Disaster Recipe

Finally someone had the time to expose that less-than-stellar United States Representative "Duncan Hines" Hunter ("Friends with Duncan Hunter," May 27). Like the dessert mix, he is substandard in his field (he even looks like he had one/two million times too many products made from Duncan Hines!). There are even Republicans in his district who liked Lionel Van Deerlin better.

Even though Lionel Van Deerlin was affiliated with small scandals, as mentioned, they are inconsequential compared to the misdeeds of Representative "Duncan Hines" Hunter. Moreover, one can see from this article that he seems to spend a disproportionate amount of his attention outside of his district, or for that matter, outside of the state of California. An egregious example is the fact that he has the power to either expand Lindbergh Field or build a new airport altogether. Nonetheless, he persists, as many observers of Congress, an obstructionist. Certainly, Lionel Van Deerlin, while in Congress, was significantly more productive.

As one who has followed congressional campaigns nationwide, I was aware of Duncan Hines's victory over Lionel Van Deerlin. I was not even in California during this time, but this election made press as an example of someone riding on Ronald Reagan's coattails. If we cannot have Lionel in Congress, we can read his quality column every Wednesday in the pathetic Union-Trivialbune. I am certain that Duncan Hines cannot write such a great column, much less bake! Sadly, he is cooking a whole lot of no-good.

Hunter Cares

Our armed forces personnel make great sacrifices to protect us and are very much underpaid! Congressman Hunter's support for a military pay raise was barely mentioned ("Friends with Duncan Hunter," May 27). He cares deeply about them.

And the fact he golfs, hunts, and fishes — so do I! Keep up the good work, Congressman Hunter.

Vivid Metaphor

I loved the poem called "Horses" in the May 27 edition of the Reader ("Poetry"). His metaphor of ironed silk for the horses stays vivid in my mind.

Too Much Fungus

I want to compliment Judith Moore on her article "Slow Animals," all about tomatoes, in the May 27 Reader. I think it's a wonderful article. I'm going to save this copy of the Reader, definitely. I've been growing tomatoes in the yard at home for almost 45 years off and on. I've grown them in Illinois and Louisiana — didn't do too well in Louisiana; too much fungus, I guess, in the air. I've grown them in California for about 30 years almost.

How About Ratt?

To the editor of the Reader, regarding the great writers you have. This is in regard to Josh Board, who wrote the article about local band Psychotic Waltz ("Psychotic Waltz," May 27). Myself, I've been in the San Diego music scene over 12 years, published a local SD magazine in 2003, talent buyer/promoter for local club here in SD for over 5 years. Honestly, it was very cool to see Psychotic Waltz be noticed again, even if it's for "where they are now" or something even related.

But this writer you have, Josh Board, making his last statement about Norm Leggio now becoming a John Cusack. You tell me, what the f@%# does that mean? Norm makes a statement in the early '90s, just wanted to be remembered like a John

Ribbon of Dorian Gray Last year, as the invasion of Iraq wound down and President George W. Bush and his party flew into Coronado for his well-remembered "Mission Accomplished" speech aboard the carrier Abraham Lin- coln, county politicians rushed to tie a giant yellow ribbon and bow around the central tower of the county administration building on Harbor Drive. "We want this to be the first thing that they see," county supervisor Dianne Jacob told reporters. "We're sending a very strong message that we love you, we appreciate you, and thank you for your service to our country." Her colleague Greg Cox added that he had told the president about the ribbon, paid for by a $15,000 donation from the Sycuan Casino, during a brief conversation after his arrival at North Island. "He said he thought it was a great effort," Cox was quoted as saying. "He appreciated that." In order to get a crane in time for Bush's arrival, contractor Tom Flynn told the Union-Tribune, a little pressure had to be applied. "It was something along the lines of, 'Oh, no problem. We'll just call the White House and have them tell the president we can't get the bow up in time, and he'll be disappointed.' They said, 'Okay, okay.'" Ever since, the ribbon has remained tied to the building, but more passersby are complaining that it needs to be cleaned up or replaced. "It's extremely dirty and weather-worn," observes one county worker who looks up at the decoration every day on the way to work. "It's not really yellow anymore. More like dirty gray or sickening green or black-streaked something else. Not a very patriotic way to honor our troops." Calls to various county offices regarding the ribbon's derelict condition went unreturned as of press time.

Black's mark San Diego's city library commission has been hit by some political fallout from the mayor's race. Laurie Black, an active Democrat who is a Kerry delegate at this summer's national convention in Boston, has reportedly received word she won't be reappointed by Mayor Dick Murphy to another four-year term. City-hall insiders say it has something to do with the Murphy camp's pique over Black's endorsement of retired banker Peter Q. Davis over Murphy during March's mayoral primary campaign. The fate of another Davis supporter, Mary Ann Pintar, an ex-aide to former mayor Susan Golding, is also hanging in the balance ... San Diego's ethics commission wants to stop using the legal services of the city attorney's office and instead hire outside counsel. Skeptics note that the move coincides with the impending departure of city attorney Casey Gwinn and the possible election of Michael Aguirre, viewed as not so friendly to the downtown establishment, as his successor. Three years ago, when civic watchdog Mel Shapiro urged that an independent attorney be hired, the powers that be were opposed. "Gwinn's Public Integrity Section has not done its job — that's why we need an ethics commission." Responded Gwinn in an e-mail to Shapiro: "The fact that we did not file charges against a councilmember should not cause you to attack the character of my staff members." Meanwhile, city officials say they will soon begin requiring electronic filing of campaign finance disclosure information.

Shrinkage Look for another round of fireworks at next week's San Diego school district board meeting as superintendent Alan Bersin attempts to shutter more of the district's schools. "Historic and forecasted enrollment decline, particularly at the elementary level, has led to a situation where there is a potential to close a number of small elementary schools," says a Bersin briefing for the June 8 meeting. "Concurrently the district is experiencing a shortfall in its unrestricted budget. Closure of small schools would allow the redirection of unrestricted funding to other district needs." Downsides of the move, according to the report, include $60,000 per school in teacher relocation costs and the accelerated flight of students from the district's remaining schools. That would happen "if families from closed schools choose charter, private, or out-of-district schools rather than transfer to their new neighborhood school." The memo attributes the enrollment fall-off — almost 6000 kindergarten through fifth-grade students in this school year alone — to a "decline in births" since the "early-mid 1990s" and "more recently [to] significant increases in the area housing costs." In choosing the schools to close, the report says, such criteria as "enrollment trends" and "site characteristics" — including whether the school is close to freeways, "high-pressure underground gas lines" or "known fault lines or former landfills" — were used. "Initial closure recommendations" for the school year beginning in 2005 include Rolando Park Elementary, Crown Point Elementary, and Barnard Elementary in Point Loma. If Rolando Park is closed, the report concludes, families may "choose to enroll in the nearby Rolando Elementary School in the La Mesa-Spring Valley School District rather than continue in a district school located farther away (Carver, Clay) or with lower achievement levels (Darnall charter)." Each school closed saves the district $360,000 a year, the report concludes, and money might even be made by turning the sites over to local real estate developers for commercial uses.

How Is the Coaster Doing?

By Joe Deegan

For nine years, the Coaster ran 100 feet from Mitchell Reiss's bedroom window in Carlsbad. Two months ago, Reiss moved from his proximity to the Poinsettia station to the South Bay "to get as far away from the Coaster as possible." The noise drove him away, as well as "other nuisances" from the trains' headlights and gathering passengers. Despite his entreaties to the North County Transit District for relief, officials continually told Reiss there was no noise pollution at the

In his letter, Reiss charges that since 1996 the Union-Tribune has reprinted glowing accounts of the Coaster's performance by the North County Transit District and the San Diego Association of Governments (SANDAG). As the most recent example, he cites the March 20 story by Lola Sherman titled "Coaster Trains Growing Along with Ridership." In its third para-ger tallies for the Coaster, never published in the Union-Tribune. The link to this data (<http://cart.sandag.cog.ca.us/pcp/guest.asp>) leads Reiss to the average number of daily Coaster passengers between 1996 to 2003 (2004's averages are not yet available). In a simple table, he displays the average daily passengers from a low of 2793 in 1996 to a high of 5802 in 2003.

The Union-Tribune seems to have understated the 2003 figures in the article: 4500 average daily passengers versus the transit district's 5802. But in his letter, Reiss argues that the real problem comes from the paper repeating (from statements made by the transit district and the association of governments) daily passenger totals rather than writes that San Marcos councilman Mike Preston "inadvertently...let the cat out of the bag" by suggesting why the more "accurate" numbers aren't on the site.

From the February issue of the Union-Tribune, Reiss quotes, "Coasters carry more than 5600 passengers a day, San Marcos Councilman Mike Preston noted at a meeting of the [North County Transit District Board of Directors] monitoring committee yesterday. But he said those figures include everyone boarding in both directions, so probably only half that number of separate individuals rides the train daily."

Returning to his own commentary, Reiss asks, "Are the directors of NCTB really ues Reiss. "They throw around the biggest numbers they can, as shown above, and leave it to the reader to divine the distinction between a passenger and a person. Sometimes they go too far. An editorial advocating $18 million in fixes for the system (May 20, 1999) contained this statement: 'Almost 5000 commuters now use the Coaster. That's a lot of cars that are no longer traveling on Interstate 5.'"

In Reiss's next paragraph, he wraps up his argument: "The Coaster load figures as reported in the Union-Tribune have been systematically camouflaged by a factor of 2 since the Coaster went into service. The reality is that in 2003 (the Coaster's best year) less than 2900 people took the 260,000 cars Caltrans says go through the I-5/805 merge every weekday. He remembers a story the Union-Tribune ran on February 20 of this year, titled "I-5/805 Merge Among Nation's Most Clogged." Nowhere in the article, he writes, was the alleviating effect of the Coaster mentioned.

Thus, Reiss argues in the letter's conclusion, "The Coaster is not a solution to the County's transportation problems. It's not a partial solution. It's not even a potential solution." And, for that reason, he thinks the Coaster is a waste of money, especially when that money might be spent in better ways.

But in a phone interview, Garry Bonelli, director of communications for the San Diego Association of Governments, says that only lack of parking in the I-5 corridor is preventing the Coaster from "tripling the number of its riders." He mentions 6000 as the number of passengers the line now serves but acknowledges that number to be the total of south- and northbound commuters.

Bonelli remembers that the Coaster project got started in 1995 with an original investment of $243 million, $90 million of that from TransNet funds from a half-cent sales tax approved in 1987. According to the North County Transit District website (www.gonctd.com), in fiscal year 2003, the rail line's operating budget had total expenses of $58.5 million. Fiscal year 2004's expenses are projected to be $61.9 million.

Of the Coaster's $61 million revenues for 2003 ($62.9 million estimated for 2004), $12,916,070 came from passenger fares. Most of the rail's remaining revenues came from the state Transportation Development Act tax ($27.6 million) and the TransNet tax ($4,118,870 million).

The fate of the TransNet tax is currently deadlocked at the association of governments. The tax is scheduled to expire in March 2008 but will be eligible for extension approval in this November's election. According to a March 11, 2004, Union-Tribune article by Jeff Ristine

Reiss learned everything he could about the Coaster, and his preoccupation convinced him that the rail line is bad for taxpayers and bad for San Diego County commuters. He made his case in a late-February letter to the editor to the San Diego Union-Tribune. At 2500-plus words, his statement was long for a letter; the Union-Tribune declined to publish any part of it.

graph, the article states, "Ridership is averaging 5122 passengers on weekdays, up from 4500 at this time last year." The story touts the Coaster's acquisition of six new $2 million coaches to handle the increase; it also quotes North County Transit District spokesman Tom Kelleher as saying that now "every coach and locomotive is in service."

"Deeply embedded on the SANDAG website," writes Reiss, "are the actual passen-more specific data on northbound and southbound riders. If the numbers for 2003 are checked on the "deeply embedded SANDAG website," the figures indicate 2929 northbound passengers and 2873 southbound passengers.

Even 4500 average daily passengers, though lower than the website's number, indicates greater Coaster success than the 2929 northbound and 2873 southbound passengers posted. Reiss unaware that the vast majority of people who take the Coaster are, and have always been, round-trip commuters?" Perhaps "this is the first time an NCTD or SANDAG official has publicly revealed this complicated insight, or...it's the first time the Union-Tribune has seen fit to print it.

"The Union-Tribune, following NCTD's lead, has been engaged in word games for close to a decade," contintheir cars off the freeway and rode the Coaster instead."

The May 20, 1999, Union-Tribune editorial also noted that without the "almost 5000 commuters now [using] the Coaster," the 7:00 to 8:00 a.m. backup of traffic to Encinitas on I-5 would extend up to Carlsbad. But Reiss thinks that the true figure of "less than 2900 people [taking] their cars off the freeway" is a "drop in the bucket," especially in light of

of the institute.

"But the numbers quoted for Phoenix are a few years old," complains Lisa Briggs, executive director of the taxpayers association. Similarly, when DeMaio compared certain San Diego spending with Baltimore and Atlanta, the numbers for those cities were somewhat askew, she charges.

In some cases, the institute

"is not doing thorough research, has not footnoted things," says Mitch Mitchell, vice president of the chamber.

DeMaio strongly denies that any of these numbers are inaccurate or the comparisons invidious. But even if the Phoenix numbers are somewhat out of date, San Diego's mayor and council are still spending far too much. If the Atlanta and Baltimore numbers are a bit off, that is hardly a venal sin: there is no such thing as an apples-to-apples comparison among cities. Also, San Diego government has denied information to DeMaio and complained when he went directly to city employees for reform suggestions.

CITY LIGHTS

Murphy's chief of staff, John Kern, "had voiced concern about the Performance Institute," says Briggs, who also fielded complaints from the city manager and finance director. Here is a city under criminal investigation for cooking the books and misleading its bondholders. San Diego's deliberate underfunding of its pension system, as well as its egregious accounting machinations, have put it on the financial brink. Yet its officials hoot at an institute that may have made minor errors and, says Mitchell, has taken "an antagonistic approach."

In San Diego, the honest players get sent to the penalty box; city officials plus the downtown corporate-welfare crowd — in concert with organized labor — work to besmirch reformers. It's very much like the vilification of Diann Shipione, who two years ago blew the whistle on the pension mess. This denigration has abated somewhat, particularly since last month, both the New York Times and Fortune magazine prominently featured San Diego in stories about the handful of cities with the worst self-inflicted pension quagmires. Shipione was quoted in both. Had she not challenged the honesty of a sewer-bond prospectus last year, the city would never have confessed its accounting/disclosure sins in January.

DeMaio has offered a list of 219 reform options the city could pursue. All are good; some are excellent. None will be unanimously hailed. There are too many pressure groups for that. But some must be adopted, or the city will indeed go into bankruptcy.

Here are some examples: Today, motorcycle cops get bonuses for washing their vehicles each week. "If you hired neighborhood kids to wash motorcycles, the savings would be $250,000 a year," says DeMaio. Also, the city does its own maintenance on police vehicles. The average cost per vehicle is $8,848. That comes to $12.5 million a year. If the job were outsourced, the city could save $4.5 million, says the institute.

The institute believes in

L a s e r V i s i o n C o r r e c t i o n

Dear Heroes,

In the course of our busy lives, we lose sight of the many people who work courageously on a daily basis to keep us safe and keep our families and our lifestyle intact.

For a limited time, as a Thank You to these often-unsung heroes, and to help them perform their dangerous jobs more effectively, I will be offering LASIK (laser vision correction) at one half of my usual fee (which is below cost) to active members of the following groups:

- The Military
- Law Enforcement Agencies or Departments
- Fire Departments
- The Department of Homeland Security

I want to thank you for your skills by offering my surgical skills at below cost.

Vision without glasses or contacts should allow you to perform your job more safely and effectively so that we can all feel more secure.

This is just one small way that I can give back to a community that has been so good to me.

Sincerely,

Glenn Kawesch, M.D.

competition between the public and private sector. Both would bid on a job. If the government could do it cheaper and better, it would get the work. "Competition between employees and outsourcing usually leads to 10 to 30 percent savings," he says.

His group has the backing of the libertarian Reason Foundation, although DeMaio himself is a Republican who has worked for President Bush and Governor Schwarzenegger on budget issues. Libertarians are especially keen on outsourcing. "DeMaio is not pushing privatization hard enough," says Richard Rider, San Diego's most outspoken libertarian. "The only way to get rid of the pension problem is to get rid of public employees."

But others argue — cogently in many cases — that privatization is no panacea. DeMaio says that the city and outside vendors could bid on maintenance of Mission Bay and Torrey Pines golf courses. Savings could be $950,000 to $2.8 million. However, councilmember Donna Frye, a Democrat, says, "The fact is that until October, the Mission Bay golf course was leased to a private entity. The city could not reach an agreement with the leaseholder and took the golf course over. It was a mess and hard to find out who was accountable."

Counters DeMaio, "My sources say the reason the city canceled the contract is it needed to find employment for people in groundskeeping. It canceled the contract so it didn't have to lay off city workers."

Frye also disagrees with suggestions to have more commercialization of the beaches, such as billboards on lifeguard towers. But DeMaio and Frye have great respect for one another. "She told me, 'Don't let the turkeys get you down. Don't view yourself from the downtown crowd's eyes,'" says DeMaio, who was warned by a city government insider, "You are not respecting social norms, not respecting the tribe."

"I have looked at some of his ideas, and there are some errors. Some of the suggested changes are oversimplified, and some are valid," says Frye.

"That's no different than the city manager's report." She will be working with DeMaio.

Only that kind of give-and-take will lead to the massive changes that are desperately needed. But the overlords don't want give-and-take. They only take. "We proposed weaning the convention center off its subsidy over a four-year period," says DeMaio, who believes the corporate-welfare moochers won't like that. Similarly, he wants developers to spend more on infrastructure (such as building new fire stations). And he has a plan to boost fees of large trash haulers, although their payments would fall if they did more recycling.

Otherwise, DeMaio has not yet taken on corporate welfare, mainly because he has concentrated on the general fund, and the corporate giveaways are concentrated in enterprise funds and special projects. The establishment's worry "is that DeMaio is not controllable," says former councilmember Bruce Henderson. "There isn't much in his suggestions that ruffle [establishment] feathers, but their concern is that tomorrow he will ruffle feathers."

He does ruffle labor's feathers. He wants to get rid of the egregious Deferred Retirement Option Plan by which city employees almost double their pay in their last five years and walk off with both fat monthly retirement checks and generous lump sums.

So labor is hopping mad. And the establishment is wary, "because in the last ten years, the corporate-welfare people got into bed with labor — to sell the ballpark, for example," says Henderson.

As long as the business establishment, unions, and government leaders oppose reforms, there will be no internal pressure to clean up the city's accounting. San Diego will continue to plunder water and sewer funds and switch the money to the general fund, raising sewer and water rates and obviating a tax-increase vote that would require two-thirds approval. The city will go on counting revenues in current years that truly belong in the following year.

Only criminal indictments and civil penalties might thwart such activities. Once again, as in the 1960s and 1970s, it will take the federal government to cleanse San Diego. The smearing of Carl DeMaio makes that clear. ■ and Lola Sherman, the North County Transit District now suggests that "less money be given to streets and roads and environmental mitigation projects and more to traffic-congestion relief, including transit projects."

But according to the article, county supervisor Dianne Jacob is resisting that idea. So far, her lone vote — against representatives of 18 municipalities at the San Diego Association of Governments — is stalling a $9.5 billion spending plan. Jacob wants at least 28 percent of the TransNet tax's $42 million devoted to local streets and roads.

Four days later, on March 15, the Union-Tribune reported that Jacob (representing the county's Board of Supervisors) was sticking to her guns. "Jacob argued that the current TransNet spending formula...has failed to limit congestion. 'The congestion problems today...are on our roads and highways,' she said. 'That's where a majority of the money should go.'"

Mitchell Reiss can relate. "Freeway capacity provides 24-hour availability and true point-to-point access," he observes in his letter. "Contrast that to the heavily restricted and inflexible nature of the Coaster. That, of course, is one of the main reasons no one wants to ride it. A dollar spent on a freeway buys something vastly different from a dollar spent on a train."

More than a year ago, a Union-Tribune editorial (March 6, 2003) did seem to "get it," writes Reiss. The paper's editorial-board members "indicate that not every alternative to the automobile is worth pursuing, depending on the cost. [Their] best comment? A subsidized system 'ridden by next to nobody is a subsidy wasted' ... Only one problem — the article was about the Wave, the pilot ferry project from Oceanside to San Diego, not the Coaster. It turns out that the editorial board of the Union-Tribune isn't stupid. They aren't oblivious to the issues. They can count. They can evaluate the situation, do an analysis, reach critical conclusions, and identify poor decisions. They only do their job selectively." ■

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Heymatt:

What's the story behind Miranda in our Miranda rights? Were they named after a real woman? If so, was she a quiet woman? And who is the Murphy of Murphy's Law? Did anything ever go right for him?

— JBP, the net

Compared to Miranda, Murphy was a luck magnet. And Miranda wasn't very silent, which is why everything hit the fan in the first place. So here's "Eponymous Phrases for Dummies," by Matthew Alice.

Ernesto Miranda was arrested in 1963 in Arizona for robbery. While in custody, he confessed to a recent kidnapping and rape. The prosecution had no trouble persuading the jury to convict him. Defense lawyers appealed, saying Miranda had not been advised that the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution gave him the right to refuse to incriminate himself by confessing. In 1966 the U.S. Supreme Court agreed (Miranda v. Arizona). Miranda was retried in Arizona, using other evidence, and again found guilty; but his name has stuck to the disclaimer now read to all arrestees. P.S.: After his parole, the unfortunate defendant was killed in a bar fight. If something could go wrong for Mr. Miranda, it seems it often did.

Edward A. Murphy, on the other hand, was one of several engineers doing research for the Air Force at Edwards AFB in the mid-1940s. The experiment in question involved measuring the reaction of the human body to certain extreme forces. Only when the test was complete did they realize someone had wired some meters backwards and they had no data. One of the engineers took an already well-known adage (if something can be done two ways, one of which will be disastrous, then someone will do it that way) and assigned it the name "Murphy's Law" after his colleague. It gained popularity in military and engineering circles, then in the general population many years later. And here's Matthew's Law: If you discover there's more than one story about who Murphy was, and you think my choice sucks, then you go get your own column and you deal with these word-origin guys, who never seem to agree about anything.

Matthew, my friend:

Why do I have to turn down the volume on the car radio when I'm doing something like looking for a street address? It's like I can't find what I'm looking for with the radio on. But I can drive okay with the radio on. Does this make sense?

— Confused, driving around Chula Vista

Waaa! Waaa! Waaa! Sensory overload! Distraction, distraction! Brain log-off! Memory destruct! Way too much input, Confused, and there's plenty of neurological research to explain what's going on. Noise (including organized noise like music) interferes with task performance. Sound does share some brain pathways with visual information. You instinctively reach for the volume knob to allow your head to concentrate on one thing at a time. Tunes, especially loud, bass-thumping numbers, increase stress hormones. If you're partying, being amped on adrenaline and cortisol is called "having fun." If you're late for a meeting and looking for a parking space, it's called stress. The stress also interferes with short-term memory, making it even harder to find that danged house number. You turn down the volume in sheer self-defense. Your brain thanks you.

Matt:

I've noticed a trend in a lot of the newer CDs. At the end, if you keep playing, after a few minutes a "hidden song" comes on, a song not listed on the jacket. It is on the same track as the last song listed. Why do they hide them? Wouldn't one more track make the CD more of a better deal?

— Confused listener, Poway

A trend? This hidden-song business is so old it's more like a tradition. As for why it's done, well, for no practical reason. Just because they can do it, probably. It stopped being cool 30 years ago, but then everything old is new again, I guess. The hidden song, ghost song, or Easter egg can be a true tune, an interview, gibberish, bloodcurdling screams, whatever. You'll find them on discs by everybody from the Doors to Insane Clown Posse to Jimmy (gag!) Buffett — Guns N' Roses, Chris Rock, Weird Al, and Enrique (¡hijole!) Iglesias. The Clash's "Train in Vain" was a hidden song on the original release of London Calling. The Stones' 1967 LP Their Satanic Majesties Request has a distorted Christmas tune at the end of side one and could be the first egglike insert. Others say the Beatles' 1969 Abbey Road bonus, "Her Majesty," was the first true hidden song; it was not listed on the original UK pressing, though it was later. It's common for hidden songs to become unhidden (labeled — even hyped!) on remasters, re-releases, and compilation packages.

This aural "Where's Waldo?" has a newish twist. Instead of inserting the hidden song after three or four minutes of dead air after the last song, some CDs have eggs hidden before the first track. Insert the CD, press play, wait a bit, press pause, press rewind. If your counter goes back below zero, you've accessed an Easter egg. Enjoy.

Horse-Hauling Buckaroo

I'm on the phone with Tony Anthony of Bob Hubbard Horse Transportation. For readers who didn't stop by last week, Anthony has 12 years with Hubbard and has been hauling animals since 1971. Anthony tells me Hubbard's long-haul, cross-country trucks are equipped with satellite communications, "If I run into a problem, something I think is an emergency, I can reach our main office in Colton, California, 24 hours a day, seven days a week."

I ask, "Have you ever had to use it?" Tony says, without a second's hesitation, "A codriver fell asleep on me in Oregon. We were headed south, and he drove off the road, all the way over the divider, over both northbound lanes and 110 yards into the timber. Totaled the truck out. This is 1:00 in the morning." Anthony laughs, "I was asleep in the back of the cab."

"What happened to the horses?" "Surprisingly enough, no cripples. Some of them were a little banged up, a couple stitches here and there...a bit of a nightmare inside the trailer."

"So, you found the satellite gear and called Colton?"

I hear a grunt indicating agreement. Anthony continues, "It was 1:00 in the morning, couldn't move the truck, couldn't find my cell phone. So, I used the satellite. There's a computer keyboard, there's a screen, you type in a message, and it shoots it out to an operator in San Diego who relays it back to our office in Colton."

Anthony says, more to himself than to me, "He was behind the wheel for an hour. We stopped and fueled the truck, watered the horses, got a bite to eat, did a lot of paperwork, and took off. We went through one little town that had a 24-hour restaurant and drove past a rest area. Having done this for a long time, I know you don't fall instantly asleep. Your head bobs when you get tired. He had chances; he could have stopped. It was early in the morning, it was cool, the horses were riding good; he could have stopped for a cup of coffee. We were lucky: all the bad things that could have happened, none of them did."

"Do horses ever get ornery, get in fights while you're driving?" They must.

"You're dealing with 10 to 12 horses," Anthony says. "They're like people. They have personalities. They have good days and bad days. They can ride side by side, day after day, and not have a problem and all of a sudden one of them gets an attitude and explodes. Then, the one next to him gets excited and scared. The inside of a trailer is very open. Horses have stalls, but they can see each other and get to each other. They start crawling up over things. The trailer is rocking and rolling.

"You don't really want to open the doors and get in there with them, but you have to. You can't let it go on when it's your responsibility, so you grit your teeth and get in there. A person with common sense thinks, 'Hey, you got all those 1000-pound animals fighting each other. Don't get in there with them.'"

"Sounds like riding bulls in a rodeo." Actually, it sounds worse.

"You can bluff 99 percent of your horses. They have been convinced that humans are the boss. They don't realize that they are way bigger, way stronger than you are. If they do figure out that they are bigger and stronger, you have a serious problem. You get in there and get ahold of them, shout and scream at them, get their attention off of what they're doing to each other and on to you. It's, 'Uh-oh, here's a human, I better pay attention, he's the boss.'"

"Have you ever had a horse who knew he was bigger and stronger?"

"Oh, yes...thoroughbreds. They start breeding them at four or five years old. When they're 22, 23 years old, they've been doing nothing but eating and being bred and being the boss for the last 17, 18 years. No manners. They're big, they're strong; they will strike, bite, and kick."

"How do you deal with that?" "Carefully. It's not if you get hurt; it's when and how bad you get hurt. You very seldom get hurt by a bad horse because you know he's bad and you watch him. You don't turn your back on him, you're careful around him, you're looking at him, you pay attention. It's the little private-party pet horse from somebody's back yard that you turn your back to or you get too close to. He will hurt you."

Last question. "How many bones have you broken?"

"Nothing serious. I've had ribs broken, collar bone broken, stuff like that. But, it's continual. You get kicked and it's a sore muscle or you get stepped on or you get mashed against the wall. It's not like you're disabled, but there is always something that hurts."

"Western society and the Western Church have lost their soul. They need to come back to St. Catherine of Siena, St. John of the Cross, St. Teresa of Avila.

"What happened? The people of the West were attracted by the charisma of progress. They sold their soul to technology. They could have kept both, technology and their soul, and the world would have been a better place."

Early last week, Father Nabil Mouannes of St. Ephrem Mission, a Maronite parish in El Cajon, told me that he believed that the Roman Catholic Church's mystical tradition had sustained his people through many centuries of Muslim rule in Lebanon. He also said his greatest challenge in leading a parish in this part of the world was, "convincing my people that our tradition is one of holiness and intelligence and wisdom, that ours is a tradition of unity between reason and faith."

I called Father Nabil because, some weeks ago, a religious news service I subscribe to had announced that on May 16th the pope would elevate a 19th-century Maronite monk, Nimatullah Kassab al-Hardini, to sainthood. I wondered what this meant for Maronites.

"It was an extremely joyous occasion for us," Father Nabil said. "It means a lot. Although we are part of the Roman Catholic Church, no one knows about us, especially in the Anglo-Saxon world. This canonization was a reminder that we are one with the Roman Catholic Church and that we have a very special blessing from the Lord. He's never left us alone, even when we were persecuted in Lebanon and nobody was asking about us. The Lord has always provided us with saints who lived as an example for us, who were willing to sacrifice everything for their faith. This is one of the great reasons why we survived."

I visited St. Ephrem last Sunday, in the middle of a three-day festival in honor of the Virgin Mary. On the parish grounds stands a very large shrine to Mary, topped by a stark white statue of her cradling the infant Jesus in her arms. Father Nabil kept urging the several hundred people present to visit the shrine and pray a special devotion to the Virgin in Aramaic, one of the languages American Maronites use in their liturgy along with Arabic and English.

St. Ephrem's liturgy was an example of what "Catholic" can mean. A female soloist led last Sunday's first hymn and it sounded to me much like a classical Arabic melody, long minor-key phrases filled with sad yearning. We stood for most of the service. And although Father Nabil and Bishop Robert Shaheen, who was on hand for the festival, celebrated the Eucharist facing the congregation, there were differences from what you might nowadays experience in your average American Roman Catholic Church.

"During this festival we honor Mary, the Mother of God, the Queen of Mothers," Bishop Shaheen said in his homily. "But what does this have to do with Pentecost? Mary was there with the Apostles to strengthen them, to love and support them. Hers is an eternal role. We know from Scripture that the Eucharist we celebrate is a feast from the beginning of time.

It was in the mind of God from the beginning of time, and in the mind of God, Mary was also present. After seeing The Passion of the Christ, a Protestant woman said to me, 'In our faith, we forget the Blessed Mother. The movie made me understand how she must have been broken by what happened to her son.'

"So, during this festival, we honor the Blessed Virgin, and all the people of our faith who came before us and whom she supported. They were persecuted. They could have changed their religion. But with her help, they remained faithful. May she bring to that beautiful land, Lebanon, peace and freedom."

Father Nabil had told me, "the Eucharist is a mystical experience for us. It is the center of our spiritual life. During the liturgy, we meditate upon its meaning." Last Sunday, while Bishop Shaheen consecrated the Host, people around me for several moments covered their eyes with one hand and seemed lost in intense thought. During Communion, everyone received the Host on his tongue.

After the service, folks lined up at booths serving homemade Lebanese food. Little boys tossed around a softball in the parking lot and sold rosaries to parishioners as they left. Families swarmed around Father Nabil and Bishop Shaheen to greet and kiss them.

"We had to hide in the mountains," is what Father Nabil said when I asked him to describe the differences between Maronites and Christians in the West. "We had people who were willing to sacrifice their lives, physically, spiritually, financially, to save the community. God kept us alive as a testimony to the Muslim world. The Virgin Mary, she helped us, she protected us. They tried many times, by sword and proselytization, to convert us. We're still here."

Dear Readers,

One of the things that warms my heart about this job is when readers take time to write in and offer additional information or views about letters that have appeared here. One such letter lurks below.

Trudy, Trudy, Trudy,

I felt I just had to reply to your reply regarding "Confused in Clairemont" (May 13, 2004). Why do I get the old double standard tingly feeling about your answer to this woman's "dilemma"? Let's look at the facts as stated: (a) She loves him very much. (b) She has already decided she doesn't want to marry the guy. (c) She does not want interaction with a child to complicate her life. (d) She does not want to have to deal with any baggage (ex-wife) that might be attached to the relationship. (e) She is undecided about staying in San Diego. (f) She wants to explore the world (I am assuming without him...). (g) She knows she has no future with him. (h) In spite of all the neon signs, he loves her enough to abandon his manhood and overlook all that. She probably has enough reasons for not committing to the guy to fill up the rest of the alphabet. Is this woman just in the relationship until the right guy comes along and then the current boyfriend gets the pink slip and a hearty handshake? If this was a guy in the same situation, would he not be accused of stringing the girl along and being a jerk who only thinks of his own pleasure? She needs to be honest with herself and him; cut the guy loose to find someone who loves and accepts him for what he can offer. They need to both move on... I think your answer to this woman was overly sympathetic and totally disregarded the other involved party. You do her a disservice by not showing her how selfish and demeaning she is and perhaps allowing her to grow a little from this relationship.

Dear Aunt Trudy,

I work at a San Diego-area college, which I am not going to name for reasons you will soon understand. Recently a colleague of mine, whom I like, had a tiff with the head of our department — a man known far and wide for being difficult, arbitrary, proud, competitive, mercurial, and hard to get along with. We all tiptoe around him. "Les" was taking a lot of undeserved guff from this department head all term (we'll call him "Otto") and finally Les lost it and up and quit right in the middle of the term. Otto then realized he'd pushed Les too far, because he sent Les a very polite, conciliatory e-mail asking him to reconsider his resignation, saying please come back, he was a valuable member of the faculty, etc. But Les was still in a blind rage and sent back a nasty e-mail saying "forget it." So we all had to scramble to take over Les's classes and responsibilities till the end of term. I know all this because Les sent the entire e-mail correspondence between him and Otto to all the faculty and students in our department. The students took sides and it was very unpleasant and messy. Now Les tells me that he is "deeply disappointed" in me because I didn't write a letter to the dean supporting him. (No faculty members did, and when I mentioned this, Les said he was disappointed in all of us.) He was pretty angry and is practically not talking to me now. I told him that it all happened so quickly — he had already quit and refused to reconsider his resignation just about the time I heard about this, so what point would there have been in my writing a letter? He'd already refused to return. He said I should have done it anyway if I was a real friend. This is the first I've heard of any desire on his part to mount a letter-writing campaign and it's after the fact. I wish he'd said something at the time. Did I let him down?

HEAD-HANGING PROF

Dear Head-Hanging,

Pick that drooping noggin up off your chest and stand tall. I don't think you're the bad guy here. I do wish your dean or provost had stepped in to arbitrate in this altercation before it escalated into Les quitting. Maybe then Les would still be your colleague and/or something could have been done to rein in or replace the department head, who sounds like Genghis Khan in a mortarboard. I feel for Les, but if he wanted his faculty comrades to write support letters for him, perhaps he should have asked. His sympathizers cannot be expected to be mind readers as well.

—EVE KELLY

At church on Mother's Day, I sat behind a row of ladies, all adorned with orchid corsages. Envy taunted my soul as my eyes were drawn to the stunning flowers. The flowers appeared too perfect; like masterpieces of nature in stunning color.

Orchids are the kind of flower that I consider beyond my brown thumb. Cactus and succulent gardening is what we do best around here.

Friend Bernice, during our weekly coffee klatch, tried to convince me otherwise. "I have read that orchids are actually hardy flowers," she assured me. "I think you should try one. Call an expert."

The following week, I followed her advice. I wanted to find out what are the hardy, fool-proof orchids that I should start with. David Reid, owner of Reid's Orchids in northern Escondido (760-728-7996), has been growing orchids for 35 years and has 30,000 plants. "Orchids are hardy plants," Reid offered. "I have some orchids that have been growing for 30 years. They will grow on trees, the seed will get started in a tree, and that is the only watering or fertilizer that they will get. They are pretty tough plants. Some people think they are delicate, because the flowers on the cattleya orchid are delicate. Those are the ones that florists use for corsages, and they will bruise and make a brown spot, if you hit them."

Reid assured me that orchids are grown all over the world and that, even with my poor gardening skills, I could tend to an orchid. "The cymbidium orchid, anybody could grow, anywhere in San Diego County," he continued. "You don't want to grow them under direct sun, you want filtered light. You can give them morning sun, or late afternoon sun, but not the noonday sun. Their leaves are susceptible to burning — brown spots — if you have the direct sun hitting them. But bright light will make the plant bloom better. Cymbidium orchids will take temperatures down to the low 40s."

Reid informed me of some other orchid varieties for beginners. "Dendrobium kingianum are easy to grow. Brasia is another good starter plant, which can grow outside, and cattleyas are also easy to grow. You don't have to keep them as warm; they have big heavy bulbs on them so if you miss watering them once or twice, it is not going to hurt them that much because they are still going to keep on growing. You can grow most of your cattleyas outside in San Diego County, but if it gets down in the low 40s, bring them inside."

What sort of soil do you need for orchids? "Just use bark and perlite for all the orchids," said Reid. "For the cymbidium orchids, I use cymbidium bark, which is an eighth-inch to a quarter-inch bark, and then I put about 20 percent perlite and about 20 percent redwood mulch. For the cattleyas, it is cattleya bark and 20 percent perlite and that is all. You can grow cattleyas in cork as well."

"Orchids are the kind of flower that I consider beyond my brown thumb."

