkers. The place has red walls, bamboo, a black sushi bar, and a gold-draped ceiling. There's a wild assortment of sushi and sashimi, from bluefin tuna to freshwater eel. Rice bowl dishes like Japanese curry are cheap and filling. Best bang for the buck? The bento box gives you miso soup, a California roll, edamame (soybean pods), tofu salad, rice and teriyaki chicken, and curry or sashimi. Tea? Go for powerful bin #923, Pu Erh black. Dinner only, Tuesday through Sunday; open to 1 a.m. weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

Taste Of Szechuan 670 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-291-1668. The Mandarin Szechuan menu offers standards with few surprises. But the three best features are the lovely room, the astonishing friendliness of the management, and the late hours. The Peking duck is excellent and so is the chopped chicken in lettuce cups. If you have favorite dishes, they will be prepared upon request in advance. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Zocalo Grill 2444 San Diego Avenue (a block north of Old Town Cemetery). Old Town. 619-298-9840. This casual, festive spinoff of the Brigantine chain features "Pacific coastal cuisine," an eclectic international hodgepodge with a faint Mexican accent and "something for everyone." And some of those somethings are delicious — a stacked salad of shrimp and avocados, or co-conut-shrimp kebabs emerging from a pineapple, or a huge, beautifully grilled spiny lobster with avocado salsa. Appetizers are half price at happy hour, and vou can make a whole dinner out of substantial "tapas" sized for sharing. The heated, semi-roofed outdoor terrace encourages al fresco dining year-round. Full bar with creative margaritas, eight draft beers, and California wines including Brigantine's own cus-tom blends at good prices. Wheelchair lift in back, ramp at south side of terrace. Reservations strongly advised for weekends. Open daily, lunch through dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (10/02)

DOWNTOWN

days 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Broadway Pizza 1008 Broadway (at 10th Street), downtown, 619-232-6264. This restaurant, near the downtown Senior Center and City College, offers no-nonsense Italian-American food. And they're not skimpy: from a pizza slice to barbecue beef sandwiches to a Louisiana-style sausage link sub, portions are generous. If you want a hearty dinner, try the whole slab of beef ribs, with veggies, garlic bread, and salad. Unfortunately, the quality has dropped; the formerly fine pizza, for instance, is now marred by oily, low-grade Mozzarella and not-so-great optional deli-meat toppings. But the main thing is, while the rest of downtown snores, they're still open, from 10 a.m. to to 3 a.m., seven days. And they'll even deliver to nearby neighborhoods. Inexpensive. — N.W. (9/03)

Downtown Johnny Brown's

1220 Third Avenue (in the Community Concourse at Third and B), downtown, 619-232-8414. Walk up through the Community Concourse past the ship fountain and bingo! — downtown's answer to a European sidewalk café. Place has a generous patio of chairs and umbrellas. All green and white. You get two types here: sport-minded types (a dozen TV screens, Chargers, Padres, Aztecs banners inside), and city government workers. Burgers are good, but try the breast of chicken burger with soup of the day. Chicken's grilled, edge-burnt, spicy. Soup's bobbing with fresh-cut vegetables. Also, salads: taco or Southwest Chicken. What's best: sitting outside and watching people — not traffic — bustle by. — E.B. (4/03)

Dublin Square 554 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-239-5818. The entire pub was hand-crafted in Waterford, shipped over, and installed (by Irish craftsmen) in the Gaslamp. The exterior indeed resembles a real (but very new) Dublin pub; the interior has au thentically dim lighting and spirited Irish music including live bands (acoustic but loud) during Happy Hours and some evenings. If you're looking for food, too, there's a shockingly fine corned beef and cabbage, reingly fine corned beef and cabbage, re-sembling the corned beef of Katz's Deli on the Lower East Side — it's that wee touch o' the garlic that does the trick. Other choices include Guinness beef stew, shepherd's pie (made with ground beef), chicken pot pie, steaks, lamb chops, fish and chips, and grilled fish plus standard pub grub. Lunch fish, plus standard pub grub. Lunch and dinner (including Irish breakfast any time) daily. Moderate. — N.W. (3/02)

Momo 555 Market Street (at Sixth Avenue), Gaslamp, 619-231-9000. A 15,000-square-foot room done in American Provincial style boasts 150 feet of Asian-style seafood buffet. There are literally hundreds of buffet selections: salads, iced seafood, cooked seafood, meat and chicken dishes, fried Asian appetizers, teppan-yaki, a couple of soups, sushi and sashimi, and a host of desserts. Most of it is, alas, of pedes-trian quality, and it gains no flavor by sitting there hoping somebody will eat it. Go early for the freshest food. Some sushi available made-to-order. Good sake list includes Momokawa Pearl. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (10/02)

Old World Restaurant 452 Eighth Avenue (at J Street), downtown, 619-238-0568. This is a delight for anyone who loves Northern European food. Their "Great Grilled Grueben" homemade corned beef on rye with Swiss cheese, sauerkraut, Thousand Island dressing, and mustard is, as they say, "gemütlich." Also, try the sausage platter: grilled bratwurst, kielbasa, sauerkraut, potato salad, spicy mustard, and rye bread. Open for breakfast and lunch weekdays, brunch and lunch on Saturdays. Inexpensive. -E.B. (8/01)

Ruth's Chris Steak House 1355 North Harbor Drive, downtown, 619-233-1422. Six cuts of steak are available, all cooked in a special broiler at 1800 degrees. The U.S. prime steaks are aged and hand cut daily. They're fabulous, but nothing is on the plate except the piece of meat. Vegetables and eight styles of potatoes are à la carte. Lobster tail, fresh fish, chicken, and chops also available. Gorgeous view and service. Open nightly for dinner. Reservations recommended three to five days in advance on weekdays. Call a week in advance for weekends. Expensive. — E.W.

Sally's on the Water Manchester Grand Hyatt, One Market Square (Market and Harbor Drive, adjacent to Seaport Village), downtown, 619-687-6080. On an isolated "island" between the Hyatt and Seaport Village, in fair weather you'll catch great marina views from the terrace. The fare is Cal-ifornia-French with a summery Provencal accent and an accent or seafood; the dishes are tossed off with ease and consummate assurance by Alsatian chef Stephane Voitzwinkler. Don't miss the exquisite crab cakes (fresh Maryland blue crab with minimal interference) or the tender salmon en croute. Among the entrées, the porcini-crusted ahi and the classic bouillabaisse are worthy of attention. If you'd like to know what the chef can do when he isn't limited by the conservative tastes of hotel diners, you can book 'The Chef's Table" inside the kitchen for six to twelve people with 48 hours notice, and collaborate with him on a custom menu. Sally's interior is hardedged modern and can be noisy. Full bar, good mainly-California wine list. Validated parking in hotel garage. Call for wheelchair-access directions. Lunch and dinner daily. Expensive. N.W. (12/02)

Sevilla 555 Fourth Avenue (at Market Street), Gaslamp, 619-233-5979. (Also in Carlsbad.) This site has three faces: a crowded but civilized tapas bar for spontaneous snacking, a romantic dining room with serious Spanish entrées, and a basement nightclub dishing out assembly-line paella. The best food is upstairs. You can get tapas in the restaurant and entrées at the bar, and in either case the choices are varied, interesting, and highly cosmopolitan, executed with wonderful consistency. Be sure to look for something that includes potatoes; the humble spud gets Cin-derella treatment here. No reservations (or wheelchairs) at tapas bar; reservations strongly recommended for dining room. Moderate. — N.W. (2/01)

The Snack Galley Greyhound Depot, 120 West Broadway, downtown, 619-234-4522. At 4:00 in the morning you don't expect Cordon Bleu, Pink, or any other color. The great thing about Snack Galley is that it's open at all. If you can get past the sleeping bodies, ask for the breakfast sandwich: bread stuffed with egg, cheese, and bacon, sausage, or ham. Sausage is best — it feels like you get more to munch. Order a large coffee to wake you up, or sober you up, whatever you need. Open 24/7. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Tamale Cart Outside Rancho Fresco, 1852 National Avenue, Barrio Logan, 619-338-9140. If you've ever wondered what it would be like to eat as the Aztecs ate, come here and try some of the tamales — classic Aztec food — in all their flavors. Tamales are sort of steamed cornmeal dumplings wrapped in corn husks, served with sauce. The choice of goodies stuffed in the middle can include strips of pork, beef, chicken, or cheese, as well as pineapple, strawberries, or coconut. While you're at it, try the traditional accompaniment, the champurrado drink: milk mixed with masa — ground corn meal — chocolate, and cinnamon. In this mainly Spanish-speaking market you can sit, watch, and pick up a few bargains too. Tamales make a great breakfast. Three should do you. These are made by the Restaurant Chiapaneco up at 25th and Market. Open breakfast through late lunch, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B (10/02)

Top of the Market 750 North Harbor Drive, downtown, 619-234-4867. The upper-crust upper floor of the downtown Fish Market (see Multiple Locations listing) has largely the same food as the downstairs, plus a few lux-ury items (e.g., abalone) and occasionally some creative appetizer specials. Prices are about 25% higher for identical items, in exchange for a slightly elevated view and a dressier, white-tablecloth setting that's almost "for-mal" by San Diego standards — flipflops and tank tops (on men) aren't allowed, and collared shirts (e.g., polos) are suggested at dinner. That doesn't mean that the atmosphere is quietly gracious — the room's just as huge, packed, and raucous as the lower realms, even on the terrace. Reserve, and expect a short wait anyway. Elevator provides wheelchair access. Open daily. Expensive. — N.W. (9/01)

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

Clayton's Mexican Take-Out 979 Orange Avenue (round corner on Tenth, at the back of Clayton's Coffee Shop), Coronado, 619-437-8811. It's a hole-in-the-wall, it's where Coronado High School and the military come for their Mexican fix, and it might just have one of the best carne asada burritos north of the line. Especially when Manuel's on. He gives you lots of meat. There are other good things, like rolled tacos, chicken tostadas, cheese enchiladas, and combination plates, but nearly everyone asks for the burrito. It has to weigh over a pound. Inexpensive. — $E.B.\ (4/03)$

Crown Room, Hotel Del Coronado 1500 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-6611, ext. 7284. Open only for Sunday brunch and special events. The food is competent, but the room is outstanding, especially the crown-shaped ceiling. Expensive. -

The Family House of Pancakes 562 Broadway (across from Chula Vista Center), Chula Vista, 619-425-5133. This is a great place for three things: your family, your kids, and your appetite. The restaurant is famous for its "Grandma's" buckwheat pancakes, its banana-pecan ncake, and its rolled pancakes, oozing with berries and topped with cream and with berries and topped with cream and powdered sugar. Just try and survive their 8-12 egg omelet! Other good bets include a deluxe burger with French fries, tomatoes, and house sauce, and a grilled tuna sandwich with fries. Breakfast/lunch only, seven days. Inexpensive. – E.B. (11/00)

Flamingo Cafe 396 Broadway (at G Street), Chula Vista, 619-691-1076, Generations have been coming to the Flamingo ever since its grand opening in July, 1925, when it was a lone building amidst the vegetable fields. Regulars on fixed incomes form the backbone of this institution, so the meal deals are real: hearty portions of chipped beef on toast, meatloaf sandwiches with fries, or lunch specials like half a sandwich and a cup of soup. One favorite: the beef stew special a "Sundowner" special. Open 24 hours, 7 days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Grandma's Pantry Restaurant and Bakery 875 Seacoast Drive, Imperial Beach, 619-424-5800. Kids will appreciate Grandma's notice — pinned above a heap of cheesecakes, pies, and cakes — that says "Enjoy Life More: Eat Dessert First." The menu ranges from Belgian breakfast waffles heaped with strawberries and cream to "Hot Juan" frittata (eggs, chorizo, onions, cheese, flour tortilla, salsa, and sour cream) to homemade meat loaf with mashed potatoes, veggies, a roll, and chilled pudding. Friday and Saturday nights, try their "All-The-Fish-You-Can-Eat" special. Then go and have your second dessert. You can walk it off on IB's pier. Breakfast and early dinner six days, Sunday to 2 p.m. only. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Karihan Restaurant 2220 Plaza Boulevard, Suite B, Grove Plaza Center, National City, 619-470-7491. It looks like a grass hut and features about 16 different dishes at remarkably low prices. Hamonado, binagoongan, and sinampalokan turn out to be sweetand-sour pork in pineapple sauce, pork with salted shrimp, and chicken in tamarind soup. Filipinos like to mix sweet and savory flavors, like kare kare, beef tripe and oxtail cooked in peanut butter sauce. And everybody loves pancit, Filipino chow mein. Open 8:30 a.m. to 8:30 p.m., seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

La Bella Pizza Garden 373 Third Avenue (at F Street), Chula Vista, 619-426-8820. From the outside, La Bella looks like an Italian farmhouse, with geraniums, bright green shutters, and maroon canopies. A real extended family runs this business. Their secrets are: long hours (from breakfast until after midnight daily), big meals, and small prices. The menu includes standards like spaghetti with meatballs or lasagna, including sides of garlic bread, soup, or salad. The hit with kids is "Papa's Favorite," an 8-inch pizza with mushrooms, pepperoni, and sausage. Open daily, three meals. Inexpensive. E.B. (3/01)

Mary J's Cafe 1930 Cleveland Avenue, National City, 619-477-6645. Mary J and her café have been around for 40 years and about the only thing to change is the prices. This is the real National City. The regulars start piling in at 5 a.m. Mary always has specials go-ing, but check the big board menu above the stove too. One of their most popular items is the Trucker's Breakfast (three eggs, ham, bacon or sausage, home fries, and toast), or steak and eggs with hash browns and toast. Mary's son Vic, the morning cook, always gives you more than enough. For lunch or early dinner, try the meat loaf with mixed veggies, boiled potatoes covered with gravy, toast, and soup or salad. Or chicken-fried steak with all the fixings Also hefty: cheeseburgers or tuna melts (with fries plus soda included in the price) and that old American favorite. a fried egg sandwich with chips. Open 5 a.m. to 6 p.m, weekdays only. Inexpensive. — E.B. (6/02)

Sushi Sushi 600 Palm Avenue, Suite 300, Seacoast Plaza, Imperial Beach, 619-429-4373. Imperial Beach's only sushi bar really tries hard. With its pine sushi bar with roto-polished steel back-board, its white paper lanterns and paper and wood screens, its water-rooted bamboo growing out in weird shape — it feels like you've been teleported to the Ginza. Even the dishes are little pieces of art. Cheap but delish choices include katsudon (breaded pork, onions and egg over rice) or nabeyaki udon (thick noodle soup with carrots, egg, chicken, fish cake and a side dish of deep-fried battered shrimp). Or tackle a combo bento tray (rice, soup, salad, plus two items from a list that includes squid teriyaki, gyoza, sashimi, and panko fried oysters). Or just go the "tapa" way, ordering sushi dishes one at a time. Your local honor-dish: the "I.B. Roll," filled with salmon egg, smelt egg, cream cheese, and avocado wrapped in salmon. Daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/02)

BAJA

From the United States use the prefix 011-52-664 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's seven-digit Chiki Jai 1388 Avenida Revolución (at 8th), Zona Centro, Tijuana, 685-4955. Eat here and you're surrounded by ghosts: Errol Flynn, John Huston, Rita Hayworth, Anthony Quinn, Ava Gardner, and, they say, Ernest Hemingway, who all ate — and drank vino tinto — here. Plus the great stars of boxing and bullfighting. But mainly it was a haven for Spanish jai alai players desperate for Old Country food. This is one of Tijuana's great his-toric eateries, its tale written on the walls. Old border photos, Don Quixote art, fighting bull ranchos' brands, and a matador's framed green cape with his blood still on it. The food's all Spanish, so paella is big (with soup, salad, French bread, and bleu cheese), but also try the baby eel appetizers, salchicha (pork sausages), bacalao (cod fish) al la Vizcaina, trout with olive oil and garlic, and Gallican octopus. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/02)

El Nido 67 Boulevard Juarez (1-1/2 blocks north of Hotel Festival), Rosarito Beach, Baja, 661-612-1430. Head south if you're looking for a great dry-aged, mesquite-broiled steak at a bargain price — but don't stop there. Try the house specialty, quail with garlic sauce (codorniz al moio de aio), or venison, especially the savory machaca de venado (strips of meat with peppers, onions, and tomatoes). Both are locally raised on the restaurant's own ranches, and may be united in a brilliant breakfast of quail eggs with deer machaca. Seafood and surf-and-turf variations are tasty, too. The restaurant's name means "the nest" and the amusing in-door-outdoor decor is a sort of multiroom aviary with birds singing, chirping, and fluttering all over. Full bar. If sensitive to smoke, don't sit next to the mesquite-burning hearth on the roofed patio. Dressy-casual. Bilingual staff and menu. Open daily, early morning to late evening. Mostly moderate; cash only. — N.W. (4/03)

La Diferencia Boulevard Sanchez Taboada, 10611-A, Zona Río, Tijuana, 634-3346 or 634-7078. Mexican haute cuisine, with inventive combinations of traditional flavors. The creative menu reframes the old dishes and devises new ones. Wine list centers on Baja wineries (Monte Xanic and Cetto) at reasonable prices. Secure, free valet parking next to exterior courtyard. Menu is in Spanish (in a hard-to-read font), but some staffers speak some

English. The restaurant is often noisy. even louder when mariachis play. Smoking permitted. Wheelchair access marginal. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — N.W. (1/02)

La Escondida Santa Monica #1 (in Fraccionamiento Las Palmas), Tijuana, 681-4458. "The Hidden One," located in a converted mansion, boasts two gar dens and patio dining, and is especially beautiful at night. The roasted baby goat, roasted quail, and the Châteaubriand (for two) are all worthwhile. Very civilized experience, complete with live music on Fridays and Saturdays. Take Revolución until it bends to the left to become Agua Caliente. Proceed on Agua Caliente past the racetrack, approximately onehalf mile. Turn right at Las Palmas. Two short blocks up, turn left at the "Pescaderia Playas" sign. The entryway to La Escondida is straight ahead. Open Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.: Friday and Saturday, 8 a.m. to 30 a.m.; Sunday, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Moderate. — E.W.