What about water?

"Water is very important," explained Reid. "Sometimes there is a lot of salt content in the water, so the tips of the leaves will turn black from the salt in the leaves coming up. The purer the water, the better. I spray the orchids with the garden hose, in the summertime twice a week, in the wintertime once a week." For the orchids growing out of a slab of cork hanging on a wall, "I recommend taking a bucket of water and putting a little fertilizer in it. Dip the plant down into it for about two seconds, and then let it hang up and dry. If you just spray it with a garden hose, the water will not get down in the sphagnum moss that is underneath the plant, holding the plant and keeping the humidity around it."

What kind of fertilizer?

"For the average person just starting into orchids, they don't have to worry about a specialty fertilizer, they can use anything they have."

If they have a lot of orchids, then buy some orchid fertilizer. I recommend using the fertilizer twice a month at half the strength. If you fertilize once a month, the next three weeks that you water, the water is washing that fertilizer right on through. So you get a lot more benefits from your fertilizer by using half the dose twice a month."

What bugs attack orchids?

"You will get snails, mealy bugs, and aphids," replied Reid. "You get snails when there is heavy watering, and you just need to use a snail killer. For mealy bugs, just touch the bug with a Q-tip dipped in alcohol and you will kill the bug. They are easy to control. The ants bring in the aphids. A lot of orchids have sap that comes out on the buds and it is sweet and the ants like that. So they will bring the aphids in there, and they milk the aphids just like cows. So keep the ants off. To deal with aphids, just spray them with malathion."

How long will the orchids bloom?

"Cattleyas' blooms will last about three weeks but the cymbidiums will last two to three months. The Noble Eyes Dendrobiums blooms will last about two months."

What about prices?

"I sell the miniature cattleyas for $10 and up. The standard cattleyas are about $35 and up. Dendrobiums also start at $10."

Some other orchid prices around town: G & B Orchid Laboratory in Vista sells Dendrobiums for $11.95 and cattleyas from $14.95 to $19.95.

Parkview Orchids in Chula Vista sells a variety of orchids starting at $18.

Walter Andersen Nursery has orchids for $15 on up.

Trader Joe's is selling Dendrobiums for $12.99.

Mission Hills Nursery carries a variety of orchids for $24.99 to $49.99.

IN THE SWING OF IT

by Josh Board

When this "Crasher" column started, the most calls seemed to come from various dance studios wanting me to write about them. Most have a party/recital of some kind once a month. I've avoided them. Maybe because on the dance floor I have two left feet. Or as the guys from my high school basketball team used to say — you dance like a white guy. Being white, I didn't take much offense in that. But it's always enjoyable watching good dancers.

So I went to a swing-dance party on an early Saturday night. I knew I'd be able to fit it in before going to another bash.

I was invited by Kell Tyree. When I saw him by the snack table, I asked him about the party. He said, "They have it once a month. They have one during the week, but it's not as elaborate. Tonight they had a workshop. There's a DJ, and this is the first time they've had a dance contest. One of the judges is from L.A. He is a bigwig at some L.A. events."

I noticed the swing dancing wasn't as fast-paced as when I see rockabilly bands with young guys in fedoras and wife-beater T-shirts. Tyree said, "This is actually called 'West Coast swing.' It's a more sophisticated form of swing. It got popular in Hollywood in the '40s. I think it's more difficult than any other ballroom dances. We do a country-western two-step and waltzes."

I told him a live band would've been cool, and he said, "They always end up playing too fast. You want to grab the drumstick and hit the drummer over the head."

The variety of music was interesting: country, a few Michael the time of their lives. One of them later told me it took two months to learn the routine.

I was surprised at how ethnically diverse the crowd was. There were two really tall African-changing shoes between dances. I asked one why she didn't just wear the one pair that was most comfortable. She said, "There are different shoes I like. Some are more flexible. Others don't stick to the floor. One pair looks really nice, but I can only dance to the slower songs in those." And we wondered why Imelda Marcos had so many shoes.

I wanted to chat with the best dancer I saw. He was a dead ringer for George Hamilton with whiter hair. I saw him dancing with two different women at various times. The women had the biggest smiles. He had only a slight smile but looked as if he

American men, and I asked one of them if it was strange dancing with a partner so much shorter than himself. He laughed and said, "No, it's easier. It's easier to get [her] under my arms and swing around."

I saw two different women

Jackson and other pop songs, and one troupe did a cute routine to a Grease medley. The ladies had pink scarves around their necks, and the men had black leather jackets. Most of them looked to be in their 40s, some older. They all looked as if they were having was all business. He was graceful and amazingly light on his feet. (That's the only dance cliché I know...I had to put it in somewhere.)

His name was Michael Kiehm, and he's owned Innovations, a dance studio, for 21 years. I asked him about bands playing, and he said, "If they do a ten-minute song and you're dancing with a partner you don't like — that's a long time. It's easier with a DJ playing songs."

I realized that, although half the crowd were couples, the other half danced with a variety of partners. I wondered if the men got nervous asking a woman to dance, the way we all did back in high school. I also wondered why some people were dressed to the nines, while others wore jeans and T-shirts.

I asked Kiehm if their location so close to SDSU attracts students. He said, "We get some. And some from UCSD also. We have different nights, like a salsa night. In the group of people here tonight, some have been coming here for eight to ten years."

The next party I was going to was at a ranch house in Dehesa. It was farther east — actually, right across the street from Sycuan Casino.

Tracy, who was having her 24th birthday party, was very outgoing. She offered me food and a Corona the second I walked in. She was a great hostess. I was surprised when I met her sister, who was so shy and quiet. Complete opposites.

Tracy showed me around the house. It was huge. They had a golf cart out front for going to different areas of the property. We all had a laugh when a five-year-old hopped in it with a slightly older girl and started driving around. I laughed when he almost hit a dog but got worried when he came within an inch of my car. One lady said, "Everyone thinks it's cute and funny, but that's my daughter in there with him."

When Tracy was walking me to the pool area she said, "We have a bar there. The guy working the bar, Pancho, was pissed that I invited you. He might be mean, but just ignore him." He scowled at me and grudgingly asked what I wanted to drink. He was a big guy and looked like a Native American. He handed me a margarita. As I thanked him and walked away, he said, "Hey!" I turned around. He commented on my SDSU jacket. He was an alumnus. Since this jacket had the old mascot, we started talking about the controversy regarding the Aztec mascot. He thought it was crazy that anyone was offended by it. He told me he had a number of Aztec shirts and jackets, but they were lost in the fires seven months ago. He turned out to be a really nice guy.

I later talked to his wife. She photographs animals, mostly horses. When she told me about flying to France for one job, I wondered why they didn't find a good photographer there. I have very little interest in animals, but I enjoyed hearing her stories. One that comes to mind was a horse kicking her 20 feet. I liked the enthusiasm she had for her subjects.

During the course of the party, I heard at least four different glasses break. I heard someone jokingly yell, "If you break another glass you're 86'd out of here!"

A few people came from Utah to attend this party. And a cute lady named Shawna came down from Orange County. She said, "Tracy and I grew up together in Imperial Beach. We both, luckily, got the hell out of there."

There was one guy with a Southern accent. He told me something about two cars of his recently winning a demolition derby.

One lady named Michelle Fisak was telling me about her volunteer work for survivors of cancer. She is involved with the South Bay Relay for Life on June 26. Since I do volunteer work and have lost a number of relatives to cancer, I told her I'd mention the event.

Tracy was very kind to tell me she always reads about the parties each week. And 15 minutes later, I saw her and a few other women looking at a Reader. One of them said, "There it is! Right there, that's him!" Another said, "Wow, I love it." My ego was enjoying this until I walked by and glanced over their shoulder to see what story of mine they were so captivated by. They were looking at ads. It turns out they were looking at an ad for Club Rio. It had a picture of a handsome guy with one hand in his hair and the other hand lifting his shirt. The guy in that picture was standing near me, and that's why they were pointing in my direction with the Reader opened. With my ego deflated, I asked the guy how he got in that picture. He said, "I'm a male dancer there. Usually when I go out there, I'm a fireman or Tarzan. Actually, I haven't done Tarzan in a while." The gal he was with added, "He's so sexy when he dances." I told her, "Men aren't just pieces of meat, dancing around for you ladies to gawk at. We have minds. Why don't you get to know us, instead of just looking at our bodies?" Another girl looked at me as if I was crazy. I don't think she got the sarcasm. Later, one of the women said, "Isn't it weird that male dancers come out dressed like doctors or firemen? It's almost like the women want to see somebody that has a good job. You men go to those clubs and just want the women to take the clothes off as fast as they can."

There were a few people talking about surfing. One of the guys had surfed on the UCSD surf team. I told him I didn't even know the university had a team. He said, "Oh yeah. So does SDSU. We had some competitions against them."

One Latina gal had a shirt that said "I Love Nerds." I told her I was at a party three months ago and saw a girl with a shirt like that. I know there's a band called N.E.R.D. I asked what the deal was with the shirt. She explained, "The nerds are the rich guys like Bill Gates. In high school they were nerds. Now they have good jobs."

One kid told Pancho to make him a Bacardi and Dr Pepper. He sat down next to a guy who wouldn't leave the hookah pipe he was smoking. He told me, "I brought a lot of different flavors of tobacco, even black licorice." When Tracy took a puff, I asked if her parents cared that she was drinking and smoking. She said, "Oh no.

My parents are totally cool."

It was getting late and getting cold. Somebody moved the heating lamps over. As one guy was bringing one over, he dropped a large propane tank. Somebody said, "You're going to blow this place up and we're all gonna die!"

There was a big square near the pool and I asked somebody if it was a Jacuzzi. He laughed and said, "I think it's a sewage system. It's definitely not a Jacuzzi."

As I was getting ready to leave, a tall, good-looking guy in a big truck pulled up. It was a guy Tracy had been talking about. I heard her tell somebody she was happy he was able to make it to the party. But as I talked to Tracy's mom, I saw him spend 15 minutes at the bar drinking and watching the Lakers game on the TV. Maybe not a great future husband candidate. Especially when there are firemen and doctors at this party. Or guys dressed up like them anyway.

Cover photograph of Megan Burgess by Joe Klein

It's all pretty unusual, when you really think about it.

First off, you've got this exclusive fruit (the grape) that grows only in special regions. And then, the whole time that it grows, it's fussed over and pruned around and prodded and worried about. Subsequently, every season, when this wonder fruit is finally picked, it gets crushed and sweetened and leavened, whereupon some expert in a cold basement slowly oxygenates its dead remains. After that, the strangely treated remains are sealed into bottles and shipped to rich folks who foster them further, these protected ghosts of grapes. And finally, of course! After years and years, the rich folks drink the stuff. And they claim it tastes like what? Candied cherries? Saddle leather? Smoked meat? Black licorice? Yellow flowers, flinty stones, toasted oak, and garden herbs? Is everybody serious?

Growing up, I believed that wine was simple swill: just another alcoholic beverage. Back then, I also thought that coffee was dirty water and that all beer tasted face-scrunchingly bitter. For a long time, I preferred my grape juice from Welch's.

But today I sit here realizing that I've imbibed and integrated a few of the most monumental molecules that could ever touch a tongue, and those molecules have changed me: 1982 Léoville-Las-

Something That Intoxicates or Exhilarates

Cases, 1988 d'Yquem, 1990 Pétrus, 1986 Cheval Blanc, 1982 Margaux, 1975 Lynch-Bages. Those molecules are mingled now with my molecules, part of my mind and my body.

So I guess you can call me a wine lover, or if you prefer the snobbier and more affected term, then you might try to pronounce oenophile. For me, it's easy: I just love the stuff — reading about it, talking about it, collecting it, imagining the tastes of some of the greatest vintages, and, of course, sitting down to drink a bottle or two. To me, wine is poetry, a private enjoyment that can become, at the same time, a communal passion. And just think of the pedigree: before stamps, coins, books, butterflies, plates, cars, dolls, knickknacks, and maybe even before dust, wine was the original collectible.

Moreover, if you have even half a palate, and good appreciation skills and some disposable income, then by now you've probably discovered that wine can help you transcend your senses. The mere act of tasting takes on dimension and weight. Perhaps I'm being over the top, but I'm not embarrassed to call the drinking of fantastic wine a religious experience.

Then we might ask, o grapes, how do you do what you do? But it's some kind of natural mystery. The fact is, grapes are almost as racially diverse as human beings. And every one of them, every varietal of grape, thick-skinned or thin-, is like a super-sponge, like the best nerve endings of the earth. They soak up hints and tinges of everything in the soil where they grow. Billions of years' worth of what's been in the soil. And the sun, rain, and wind determine how well they absorb this earthy information. Grapes are just immensely sensitive. And if a person's palate's sensitive as well, then these humble grapes can bring along shells, stones, woods, spices, fruits, meats, leathers, and other echoes over the bizarre paths they shuttle from branches to bellies. It's like a literal game of grapevine, many vine-

In the game there are the masters and the makers, cellars and sellers, corks and consumers. And wine also boasts dedicated missionaries, esteemed stewards of the bacchanalian faith. These attendants are usually referred to as sommeliers. Sommelier is a formal title whose etymology bears close ties to the word sumpter, which is an archaic term for the driver of a packmule or packhorse. But the respected job of today's sommeliers is more specific: to pack wine, and to guide the bottles and the knowledge directly to the consumer. To do this, sommeliers become experts in beverage-department management, wine tasting, wine theory, and practical wine applications. Most of them work in restaurants, where wine is, of course, a staple.

Although I sell wine and talk wine almost every night of the week, at the restaurant where I work, I am not officially a sommelier, not even a first-level one, because I haven't taken the test. The test to become a sommelier is itself a grueling endeavor. But more about that later. Officially, there are three levels of sommeliers, with the Master Sommelier (M.S.) diploma being the highest distinction a professional can attain in fine wine and beverage service.

In the past year, I have been lucky enough to meet and drink wine with three official sommeliers, including the original master sommelier in the United States. They are normal people, of course, these stewards of wine, except for the unusual degree to which they have pursued their passion. All sommeliers have at least two distinctions in common: an enormous base of dedicated knowledge and a thoroughly talented palate.

Another thing that my three sommelier friends have in common is they all tell wonderful stories. I don't know whether this is coincidence or if it comes with the territory. It does occur to me that, to sell wine, one has to be able to persuade people.

Eddie Osterland

And what an artful method of persuasion it is to spin simple narratives.

Which is to say that it's almost time, after brief introductions, to turn this wine article over to the artful words of the sommeliers themselves. But first...

Dustin Jones, 26, is the newest member of the wine fraternity. He passed the introductory-level test just a few months ago. I've waited tables for more than two years with Dustin Jones, and I think that the only accurate way to describe him is this: he's rather full of himself, but in a good way. You could err on the side of caution and grant that he's self-assured or self-possessed, but then you'd miss his essential capacity for his own personality. One time I called Jones a likable jerk, and he's really so likable that he didn't mind at all the pejorative por-

Megan Burgess

tion of the epithet. When you meet him, you're drawn in by his confidence, by the blend of boyish enthusiasm and somewhat rakish charm. In wine terms, you'd exclaim that his youthful tannins don't conflict with his stylish fruit, and yet he's got extensive proportions of both.

Megan Burgess, 30, is just a month or two away from becoming an advanced sommelier. You can tell after five minutes of talking to her that she'll have no problem with the second level of the test. She passed level one about a year ago. It takes a long time to begin to master wine. But Burgess studies like a champ, like a demon driven. If Burgess herself were a wine, we would marvel at her enormous potential. We would state that she drinks well now, but we would also speculate how the years will favor the escalating power of her flavors, her delicacy like flowers and her aggressive spice.

On the factual side of things, Megan Burgess is one of the most important buyers of wine in San Diego. She put together the wine lists for all of Sami Ladeki's specialty restaurants, and she buys the wine that keeps those lists stocked and up to date. You might mistake her for a hostess if you walk into Roppongi, but no, she runs the place. And to hear her tell it, that gender bias has a lot to do with what motivates her. At one point in our interview she said, "I thought when I turned 30 that I might start getting some of the respect that I think I deserve. I don't know. We'll see." And she cites the gender issue as well

when she discusses becoming a master sommelier. "Women are generally recognized as having more subtle and more discerning palates than men, and yet, of the 57 master sommeliers in the United States, only 11 are women." Megan Burgess wants to do her part to tip that percentage in the women's favor.

Eddie Osterland, 57, is the pioneer of the group, the first-ever master sommelier in this country. If he were wine, he'd be a monument, one of the grandest examples of a grand vintage, fully mature, but with plenty of strong years ahead of him.

Osterland spends most of his time nowadays marketing his public-speaking business. He gives keynote presentations as a during-dinner entertainer, speaking mostly to corporate groups around the country. His seminar's called "Power Entertaining with Food and Wine," and it's designed to equip the audience with new strategies for entertaining in their homes.

Osterland starts his talks by entering the meeting area or dining room to the muted strains of classical music; a glass of wine is tilted affectedly in his hand. He has his glasses pushed far down his nose, and he wears an extremely strained expression on that wizened face. His neck and chest are decorated with more than a half dozen cups and keys and ribbons of various wine societies. And he begins to speak in a pinched Germanic accent, very dry, something like, "Yes. Yes. And today, vee vill zpeak of vine. I am expeart on ze subject, of course. And zese are only zome of my avars....," a deadpan charade that he continues for an excruciating minute, making his guests squirm, before the houselights go down, and a catchy pop tune begins to blare over the speakers. By the time the lights come up again, Osterland has donned his characteristic smile, removed the cups and keys, and pushed his glasses back up to where they belong.

Then he begins to take his clients on an engaging ride through the true wonders of wine.

Whatever Osterland talks about, he makes it an engaging ride. Animated, always smiling, Osterland paces his stories to the listeners' understanding. There's the one about a bunch of sommeliers on all fours lapping some spilled precious rarity off a stone floor. Or the one where he poured $5000 worth of first-growth Bordeaux into an overheating car radiator to make it to the airport. Whatever story Osterland tells, he can see if he's got you going, and if he does, then he zips in straight for the laugh, straight for the effect, the gift of the storyteller. You can be sure that if his vignette has a book in it, then he will mime the act of flipping through a book. If someone in his fiction makes a hand motion, Osterland will mimic that motion. If he's telling you what a woman said, then he's showing you too, as his voice shoots into falsetto. And it seems that everyone in an Osterland story can speak in his or her own individual voice as well. Osterland can mimic any patois or drawl, any brogue or strange inflection, any imaginable pronunciation.

"It's kind of interesting how you get into the wine business," Eddie Osterland told me recently at his home in Pacific Beach. We sat on his wraparound black leather sofa in the house's entertainment lounge, before a 106-inch HDTV with surround Bose speakers and real slate floors, and I kept thinking, "And wine bought all of this." By now, Osterland has become a one-man wine corporation, the charter member and sole employee of Eddie Osterland Enterprises, under which name he serves as a wine consultant for big companies. His website, eddieosterland.com, is a reflection of his massive knowledge and palpable charm.

"I was waiting tables in Honolulu, about 20, 25 years ago or so," Osterland begins. (As an aside, I want to tell you how Osterland spent most of his bachelorhood in Hawaii: he was an amateur jet pilot with a pet monkey. 'Nuff said.) "So one night at the restaurant, the maitre d' comes up to me, and he's carrying that hardware that a sommelier wears — the cup and the chain and the key — and he's got it in his hand, and he walks up to me and he puts it around my neck, and he goes, 'Eddie, I want you to do me a favor tonight. Pierre, the sommelier, he's sick tonight, so I want you to do it.' And I almost just had this, like, instant diarrhea. "I just went, 'No!

Don't do that to me. You know I drink wine, but I never even looked at the wine list, I don't know anything, I can't do this.' And he says, 'Look, I got a lot of things on my mind tonight, and one of them is not going to be you and this thing. You want to work here, do this. Here's the rules: red wine goes with meat, white wine goes with fish. And if they're on the fence, shoot 'em a rosé, you're safe. Okay? Go.' So put me in, coach! And the guy just walks away. "So I picked up the wine list. Never even looked at this leather book. Open it up, saw the first line says wine number 131. Château Bellegrave. Nice and fruity with a crisp, clean finish. Delicious. Shut the book. Great.

"Soon as I did that, some people were coming into the restaurant. You know, it's, like, starting to fill up, and all of a sudden, somebody raises his hand, and he wants to see the wine steward. So I walk over there nervous as can be, and the guy says, 'Well, you know, my wife's having the scampi, and I'm thinking of having the rack of lamb. What would you recommend?' And I said, 'Um, number 131 here is nice and fruity with a crisp, clean finish. Delicious.' And the guy says, 'Okay, if you say so, then we'll do that.' So my confidence just went up a whole notch.

"You know, so I run across the room, the next guy raises his hand, and this guy's from Oklahoma. He goes, 'Hello there, pardner. My wife and I are gonna have that he-man cattle-and-cut porterhouse two-pound steak. What would you recommend?' So I said, 'For that, I'd like to recommend this number 131, fruity, with a crisp, clean finish. Delicious.' The guy says, 'Well, okay, if you say so, then we'll go with that.' You know, and all of a sudden, my confidence jumped up again.

"And I walked around all night, selling number 131 to just about everybody and taking orders from people who know what they want, which is rare. And you know, at the end of the night, my pocket's full of tip money; I'd had a lot of fun. And I realized, I don't know anything about wine, but everybody was believing me. And I just thought, this is fun, but I wonder what it would be like if I did know about wine. How much more fun would that be?

"So I thought about this, and one night, in one of the restaurants I was working in, a man came in who owned a little château in France, and we started talking about wine, and he said, you know, if I were you, I'd forget about doing a master's-level degree in psychology. I'd study wine.

And if you want to do it, then I can help you. Because, he says, I live in Bordeaux and San Francisco, and there's a school in Bordeaux that offers a degree in professional wine tasting, not wine making. It's called evaluation. It's a two-and-a-half-year program. And he said, do you speak French? And I said no. So he told me I'd have to go to an advanced language school for a year and learn French, but if I wanted, then he could set all of that up. So I thought about it for a weekend. I said, put me in! Let's go!

"So I packed up all of my affairs and moved to France. And spent about nine months at the University of Poitiers learning French. And then I traveled around a little bit to Germany. And then I went to Bordeaux, to this incredible course taught by Dr. Emile Peynaud, who is arguably the world's finest professor on the taste of wine, and this guy was the teacher. And it was just incredible to hear. I was the only kid in this class, you know, average age about 40, and they were all serious players — this guy over here owned Château Giscours, Pierre Tari, and Christian Moueix from Pétrus. I mean, some major hitters, and I was only 24 years old. So I was there for a couple of years with these guys, and it was just a fascinating experience, you know, it went so deep and went in so many different directions.

"So then I got out of school with a degree which licensed me with the French government to be a taster, and I worked for the French government as a taster in St. Julien, which was an interesting experience. And then I went on and worked at the Hotel de la Poste in Beaune as their head sommelier. And then I went to London, and I just wanted to see about this master sommelier exam. So I went there, and I passed the exam, and then I realized, okay, this was my calling. So the formal education was done.

"And I came back to the United States, and I did lots of things, working as a wholesaler selling wine to restaurants, and I worked as a sommelier, of course. In fact, the best gig I ever had was when I was working as a wholesaler during the day and as a sommelier at night, so I was selling myself the wine that I was going to sell to a customer. I just kept moving it through the restaurant and getting a commission on both ends. It was a sweet deal. Anyway, fast-forwarding, I've been in San Diego for the last 10 or 11 years, and for the last 3 years especially, I now have a public-speaking business. And that's really about all I do."

As I alluded to earlier, Osterland's lessons on wine are fascinating and informative. "One of the key things I noticed as a wine judge: you're often sitting down in front of ten wines, blind, and you're trying to ascertain which one's better. But when they're all $80 or $90 bottles of wine, it's hard, because they're all great. But one of the only ways to split hairs and see which wines are better is to be really hungry. Your appetite has to be peaking, at its zenith.

And that being the case, most of our wine tastings run at 11:30 in the morning, because that's when your palate is at its sharpest. But it doesn't stay sharp for very long. In fact, our tastings never went longer than 45 minutes. But at the end of 45 minutes, it's a mental exercise discerning shades of excellence, and you're tired, you're fatigued. So I always say, let's get the business of tasting and fineness, let's make the discoveries, let's show off some really great things first, and then let the conversation go into whatever direction it wants to go.

"The other thing I say to people is, get out of your comfort zone. Too often, people these days, from what I see, they play it safe. You know, playing it safe is like the typical Saturday-night dinner where you start the fish course with chardonnay, and then you do merlot or cabernet with the meat course, which is nice and it's fun, but that's what everyone's doing. So if you want to be different, you have to get out of that comfort zone.

"I think the real beauty of wine is, first of all, when you pull that cork, you don't know what the wine's going to taste like. Always. It's always like a discovery waiting to unfold itself. And every year a whole set of vintages changes, so your favorite wine last year may not be your favorite this year. And that's fun. So going out to wine stores and trying different wines is something I love to recommend. I also think that wine is a synergistic thing, in a word. Wine is good; cheap wines and the good stuff. "The difference between a wine that's $10 and a wine that's $35 isn't that one of them is 3½ times better," he explains. "You know, unfortunately it doesn't work that way. It's kind of analogous to photography. It's like a third of a stop difference in exposure. When you have them side by side...you know, the $10 bottle of wine's fine until you have the $35 bottle of wine there, and when you taste that, all of a sudden you see it's got multiple dimensions, it

"My advice for people is, if you've got a local wine shop that you trust, then I think you should get to know the guys who work there and let them recommend a few things."

food is good; but the two of them together add up to three."

Against wine snobbery, Osterland has this delightful joke: "Wine is 85 percent water and 13 percent alcohol. So that leaves only 2 percent for the stuff that really matters. Don't overdo it. Wine wasn't meant to be overblown."

On the other side of the coin, though, Osterland does draw a distinction between goes in five different directions, it has a longer aftertaste. The true sign of a great wine is the length of its persistent aftertaste."

Osterland finished our interview on a sobering note, pun intended, when he mused, "Wine isn't for everyone, because you have to be willing to inquire into the ways that excellence is achieved. And in wine, a lot of it is about subtlety. And you have to be willing to say, okay, the wine is only that much better, but that much is where it gets special, and that much is worth it to me. And you know, most people aren't like that; they're just rushing through meals, not appreciating, not taking the time to slow down. It's hard to teach appreciation. I sometimes think it's one of those things, you either have it or you don't."

Appreciation is a gift that Megan Burgess enjoys in spades. When she talks about wine, she uses reverential words like "sexy" and "amazing." You can tell that she loves drinking and teaching about good wine more than she likes making money off it.

Burgess and I met recently in Roppongi to discuss her growing passion for wine and her growing importance within the wine business. As it is with most of us, Burgess can tie her fervor for wine back to a single significant bottle, the original sample that turned her head, the initial sip that put her on the path of the connoisseur. For me, it was the 1982 Château d'Yquem. For Osterland, it was an old Wehlener Sonnenuhr by J.J. Prüm. Soon we will learn that Dustin Jones's watershed bottle was the '82 Lafite-Rothschild. Burgess calls the drinking of this bottle the "lightbulb moment."

"I grew up in Canada," Burgess began, "so my first experiences with wine weren't with American product, but more with French. My parents are by no means wine connoisseurs. So probably my first experiences with wine would have been around the holidays: Beaujolais, chardonnay, Chablis.

But it wasn't really until I moved to the States that I became really interested in wine. Even in culinary school I wasn't that interested yet, because I didn't have enough one of the clients had purchased it and left, like, a half of a bottle, and we were trying it in the servers' station, and that was, like, my lightbulb moment of saying, 'Oh, my God.

They inflect their voices, tell stories, and each one has this terrific ability to tap into his interior monologue, to talk to himself while he's talking to you, to tell himself a story at the same time he's telling you one.

exposure, I didn't know enough about it.

"But then I tried the '94 Rochioli pinot noir. I was working at Harry Denton's in San Francisco, right down on the water there, and

This is such an amazing experience."

"And I think that my experience as a cook, and going through culinary school, helped me develop my palate without even knowing it, just being able to identify different tastes and different flavors. And that wine was so supple and so sexy that I was just stunned. And that's when I knew that I really wanted to focus on that."

By "focus on," Burgess really means something closer to "devote my life to." Her biography describes a life of interesting work and experiences in exotic places, everything centering on wine, wine, wine.

"When I lived in San Francisco, I took a lot of trips up to Napa. I participated in press at Sterling Winery, and that to me was just amazing. When you do the press, you're working with all these immigrant laborers. I mean, they're farmers, and the labor's hard. It's back-breaking labor. You're out there and you're stooped over, and it took a little bit of the romance out of it. But then I could really see. I really experienced what a harmony wine is. It's like this harmony between the earth and the everyday worker, and the end result of this beautiful, sexy product. It was just amazing to me. Picking grapes into these huge buckets, and these trucks were coming along picking them up. The camaraderie of the workers...it's very precise. It's really nothing like that old I Love Lucy episode. Not anymore.

"To me, what's so amazing about wine is the fact of that harmony: man takes something from nature and turns it into something incredible. And the fact that it can be so different. That one varietal can be so different depending on where it's planted, and how much sun it gets, and how much wind it gets, and how stressed out it might be, and what the earth is like, and what the soil content has. And then the winemaker taking that raw product and molding it into this ideal: it's so romantic.

"Part of what's so exciting about wine for me is the quest for knowledge. You know, every day if I can learn something, it's an exciting day. And you can always get stuck in repetition at your job, but if there's an area that's exciting and that's constantly changing, then, you know, if you can love your job, then you never work a day in your life. To me, my passion lies with the wine and how I can bring it to people. I love it when I can say, 'Okay, of course you the great deal that someone wouldn't have ordered but now they enjoy it because you suggested it to them.

To me, that's the high, the adrenaline rush, bringing wine to people who enjoy wine, but they've just never had anyone take their hand and guide them toward something new.

"My advice for people is to trust an expert. Open yourself up. Try new experiences. You shouldn't always just stick with what you know. My advice for people is, if you've got a local wine shop that you trust, then I think you should get to know the guys who work there and let them recommend a few things. And then if you like those wines, let them recommend a few more. That's just an invaluable asset. If you can find a great little retail shop that's in your local area and you can befriend the guy who works there, who tastes all the time, and you can sort of tell him a little bit about what you like, then he can really steer you towards what you're looking for."

If her pure motivation and learned counsel aren't impressive enough, then you might find the discipline Burgess displays in her wine studies to be, quite frankly, inspiring. "I passed my first-level sommelier test last year, and now I'm studying for the second level. They have a recommended reading list, and so I'm reading a lot.

"There are three areas of concentration for the test: theory, service, and blind tasting. Service I participate in every day, so that's no problem. I feel comfortable in wine service, and I partake in it every day. And the theory part of it is covered in all the recommended books that I'm studying. But the wine tasting, I think, is the part of it that probably has the highest failure rate. So I've started a wine-tasting group, and we taste twice a month, every two weeks. One session is white and one session is red, and we bring our own wines and we taste them blind. The class is all just people who are heading toward the same goal. They've all taken the first level, or they're heading toward taking their first level, and we follow the format to a T, and it's fun. It's an interesting group of people."

I asked Burgess to talk about the pinnacle of the sommelier's craft, the daunting prospect of blind tasting. To be able to precisely identify the flavors in a wine and then, without any other clues, to extrapolate your experience with those flavors into identifying the wine: what kind, where it's from, who made it, and often even the year when it was made. Now that is a mind-blowing level of mastery.

"Tasting wine is one thing," Burgess says. "It's great, but blind tasting is another thing altogether. One, you're always kind of surprised by what you do know. Especially if you're with a group of tasters and you're all comparing notes. For example, I have trouble tasting herbs in wine, but there's another person in our group who's great with herbs. I mean, dead-on. And that helps me because then I start to remember those herbs the next time I taste them. There's another girl in our group who's great with flowers, and she picks those out all the time.

"Personally, my thing is, because of where I grew up, I'm very good with earth smells and grass smells and stones and vegetable smells, because that's where my background lies and what I've been exposed to. There's another person, you know, who's kind of funny, he's always, like, 'Okay, that smells like Jolly Ranchers,' and he's a city kid, so it's funny, because among this group of people, we make the perfect palate. So we learn from each other, and it helps so much. Because, at the tasting level of the sommelier exam, you have 20 minutes and four wines. And you have to nail it. I mean, there are points given for how you come to the deduction you come to whether you nail the wines or not, but that's the area that most people have difficulty in." (Dustin Jones will tell us more about the experience of the sommelier test soon, soon enough.)

In the meantime, watching Burgess work, I get the impression that she's doing exactly what she was meant to do. She's a natural, and her love of the restaurant business, especially the wine part of the restaurant business, saturates her attitude in all that she does. You pair that kind of love with equal doses of ambition and dedication, and you get a very special specialist indeed.

"I want to be a master sommelier someday, because, to me, anything worth doing is worth doing well. And I want to go all the way with this. I love a challenge. And this is a business that I will never leave. I did leave it once to work at a law firm for a very short period of time, but I couldn't stand it. Sitting at a desk all day was just not me. I started in this business when I was 15, washing dishes in a restaurant. I've worked literally every job in a restaurant. And now I have so much respect for everyone on my team, because I know how important they all are."

Restaurant, and he's the first official sommelier we've ever had working there. He and I will often talk wine at the same table, comparing our knowledge and blowing away the guests, and learning from each other. Jones's wine expertise is only a couple of years in the making, but he is now that lucky person who discovers a way to earn money by doing the thing that he enjoys. "My interest in wine, at first, was really about making money. I was, like, if I learn about this, I can make more money in tips. So I guess it was financially driven at first. And I didn't even really like wine at first. I remember at one point I was, like, 'I don't like white wine.' And now, you know, I laugh at that statement, because I started drinking good white wines. I think that we have this belief that white wine has to be cheap and dry and doesn't really do much except that it pairs with fish, and that's about it. But as I started to drink some better white wines, actually, now I think I prefer white wines.

"But I actually stumbled into my interest in wine while I was working at Café Pierre up in Los Angeles. They have an unbelievable wine list, about a thousand bottles, and this guy comes in, turns out to be a high honcho producer or something. John Langley. Produces Cops. I didn't know any of this, and I was closing, and he comes in at about 10:30, which is pretty late, and I was kind of like, boo, you know, and he orders an '82 Lafite-Rothschild, a thousand dollars, most expensive bottle on the list. Punch it in the computer, you know, still don't even know what he ordered, and I look: a thousand-dollar bottle. Oh my God. You know, the money's kind of jumping around in my head.

"And so I open the wine. He wants it decanted. What is that? So we go through all this decanting, all new to me, and I learned a little bit there about drinking old stuff and getting air at it. So I poured it off for him and the lady he was with, and he tells me to grab a glass. So I grab a glass. And he pours me a full glass and goes, 'Drink this, and you'll see why we pay a thousand dollars for a bottle of wine.' And I drank it, and instantly, I did. I understood it, because it was unbelievable. The flavors and the concentration, and there was just a lot going on. And that made me really kind of think, okay, this is an interesting business.

"When I was a kid, my dad was a chef. So, you know, I ate a lot of food in his restaurants, and he drank a lot of wine. And when I was younger, he'd kind of show me a lot of the pairings, things like, oh, chardonnays with fish and Burgundies with pasta and pizza, and so I kind of, I guess I've always been a food person. So the progression of, when I was old enough to drink, then I could really start matching the food with the wine, and that little marriage, and that's what kind of got me going.

"And by now I've read a lot of books, a lot of wine books, you know, Windows on the World was my first wine book. And it was interesting to kind of see the different regions and how different regions kind of grow the same grapes, and why grapes from one region taste different from the other. And as I began to sell these wines, I began tasting a lot of these wines, and with that, really, that's when wine kind of grew into a big interest."

But the real watershed moment in the wine life of Dustin Jones occurred when he met Eddie Osterland. Osterland often eats at Tapenade, and Jones remembers fondly that first time the two of them met.

"So this guy sits down with a lady at table 14, and he orders a bottle of Château Pipeau. Not a great bottle, you know, 50, 60 bucks, and I bring it to the table, show him it, and he feels the bot-

"Of all the wines we tasted, I was able to call out a lot of them. A Chablis, a Riesling, a Chianti. It was pretty great."

tle. He goes, 'Um, could you put this on ice for a minute?' And I had no idea this guy was a master sommelier, you know. I'm, like, put it on ice?! Man, this is a red wine. Where are you from, bro? And he kind of looked at me like, you think I'm stupid for doing this, almost like he kind of called me out, like maybe I rolled my eyes or something, and, yeah, I was aghast almost. I just didn't like the idea of chilling red wine.

"And so he says to me, 'Grab yourself a glass. In fact, grab two glasses. And grab a second glass for all of us.' And he's, like, 'Pour some of the warm wine, and then go chill that for five minutes, and then taste them side by side.' So I'm like, sure, man, whatever you want. Lo and behold, the hot wine was tannic. It was a young Château Pipeau, you know? But the other? Fruit and herbs, and, wow, the aromas, it was just unbelievable. And I kind of looked at him like, how did you know, man? And why is that the case? And he kind of got into it and explained it a little.

"And that got me interested, and we got to talking, but he didn't say who he was until after the dinner. And at the end of the dinner, he hands me his business card, and he says, 'Hey, listen, you should call me. We should talk.' And so I called him and we talked and here I am, I just passed my first sommelier exam and I'm making the move towards where he is."

By now, Osterland has more or less taken Jones under his wing.

It's funny if you know the both of them. They both carry on conversations almost the same way. They both talk fast and loose, and neither one of them seems to place periods in his sentences. They inflect their voices, tell stories, and each one has this terrific ability to tap into his interior monologue, to talk to himself while he's talking to you, to tell himself a story at the same time he's telling you one. It was no wonder to me when I heard how well the two of them were getting along.