Loncheria Reyes 862 Callejón del Travieso (off 2nd Street), Tijuana, 685-3150. Callejón del Travieso translates as "Mischief Lane." It's packed with dentists, copy shops, a granero (granary), and a veterinary pharmacy alive with crowing roosters, cooing tur-tle-doves, rabbits, and yapping pups. You'll smell their wonderful casera (home-style) corn tortillas before you get there. Big pots bubble on stoves un-der an iron hood. You usually have a choice of three meals, involving beef, chicken, or pork, which come with a nutritious soup filled with meat-onthe-bone, corn cobs, potatoes, and vegetables. Corn tortillas and a glass of tamarind juice are included. Maria and her husband Juventino cook it up behind the counter where you sit, watching Tijuana television or chatting with the locals. Breakfast and lunch to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/01)

Los Pelicanos 45 Calle de Cedro 115 (west of Juarez), Rosarito Beach, Baja, 661-612-0445 or 661-612-1737. This hotel dining room is El Nido's little (and less gifted) sister, with a much shorter menu (no venison) and perhaps less careful cooking. It serves good steaks and surf-and-turf in a handsome room and, at lunch, on a pretty ocean-view terrace. To find it, look for large sign on west side of Juarez, north of the tourist hub, directing you to the site. One winding flight up to the restaurant, no elevator. Bilingual staff and menu. Full bar. Open daily, three meals. Moderate; cash only. N.W. (4/03)

Mercado Sobre Ruedas Behind Ejido Mazatlan strip mall (marked by large yellow sign), Juarez and Calle de Mayo, Rosarito. Don't miss this huge flea market that materializes every Sunday (from morning until mid-after-noon) a couple of miles north of the tourist part of town. Its dozens of foodbooths offer a vast variety of local treats, ranging from barbecued mutton (borrego) to savory Jalisco-style goat stew (birria de chivo) to all manner of tacos, made-to-order hotcakes with syrup, "Mexican hamburgers," and Sno-Kones (don't worry about the ice; by law, it has to be made with purified water). The food is totally authentic, cooked to Mexican tastes, and it's a carnival for the mouth. Many vendors speak some English. Rock-bottom prices; cash only. — N.W. (4/03)

Saverio's Restaurant Mediterraneo Escuadrón 201, Zona Río, Tijuana, 686-6442 or 686-6443. This "in" restaurant attracts a young crowd. Pastas and pizzas are available, but the best bets are the fish and chicken dinners that arrive with soup or salad. Top price is $14. Crowded and noisy weekends Open daily, same menu noon to 11 p.m., Sunday to 10 p.m. Low to moderate. Take Revolución until it turns into Boulevard Agua Caliente. Continue until you see the Hotel Grand on your right. There, turn left onto the street Avenida Carlos Robirosa You'll see Blockbuster Video. Saverio's is across the street. — E.W.

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

The Fish Market 750 North Harbon Drive, downtown, 619-232-3474. There's something fishy about these crowded, noisy, ever-multiplying restaurants - namely, mesquite grilled, skewered, steamed, or panko-fried seafood, plus piscine chowders, pastas, and salads. Preparations are generally simple and consistent among locations. All the raw seafood is processed at the chain's Northern Califor-nia facilities, so when the menu refers to a "local" species it merely means it's from somewhere in the Pacific. Small retail fish market in the downtown branch offers slightly fresher products than most supermarkets. Identical products and dishes are served in the dining room, the oyster bar, and at Top of the Market. But the sushi bar is emphatically the top Fish Market venue, with just-right rice, pristine seafood, and expert preparation. The "Ichiban Hamachi" (also available in the dining rooms) is outstanding — and for a sexy treat, share a pair of "Honeymoon Oysters" with your honey. No reservations, but the space is vast so waits are brief. Restaurant open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. Also in Del Mar at 640 Via Del Valle. 858-755-2277; mini-branch near Fashion Valley, 2401 Fenton Parkway, 619-280-2277. — N.W. (9/01)

Il Fornaio 1333 First Street, Coronado, 619-437-4911. Also at Del Mar Plaza, 1555 Camino Del Mar, Del Mar, 858-755-8876. Il Fornaio's defensive architecture walls it off from the Great Unwashed — the tourists wandering around Coronado's Old Ferry Landing — but it's worth breaching if only to get your teeth into their to-die-for bread. "Il fornaio" means "the baker," after all. Beyond bread, we're talking rustic-feeling, herbal, ultra-fresh salads, and everyday Italian dishes rang ing from sfilatino con bistecchina (thin grilled steak on a baguette with creamy dijon and salad) to a giant mesquite-grilled 22-ounce bistecca alla fiorentina, with lots of vegetarian and pasta dishes in between. A simple penne alla sorrentina — pasta tubes with a tomato, mozzarella, and basil sauce — is charming. Pizza puttanesca is heaven too, if you're into anchovies. Interest ing regional menus from different provinces of Italy pop up during the first two weeks of each month. Most staffers seem mind-blowingly knowledgeable. Moderate. — E.B. (1/02)

Uno Chicago Bar and Grill The 1943-born Uno chain made its mark by transforming the flat Italian pizza into something a little more upstanding. Deep-dish pizzas have become one of Chicago's better-known exports. Now Uno does serious steak too, with variously sized Angus top sirloins. They come pretty much as is, but the meat it self is plenty flavorful and tender. Another find from its expanded menu (which includes fajitas, ribs, shrimp scampi, steak'n cheese burgers) is the wicked "grilled honey-mustard salmon." Still, most lunchtime cus-tomers we saw seemed to stick to the staple: deep-dish pizzas and salads. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. 4465 Mission Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 858-483-4143; Fashion Valley Center, 619-298-1866; 5th and H, Chula Vista, 619-420-8660. — E.B. (8/01) he printed prologue sets the stage.

...a plan of attack fashioned after an insect that looks like a twig.

DUNCAN SHEPHERD

April, 1805. The early days of the Napoleonic Empire. The threat of world domination. "The oceans," to focus in a little tighter, "are now battlefields." And the British man-of-war, the HMS Surprise, with 28 guns and 197 souls aboard, patrols the waters off the coast of Brazil on a mission to intercept the French privateer, the Acheron.

The first screen incarnation of Lucky Jack Aubrey, hero of Patrick O'Brian's loved and admired series of historical adventure novels, Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World begins with a bang. As a matter of fact, several volleys of bangs, as the Acheron surprises the Surprise at long range in the fog, then takes out her rudder at closer range ("Damn fine gunnery," Lucky Jack will have to admit), and misses out on the kill thanks only to the thickness of the soup. Clearly there's but one thing for the Brits to do: limp home for repairs, and live to fight another day. Clear to everyone, that is, except Lucky Jack, who orders repairs on the fly and a heightened pursuit of the faster, stronger, bigger (at 44 guns) American-made vessel under the French tricolor. What can the Captain be thinking? Taking offense at the characterization of his ship as "somewhat aged," taking it perhaps too personally, recollecting that he came of age on her (so to speak), he likes to believe she's "in her prime." Meaning that he, too, is. "There's enough of his blood in the woodwork for the ship almost to be a relation."

This is preeminently a boys' story, and as pure and innocent a specimen as you are apt to find anymore, uncorrupted by concerns with democracy or demographics. (The closest you could find to it in the oeuvre of its director, Peter Weir, is the curdled Conradism of The Mosquito Coast.) There is an actual boy on view, a cherubic curlytopped towhead, but of course boys of all ages want to choose their role models and hero figures from among grown men (as the towhead, for example, has chosen Lord Nelson). Girls have no place here at all. There is but one, brief, silent, almost spectral appearance by a female, a copperskinned native on whom the Captain allows his gaze to linger — gateway to another world — before he gets back to business.

That business would encompass, among other things, the amputation, the flogging, the flagons of rum, the parrot on the shoulder, the typhoon, the man overboard, the seamen's superstitions (is there a "Jonah" among the crew? is the enemy a "phantom"?), the military stratagems (a makeshift raft, festooned with lanterns, cut adrift as a decoy to throw off the trailing French ship in the dark), the naturalist interlude on the Galápagos (the flightless bird, the amphibian iguana), the Churchillian if not Shakespearean address to the troops on the eve of battle ("Though we be on the far side of the world, this ship is our home.

This ship is England"), the burial at sea, and most importantly, at the core of it all, the masculine camaraderie, especially that between the Captain and the ship's surgeon, Dr. Stephen Maturin, whose harmonious friendship, as well as harmonious violin-and-cello duets, sometimes must give way to the traditional testiness between the soldier and the scientist, the man of action and the man of intellect. The latter, however, will serve the former very well in the climactic battle, suggesting to him a plan of attack fashioned after an insect that looks like a twig. And the scientist is no ivory-tower type, being fully capable of digging a bullet out of his own abdomen (albeit to the delicate strains of Corelli's "Christmas Concerto") or taking a hand in the handto-hand combat. There is not much room in these quarters for "character," beyond the broadest of strokes, and by the same token there is not much room for "acting," beyond the essential task of acting like men. Russell Crowe and Paul Bettany, Captain and Doctor, have proven they can both give a lot more (Crowe in The Insider, Bettany in A Knight's Tale, both of them in A Beautiful Mind), but they have never given better. Never given more precisely what's required.

One is tempted to pay this period piece the ultimate compliment, that it's as "old-fashioned" as humanly and technologically possible these days. First, however, one would have to gulp down the three successive studio logos 20th Century-Fox, then Miramax, then Universal — at the top of the movie. (Remember when studios had their own distinct personalities?) And one would have to gulp down, too, the contemporary obsession with physical realism (vomit, etc.), and the computerenhanced, art-conscious seascapes that beg comparison with J.M.W. Turner or Winslow Homer, and the compulsory helicopter shot that circles around Crowe in the crow's nest, and the FX explosions that funnel their force straight into the camera lens, and the somewhat overextended running time — not to forget the current fad of two titles (and a discretionary jot of punctuation) for the price of one. The displays of manliness on screen provide plenty of inspiration to gulp all this down without complaint. If a mere lad can endure having his arm sawed off with no anesthetic and only gritted teeth, then the movie can indeed be said, through similar teeth, to be old-fashioned.