"Eddie's got this really great idea, I think, as far as what he's doing with his master sommelier certification. He does seminars for major corporations on 'power entertaining.' So what I'm helping Eddie do is get the word out. Basically just marketing and letting people know that he's out there and he's doing this, because hardly anyone else is doing what Eddie does. He's like the only West Coast sommelier who is doing any public-speaking stuff. And so

I'm working for him, sending out letters and mailing packets and e-mails to destination-management companies that book all the speakers for other companies who are entertaining clients or having Christmas functions and dinner parties.

"I think the first thing I want to do when I get my master sommelier certification is I want to travel. I want to see the world and work in some of the greatest hotels and figure out where I want to live and maybe someday pursue something along the lines of what Eddie's doing. I want to turn this whole wine thing into a money-making venture."

To that end, Jones

decided to take the first sommelier test, to enter the Court, as it is called. The Court of Master Sommeliers is the ultimate club for oenophiles. Over the two decades since the Court's first examination was held, 104 candidates have earned the Master Sommelier diploma. In the service of wine, spirits, and other alcoholic beverages, the Master Sommelier diploma is the ultimate professional credential anyone can attain worldwide.

There are three stages to attain the top qualifications of master sommelier. The Introductory Sommelier course, the Advanced Sommelier course, and the Master Sommelier diploma. The website for the Court of Master Sommeliers states that "The letters 'M.S.' after your name will reassure an employer that you are a professional beverage manager and can control an efficient, profitable beverage service."

I asked Jones to tell me about his experience with the sommelier exam. "It was a class of about 60 people, up in Anaheim, at the Napa Rose Restaurant. We were in a big conference room, with little tables. When I walked into the room, there were already hundreds of full tasting glasses of wine, spit buckets, and glasses of water. And we sat down, and they said, all right, first things first. We're going to taste some wine. We're going to try to blind taste these wines, in fact. And we did, and I called some of them out. Recognized a New Zealand sauvignon blanc, which made me feel good and got me thinking maybe I could pull this off.

"And then they went through the wines of the world.

DOES YOUR TEEN HAVE PANIC ATTACKS?

For no clear reason, does your teen often

- Have chest pain or a racing heart?
- Have trouble breathing or feel like he or she is choking?
- Break out in a sweat, or have chills, or hot flashes?
- Tremble and shake, or have numbness or tingling feelings?
- Have a fear of dying, of losing control, or "going crazy"?
- Feel sick to the stomach, dizzy, or light-headed?
- Feel distant or numb—as if things are not real?

If this sounds like your teen, you can do something about it.

A healthcare company is looking for teens to take part in a clinical research study of anxiety and panic disorder. The study will find out if a new investigational drug can help.

Millions of teens suffer from anxiety and panic. These disorders can get in the way of a young person's schoolwork and social life. That's why this study may help teens and their loved ones to live happier and fuller lives.

All teens in the study must be 13 to 17 years of age.

And they went through them with a speed that was really intense. They covered Côtes du Rhone in 35 or 40 minutes. And Côtes du Rhone has, you know, 15 or 20 grapes we're talking here. All very, very fast. And I realized pretty quickly, if you didn't know a lot of this stuff going in, you weren't going to learn it at the test. Because they went through everything. It was more to brush you up. And we also tasted dozens and dozens of wines. "So the class was from 7:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., for two days, and we went through the wines of the world. You know, Romania and Hungary in 6 minutes. Chile in 15 minutes. Italy in 45 minutes. It was amazing. And the test itself, at the end of two days, was really tough. The first four questions, I started to shake. I didn't think I was going to pass. I didn't know anything. I couldn't even guess the first four questions. But then I got, like, 20 or 25 in a row. And a couple of wines that I know from Tapenade really saved me, because we serve them here at work.

"And then, of course, there was the blind tasting. And of all the wines we tasted, I was able to call out a lot of them. A Chablis, a Riesling, a Chianti. It was pretty great. They taught us how to do it, and then we had to try it out. You know, you go through this whole thing with blind tasting: the visual, and then the nose, and then you go into what you think the wine is going to be, trying to figure out the flavors. You draw your initial conclusions, and then you work your way toward a final conclusion of what each wine is, where it's from, and when it was made. The whole thing was an unbelievable experience.

"On some level, I know that I don't want to be a waiter for the rest of my life. And I do love my job. I know that waiting tables is a great way to deal with people all the time. And at Tapenade especially, you deal with people who are the cream of the crop, people who are cultured and who have been to France and who know what they're talking about. And the food's great, the wine's nice, but eventually, I'm not going to be doing this. You know, I want to make some money and earn a degree. So when I talked with Eddie about it, again, it was like that bottle of Lafite, that lightbulb, you know, ding-ding, there it is. Now I can finally pursue something that I've become passionate about and make some money at it too."

WERE PIGS
ENS HUNG
FOR FOOD.”

Morse High School senior Rachelle Encontro, 17, traveled to the Philippines in December of 2003 with her mom, grandmother, and a younger sister. She stayed for about a month.

Did you experience any kind of culture shock? “Well, it had been almost three years since I had last been to the Philippines, so in some ways it was kind of a culture shock since so much had changed. The weather and streets in particular were somewhat of a culture shock.”

What was the strangest thing that you ate? “This purplish-looking dessert called puto bumbong.”

What kind of American food was available? “They had Subway, McDonald’s, and even Carl’s Jr.”

What kind of music did teenagers like? “Well, a lot of the teenagers were into the same kind of music teenagers in America listened to.”

What low prices were surprising? “The food and the clothes.”

As an American, were you envied or liked? “Probably a little of both. I was envied in the way that many people wished they had the same opportunities and advantages I had here in America; but, at the same time, I was liked because I guess people thought that since my family was from America, we were automatically wealthy and had lots of money.”

What odd questions did teens ask you? “There was actually only one asked by this guy. He asked if it was true that a lot of girls in high school weren’t virgins anymore.”

How did people dress? “People there dressed really similar to the way we dress here in Cali. Lots of people there like to also follow the trend.”

What do teens do for fun and/or entertainment? “Well, since there really isn’t an age limit to go clubbing, that’s pretty popular with teens. Also, restaurants with stand-up gay comedians and karaoke places are very popular.”

Did you find it difficult to communicate? “No.”

What was the most interesting thing that you did? “I went to this place called Baclaran, where they have something similar to a swap meet, at two in the morning. I also stopped by the church that was still open at 2 a.m.”

What was the most surprising thing that you saw? “I guess the most surprising thing I saw was the way some people lived in strawlike houses on the water with trash surrounding their place.”

Did you find their way of life more hectic or more laid-back than life back home?

“From my personal point of view, life in the Philippines is much more laid-back than life here. Here in America, every second counts, and in the Philippines, it just seems that there’s more time to relax and things don’t seem to be rushed. But then again, I was on vacation there and didn’t have to go to school or anything.”

How would you characterize your experience? “I had a blast in the Philippines. I got to do things that I wasn’t allowed to do when I was younger, like stay out later. I also got to spend a lot of time with my family and go shopping at their five-story malls.”

Will you ever go back? “Of course! That is, once I’ve saved up enough money for the

If you could do one thing that you didn’t do while you were there, what would it be? “I would visit the many other popular islands of the Philippines.”

Eighteen-year-old Andrew Garcia played soccer for Point Loma High and now plays for the El Cajon Hot-spurs. He’s been to Spain, Switzerland, and France.

Which country made the biggest impression? “Spain, because I’m half Spanish. I have a lot of family in Spain. I got to visit my relatives.”

When did you go? “I went in the summer of 2002 [for] a week.... [I went with] my soccer team.”

Did you experience any kind of culture shock? “Yes. You could drink at any age.”

What was the strangest thing that you ate? “Escargot in Barcelona. It is a delicacy in that country.”

What kind of American food was available? “McDonald’s, Subway, Burger King, and KFC.”

What kind of music did teenagers like? “Techno, because most of the teens were big fans of going to clubs.”

What low prices were surprising? “Most things were pretty cheap.”

As an American, were you envied or liked? “We were very much liked. Maybe because they want to be like us. Many people came up to us and shook our hands.”

What odd questions did teens ask you? “They just asked what America was like.”

How did people dress? “They dress a lot different than us. If you ask me, our style is better. They dress with tight jeans and tight shirts.”

What do teens do for fun and/or enter-

HOW TO USE A FLY IN AN IS-AND-ISN'T WORLD

Emily Dickinson wrote, “I heard a fly buzz - when I died” during the Civil War — in 1863, according to her latest editor. Some critics have been critical of her detachment from the general suffering and death during the war, but for Dickinson suffering (and especially death) is never general: it’s always the suffering and death of a particular, irreplaceable person. Its cause is incidental to its singular effect, both on that person and on the people who love her or him. In December 1862, she wrote in a letter:

Sorrow seems more general than it did, and not the estate of a few persons, since the war began; and if the anguish of others helped one with one’s own, now would be many medicines.

’Tis dangerous to value, for only the precious can alarm. I noticed that Robert Browning has made another poem, and was astonished - till I remembered that I, myself, in my smaller way, sang off charnel steps. Every day life feels mightier, and what we have the power to be, more stupendous.

She had just turned 32. The habit of mind radiating from these four sentences has been disciplined to mistrust conventional social constructions of experience — a habit of mind whose reward is not the fatuous pleasure of cynicism, but the emotional sustenance that may issue from clarity. This is her faith. Writing, especially writing formed into poetry, was its instrument. It was tested, as faith is, almost constantly (“I wish ’twas plainer, Loo, the anguish in this world. I wish one could be sure the suffering had a loving side”). Her bedroom from the ages of 16 to 24 overlooked the village graveyard; repeatedly, in the close community of Amherst, she was privy to the loss of children, parents, spouses, intimates. Her beloved young cousins, Louise and Francis Norcross, to whom this letter was addressed, would soon be orphaned — their mother had died two years before and their father would die within a month. Dickinson’s own mother was an invalid, and Dickinson herself may have already been suffering the initial symptoms of the anterior uveitis that made her think she was going blind. And her conclusion is: “Every day life feels mightier, and what we have the power to be, more stupendous.”

This startling conclusion from such misfortune and anguish turns on the sentence that precedes it: “I remembered that I, myself, in my smaller way, sang off charnel steps.” Her mighty life and stupendous power issued from a poetic practice predicated on humility: a “smaller way” that produces limitless capacity. Such humility, and the daily spiritual discipline it requires, opens the world to view and inexhaustibly expands its circumference. There is no “egotistical sublime” in her poetry, no Romantic aggrandizement of The Poet as the term applies to her — and no personal privileges that come with the job, except for the exceptional gift it offers to “dwell in Possibility,” to use its special form to see, to sing, to love, to pray: “to gather Paradise” on this earth.

Therefore it is no accident that the form she chose for her poems was both a liturgical and musical one: liturgical, because her poetic practice is religious (Oxford English Dictionary: “a particular system of faith or worship”); musical, because music orchestrates feeling (which is why it’s so useful to institutionalized religion). Dickinson grew up hearing hymns and playing them on the piano. The form of the hymn stanza was engraved into her brain. The hymn stanza grew out of the ballad stanza: four beats, three beats, four beats, three beats in alternating isochronous lines of varying numbers of syllables locked in a rhyming quatrain. Words thus arranged become both mysteriously compelling and easy to remember, and have a tenacious popular appeal that makes the stanza’s transference from ballad to hymn seem historically inevitable as soon as the power of churches depended as much on the laity as on the hierarchy.

The hymns Dickinson grew up hearing often borrow the skeleton of ballad narrative along with the ballad stanza. These songs of praise (hymnos) had been thoroughly married to the testimonial story by Isaac Watts and a hundred years of protestant hymns by the time they were being robustly sung every Sunday in Amherst’s First Church. Watts was 43 years younger than Dryden and 14 years older than Pope, a contemporary of Congreve and Addison. To us (and to Dickinson) his testimonial stories may seem metronomic, pat, purposeful, and subservient to their all-too-obvious intentions, but the urgency that is their occasion — that they must be told — was engraved into Dickinson’s brain as deeply as their stanza form. The stories her poems tell, when they tell stories, are arresting and important, and often dramatize a single moment of crisis in the life of its teller.

I heard a Fly buzz - when
The Stillness in the Room Was like the Stillness in the Air - Between the Heaves of Storm -

The Eyes around - had wring them dry -
And Breaths were gathering firm

For that last Onset - when the King
Be witnessed - in the Room -

I willed my Keepsakes -
Signed away
What portion of me be Assignable - and then it was

With Blue - uncertain - stumbling buzz - Between the light - and me -

And then the Windows failed - and then I could not see to see -

"Life is death we're lengthy at, death the hinge to life," she wrote to the Norcross sisters in late May 1863, after their father was dead.
Was she thinking of this poem — which she may have just written or was about to write? She was certainly thinking of its subject. In 92 words, 16 lines, and 4 sentences, she gets as close to that hinge as can be — from both sides of the door. The first line-and-sentence ("I heard a Fly buzz - when I died -") hooks us completely, but the suspense doesn't derive from our wanting to know what will happen (it tells us what happened) but from our wanting to know how somebody could tell us what happened when she died. At the moment we finish reading the sentence, the moment-in-the-past being told is distinguished from the moment-in-the-present of telling. The grammatical completion of the sentence coincides with a logical anomaly: We're being spoken to by a dead person. Is this a joke? The meaning of the sentence is clear, but we don't know how to understand it. Plus its rhythm is unsettling:

the stress on "buzz" comes a syllable too soon. We don't know whether to stress "when" or not. In the warp speed world of the brain in which we process grammar-and-rhythm, we stick on "Fly buzz —." We feel something odd going on. One line-and-sentence into the poem, we're immersed in an is-and-isn't world.

Chekhov said never put a loaded shotgun on the stage without someone shooting it before the end of the play. How could someone tell us what happened when she died? Is the loaded shotgun — on a stage set at a disorienting angle. This shotgun does get shot, but not

Is this how someone could tell us she heard a fly buzz when she died? Only if ever the word "like" is used, it implies a mind making the comparison, reminding us that there is someone telling this story—someone, dead or alive, who has paid very close attention to Storm, of both the literal and metaphorical variety. The speaker characterizes herself through the character of her observation. A we thought the reason she could speak posthumously was that the room had been so quiet. The stillness in this room is a particular stillness, and, in being so precisely described, may divert us briefly. We're put into the room where the speaker died. We're in the story. But when-large part of our response to the poem is to the creation of a speaker we respond to. (Dickinson reminded Higginson,

"When I state myself, as the Representative of the Verse - it does not mean
- me - but a supposed person.") This "supposed per-

to listen to, someone detached enough from the moment of her own death to compare the stillness in the room to what she has previously observed in nature ("the stillness in the air between the heavens of storm"). She's already dead is why she's so detached, we might induce, except the figure she uses implies Storm is continuous. If this stillness in this room is indeed like the stillness in the air between the heaves of storm, then what follows is also Storm, both in this room (for the deathwatchers) and in the next "life" (for the speaker) on the other side of the hinge. Her detachment seems even stranger as the figure debunks the conventional notion of a peaceful afterlife. Wherever this speaker is speaking from, she's neither smug nor solaced, much less saved. If she were, the poem would be wrecked. It would be pietistic, a church hymn instead of a peculiar testimony. We wouldn't like the speaker because she wouldn't be like us, still swirled by Storm.

Then the narrative shifts back in time, in the room, in the life we know and a Heave of Storm we're familiar with:

The Eyes around - had wringing them dry -
And Breaths were gathering firm
For that last Onset - when

the King
Be witnessed - in the Room -

The past perfect tense ("had wrung") effects the time shift. It instantly sets back the clock (a few seconds, a few minutes?) in order to move the story forward again to the inexorable moment. The speaker recedes into the background of the deathbed scene and into the minds of the deathwatchers preparing to see God at the Moment of Truth à la Calvinist doctrine. That they are "Eyes" and "Breaths," and that her death is called "that last Onset," doesn't let us forget the speaker's distinctive point-of-view and character.

With a wry joke, she gestures toward the loaded shotgun jutting out of the closet:

I willed my Keepsakes -
Signed away

"What portion of me be assignable": Buried in this little efficient joke is the assertion that there's a portion of her that's not assignable, which is the portion (since she's dead) that is telling the story — which, for lack of a better term, is usually called the soul. That we're being told a story by a dead person is a joke, just as we suspected after reading the first line-and-sentence, but it's not the silly joke we thought it might be. It's a different kind of joke: the sort caused by the uncanny, provoking astonishment not cruelty, fueled as the best jokes are by terror at the inevitable and uncontrollable. It may make us happy to feel safe for now, if not safe for very long from now. It rings a chord with the irony of hearing a fly buzz at the moment of death and reminds us yet again that we're not just in the story but in the presence of someone alive-in-death (this "soul") that we're getting to know pretty well by line 11.

The joke, its effects, and its buried assertions merge very quickly (within there interposed a Fly with) and the first triple adjectives (Blue - uncertain - stumbling) in a poem that has almost no adjectives elsewhere much less triple ones. The sentence's grammar in lines 11-13 interposes between the reader and the forward motion of the narrative (since action is carried through subject-verb-object) just as the fly in the story interposed between the speaker and the light. This gives us the experience of "interposed." The spatial and temporal experience referred to by the words is rendered through the sequence of the words fixed into form. We're locked into the perspective of the person dying, the character in the story. At the same time, the circumlocution calls our attention to the person "living," the teller of the story. "And then there interposed a Fly" would have focused only on what happened, whereas "and then it was [that] there interposed a Fly" hauls the shotgun onto center stage before the grammar becomes direct and action compressed through the climactic final two words of the poem.

"And then the Windows failed — and then/ I could not see to see —" Ka-boom goes the shotgun. The final miraculous move is to turn irony itself on its ear. This ugly annoying fly is the last thing the speaker sensed on earth, and, ironically, it's what appears while the deathwatchers were expecting the King God to appear. But then "I could not see to see —": even this lowly creature provides a great occasion. The assertion buried here is that this great occasion is available to us only while we have physical eyes — only while we're alive for the sacramental act of seeing, only when we're not distracted by doctrine that calls for the appearance of a grandiose God instead of moment-by-moment attention to the humble things of the earth.

But Dickinson isn't preaching, she's practicing. Impossibly, she breaks down the indivisible moment of death into a sequence of smaller moments (And then...and then...and then): after there interposed a fly, the windows fail. The world acts almost independently of the character-in-the-story while we are inside her point-of-view. Death is something that happens to her, that happens to people. We feel how it feels. We are helpless, on a battlefield or in a bedroom. And this particular death then produces a particular incapacity in this particular person who, up until that last nanosecond, could see to see. It's characteristic of Dickinson's technique that this runic final line is utterly grounded by its formal solidity, the "not see" echoing the double stress of "Fly buzz" (and "last On[set]" and "me be") before the iambic final profoundly organized. Musical does not mean sonorous, any more than rhythm means meter: it means affecting our feelings by means of manifold pattern. According to Dickinson's friend, Kate Anthon, "on those celestial and blissful evenings ...full of merriment, brilliant wit, and inexhaustible laughter, Austin and Sue's guests were sometimes treated to Emily at the piano playing weird and beautiful melodies, all from her own inspiration."

"to see." For Isaac Watts, absolute metricality was indicative of higher organization, lifting discourse out of the flawed contingency of human usage. For Dickinson, poems are utterly contingent, yet

Dickinson also played such melodies in her poems. These 16 lines rhyme Room-Storm-firm-Room, and be-Fly-me-see: eight-line asymmetrical pairs that contain respectively three sentences and one sentence of five independent clauses. The half-rhymes mark the endings of alternating tetrameter-trimeter lines but don't chop the lines into discrete units. The hymn is underneath the speech not abstracting it. The power of the testimony depends on its credibility as speech, hence the enjambed sentences and emphatic metrical irregularities and contrapuntal dashes. The rhythm not only expresses the experience, it is the experience. In the first eight-line pair, the rhyme words (Room-Storm-firm-Room) form an envelope of the room. In the second eight-line pair (be-Fly-me-see), the Fly is distinct and unleashed. With "see to see" we actually get five rhyme-words. We're brought up short on the first "see." The pattern is fulfilled early, then drummed again on the second, most emphatic, see. We have to know what this see means to say it properly, but the rhythm forces us to say it properly thereby teaching us what it means.

The narrative having been both completed and extended, the I-in-the-story and the I-telling-the-story join in the last two words of the poem. They become one person, forever unable to see. Poignant (as meaning), exhilarating (as technique), it all comes together with a click, as Yeasty said, like a closing box. While experiencing the speaker's death with her, we're directed by her testimony to see while we're still alive. The poignancy is fused with moral force. The final line lifts us out of the poem with something we could use to enrich our lives while riveting us down with what it means to die: to lose the capacity to see physically and spiritually.

This line may be even more poignant if we think of Dickinson in 1863 worrying about going blind (and rapidly making fair drafts of all her poems and gathering them into fascicles). Vision is ubiquitous in her work, as it was in her life, with vistas from both her bedroom where she wrote and the cupola on top of the house. How could this person have lived without seeing, without reading and writing? But her worry may have caused this great line to come to her. Her suffering may have contained this gift. She is a master of paradox, of the blessing in disguise and delusion in triumph, of articulating what Richard Wilbur called "sumptuous destitution." And of course the larger assertion buried in the rhetoric of this poem is that one can tell the story of one's death after one dies — at least this "supposed person" can for the time of this particular poem. Afterlife is not proved but enacted, although the "Heaven above" may pale compared to the "Heaven below." This is the wryest joke of the poem, and, if fully understood, the saddest and the sweetest and (paradoxically) the most hopeful.

"It is not that it was so," Aristotle says in The Poetics about the credibility of a story, "but that it might be so": just one of the artistic thrills Dickinson must have felt writing "I heard a Fly buzz - when I died -" was in testing how far Aristotle's principle can be extended, and extended in a poem (this poem). Solace is too pale a word for what the poet gets from the contingent renderings-in-language her poems yield to her (and to us). It is something more active than solace: vital, child-like, permeated by pleasure and prowess, a beatific joy made up of horrific pain that does not make the pain less horrific but gives it a name that is one particular poem then another then another that does not only what no other form of discourse does but also what no other poem does, has, or ever will. ■

CAN ONLY GOD MAKE A LAWN?

MGrasses indigenous to North America did not produce good lawn; they were rough after cutting and green only during the growing season.

MOWED LAWN GRASSES seem oddly perverse. Their ideal state is timeless, unchanging, eternal; they grow and grow and grow and never mature. The telos, the genetically programmed desire, of plant life is to mature and reproduce itself. Nowhere in nature do grass blades grow upward to a two-inch height, and then chop themselves off, making themselves perpetually preadolescent botanical castrati. Nowhere in nature do grasses — if not interrupted by acts of God — not flower, go to seed and propagate.

The current definition of a good lawn, according to cultural historian Virginia Scott Jenkins's The Lawn: A History of an American Obsession, is "a plot with a single type of grass with no intruding weeds, kept mown at a height of an inch and a half, uniformly green, and neatly edged." To maintain such a lawn demands that on a weekly basis the life cycle of lawn grasses be interrupted. Slicing off the blade's chlorophyll-rich photosynthesizing tip diminishes the grass's ability to make and store food, which in turn means fertilizer must be applied. A lawn is rather like a brain-dead ten-year-old, kept alive on an IV-drip.

In the United States, as of 1991, some 45 million home lawns, more than 50,000 square miles, about the size of the state of Illinois, were trying to go to seed and being frustrated in that attempt. Home lawns — plus parks, golf courses, and lawns surrounding public buildings and cemetery markers and separating freeways — from coast to coast have replaced forests, deserts, wetlands, and meadows with savannahs composed of turf grasses not native to America.

The grass lawn is so common a part of the American landscape that a youngster easily might believe that God seeded one after another of these sharply edged green turfs during His seven-day creation frenzy. But He didn't. According to historian Jenkins, the lawn as we know it is recent and peculiarly American.

The definition of lawn, writes Jenkins, has changed several times during the last 400 years. In the 16th Century, when Francis Bacon observed that "nothing is more pleasant to the eye than green grass finely shorn" and the lawn mower was a sheep, the word lawn, from launde or land, referred to an open space or glade in the woods. In the 17th Century a lawn was a stretch of untilled ground covered with grass; when this grass was cut, men armed with scythes did the cutting. By the 18th Century lawn had come to mean a portion of a garden or pleasure ground covered with grass and kept closely mowed.

Before the Civil War, few Americans other than the wealthy kept front lawns. Most grass growing near a house was rough pasture. Grasses indigenous to North America did not produce good lawn; they were rough after cutting and green only during the growing season. Houses in American towns tended to be built close to the street and fronted by a small fenced garden. Farm houses and out-buildings were surrounded by pasture, fields, or gardens and a packed dirt farmyard where chickens pecked at insects and the farm wife tossed the "slops," or kitchen garbage. In the South, swept dirt or sand, covered with pine straw, surrounded houses. In the Southwest, adobe houses were built around cool interior courtyards, the more luxurious of these courtyards graced by a fountain.

In the 1830s an English textile engineer recognized that the machine used to shear soft nap away from carpets could be rebuilt as a machine that cut grass. The engineer fabricated a reel mower. The mower was not produced in quantity, because little demand either in England or the United States existed for it. What grass-cutting got done was still done primarily by sheep or scythesmen.

Jenkins traces the development of the post-Civil War single-family house surrounded by grass through three major suburban movements. Suburban communities, founded between 1850–1880 near Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Chicago, and New York, were made possible by expansion of railroad, street car, and trolley lines. These late-19th-century suburban communities, built for upper- and upper-middle-class families, were modeled after parks and frequently given the name “Park,” as in Tuxedo Park in New York or Takoma Park near Washington, D.C. Some excellent descriptions of these suburbs can be found in Dreiser’s Sister Carrie and E.L. Doctorow’s newest novel, The Waterworks. In the latter, Doctorow writes:

The War of Secession made us rich. When it was over there was nothing to stop progress — no classical ruins of ideas no superstitions to retard civil republican ardor. Not so much had to be destroyed or overturned as in the European cultures of Roman towns and medieval guilds. A few Dutch farms were razed, villages melded into towns, towns burned into precincts, and all at once block and tackle were raising the marble and granite mansions of Fifth Avenue. ... Almost a million people called New York home, everyone securing his needs in a state of cheerful degeneracy. Nowhere else in the world was there such an acceleration of energies. A mansion would appear in a field. The next day it stood on a city street with horse and carriage riding by.

As Jenkins indicates, no single person so strongly influenced the aesthetic of early suburbias as Frederick Law Olmsted (1822–1903). Best known as designer in 1858 of New York City's Central Park, Olmsted's ambition was to adapt the 18th-century informal English garden to an American setting, particularly in parks for public use. Olmsted had toured England in 1850, visiting Liverpool's Birkenhead Park, the first landscaped park intentionally laid out for public use. Olmsted recorded his journey abroad in his 1852 Walks and Talks of an American Farmer in England, noting about Birkenhead Park that "in democratic America, there was nothing to be thought of as comparable to with this People's Garden." (In California, Olmsted was principal landscape designer, in 1888, for Stanford University's campus.)

In 1868, Olmsted was commissioned to design Riverside, outside Chicago, one of America's first planned suburbias. Olmsted recommended that each house be set back a minimum of 30 feet from the sidewalk. In spite of the Tory Anglophilia exhibited by many among America's new monied classes and their longing to recreate in the new America the old country homes of the English aristocracy, Olmsted's design forbade high surrounding walls and hedges that surrounded these English houses. He believed these walls and hedges made city neighborhoods appear "a series of private madhouses," and further, were "selfish" and

Jenkins, unlike other writers about gardening in America — Ann Leighton, Michael Pollan, and Allen Lacy — does not mention Frank J. Scott's The Art of Beautifying Suburban Home Grounds, published in 1870. Scott's popular gardening manual is as important a

"undemocratic" features, not to be encouraged in America. The required 30 feet would be put into lawn, and each home's lawn would merge into his neighbors' lawn. These green expanses, Olmsted hoped, would create the impression that all families in these new suburbias lived together, sharing one cen-document in the history of home gardening in America as The Boston Cooking School Cookbook is to the history of home cooking. Allen Lacy in his collection of American garden writing, The American Gardener: A Sampler, reprints several sections from Scott's book. These selections show some of the changes Scott wished to make in lawn aesthetic from that of English to American lawns. The English country estate lawn was secondary to trees, flowers, ponds, fountains, and furnishings, and served as the location for games and parties. Scott advised that the lawn in America become the most important landscaping element: "A smooth, closely shaven surface of grass is by far the most essential element of beauty on the grounds of a suburban house." And: "An unbroken lawn around the dwelling should typify the unwritten page in the opening book of earnest life." Scott recommended that other elements — flowers, trees, lawn furniture — be only secondary to the lawn. About flowers, he wrote: "Imagine bits of lace or bows of ribbon stuck promiscuously over the body and skirt of a lady's dress. 'How vulgar!' you exclaim. Put them in their appropriate places and what charming points they make! Let your lawn be your home's velvet robe, and your flowers its not too promiscuous decoration."

Like Olmsted before him, Scott abhorred the barriers that surrounded English and Continental houses. Scott wrote, "There is no way in which men deprive themselves of what costs them nothing and profits them much, more than by dividing their improved grounds from their neighbors, and from the view of passers on the road, by fences and hedges. The beauty obtained by throwing front grounds open together is of that excellent quality which enriches all who take part in the exchange and makes no man poorer."

Scott goes further, however, than Olmsted, from a political to a religious argument. "It is unchristian," Scott wrote, "to hedge from the sight of others the beauties of nature which it has been our good fortune to create or secure; and all the walls, high fences, hedge screens, and belts of trees and shrubbery which are used for that purpose only, are so many means by which we show how unchristian and unneighborly we can be. It is true these things are not usually done in any mere spirit of selfishness: they are the conventional forms of planting that come down to us from feudal times."

Not everyone, of course, agreed with Olmsted and Scott. Thorstein Veblen, in his 1899 The Theory of the Leisure Class, saw the lawn as one more negative example of "conspicuous consumption." Lacy's collection offers several anti-lawn, pro-fence essays.

Jenkins notes that in the U.S. the first three patents for lawn mowers were issued in 1868. By 1881 the Patent Office had granted 138 patents for lawn mowers. In 1881, 47,661 lawn mowers were manufactured in the United States; fewer than one-half of one percent of households recorded in the 1880 census owned a mower.

Grasses that provided year-round lawn were not yet readily available. In the late 1880s, writes Jenkins, the federal government initiated a search for grass that would provide lawn in all of America's varied climates, and mail-order catalogs had begun to offer lawn-seed mixtures. The Sears, Roebuck catalog showed lawn-care equipment in its 1896 catalog. By 1900, by which time some 15 percent of the population lived in suburbs, many companies were selling grass-seed mixtures for different growing conditions.

Suburbia's second great expansion occurred in the 1920s, when Henry Ford's autos provided mobility needed for workers to live at a distance from their workplaces. Some idea of what these developments were like can be gathered from Sinclair Lewis's 1922 Babbitt, in which developer George F. Babbitt takes pride in his Zenith City suburb, Glen Oriole. He "ironed woodland and dipping meadow into a glenless, orioleless, sunburnt flat prickly with small boards announcing the names of imaginary streets."

As suburban developments proliferated, the front lawn that had been a luxury of the wealthy became a status symbol for the middle class. How important the appearance of these lawns were can be found in F. Scott Fitzgerald's 1925 The Great Gatsby. Nick Carraway has rented a small house near Jay Gatsby's estate on the fictional West Egg, Long Island. Carraway has not attended properly to his lawn. In Chapter Five, Gatsby, visiting Carraway, gazes across Carraway's unmown grass and then offers to send his yardman to mow Carraway's lengthy grass.

"I want to get the grass cut," he said. We both looked at the grass — there was a sharp line where my ragged lawn ended and the darker, well-kept expanse of his began.

This second expansion in acreage put into lawns, according to Jenkins, was also influenced by the growing popularity of golf. After the first permanent golf course in the U.S. was built on a cow pasture in Ardsley, New York, in 1888, others followed. A search began for grass species that would survive golfers' traffic. Collaboration between the United States Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Golf Association on grass research began early in the 1900s, with the USDA providing technical assistance to the USGA. By 1928 the USDA had 480 test plots in Arlington, Virginia, at the Arlington Turf Gardens, for trials of putting green grasses, fairway mixtures, turf diseases, and pests, fertilizers, for cutting and watering experiments, and tests of turf under various playing conditions. At the same time, USDA researchers also conducted experiments on grasses for home lawns. (After World War II, the USDA's Arlington facility was razed and the Pentagon built atop the old turf test plots.)

Between 1930 and World War II's end, new housing starts lapsed and few new lawns were put in. Using magazine articles and advertisements, Jenkins shows that despite the building slump, the lawn industry managed to hold on through the Depression and war by selling their turf.

After the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, grass seed, fertilizers, lawn mowers, gasoline, and rubber hoses were difficult for civilians to acquire. But these materials were available to the federal government, writes Jenkins, adding that during the war years the government expanded lawn building and care, seeding in new lawns around munitions factories, shell-loading plants, housing projects, and military bases.

The federal government, however, did not discourage civilian lawns. Jen-ins quotes from a USDA pamphlet — “A Message from Your Uncle Sam” — published in January 1943. “In the Victory Garden campaign that is being planned for this year there is no thought of asking homeowners to spade up their front lawns or otherwise mutilate their ornamental plantings in order to grow vegetables. Too much of this kind of thing was done in the last war, and most of it paid pretty poor dividends.”

After World War II, writes Jenkins, “American lawns were in bad shape.” She quotes an article in the September 1945 issue of House and Garden: “The lawn is one of the saddest wartime casualties in the home garden. Annual feeding has been foregone and, in many instances lack of time has precluded even mowing. Consequently weeds are prevalent, the permanent grasses are being crowded out, the turf is thin, the sod probably run down, and insect damage has gone unchecked.”

With World War II's end, writes Jenkins, the third and by far most widespread suburban development began. This development was financed by the federal government through Federal Housing Administration and Veterans Administration loans for mortgages and by government funding for highways. Builders like William Levitt, who raised 17,000 homes in his Levittown, Long Island, subdivision, drew on a tradition of upper-middle-class suburban development and furnished their blue-collar tract housing with lawns.

By 1946, imported and hybrid grasses, new chemical fertilizers, herbicides and pesticides (many formulated by the War Department), lawn mowers, and lawn tools were soon on sale again to civilians. Jenkins notes that in 1941 Americans spent $5 million on power lawn mowers; in 1950, Americans spent $100 million on power lawn mowers. By 1960 the nearly 30 million home lawns in the United States were being added to at the rate of almost half a million a year, and the average American lawn covered about 1/13 of an acre.

From magazines published in the '50s and '60s, Jenkins uses advertisements and articles, the latter sometimes written by employees of companies who sold lawn-care supplies and equipment, to show that after World War II standards of perfection for lawn beauty continued to be raised. She shows, too, that these standards were impossible to reach and maintain without herbicides, fertilizers, and specialized equipment. “Lawns,” Jenkins writes, “were not a need expressed by consumers that was then met by producers. The need was fostered by producers, who continued to raise standards of what constituted a good lawn."

All along, of course, the unfenced American "front" lawn, like the American "front" room, offered opportunities for the lawn's owner to "put up a good front" and "keep up a good front." Jenkins notes that advertising, throughout the 20th century, increasingly equated a good lawn with good citizenship. As Americans became more mobile and less often knew neighbors, so a neat front yard more often became a sign that behind the picture window dwelled a virtuous family. Jenkins quotes from a 1969 Life essay that described lawn care as the one act by which Americans judge the moral fitness of fellow citizens. "You don't get to know your neighbors personally. You DO get to know how they keep their front yard. If you want to belong to the community fast, you conform."

The good lawn, however, has its price. Now, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, Americans dribble and spray some 70 million pounds of chemicals onto lawns each year. Again, according to the EPA, acre for acre, the American lawn receives four times as much chemical pesticide as the average U.S. farmland, with homeowners using higher concentrations of these chemicals than do most commercial farmers.

Jenkins doesn't believe that the front lawn as we know it is here to stay. She cites a 1991 New York Times Op-Ed piece by Michael Pollan, Harper's magazine editor and author of Second Nature: A Gardener's Education. Pollan chided then-President George Bush, who'd put himself forward as the "environmental President," for not doing more to earn that distinction.

Pollan proposed that President Bush issue an executive order to the Park Service to rip out the White House lawn. Pollan suggested that the lawn be replaced by meadow, wetland (the White House grounds' original habitat), a vegetable garden managed according to organic principles that could supply food for Washington's poor, or an orchard of apple trees, underplanted with meadow grasses.

"A new landscape aesthetic is a cultural creation," Jenkins concludes, "and it remains to be seen whether the environmental movement in this country can enlist as potent a group of supporters for the 21st Century as the lawn industry, the U.S. Golf Association, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture did during the 20th Century." ■

Lennon. As an editor, you're supposed to make things right, and your idiot writer should personally send an apology to Mr. Leggio.

Mr. or Mrs. Editor, did you know that Psychotic Waltz from '92 to '96 was one of the biggest metal bands in Europe, and they were from SD? Yes, that was the past, but Norm Leggio is still playing music in SD and has the only metal radio program here in SD, and to top it off, this year in the beginning of 2004, Metal Blade Records (a semi-major label) just reissued the whole Psychotic Waltz catalog, on two separate box sets, all across Europe. This is an example of why the San Diego music scene has a bad rap across the country; it's because of writers like Josh.

SD Reader, can you tell me what other SD local band, back in the day, has had any of their music brought back out of nowhere? How about

Ratt? Last time you wrote about them, it was about Robbin Crosby's death. Well, let me tell ya something, Norm Leggio and the rest of the guys from PW are all still alive, and all their music is getting put back on a lot of shelves. Ya for San Diego's metal kids; Norm might be a John Lennon to them. Hey, Josh, print that "mutha f@*a."

Re: "Straight From the Hip," May 27. I live downtown and my building is blocked by other buildings. Now I know why my FM reception is so poor. I'm grateful I can get KSDS and listen to jazz, but I'm limited greatly because I can't get the classical stations. Your article inspired me to order one of those Sirius satellite radios. I chose it over Delphi because Clear Channel owns a piece of Delphi and they probably have a limited selection of music. Also, I like to listen to sports, and it's hard to get the L.A.

stations down here. I like "Straight from the Hip" and turn to it when I first open my Reader.

Ha-Ha, You're Poor

Every time someone casually mentions "white trash," I get a funny feeling ("Crasher," May 27). Take a couple seconds and really think about that term. You are calling another human being "trash" because you are more educated, you have more money and better teeth (recently whitened, perhaps?).

Now, let's celebrate our superiority by ridiculing their faults. Ha-ha...you're poor! Ha-ha...you're stupid! Ha-ha...you're abused!

Why limit it to "white" trash? Choose any skin color you prefer and make fun of them too.

Ordinarily, I really enjoy the "Crasher" column, but the recent one was just plain dumb.

This is America, so enjoy your rights, but in my opinion, people who participate

Google Zambra Mora

As a professional belly dancer, I read with interest your article on Angell Estrada and the Balboa Park festival Feria de Mayo (Event Highlight, May 27). I was very surprised when Angell claimed that her combination of flamenco and Arabic dance is unique to her and is her own style. With all due respect, Angell is forgetting about 900 years of history, that the Moors ruled southern Spain and had their stronghold in cities like Seville and Granada. They fused their Moroccan dances of Schikhatt (belly dance) with their newer Andalusian dances, which resembled modern-day flamenco.

Today dancers all over the world call this dance zambra mora. It is danced with finger cymbals, barefoot with a blouse tied under the bust and entirely hippy/undulatory moves. There are dancers all over San Diego and the world who have been fusing flamenco dance and belly dance for decades and many who are masters at zambra mora. If you were to "Google" zambra mora, you would find over 7000 entries, so this dance is hardly unique to Angell.

I have seen Angell teach and perform, and I acknowledge her skill as a dancer. She has a good student base, and her growing reputation is a positive one. But as she builds on her new career in San Diego or anywhere, she needs to give credit where credit is due.

Jeanne Schinto responds: As stated, Angell Estrada said, "It's a style unique to me," meaning that her style is unique to her, not that the style is unique to her.

Wants Ramona

I just wanted to say that I enjoyed very much the recent serialization of I Cover the Waterfront. I found it very interesting. I'd never read the book, but I'd heard about it many times, being a lifelong San Diegan. I saw the movie, and I'm glad now that I've read the book, so to speak, and compared it to the Hollywood movie, which I thought was, of course, action-packed but not truly faithful to the book. The book serialization was very, very enjoyable.

And, if I may suggest, if you do wish to continue to serialize a novel from time to time with the San Diego setting, I might suggest a book that was of national prominence, which I remember first reading in junior high: Ramona, by Helen Hunt Jackson, which takes place in San Diego and Temecula. A major Hollywood movie was made from this book.

Thank you for your fine contents every week, which I find very informative, with Matthew Potter and Don Bauder, and also always entertaining and current as far

Turned Down Prison Job

It is regrettable that Thomas Larson knows as much about prison life as he knows about neurosurgery ("Caged," May 20). When Donovan was about to open, I was called for an interview in their mental health division. I remember driving over the barren hills and suddenly seeing the skull-like, brand-new prison. It smelled new, untouched, sanitary. The inmates had not yet arrived. The horrors and rapes that would take place within its walls seemed to rise up before my imagination. Later, I refused the appointment. During that month — a few weeks later — a tower guard shot a prisoner to death in the yard.

Caged Lover

Excellent article by Thomas Larson on the life behind

Penelope Mazin
via e-mail

Slang Test

Kudos to Thomas Larson for "Caged" (May 20). I used the article as an excuse to make a rare phone call to my brother, who's spent 25-plus years of his 46 matriculating through the California penal system, including sizable jolts at both Donovan and Corcoran.

Now running a tittie bar in Honolulu (he prefers the term "gentleman's club"), I read to him excerpts from the article that he endorsed as genuine. I gave him the prison slang as a test, and he only missed one, "mafias" (dark sunglasses).

"We called 'em 'murder ones,' " he said.

Another term that wasn't on Larson's list was explained by my brother. "Tipped-in," as in "tagged by" or "a member of a gang." My brother was fortunate to remain "un-affiliated" during his entire stint as an institutional man.

"I always did like the Reader," my brother concluded. "Didn't they win a Pulitzer or some shit?"

Why, Why, Why?

I couldn't believe your "Blurt" for May 20 and the full-out blast against radio station 91X and their annual X-Fest 2004. What's up with you guys? Bitter...table for one??

Hmmm, let me think... local radio station has large cash roll from big corporation (are you jealous??); they ask their listeners what they want for X-Fest (do listeners want the big gig like you were lamenting, or small venues with full band sets); the listeners reply they want small venues. Big bank-roll says sure, X-Fest 2004 all over San Diego!

So why, why, why are you guys so sore? They didn't ask you for an opinion? "Blurt" needs to report San Diego music scene, not your staff's whining about what was, with a hint of tweaked noses.

FAT AND CELLULITE REDUCTION WITHOUT SURGERY!

MESOTHERAPY AN ALTERNATIVE TO LIPOSUCTION

Ron Rothenberg, M.D., is the first physician in San Diego to offer mesotherapy and to be board-certified in the specialty.

FDA-approved drugs, vitamins and supplements are injected directly into the middle layer of skin (mesoderm) in problem areas. Medications applied directly to the skin are highly effective since they are not broken down by the digestive tract and liver. The result is dramatically reduced inflammation and/or fat in the targeted area.

The procedure takes only 15 minutes. Depending on the amount of unwanted fat involved, 5 to 20 treatments are needed.

ADVANTAGES OVER LIPOSUCTION

Mesotherapy offers a simpler, less-invasive alternative without the risks or downtime involved with liposuction. In addition, liposuction does not treat cellulite and can possibly make it more pronounced!

Pulp Friction

Annual Watermelon Drop

At least this much can be said for last year's Watermelon Queen. He's no media whore. As of this writing, Ben Rothman (UCSD class of '06) did not return requests by phone and e-mail for an interview.

Rothman was slated to be among the judges of this year's Watermelon Queen Pageant. That's where the next Watermelon Queen is chosen. The pageant — actually a talent contest — was scheduled for Wednesday, June 2, in the Price Center between noon and 2:00 p.m. The winner must also know watermelon trivia.

And the prize? It's the honor of dropping the watermelon at the annual Watermelon Drop from the seventh floor of Urey Hall.

Rothman sang to gain his place in UCSD history. According to Julia Joshel, a sophomore and human-biology major from Davis, "He changed the lyrics of a popular song to be about watermelon. It's a song by Tenacious D" ["F—— Her Gently"]. "He changed it to 'Chuck It Suddenly.'"

Joshel is cochair of the Revelle Programming Board, planner of this event and others for students throughout the year. Last Monday, she admitted having trouble finding contestants for 2004. "I think we have someone who is going to juggle," she said. He or she could juggle a watermelon or two, even though talents need not be watermelon-related. "They could. I don't know. That would be cool."

The whole watermelon thing was purportedly started back in 1965, UCSD's first year of existence, with an exam question written by physics professor Bob Swanson: If a watermelon was dropped from a seven-story building, where would the farthest piece land?

The record, set in 1974, still stands at 167 feet 4 inches.

Who does the measuring? "We have a little measuring tool thing," said Joshel. And who chooses the watermelon? "We order a bunch of watermelons from a farmer, because we give out watermelon to eat. We ask for an extra-big one for the drop."

But one has to wonder if the record will be broken by a super-sized watermelon or, rather, by the skill and finesse of its dropper. "I don't know," said Joshel. "It's very mysterious. Sometimes it's hard to find the farthest seed."

Joshel said that Swanson, now a professor emeritus, will be on hand for the drop. When phoned to verify that, he was noncommittal. Asked if the tradition really did begin with his exam question, he said, "That's the myth." What's the reality?

"For the first undergraduate freshman class at UCSD, we had what might be called unreasonable expectations," he said. "It was a high-pressure year. And at the end of that year, the students, not I, decided to have a Watermelon Queen and Watermelon Drop. And I was asked to distribute a ballot to elect the Queen" — because all freshmen were required to take his physics class. "And so I made it the last page of the final exam. And then in a fit of nonsense I proceeded to write an entire exam on watermelons. The myth is that I had an exam question about dropping a watermelon. It's not the case. It was an exam on electricity."

Why was it such a high-pressure situation back in '65? "In starting up this campus, the idea was to attract very high-quality professors and give them a couple of years to get their research laboratories set up or whatever activities they were going to carry on. We all had a chance to get our research careers in line. The trade-off was that some people came in with very little teaching experience. We were not very experienced at dealing with freshmen. And my joke about this is that we considered undergraduates to be 'shrunk graduate students' and treated them like that. And they sort of measured up. Give them a challenge and they'll meet it."

What does he think of the Watermelon Drop in terms of the culture at UCSD, a culture that has evolved into one wherein Ben Rothman wore a two-piece bikini made of watermelon rinds for his drop last year? "Well, it was understandable at the time. Those kids had to blow off steam. The screws were really put to them. They worked very hard. They were really a bright and interesting bunch of people, and I still see a couple of them to this day."

The professor did not comment further, sidestepping any declaration about the caliber of current students. He did, however, issue this disclaimer: "Professional historians say that the recollections of people from umpty-ump years ago are very unreliable. You'd best refer to printed things from the time. So consider my comments in that light."

What was his research area, anyway? "Experimental elementary-particle physics or high-energy physics." Nothing to do with watermelons. "Not a thing. That's condensed-matter physics."

OUTDOORS

Ocean Water Temperatures are rising into the mid- or high-60s this month, perhaps to reach the low 70s in July or August. The usual early-summer cool weather along San Diego’s coastline, disappointing to many tourists, is mostly caused by the sluggish warming of the ocean water. The payoff will come later: as the ocean gives up heat absorbed during the sunny summer months, we’ll enjoy warm days and evenings well into autumn.

Early June’s Exceptional Lowest Tides are for early risers only! Check out the local tidepool life without hordes of other people around. Friday, June 4, features a minus—1.9-foot tide (about as low as it ever gets) at 5:19 a.m. Saturday, June 5, brings a minus—1.7-foot tide at 6:12 a.m. Wake up on Sunday, June 6, for a minus—1.4-foot tide at 7:07 a.m., no longer very early but not as low a tide as on Friday or Saturday.

Grunion Runs may occur near or after the midnight hour this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings, June 4-6. This corresponds to 1-2 hours after highest nocturnal tide, 2-5 days after the date of full moon, which was June 2. The small, silvery grunion tend to spawn on wide, gently sloping beaches such as Silver Strand, Mission Beach, Pacific Beach, La Jolla Shores, and Del Mar. California law allows the taking of grunion in summer by those possessing a state fishing license. The grunion must be caught by the hands only and should be eaten (not wasted).

Spring Wildflowers may have largely dried up in most areas of San Diego County, but in the cooler coastal enclaves such as Cabrillo National Monument and Torrey Pines State Reserve, several kinds remain. Look for paintbrush, purple nightshade, coreopsis, sea fig, popcorn flower, and red monkey flower, among others.

Western Azalea, a native rhododendron, is blooming this month in scattered locations throughout the county’s higher mountains. Fond of semi-shade, it’s often found growing along creeks and canyon bottoms. Like its ornamental cousins, western azalea’s fragrant white (sometimes pink or yellow tinted) flowers are borne in ornate clusters. Palomar Mountain State Park harbors a colony of them alongside a trail linking Doane Valley and Chimney Flats. White-flowering azaleas will undoubtedly appear again along the Azalea Glen Trail in Cuyamaca Rancho State Park, but it may take several years before that fire-damaged landscape sufficiently returns to life.

Roam-O-Rama

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond • By Jerry Schad

Wright's Field, just south of Alpine's commercial district, is a refreshing bit of open space plunked down amid East County's growing rural and suburban development. Alpine's homegrown Back Country Land Trust has managed to purchase 230 acres of rolling grassland and oaks here so far. The nonprofit organization is currently seeking funds to add another contiguous 141 acres of undeveloped natural habitat to the existing protected area. Although small in area compared to neighboring Cleveland National Forest lands, Wright's Field preserve will likely become an important site for wildlife, rare plants, and local recreation in the years to come.

Hikers are welcome to tramp around the site, which has seen much use by both hikers and equestrians in recent years. To get there, exit Interstate 8 at Tavern Road, and follow Tavern just over one mile south to MacQueen Middle School on the left. Find a space to park along Tavern Road in front of or near the middle school. On foot, follow the residential private road going east along the school's northside fence for 0.2 mile until you reach its dead-end. Continue through a gap and into Wright's Field preserve.

From this point on, for a looping route of 1.5 miles (more or less, depending on your exact route), bear a little left, following a narrow footpath. Continue working your way clockwise all the way around the perimeter of the treeless meadow known as Wright's Field. Pick and choose your route amid many intersecting dirt roads and trails.

The grasses here are a mixture of native bunchgrass and exotic imports such as wild oats and filaree. Gray-green Engelmann oaks dot the edge of the meadow and can be seen growing on the rocky slopes above the meadow's eastern edge. Other common vegetation includes toyon shrubs; white sage (notice the pungent scent); California sagebrush (notice the sweet-pungent scent); and small clumps of poison oak (don't touch!). Near the beginning of your clockwise circling of the meadow, look for a straight row of rounded boulders on the right, the bare remnants of stone walls belonging to a Spanish rancho that dates back to 1840 or earlier. Here and there along the route you'll get fine vistas of the regional landscape, including Viejas and El Cajon mountains, both looking a little stark in the aftermath of last year's Cedar Fire.

You'll optimize your visit to Wright's Field if you confine your exploration to early morning or late afternoon/early evening, when long shadows drape across the sensuous contours of the meadow. The spring season here is typically characterized by morning coolness and sometimes fog, followed by midday heat, followed by a brisk, cooling west wind late in the day.

TWO POEMS BY ROBERT HERRICK

To the Virgins, to Make Much of Time

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying;
And this same flower that smiles today
Tomorrow will be dying.

The glorious lamp of heaven, the sun,
The higher he’s a-getting,
The sooner will his race be run,
And nearer he’s to setting.

That age is best which is the first,
When youth and blood are warmer;
But being spent, the worse, and worst Times still succeed the former.

Then be not coy, but use your time,
And while ye may, go marry;
For having lost but once your prime,
You may forever tarry.

To Blossoms

Fair pledges of a fruitful tree,
Why do ye fall so fast?
Your date is not so past,
But you may stay yet here awhile
To blush and gently smile,
And go at last.

What, were ye born to be An hour or half’s delight,
And so to bid good-night?
’Twas pity Nature brought ye forth Merely to show your worth,
And lose you quite.

But you are lovely leaves, where we May read how soon things have Their end, though ne’er so brave:
And after they have shown their pride
Like you, awhile, they glide
Into the grave.
— Robert Herrick (1591–1674)

MUSEUMS

(Art museums are listed in the Reader's Guide to Art.)

Bancroft Ranch House Museum houses indigenous Indian artifacts and memorabilia of early settlers in the area, run by the Spring Valley Historical Society. The home, built in 1863, was registered as a National Historic Landmark in 1962 and is on a spot where Kumeyaay Indians camped more than 1000 years ago beside the spring that later gave the area its name. The museum is found at 9050 Memory Lane; 619-469-1480. (SPRING VALLEY)

Barona Cultural Center and Museum, over 40 baskets created by women from several local reservations are gathered in "The Legacy of Our Mothers: Indian Basketry of San Diego County," continuing through November. Find the museum at 1095 Barona Road; 619-443-7003 x2. (LAKESIDE)

California Surf Museum, "Early California Surfriders, 1900-1940" honors Doc John Heath Ball, the first surf documentarian, telling stories of those pioneering surfers in photographs by Ball and text.

The museum features surfing artifacts and memorabilia — such as surfboards and clothing — of local legends Phil Edwards, John "L.J." Richards, and Peter Johnson, and Duke Kahanamoku. The museum is located at 223 North Coast Highway; 760-721-6876. (OCEANSIDE)

Chula Vista Nature Center, an interactive living museum devoted to the endangered Southern California coastal wetlands, located in Sweetwater Marsh National Wildlife Refuge. Visitors can use a Bioscanner to view animals macroscopically, use a Wentzscope for views of microscopic organisms found in the "Sweetwater Soup," and interact with computerized videos exploring how tides affect the bay in the "Moons, Tides, and the San Diego Bay" exhibit. Ongoing exhibits include vintage computers, video games, punch cards, calculators, more. Find the museum on the campus of Coleman College (7380 Parkway Drive). 619-235-8222. (LA MESA)

Flying Leatherneck Museum, dedicated to the Marine Corps who provided air support, from the propeller-driven fighters and bombers of the 1940s to the modern jets and helicopters currently in use. Static displays of a variety of aircraft are included, along with equipment, insignia, paintings and photographs, scale models, and a research library. The museum is located in building T-2002, at Marine Corps Air Station Miramar. 858-693-1723. (MIRAMAR)

Gaslamp Museum of Historic San Diego, glimpse San Diego's colorful past at the museum, where displays highlight Wyatt Earp's San Diego days, the Peg Leg Gold Legend, the first maps and photographs of Old Town and "New Town," early military history, the naval disaster in 1923 at Point Honda, and more. Find the museum at 413 Market Street (between Fourth and Fifth Avenues). 619-237-1492. (GASLAMP QUARTER)

Heritage Museum, an interpretive wall, replicas of the early post office and general store, and a school room are part of this museum. A mural painted by Michael Strong depicts six periods of Poway's past. Find the museum in Old Poway Park, at 14134 Midland Road; 858-679-8587. (POWAY)

Heritage of the Americas Museum, more than 100 Chinese jades of the Late Neolithic (4300-2500 B.C.) through the Ming periods (A.D. 1368-1644) are included in "The Stone of Heaven: The Enduring Art of Jade Age China." From ancient times, jades in China were treasured as talismans, worn on the body either as final adornments in death or as ornaments in life. See a rare and valuable jade burial suit of the Han dynasty (206 B.C. to A.D. 221), one of only about two dozen that have been excavated in China. The suits were made of more than 2000 square and rectangular plates of jade sewn together with threads of gold, silver, or bronze (depending upon the status of the wearer). On going.

The museum features art and artifacts from South and North America, concentrating on the utilitarian and decorative artistry of crafts workers from ancient cultures. The museum also features wings dedicated to natural history, archaeology, education, anthropology, and fine art. Find the museum on the Cuyamaca College campus, 12110 Cuyamaca College Drive West. 619-670-5194. (RANCHO SAN DIEGO)

Heritage Walk Museum, the museum includes the restored Victorian House, the city's original Santa Fe Train Depot, a railroad car with model train, working blacksmith shop, and a barn. Find Heritage Walk in Grape Day Park, at 321 North Broadway; 760-743-8207. (ESCONDIDO)

John DeWitt Historic Museum and Library, operated by the Alpine Historical Society, it is located in the 1897 home/office of Dr. Sophronia Nichols. She was the first doctor in Alpine and the first female doctor in the East County. Indian artifacts from the Kingery family on exhibit. The museum is located at 2116 Tavern Road; 619-659-8740. (ALPINE)

La Mesa Depot Museum, located in a restored 1894 wooden train station, exhibits include original telegraph and telephone equipment, pot-bellied coal stove, period furniture. The adjacent freight train display features 1923 steam locomotive, 1957 refrigerator car, restored 1941 caboose. Find the museum at La Mesa Boulevard and Spring Street. 619-465-7776. (LA MESA)

Carlsbad." Docent and self-guided tours of historic house and gardens. Find Magee House at 258 Beech Street; 760-434-9189. (CARLSBAD)

Museum of Making Music, "Hands-On the Future," on view through June, offers opportunity for visitors to play and experience a variety of musical instruments, "many just recently introduced to the public." Visitors can scratch and spin records on a DJ/mixer setup, sample modeled guitars on the Variax, use Apple's GarageBand software, play a Yamaha Clavinova.

The past 100 years of American music and music making are highlighted at the museum, with over 450 vintage instruments, hundreds of audio and video clips, and an interactive stage. Find the museum at 5790 Armada Drive; 760-438-5996. (CARLSBAD)

Ramona Pioneer Historical Society and Guy B. Woodward Museum is a complex of historical buildings, including the Verlaque House (the only Western adobe home of French provincial design still in existence), wagons, antique exhibits, and artifacts. There is a cowboy bunk house, women's clothing and accessories from 1700 to 1800, a ranch blacksmith shop and tack room. The Casey Tibbs Memorial Exhibit is dedicated to Tibbs, a local resident who was a world-champion rodeo rider. The Bancroft Memorial Rose Garden is on the grounds. Rare documents, historical exhibits, books, photographs, and a research library are also part of the complex.

Find it all at 645 Main Street. 760-789-7644. (RAMONA)

San Diego Aerospace Museum, the technological advancements made in aircraft propulsion over the last century are showcased in "100 Years of Aircraft Engines," including a functional reproduction of the 1903 Wright Flyer Engine; a Rolls-Royce liquid-cooled Merlin V-12 that powered the Spitfire and P-51 Mustang fighters; and a rare German Junkers Jumo 004, one of the world's first operational jet engines.

Concurrently, see "The History of Commercial Aviation in America." A new section of the exhibit celebrates the 40-year history of PSA, with original graphics, a re-creation of the airline's first ticket booth at Lindbergh Field, and uniforms and memorabilia donated by former employees. Ongoing.

"P-51 Mustang," celebrates the legendary Air Force fighter used during both World War II and Korea. The museum's Mustang is painted in the red-tail livery of the Tuskegee Airmen, who distinguished themselves flying bomber escort and ground attack missions during World War II.

The museum offers exhibits of over 65 aircraft — including a replica of Spirit of St. Louis, a Fokker Scourge (or Fokker Eindecker E-III), a World War I Spad VII, flight deck of the USS Yorktown, and a Lockheed Blackbird spy plane — 1400 scale models, 10,000 aviation-related items, and memorabilia from Montgolfier hot-air-balloon era to Space Age, along with an International Aerospace Hall of Fame.

Alger Hiss's Looking-Glass Wars: The Covert Life of a Soviet Spy

G. Edward White

Oxford University Press, 2004; 297 pages; $30

FROM THE DUST JACKET: For decades, a great number of Americans saw Alger Hiss as an innocent victim of McCarthyism — a distinguished diplomat railroaded by an ambitious Richard Nixon. And even as the case against Hiss grew over time, his dignified demeanor helped create an aura of innocence that outshone the facts in many minds.

Now G. Edward White deftly draws together the countless details of Hiss's life — from his upper-middle-class childhood in Baltimore and his brilliant success at Harvard to his later career as a self-made martyr to McCarthyism — to paint a fascinating portrait of a man whose life was devoted to perpetuating a lie. White catalogs the evidence that proved Hiss's guilt, from Whittaker Chambers's famous testimony, to copies of State Department documents typed on Hiss's typewriter, to Allen Weinstein's groundbreaking investigation in the 1970s. The author then explores the central conundrums of Hiss's life: Why did this talented lawyer become a Communist and a Soviet spy? Why did he devote so much of his life to an extensive public campaign to deny his espionage? And how, without producing any new evidence, did he convince many people that he was innocent? White offers a compelling analysis of Hiss's behavior in the face of growing evidence of his guilt, revealing how this behavior fit into an ongoing pattern of denial and duplicity in his life.

The story of Alger Hiss is in part a reflection of Cold War America — a time of ideological passions, partisan battles, and secret lives. It is also a story that transcends a particular historical era — a story about individuals who choose to engage in espionage for foreign powers and the secret worlds they choose to conceal. In White's hands, the life of Alger Hiss comes to illuminate both of those themes.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

From Publishers Weekly: White is the son-in-law of the late John F. Davis, who served as Alger Hiss's counsel during a 1948 appearance before the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Nevertheless, White, a professor at the University of Virginia Law School, cuts Hiss little slack, portraying him as that perhaps most base of creatures: an unrepentant and lifelong liar. As White clearly shows, Hiss not only lived a lie as a State Department official in the secret employ of the Soviets, but also thereafter, through decades of denial in the face of ever-mounting evidence. White contends that, as the years rolled on, Hiss found his raison d'être in the useless charade of seeking vindication. White argues that had Hiss not maintained his innocence, "he would have been just one other undercover agent who had lied, betrayed his country, and gotten caught."

From Booklist: The 1990s were rough on defenders of Alger Hiss. Historians such as John Earl Haynes and Harvey Klehr (Venona, 1999) found damning evidence against Hiss in American and Soviet intelligence files. Accepting the conclusion that Hiss was a Soviet spy, White tells how Hiss conducted his campaign of innocence and explores why he undertook it when he inwardly knew he was duping supporters. A notable biographer of Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, White detects in Hiss's clerkship for Holmes a skill at manipulation foreshadowing the future; White argues that even some of Hiss's lawyers in his perjury trials of 1949 and 1950 doubted their client's truthfulness. Yet Hiss never wavered in public, reiterating his own defense to sympathetic journalists and college audiences, in which his own character was burnished as sterling and that of accuser Whittaker Chambers was tarnished.

From the New York Times: If you are too young to care much about Alger Hiss, move on. Turn away also if you recall the case and still believe Hiss never fed secrets to Soviet agents. But if you accept Hiss's guilt, as most historians now do, you will profit from G. Edward White's supplementary speculations about why, after prison, that serene and charming man sacrificed his marriage, exploited a son's love, and abused the trust of fervent supporters to wage a 42-year struggle for a vindication that could never be honestly gained.

White is a legal scholar at the University of Virginia, but in Alger Hiss's Looking-Glass Wars, he is not just parsing legal evidence. Inspired by a chance family connection to Hiss, he felt a need to ruminate on two enduring mysteries: why Hiss persisted in his lying and why he managed to fool so many Americans for so long. White's answers, in a useful supplement to the vast Hiss literature, are plausible but beyond proof.

From Commentary: In many ways, White's book advances the work of three previous studies — Allen Weinstein's Perjury (1978), Sam Tanenhaus's Whittaker Chambers: A Life (1997), and most recently, John Earl Haynes and Harvey Klehr's Venona: Decoding Soviet Espionage in America (1999). But it also goes further.

White begins with a careful and somewhat skeptical investigation into Hiss's background. This was far less genteel than the diplomat-spy would have others believe. Even as a young man, White shows, Hiss knew how to deceive and manipulate, partly lighted at the museum, which is located "just feet away" from the original cobblestone jail site, built in 1850. The museum boasts artifacts, photographs, equipment, uniforms, and vehicles, along with exhibits from each of the departments making up the organization such as crime scene, K-9, court service, detentions, crime lab, bomb squad, and many others. Find the museum at 2384 San Diego Avenue; 619-260-1850. (OLD TOWN)

San Diego Model Railroad Museum, the museum celebrates American railroads with "the largest permanent operating model railroad and toy train exhibit" in North America. Four scale-model railroads of the Southwest, the "San Diego County Relief Map" exhibit, and an interactive toy train. There is a multimedia presentation on railroading, an operating railroad semaphore signal, and interpretive displays on railroads and model railroading.

The museum is downstairs in the Casa de Balboa building. 619-696-0199. (BALBOA PARK)

San Diego Natural History Museum, "Plant Portraits: The California Legacy of A.R. Valentien" features 80 watercolors of native California plants painted in early 1900s. Valentien was commissioned by Ellen Browning Scripps to paint "all the wildflowers and plants of California" and traveled the state for next ten years collecting specimens. The exhibit — continuing through Tuesday, September 7 — includes examples of Valentien's Rookwood pottery, landscapes in oil, historical photographs, personal artifacts.

"Feathered Dinosaurs and the Origin of Flight," continuing through Tuesday, September 7, is described as "the largest display of significant fossils regarding the origins of birds ever shown outside of the People's Republic of China." The fossils on display are from Liaoning Province in northeastern China, rich in fossils dating from more than 120 million years ago. Exhibit includes 34 original fossils, 15 life-sized sculptural restorations of fossils, historical models, over two dozen large photographs and graphics.

"Fossil Hunters San Diego" shows how museum's paleontologists hunt for local fossils — what they look for, tools they use, how fossils are excavated and transported, how they're prepared and studied. Through 2005.

Also on view: "Natural Treasures: Past and Present" (ongoing). Current "giant-screen films" include Wildfire: Feel the Heat (through Sunday, July 11), Ocean Oasis, exploring Mexico's Sea of Cortés and the Baja California Desert. 619-232-3821. (BALBOA PARK)

San Dieguito Heritage Museum, the museum offers informative displays on the North County coastal history including Native Americans, early homesteaders, and recent times, as well as photographic collections and archives. Find the museum 561 South Vulcan Avenue; 760-632-9711. (ENCINITAS)

Serra Museum, "Commemorating 75 Years: The Serra Museum" is said to "remember the events leading up to the dedication of Presidio Park and the Serra Museum" on July 16, 1929. The exhibit includes a "visit back in time to 1929."

The museum interprets the Native American, Spanish, and Mexican periods of San Diego's history and contains Spanish Colonial furnishings, art, and artifacts. It's located at the site of the West Coast's first European settlement, 2727 Presidio Drive. 619-297-3258. (PRESIDIO PARK)

Stephen Birch Aquarium-Museum, an aquarium and museum under one roof, the facility is a component of the Scripps Institution of Oceanography at UCSD. Look for 33 tanks containing marine life of the Pacific Northwest, the California coastline, Mexico's Sea of Cortés, and the South Pacific. One highlight is the La Jolla Kelp Tank, a two-story-high tank with giant kelp plants and nearly 30 species of local marine life. The Lynne and Howard Robbins Shark Reef Exhibit features a 13,000-gallon shark tank with black tip, white tip, nurse, and wobbegong sharks.

The aquarium is located at 2300 Expedition Way (off North Torrey Pines Road, south of La Jolla Shores Drive). 619-534-FISH. (LA JOLLA)

Wells Fargo Bank History Museum, the museum features a working agents' office staffed by guides in period costumes and contains a working telegraph for visitors to send and receive messages. Short films on California and Wells Fargo history; a gold display, part of the collection assembled by Wells Fargo agent Samuel Dorsey at the end of the 1800s; an exhibit of Concord Coach #251, a restored stagecoach built in 1867; and the Davies watch. The museum is located in the reconstructed Colorado House, at 2733 San Diego Avenue. (OLD TOWN) through immense charm, partly through a remarkable degree of self-possession that translated into a formidable power of intimidation.

Despite his less than royal roots, Hiss's professional ascent was dazzling. After graduating from Johns Hopkins and Harvard Law School, where he became a protégé of Professor (later Justice) Felix Frankfurter, Hiss served for a time as secretary to former Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, went to New Deal Washington to serve in the Agricultural Adjustment Agency, and then worked as an aide to Senator Gerald Nye, who conducted a sensational (or rather, sensationalistic) investigation of U.S. armament manufacturers. He finally moved to the State Department, eventually rising to become a key aide to FDR's Secretary of State, Edward Stettinius.

Hiss was at Yalta with Roosevelt and at the San Francisco founding conference of the United Nations. He was openly being spoken of as a future American Secretary of State. Yet, in 1946, he quietly left the government for the Carnegie Endowment in order to avoid confronting certain rumors and suspicions that had floated to the surface following a number of defections from the Soviet spy network. Had Whittaker Chambers held his tongue, Hiss would in all likelihood have ended his career unblemished and full of honors.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR: From his office at the University of Virginia, where he is the David and Mary Harrison Distinguished Professor in the School of Law, G. Edward White said that he was born in Northampton, Massachusetts, in 1941. "In March."

"I grew up in the Northeast. My mother was a high school English teacher. My father was an English professor at Amherst, and then after the Second World War he ended up in the Merchant Marine and didn't go back to teaching. We moved to the New York area.

"We had a family structure — my mother, father, sister, and me — that doesn't exist a lot anymore. We hadn't been able to do it with our children; our children are grown. But we actually would sit down at the dinner table and have literary discussions."

"What heaven."

"My father ended up in the publishing business and was in the publishing business for much of his life when I was growing up, and he liked to come home and sit down at the dinner table and talk about books and ideas."

"What fun. And you probably had a real dinner."

"Yes, we had a real dinner. We didn't have television for many years. By the time we got television, I was ready to go away to school. I had what would now be regarded as an old-fashioned childhood in a number of respects. I don't regret that at all. I wish my children had had more of an old-fashioned childhood."

"Did your parents discuss Alger Hiss?"

"Actually, no. At least I can't remember any discussion. My parents weren't particularly political. I don't remember, for example, any discussion with them when I was growing up about the Cold War or the threat from the Soviets. I do remember that in the 1952 election, my father was not inclined to vote for Adlai Stevenson because he thought Stevenson was an intellectual, and his experience with intellectuals was that they weren't grounded in reality, and they wouldn't make good politicians or statesmen. I think that both of them voted for Eisenhower in the '52 and '56 elections."

"You weren't a Red Diaper baby."

"I certainly wasn't. I was the opposite. It was a conservative lifestyle, where many of my friends went to boarding school.

In the New York area at that time in the '50s, there was a certain amount of social stratification. It was more important to my parents' generation than it was to my generation. We lived in Long Island. And Long Island, the North Shore of Long Island, was a stratified community. I was quite happy to bail out of that world at some point.

and then Amherst College and then Yale. I got a master's and Ph.D. in American studies at Yale, and then I went to law school at Harvard. So I spent a lot of time in the New England academic institutions."

Professor White was admitted to the bar in 1970. "I was 29 when I graduated from law school, and then I went out to the American Bar Foundation in Chicago for a year. I was a visiting scholar. I was thinking of becoming a law professor, but in order to become a law professor in those days, it was helpful to get a Supreme Court clerkship. I applied to all the members of the Court. I wasn't the usual candidate from Harvard Law School, in that I wasn't first or second in my class."

In 1971 Mr. White was hired by Earl Warren ("Earl Warren," the professor laughed, "and I have the same birthday, 50 years apart"), who had retired in 1969 as chief justice of the United States Supreme Court. "I was very grateful to him. It made it easier for me to get into teaching law because of that. But it was an odd year in the sense that he didn't really know what to do with himself.

"He probably hired me because I'd done some writing before I'd gone to law school, and he possibly thought I might help him with his memoirs. But he didn't really want to work on his memoirs. What he did for most of the year was accept speaking invitations. I wrote speeches for him, which was not fun. He hated writing speeches, and so his idea of getting started on writing a speech was to get his law clerk to draft something and then tear it apart. So that's pretty much what I did."

"Where was Justice Warren living in 1971?"

"In the Sheraton Hotel in Washington. He had been living in the Sheraton ever since he became chief justice. The reason for that was when he moved from California he didn't like the prices of real estate in Washington. So he thought that he and Nina Warren, his wife, would just take an apartment and see. And they never moved out of the apartment. But he spent a lot of time, when he could, on the West Coast."

Our talk turned to the professor's newest book. I confessed that as a child I was terrified by photographs of the snaggle-toothed, vastly overweight, sloppy-appearing Chambers that appeared in newspapers and magazines.

"Well, he was a scary-looking person. Of course, Hiss is elegant looking, and Chambers is someone a young person might well think was scary looking."

"I think that Chambers made many people uncomfortable."

"Yes, he was an erratic personality. I don't know whether you ever looked at his book, Witness."

"I did. I read it."

"It's very overwritten."

"Stylistically, it's close to Thomas Wolfe's novels."

"Yes, right, it's that sort of genre. It's very purple. And that, combined with his eccentric behavior and the fact that he'd been a member of the Communist Party, and then all of a sudden turns around and denounces them — it's pretty consistent with the idea that this guy is a little bit strange, maybe not all there. I think this affected his case from the beginning."

"I think that both Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley, the 'Red Spy Queen,' and an informer were what our parents would have called 'neurotic.'"

"Right, they both had that affect. Did you ever read Elizabeth Bentley's Out of Bondage: How an American College Girl Became Involved with the Communist Party — and How She Escaped??"

"Yes."

"It's not as good as Chambers's book, but it has the same quality of being overwritten."

We talked a bit about Chambers's and Bentley's religious bent.

"Chambers, a Quaker, was deeply religious," said Professor White. "In fact, his conversion and his attachment to religion is the source of his friendship with William Buckley. They both had this kind of conversion experience. That enabled Chambers to demonize the Soviets after he defected from them, so that he sees them as evil incarnate in part because they're godless."

"Why do you think it was that people like my liberal father — who died in 1987 — remained convinced of Hiss's innocence?"

"Well, there are a lot of factors that go into it. One has to do with politics. On the whole, Hiss manages to convert the controversy over his innocence into a question of whether you are a zealous, anti-Communist right-winger or whether you're a liberal. So in some ways people that had their roots in the liberal Democratic parties, in the politics of the New Deal, but who were anti-Communist as well, felt embarrassed by the fact that all of a sudden there, in the same camp, as far as being anti-Communist, were people like Joe McCarthy and the House Un-American Committee."

"So part of it is by thinking that Hiss might well have been framed, you declare your independence of the right wing of the anti-Communist movement. That's one thing. Another thing is that Hiss had this effect — I didn't call it the Hiss effect in the book, but I should really. Every time anybody went out to lunch with him or had a relatively one-on-one relationship with him, they were impressed, remarkably impressed. He projected an aura of modesty and evenhandedness and graciousness. He was a remarkable person."

"For me, what your book is about is how the belief in his innocence managed to survive. Down through generations, like a family story."

"Yes, it's really a book about how people didn't want to let go of the illusion of his innocence because there's so much tied up in that illusion. It's how they feel about Nixon, how they feel about Hoover, how they feel about the Cold War."

"Really even how they feel about both Hoovers."

"Right, how you feel about the New Deal. How you feel about your own possible flirtation with left-wing ideologies in the '30s, when lots of people were considering socialism or some form of popular-front Communism. And so they sort of remember that."