Only in a metaphorical sense, and not by any means a good sense, will the spectator feel more at sea in The Matrix Revolutions than in Master and Commander: The Far Side of the World. "Everything that has a beginning has an end" — so speaks the Oracle. And surely that's the most encouraging word, the most energizing word, the most fortifying word, in the third and final installment of the Wachowski Brothers' man-versus-machine trilogy. (Or "tril," as you may prefer to call it, taking your cue from "Trin," Neo's sweet-talk diminutive for the lovely Trinity.) An end, at long last, to the cluttery computer animation and congested digital compositing, an end to opacity and obfuscation, an end to double-talk and gobbledegook, an end to befuddlement and boredom. The script, whether with a grin or a grimace, has been booby-trapped with lines that seem to give voice to the viewers' or the filmmakers' innermost thoughts: "I wish there was an easy way to get through this, but there ain't. Or: "I know it's difficult to understand." Or: "I don't know what he can do to save us." The "he" is of course our uniquely gifted hero — the anagrammatic Neo — the One — and there's no good reason to doubt him if, in this make-it-up-as-we-go-along narrative, he will be able to see more clearly and deeply into the nature of things after his eyeballs have been burned off his face with a sparking power line. How can we be expected to know what such a man, if that's what he is, can do for us? We could only wish that, whatever it is, he would just hurry up and do it. It's much too late to wish he had quit after Alien — This creature-feature has, and is, a good time, but it works very hard and spends a lot of money in order to have it. The question is, is it worth it? This question comes up not only because this movie seems much too heavily endowed for the simple, 1950s-style monster movie it essentially is, but also because it gets too little actual use out of its vast material holdings, especially its cavernous sets. The monster itself is most fun in its infancy, but it is hardly more impressive than its close cousins in such penny-pinching horror movies as They Came from Within and Eraserhead; once it reaches full growth, its appearances become annoyingly coy and fragmentary — this monster, like the one in Jaws, is mostly mouth. The storyline is garbled; the camerawork overwrought; the soundtrack sadistic; the computer graphics rather good, particularly the contour drawing of the planet's surface as the spaceship descends to a touchdown. Sigourney Weaver emerges as the unexpected star of the movie, although Yaphet Kotto, as the ship's extroverted and headbanded mechanic, steals more than his share of scenes Weaver, who has fleeting resemblances to Jane Fonda in her face and voice, ought to make the feminists happy; and if not, it won't be for lack of trying. With Tom Sker-ritt, Harry Dean Stanton, Veronica Cartwright, John Hurt, and Ian Holm; directed by Ridley Scott. 1979.

★★ (MISSION VALLEY 20)

Anything but Love — Custom-made platform for the ingratiating Isabel Rose (who co-wrote the screenplay with director Robert Cary), as a small-time, starry-eyed cabaret singer who styles herself after the Golden Age goddesses of the silver screen: Rita Hayworth, Audrey Hepburn, whoever suits her mood. She comes in for plenty of sympathy, some of it for the tight-beltedness of the production, but she also fritters a lot of it away in the tensionless tug-of-war between security and self-fulfillment, represented by Cameron Bancroft and Andrew McCarthy, respectively. Eartha Kitt, as herself, offers sage counsel. 2003.

Atlético San Pancho (Never Too Young to Dream) — Mexican soccer film about a team of underdog urchins, with Lumi Cavazos and Hector Suarez, directed by Gustavo Loza. (HAZARD CENTER 7, FROM 11/14)

Brother Bear — Pagan pietism, from the Disney animation studio, to do with a Northwest Indian lad who, in his anxiety to become a man, kills a bear and gets magically transformed into a bear himself, to see how the other half lives: blissed out on nature (the moose practice yoga) and communality and oneness - unless you're unlucky enough to be a salmon, who count only as calories. More than merely transformed, the Indian gets converted. (Gimme that New Age religion.) The agenda rather throttles the creativity. Songs by Phil Collins. Directed by Aaron Blaise and Robert Walker. 2003.

Bubba Ho-tep — Prolonged dizzy spell brought on by an ancient Egyptian Soul Sucker who stalks the halls of a Texas rest home till he runs into some stiff opposition from a resident who may or may not be the real Elvis (weighing how he got there, you'd have to guess not) and another resident who believes he is JFK (as he's black, there's not much question). Ossie Davis, Jr., sounding new depths of gravity, has an easier access to absurdity than has the heavily made-up and heavily imitative Bruce Campbell: what's the difference between playing Elvis and playing an Elvis impersonator? The mock-horror element is very much the element of director Don Coscarelli (the Phantasm series); the mockheroic element proves to be more of a reach. 2003.

★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS, THROUGH 11/13)

Cold Creek Manor — If Mike Figgis, following his string of digital-video experi-ments, wanted simply to prove he could still make a regular movie, then the present project might be termed a success. It could hardly be more "regular," an obvious and overwrought thriller about a New York family (Dennis Quaid, Sharon Stone, and kids), in search of tranquillity, who, for a song, pick up a repossessed upstate mansion and all its belongings. What happens next, or subsequent to finding kiddie-porn Polaroids among the belongings, seems a staggeringly bad idea: hiring the ex-con for-mer occupant (a bearded, ballcapped Stephen Dorff) as a handyman after he has entered the house without invitation, slurped down a free meal, practically drooled over the wife and teenage daughter, and generally matched the social manners of the ex-con in Cape Fear. Staggeringly bad ideas make for notoriously shaky foundations. The business of lowering a camcorder on a rope to find out what's at the bottom of a hidden well christened the Devil's Throat, is truly spooky, and truly unrepresentative of a movie that otherwise favors the Big Eek. With Juliette Lewis, Christopher Plummer. 2003. (VOGUE)

Elephant — Gus Van Sant's response to the Columbine school shooting, an unemotional, calculated, measured, extremely limited response, not in the least freed up by its fictionalization: the action takes place in Oregon, during football season, among autumn leaves, and the body count appears to climb higher than the reality. In the early stages there are no internal indications of where we are headed. A cross-section of average high-school students will be rounded up one at a time, two at a time, three at a time. The incidents are banal, the dialogue hollow ("You goin' to the concert tonight?" "You guys wanna go shopping today?"), the acting timid and amateurish. Time moves slowly, hangs heavy. It would be a very different viewing experience if you had not been tipped off beforehand that the subject was Columbine. Around twenty-five minutes into the eighty-minute movie, a couple of students enter the school with duffel bags we can presume to contain weapons, but the end is nowhere in sight. We begin to go through the same time period over and over again. One particular moment the taking of a snapshot in the hallway – recurs several times from different angles and at different distances. In some ways the movie seems a companion to the minimalist experimentation of the director's Gerry, although with a crisper, richer image, in the boxy proportions of a television screen. (It was made with financing from HBO.) The precision timing, framing, and camera movement all contribute to a similar climate of strict formalism, a climate that changes not a whit once the shooting starts. Nothing ruffles Van Sant. And despite the hotter topic, it's hard to see how this treatment of it could arouse, let alone satisfy. anybody's curiosity about it. Hard to see, that is, how it tells us anything more about it than that the flow of life got interrupted that day by two kids with no understanding of what life is. It does have something to tell us, on the other hand, about how a sense of the flow of life can be achieved on screen: long shots, long takes, no dramatic inflection or punctuation, a disinterested point of view. Alex Frost, Eric Deulen, John Robinson, Elias McConnell. 2003. ★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Elf - Will Ferrell as a human raised by elves, leaving the womb of Santa's Workshop in full adulthood to track down his biological father, a bottom-line publisher of Kiddie Lit ("He's on the naughty list"). Directed by Jon Favreau, the film wants to play both sides of the street — to be a True-Spirit-of-Christmas sermon and at the same time be hip, cool, sardonic, and smarty-pants — and it ends up outstaying its welcome. We do, however, get some nicely worked-out detail, a better than average bumpkin-in-Manhattan montage, and a couple of well-played secondary characters: a harried and unwhimsical tovdepartment manager at Gimbel's (the hefty Faizon Love) and a self-important top-selling author of children's books (the pintsized Peter Dinklage, of The Station Agent). With James Caan, Zooey Deschanel, Mary Steenburgen, Edward Asner. 2003.