"There's even a certain amount of nostalgia for that, and by the time the '60s and '70s come around, people think, 'Gosh, you know, maybe the late '60s and early '70s are something like the Second Coming — of ideologies that are not liberal but left of liberal.'"

"You note in your book that the '60s brought Hiss an entire new group of devotees and believers."

"Yes. There's this marvelous scene in one of the films that came out. It's by longtime Hiss supporter John Lowenthal [The Trials of Alger Hiss]. The Lowenthal film ends with Hiss giving a lecture at a college, a university, and the film begins and ends with him in that role. At the end of the film, a student from the audience says, 'Mr. Hiss, you know, now that you've been cleared, are you planning to go back and enter politics?' And Hiss says, 'Well, gosh, you know, I'm 70 years old, it's an achievement for me to just walk across the stage.' He says that wryly; he's perfectly fit at that time.

"So the student not only believes that Hiss is innocent, but he believes that everybody has decided that Hiss is innocent, and of course therefore Hiss, because he's been cleared, would be a legitimate person to be involved in national politics. It's just an astonishing moment. This guy has not produced a shred of new evidence suggesting that he's been less than culpable. All he's really done is persistently maintain his innocence and remind others to 'look at my accusers.'"

"He really did make it work, and part of the way he made it work was to be very shrewd about when it was propitious for him to make a very public statement of his innocence. And when it was propitious for him to be relatively low key."

"I think Hiss had a very romantic view of Communism."

"He just didn't stop and see the error of his ways when Chambers accused him, he remained supportive of the Soviets the entire remainder of his life. He wasn't somebody that dropped out — he wasn't like Wilfred Blunt, who realized it was kind of a pain in the neck, being an agent, and he wasn't that effective anyway. Alger Hiss would have continued to be an agent if he had a position that the Soviets had been interested in. I'm convinced of that. But they weren't interested in somebody who had gotten caught."

Hiss, after he finished his prison sentence, went to work for a stationery concern. I said that I bet he was very good at the stationery business.

Professor White agreed. "I bet he was very good too. What he said in his memoirs was that people would talk to him because of who he was. They would just be fascinated. Here's Alger Hiss selling stationery, and he would take advantage of that. He would charm them and end up making a sales pitch."

"I bet he remembered code names for all the envelopes and paper clips."

"He had an absolutely formidable memory for detail. One thing, too, about Alger Hiss: he would have probably been a fairly officious control freak as a boss. He was really never a boss of anybody. And he was very good at being the ingratiating underling to his superiors."

"How did you feel about Hiss before you did the book?"

"I had two stages in my feelings about him. Before I read Allen Weinstein's book, Perjury, in the 1970s, I was inclined to think that Hiss was innocent. I didn't have any particular reason for that other than people that

A School is Born

New Catholic University Founded in North County

BY NABED MCCOY

A group of North County Catholic businessmen, led by Dr. Jerry Connolly, have banded together to launch what they're calling New Catholic University. The school, which is located on a website and plans to move out to a new location, "New Catholic University" the website states, "will be a premier teaching institution focused on an educational to enabling students to be fully educated, leaders and entrepreneurs, with a strong and relevant knowledge of faith."

Coming Soon

A Chance to Make a Change

B... will hold a million dollars for the future. Right now, the money is being held off the ground. This is a chance to make a change for the California people. It will require an investment to construct at least one of the projects of an earlier 10-year old job before about the girls' balls.

Most of these projects will be needed in the next few years. To be sure you are on these mailing lists, call 800-426-TELL, email us at theball@comcast.net, or visit the website www.theball.com. We will be contacting you with the details.

I knew tended to think he was innocent. John Davis, my father-in-law, had represented him, and John thought he was innocent.

"Then I read Weinstein's book, and subsequently I saw Weinstein in a public performance in Washington. I was very unimpressed with Weinstein in his public performance. I thought he was not a particularly solid person, but I also thought that everything about Allen Weinstein made me think that he would be inclined to support Hiss, that he would go into the book wanting to support Hiss. So the fact that he had come out of it not supporting Hiss made me think that there was really something in this. And so I then started talking with John Davis about Hiss."

"John Davis must have been wonderful."

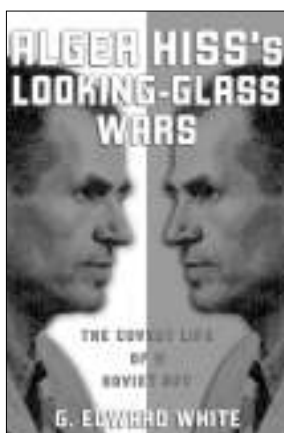

"Yes, I couldn't have had a better father-in-law. We had a very good relationship for many years. John was completely unimpressed with Weinstein. Weinstein had interviewed him for the book. John just thought Weinstein had an agenda. He wasn't convinced by the book. So he and I began to bat this back and forth. And the more we did, the more I decided that John's views really needed to be discounted because John was Hiss's lawyer, and John really believed in his client, and it would have been kind of shocking for John to concede the fact that Hiss was not only guilty, but he'd been lying to his lawyers."

"Weinstein had some evidence from the Hiss defense files, and I started thinking about that evidence. I wasn't really planning on writing on Hiss. I was doing other things, but John and I continued to talk about the Hiss case. And then in the '90s things began to change. You know, first there was that Volkogonov story about clearing him. I thought that was preposterous when it came out. I thought this guy has looked in one archive, this doesn't make sense. But I didn't see the retraction. And the retraction wasn't widely publicized. There was an article in the Times about it, but I didn't see it. Then, some of the Soviet archives came out, and then Venona came out."

About the Venona Project, Professor White writes that it took place "during a brief period during the Second World War when American intelligence had broken the codes of Soviet transmissions from Washington and New York to Moscow. The code-breaking project, known by insiders by the name Venona, had apparently been engineered by the United States' National Security Agency."

"Venona," I said, "changed everything."

"Well, what Venona did, was Venona provided independent corroboration for other information that had come out but that had all been anecdotal. There were just a lot of people who had evidence, but you thought it was all anecdotal; it was always something a little strange about them. And then all of a sudden you've got the Soviets cabling each other and mentioning, not just Hiss, but tons of people. And then the whole picture changes.

"In 1996, Hiss is still alive. And the Venona stuff comes out, and they ask him about it. And he's not in great health at that point, but he says, 'Oh, there's nothing in it. You know, I went to Moscow to look at the subway.' " (After the Yalta Conference, Hiss visited the USSR.)

"Nothing in it? I mean, there was tons of stuff in it. And so, the funny thing is that after Venona came out and precipitated another book by Weinstein, and then a book by Sam Tanenhaus called Whittaker Chambers: A Biography, there was by the late '90s this consensus that Hiss was a Soviet agent. But then, notwithstanding that, the Alger Hiss website [<http://homepages.nyu.edu/~th15/home.html>] continues to maintain Hiss's innocence. I would be astonished if you find any reference on that website to my book or any reviews of my book."

"Tony Hiss [Alger's son and a New Yorker staff writer]," I said, "wrote quite a nasty letter to the Sunday New York Times Book Review about your book after the Times reviewed it."

The professor had not read the letter. "Well, I was expecting something, but I'm interested that he took that form to do it. I figured he might try to commission a review in The Nation or something. I bet he hated the book, but I'll bet he particularly didn't like that I suggest that his father, Alger, took advantage of him at a vulnerable stage in his life. That's not very flattering. I actually feel sorry for Tony, but I don't feel sorry for Alger. It was a contemptible thing for Alger to do."

"Now that you're older, how do you feel about Whittaker Chambers? I still don't like him."

"I don't think I would like him. I think being in his company would be very awkward. I think he was a neurotic person."

"I think I'd have to have a drink."

"I might be inclined to do that as well. I also don't really think that he had the greatest motives in the world for exposing Hiss. I don't think he wanted to expose Hiss's espionage. I think he kept those papers [the Pumpkin Papers] to protect himself against the Soviets. It just happened to be the case that the papers were typed on Hiss's typewriter.

"I think that when he was subpoenaed to come to the House Un-American Activities Committee meeting he was already a converted anti-Communist, and he welcomed the opportunity to name names. I think he did that in part because of his conversion. But I think he was a very reluctant witness about espionage. I think what he was not a reluctant witness about was these people who were at one point Communists. Because I think what he hopes they'll do is renounce Communism."

"So the espionage charge by Chambers comes because Hiss sues him for libel. If Hiss hadn't sued him for libel, I'm not sure that those papers would have come to light. I think the papers came to light because Chambers — who, remember, doesn't have a lot of money — was genuinely concerned that he might lose a substantial libel suit. He might not be able to prove the allegations that he made about Hiss. So he goes back and remembers these papers and looks through these papers, and I'm not even sure he knows — he said he didn't know — what was in the papers. I'm inclined to believe him."

"But I think that but for Nixon's persistence it's possible that the Hiss investigation would never have gotten off the ground. He's the one who sandbagged Hiss and set up that interview in New York [in a room at the Commodore Hotel] where Hiss makes a very bad account of himself. Hiss goes through this charade about trying to identify Chambers. It's unconvincing. He's testy. He acts like somebody who has gotten caught with his hand in the cookie jar."

"One aspect of the Hiss-Chambers imbroglio that is rarely mentioned and that seems important is this matter of social class. Hiss was 'one of ours.' Chambers wasn't."

"True. It was, and that's ironic because Hiss himself was a kind of faux upper class."

"Hiss," I suggested, "was like somebody who had studied The Preppy Handbook. I do think it was a class thing. I think that there was a definite identification of West Side intellectuals and college professors, people who, simply as a matter of class, identified with Hiss. He went to 'our' schools. He dressed like us. He wore rep ties. He had good teeth."

"Right, and Nixon and Hoover and Chambers are one of them. They're coarse, their..."

"...teeth are bad."

"They're barbarians at the gate."

"Hiss's discussion — in public testimony — of Chambers's terrible teeth stunned me the first time I read about that conversation."

"According to Chambers," said the professor, "when he and Hiss were intimate friends, Hiss gave him lectures on getting his teeth fixed. Because, of course, appearances are so important for Hiss. He's always dressed to the nines.

"So, yes, I also think that about class. I think that all of that came together in the environment that I was in, in Harvard Law School in the late '60s. You've got, first of all, at that time in its history, a predominantly liberal institution. Almost everybody on the faculty and most of the student body regard themselves as political liberals, not everyone but many. You've also got a strong influence of class. Many people who go there are Ivy League college graduates, and they were people that had gone to prep school, and then, finally, you've got, at that point in the politics of both the Democratic and Republican Parties, some upper-class figures."

"I think there are many people who still believe in Hiss's innocence."

"Yes. There have been quite a few reviews that have come out that I've seen. They're all sort of newspaper reviews. There's a theme of the reviews that I didn't anticipate, which is, 'Well, now that White's book has come out, maybe we've seen the last of this.' You know. 'Thank goodness. Maybe this is the end.'"

"I didn't write the book with that in mind. I wrote the book to try to explain things and stimulate people to think more about Hiss, not to bury him. Partly this could be explained by the fact that many people that have written these reviews are people that are familiar with the Hiss case, and maybe they're tired of having to write about Hiss, and they hope that this will be the end. They also don't think there's much ambiguity any more about the issues. But I wrote the book because I didn't think any of the existing literature on the Hiss case had addressed the issues that I talked about."

"I actually hoped to encourage people to talk more about that. Not necessarily about Alger Hiss, but about how people get fooled. About how perception is so important in skewing views of historical events."

"The Hiss case," I suggested, "is replete with decisions based upon perceptions rather than facts. Whittaker Chambers is hideously dressed, overweight, snaggletoothed, stuttering. There's the dark-bearded, almost mysterious Nixon, who did dirt to a liberal female in his first election foray. There are the intimations that Chambers had homosexual longings for Hiss."

"That was a fabricated story that the Hiss defense team tried to turn to their advantage. Chambers had, in fact, had some homosexual episodes. I don't believe that Alger Hiss had any homosexual tendencies at all."

"The Commies in those days didn't care for homosexuals."

"Sure, they thought people could be blackmailed."

"They were right."

"Although," said Professor White, "that didn't keep them from recruiting several of the British." ■

Not the Whole Story

Life on earth is absolutely valueless.

The Netherlands Bach Society gave a thrilling concert at Sherwood Auditorium, under the auspices of the San Diego Early Music Society (presumably on the principle that one good society deserves another). Among instrumental and vocal ensembles specializing in Baroque music, there is none better. The instrumentalists (three violins, viola, cello, two recorders, and a continuo group made up variously of bassoon, theorbo, harpsichord, organ, and double bass) are masters of their art, at once virtuosic and expressive. The eight singers on the current tour are remarkable in that each has a voice of soloist quality. Jos van Veldhoven, music director since 1983, is one of the world's foremost conductors of this repertoire, with an impeccable sense of style, and the kind of discipline and vitality that inspires musicians.

The vividness of the instruments and voices and the perfection of their balance uncannily made the rather dry and colorless auditorium sound like a much larger, more resonant hall — indeed, like one of the German churches in which the items in the program had been originally performed. If you closed your eyes, you could have imagined yourself in St. Thomas's in Leipzig, during the time of Johann Schelle, Johann Kuhnau, and Johann Sebastian Bach, successively cantors (that is, directors of music) of that august center of musical life in Saxony.

It would have been an appropriate fantasy, for the organizing principle of the program was "Bach and His Musical Heritage," which meant not only J.S. Bach's predecessors in Leipzig (their closeness was suggested by a motet of Kuhnau's for which Bach composed the instrumental accompaniment), but also his great-uncle Johann (who was organist at Erfurt in the 17th Century), and — at a greater geographical distance, but an intimate source of musical inspiration — the great north German composer Dietrich Buxtehude. The works were all liturgical (cantatas and motets), except for an exquisitely shaped and voiced performance of the Fourth Brandenburg Concerto, the only purely instrumental piece on the program.

How the liturgical works ought to be performed remains a vexed question. The problem is one of numbers: how many voices or instruments on a part should there be — for example, in a cantata of Kuhnau or Bach? Above all, ought there to be a clear distinction of persons and numbers between vocal soloists and chorus, or is there some more suitable way to handle their relationship? Van Veldhoven evidently believes that single voices are enough to establish the sound of a chorus, especially if they are balanced against a minimal orchestra, and that the clarity and character thus gained far outweighs any possible loss of heft. Soloists in recitatives and arias are drawn from the vocal ensemble, stepping out of it or back into it when the music requires. Furthermore, with eight singers at his disposal, the conductor can achieve lovely antiphonal effects by disposing them on both sides of the stage, and creating a special dynamic of spatial interaction that gives variety and energy to the performance.

Often, this type of interaction is implied or explicitly stated in the score. A notable example was Johann Bach's Unser Leben ist ein Schatten, which the composer specifies as being for two choruses (plus basso continuo), the first numbering six, and the second numbering three, with the latter "hidden" (that is, placed in a different part of the hall). I'm not quite sure how van Veldhoven dealt with the missing voice (since in principle he needed nine), but he made clever use of the geography of Sherwood Auditorium, placing the three-voice group in the lobby at the rear of the hall, framed in the open central doorway. This is altogether a remarkable piece of music (you can already hear the Bach-family genius at work), and part of its subtlety — in structure and expression — depends on the varied interactions of the large and small groupings (as well as another three-voice group within the larger chorus), with responses and echoes coming from different directions in successive sections of the motet.

The exciting spatial complexity serves to underline (and perhaps to undermine) the message of the text, which is one of those unequivocal statements of German Baroque pietism according to which life on earth is absolutely valueless, and all the faithful Christian's thoughts should be on the eternal life to come, guaranteed by faith in Jesus:

Ist der Menschen Leben, Wie ein Nebel bald entsteht
Und bald wiederum vergehet
So ist unser Leben, sehet!*

"Ah how fleeting, ah how insignificant
Is the life of mortals,
As a mist quickly arises
And as quickly dissipates
So is our life, behold!"

The images in this text are given palpable presence, sometimes by specific word-painting, sometimes by the relentless tread of the melody, sometimes by the echoed phrases passing across the hall. Perhaps the Lutheran congregation experiencing the work somewhere around 1650 were convinced. But after the service they would go home and eat a hearty lunch, and then busily occupy themselves with the day-to-day activities of work, family, love-making, money-making, and civic duty, all of which they knew to be fleeting and insignificant. They were supposed to keep their mind on death, but I'll bet anything they thought a lot about life. And those of them with aesthetic awareness must have taken lively pleasure in the talent and ingenuity of the composer who had brought them this message of mortality, and in the voices (and maybe even the looks) of the performers, just the way the audience in Sherwood Auditorium was to do three and a half centuries later. Ah, the paradox of human nature!

One could not help being aware of this paradox at a concert like that of the Netherlands Bach Society, if one paid any attention to what the singers were singing and what the music meant. The message was reiterated in an even more extreme form in J.S. Bach's Cantata, BWV 161, Komm, du süsse Todesstunde ("Come, you sweet hour of death"), where the soul, longing to be with Christ, vigorously demands to die as soon as possible: "I wish for the burden of my body to be laid this very day in earth...O Jesus! Come and take me away! Let this be my last word." Yet Bach sets the text of this cantata to the loveliest and most serene music, even giving it a cheerful, pastoral flavor by the delicate chirruping of two recorders. The setting is altogether orthodox, and no doubt sincerely meant by everyone involved. But how sensual the music is (like all the arts of the Baroque), how fine the achievements of the composer and the musicians are, how much artfully crafted earthly substance (the instruments, the training, the rehearsals, the architectural beauties of the church chancel) went into the execution of this work of art that so confidently wants to throw it all away and leave it all behind, the quicker the better!

Naturally, the audience here could experience only the art of this great composition, not its historical context, nor the purpose for which it was created. Sherwood Auditorium of the Museum of Contemporary Art, La Jolla, is not the court chapel in Weimar (where BWV 161 was first performed in 1715), and those lovers of early music attending the concert did not constitute a congregation of worshipers. But to get the full impact of the music, the listener could use his imagination, and try to re-infuse the aesthetic experience with at least a hint of the fervent religiosity that made Salomo Franck's words and Bach's setting of them a functioning element in a living community's sense of itself, and in each individual's vision of what kind of creature he is and what his destiny holds in store for him.

The performers, with their passionate and skillful efforts to bring the past alive, were certainly doing their part. ■

ART MUSEUMS

California Center for the Arts Museum, "Niki de Saint Phalle: California Dreaming" explores works said to be "inspired by and created in California" through models and related drawings, paintings, and prints from the artist's archives and from private collections. Through November. The museum is located at 340 North Escondido Boulevard; 760-839-4120. (ESCONDIDO)

Mingei International Museum, "Elemental Art of the Indonesian Archipelago" includes more than 100 objects such as textiles, jewelry, puppets, baskets, beaded objects, ritual dance masks, architectural ornaments, household objects, ancestor figures, and shrines. Ongoing.

"Origami Masterworks — Innovative Forms of the Art of Paper Folding" includes more than 150 pieces by 42 artists from across the globe. Most of the objects were created by folding single sheets of paper to make geometrical forms, flowers, trees, people, masks, and a menagerie of animals. Through summer.

The Mingei is located on the square with the San Diego Museum of Art and the Timken Museum of Art. 619-239-0003. (BALBOA PARK)

Mingei International Museum, North County Satellite, "Horses — Circling the Globe" includes animals from India, China, Japan, Indonesia, Sweden, England, Guatemala, Mexico, and the U.S. Some have religious connections, some were made as toys. A selection of Navajo blankets is also on display. "Niki de Saint Phalle Remembered" continues through Sunday, June 20. Find the museum at 155 West Grand Avenue. 760-735-3355. (ESCONDIDO)

Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, Downtown, "Chicano Now: American Expressions" is described as "an interactive multimedia exhibition offering expressions of Chicano cultural style through the eyes of Chicano and Chicana performing and independent film artists." Exhibit explores themes of borders, home, family, work, personal style through performance, installation, video art. Closes Sunday, September 12.

The "Cerca Series" continues with "The Rules of the Game" by Mexico City-based artist Gustavo Artigas, on view through Sunday, June 6. Installation includes video projection, supporting materials, visually articulating "cultural similarities and disparities between the populations" of Mexico and U.S.

Find the museum at 1001 Kettner Boulevard (at Broadway), directly across from the Santa Fe Railroad Depot. 619-234-1001. (DOWNTOWN)

Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, La Jolla, "Chicano Visions: American Painters on the Verge" offers introduction to concept of Chicana and Chicano identity in U.S. Show offers paintings by more than 25 artists ranging from abstraction to photo realism, dating from 1969 to 2001. See the exhibit through Sunday, September 12.

"Self-Help Graphics and Art: The Printed Image," on display through September 12, showcases selection of prints created at Los Angeles-based Self-Help Graphics and Art by artists whose work is included in "Chicano Visions."

Find the museum at 700 Prospect Street. 858-454-3541. (LA JOLLA)

Museum of Photographic Arts, "Another America: Robert Weingarten's Testimonial to the Amish" features "testaments to the enduring virtues of this religious group's spiritual and bucolic lifestyle." Weingarten traveled to rural Amish communities in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio, Tennessee, and Indiana to create his black-and-white photographs. Closes Sunday, August 15.

In "6:30 a.m.," see what resulted when Weingarten photographed the view from his home overlooking Santa Monica Bay at 6:30 a.m. each day from January 1 through December 31, 2003. He set the tripod in the same position each morning, with its lens focused on infinity and an aperture of f22. View the exhibit through Sunday, August 15.

"Wanderers, Travelers, and Adventurers: Images of Exploration from the Permanent Collection," boasts more than 80 photographs of distant people and places, exemplifying "the many ways photographs were and still are used to present inspired visions from all over the Earth." Continues through Sunday, August 1.

Find the museum in the Casa de Balboa building, at 1649 El Prado; 619-238-7559. (BALBOA PARK)

Oceanside Museum of Art, "Brighton Press: The Art of the Book," features artist books from Brighton Press in San Diego. The books are made by hand, with intaglio, relief, and letterpress printing done on Brighton premises. Books are published in editions ranging from ten to one hundred copies. Show closes on Sunday, June 20. Find the museum at 704 Pier View Way; 760-721-2787. (OCEANSIDE)

San Diego Museum of Art, more than 390 artifacts, documents, and works of art by artists including Giotto, Michelangelo, Bernini offered in "Saint Peter and the Vatican: The Legacy of the Popes." The "floors, walls, doors, and foundation of the Vatican have been recreated in order to trace the 2000-year history of the papacy, beginning with Saint Peter and culminating with Pope John Paul II." Exhibition continues through Monday, September 6.

"Shahzia Sikander: Flip Flop," the next "Contemporary Links 2" exhibition, features drawings, a site-specific composition, and an installation composed of paintings on dense layers of tissue paper by the Pakistani-born artist. The show, closing Sunday, June 27, is based on a selection of paintings from museum's Binney Collection.

"Sultans and Sufis: Paintings from the Deccan," continuing through Sunday, August 15, includes approximately 20 works from the Edwin Binney 3rd Collection of South Asian art. Painting styles are described as "visionary, poetic, and richly colored."

These Nice Folks

The milestones are predictable: shy honeymoon; teenage son who may have drained a pint of Jack Daniel's; Michael having a lover...

Agnes is eight months pregnant. She's calm. But husband Michael's Sympathy Pain Central: he palpitates, swoons, his heart bass drums. "That's okay," Agnes tries to assure him, "this has been going on for millions and millions of years."

To which Michael, breathless, replies, "I don't see how the men lived through it!"

When Agnes observes that having children will consume their free time, what with changing diapers and all, Michael smiles. "Well, I'll find something to do," he says.

Harvey Schmidt and Tom Jones based their 1966 musical, I Do! I Do!, on Jan De Hartog's play The Fourposter. I Do! chronicles events in the 50-year marriage of Michael and Agnes. He's a writer with literary aspirations. She's a "traditional" housewife. The milestones are predictable: shy honeymoon; teenage son who may have drained a pint of Jack Daniel's; Michael having a lover; vengeful Agnes vowing to "flame" the town red; older age; and finally leaving their home of five decades.

Through it all, we never get to know much about Michael or Agnes. The less the better, from the authors' point of view. Schmidt and Jones wrote The Fantasticks, which applied the bare-stage minimalism of Our Town to a musical. There's a boy and a girl, a wall, a trunk, parents. The kids grow from innocence to experience. I

Do! has a generic husband and wife, and a bed, center stage. They grow from wide-eyed illusion to disillusionment (as if the authors had grafted a marriage onto Fantasticks). Their characters don't have much "character." Details are kept to a minimum, by design, so audiences can plug their own experiences into the story and songs.

This bird's-eye view tempers potential crises. Like the Neil Simon comedies of the period, bad things just seem to happen to these nice folks. The ironies have all been pretested. And theirs is a low-wire act, with a sitcom safety net below.

Michael sings the only song that threatens anything, "It's a Well-Known Fact." Men, he contends, age better than women (he claims to be a "late-October rose"), and women "fizzle." The night I caught the show, the Fritz Theater's lively audience wasn't buying that sexist hoo-hah any more than when Agnes sings a "woman's only alive when she's in love."

Yes, the Fritz, famous heretofore for tough, cutting-edge drama, especially about women. I Do! I Do! — a compendium of mid-'60s mainstream clichés — is a far cry from Paula Vogel's Baltimore Waltz or the scalding truths of Maria Irene Fornes.

Duane Daniels, artistic director of the Fritz, also has musical theater talents (he's one of the main reasons Triple Espresso has run for what seems like forever at the Hahn). As Michael, Daniels combines his rich baritone voice with Leigh Scarritt's silver soprano. They are always fun to watch, and hear, even if the musical isn't. In the original, the vocals were so demanding — staccato riffs verging on pure scat — Robert Preston and Mary Martin performed only six (rather than eight) shows a week. Daniels and Scarritt sprint through these tongue-twisters with dexterity and perform the show's signature song, "My Cup Runneth Over" with heart.

I Do! is part of a dinner-theater package at the Sixth Avenue Bistro's intimate downstairs

Sheer territorial chauvinism: This Sunday, June 6, Channel 8 will telecast the Tony Awards from Radio City Music Hall. The ceremony, which begins at 8:00 p.m. local time, could be subtitled “the San Diego Showcase.” With pride let’s count the ways:

Jack O’Brien, artistic director of the Old Globe, has been nominated for his direction of Shakespeare’s Henry IV, a Lincoln Center production that originated at the Globe in 1995. This is O’Brien’s sixth nomination. He won last year’s Tony for directing the Broadway hit Hairspray.

The Drama Desk Awards — voted on by New York critics and editors — are to the Tonys what the Wood Memorial used to be to the Kentucky Derby. Success in one predicted success in the other. O’Brien won this year’s Drama Desk and Outer Critics Circle awards for Henry IV.

Also nominated for Henry IV: Globe associate artist Ralph Funicello for scenic design. Dakin Matthews, who adapted both parts of Henry IV into a single play, received a special Drama Desk Award.

Doug Wright’s I Am My Own Wife inaugurated the La Jolla Playhouse’s popular work-in-progress series, Page to Stage, in 2001. Wife won this year’s Pulitzer Prize for drama, and a Drama Desk. It has been nominated for three Tonys: Best Play, Wright; Best Direction, Moises Kaufman; and Best Performance by a Leading Actor: UCSD graduate Jefferson Mays, who has already won the Drama Desk for his astonishing solo performance.

Jefferson Mays in I Am My Own Wife

Mays is thrilled, he wrote in an e-mail, and has been “scampering about like a decapitated capon.” The artist in him also looks forward to the day after the awards, “so I can get back to the play!”

UCSD ain’t done. Gifted graduate Robert Brill, one of the founders of Sledgehammer Theatre, was nominated for his scenic design of Stephen Sondheim’s musical Assassins.

To misquote Mick Jagger: New York, you talk a lot. Now have a look at us! ■

Don Juan

This one’s special. Unlike so many restagings of old comedies, Stephen Wadsworth isn’t doing something to Molière’s Don Juan. He’s doing the play, as played, in period. Audiences expecting an X-rated throbber about the infamous sexual imperialist, or a yuk-filled bagatelle desperate to please, be forewarned: this is a serious comedy. Molière combines melodrama with commedia dell’arte lazzi. The acting follows suit: dramatic (but not sappy) deliveries, played front, join with comedic bits. The result’s a sweeping theatrical style: ornate, expressive, stopwatch precise, and often hilarious. Adam Stein’s Don Juan has as many layers as his intricately embellished costume. He amazes, in part, because you can be for Don Juan, then against him, then split. Throughout Stein’s rapier-like voice slashes at hypocrisy and injustice even as his character excels at both. Staged with a gilded proscenium and painted flats, the production offers riches both small — like the exact positioning of hands, even fingers — and large. Subtitled “the Statue at the Feast,” Don Juan calls for a giant equestrian monument, which moves, and the crackling fires of hell. How do they do it? See for yourself.

Critic’s pick.

OLD GLOBE THEATRE, SIMON EDISON CENTRE FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS, BALBOA PARK, THROUGH JUNE 13; TUESDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. MATINEE SATURDAY AND SUNDAY AT 2:00 P.M. 619-239-2255.

THE FAULT LINE THEATRE, 3152 FIFTH AVENUE (BETWEEN REDWOOD AND SPRUCE), HILLCREST, FRIDAY, JUNE 4, THROUGH JUNE 12; FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. 619-692-3382.

Grassroots Greeks

6th @ Penn’s former “Seven Weeks of Greeks” became so popular it’s a regular series. And what a great idea! To reacquaint local audiences with the masterworks of ancient Greek drama, Linda Castro and David Cohen offer staged readings. The approach is refreshing. There’s no attempt at polished work or choices set in granite. Instead, the actors treat the text as if this were the first day of rehearsal, the threshold of exploration. They read in a semicircle. There’s some movement, a suggestion of costumes, and (re)acting, but the emphasis is on the word and, as in all Greek drama, on an unfolding story at once hair-on-fire irrational and as logical as a courtroom debate. It doesn’t take long to see how pertinent and compelling these plays are. An informal discussion follows the reading, and admission is free — though 6th @ Penn greatly appreciates donations. Also: since space is limited, the theater recommends reservations in advance. Next reading: Orestes and The Cyclops, by Euripides, June 7. Worth a try.

6TH @ PENN THEATRE, 3704 SIXTH AVENUE, HILLCREST, OPEN-ENDED RUN: MONDAY, JUNE 7, AT 7:30 P.M. 619-688-9210.

I Do! I Do!

Theatre in Old Town's engaging production features a four-person cast. They have the smarts not to push for comedy or drama, letting the audience choose its reaction (romantics can sigh, scoffers can, well, scoff). Andrea Chamberlain, Mylinda Hull, David Engle, and especially Stan Chandler, who must be one of the most versatile performers around, enhance every scene with strong voices and precise character details. Late-Night Catechism

The Laguna Playhouse stages the popular “interactive adult catechism class,” taught by a sister from the spare-not-the-rod school. The concept doesn’t sound like much. The sister is substituting (it’s the regular teacher’s poker night, don’t tell a soul). She used to teach but was deemed too strict for contemporary students. And the class is just that, part of a course on Catholic doctrine. But the sister’s authoritarianism takes it to unforeseen places (you can hear cries of recognition from the audience, especially when sister brings out a hard ruler and taps her palm). The results, the two times I’ve seen the show: a. an almost nonstop evening of comedy; and b. a thought-provoking look at education, religion, and much more. The sister, it turns out, is not kidding. (Note: the Laguna Playhouse has extended the show’s run six times.)

A Life in the Theatre

David Mamet’s behind-the-scenes look at the craft (and catastrophes) of acting follows Robert and John, a seasoned pro and a young up-and-comer. At first they’re teacher/eager student, chatting in the dressing room. By the end, tricks learned, toughened by experience, John dons the mantle. Along the way, using scenelets and blackouts, Mamet chronicles just about every imaginable actor’s nightmare from upstaging to windows, and a zipper, that won’t shut. Though one could wish the North Coast Rep’s show were better paced, and that the scenes where things go wrong weren’t staged so much for laughs (which tends to sabotage the characters into mere buffoons), savvy veteran Jonathan McMurtry (Robert) and relative San Diego newcomer Francis Gercke (John) do quality work, especially with their evolving relationship. Jeanne Reith’s excellent costumes not only trace John’s rise in status, they also constitute a brief history of theater, from the Renaissance, through Chekhov, to today. Marty Burnett’s set turns the stage around, putting the footlights in the rear. We are literally backstage, watching the magic of theater demystified, at times satirized, but also honored.

National Comedy Theatre

ComedySportz changed its name, but its methods (and madness) remain the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it’d be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling (“where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked Priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags”). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone’s TheatreSports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like “rugby and American football”), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on AstroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a “challenge match” against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played “Emotional Sympathy,” “Shakespeare,” “Blind Line,” and “Freeze Tag,” with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit, rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledged failure, abundantly, then forgot it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Jewel turned 30 on May 23. On May 22 she did two concerts at Hampton Beach Ballroom Casino in New Hampshire. Gloria Dion, know if she was having a nervous breakdown or what. She told everyone to stop looking at her teeth and look at her breasts."

In their June 2003 list of "Seven Rock Stars With Bad Teeth," Spin magazine included Jewel because of her "fang."

On Fox News they said

Humphrey's on the Bay, which was released March 23, she was performing the song "Kiss the Flame" when she stopped, saying she forgot the words, and then had an audience member come up and whisper them into her ear while she

Radio station 107.1 WERZ sponsored the concert. Operations manager Michael O'Donnell was quoted in the Hampton Union as saying, "They were upset with some of the comments they heard her make. She said she saw a better audience at a barroom brawl and that all drinkers and smokers were sinners."

Kristen MacKinnon, a manager at the casino, said it was Jewel's request that smoking not be allowed at the show. Alcohol was served but not in the main stage area because Jewel requested no waitresses in the main ballroom while she was onstage.

Jewel's encore?

The Hampton Union wrote, "Instead of singing one of her hits, she yodeled for a minute and then left the stage. Several people drove by her tour bus and screamed obscenities," Dion said.

Calls to Jewel's management were not returned.

Jewel's tour will bring her back to Humphrey's for shows on June 14 and 15. Wear your false teeth.

"I wouldn't be surprised if they were dropped."

That is what one radio insider (who did not want to be identified) said about the plight of P.O.D., the Chula Vista-born Christian rock band.

"Their last record [Payable On Death, which was released last year] sold, what? 300,000, while the record before that [Satellite, which was released in 2001] sold three million copies. That's not a good trend."

It was announced two weeks ago that the Warner Music Group — which includes the Warner, Atlantic, and Elektra labels — would be shrinking its artist roster by nearly half.

Warner Music Group chairman Lyor Cohen said the goal was to reduce the roster of the three labels "from 180 to below 100."

P.O.D.'s Oklahoma City-based manager, Tim Cook, said his band would not be one of the 80 artists getting dropped.

He said Payable On Death has been certified gold.

The Recording Industry Association of America certifies a record to be "gold" once 500,000 units are shipped to retail outlets. Cook admitted, however, that the amount actually sold was under 500,000.

"It's just a hair under a half million," he said, without getting specific.

But one band with a San Diego member did get the boot from the Warner Music Group. Year of the Rabbit was dropped by Elektra.

"It happened in the last few weeks," said Cook, who also managed that band. Year of the Rabbit was formed by San Diego native Ken Andrews. He said Andrews, who has worked in the studio with Pete Yorn, Black Rebel Motorcycle Club, and A Perfect Circle, has decided to concentrate on producing other artists rather than fronting his own band.

"They asked to leave the label," said Cook about Year of the Rabbit's departure from Elektra. He said the band is currently not a working band.

Cook said P.O.D. is particularly fortunate since Witnesses told the paper and local radio station WERZ that Jewel was making fun of fat people and people with no teeth. She also asked the audience to yell requests and then told them to "shut the hell up." Dion was quoted in the paper as saying, "I don't Jewel was on the Ballroom Casino stage for about an hour and played only five songs. Halfway through the show, she began to talk about Zoloft and Paxil for about ten minutes.

According to the newspaper, she stopped singing in the middle of her hit "Who Will Save Your Soul?" because people were singing along and said, "I would have never guessed you all know the words."

Stopping in the middle of a song is nothing new for her though. On her DVD Live at

P.O.D.'s longtime A&R rep at the label, John Rubeli, is still at Atlantic, while many other staffers have been fired. It has been reported that the Warner Music Group is in the midst of cutbacks that will save $227 million.

"Nearly everyone at Elektra is gone," said Cook.

Other Warner Music Group artists with San Diego roots seem to be safe, including Jewel (on Atlantic) and Jason Mraz (on Elektra). But it has been reported that the Elektra imprint may be eliminated entirely, and the surviving artists would then be moved to Atlantic.

Velvet Revolver, that unholy marriage of Guns N' Roses and former locals Stone Temple Pilots, launched their first U.S. tour May 15. Composed of three Guns N' Roses alumni (guitarist Slash, bassist Duff McKagan, and drummer Matt Sorum), STP frontman Scott Weiland, and guitarist Dave Kushner (ex-Suicidal Tendencies), the band is living up to Axl Rose's pendant for tardiness, hitting the stage almost a half hour late in Detroit on May 20. The band showed up almost 45 minutes late May 21 for a Canadian press conference, whereupon they chain-smoked and used so many obscenities that little was publishable outside of porno mags.

In Chicago, four days into the tour, Weiland wore a police uniform onstage, then climbed a balcony post and leaped onto the heads of audience members. During the acoustic ode to murder, "Used to Love Her," the audience chanted, "Fuck Axl Rose," prompting Slash to chastise them with "Was that entirely necessary?"

One reviewer commented, "On a scale of things you're likely to see in Chicago this year, Slash serving as the calm voice of reason ranks with Sammy Sosa sneezing his back out."