The Human Stain — Robert Benton's adaptation of a Philip Roth novel feels in controvertibly bookish: the Big Themes (American race relations, moral hypocrisy, political correctness), the vast historical canvas (Vietnam, World War II), the contextual co-ordinates from current affairs (Viagra, Clinton-Lewinsky), the academic setting (mythical Athena College in rural Massachusetts), the self-analytical literary allusions (the Greek Tragedy device of "peripeteia," the amorous dilemma of Achilles: "Give up the girl"), the talk of light that Benton favors in cinematography is painterly, not bookish, but still not quite movie-ish: his fussed-over, prinked-up images approach petrifaction. The expository protagonist steps on tender toes with his use of the word "spooks" in reference to two absent students whom he has never seen, and who happen to be black. And throwaway moments, such as the voyeuristic, through-the-window views of two certifiably heterosexual men dancing to "Cheek to Cheek." But Benton is not to be content with nice little throwaway moments. The irony of ironies — the almost Sophoclean irony, if you must — is that this professor, "one of the first Jews to teach in a Classics department in any college anywhere," is himself black, unbeknownst to anyone in his present life. This racial revelation might work better on the page, which is to say in the mind's eye. It might even have worked all right on screen with someone in the role besides Sir Anthony Hopkins (whose American accent continues to sound a bit betwixt and between). The problem with Hopkins is not just that he cannot pass for black. Nor is the problem merely the usual one, in decades-spanning movies, that we know too well what the actor looked like when he was young, and that he does not remotely match the young man in the flashbacks (Wentworth Miller). The problem, additionally, is that the young man in the flashbacks is so perfectly cast for the part, so plausible as either a Jew or a black, that he spotlights the imperfection and implausibility of Hopkins. both potential areas of excitation. Perhaps surprisingly (for Campion, again), the woman-in-peril plot looks about as lowbrow as a Lifetime Channel original, or, factoring in the eroticism, a straight-tovideo Shannon Tweed vehicle available in versions both R-rated and Unrated. Perhaps not so surprisingly, the basic situation has been tarted-up with literary elements somewhat higher-toned than we would expect from Lifetime or straight-to-video. In any event, there's no mistaking the level of commitment, the ferocity of effort, that Campion brings to her work, even if one might have reservations about the artiness of some of the visuals: the blizzard of flower petals at the outset; the Taxi Driver-ish Expressionistic color, by turns fruity and succulent, electric and crackling; the antiquated black-and-white of the fantasy flashbacks: the selective focus that leaves large areas of the screen in a blur; the trendy tremulous camera movement; the engulfing shadows. The total effect — the variety of tones, textures, tactilities — is sensual to an extreme degree, but never to a gross one. And always impressive is the fearless independence of Campion's personal brand of feminism, unflattering, unempowering, unidealizing. Meg Ryan, as a fortyish writer precariously situated in the killing zone of a serial dismemberer, gives herself up to the program — herself, and all her little nose-scrunching, head-cocking endearments — with an almost shocking abandon. The brunette Nicole Kidman wig (a reminder of who was originally cast in the role, and who still appears in the credits as a co-producer), coupled with the disfiguring Melanie Griffith lip job, might make it difficult, in the moments of carnality in particular, to feel that this is really Meg Rvan, (She doesn't look like Rvan, She doesn't act like Ryan.) If the head is doubtful, however, the body is believably fortyish. She demonstrates herself better suited to the part than you could ever have guessed. edy, Life, as well as the Dave Barry literary adaptation, Big Trouble.) Have they at last gone straight? gone soft? gone safe? Have they given up the good fight in pursuit of the brass ring? Fear not. As Hollywoody as this might look on the surface, or from the outside, it remains no less subversive from within - not as directly and explicitly anti-Hollywood as Barton Fink, but nor as obliquely and metaphorically as Fargo, The Hudsucker Proxy, or The Big Lebowski. The setting of this cold hard look at the divorce racket — the reduction of marital relationships, mutual alliances, common bonds, to cold hard cash — is specifically Tinsel Town and its mansions, its swimming pools, its health spas, its supper clubs, its nearby playgrounds, even though only one of the litigants has an actual toehold in show business: producer of the daytime soap, The Sands of Time. Unflaggingly speedy, snappy, fresh, and funny, the film is as tightly constructed as any Coen film before Lebowski (the point at which they started to overload and overstuff), homing in on the whole culture of divorce, a world unto itself, a total way of life, with its lore and legend, its luminaries and lesser lights its legion of interchangeable face-lifted and liposuctioned ex-wives (the Stepford exes), even an annual convention in Vegas (where better?) for the National Organization of Matrimonial Attorneys Nationwide: "Let N.O.M.A.N. put asunder." ★★★★ (GASLAMP 15)

Kill Bill, Vol. 1 — After a sizable step forward in his third film, Jackie Brown, and after a lengthy interval of six years since then, Quentin Tarantino takes several steps backwards in his fourth. An odd blend of pretension and triviality, it posits a comicbook world in which there can exist a Deadly Viper Assassination Squad, whose mostly female members have code names such as Cottonmouth, Copperhead, and Black Mamba (the black woman on the team envies that name, the way Mr. Pink in Reservoir Dogs envied everybody's name), and are trained in the gravity-defying martial arts of Hong Kong kung-fu fantasies and the blood-gushing swordplay of Japanese samurai epics. In such a world, the heroine (the long, lean, though not particularly lithe and athletic Uma Thurman) can have her hands full in a catfight with one of her sister Vipers ("C'mon, bitch! Bring it on!"), and then, as the need arises, can mow down scores of similarly trained assassins in quick succession, showing no ill effects in either instance of having gotten herself shot in the head and lying for four years in a coma, the sexual plaything of a night-shift hospital orderly ("My name is Buck, and I came here to fuck!"). It should already be apparent that the number of prospective moviegoers who will find this material interesting in itself, or as an hommage to a deserving genre or genres, will be severely restricted. In the words of one character, apropos of something roughly related: "If you was a moron, you could almost admire it." Split into parts, not by original design but purely as a practical matter (or in other words, an economic matter), after its dimensions grew unwieldy, it delivers a first installment of average length and unambitious scope, with no shape, no pace, no proper end, just a pause in the action. Lucy Liu, Vivica A. Fox, Daryl Hannah. 2003.

The Virgin Suicides: a phlegmatic comedy about two American outsiders who fall into an ill-defined relationship in Tokyo, a bond forged of loneliness and misery between an over-the-hill Hollywood action star (a sadsack Bill Murray, who surely should have been written as an over-the-hill comedy star), in town to collect a cool two million for a series of whisky ads, and a neglected young wife (the seductively throaty Scarlett Johansson), who spends a lot of time lolling around her hotel room in transparent pink panties while her photographer husband (the dependably dreadful Giovanni Ribisi) busies himself with work. The "satirical" touch tends to be lighter this time, with perhaps a few exceptions: the suspected anorexic blond starlet (with so many to choose from, couldn't a better fit have been found for this role than the robust Anna Faris?), the tutti-frutti television host misleadingly labelled "the Johnny Carson of Japan," the S&M call girl ("Lip my stocking!"), and the imported guitar-and-vocal lounge act billed as "Sausalito." Truly on the lighter side, however, there are large numbers of points scored, even if easy ones, with the advertising campaign ("For relaxing times, make it Suntori time"), the language difficulties, the faxes and FedExes and phone calls from the all-business wife in California, the exercise machine, the local cuisine, and the inevitable karaoke bar (Murray reverting to SNL form for his soup-ladle renditions of Elvis Costello's "Peace, Love, and Understanding" and Roxy Music's "More Than This"). And the touristing in and around Tokyo is pleasantly relaxed. Coppola's uncertain visual style, vacillating between a fussy precision and a fumbling offhandedness, could never be mistaken for her father's. Which, for purposes of independence and the establishment of a separate identity, would be a good thing if only the style could be recognized as distinctively anybody's. 2003. ★ (FLOWER HILL 4: HAZARD CENTER 7:

Mystic River — Clint Eastwood's somber meditation on chance, fate, doom; scarred souls and endless repercussions; violence begetting violence. Just as Unforgiven was an act of penance for the body counts in his Sergio Leone spaghetti Westerns as well as in his self-directed imitation Leones (High Plains Drifter, The Outlaw Josey Wales, Pale Rider), this can be viewed as an act of penance for the lone-wolf vigilantism of his Dirty Harry urban shoot-'em-ups: a kind of cleansed Harry. (There is no room here for Eastwood the actor, standing aside for the "liberal" casting of Sean Penn and Tim Robbins, and their highly emotional, tearful, unstoical, un-Eastwoody histrionics.) Although formulated as a murder mystery, it is not narrowly focussed on the investigation, but divides its time more or less evenly among three main characters, and expands continuously into the specific milieu, the complex personal relationships, the affected and ongoing lives, in fact life in general, life with a capital "L." All throughout, it sustains a tone of lamentation, underscored by the churchy musical theme composed by Eastwood himself (albeit orchestrated by his trusted collaborator, Lennie Niehaus). The retributive anger never supplants the sorrow; the release never comes. Admittedly, the outcome of the case depends upon a fortuitous coincidence that reeks of mystery-making for its own sake: a previously unrevealed second murder on the same night as the first. Yet the solution to the original murder is not overly tricksy, is perhaps even overly obvious; and the mood of the moment in any case is not one of parlor games and "gotcha." The honest — the aggrieved the penitent — emotionalism of the film makes up for either the fortuitousness or the obviousness, as necessary. Kevin Bacon, Laurence Fishburne, Laura Linney, Marcia Gav Harden, 2003.

Radio — Sanitary human-interest story of a high-school football coach in mid-Seventies South Carolina (Ed Harris in a Bear Bryant hat) who takes a retarded black man under his wing as an assistant, sending the team on an immediate losing streak and raising the question of "Why on earth are you doing this?" Racial issues do not really come into it; issues of moral values, proper priorities, do. Nice use of the local barbershop for postgame analyses and town meetings. School of Rock — An imposter substitute teacher, and local laughingstock rocker, instructs a class of grade-schoolers in What He Knows: rock-and-roll, history and practice. The participation of director Richard Linklater (Slacker, etc.) and screenwriter Mike White (The Good Girl, etc.) might raise expectations slightly, and similarly raise the results: head of the class of boneheads. Their plunge into the commercial mainstream — for a sort of Adam Sar dler movie sans Adam Sandler — has left for a sort of Adam Santhem relatively unbefouled, maybe with just a faint scent of oil and sewage. A smarty-pants answer to things like Mr. Hol-land's Opus and Music of the Heart, the movie nevertheless boasts the "sweetness" for which Sandler is abundantly famous and grudgingly indulged. The hero does end up teaching something, and of course learning something himself: a feel-good movie, but a feel-cool, too, Jack Black, in his plummiest role to date, throws himself into it body if not soul. He appears more eager to connect with those in the multiplex than with those in the classroom, thus coming across as grovelling and aloof at the same time, albeit in different directions.

(Then, too, the whole thing is semiautobiographical.) It doesn't quite jell the lip-sync musical numbers in particular - and the offbeat directing career of Keith Gordon has never seemed more "off": he lacks the production values of Herbert Ross in Pennies from Heaven (another Potter phantasmagoria), and he lacks the taste of Resnais in Same Old Song (a Potter hommage). — The inevitable Sylvia Plath biopic. Had it come sooner, the wan, willowy, nasally Gwyneth Paltrow would not have been the inevitable Sylvia Plath. The actress's lack of inner power gives valida-tion to the theory that Plath tended in her poems to exaggerate, to embroider, and to overdramatize on purpose. Of course the poetry gets pushed aside on screen in favor of the storm and stress of life with Ted Hughes, a dismal enough spectacle: initial bliss, then babies, jealousy, madness, suicide. (The disastrous dinner party with two friends is the entertainment highlight.) Daniel Craig is not a very imposing Hughes, either, but he compensates with a voice that sounds as if played back with a special boost in the bass. Jared Harris, Michael Gambon, Blythe Danner; directed by Christine Jeffs. 2003.

Taste of Cherry — Taste, too, of the esoteric cinema of Iran's Abbas Kiarostami. The concept of the film is simplicity itself. Most of its action takes place in and around a two-door hatchback, which the stonefaced middle-aged protagonist drives round and round the twisting unpaved roads of a barren, brown, and ugly construction zone on the outskirts of Tehran in the declining afternoon light. The effect is roughly of a revolving cyclorama, a Lazy Susan of landscape, now piled up flat against the plane of the screen, now scooped out into deep cavities, a gentle undulation of the near and the far. In turn, the driver propositions an ablebodied laborer, a ragpicker, a hitchhiking Kurdish soldier, an Afghan seminarian, and lastly an old man delivering a clutch of quails to the taxidermy department at the Natural History Museum (there are notably no female characters), dangling in front of each of them the offer of an unspecified

"well-paid job." The misunderstanding reactions of the first two are easy to understand. Not until the third man, a third of the way through the movie, does the solicitation proceed to the point of spelling out the exact nature of the job. It demands more than just something "unnatural." It demands something ungodly. He wants someone to shovel dirt into a pre-dug grave after he has killed himself. (His reason for wanting to kill himself never does get spelled out.) The director's modus operandi might bring to mind something the always quotable Godard once said about the necessity of the documentary filmmaker to move toward fiction and the equivalent necessity of the fictional filmmaker to move toward documentary. While Kiarostami does not venture as far from his fictional starting point as Godard himself often does - and as often into areas of academic aridness — he travels well past the midpoint. An obvious first step is the dependence on natural locales, photographed without prettification, camera gimmicks, distorting lenses, filters, special effects, so that the resulting film can't help but become an unretouched document of its own origins. (And an eye-opening, demystifying document it is.) Then there is the abundance of ambient noise — birds, the wind, passing vehicles, one of which might momentarily drown out the dialogue - and there is no background music to extract or extort a response from

The Texas Chainsaw Massacre -

The remake by Marcus Nispel (who?) is a testament to the demands of 21st-century moviegoers to have their horrors (or their anything else) in a style to which they are accustomed: desaturated color, shafts of light, a hammering monotony of closeups, fashion-model damsels in distress, a pair of softball boobs under stretchy white fabric, and so on. Thus a cheap, crude, cruddy, culty hit from 1974 becomes a flush, flashy, cruddy, mainstreamy hit in 2003.

Tupac: Resurrection — Lauren Lazin's documentary on the life of the late rapper, Tupac Shakur.

Under the Tuscan Sun — The distilled essence of Chick Flick, right down to the gender of writer-director Audrey Wells: a free adaptation of the Frances Mayes memoir of a San Francisco divorcée who inherits a ten-day gay tour of Italy (Gay and Away) from a pregnant lesbian no longer willing to fly, and who then makes an impulsepurchase of a dilapidated villa in Cortona, cooks meals for her Polish immigrant construction crew, receives spiritual guidance from a flighty Englishwoman claiming acquaintance with Fellini, and embarks on a rejuvenating affair with a younger Italian reminiscent of Rosanno Brazzi in puckery sensitivity: "Francesca, I'm going to make love all over you." (Try not to visualize something triple-X.) Though the pallid color scarcely does justice to the setting, the narrative events go down easily, almost liquidly, if none too fillingly. The tallest part of the tale, a lightning storm that launches a washing machine into midair and deposits an owl in the bedroom, is so fantastically Brothers Grimm that it could only be true. Diane Lane, in the lead role, continues in her ${\it Unfaithful}$ vein of forcing every little twitch and tremor of interior life out onto the surface. And Sandra Oh, as the expectant lesbian, provides the solid support that seems to be her lot. Lindsay Duncan, Raoul Underworld — Kate Beckinsale (The Last Days of Disco. The Golden Bowl, etc.), in a remarkable display of range and versatility, makes herself right at home as a musicvideo Vampirella, dressed in dominatrix black leather, photographed in deep-freezer blue, mired in a moronic blood feud between high-tech vampires and werewolves. Alongside the snarling supporting cast, she looks like a goddess, just not too smart a one. Scott Speedman, Michael Sheen, Shane Brolly, Bill Nighy; directed by Len Wiseman. 2003.

● (VOGUE)

one-tenth the requisite tempo). The occasion, or flimsy excuse, is a romantic triangle drawn in the style of a Hollywood musical. Equally competent and equally unselfcritical imitations are performed in front of bathroom mirrors the world over. Anna Karina, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Jean-Claude Brialy. 196l.

• (KEN, THROUGH 11/13)

Zardoz — A classically styled heroic myth, set in a remote, thoroughly imagined future society, where there still exists a class division, of a sort, and a hairy, naked, virile Sean Connery fights to restore death to the pale privileged class, cursed with immortality. Frugally made, but not obviously stretched too thin; cleverly conceived and executed, but not quite mind-boggling. Written, directed by John Boorman. 1974. ★★★★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 11/20, 8:50 P.M., AND 11/21, 2:50 AND 8:50 P.M.)

Zelig — Woody Allen's documentary parody on a fictitious celebrity of the Twenties and Thirties, known as the "human chameleon." Allen owes something to his own earlier documentary parody, Take the Money and Run, something — a lot, actually - to Citizen Kane (the newsreel facsimile), something to Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid (the intermingling of old footage and new), and something to Reds (the interviews with expert witnesses). The special effects here, if we can remember to speak of special effects as something other than bug-eyed monsters, laser rays, and the gelatinous ooze that emanates from the one when punctured by the other, yield nothing to those in Kane. In sharp contrast to the often undisciplined fancifulness of special effects in the horror and sci-fi genres, these are conceived and executed within classical constraints, the authentic archive footage providing both a model and a measuring stick. It takes a special sort of audacity for a parodist to do away with his traditional safety net — the generalizing and dimming effects of memory — and to hold up the original directly alongside the imitation. Outside of the aforementioned Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid, no other example leaps to mind, and that other one offers far less to back up its show of audacity. Zelig backs up its own, on the other hand, down to every last scratch on the emulsion, every sprocket jump, every halting pan, every faded gray, every crackle-and-pop on the soundtrack. In view of all that and much else, it would not be overstating the case to note that all the real excitement in Zelig takes place precisely on the surface, and often on very restricted areas of that surface. This excitement runs a little low, eventually, even at only eighty-three minutes (give or take). With Mia Farrow. 1983. ★★★ (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC

Sign up for an event in November and get 1 credit to any future event you choos Free to you if you can prove you've never been desperate – Must call and meet this standard: Somehow, singles like to think if they don't attend our events they are not or have never been desperate. Somehow, singles like to think it they don't attend our events they are not or have never been desperate. Every person who has loved has been desperate regardless of how good looking. Some are more desperate than others. However, by going to an event you are more likely to be confident and attractive than desperate. So if that's why you haven't called yet, you are only kidding yourself about not being desperate. We consider the following to be desperate: Stayed with someone you didn't love, stayed with someone who didn't love you back, liked a person for looks alone who had a bad character, liked someone who didn't treat you well, was a liar, a dangerous person, jealous, controlling, cheater for more than one date.

I still think meeting on the Net personals is more desperate than going to a fine even like yours in person.

He works out daily, enjoys fine dining, dancing, flying to New York for a Broadway play, concerts, movies and socializing.

ABOUT HER: You are an honest 28-38 year old, single or divorced female, with or without children. He is looking for San Diego County only, extremely attractive, up to 5′10″ and up to a size 4 or 6 maximum. He appreciates a sweet and easygoing girl who likes being pampered. enerally, I think people are fat because of their own problems. If they can't get skinny, that's their problem. Some fat people are good, like Santa Claus or Norm from Cheers. Basically I think fat people should get off their lazy ass. I wouldn't say it's genetic. Their parents were probably fat and fed them a lot when they were kids. I had a cafeteria ladv who was pretty fat. She was a fat lunch lady and wasn't very nice. I'm sure being fat was one of her issues, but she was a lunch lady for a college dorm, so that probably had something to do with it. Al Roker really gets on my nerves. He's just way too fat and jolly. I mean Santa Claus is fat and jolly, but Al Roker is totally trying to steal that persona. I've never dated a big girl; I'm pretty sure that I'd get lost in the lovin'.