At their Toronto gig, even though audiences had only heard two Velvet Revolver songs ("Slither," their first single, and "Set Me Free" from the Hulk soundtrack), Weiland reportedly mocked the crowd for only singing along with the Stone Temple Pilots and Guns N' Roses hits. The band was heavily booed during their odd-choice encore, a cover of "Negative Creep" by Nirvana, a band whose emergence possibly contributed to Guns N' Roses' demise, and even to rock's abandonment of endless guitar solos and glam-jam excess.

The closest Velvet Revolver gigs currently scheduled are in L.A. June 8 and 9 (both dates sold out in two minutes, according to a press release), coinciding with the release of their debut CD Contraband. On May 9 bassist Duff McKagan was spotted in the audience at Soma watching Slipknot, prompting a rumor that Velvet Revolver may play a secret San Diego show on June 10 (currently a "day off" on their schedule), to be announced at the last possible moment.

According to somasd.com, the Yeah Yeah Yeahs plus guests are appearing on June 10 as part of the 91X X-Fest. A person who answered the phone at Soma said he didn't know anything about the show's lineup or about Velvet Revolver appearing and added, "We're not allowed to talk to the Reader."

Len Paul responded, "I never said to anyone who works here, 'Don't talk to the Reader.' If anyone wants to talk to me they can come and see me. I never miss a show."

Regarding Velvet Revolver's unannounced guest appearance: "I have not heard a peep about them showing up. I do know we have a date in July or August on hold to reserve a show with them."

"I'm suing them for $700."

Milton Symister says he is suing two DJs at hip-hop station More FM (98.9 FM) because a local company they co-own stiffed him.

Symister says he signed on as a member of the "street team" for King Size Multimedia. "It's owned by four guys [including] DJ Raggs [Ricky Amezcua] and DJ Seize [Cesar Gonzalez]," he said he started working with the company in 2002.

"There were about 30 of us. When we first started, they told us none of us were going to get paid. They had us go to places like E Street and Blue Tattoo and put up posters for Columbia Pictures and Def Jam Records."

He said he had no trouble working free at the beginning.

"We got in clubs for free. We got free CDs.... This went on for a few months, but people got tired of not getting paid.... Then in April of last year, they made us a deal. They sent us an e-mail and told us they would start paying us. They said they would pay us $100 a month for each account."

Symister said that, between April and August of last year, he worked on three different accounts for King Size.

"This whole business is based on evidence. Record companies want evidence. I had to take pictures to prove what I did."

Symister provided proof of both the e-mail from King Size Multimedia and his photos.

"I have literally hundreds of photos.... Because of our work, they were getting money each month from the record companies. They always had some excuse for not paying us. They blamed it on the record company. So they basically...thought they could get away with it. They thought I was some kid from the ghetto. They thought someone from the inner city would never take them to court."

Amezcua responded, "We have no problem paying him for the completion of the work. But he never turned in the pictures to us."

When told that Symister has the photos and seems happy to show anyone who will look, Amezcua said, "It's too late now. We had to outsource somebody else. We would pay upon completion of the work, but it is too late now."

Symister works as an instructor for a private after-school program for elementary school kids. He said he has a June 22 court date at the

MILTON'S SUING AND HAS THE E-MAIL TO PROVE IT

Clairemont Mesa small-claims court.

Symister is not soured on hip-hop because of his experience though. "I also run www.urbanempire.us, which is a website for San Diego's hip-hop community."

"Wildman" Fischer. The Frank Zappa protégé has been retired from music for over a dozen years, but his offbeat songs still appear on compilations. Fischer was kept by the CMH (County Mental Health) for a period of time and has lived at various downtown hotels (the Palms and the Golden West) and shelters in San Diego and L.A. since the 1990s.

Among Fischer's fans and friends is Devo's Mark Mothersbaugh (with whom Fischer recorded "Fun With Your Body").

"He [Mothersbaugh] gave An Evening With [Wildman Fischer], his 1969 debut [to Danny Elfman sometime last year, and he loved my stuff! He wants to use 'Merry-Go-Round' in Willy Wonka, and I'll get royalties and everything! The great thing is I don't have to do anything; I don't have to record again; they're gonna use my voice, but I don't have to make a record or tour."

The last time Fischer appeared onstage was August 5, 1988, at the San Diego ComicCon, where Bill "Lost in Space" Mumy was his guitarist.

Lately he performs for tips on street corners, which is what he was doing when Frank Zappa discovered him and put him in a recording studio with the Mothers of Invention, the GTOs, and Kim Fowley. The homeless singer would end up becoming a cult sensation, though years later he was in court suing Warner Brothers over royalties he claimed were owed for An Evening With Wildman Fischer. A small settlement was won, but the Warner Bros. money (an unknown amount) went to Gail Zappa, Frank's wife and executor of the Zappa estate, because the Evening with Wildman Fischer album was actually a Bizarre Records release (Zappa's label). A documentary about "Wildman" Fischer is being shot around town by L.A. filmmaker Josh Rubin, which

"We're not pretending to be Neil Diamond. We celebrate him in a different way."

Bassist Hal Deranek says Brother Love is not another Super Diamond, a Bay Area tribute band that tries to pretend it is Neil Diamond in concert. Brother Love takes Neil Diamond songs and makes them go metal.

"Ever since I was 16, I wondered what it would be like if Van Halen kicked out lead singer David Lee Roth and replaced him with Neil Diamond," says Brother Love founder and singer Gary Day.

Diamond is famous for some of the Monkees' hits (including "I'm a Believer") and hits he sang himself ("Holly Holy" and "I Am I Said").

Few tribute bands have made it big by rechanneling a well-known artist through a different style of music. Dread Zeppelin comes to mind as perhaps the only group to do so. The Pasadena band appeared ten years ago, playing Led Zeppelin music with a reggae beat and fronted by an Elvis impersonator. "Record companies are envisioning this [metal-influenced oldies] might be the next big thing," said Day. "I even heard there might be a heavy metal Barbra Streisand band."

While Super Diamond lead singer Surreal Neil has said his band has received the blessing of Diamond himself, Day said he has yet to speak to the 62-year-old pop star.

"I have not talked with him personally, but we have dealt with his publisher, and we obtained permission to do his material," said Day.

Day said Brother Love has released its own ten-song CD. The band played at 'Canes last week.

Brother Love appears June 25 at the Hard Rock Café. Admission is $7, must be 21.

Basic, Loud, and Caustic

"I don't care where we play as long as there's a VIP room."

They formed in 1997 when all three members were 17. Seven years later, a little older and wiser but not lacking the youthful drive that was their impetus, the Peppermints continue to be the saccharine rapture of San Diego's underground music scene. This punk power trio never fails to inflame, amuse, and abuse its rabid and curious audiences.

Oh sure, they've made some foes on the path to infamy and they may even be banned from or refuse to play certain venues — but this is to be expected. No band could rightfully label themselves "punk" without pissing off a few people — otherwise they'd just be boring, and the Peppermints do not deliver a dull day.

Do they render the goods when it comes to the tunes? The critical reception to their recorded works on Pet Set and Pandacide Records have been a mixed basket of ripe and sour apples. Their lyrics are raw, their notes basic, loud, and caustic — the voice of a generation caught in the middle of too many mixed notions and genres.

True to traditional tenets of punk, these young ladies have adopted colorful stage names perfect for any online chat room: R. Qelly keeps time on the skins, M-Ron Hubbard guides the low end, and Lill G'raboagfran hits the power chords.

TRICKIEST MUSICAL PROBLEM?

Lill G'raboagfran "Trying to land a one-handed round-off without getting off beat."

R. Qelly "Trying not to catch my hair on fire during the song where I light my stick on fire...though most clubs won't let me do this anymore after the Great White incident [in a Rhode Island nightclub in February 2003, where nearly 100 people died in the smoke and flames]."

M-Ron Hubbard "Fibonacci sirens."

INSTRUMENTS USED?

Qelly Monster SX drums with Tuthy heads, Zildjian hi-hat, Dark Chyna crash, Yerman ride, and extra-slender Japanese oak sticks

Hubbard Yannic X-53 Pro bass, Last NGD bass head, Supersonic 44 Masterclass cabinet, Fender heavy picks

CURRENT PERSONAL PLAYLIST

G'raboagfran The Runaways' Live in Japan,

FAVES

MICHAEL HEMMINGSON

R. Qelly, Lill G'raboagfran, M-Ron Hubbard

GWAR — absolutely anything and everything by GWAR, the Tom Robinson Band's Power in the Darkness, Snoop Dogg's Doggystyle, and Prince's Sign o' the Times

FAVORITE READING MATERIALS ON THE ROAD

Qelly The Dead Sea Scrolls, Realms of the Unreal, and Story of the Eye by Georges Bataille

G'raboagfran "I don't have a list of books, because I get carsick. I've read only one book on tour. It was called In Defense of Animals."

Hubbard Kaz's Underworld, The Dictionary of

TOP FIVE FAVORITE VENUES

Hubbard 1) Some house in Oakland; 2) Some basement in Idaho; 3) Some loft in L.A.; 4) The Nevermind; 5) "I don't remember"

Qelly "I don't care where we play as long as there's a VIP room."

G'raboagfran 1) Slaughter Haus in Atlanta, GA; 2) Fast Forward (RIP) in Portland; 3) Monkey Mania in Denver, CO; 4) the Smell in L.A. ■

you know where to look for it, and real beats fake. As a genre, post-rock was a bust. But as a kind of historical term, I think it was right on target. The success of American Idol is proof that we live in a post-rock age. If rock were still king, someone would have smashed a guitar over Simon Cowell’s head by now — or, at least, puked on Paula Abdul. Just when Tortoise’s breakthrough Millions Now Living Will Never Die was released in 1996, teen pop was taking over rock’s place in youth culture. Rock wasn’t exactly dead, but it wasn’t the only game in town anymore. And that’s not necessarily a bad thing.

But teen pop is a hare. It’s fast and flashy, but it can’t go in one direction for long. Tortoise, on the other hand, just keeps plugging along, getting better at its art. You

NOTE

BY DAVE GOOD

"There are only three white blues guitarists, and Geoff Muldaur is at least two of them" — that's from British legend Richard Thompson. I'd argue that the other is John Hammond, who all but bludgeons the listener with his singing and playing. But Muldaur's not so obvious. When he sits down, somebody else begins to play. Close your eyes and you'd swear it was an African-American singing those sunburnt Delta rags, certainly not some upwardly mobile cat from Boston with roots in the Woodstock coffeehouse scene of the '60s and '70s. Always a beautiful picker, there are indications that Muldaur has finally arrived as a performer. Known as a musician's musician, his fans include the likes of Bob Dylan, Bonnie

GEOFF MULDAUR

Raitt, and Lucinda Williams. Ry Cooder-ness abounds in Muldaur's love of roots obscurity, but it's the quivering voice, which the New York Times called "otherworldly," that's made him a favorite of National Public Radio's Weekend Edition and A Prairie Home Companion. For a good sampling of what he can do, break out Muldaur's Secret Handshake and track the bittersweet "Got to Find Blind Lemon (Pt. 1)." Muldaur's takes have a spit and polish, having been oiled up by modern recording and his own sensibilities. In the end, there's an optimism that wasn't available to the original singers of the blues. But then Muldaur has enjoyed a good career as a computer programmer and as a pick-and-choose producer. He does not take audiences to the blues museum with all the implied polemics. Rather, his music choices and performances come out of an eclectic storehouse of a mind and a love of Americana. And just to set the record straight, Muldaur is not Maria's brother. He's her ex-husband.

>hometown CDs BY MARY MONTGOMERY

Label: Lazy A Records

Songs: 1) Day Five 2) Naked Hands 3) Fire on the Light

4) Far Too Long 5) A Sonnet in Lieu of a Special Occasion

Price/Where Available: www.jturtlemusic.com for $7

Band Members: Jason Turtle (acoustic guitar, vocals)

Extra Info: Jason grew up in Cupertino, California, near Silicon Valley. His formal piano training began at age five. It wasn't until his senior year that Jason took up the acoustic guitar.

Website: www.jturtlemusic.com

The former half of acoustic duo Jason and Jane went into months of songwriting and the production of this project after the two parted ways in February of last year. The disc is a five-song demo that, according to Jason,

"returns to the roots of his writing without the pressures of any influences but his own."

The recording consists mostly of quietly rolling midtempo rockers. Turtle stays away from heavier, melodramatic rock, instead choosing to stick to signature harmonies that are something in the way of the Dave Matthews Band meets Dashboard Confessional meets Bread. The quirky vintage edge added by rhythmical acoustic wanderings is what catapults his sound into a league of its own. There is a point where the whole quiet restraint scheme begins to flounder as the tracks start to melt into each other, but it's all so melodic that it's hard to resist this torpid charisma.

The faster rhyme schemes of "Naked Hands" highlight melodic guitar riffs, while Turtle works himself into a jam/soft rock vibe by album's end with "A Sonnet in Lieu of a Special Occasion."

"Far Too Long" emotes with the lines "It was only supposed to be / something in-between / and it came, at last, much harder than it ever was before / and now I've got to choose / where everyone could lose again / and never come back to where you are 'cause now I'm on my own."

Perhaps Turtle misses Jane after all.

NightSpotting

WINSTON'S
1921 Bacon Street
Ocean Beach
619-222-3802
www.winstonsob.com

Sierra Nevada, Yellow Tail, Karl Strauss Amber Lager, Widmer, Bud, Bud Light, Miller Light, and Winston's Nut Brown Ale

FOOD ➤ chips $1 and that's it for food here; lots of restaurants in the area (and you can bring food inside)

ACCESS ➤ street parking only, and it's hard to find

DRESS ➤ because of its proximity to the beach, lots of shorts and even a few swim trunks; lots of sandals and flip-flops; lots of T-shirts (“Brooklyn Dodgers,” “Orange County Choppers,” “Chronic Tattoo,” “Local Boy Mondays,” “Grateful Dead,” and “San Diego Zoo”)

DANCE FLOOR ➤ shaped like a triangle; 30 people would fill it up

FIRE EXITS ➤ two — the main entrance and one near the women's bathroom

BATHROOMS ➤ men's had two urinals, one stall, one sink (with no mirror), condom machine ($.75), graffiti that said “Hippie Thugz” in two places, and other things I couldn't read; hundreds of band stickers everywhere; women's had two stalls and a sink with a mirror; both had liquid soap and paper towels

CAPACITY ➤ 198

SPECIAL AREAS ➤ game room has two video games (golf, Ms. Pac-Man), a pool table, digital jukebox on wall, and an ATM FURNISHINGS ➤ ten tables with four chairs, 30 seats at the bar, a black light on each side of the room, two TVs, eight ceiling fans, and surf scenes on the walls

DECIBEL LEVEL ➤ 117 during a cover of “Hard to Handle” (ear plugs $1 at bar), 120 last week at Claire de Lune

WEIRDEST BAND NAME IN LAST MONTH ➤ Not Since Reagan

QUOTABLE ➤ “That sign says Bud Light is $1 for ten ounces on Monday. That bartender just charged me $2.” His friend replied, “It must be an old sign.”

A few of my friends who like the Dead have been coming here to check out the Electric Waste Band for years. One of them said, “The bass player looks a little like Charles Manson.”

I talked to the bassist, Andrew Lantz, between their sets (but didn't ask about the Manson thing). I did ask him about Winston's, and he said, “This is like our home away from home. We grew up in OB.” Then he admits, “Well, I grew up in Santee.”

There used to be a Winston's there but no more.

I saw eight empty kegs near the men's bathroom. This is a drinking bar.

A patron pointed out, “The waitress is wearing flip-flops. How many jobs would let you do that?”

— Josh Board

and Action Folk Singer. Sunday, 4 p.m. to 6 p.m., the Celtic Ensemble, Irish folk. Wednesday, open-mike.

Philly Up

Joe Crescenzo and his brother vacationed here from Philadelphia in 1974. Hungry at lunchtime for a cheese steak or a hoagie, Joe discovered he couldn't find a single such sandwich in San Diego. If you have ever tasted an authentic hoagie, you can understand that a Philadelphian would consider this a panic situation. "I realized, if I brought this food out here and opened a sandwich shop, I could make a living at it," he says. "I decided to come back and do it once I finished college." In June 1979, he opened the Philadelphia Sandwich Co.

The cafe is celebrating its 25th anniversary, proof that Philadelphians have a culinary heritage that's not only worth recreating but worth sharing.

The Philadelphia Sandwich Co. may be 25, but it looks like a well-preserved 50. Notice the maple-veneer tables and chairs; it could be a coffee shop in any small town in Eisenhower America — except the premises are bedecked with Philadelphia, from sports-team pennants to cityscape photos to a black and silver hooded Mummer's costume (from the New Year's Day parade that's the Philly equivalent of Mardi Gras). I recognized one of the celebrity-diner photos: Philadelphia-born actor Jack Klugman (The Odd Couple and Quincy).

You go to the counter, order from the menu board, and take a seat. A few minutes later, your food is delivered to your table. The heart of the menu centers on two regional specialties, both invented by Italian-Americans in working-class South Philly: the cheese-steak sandwich and the hoagie "Italian special" sandwich, available in six-inch or ten-inch lengths. You can get yard-long and six-foot party sandwiches, but you have to order those in advance. There are nonregional deli sandwiches (meatballs, roast beef) and green entrée salads resembling antipasti, decorated with cheese and Italian deli meats, turkey breast or tuna. Native side dishes include dinner salads, "Philly fries," Wise (no relation) potato chips, and for dessert, packaged pastries made by the Tastykake company, Philly's answer to Hostess.

The Philly cheese steak sandwich was reputedly invented in South Philly in 1930 by a hot-dog vendor named Pat Olivieri, who had a stand at the base of the Italian Market. One lunchtime, Olivieri got bored eating his own wares, so he bought beef rib eye trims from a nearby butcher, sliced 'em thin, and sizzled them on his hot-dog grill along with sweet onion slivers. He piled the mixture into an Italian roll, but just as he was about to take his first bite, a regular customer, a cabby, showed up. Catching a whiff of the aroma, the cabby asked Pat to make him one, too. As soon as he tasted it, the customer told Pat, "Forget about those hot dogs, you should sell these." The Philly steak sandwich was born — but not yet complete. At some point, customers began to demand more options, and around 1940, melted cheese was added. Over the years, more ingredients — peppers, mushrooms, tomatoes, and/or pizza sauce — became options. Now, a version is available with chicken breast. Olivieri's descendants run the restaurant that grew from the sandwich, but it's now one of many.

"In Philly, the cheese steak and hoagie shops are like the taco shops here — you get three of them on every corner," says Crescenzo. "When I was growing up, if you had some space in your basement or your garage, you could open a cheese steak stand. They weren't too careful about permits in those days. I worked at hoagie shops all through high school; it was how teenagers earned money there." The cheese steak is now threatening to become a national fast-food fad. I've noticed ads touting a "Philly cheese steak pizza" from one of the pizza chains, and I've tried a Jack in the Box version of the sandwich. It left me asking, "Where's the cheese?"

At the Philadelphia Sandwich Co., a steak sandwich or a hoagie begins with fresh-baked "Frenchette" bread from Little Italy's Solunto bakery. This Italian loaf, with a soft crust and a cushy interior, is the same style of Italian bread, says Crescenzo, as those from Philly's Amoroso Bakery.

The steak sandwich filling features thin slices of lean beef and sweet onions — your original hot-dog guy's "Philly steak." Crescenzo gets his meat shipped frozen from the Philadelphia Cheese Steak Company, the butcher that supplies the concessions at Philly's new Alhambra Sports & Entertainment Center. The cheese goes on top of the beef, and you have a choice of white or yellow American, Swiss, provolone, or Cheez Whiz. The one cheese that never has been used in official Philly cheese steak is Philadelphia cream cheese, a product with no connection to the city beyond its moniker. (The cheese was invented in Chester, New York. Since Philadelphia was considered the gourmet destination of America in 1880, its distributor borrowed some cachet by naming the product for the city.)

I chose the purest regional form of the sandwich: the Cheez Whiz variation favored by a plurality of Philadelphians. I think natives add ketchup to give it life. On the second go-round, I did better, opting for the "Everything Cheese Steak": tomatoes, canned mushrooms (which Joe favors because of their moisture), and bottled red Italian sweet peppers. I specified provolone for the cheese. The provolone outdid the Whiz on every mouthful and gave the mushrooms a buttery flavor, while the peppers lent a nip to the beef. If you are not a Philadelphian by birth, I advise skipping the simpler versions to indulge in "Everything." As with any great sandwich, the combination of flavors exceeds the sum of its ingredients.

Then the hoagie. Contrary to myth, the Philadelphia hoagie sandwich isn't named for musician Hoagy Carmichael. The most credible explanation for the name is that during World War I, Italian immigrants working at the Hog Island shipyard brought these sandwiches from home in their lunch boxes. The "hoggie" evolved into the "hoagie." Other folkloric explanations involve an envious Irishman named Hogan and the hoggishness of downing the whole sandwich at one sitting.

Whatever its origin, the hoagie was declared the "Official Sandwich of Philadelphia" in 1992. It is one Philadelphia treat that I have tasted before, and I never forgot it. The summer I was 16, a Philly hoagie stand opened in Greenwich Village, my hangout. I'd eaten plenty of New York hero sandwiches, but the hoagies, with more greenery and herbs, were a thrill. Better yet, a buck and a quarter, if memory serves, for a giant sandwich bought a whole day's worth of food for two teenagers. We'd eat our fill, rewrap the leftovers, stash them in my hobo bag, and when we got hungry again, we'd pull them out and gnaw some more.

Re-encountering the same flavors all these years later, I realize why a pair of adolescent appetites met their Nirvana in this sandwich. It's not the size; it's the intensity. All the Italian-American mixed-meat deli sandwiches by any name (hero, submarine, torpedo) have a lot in common, but the Philadelphia hoagie is as distinctive as the New Orleans muffuletta. Instead of the latter's olive salad, the dominant flavors are pickled Italian peppers (your choice of hot or sweet, they're chopped up, crunchy seeds and all), olive oil, and dried oregano leaves in a quantity so ample, they form a green crust on the tomatoes and lettuce. As the day goes on, pepper-pickling brine mingles with olive oil. The longer it takes to eat this sandwich, the zestier it tastes.

At the Philadelphia Sandwich Co., the dressing starts with young olive oil; the provolone cheese, even cold, is soft and malleable. The meat assortment, which includes half a pound in the 10-inch, consists of "juicy ham," "hot ham" (spicy capicola), and enough Genoa salami for garlicky bite. Unlike other local heroes, in the Philly hoagie the ham goes on top, where it's the first flavor in each bite. I can't praise the combination enough.

There are two house-made side dishes here. The house salad mirrors the ingredients of the hoagie (lettuce, tomato, peppers, oregano) plus croutons. The "Philly Fries" are not a Philadelphia dish, just Joe's method of making them. He fries the spuds fast in hot liquid shortening, so they maintain a potato flavor, then adds the final fillip of garlic salt. I like them a lot. All the deli salads, however, whether potato, mac, or pasta, are Reiser's brand, those mayonnaise-ridden plastic-cupped food substances. At one point, Joe tried to introduce house-made potato salad made from his sister's mustard-spiked recipe. Customers rebelled.

The eatery sells one-pound packages of Habbersett "Philadelphia Scrapple," a respected brand from Folcroft, Pennsylvania. (Scrapple is a sort of pâté, made from pork "scraps" and cornmeal, a favorite breakfast dish for those accustomed to it.) Joe doesn't serve scrapple in the restaurant because it's a breakfast food. And "Philadelphia Scrapple" turns out not to be a Philadelphia foodstuff at all (Crescenzo just developed a taste for it, he says). The origin of scrapple is rural western Pennsylvania, closer to Pittsburgh. The "Pennsylvania Dutch" (a misinterpretation of the word deutsch) might have brought the recipe from Germany to use all the pig scraps at butchering time — the head, plus various organs and innards you don't want to hear about.

These parts are ground up or emulsified, mixed with cornmeal and other grains, and baked in a loaf (call it Pennsylvania's porky answer to Scottish haggis). Once the loaf has chilled and solidified, it's cut into half-inch-thick slices, fried (in bacon fat), and served with eggs and ketchup or solo with maple syrup. I bought a package to see what it tasted like. Prepared as directed, it was similar to an all-in-one hybrid of toast and country sausage, with black pepper the pronounced seasoning. To my surprise, I found it very palatable, especially with maple syrup. Many people assume scrapple is similar to Spam. It isn't.

The last course for Philadelphians is a Tastykake: packaged pastries based on yellow cake. The restaurant offers varieties — chocolate-frosted cakes are sweet; those with butterscotch icing are less sugary — but whatever your preference, if you ate a whole sandwich, you'd want to take your Kake and eat it later.

Since his brother's death, Joe spends four days once a month in Philly to see surviving family and renew his Philadelphia cuisine inspiration. For the week of June 15, the cafe's anniversary, he plans to bring back Philly soft pretzels, another regional treat, so he can give them away to his customers. ■

Fit for a Pharaoh

"We get students. That's who we're aiming at. We need to stay lighthearted and as cheap as possible."

On my way to State to meet Carla. She's at some meeting near the campus, about Saving the Big Cats. Except I'm here looking at a Big Camel, half a mile away. It's outside a bright orange house with a sign saying something about "Egyptian," "hookah lounge," and "food."

Hmm. Egyptian food...Carla won't be through for a while anyways. I pass a couple of women eating focaccia bread sandwiches on the deck facing the sidewalk. Stop for a while. Join them. It's that kind of a place. Linell and Emily. Linell's chomping into "The Phoenix," a sandwich with a thick wad of turkey slices in it, along with provolone and pesto aioli and greens ($6.25). Emily has the Luxor Lite, half of the Phoenix plus fruit, for $4.25. They say they experiment in eateries every Thursday. Love trying all sorts of different cultures.

Except what they're eating doesn't exactly sound Egyptian. I head inside to see what the deal is. It's all faux-painted yellow, red, and blue with creamy "wood" Formica tables and a fireplace with a fan-blown red-paper "flame" flickering away. Golden tin camels and a sphinx sit on the mantelpiece above. A second room opens out on the left. "Cleopatra's Study." Oh so inviting. Mostly red walls, sofas, Egyptian-style sitting-room chairs, a little library, and a computer you can surf the Net on for $2.00 for 15 minutes, $5.00 for 35 minutes.

And — you can't help noticing — a rest room beyond, painted deep blue and white, with pretend graffiti around the walls: "Tut Was Here." "Kiss My Asp." "East Side Nile Rules!" "The $25,000 Pyramid was (a) A game show hosted by Dick Clark (b) Nefertiti's Dream House."

FORK
ED BEDFORD

I ring the bell at the counter. "Just a minute!" calls a voice. While I'm waiting I notice a sign saying hookahs cost $9.95 for one smoke using standard tobacco, $11.95 with "premium tobacco." But there's a deal on the chalkboard.

"Hookah Happy Hour," it says. "Tuesday to Friday, 3–7, half-price hookahs."

Linda comes out finally. Apologizes. She says she's on her own right now.

"Guess I'd like to have something Egyptian," I say. "Any ideas?"

Linda hands me a menu, which looks, well, like a fairly standard sandwich and salad mix. The Ramses Club sandwich is grilled chicken breast, bacon, cheddar, lettuce, onions, and tomato, $6.25. The Ahi Tuna Burger is a half-pounder with the usual lettuce, tomato, onions ($6.95). Salads like the Caesar ($4.95) or the Blackened Salmon Caesar (including salmon rolled in Cajun seasoning, $7.95) look pretty solidly Western too. Sure, some names are Egyptified: the Aswan Dam omelet ("A dam good omelet," says the menu), with three eggs, gyro meat, onions, tomatoes, feta, and potatoes, $5.95, or Tut's Toast, French toast "fit for a pharaoh," with bacon or sausage and "a medley of berries" for $4.95.

It's only when you get into the appetizers that local flavors start talking. The Mummies are stuffed grape leaves, with rice, spices, and herbs ($2.95). Foul ("fool") madamas is fava beans seasoned "with our secret spices," $3.95; lebni's a dipping yogurt with zatar, a thyme, sumac, and sesame seed combo ($3.95). Then I spot Pharaoh's Pheast, a combination plate of all the appetizers. I go for that, even though it's $7.95.

So glad I did. Linda brings out a big long oval plate loaded with three kinds of hummus (plain, pesto, and, hey, that great Egyptian seasoning, chipotle), a pile of kalamata olives, stuffed grape leaf "mummies," a bowl of lebni, and foul madamas. I almost ask for a Turkish coffee, but it's $3.00. Instead, I ask for a straight $1.25 coffee. Gotta say I love the different hummuses, flavored with orange peel, combined with that zippy herby thyme edge to the lebni yogurt. Even the fava beans taste, well, interesting. Man, if only I had enough money to try the hookah.

The guy who started this comes in. Harry. He's a graduate in English literature and creative writing from SDSU. When he finished his degree he went traveling and got hooked on Egypt. "Actually my girlfriend and I were going to start up a place like this in Ireland," he says, "but we split up, I came back home, and after four years looking found this place."

Harry says he's really thinking "fusion" when it comes to food. The Egyptian idea is really to do with fun. "We get students. That's who we're aiming at. We need to stay lighthearted and as cheap as possible."

And the hookahs? "I brought one back from Egypt, but it was cheap compared to the ones we have here." He brings out a box of hookah tobacco. "This is Mouj Al Bahr from Saudi Arabia," he says.

It looks like opium. Dark, sticky, sweet-smelling. "It's pure tobacco with molasses and white grapefruit pulp," he says. "It has no tars, and half of 1 percent nicotine, and when you smoke it through the hookah waters, that gets even less. I'm not saying it's healthy, but you can't compare it with cigarettes and cigars."

Who knows, maybe I can bring Carla back and we could share a...naah. She's an ex-smoker. Wouldn't be fair. But, dessert? A baklava ($2.00) or a white-chocolate macadamia nut cookie with a glass of milk for dipping ($2.50)? If anything can get her away from Big Cats, it's cookie dipping. ■

Epic Life

“I had wines from California, Oregon, Washington, Ohio, New York — I even had a wine from Hawaii.”

By the time the Trefethen family established its eponymous Napa Valley winery in 1968, the property was already venerable. It started as part of 1850s pioneer Joseph Osborne’s 1100-acre Oak Knoll Ranch. In 1886, it became the site of the Eschol winery, 11 years after brothers George and James Goodman had begun planting vineyards on the surrounding 200 acres. The facility became home to a bulk winery and was later leased by Beringer for nearly 30 years prior to the Trefethens’ arrival.

Now, the Trefethens are part of Napa’s old guard, pioneers in the region’s Great Reawakening of the ’60s and ’70s. Says wine writer Robert Lawrence Balzer, recent recipient of the Wine Appreciation Guild’s Wine Literary Award, “I was responsible for most of that. After I received that Wine Appreciation Guild award, Janet and John Trefethen sent me a magnum of their reserve Cabernet Sauvignon with a little note, saying, ‘It’s about time. You’re the one who gave us all our first spotlights.’”

And as spotlights go, Balzer’s was a bright one. For 32 years, starting in 1964, Balzer wrote a wine column for the Los Angeles Times Magazine. “In the 1960s and ’70s,” writes Tim Fish in Wine Spectator, “Balzer was arguably the most powerful wine writer in America.” Wineries went to him first with their efforts, and winning a Balzer tasting was something worth mentioning.

By the time he took the Times job, Balzer had already been in the business for more than 25 years. Balzer is perhaps the first person I have ever met who went into the wine business because he needed the money. “I wanted to go into the theater or motion picture business,” he explains. “After graduating from Stanford, I went to the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts in London.”

He was enticed stateside by the possibility of a job with Warner Brothers; his father, who owned “the number one food and wine emporium west of New York, Balzer’s on Larchmont in Beverly Hills,” had managed a connection through one of his customers. Balzer started out as a messenger boy, making $17 a week. When he decided he wanted to get married to a fellow academy student, he asked his father, “‘How much would you pay me if I went to work for you?’ Which was, of course, what he had wanted to hear all his life. He told me, and I gulped and said, ‘If you will pay my way back to London, with a honeymoon in Paris and a new Cadillac upon our return, I will accept your offer.’” In 1936, at the age of 24, he took over Balzer’s wine department. He began reading Andre Simon, who became his guide. A year later, he was writing about food and wine for the store newsletter and for the Beverly Hills Citizen.

As a buyer, he got to know all the early luminaries, including Inglenook’s John Daniel and Beaulieu’s Andre Tchelistcheff. Alfred Knopf, a Balzer’s customer, suggested he write a book about California’s best wines. Balzer did, but not before Knopf had resigned from his publishing house. “Whoever took it over wrote of the manuscript, ‘I find this an egregious example of patriotism.’ It was the first time I had ever heard the word ‘egregious.’ I had to look it up in the dictionary.” But Ward Ritchie agreed to publish the book, and Balzer was on his way. “Then the editor of Town & Country asked me to do a story. It was called ‘California Wines Come of Age,’ and it brought California wines to a very sophisticated, upper-class, high-income-level clientele.”

Around the same time, another Balzer’s customer, screenwriter Stanley Roberts, called Balzer for advice. “Ronald Reagan was pursuing Piper Laurie in a film called Louisa, and they were hosted for dinner by Edmund Glenn, an elderly gourmet.” Roberts wanted to know what Glenn could do to demonstrate his epicurean bent. Here’s what Balzer came up with: “Glenn was making a salad at the dinner table, and in the middle there was a beautiful bowl of flowers. He took the cruet of olive oil, and as he poured it over the greens he said, ‘Be a spendthrift with the oil.’ Then he picked up the cruet of vinegar and said, ‘Be a miser with the vinegar.’ Then the salt: ‘Be a wise man with the salt.’ And then he said, ‘Be a madcap to mix it,’ and reached into the centerpiece and took out some marigold flower petals and scattered the orange petals over the greens. It was a color picture, so it was beautiful.”

During filming, Balzer mentioned to Reagan that his great-grandfather had catered Lincoln’s inauguration in 1865. Reagan, who referred to Balzer as “the Andre Simon of California,” remembered the story. “When he became President in ’81, he asked me to do his inaugural. I created something called ‘Taste of America.’ When I was working at Balzer’s, I was also wine and food editor at Holiday magazine, which became Travel Holiday.” Drawing upon that experience, “I chose a number of restaurants and wineries from all over the country for an invitational affair at the newly redone Union Station in Washington, D.C. I

Please call restaurants in advance for reservations.*

NORTH COASTAL

Calypso Cafe 576 North Coast Highway 101, Leucadia, 760-632-8252. This "Calypso" has nothing to do with Caribbean music (or food), despite its tropical tiki-hut decor. The cuisine is French, ranging from old warhorses like onion soup and coq au vin to newfangled Gallo-Cal-Italian-Pacific Rim hyphenates such as ahi pissaladière (seared tuna pizza). The traditional dishes are generally the most successful. Mussels are the house specialty, and their rapid turnover here ensures freshness. Although there's nothing revolutionary coming from this kitchen, the cooking is generally agreeable. Dinner nightly, reservations advised. Upper moderate. — N.W. (9/01)

I Trulli Trattoria 830 South Coast Highway 101 (between G and H streets), Encinitas, 760-943-6800. An enduring hit in Encinitas (where there's no shortage of Italian restaurants), I Trulli serves modern Italian food with fashionable new ingredients. The menu, subtitled "Nouvelle Italian Cuisine," resembles the somewhat ambitious, generically "northern Italian" bills of fare that you encounter all over Hillcrest and the Gaslamp. (It is, in fact, a sister restaurant to Hillcrest's Arriverderci.) The signifiers of seriousness are the pink peppercorns, goat cheese, sun-dried tomatoes, and light cream sauces that coexist with the more traditional mozzarella-tomato sauce arrays. Best bets are the daily specials, which offer the greatest chance for fresh ingredients and creativity. Busy, cramped, painfully loud inside. Street patio next to highway is also noisy. Reserve for dinner on weekends or expect an hour's wait. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (11/01)

Knockout Pizza 2959 Carlsbad Boulevard, Carlsbad, 760-434-4468. It's New York pizza only here. "People back East are more traditional," says owner James, the ex-boxer, an old sparring buddy of the Bronx Pizza guys in Hillcrest. "We don't do California thick crust, we don't do pineapple, we don't do chicken. We don't do 'personal size,' either. But we do slices." They make the pies with traditional thin, crisp crusts and toppings like pepperoni, meatball, garlic, and "whitestone" (mozzarella, Parmesan, ricotta, garlic, and spinach). Maybe their best is the "Bronx Special," an assortment of pepperoni, sausage, onions, olives, mushrooms, pepper and garlic, said to fell New Yorkers quicker'n one of James's right uppercuts. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Calendar RESTAURANTS

Paul's Place 3671 Mission Avenue (at El Camino Real), Oceanside, 760-721-0124. This restaurant looks like a McDonald's or Wendy's (the building used to be a franchise) and the food comes fast, but it's no chain. The menu strikes a balance between American and Greek fare. The baked Greek half-chicken, the spiced grilled chicken sliced up on a salad with pita bread, and the gyros (all at earthy prices) mix with all-American three-egg breakfast specials with home fries. Lunch offers include meaty hamburgers, gyros with fries, or a surprisingly tasty turkeyburger. Open seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/01)

Teriyaki 101 250 North Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-632-8813. This surfer hangout has a secret: Behind a gate just south of the restaurant there's a sheltered outdoor dining patio decorated by a tropical mural of island life above and below the water. "Eat Healthy, Feel Good" is the motto on the menu, and teriyaki is the dish that dominates it. But this is Hawaiian teriyaki, with lighter, cleaner flavors than the Japanese version. The dark-meat "Maui chicken" skewer and the moist ono (pink snapper) kebab are especially succulent; you can also opt for pork, veggies, numerous combos, and charbroiled burgers (of beef, fowl, or veggies). Everything comes with rice (white or brown), pleasingly touched with teriyaki sauce. Open Tuesday through Saturday, lunch to early dinner. Inexpensive. — N.W. (10/01)

Tip Top Meats 6118 Paseo Del Norte, Carlsbad, 760-438-2620. This geranium-splashed blue-and-white Bavarian chalet is more than a butcher's shop. It's a combination butcher-deli-diner. Enter through the bulging deli and listen for the shouts and clatter of serving ladies. Look for the "Es ist Wunderbar!" sign over the counter. Try German and American dishes like Big John's all-you-can-eat bacon, pork-link sausage, bratwurst, or ham breakfast with three eggs, home fries, and toast. Or the sausage plate: bratwurst, knackwurst, and smoked Polish with German potato salad and traditional stuffed cabbage.