Clint Hensley

Environmental Safety Technician Pacific Beach

Sometimes they may be lazy, or I don't know if that's just a stereotype. I don't know that many fat people who are active. I know that I'm pretty active and I'm pretty skinny. I've noticed a lot of what I eat has to do with how skinny I am. Some people that are huge tend to eat a lot of the greasy, nasty stuff that I don't eat, and that could be a contributing factor. No fat people have pissed me off lately. I've never dated a fat girl. Fat women don't do it for me. I like skinny ones with no butt. Curvy in the front, but not in the back. No big junk in the trunk. I don't think that I could stay aroused if I were with a fat woman. There's a lot of fat women who could probably whup my ass, like that Rosie O'Donnel. But there's a lot of people that can whup my ass though.

 $\overline{F^{ ext{or some people, being overweight}}}$ it. For some, it could be a thyroid problem. Some people just don't care about their appearance. Or they care about their weight and they get into a rut and can't lose weight. My impression of a person shouldn't be based on their weight. I'm from the Midwest, and here in California, people might be a little bit harder on overweight people. Appearance is everything here. Everybody has a nice car, everybody has to dress in name brands. People seem to be more obsessed with the name of something than the quality. I don't look to see if someone is fat, I look to see if they're healthy.

Brian Pyke

Sales Associate Mission Valley

Fat people? I love fat people. I'm trimmer than I have been, but I've also been sick for, like, eight months. In high school, I played sports year-round. When I went to college, I gained weight. It didn't make me feel uncomfortable or bad about myself, but I wanted to get back in shape. I try and watch my figure. Less than the aesthetics, I want to feel healthy. The image conveyed in San Diego definitely emphasizes trim, slim women. Fat is a tough word. I call them curvy 'cause that's my kind of woman. I mean, if Beyonce Knowles were a little bigger and she wanted to get with me, I'd still call her bootylicious. We'll see what happens; my eyes are always open.

Lynette Ny

Student San Diego

I don't really look at people and think, "Oh, they are fat." In grade school and high school, I was teased a lot for being really skinny, and I am sensitive to remarks about appearances. I know what it's like to be looked at and judged by people who don't know you. I gained muscle and reg-ular developmental weight as I got older, but I still remain sensitive to negative remarks and judgments. I once broke up with a guy because I felt that he was a shallow person. We went to a restaurant to eat, and the woman behind the counter was obese. The guy that I was dating said, "I lost my appetite. That woman over there is gross." When I have an impression of someone, it comes from what they say, rather than how they look, I don't think that I could have an intimate relationship with someone who was obese because of my active lifestyle. I work out a lot, and

Carly Reis

Assistant Property Manager Hillcrest

I have no sympathy for someone who is obese and who is going to bitch about being obese and go out and eat a Big Mac. My impression really isn't that good of obese people. I just consider that laziness. I don't want to look like that. My immediate family is very thin. I was always in sports as a kid and very active. My dad's side of the family is really, really obese. My grandmother, my grandfather, and my aunt are all really obese people. My grandmother's health is really affected by her obesity. She doesn't care at all: she still makes the food that she wants.

LEAD STORY

In November, three days after a published report that lawyers were about to collect $350 million on the settlement for the 1988 Pan Am flight 103 explosion (with another $480 million to come, under certain conditions), two Massachusetts law firms sued the state over the 1998 tobacco settlement, claiming that the $775 million in fees they were awarded by an arbitration panel was not enough. The firms say they are due $1.3 billion more under their original contract, although other law firms in the 46-state settlement so far have accepted the arbitrators' awards. A Massachusetts official said a $775 million fee works out to about $6300 per lawyer-hour and a $2.075 billion fee to about $17,000 per lawyer-hour.

High-IQ Mishaps

According to a September safety hearing, British brain surgeon Donald Campbell, 54, crashed his twin-engine plane into a house (he survived, with head injuries) when he ran out of fuel because he miscalculated when converting gallons to liters. (Shoreham, England) ... Internationally renowned neuroscientist Patricia Goldman-Rakic, 66, was fatally run over in August while jaywalking. Police said the driver was not at fault. (Hamden, Conn.)

Long Shot

 In July, a judge allowed Richard Quinton Gunn to act as his own attorney in his aggravatedmurder appeal, following his conviction earlier in the year in Ogden, Utah, by a jury that deliberated two hours. Gunn had confessed, saying he killed his tenant using a crowbar, a butcher knife, a handsaw, a fireplace poker, a 12-inch bolt, a straight-edge razor, an ax, walking canes, a pool cue, and a large salad fork.

Compelling Explanations

- In October, U.S. Rep. Cass Ballenger, 76, R-N.C., told the Charlotte Observer that a large part of the stress that ended his 50-year marriage was the entry into the couple's Washington, D.C., neighborhood of the Council on American-Islamic Relations. The organization moved into a building across the street from the couple's townhouse, which is three blocks from the U.S. Capitol. Ballenger called CAIR a fund-raising arm of the terrorist group Hezbollah and said he and his wife were terrified at seeing women "wearing hoods," moving boxes into the building: "[T]hey could blow [the Capitol] up."

— Ten days after Jonathon Russell killed three people and himself in a workplace-rage incident in Jefferson City, Mo., in July, his mother, Nina Tichelkamp-Russell, filed a workers' compensation claim on his behalf, seeking death benefits. Her version of the cause of death, according to what she wrote on the claim, was "by gunfire while on the company clock." (The employer and its insurance company rejected the claim.) - Demon Babies: LaFayre Marie Banks, 32, was charged with assault and child abuse in Port Huron, Mich., in May after her seven-month-old baby fell from Banks's second-story bathroom window, suffering severe head injuries. Banks told a police officer that she was bathing the child when "it reared up and went through the window." ... In Wetumpka, Ala., in August, Melissa Wright, 27, was sentenced to 25 years in prison for putting her 18-month-old daughter in a hot oven. Wright's version was that the child slipped from her arms, fell to the floor, and rolled into the oven, and then the door closed.

 Denver Garrett, charged with cocaine possession in Monterey, Tenn., in October, told police he bought it only to keep it off the streets and away from children.

 James Howle, 61, and Kevin Williams, 41, stabbed each other in Pomona, Calif., in October in an argument over which of their two unidentified alcoholic beverages tastes better.

People Different From Us

- Loren J. Adams, 40, was convicted in Indianapolis of distributing obscenity in May, based on a business venture that emanated from his interest in watching scenes of bestiality. Not only did Adams's website offer videos of people having sex with horses and snakes, but Adams at one time offered to rent out his three-year-old Great Dane, Tyson, for others' sex videos. Tyson was removed from the home, and Adams still faces a civil charge of animal cruelty, according to a September report in the Indianapolis Star.

Alternate Reality

- Medicare, facing a precarious financial future, decided for the first time this year that seniors who need motorized wheelchairs (typical price: $5500) will have to get an in-person doctor's prescription. Medicare paid $289 million for motorized wheelchairs in 1999, but this year, before the rule change, the estimated expense was $1.2 billion. Medicare also revealed that it is spending $600,000 this year to put its 1-800 telephone number on a blimp that flies over sporting events.

- The New York Times reported in October that Nabors Industries (operator of oil-well drilling rigs), which in 2001 moved its legal headquarters from the U.S. to Barbados (corporate income tax: 1 percent) and its tax headquarters to a mail drop in Bermuda (no corporate income tax), is now insisting that it receive favored U.S. legal status. Nabors wants to be treated as an American-owned company to get a competitive advantage under the 80-year-old Jones Act that bars non-U.S. companies from working on ships involved in domestic trade.

Undignified Deaths

 A 29-year-old 300-pound man was discovered dead (asphyxiation), stuck in a small bathroom window of his home after trying to climb in late at night when he realized he had forgotten his house key. (Paterson, N.J., September) ... A 36-year-old 250-pound man (suspected of being a burglar) was found dead (asphyxiation), stuck in a small kitchen window, discovered by a woman who had gotten up to fix breakfast. (Elgin, Ill., October)

No Longer Weird

 Adding to the list of stories that were formerly weird but which now occur with such frequency that they must be retired from circulation: (67) The usually elderly, momentarily confused driver who intends to stop but mistakenly slams on the gas pedal, often resulting in major destruction, such as the 82-year-old Rochester, N.Y., woman who plowed into nine new cars at a Hyundai dealership in September. (68) The marijuana entrepreneur, with plants and grow equipment throughout his house, who calls police to report a minor crime against him, such as the Victoria, British Columbia, man who in August insisted police come see the video he made of a break-in of his car but was oblivious to his home's powerful marijuana smell.

Readers' Choice

- On Oct. 29, thousands of rush-hour riders had to be rerouted on New York City commuter trains as firefighters tried to free Edwin Gallart, 41, whose arm got stuck in one train's toilet when he reached in to retrieve his fallen cell phone. (The toilet had to be ripped out.) ... The next day in South Philadelphia, a 25-year-old man who had been exposing himself to girls and women in the neighborhood for several weeks tried it one time too many and was chased by "20 to 30" girls from St. Maria Goretti High School, caught, roughed up, and held for police.

In the Past Month...

- Catholic priest Antonio Caetano apologized for hitting a parishioner on the head when she would not leave after her daughter was denied a place in Sunday school because she registered too late. (Souto Redondo, Portugal) ... The city of Winnipeg, Manitoba, installed ten surveillance cameras to help combat pilferage at a municipal dump. ... Vegetable grower A. Duda & Sons introduced a product 15 years in the making and sure to delight Bloody Mary fans: celery stalks that are hollow in the center. (Oviedo, Fla.)

T. G. I. F.

I am complimented heartily on my chicken, and I revel in the praise.