Owner Big John is a heavyweight Olympic boxer from the former East Germany with an MA in meat sciences. Generous portions abound. Weekends after 4 p.m., he roasts his famous prime rib dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Viglucchi's 505 South Coast Highway 101 (at D Street), Encinitas, 760-942-7332. In the Land of 10,000 Trattorias, this is one of the most popular — and for good reason. The restaurant's motto, "a little piece of Italy," is actually accurate. Freshness, simplicity, and savvy seasoning — that's Italian. The pastas are luscious (try the comforting cannelloni with an unusual stewed meat stuffing) and the flavorful entrées come with honest fresh vegetables. The staff is bouncy and jokey, the wines are mainly affordable, and spirits run high. Of course it's crowded, so reserve to avoid a long, hungry wait. Other locations include Viglucchi Cucina in Carlsbad, Viglucchi's Pizzeria in Leucadia, and Viglucchi's Seafood and Steakhouse in Carlsbad. — N.W. (10/01)

The Village Grill 2833 State Street (at Carlsbad Village Drive), Carlsbad, 760-729-3601. This little café is famous for two things: its vintage Coca-Cola decorations and its delicious Tommyburgers, named after the guy who opened this place back in 1976. Tommy believed in fresh ingredients, says son Dale, now in charge, who orders only "extra lean" meat from the local butcher for his burgers. For breakfast, check out the eggs and sausage-patty special with fried-skin potatoes and hot-buttered toast. And if you surf, bring your board — the beach is just across the tracks. Breakfast and lunch Monday through Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

NORTH INLAND

150 Grand Cafe 150 West Grand Avenue (between Broadway and Maple), Escondido, 760-738-6868. Chef Carlton Greenawalt cooks up a seasonal American-Mediterranean menu with a few touches of Asian-fusion, using local and organic produce wherever possible. Among the pick hits: a clever almond-crusted manchego cheese appetizer, a definitive trout amandine, and interesting desserts, including a lovely lemonting crème brûlée. Reservations advisable on weekends. Children's and vegetarian meals available on request. Street parking may be difficult; leave time to hunt. Dining rooms often noisy. Live music (mainly jazz) most Thursdays through Saturdays after dinner hours in Back Room Lounge. Moderate prix fixe dinners weeknights; slightly

Bolsa Vietnamese Restaurant 9225 Mira Mesa Boulevard #118, 858-693-3663. "The name 'Bolsa' isn't Vietnamese," says Kim Trang. "It's Spanish for 'bag.'" She's playing on words here: Trang once owned Pho Bolsa on University Avenue, and every Vietnamese knows pho bo is Vietnam's most popular quick meal, a beef rice noodle soup. At this location, Trang still makes excellent pho bo, but she has 122 other items as well, including fried catfish with ginger fish sauce, healthy (non-fried) Vietnamese spring rolls, or egg rolls with lettuce and mint in which to wrap them (sprinkled with nuoc mam, Vietnamese fish sauce). We're talking family-style cooking. Come once and Trang will remember you and everything you ate — even if it was just pho bo. Inexpensive. — E.B. (2/03)

Golden Egg Omelet House 316 West Mission Avenue (at Escondido Boulevard), Escondido, 760-489-6420. This breakfast-lunch treasure-house is vast but cute, its brick walls and open beams festooned with knickknacks (all for sale). This is the place on Sunday mornings, when three generations bond over great, generous breakfasts. Omelets are perfect — light, thin crêpe-like eggs wrapped around tall mounds of elaborate fillings. Thick waffles can be topped with fresh seasonal fruit. And then there are eggs, hash, crêpes, humongous burgers, and sandwiches. The potato casseroles, with a choice of a dozen fillings, are as huge in flavor as they are in size. Whatever you choose will carry you through until dinner. No reservations, so expect a wait on weekends. In back of a mall. Easiest entry from Mission is at SDGE driveway; do not pass McDonald's. Good handicap access, sturdy high-chairs, low-salt cooking. Open daily, breakfast and lunch. Inexpensive. — N.W. (9/03)

Madras Cafe 9484 Black Mountain Road, Mira Mesa, 858-695-6229. In the same strip mall as Ashoka the Great, this family-friendly café features the savory vegetarian cuisine of South India. It's distinctly different from the standard North Indian menus, centering on numerous varieties of stuffed pancakes — from thin, crisp (and irresistible) crêpe-like dosais stuffed with vegetable curry to lacy rice-flour aapams drenched in coconut milk to hefty, frittata-like uttapams. (Try the latter with the delicious, not-too-spicy chile-onion stuffing.) Puffy poori bread and tamarind rice are spectacular. Order your dishes in the sequence you hope to eat them — that's usually how they come out of the kitchen. And don't expect hovering

"Raj"-style service — it's just not the Tamil way. Seasoning is generally mild, to accommodate kiddies; spicy sauces are on the table. No alcohol. Open Tuesday through Sunday with buffet lunches and à la carte dinners. Inexpensive. — N.W. (1/03)

Meiki Japanese Restaurant And Sushi Bar 9823 Carroll Canyon Road, Eucalyptus Square, Scripps Ranch, 858-566-0206. You'll find a first-rate sushi bar tucked away in this tiny shopping center. The fresh yellowtail, scallops in spicy sauce (hotategai), or the special order of baked salmon roll are all wonderful. Fifty-three items appear on the sushi list, all prepared by a master chef. The cooked combination plates are also fine. If you sit at the sushi bar, you may be disappointed because chairs, not stools, are used and you can't watch the chef. If you're in the area, don't miss this one. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner; Sunday, dinner only. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Onami Japanese Restaurant 240 East Via Rancho Parkway, North County Faire, Escondido, 760-738-7522. 160-foot Japanese seafood buffet, hot Japanese dishes, salads, desserts, all you can eat. Tons of fresh food. Seats 250. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Expensive. — E.W.

GOLD COAST

Epazote Southwest Restaurant 1555 Camino Del Mar, Del Mar Plaza, Del Mar, 858-259-9966. Patrons frequently call this establishment the New York Stock Exchange because of its high energy, young crowd, and exciting atmosphere. Good dishes include southwestern-style tapas and spit-roasted items. Sunday brunch à la carte. This place is always crowded. Open daily. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

Nobu Japanese Restaurant 315 South Coast Highway 101, Solana Beach, 858-755-7787. The menu at this gourmet Japanese restaurant offers 100 sushi items, 20 stunning and unique appetizers, and a long list of entrées. Two dining rooms are available; the livelier is at the sushi bar. Especially on the weekends, arrive early to avoid waiting for a table. Reservations advised for dining room, not accepted for sushi bar. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

Tony's Jacal 621 Valley Avenue (between Genevieve Street and Juanita Street), Eden Gardens, Solana Beach, 858-755-2274. Come here at night, when the mysterious low mud-brick arches with the stained glass windows make you think Old Mexico, when the Del Mar racing bar makes you think 1930s Hollywood, and the dining patio, under the 100-year-old chinaberry tree, looks straight out of Guadalajara. Back in 1946, Tony Gonzales's wife Catalina started preparing food for fellow Mexican workers. Since then, everybody from Liz Taylor to J. Edgar Hoover has passed through these portals. Try the "La Colonia" combination of just about anything with rice and beans. Turkey meat is big here, and the (real) crab quesadilla in a corn tortilla is delicious too. Cheapest: probably chicken strips with French fries. And "Jacal"? It means "shack." Open seven days, but with a gap between lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

LA JOLLA

The Cheese Shop 2165 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla, 858-459-3921. Used to be the Cheese Shop had 100 varieties of cheese from all over. No more. "The cheese trade is dead," says owner Phil Schutz. They still have all-cheese sandwiches with mixes of provolone, Monterey Jack, Cheddar, Swiss, Muenster, Danish Havarti, or Norwegian Jarlsberg. But today this small, busy café is more famous for its "overstuffed" meat sandwiches. The leg of lamb, top round beef, and roast pork loin are all spit-roasted right beside you as you walk in, to waken your taste buds. Cheeses like crumbled Greek Mizithra add tang to the taste. If you're into salami and ham, try the foot-long. Free peanuts while you wait. Inexpensive. Other location: 627 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-232-2303, open daily breakfast to late lunch, with delivery to downtown addresses. — E.B. (10/01)

French Pastry Shop 5550 La Jolla Boulevard (at Forward Street), La Jolla, 858-454-9094. A longstanding fixture of the Bird Rock area, this bakery/restaurant includes both a simple, spacious dining room and a shaded patio (reputedly San Diego's first dining patio). Breakfast — a highlight of the menu — is served until 4 p.m. The whisper-thin crêpes with luscious stuffings speak in a Gallic accent. Other possibilities include omelets, eggs Benedict variations, and fine-quality brioches and croissants. Pastries are moist, fairly light, and very sweet. Dinner entrées focus on updated French classics, e.g., duck breast à l'orange, with "early bird" bargains. Open daily for breakfast through early dinner. — N.W. (5/02)

George's At The Cove 1250 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-4244. The always-excellent George's, with its first-rate fish and meat menu, boasts three dining levels on its ocean-view site. The first level is the fine dining room, with full menu and gourmet lunch and dinners. Above is the Café, and on top is the Terrace, which is romantic on balmy nights. The Café and Terrace offer identical menus: light meals for lunch, extensive menu for dinner. The Ocean View Room offers high-quality California regional cuisine, with higher prices. Food is well prepared and their famous roasted chicken, bean, and broccoli soup is still on the menu. Incomparable service. Call for exact hours. Expensive, George's gourmet room; moderate to expensive, other rooms. — E.W. (9/99)

Harry's Coffee Shop 7545 Girard Avenue (at Pearl), La Jolla, 858-454-7381. When Harry Rudolph II opened Harry's back in 1960, his idea was simple: to create a down-home eatery and soda fountain where all La Jolla — rich, poor, Brahmins, and gardeners) — could mix and meet with plenty of good eats. Everyone from Joan Kroc to Junior Seau to Brooke Shields has been spotted here, along with regular folks who've been coming in for three decades. Now Harry III reigns quietly among a dozen whirling dervish waitresses at lunch, while his dad still works the breakfast shift. The big hamsteak and eggs is a favorite breakfast, as is the simple, rich "Hot Creamy Oatmeal" with strawberries. Pecan pancakes and thin, crisp waffles ring true to many Easterners (though Harry offers thick Belgian-style waffles, too), and for lunch, turkey burgers and the bacon-loaded British Burger are popular. At the counter, the banter between been-here-forever waitresses and customers sounds like family life. Nice sidewalk patio, too. Long lines on weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (2/03)

India Palace 7514 Girard Avenue (at Pearl, across parking lot from Vons), Suite 10, La Jolla, 858-551-5133. Also, 694 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-294-8886. In one of the best (and prettiest) Indian restaurants in the area, the refined cuisine of the north is served in a curvacious, serene room with a domed ceiling. Most dishes are gently spicy, but you can specify your preferred hotness. Stunningly tender tandoori sea bass (and a rich, slightly sweet stew made from it, fish masala) is a house specialty. Vegetable entrées are also outstanding, particularly the sprightly navrattan korma, mixed veggies in a luscious nutty, creamy yogurt sauce. Other fine choices include tandoori lamb dishes, stir-fried prawns karahi, lamb pasanda, and eleven house-made Indian breads. Fried appetizers, however, tend to be greasy, and chicken in all preparations is overcooked dry breast meat. For dessert, don't miss the fresh, fruity house-made mango kulfi (Indian ice milk). Service is competent and cordial. Reserve for weekends. Open daily. Bargain-price buffet lunch (à la carte also available). Dinners inexpensive to low moderate, with a price-leap for tandoori meats. — N.W. (6/01)

The Pannikin Cafe 7467 Girard Avenue (at Pearl), La Jolla, 858-454-5453. Oh sure, the inside of this converted bungalow is cool, with its woody-green tables of different heights and cool damsels with animal temp-tattoos on their arms serving you. But here at Pannikin's La Jolla outpost, the outside's the "in" spot, with its brick and earth tones and weathered timber and sixties rain-bow tables. But you have to make it through the laptop-clacking, cell phone-blabbing crowd who use this as their garden office and Very Important Meeting spot. Musicians, grad students, and school kids also show up to munch twigs and nuts and think serious thoughts. Breakfasts are mostly steamed-egg variations, including the popular Greek eggs and a filling breakfast burrito. For lunch, a mild chicken curry is a nutty treat, and "pannwiches" such as ham or tuna are fresh, generous, and worthy, though the retros among us will be looking for a salt lick all the way home. Inexpensive. — E.B. (2/03)

Sushi On The Rock 7734 Girard Avenue, La Jolla, 858-456-1138. This noisy, high-energy spot — a boxy, saloon-like space with a sushi bar in back — draws a lively twenty-something crowd (although older folks will have plenty of company, too). Unlike more traditional sushi bars, there's a vast selection of "rock and rolls" — huge, creative futomaki party sushi. And they're fabulous, with sparkling fresh seafood and immensely clever combinations. Try, for instance, the shrimp tempura roll, which wraps fried shrimp, crab shreds, daikon sprouts and Japanese mayo in deep-fried salmon skin — the combo would be just as impressive as an appetizer at a top Cal-French restaurant. The Orange Crush is another sublime invention, fresh and crunchy with veggies and tobiko wrapped in suave salmon. Even simple rolls are so well-conceived, and the rice so nicely seasoned, you won't need soy-wasabi dip. The one-time menu of cooked dinner entrées, however, is now minimal. No reservations, long waits (in cramped entryway) on weekends. Full bar, good sake list. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly, with deep discounts for Happy Hour specials. Moderate. — N.W. (6/01)

MISSION VALLEY & THE MESAS

Adam's Steak N' Eggs 1201 Hotel Circle South, Mission Valley, 619-291-1103. Morning munchers take heart! Adam's has served nothing but breakfasts since 1966. The menu runs from healthy — hot oatmeal with raisins, dates, sunflower seeds, almonds, pineapple and coconut — to corn fritters to a Southern brunch of spicy sausage patties, biscuits, gravy, grits, and eggs, to spiced apple crepes with whipped cream and pecans. But the signature dish is steak and eggs. The steak's a high-walled chunk of meat almost as thick as it is round. Comes with two eggs, potatoes or grits, and toast or tortillas. You won't need lunch. This brick, dark wood, clubby, business-convention-tourist kind of place has ver-ry faithful customers. But if you want to walk there, be ready for lack of sidewalks, one-way bus access, and wild morning traffic. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Aladdin's Cafe 5420 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard, Clairemont, 858-573-0000; Uptown Shopping Center, 1220 Cleveland Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-574-1111. These cafés offer a bright, clean atmosphere for bright and clean, if rather generic, Middle Eastern favorites (hummus, tabbouleh, kebabs, shawerma, etc.), plus imaginative Levantine-flavored pizzas and salads. There are ample choices for vegetarians. The Hillcrest location offers beer and wine. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (11/00)

Dumpling Inn 4619 Convoy Street #F, Kearny Mesa, 858-268-9638. Hole-in-the-wall? Yes. But what a hole-in-the-wall. For those who love the Far East and its food, finding the Dumpling Inn is a little revelation. It's located in the busy Jasmine/Korean Market Center among Oriental herbalists, man-size-vase shops, even feng shui experts. The Inn itself is tiny but charming. Long hanging lanterns, decorative strings of scarlet and gold firecrackers, Chinese flutes, and even the odd conical straw hat. The food is serious but not expensive. Dishes like ten fish and green chive dumplings, spicy stir-fried three-ingredient lo mein (thick noodles, jumbo shrimp, calamari, and chicken plus hot red peppers) are challenging and exciting, as is the Dumpling Dinner (including hot-and-sour soup, cold cuts, shredded pork, bun, pot-stickers, shrimp and pork dumplings). Don't miss their divine jellyfish salad — crunchy-tender, bright and spicy (but not too) — you'd be hard-pressed to find its like outside of Hong Kong. Lunch and early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Calendar RESTAURANTS

Clairemont Mesa Boulevard (at Complex), Clairemont, 858-922-6444 or 619-889-0759. People stop here for an early stand-up breakfast on their way to the Superior Court next door. The truck only stops here for half an hour. But the aunt and nephew who run it, originally from Vietnam, are super-friendly, and their coffees and breakfast treats are the cheapest anywhere. Like the bacon, egg, and cheese sandwich, or two sausages, three eggs and Tater Tots, or the interesting chicken curly burritos. Even Chinese dishes: BBQ-duck rice bowl or stir-fried beef rice. But the joy is eating alongside clerks, judges, and the guys they'll be judging. 7 a.m. to 7:30 a.m., Monday through Friday. — E.B. (1/04)

New Shanghai 4681 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-569-4833. New Shanghai is busy, friendly, and draws a mostly Chinese clientele because their Chinese food isn't "Americanized." Whatever your gastronomic politics, try the generous plateful of dry braised shrimp, the "de-fatted pork shoulder," the hot tripe, and the ingenious red bean pancake dessert. Inexpensive to moderate. — M.N. (4/99)

Rosie and Joe's Grill & Cantina 7986 Armour Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-277-5777. Joe Polizzi and his wife Rosalie started this place in 1959. Now his son Paul and wife Lynn run it as a New Mexico-style eatery-sports bar-patio café with karaoke and mini-golf. Popular dishes include the "Beerubin" sandwich (corn beef on rye with sauerkraut, Gouda cheese), the Sweet Sicilian sandwich (grilled Italian sausage, sautéed onions, bell peppers, provolone), and the California Chili Burger (with roasted chilis, onions, Gouda cheese). Also good: the Pescado Vera Cruz (pan-grilled fish with caramelized onions). Yes, it's out in the industrial wilds of Kearny Mesa, but it has a Cheers feel to it. Open for lunch, dinner, seven days. Inexpensive; diners moderate. — E.B. (1/04)

THE BEACHES

Chateau Orleans 926 Turquoise Street (at Mission Boulevard), Pacific Beach, 858-488-6744. Just like eating in the French Quarter — at one of Bourbon Street's best tourist traps, complete with live music and party atmosphere. The lovely multiroom premises have a real Crescent City "let the bon temps rouler" feel to it, but the simpler Southern dishes — honest crabcakes, fried catfish — seem better bets than the kitchen's attempts at more demanding Acadian fare. Reservations strongly advised. A little dressy on weekends. Full bar. Wheelchair users may need help with wheel room doors. Dinner Monday through Saturday. High moderate. — N.W. (2/02)

China Inn 877 Hornblend Street (between Garnet and Grand), Pacific Beach, 858-483-6680. The enormous menu here offers Mandarin and Szechuan specialties including especially good sweet-and-pungent shrimp, Mandarin pork rib, duck in orange sauce, and shrimp in garlic sauce. The setting is simple but the food is outstanding. If chef-owner Andy Kam is present, ask his advice about the day's best dishes. Open daily, continuous service, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

Fairouz Cafe And Gallery 3166 Midway Drive, Loma Portal, 619-225-0308. Seek out this family-owned-and-operated restaurant for wonderful Lebanese and Greek food. The owner, a noted artist, displays his paintings on the dining room walls. The extensive menu offers excellent lamb, stuffed grape leaves, and a wide selection of exotic vegetarian meals. Copious all-you-can-eat buffet available at lunch or dinner in addition to the regular menu. Given 24 hours, this café will prepare an astonishing Lebanese feast at low cost. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate. — E.W.

Karinya Thai & Vegetarian Cuisine 825 Garnet Avenue (SeaCoast Square), Pacific Beach, 858-270-5050. Think of the movie The Beach, with a bunch of Leo DiCaprio look-alikes getting off on the coconut curries like gang ped, panang, and kang kari. Or noodle dishes like the famous pad thai. But they're in the right place: Karinya remains true to its Thai origins. The tom yum kung (hot and sour shrimp soup) is a meal in itself. Steaming away with its fierce little charcoal fire at your table, the hot pot holds plenty of shrimp, and you can taste the essential mushrooms, lemon grass, ginger, lime juice, cilantro, and of course nam pla, Thai fish sauce. A nice counterpart to the hots of the soup are the Fresh Spring Rolls, filled with tofu and vegetables and mint. Another sizzler: pad talay, a sauté pan full of mussels, shrimp, squid, and other seafood in a great spicy sauce. The recipe's from Koh Samed, an island like the one featured in The Beach. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (2/03)

Ranchos Cocina 1830 Sunset Cliffs Boulevard, Ocean Beach, 619-226-7619; 4705 Point Loma Avenue, Ocean Beach, 619-224-9815. Also at 3910 30th Street (at University Avenue), North Park, 619-574-1288. At all locations of this delightful mini-chain, you'll find healthy, creative Mexican and vegetarian cuisine in cheerful, tropical-style settings burgeoning with plant life and craft objects. A big plus: zero attitude. You don't have to be vegi-virtuous to enjoy full-flavored combinations that are as creative as they are wholesome. Try anything with lobster or calamari steak — in fact, all the seafood here is pristine. Try, even, an antojito stuffed with beef — it's stewed, not ground. And sample something with the house-made mole sauce of a zillion ingredients. Actually, try — anything. (Well, the chicken breast is as dry here as everywhere else. Try anything else.) Open daily breakfast through dinner. No reservations, but call ahead for large parties. Inexpensive. — N.W. (6/01)

Rum Jungle Smoothies and Deli 4150 Mission Boulevard #153, Promenade Mall, Pacific Beach, 858-273-2227. Why do Brazilians have more fun? Açaí (ah-saa-ee). Why do Brazilians settle in PB? Maybe it's because Rum Jungle Smoothies serves up açaí, the flesh of a Brazilian palm nut, for breakfast. The dark purple mush comes from the açaí palms that grow around the Amazon River delta. Rum Jungle adds granola, banana, strawberries, blueberries, mango pieces, and honey to make a surprisingly filling breakfast. Of course this bright little place has lots of other smoothies, too, along with garden burgers and sandwiches. But the açaí power fruit bowl is what keeps them coming back. Open 9 a.m. to 7 p.m., seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/04)

Sportsmen's Seafoods 1617 Quivira Road, Mission Beach,

619-224-3551. Fifty years ago this restaurant-fish market was a tuna cannery, part of San Diego's late-lamented fishing industry. The same Sicilian family still owns it, and still knows everything about fish and how to cook it. The menu is devoted to the "fruits of the sea" and includes a wonderful seafood platter (shrimp, squid, clams, fish, fries, and salad). And, of course, a crispy-crunchy fish-and-chips platter. Eat outside on deck, contemplating the small ships on the bay. They buy seasonal catch from local fishboats and also sell it at their attached retail market. They're famous for smoking fish for the fishermen. Open daily, lunch/early dinner. Retail market closed Mondays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Big Kitchen 3003 Grape Street (between 30th Street and Fern Street), South Park, 619-234-5789. This isn't just a restaurant, it's the social center of the universe — and Judy "The Beauty" Forman is its queen. Blame her for the Fern Street Circus, for driving the Miss California beauty pageant out of town, and for disgustingly healthy dishes like Judy's Favorite (spinach, mushrooms, sherry, and eggs). Our favorite: the avocado, cream cheese, and chives omelet. Vegans' fave may be the "veggie option": sautéed spinach, mushrooms, onions, cilantro, brown rice, tofu, and roasted garlic. Her cooks make pretty much everything on the spot, including muffins, waffles, and pancakes. While you're waiting, they always have this "out there" eclectic crowd, plus walls filled with pictures and bon mots like "Will Be President For Food." Breakfast and lunch only; closes at 2 p.m. most days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

El Comal 2822 Imperial Avenue, Sherman Heights, 619-239-7101. No border compromises here — just great home-cooking from Michoacan, Guerrero, Jalisco, and Oaxaca, prepared by Luz Herrera Ibarra, a biology teacher from Acapulco. Try the huarache (cactus slices with carne asada, frijoles, cheese, and onions) or the mulita carne adobada (pork, melted cheese, and guacamole inside two tortillas) and have a glass of muez (a refreshing walnut drink). Breakfast through early dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Jyoti-Bihanga 3351 Adams Avenue, Normal Heights, 619-282-4116. Oh sure, you'll be watching Sri Chinmoy, the Bengali guru, on TV juggling, declaring Geneva International Airport a "Peace Blossom," or boarding his Italian "Treno della Pace." Plus, his books, his portraits, his paintings, and his chant-songs surround you. Apart from that, not only is this heavenly blue-domed restaurant run by his students peaceful, but the fresher-than-fresh Bengali-tinged health food is delicious. Their chutney-topped "Neat-loaf" bursts with nutty, intriguing flavors. Even the accompanying mashed potato and gravy tastes different. Also delish: Brahma Burrito, "Infinite Blue" (interesting brown rice salad with bleu cheese dressing), and the Shiva Wrap (tofu and fresh veggies with a well-integrated curry flavor). On cold days, start with a steaming sweet pea soup. Monday through Saturday lunch and dinner, Sunday brunch only. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Mama's Bakery And Lebanese Deli 4237 Alabama Street, North Park, 619-688-0717. This informal little restaurant is more interested in quality than presentation, concentrating on the specialties they do well. Mama's offers quick meals with a culinary tradition, definitely not "fast food," but with fast food prices and ease. Recommendations include the deliciously cheap falafel sandwich in Mama's fresh-made sajj, (soft flatbread). On cool days warm up to a bowl of fool mudamas, or slow-cooked beans (tasty fava and garbanzos). Try also spinach pie, labneh (creamy cheese, olive oil, and pita), and baba ghanoush (smoky pureed eggplant and hummus). Inexpensive. — M.N. (1/99)

EAST COUNTY & STATE COLLEGE

Antonio's Hacienda 700 North Johnson Avenue, El Cajon, 619-442-9827. If the décor hasn't been updated from its original 1960s-fabulous Old California Spanish, it's because there's been no need. The enormous dark-wood chandeliers, the padded-leather wooden chairs, the chainsaw-weathered wood beams — all top-shelf and aging well. Families abound, reveling in the guitar trio and the exposed kitchen station — such atmosphere! And the flavors are user-friendly, sweetness muting the spice in the salsa and the Ranchero sauce. The Camarones Tequila is a little more exciting; the sweetness of its bacon-wrapped shrimp gets a fine counter from the bitter liquor in the marinade. Excellent Enchiladas Suizas: pale, mush-tender shredded chicken wrapped in tortillas and doused with good, tangy green sauce. Lunch and dinner daily. Champagne brunch on Sundays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; all-day buffet Sunday through Thursday. Inexpensive to low moderate. — A.M. (4/03)

Cafe Zia 6686 El Cajon Boulevard (at Montezuma), College Area, 619-337-3937. South Asia meets Mexico! Khaled Zia had the brilliant idea of combining tacos (or wraps or bagels) with chicken and South Asia's great gift to the world: chutney — mango chutney, papaya chutney, peach, apple, even a serrano chili pepper chutney. The combo works with them all. As soon as you smell the chicken strips hissing away on the grills, you're hooked. Then when they come smothered in peach or mango chutney, or cooling yogurt, along with sweet-sauced potatoes, what can you do? Do as half of San Diego State does: just say yes. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/01)

Downtown Cafe 182 East Main Street, El Cajon, 619-440-5687. Surprise! Not far from Magnolia and Maina French-style sidewalk café. The successful "Por Favor" eateries' owner launched this as a kind of Mexican patio restaurant, but serving gringo food. And it works, maybe because of reasonable prices for baby-back pork ribs, giant burritos, or Louisiana Chicken strips. Or even the veggie burger. But it's partly where you dine: out on the patio. The place has lots of ancient doors and wrought iron-and-wood window frames, laced with creepers. Inside is a beautiful long bar with a counter on the street and chess sets so you can play and watch the world go by. Lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/03)

Jimmy's 9635 Mission Gorge Road (at Town Center Drive), Santee, 619-448-8994. We're at the end of the line here, the trolley's Orange Line. Feels like a safari. You walk back through the grass to the streets of Santee. Thank goodness for this family-friendly restaurant with good, old-fashioned American food. Their six-page plastic menu tells all — forget your diet and dig into the breakfast "Eggs and Cakes" (two eggs, three pancakes), the "Touchdown" (two eggs, two hotcakes, four strips of bacon or three link sausages), or the “Monte Cristo” hot sandwich (ham and turkey grilled on batter-dipped Texas toast with Swiss cheese, hot syrup, and French fries). Later in the day, the New York strip or sirloin steak with all the trimmings, and desserts like homemade cinnamon bread pudding with raisins and whipped cream. Open three meals, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Tyler's Taste Of Texas 576 North Second Street, El Cajon, 619-444-9295. Unfussy home cooking. Some dishes outshine others. The slab of smoky ham steak that comes with the first-rate breakfast is in itself enough to rouse the sleepiest appetite. Expertly sautéed onions and mushrooms lend flavor to fried potatoes and omelets, respectively, while pebbly-smooth hash and gingery sweet potato pancakes give the lineup character. For lunch and dinner, the Texas menu features Texas-style barbecue (chicken, beef, pork, and sausage) that's sufficiently smoky, but a little uneven in texture. BBQ beef is reliable and the sweetish sauce shows well on the chicken. Pleasant surprises: a substantial, peppery cornmeal crust on the tender catfish and the fried green tomatoes, and the rich stock in the vegetable soup. Open 24 hours. Inexpensive to low moderate. — A.M. (2/02)

FAR EAST

Badlands Market/Cafe The Mall, 561 Palm Canyon Drive (south side of the street), Borrego Springs, 760-767-4058. This is an epicure's oasis in the desert, a combination of gourmet deli and serious café where you can find a lively breakfast, scrumptious picnic lunch, or (on weekends) a light, savory dinner from an imaginative, daily changing menu. Great cheeses, pâtés, extra-virgin oils, artisan breads, delicate pastries and full-bodied French Roast coffee are among the delights that make this the Garden of Eatin' in a town where both grocery stores are pretty dire. Open Sunday to Thursday for breakfast to late lunch; Friday and Saturday until 7 p.m. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Pablito's of the Desert 590 Palm Canyon Drive (in The Center, #8), Borrego Springs, 760-767-3311. Pablito's claims “Authentic Mexican Cuisine, patio dining, and great tequila margaritas.” Well, the gorgeous patio is open only during busy times and the cuisine runs to gringo favorites in the Mexican mode (lots of combo platters), but the flavors are honest and pleasing. The most authentic dishes come from the “Specialties” section of the menu, including a good chile verde (pork in green chile sauce), numerous varieties of enchiladas, and several flavors of chilaquiles. Full bar, including sangria, margaritas, Mexican beers. Open daily, lunch and dinner (with break between). Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Ramon's Smokehouse BBQ 1730 Alpine Boulevard, Suite 110, Alpine, 619-445-1008. The smell of mesquite wood burning under fresh-cut beef rib is beyond resistance. The secret Texas recipe draws crowds. Go Sunday morning, especially, when chefs in maroon aprons dance around the fat-spitting fire, disappearing into the clouds of fragrant smoke to flip the racks of beef and pork ribs. In good weather you can eat out back next to an authentic chuck wagon. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

UPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Bertrand at Mister A's 2550 Fifth Avenue (at Laurel), 12th floor, Banker's Hill, 619-239-1377. Bertrand Hug's airy, open renovation of this formerly “ancient regime” eatery offers a fabled panoramic city view with a casual-chic, highly romantic ambience. Chef Stephane Voitzwinkler's modern French cuisine is a fine fit for the setting, including bistro classics and fresh inventions, emphasizing top-grade seasonal ingredients. A huge, intelligent wine list covers a full range of prices, ages and origins, including “ripe” first-growth Bordeaux. Smoking and fair-weather dining on wraparound terrace/observation deck. Note: parking entrance on Fourth Avenue; wheelchair access via ramp to left of reception desk. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Expensive. — N.W. (1/04)

California Cuisine 1027 University Avenue (between 10th and Vermont), Hillcrest, 619-543-0790. This 20-year-old neighborhood favorite underwent an exciting total remake in February, 2003. The hard-edged, mirrored decor's the same, but a new chef, Justin Hoehn

(coming from Laurel), has replaced the lengthy grazing menu with fewer but better-honed choices that the small kitchen can execute without a hitch. And the guy has a flawless palate. Most appetizers are simple but devilishly clever, literally living up to their name, while entrées exhibit fresh, sophisticated combinations of exquisitely balanced, global flavors, with garnishes smartly chosen to complement the primary ingredient. But save room for a sweet: Dessert Chef Laurel Huffnagle produces the bold, thrilling endings that these meals deserve. The restaurant is very noisy when busy. Private garden-patio dining available in good weather. Well-chosen wine list. Lunch Tuesday through Friday; dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (4/03)

Celadon Royalty Thai Restaurant 540 University Avenue (near Sixth Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-297-8424. The chef has cooked for the Siamese royal family, but more importantly, she hasn't made too many compromises in the cuisine on this side of the Pacific. Some dishes taste luxurious, and all the dishes taste authentic—and very carefully prepared. The regular entrées offer a choice of sauces (red curry, green curry, etc.) with your choice of protein, but go straight to the “Chef's Specialty” items on the menu to find the best and rarest dishes. Stuffed chicken wings are extraordinary, seafood soup talay is fabulous, and among the entrées, don't miss choo chee duck or the Queen of Thailand's favorite, Pineapple Fried Rice. — N.W. (5/02)

Jewish food (chicken-in-the-pot, brisket of beef, chopped liver), others to soak in the art-deco colors—the cornucopia of fruit above the entrance, the mustard yellow walls, the black-and-white checker tile, or the flower bunches of red, blue, green, and yellow lamps. And then some come for both: the stuffed cabbage roll (with ground beef and rice inside) is a glowering red ball with maroon, oniony, sweet-and-sour raisin sauce to die for, set off by green parsley and bright orange slices. Scandalously delicious. Downside? Our pastrami sandwich tasted dry and chewy by comparison. But City Deli is less strictly Jewish (they have bacon on their breakfast menu) and more of an everyday New York-style eatery. Wait staff are good-humored, and the Seeburg Wall-o-Matic tableside jukeboxes actually work. Bring plenty of quarters. Breakfast all day; early-bird dinner specials; late-night dining. Open from 7 a.m. till midnight; until 2 a.m. Fridays and Saturdays. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/03)

Cottage Cafe & Garden Grill 2321 Fifth Avenue (at Juniper Street), Banker's Hill, 619-696-0071. The Polish feel of this midtown café is palpable. The owners vacation in Poland yearly to update the family recipes. But you can eat American if you want, with smidgeons of Russian, Italian, and Greek, too. The “Farmer's Breakfast” is a roundup of chopped ham or sausage, onions scrambled with two eggs, home fries, and toast. Or go Polish with a grilled Polish sausage sandwich stuffed with peppers, onions, and sauerkraut on rye. A full range of Polish specialties shows up on the week-end all-you-can-eat buffet, with stuffed cabbage, beef stroganoff, sausages and cabbage, and chicken paprika. Try the Polish beer, “Okocim, 1845,” but be careful—it's 8.1 percent alcohol. Great patio out back. Open daily, breakfast and lunch. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/01)

Gulf Coast Grill 4130 Park Boulevard (between University and El Cajon), Hillcrest, 619-295-2244. The Gulf's faux-rustic, woodsy dining rooms and patio are great hangouts if you like a restaurant with a noisy party atmosphere. The menu focuses on the cuisine of the South and Southwest, with an emphasis on Louisiana and a heavy hand on the salt shaker. The kitchen does best with the straight Southern dishes, turning out divine fried soft-shelled crabs, airy hush puppies, and delicious little corn muffins. If you're deeply familiar with Cajun-Creole flavors, though, don't look for pure authenticity—you'll do better with jambalaya, étouffée, or the lunchtime oyster po' boy than with the soulless gumbo or the misconceived red beans and rice. Heated, smoker-friendly front patio. Wheelchair elevator to rest rooms next to stairs. Free parking lot left of the door. Full bar. Lunch Monday through Saturday, brunch Sunday, dinner nightly (early closing Sunday). Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (4/03)

Ichiban 1449 University Avenue (at Normal), Hillcrest, 619-299-7203. Is this Paris or Tokyo? At night, the café outside glows like a Van Gogh painting, except the customers are eating sushi and drinking green tea, not red wine. The best values are at lunch, with weekday specials like Bento combos (sushi rolls, crab, salmon, rice) and filling soups overflowing with veggies and thick udon noodles. Healthy? You betcha. The miso soup (with every dish) made from soy and seaweed is a great daily iodine fix. Number One — that's what "ichi-ban" means. Open daily until 9 p.m., lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Jack and Giulio's Italian Restaurant 2391 San Diego Avenue, Old Town, 619-294-2074. This long-running, old-fashioned Italian favorite (formerly Giulio's in Pacific Beach) is a low-cost family restaurant with fresh, casual fare. The best bets are angel hair pasta, minestrone soup, and their famous scampi. Outdoor patio is a plus. Open daily, lunch and dinner; continuous service on weekends. Inexpensive to upper moderate. — E.W.