By John Brizzolara

I've mentioned this place before, but not much about it. It is the newest of places I find myself living, my third address in one year. I am not being confessional necessarily, or any more self-pitying than usual. It's just the way things have shaken out for me at this point in my life. I am pleased to report — and this is never a given, by any means — that it is interesting.

This series of bungalow apartments was built, I'm guessing, in the 1920s or even a few years earlier. I've also mentioned that it is quintessentially Southern California, something from Day of the Locust. My cable installer called it "kind of a Tortilla Flats deal, huh?" getting in both a shot and a literary allusion simultaneously. The Elizabethan Apartments (not their real name) consist of two rows of one-bedroom, freestanding bungalows. Two larger duplexes make up a kind of crotch or armpit in this mixed metaphor of a structure. Every tenant is more than usually close to every other tenant, and apartments meant for one or at most two house four. It is a communal situation; but instead of macrobiotic food, new-age religion, UFO cultism, sex, or rock and roll, the tie that binds the 30-some renters is sobriety and abstinence from drugs. It is sometimes referred to as "the last house on the block." Beyond, it is implied, are only jails, institutions, or death.

This may summon an image of last-ditch desperado drunks and junkies, and I can't say that's far off. I am, after all, a drunk. But the image does not include other descriptives like artists, librarians, musicians, legal aides, healthcare workers, chefs, or writers. It may also be added that the dually diagnosed are represented here. Mental illness, for example, bipolarism or manic depression, often accompanies addiction on our résumés. In such close quarters, especially on hot Friday nights when the Santa Anas are blowing and most of us are too broke to go to the movies, restaurants in the Gaslamp, or the symphony, it is remarkable that it is only the occasional shouting match that erupts and not fisticuffs. Rather, it is taken as a matter of course that dinners of Philippine or Italian garlic chicken, tacos, pasta, and pesto are shared around the common area to the background music of live and talented acoustic guitarists-singerssongwriters. VHS tapes and CDs are exchanged in doorways, along with dirty plates and silverware and paperback books about chemical-dependence recovery, Native American shamanism, or steamy historical romance.

We all know much of each other's stories, though by no means all of any one story in particular. Twice a week we gather in a room, once a garage, for 12step meetings. Considering that very few of us are entirely disclosive, it is dis $turbing/moving/touching/frightening \ and, ultimately, very encouraging \ to \ take$ in what is revealed. Imagine a tenants' meeting with much laughter, often tears, always prayer and soul-bearing on subjects like physical and sexual abuse, the mechanics of self-destruction, spiritual awakening, personal relationships, and, above all, recovery from the disease of addiction. While the casual observer on the subject of, say, alcoholism as disease might scowl and dismiss the approach as "excuses" and "justification" for bad behavior, certainly no residents here are about to let themselves off easily regarding anything. On the contrary, more often than not, each neighbor serves as a much-needed reminder of the utility in self-forgiveness.

On this autumn Friday night, after returning from covering a leisure activity. I arrive back at the homestead in time for a haircut appointment with my neighbor. I'll call him Don. A hairstylist for 12 years, Don has cut most of our hair for free at one time or another (I tip, at least) and can always be counted on for not only a first-class haircut, but to regale us with delicious wit. That Don is so consistently upbeat is a marvel considering the wreckage of his past and his recent diagnosis as HIV positive.

Before sitting for my defoliation, I have placed a whole chicken in the oven with quartered onions, sliced garlic, pepper, and olive oil for company. It is the first time I've cooked an entire chicken in years. Yvette, a woman in her early 70s, repeatedly comments on the savory aroma, and I'm already mentally portioning out the thing to two roommates: Don, if he wants some, and now Yvette. It manages to stretch even further to include one of Yvette's roommates. Reinforcements arrive unexpectedly in the form of Don's sister, with still-hot multiple courses left over from a catered TV-commercial set for Direct TV, and the stuff is laid out on a lawn table in the common area.

My roommate, Travis, and I pick up two acoustic guitars. I play an old Harmony Sovereign and he a Mountain. We do Marvin Gaye, Rolling Stones, and Bob Marley to much vociferous encouragement. A few neighbors instigate a game of hacky-sack, and someone passes around a get-well card for one of the neighbors recovering from multiple gunshot wounds. That was another case of a bad past catching up with someone trying to change.

I am complimented heartily on my chicken, and I revel in the praise (when was the last time I cooked for someone else?) and realize I am not only enjoying the company of alcoholics, drug addicts, criminals, and the mentally ill, but I am doing so entirely sober. All the while I remember agonizingly long evenings at dinner parties in La Jolla with architects, interior designers, surgeons, and real-estate brokers, occasions for which there was never enough whiskey.

This Friday night ends with a $1 rental at the video store. Our front door is left open, and neighbors stand outside, smoke, or sit in on a few scenes of Narc with Ray Liotta. It is a gritty, stark, and violent movie, but the unspoken consensus among us is that it offers no competition with our individual pasts pasts that our recovery material tells us we will not regret nor wish to shut the door upon. And tonight that's true, at least for me. But I've also learned that sometimes the past has its own plans in store for us and that sometimes — say, around four in the morning — "no regrets" can be a couple of very empty words.

Fire Plan

The week the fire burned, my kids stayed home from school. I was mostly nasty and impatient with them. Sitting in front of the TV watching oaks and pines shoot flames toward the sky like Roman candles, I found myself annoyed with the kids' ordinary needs. For their part, Rebecca, Angela, Lucy, Johnny, and Ben were bored and churlish. My house was not a very nice place to be.

Tuesday, our babysitter Katie came. Since Katie lives on the far northwestern edge of Valley Center, I had called her Monday afternoon to see how she was. "Has the fire gotten anywhere close to you guys?" I asked.
"No," she answered. "But we've had things packed just in case we have to evacuate."

"The fire can move so fast," I agreed. "If you don't want to come tomorrow, you don't have to. I should warn you, the kids are out of school. You'll have everyone." Normally, Katie watches Johnny and Ben and her own two kids on Tuesdays and Thursdays while my girls are in school. In the afternoons, Johnny goes to kindergarten, leaving Katie with only three kids. With everyone home, she would be watching seven.

"That's okay," Katie said. "Unless something drastic changes tonight, we'll be there tomorrow morning.'

Tuesday morning, Katie and Aidan and baby Gemma arrived at 9:00. Benjamin jumped from the spot where he had been sitting beside me on the couch and ran to the front door. "Aidan!" Ben cried out. "I've missed you so much a lot." Ben and Aidan threw their arms around each other like tussling bear cubs. Aidan is six weeks younger than Ben. Since Katie started watching the boys a year ago, Ben and Aidan have become best friends.

"Johnny, Ben, Johnny, Ben," Aidan exclaimed.

"Did you bring Mavis?" Ben asked.

Aidan fished Mavis, one of Thomas the Tank Engine's friends, from his pocket. "Let's go find Thomas and Percy," Aidan answered. The only thing Aidan and Ben love more than each other are Thomas the Tank Engine and all the other Thomas trains and characters. The two boys disappeared into the family room, where they started laying out wooden track and assembling their engines and cars.

Rebecca, Angela, and Lucy swarmed baby Gemma, who sat cooing and smiling in her car seat. Gemma was born in July. I expected Katie to take three or four months off before she started babysitting for us again. Near the end of July, Katie called and said, "I'm going for my six-week postpartum checkup the third week in August. If you want me, I'll come back

Ben missed Aidan so much, and I missed the help. "That would be great," I told Katie.

My girls love Gemma. "Can I hold her first?" Rebecca asked this past smoky Tuesday morning.

"No fair," Lucy complained. "Rebecca held her first last time.'

"I never get to hold her first," Angela interjected.

"Ladies, ladies," Katie smiled like Mary Poppins. "You'll all get a chance."

I went upstairs to take my shower and make the beds. When I came back down, Lucy sat on the couch cradling Gemma in her skinny arms. "Mommy," Lucy said, "Gemma smiled at me.'

"That's great, Sweetie," I told her.

I found Katie in the family room reading a book to Johnny. "Here's the plan for today, I told her. "Lucy is going to spend the day at her friend Jamie's house. I'm going to drop her off, then run a few errands. I know we're supposed to stay inside, but I need to take some re-fi papers to the escrow office in Escondido and get a few Halloween things. Angela's coming with me. We'll be home a little after lunch."

A few minutes later, I backed the van out of our garage and headed toward Jamie's house. I turned on the headlights and drove through the yellow-brown fog and smoke. "My eyes hurt, Mommy," Lucy said.

"Mine do, too," I told her. "The smoke makes them hurt."

"It stinks," Angela offered.

"You're right. If I leave the air conditioning on and hit the recirculation button, the air won't smell so bad.'

"What's the recirc — whatever button?" Lucy asked.

"It's just a button that keeps new air from coming into the car." "Oh. So we won't be breathing as much smoke." "That's right."

"Mommy, is our house going to burn down?" Angela asked.

"Yes, they did. Some people died in the

The girls both sat quietly for a little while. "We should pray for them, Mommy," Angela said.

"You're right. We should."

I dropped Lucy at Jamie's. Angela and I drove deeper into the dusky light as we headed toward Escondido. We made two stops. Each time, we walked quickly from our car to the front door. Angela pulled her shirt up over her nose and mouth.

A little after noon, Angela and I sat in the Escondido Marie Callender's eating lunch. 'When will the fire be over?" Angela asked.

I thought about all the people who had lost homes and lives, the neighborhoods in Scripps Ranch and Crest reduced to rubble. "Soon, I hope," I answered.