Kemo Sabe 3958 Fifth Avenue (off University Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-220-6802. Audacity is Chef Deborah Scott's culinary signature. In her cooking, Southeast Asia meets the Southwest, with Japanese touches and towering heaps of garnishes. All the edible frou-frou decorating the appetizers can wear you out, but most entrées are more focused and friendly. Good choices include a starter of mussels in a seductive chilpotle cream sauce, and entrées of spicy, sweet-sour layered "jerk" chicken or the signature "Skirts On Fire," a miraculously tender grilled skirt steak imbued with a picante marinade. Desserts by Sharon Bristol follow the housestyle — sky-high, ornate, complex. Casual atmosphere, very noisy. Heated patio. Reservations strongly advised. Prices moderate. — N.W. (11/00)

La Posta de Acapulco's Taco Shop 3980 Third Avenue (at Washington), Hillcrest, 619-295-8982. (Also in Lakeside and Spring Valley.) People have been coming to this orange-and-white drive-through-without-cars for 20 years. One of the main reasons is the carne asada burritos. Rich-tasting, fresh, generous. Folks sit around the outside benches right next to Washington Street, oblivious to the traffic. Also much loved here are the chile verde and the quesadilla with carne asada. For breakfast, think chorizo burrito. And for value, just to fill you up, you can't beat the bean tostada. You can drink horchata, a rice drink, or jamaica, made from hibiscus flower, to complete the picture. Open 24 hours. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/04)

Lotus Thai 3761 Sixth Avenue (at Robinson), Hillcrest, 619-299-8272. Ironically, the best dishes at this idiosyncratic, vegetarian-friendly Thai-Chinese restaurant involve char-grilled beef (e.g., satay, beef salad) featuring a tender cut in a tangy marinade. From the long list of house specialties try the lively pineapple-cashew fried rice, the chile-fierce "Crazy Duck" salad, or the savory (if slightly dry) "three-flavor" whole fried fish accompanied by a garlic-chile-fruit jam. Appetizers, though, are mainly greasy-fried wraps, and too many dishes are oddly bland (even when they're spicy). The flesh components (shrimps, chicken, etc.) all taste like they've been parboiled in plain water and tossed into the pot at the last minute, with nothing left to give to or gain from the sauces — so if you crave soup or curry, you're best off with the elaborate vegetarian versions. Lunch and dinner daily. Low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Mission Hills Cafe 808 W. Washington Street, Mission Hills, 619-296-8010. Belgian waffles are your natural intro here. Why? Because François, the owner, is Belgian. The man knows waffles. But the thing is how cheap this is for a sophisticated eatery, with its linen tablecloths, waiters in long aprons, and bread baskets. (The bread's incredible. It'll fill you before you spend a dime.) Dishes like Thai chicken or shrimp salad over shredded jicama, cucumber, and carrots are usually rich folks' territory. Ditto the "Pear Cambozola" salad, with strawberries, pecans, and a Camembert/Gorgonzola-style cheese, or "François's Famous Vegetarian Lasagna." And check out François's art on the wall — he always cooks one part in his oven, like the baked bread horses stuck on his piece called "Sea Biscuits." Daily, three meals. Inexpensive by day; more expensive at night, but reasonable. — E.B. (9/03)

DOWNTOWN

Bay Cafe 1050 North Harbor Drive, downtown, 619-595-1083. If you're hungry at the city ferry landing, you can eat in the bare-bones interior or take your tray upstairs to a handsome bayview terrace (with no wheelchair access). After a chilly crossing, try the enjoyable New England-style clam chowder, which is milky, clean, and not over-thickened, with tender clams and tiny diced potatoes. The menu features breakfast dishes, burgers, sandwiches, variations on fish and chips including prawns, and chili dogs (all served with generic fries), plus some entrée salads. The burgers are genuinely "have it your way" — for a few extra cents each, the kitchen will add extra ingredients (Jack or Cheddar, mushrooms, grilled onions, bacon, jalapeño). Open daily, 8 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. Inexpensive. — N.W. (8/01)

Chive 558 Fourth Avenue (near Island Street), Gaslamp, 619-232-4483. Eating's an adventure at this coolly minimalist urban bistro where chef A.J. Voytko does his magic with a seasonally changing menu of inventive "modern cuisine." Dishes alternate between high-risk global fusion and stringently simple combinations that place outstanding ingredients (including free-range chicken and veal) at center stage, accompanied by a revelatory repertoire of exotic vegetables. The worldwide wine list offers over 50 choices by the glass. Reserve for weekend dinners, when a chic young crowd pours in. Full bar. No cell phone use inside. Dinner nightly, with weekend service to 11:30 p.m. Expensive. — N.W. (9/02)

DeMedici 815 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-702-7228. This lovely, cream-and-sepia dining room evokes an Italian Renaissance villa, while its sidewalk patio offers a prime pageant of Gaslamp follies. Either way, you'll enjoy exceptional service — attentive but utterly unobtrusive — and a menu centered on succulent pastas and refined seafood dishes. The nightly specials and the waiter's recommendations for the freshest catch will lead you to the evening's best entrées. Fish dishes are exquisite, and anything with calamari (fresh local catch) is worth ordering; Atlantic shellfish, though, tend to be a tad overcooked. Reserve, and dress on the spiffier side — some Hollywood celebs hang their Borsalinos here, upping the clothing curve. Dinner 5 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. weekdays, 5 p.m. to midnight weekends. Moderate-priced valet parking available. Moderate (simpler pastas) to very expensive. — N.W. (8/01)

Dublin Square 554 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-239-5818. The entire pub was hand-crafted in Waterford, shipped over, and installed (by Irish craftsmen) in the Gaslamp. The exterior indeed resembles a real (but very new) Dublin pub; the interior has authentically dim lighting and spirited Irish music including live bands (acoustic but loud) during Happy Hours and some evenings. If you're looking for food, too, there's a shockingly fine corned beef and cabbage, resembling the corned beef of Katz's Deli on the Lower East Side — it's that wee touch o' the garlic that does the trick. Other choices include Guinness beef stew, shepherd's pie (made with ground beef), chicken pot pie, steaks, lamb chops, fish and chips, and grilled fish, plus standard pub grub. Lunch and din-

Kansas City Barbecue 610 West Market Street (at Harbor Drive), downtown, 619-231-9680. Scrumptious smells waft across the tracks at the Seaport Village trolley stop — barbecued pork and beef. And yeah, this is the joint where Tom Cruise and Kelly McGillis did their "sleazy bar scene" in Top Gun. And it is kinda sleazy, especially in the shadowy horseshoe bar, with memorabilia like hanging bras, Czech license plates, and stickers ("Grow Your Own Dope: Plant A Man"). The beef and pork ribs (or rib tips or chicken breast) are worth it. They're cooked over an oak-fueled fire. Nice long Happy Hour (3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m., at bar only) has great food/grub deals. Open daily, lunch until late, serving until 1 a.m. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (3/01)

The Latin Room 560 Fourth Avenue (at Market), Gaslamp, 619-237-7800. This austere, concrete-floored space is mainly a tequila bar, offering at least 120 brands to sample and tasty Mexican cocktails made from scratch. But you can also get a reasonably interesting Mexican meal from a menu that's considerably more ambitious than the neighborhood's regular border-Mex yawns. It offers excellent tortilla soup, decent ceviche, and filet mignon strewn with cuilacoche (a.k.a. "corn mushrooms," a mild and juicy black fungal delicacy), with recipes imported here by a chef who used to cook at Tijuana's revered Cien Años restaurant. A couple can easily make a meal of a few shared appetizers. At 10 p.m. weekends, the place goes disco, with cover charge (IDs checked). Open nightly for dinner, appetizer menu until 2 a.m. on weekends. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (1/04)

Morton's Of Chicago 285 J Street (between Second and Third), Gaslamp, 619-696-3369. This famous Chicago steakhouse is swanky, in a manly way: dark, clubby, luxurious, and louche. You go to Morton's for great steak. Their Nebraska beef is aged and meticulously grilled to your specifications. You can get a one-and-a-half or three-pound porterhouse, which will be juicy, marbled with flavorful fat. You can also get good fish at Morton's. The big, golden salmon fillet flakes to the fork and is moist, sweet, buttery. The pricey à la carte sides are either bad or mediocre. The Godiva Hot Chocolate Cake is exceptional. But go for the steak. Expensive. — M.N. (9/99)

Nagi's Bar and Grill 501 West Broadway, downtown, 619-233-5933. Nagi Sekla comes from Egypt, via Paris. Before he took over the lease at the staid Koll Center's bar-eatery, he insisted on creating a sidewalk patio slap-dab on Broadway. His lease is our gain. For the first time you can eat, drink, and be merry right on this main drag. And there's nothing like scarfing lunch while you watch lawyers, tourists, and office workers hustle by in the morning sun. Lunch or dinner, start off with his homemade soups, but the must-eat is his Spicy Santa Fe Chicken Salad — the magic's in the cranberries and Gorgonzola. Also great: BBQ chicken pizza. Lunch and dinner, Monday through Friday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

Rainwater's on Kettner 1202 Kettner Boulevard (at B Street), Little Italy, 619-233-5757. You could order the fish, the chicken, or even the lamb, but odds are you're here because you want steak, prepared by people who respect your enthusiasm and offer prime beef in multiple cuts. And you're here because Rainwater's is venerable and local. You can dine old-style and enjoy it — warm cornbread fingers, a fine loose-packed crab cake, a crisp, watery wedge of iceberg lettuce under a blue cheese blanket. As for the beef, New York strip takes the day. You actually have to chew it — it ain't filet — but every chomp gives up scads of flavor. Order a side of greaseless, firm-bodied onion rings and wash it down with something from the exhaustive (and expensive) wine list. Lunch Monday through Friday from 11:30 a.m.; dinner daily. Very expensive. — A.M. (6/03)

Spice House Cafe 1401 Ninth Street (at Ash Street), downtown, 619-239-8510. When your "head feels like an old potato" and your "tongue like a button hook" (to quote Kipling), Spice House's answer is their Hangover Omelet. We don't know if it's the Ortega chilies or Jack cheese or super tangy tomato sauce, but some guys swear they feel better for eating it. The place is a pleasant surprise jutting out into the top foliage of trees sprouting up from Hwy. 163 — the view looks like a forest. Other excellent choices include Portuguese sausage with three eggs, paisano frittata with ham, tomatoes, mushrooms, and thick French toast topped with strawberries and whipped cream. Open daily, breakfast and lunch. Original branch at 9035 Clairemont Mesa Boulevard (at Complex Drive, across from courthouse), 858-565-1028, also serves dinner nightly, with emphasis on Greek-American cuisine. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

St. Tropez Bakery and Bistro 926 Broadway Circle (at Second and Broadway), downtown, 619-696-8695. (Also in Encinitas; see North Coastal listings.) Bright is the word. Bright yellow-and-blue murals of St. Tropez's life and bright sidewalk seating outside. A true sidewalk café. Sitting on the sidewalk here is almost as nice as Nice. Plus, you can eat, drink, or just nurse a coffee for hours. No pressure. But then you'd miss the delish croque monsieur (toasted creamy sauce-topped cheese sandwich, French-style) or croque madame (same plus fried egg) or salade niçoise. It's a bakery too, so the morning croissants are to die for. Must-tries: the "Marseille" (ratatouille on roasted bread) and the salmon salad. Breakfast, lunch, dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/03)

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

Crown City Grille 926 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-5822. If you thought Coronado had only fat-cat eateries, think again — the area crawls with burrito joints, pizza joints, rice joints, and burger joints. Yet this new burgery is doing fine. It could be the sheer variety, but mainly it's that they've got the burger basics right. The bun's crisp, the meat's lean and, especially with the bleu cheese model, the taste is to die for. Owners Dave and Jeanne Evans say the pattie's always part sirloin, part New York cut. Also, the jalapeño-bacon cheeseburger is excellent, the Chicago-style hot dog with "sport peppers" is hot and messy, and the Icelandic cod fish and chips is generously portioned and tasty. Plus, beer and wine. Breakfast, lunch, dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/03)

Crown Room Hotel Del Coronado, 1500 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-6611. Let's face it, this is one of the grandest entrances you'll make anywhere, into the enormous, gloomy, vaulted timber dining room where presidents, princes and Marilyn Monroe have chowed down. It's only open for Sunday brunch these days. The gigantic eat-till-you're-beat buffet feast ranges from made-as-you-watch omelets to salmon, crab legs, prime rib, dizzying desserts, and even long-stemmed strawberries you hand-dip in chocolate. The downside? Monroe was here to shoot Some Like It Hot, but (apart from the chocolate) most food ain't. It's either cold (like the croissants, though the chocolate chunk ones are delicious) or luke-warm (like prime rib and eggs Benedict — and those eggs could do with a lot more Benedict). But this is an Edwardian-scale social occasion — see and be seen. The food isn't great, but the atmosphere is grand. Sundays, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Expensive. — E.B. (9/03)

What the Chef Eats

BUTTERNUT SQUASH SOUP

BY DEBORAH SCOTT

Executive Chef, KemoSabe (Hillcrest) and Indigo Grill (Little Italy)

This recipe is vegetarian; it's healthy and exemplifies what we do at Indigo, in that we deal with a lot of root vegetables. It has a rustic appearance to it. There is very little cream. It has a very clean and simple flavor.

Most people can make this one at home without too much difficulty. I like to give something to people that is user-friendly.

It's not critical whether you use light or dark brown sugar. Personally, I like the dark brown sugar. It gives it more of a dark orange look, and I like anything that adds to the rustic appearance of this soup.

Garam masala is an Indian spice mix that can be found at the grocery store and comes ready-to-use in the powder form. This won't achieve quite the same flavor as if you make it starting with the fresh spices. Every time you take shortcuts, there are compromises in flavor, but the garam masala is a usable alternative that will achieve a good taste.

We buy all our spices whole, dry roast them, grind them, and then incorporate them into the soup. I'm including our recipe for garam masala, but it's expensive to purchase all the spices, and it's a lot of work to prepare it yourself. The good thing about it is that you can just make it once in a large quantity, put it in an airtight container, and keep using it. The flavor will be much more intense, much more pungent.

A garnish to serve with the soup can be roasted pepitas. We roast them with a little chile purée, lime juice, and salt. Just mix them in a bowl, lay them out on a sheet pan, and toast them. These are great right out of the oven.

For a beverage I would serve something fairly light but slightly fruity. Maybe a sauvignon blanc. A fumé blanc. A viognier would be nice. The Callaway Viognier from Temecula or Echelon Viognier would be good.

Our servings look like they're Flintstone-size. They're huge. I'd say this recipe will make six generous servings. If you just serve a cup, you could premises semolina pasta, most dishes costing in the single digits. A simple fettuccine Alfredo is a pleasure al fresco with a glass of wine, sparkling against the fresh flowers on the table, watching Coronado's world go by. One good — and vegetarian — special to ask for is the verdure pasta, a combo of artichoke hearts, spinach, capers, mushrooms, onions, and olives over spaghetti. Lunch and dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Lydia's Cafe and Nightclub 1628 Palm Avenue, San Diego, 619-429-3603. This easygoing dancing/eatery has a faithful following that goes back to 1957. But before you dance, eat! Check out the birria en su jugo (goat in its juices) with beans, rice, and tortillas, or enjoy filling snacks like taquitos, cucaracha (a corn tortilla stuffed with ham, cheese, and sour cream), or the snack Lydia says she invented: botanas (beans, pork, and melted cheese over corn chips). Open from early breakfast to early dinner Sunday through Wednesday, until midnight Thursday and Friday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

McP's Irish Pub & Grill 1107 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-5280. With a crowd ranging from Navy retirees to chic singles barely of drinking age, the perpetual party on McP's patio is nurtured by above-average Irish-Mexican-American pub grub (burgers, potato skins, nachos, etc.). The Irish fare includes a pleasing Mulligan stew served in a hollowed bread-loaf, and an absolutely fabulous corned beef and cabbage plate, with tender, thick slices surrounding cabbage so young and sweet it ought to be carded. Good soups, too. Daytimes, try the hearty (and then some) Irish meat-fest breakfast. Open daily, standard pub hours. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Primavera 932 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-435-0454. This standout in Coronado's culinary scene offers courtly charm and an impressive menu. Try their saffron risotto, clams bordelaise, or the delicious ossobuco, of which every detail is accomplished, admirable. For dessert, have one of their excellent espressos and the tiramisu or lemon ricotta cake. Primavera's accomplished staff takes unpretentious pride in their kitchen, the food and wine they serve, and rightfully so. Open daily. Expensive. — M.N. (11/98) serve eight to ten people.

HOW TO DO IT

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. In a large bowl, combine brown sugar, garam masala, and vegetable oil to form a spice mix. Slice butternut squash in half. Peel, seed, then cut squash into 2-inch chunks. Toss onion and squash in with the spice mix. Spread onto a roasting pan, and cook at 350 degrees for 45 minutes, or until soft. Purée with milk, chicken stock, and ginger. Strain the purée into a saucepan and simmer for 15 minutes. Add salt and pepper to taste.

Homemade Garam Masala: Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Place spices in a baking pan or pie pan and toast these in the oven for about 20 minutes. Shake them up a couple of times. You should smell the aroma of them toasting. Don't get them black, but you do want them toasted. Put the toasted spices in a clean coffee grinder and finely grind them. Your coffee may taste like garam masala for a while, but that's not a bad thing.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 tablespoon garam masala
- ½ cup vegetable oil
- 4 pounds butternut squash
- 1 white onion, diced

- 1 cup milk
- 1 cup chicken stock
- 1 teaspoon ground ginger
- Salt and pepper, to taste

Homemade garam masala:

- ¼ cup whole black pepper
- ¼ cup coriander seed
- ¼ cup cumin seed
- ¼ cup canela (Mexican cinnamon)
- 3 teaspoons whole allspice
- 3 teaspoons whole cloves
- 1½ teaspoons whole cardamom seeds (removed from pod)
- 3½ teaspoons fennel seed

BAJA

From the United States use the prefix 011-52-664 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's seven-digit number.

Big Boy Restaurant 9892 Agua Caliente Boulevard (across the street from the old bullring), Tijuana, 686-3788. Besides having excellent Mexican-American food, this Big Boy knock-off draws some of the most interesting people in Tijuana — journalists, lawyers, cattle ranchers, politicians, Baja's heavy hitters. Day or night, Big Boy is always busy. Gringo food's no problem. Breakfast includes eggs, bacon, sausage, chorizo or ham, plus hash browns or frijoles, toast, juice, and endless coffee. Nobody will object if you sit sipping the free refills till the moon comes up. But you won't — you'll crack and order more when you smell the popular, macho "royal" hamburger, with two beef patties, smoked ham, onions, lettuce, tomatoes, fries, and salad. Or the chicken breast marinated in tequila with cilantro, guacamole, and beans. Open 24/7. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Cafe la Especial 718 Avenida Revolución (down the market steps), Tijuana, 685-6654. Café la Especial was once a great favorite of American aficionados of Tijuana's bullfights at the old downtown Plaza de Toros. Summer Sundays, fans would crowd into the café to chow down before the fights or rush back afterwards for a few drinks and a hearty meal. Inside, little has changed, not even the 50-50 locals-to-gringos ratio. Food is standard Mexican/American border fare, from tacos and tamales to carne asada and bistek ranchero, from cactus and eggs to steak and eggs. But the atmosphere is the real draw: the low ceiling, varnished wood, black furniture with flowers painted up and down the legs and portraits on the backs, and lots of murals of Mexico on the walls. Owner Humberto Brambila's aunt Justina started it all, he says, in 1948, with the steamed taco stand upstairs. That's still going too. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (5/02)

La Baguette Blvd. Lazaro Cardenas 1030 (a.k.a. Blvd. Costero, opposite Sanborn's between Castillo and Blancarte), Ensenada, 646-178-2814. For those who take their java straight and strong, this is a good stop for a quick continental breakfast or dessert, with quite possibly the best French Roast coffee in town. Open daily during the day. Inexpensive. — N.W. (4/03)

La Costa 8131 Galeana (Seventh Street between Revolución and Constitución), Tijuana, 685-8494 or 685-3124. An extensive menu, consistently fresh product, and huge portions have made La Costa the reigning seafood house for Americans. Identical lunch and dinner menus offer lobster, shrimp, grilled fish, fish with sauces, squid, abalone, and oysters, all in a variety of preparations. Price of entrées includes soup, salad, rice, dessert, beverage, and after-dinner drink. Almost always crowded. Open Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 11 p.m.; Friday through Sunday, 10 a.m. to midnight. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

or 634-1489. Beautifully prepared meals that include appetizer, soup or salad, and entrée are available in this structure whose name means bell tower and whose exterior resembles a mission. Best bets here are filet steak on a skewer (brocheta de filete), baby back ribs (costillar de puerco), and leg of lamb (pierna de borrego). The portions are mammoth and the breakfast is excellent. Superb service, delightful atmosphere. Menus are printed in Spanish and English. Some English spoken. Open Monday through Saturday, 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m., and Sunday, 7:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Moderate. — E.W.

La Fonda Km. 59, Baja Highway 1 (Alisio exit from toll-road, about halfway between Rosarito and Ensenada), 661-628-7352. It's hard to imagine a better start to the day, in any sweeter ambiance, than at La Fonda ("The Inn"), which offers Mexican and American breakfast dishes and a lavish Sunday brunch buffet with both. Arrive early for patio seating under a straw umbrella with a full-out ocean view. The bilingual menu is written on chalkboards and dinner choices change nightly, featuring American and Mexican seafood entrées and deluxe meats aged in-house. Most staffers speak some English. Full bar, including Baja-grown wines. Open daily, three meals, starting about 9 a.m. Inexpensive to moderate; cash only. — N.W. (4/03)

Malecon de Puerto Nuevo Northwest edge of Puerto Nuevo; take Calle Entradra (entry road) to the ocean-front bluff, edge right, and walk about 30 feet down a steep dirt road running seaward from the street-market on the ocean-side edge of town. Look for a yellow building with blue trim and a terrace with umbrellas. Worth looking for. This great, honest little restaurant harks back to the original, uncommercialized "lobster village" before it got its capital letters and written menus. Open since August, 2002, it's owned by an active fisherman, who serves (as much as weather permits) fresh-caught local lobsters and genuine "daily catch" with standard sides — superb frijoles, red rice, real melted butter — and that's all. The first-course ceviche, when available, is astonishingly flavorful with fish caught that very morning; in harsher weather, a hearty, warming fish chowder substitutes. Breaking from Puerto Nuevo tradition, when the lobster is fresh caught it's simply split and grilled, not lard-fried first, and all the better for it. Some staffers are bilingual. Open brunch through dinner. No reservations, cash only. Low moderate. — N.W. (11/02)

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

Anthony's Fish Grotto For its fresh seafood salads, its fish and chips, and its daily fresh fish specials, Anthony's still goes to the head of the class for stability of product, good-sized portions, time-honored preparation, and low cost. Open daily, lunch through dinner. No reservations. Inexpensive to expensive. Locations: 1360 North Harbor Drive (at Ash Street), downtown, 619-232-5103; 215 West Bay Boulevard, Chula Vista, 619-425-4200; 9530 Murray Drive, La Mesa, 619-463-0368. — E.W.

California Pizza Kitchen 3363 Nobel Drive, La Jolla Village Square, La Jolla, 858-457-4222. Also at Beachwalk Plaza, 437 South Highway 101, Suite 601, Solana Beach, 858-793-0999; Carmel Mountain Plaza, 11602 Carmel Mountain Road, Carmel Mountain, 858-675-4424; and Fashion Valley Mall (second level), Suite 901, 7007 Friars Road, Mission Valley, 619-298-4708. Two Beverly Hills lawyers started this chain in 1985 to exploit "the premium pizza segment." Some 150 restaurants later, guess it worked. The place is all shiny chrome, glass, etched palm trees, golden wood and black furniture, and two pizza ovens with real logs burning inside. The Original BBQ chicken pizza, the chain's first hit, is still their top seller. It has barbecue sauce, smoked Gouda and mozzarella cheeses, BBQ chicken, red onions, and cilantro. The BBQ chicken chopped salad is good too, as is the jambalaya. If you've got a sweet tooth, but are embarrassed to order "Hawaiian" pizza, try the pear and Gorgonzola. It has caramelized pears, caramelized onions, Gorgonzola and other cheeses, and hazelnuts. At night, the Nobel Drive branch features a view of the shining Mormon cathedral. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (2/03)

Joe's Crab Shack 7610 Hazard Center Drive, Mission Valley, 619-260-1111; 4325 Ocean Boulevard, Pacific Beach, 858-274-3474; 525 E. Harbor Drive, Downtown, 619-233-7391; 314 Harbor Drive, South Oceanside, 760-722-1345. A seafood chain with a good Cajun corporate name (Landry's) based in southern Louisiana wouldn't survive without some pluses besides a Bourbon Street party atmosphere. Joe's is silly with crab-shack ambiance (campy nautical paraphernalia on down to souvenir gimme caps), but the food's not bad. One tasty starter is "crabioli," fried wonton stuffed with crab and melted cream cheese ("crab Rangoon" by another name, but smoother). You can choose buckets of steamed, barbecued, or garlic crab (of various subspecies), or go for fried or grilled seafood or steaks, or salads. Grownups may prefer the patio to the rockin', raucous interior. Full bar, not much wine. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (5/01)

Cinema of Sadness

Shameful though it is to say, the opening of Millennium Mambo at Madstone's Hazard Center on Friday marks the first local theatrical booking of any film by the Taiwanese director, Hou Hsiao-hsien.

Our confetti must be mixed with ashes. Although for obvious reasons not a household name in these parts, Hou is perhaps the most remarkable filmmaker to emerge on the world stage in the past quarter of a century. (The "perhaps" makes allowance for the Coen brothers — we'll see how that shakes out — or for the late emergence of Clint Eastwood into full maturity, or for some filmmaker as yet unknown.) Several of Hou's films, even so, have had showings in local festivals and series: City of Sadness and Flowers of Shanghai in the San Diego International Film Festival and San Diego Asian Film Festival, respectively, and Dust in the Wind and Goodbye South, Goodbye in separate programs at the Museum of Contemporary Art. Millennium Mambo itself was shown two years ago in the first-named festival, but I happened to be out of town at the time, a perfect illustration of the importance of showing a film more than once. No excuses this time: you have a full week.

If this most recent one is scarcely the filmmaker's finest, it will do quite nicely as an initiation. The general public will have no basis to lament that Hou has started to repeat himself; no basis to pine for the freshening effects of a period setting in place of a contemporary one; no basis to be blasé. All of his qualities are amply on display. Let the revelation begin.

Before we get to the film's title, before we get to one of Hou's patented group portraits in flux around a table, we are introduced to the heroine in a dreamy slow-motion single take, with the camera tagging along behind her, transfixed by her bouncing hair, unable ever to catch up, as she strides beneath the fluorescent tubes of an endless pedestrian overpass, occasionally looking over her shoulder at the breathlessly trailing camera. A third-person narrator tells us the essential situation: a long-term abusive relationship with a no-account boyfriend named Hao-hao. The heroine would periodically break it off, and then, "as if under a spell, or hypnotized," she would keep coming back for more. (The narrator will tell us this again later on, word for word, as if on the same, or a similar, treadmill.) We will also be told that all of this happened ten years ago, although the period of the film is explicitly the turn-of-the-millennium. Our present day has already become the past. (The film itself, furthermore, is already three years old.) Whatever will happen has already happened. We will never catch up to the bouncing hair. The heroine must remain forever out of reach.

Once we've been told the essential situation, we've been told everything we need to know. The film has a situation only; it has no story. The events, if you can call them that, are recounted in no particular order. Their repetitive nature — the numberless break-ups and make-ups — renders chronology irrelevant. Now and again the narrator will fill us in on what happened right before we see it happen. (Faint echoes of Robert Bresson.) A flashback, for instance, to a police search of the boyfriend's apartment for a stolen Rolex will be broken off before the reported discovery of the incriminating pawn ticket: conventional suspense plays no part. In place of narrative incident, the film traffics heavily in texture and tone, extending, to be sure, below the surface to emotional texture and moral tone. Nothing much could be said to go on, if life itself were thought to be nothing much: the heroine takes a job as a strip-club hostess, where she meets an easygoing gangster named Jack, an alternative to her volatile on-again-off-again boyfriend. Jack is more of a gentleman than Hao-hao, but Jack has troubles of his own. We never do learn the fates of these characters, despite the ten-years-later point of view. A lot can be told, however, without telling a story. And this is a rich, rich film.

THE CHRONICLES OF

The first and foremost of these riches (as always) would be the imagery. Working again with his regular cinematographer Mark Lee Ping-Bin, Hou imposes complete command of the visual elements: color, composition, rhythm. A colorist of a high order, he garnishes the fallow flesh tones of his people, and the central dreariness of their milieu, with liberal dabs of gaudy, artificial color: Pop color, neon color, rhinestone color, often out of focus in the background or foreground to create Impressionistic smears of color. The palette sometimes suggests a grayish plate of sliced turkey and giblet gravy brightened around the edges by a small spoonful each of canned cranberries, sweet potatoes, corn. He has an Ozu-like eye (or Mondrian-like eye) for structuring an image, while at the same time freeing up the people as compositional elements and permitting them looser movement and sloppier posture. Favoring long takes, preferring to let a scene run its course without cuts — a nice thick slice of time — he gets full value out of a shot, never discards it too soon, never undertakes it in the first place unless it is worth pursuing. For one example among countless: the boyfriend's systematic smelling of his girlfriend — yes, smelling, of her hair, her neck, her shoulders, between her legs — on her return to the apartment late at night, and the girlfriend indifferently putting up with it as long as it doesn't interfere with her smoking and drinking. (The accompanying techno beat — muffled as if coming up through the floor rather than laid on top of the image at a smothering volume — is characteristic, too, of Hou's matchmaking skills in marrying image to sound.) The contrast between the richness of the imagery and the barrenness of the lives on view is certainly striking. And all this richness of imagery — this vividness, this solidness, this steadiness — is inevitably quite beautifying. But it is beautifying without ever glamorizing. Or better say, more simply, it is, in the deepest meaning of the word, cinematizing. (The absence of drama and suspense will guard against glamorizing as well.) A Hou film never shirks the single most vital task of a film: to make us see.

The remainder of the film's richness is philosophical. (Its task here again, in a larger sense, is likewise to make us see.) Through the lusciousness of its color, the grip of its compositions, the tenacity of its tempo, it lets us appreciate, even while the characters may not, the preciousness of life. And this, in combination with the flatline narrative, fosters a sort of nostalgia for the present, a longing to do it all over again, an awareness of its slipping away. (No take-charge tips will be put forth on Breaking-the-Cycle: this is not a dose of prescription medicine for the Lifetime channel.) The most haunting moment in the film, which might easily have seemed mawkish were it not so authentically poetic, comes in the scene of a winter holiday in Japan, with our strip-club hostess cavorting in the snow like a six-year-old. The precise moment: she presses her face into a snowbank to make a mask-like impression of her features, a startling restatement of the old footprint-in-the-sand image of mortality. If the principal characters, one and all, are unexceptional, unadmirable, unsympathetic — if they are, as a Somerset Maugham might say, "scum" — if they are deemed "worthless" — it does not diminish the preciousness of life; it paradoxically heightens it. Snow White and Cinderella had no need of second chances.

Let me see if I can pull the strands together. Or rather, let me see if Hou can. The action, remember, is set at the turn of the millennium, a temporal milestone that invites us to look both backwards and forwards: the end of something and the beginning of something. But the "futuristic" narration, delivered from a decade away, severs the present day from its moorings and pushes it prematurely into the past. And the entire repetitive sequence of events — nonlinear, unsuspenseful, anti-dramatic — feeds into a distinctly Eastern, river-of-life idea whereby each and every place at which you dip into the stream, although vividly, intensely, insistently present, also contains the past and the future. It is all connected, all one. Awareness is sadness, and vice versa, and no one has made sadder movies than Hou.

But maybe I make too much of it. By all means see for yourself. Millennium Mambo, at the very least, gives you a lot to look at and a lot to contemplate. One of the tangential things it gives you to contemplate is the number of films today that give you absolutely nothing. ■

MOVIE LISTINGS

All reviews are by Duncan Shepherd. Priorities are indicated by one to five stars and antipathies by the black spot. Unrated movies are for now unreviewed. Thousands of past reviews sorted alphabetically, by year of release and by rating, are available online at SanDiegoReader.com.

The Alamo — Creditable retelling of an early chapter in Texas history ("As goes the Alamo, so goes Texas"), not as cumbersome as the John Wayne version of 1960, perhaps even a little cursory. Director and co-screenwriter John Lee Hancock humanizes the central figures — Crockett, Bowie, Travis, Houston, though not the ogre-ish Santa Anna — without demythicizing them, and without diminishing their heroism. Stage actor Patrick Wilson, with his Paul Newman puckered lips and baby-blue eyes, makes an impressive screen debut as Travis, under better control than the veterans Billy Bob Thornton (Crockett), Jason Patric (Bowie), and Dennis Quaid (Houston). 2004. ★★ (VOGUE, THROUGH 6/3)

Baadasssss! — Mario Van Peebles writes, directs, and stars in a re-enactment of his father Melvin's struggles in the film industry. (LA JOLLA VILLAGE; MISSION VALLEY 20; FROM 6/4)

Carandiru — Fact-based Brazilian prison film starring Luiz Carlos Vasconcelos and directed by Hector Babenco. (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Coffee and Cigarettes — A collection of eleven comic sketches filmed over a period of almost two decades by Jim Jarmusch, all of them involving, if not actually revolving around, coffee and cigarettes (or in one case, tea and cigarettes) and the various restaurant tables on which these are arrayed. Each takes place in a new location with new characters, although certain ideas and actual lines of dialogue will recur. Each, too, observes strict formalities in its manner of presentation: black-and-white photography; the camera permitted only one direction of approach, as through a proscenium arch (one exception: the outward-looking angle on a sparking science-fictional gizmo); and every table, at least once, viewed from directly overhead (praise be to Godard!). Many in the motley cast — Roberto Benigni, Steven Wright, Iggy Pop, Tom Waits, Cate Blanchett, Alfred Molina, Steve Coogan, Bill Murray, two members of the Wu-Tang Clan, former Warholian Taylor Mead, et al. — play themselves, but not the Southern-accented Steve Buscemi, and Blanchett plays not only herself but also, in a brunette wig, her look-alike lower-class cousin. The last-mentioned skit is a virtuoso acting display, and it vies with the Molina-Coogan duet as the best of the bunch. All of them, however, have their little drolleries — very little and very few, yet just enough to fend off boredom. 2004. ★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Dawn of the Dead — Shorter, straighter-faced, altogether squarer remake of the George Romero zombie bash. The "commentary" on American consumerism, or anyway the locality of a Middle American shopping mall, remains as pertinent today as in 1979, if scarcely as fresh. And the cannibalism now seems to pertain not so much to the society at large as to a depleted film industry overly dependent on blood-sucking remakes. The same could have been figures typed out on screen, for note-taking purposes.) Shot on video, with a no-name cast, and directed with a heavy hand by Sergio Arau, the movie arouses a sense of wonder only over its standard-issue release in multiple multiplexes. Dr. Zhivago — David Lean's vision of Pasternak's novel is designed for filmgoers who are prone to remark "ooh" and "ahh" at wide-screen pictures of flowers, icicles, deserts of snow, fields of wheat, and so forth. Omar Sharif, Julie Christie, Geraldine Chaplin, Rod Steiger. 1965.

● (MUSEUM OF PHOTOGRAPHIC ARTS, 6/3 AND 4, 7 P.M.)

Eternal Sunshine of the Spotless Mind — Charlie Kaufman, scriptwriter of Being John Malkovich, Adaptation, and Confessions of a Dangerous Mind, drills a new tunnel into his favorite fictional locale, the human brain, this time by way of the science-fictional device of an illicit memoryerasure service called Lacuna, Inc. ("Technically speaking, the procedure is brain damage, but it's on a par with a night of heavy drinking.") Both halves of a failed romance avail themselves of the service, first the female half, and then (in distress over his former lover's failure to recognize him) the male, who belatedly changes his mind and begins to struggle against the erasure in midstream. The old theme of cold-science-versus-warm-humanity emerges. And inasmuch as the protagonist is asleep for the operation, the flow of fragmentary memories, riddled with surrealist dislocations and juxtapositions, takes on aspects of cognitive dreaming as well as psychoanalytic free association. The French origins of director Michel Gondry, who earlier collaborated with Kaufman on Human Nature, prompt us to draw a connection to Alain Resnais quicker than we otherwise might. The latter's explorations of the mind in general and memory in specific are, fittingly enough, far more cerebral (Hiroshima Mon Amour, Last Year at Marienbad, Providence), though he himself was not above making use of a science-fictional device: the haywire time machine in Je T'Aime, Je T'Aime, pinballing its human guinea pig through the lowlights of an unhappy love affair. (The theme of cold-science-versus-warm-humanity emerged there, too.) Gondry, a music-video and TV-advertising veteran, with a common weakness for the wacky and the tacky, has none of the refinement of Resnais, but that's no reason to condemn him out of hand. A popularized, a vulgarized version is preferable to none at all; it might even inspire the odd viewer or two to follow the trail back to the fountainhead. Jim Carrey, Kate Winslet, Kirsten Dunst, Mark Ruffalo, Tom Wilkinson, Elijah Wood. 2004.

I'm Not Scared — Sun-drenched Italian thriller from the sunstruck director of Mediterraneo, Gabriele Salvatores, concerning a ten-year-old boy who discovers another boy his own age chained in a dungeon-like hole in the ground, and further discovers that his parents are co-conspirators in a kidnapping scheme. Tidy yet tedious, it's a situation that doesn't allow much development, though it allows a couple of mild shocks and an abundance of clean, well-illuminated cinematography. Dawn of the Dead in its entirety the film is even worse than initially believed. For much of the time, it looks more like sweepings from the cutting-room floor than like a legitimate sequel: a dumping ground for the slow parts. Certainly, any part that features David Carradine — the titular Bill, who finally puts in an appearance, tootling his own musical motif like Charles Bronson in Once upon a Time in the West — will necessarily be a slow part, inasmuch as the actor enunciates his lines like a drunk driver in a roadside conversation with a Highway Patrolman. The sole sensation of speed, the sole release from the Leone-like longueurs, could come from getting caught up in trying to keep pace with the cinematic in-jokes and allusions. But the only profit in that line of pursuit — a trivial pursuit par excellence — would be the verification of Tarantino's credentials as a movie nut. His knowledge and his enthusiasm have never been in question; his intelligence and taste are something else again. Uma Thurman, Michael Madsen, Daryl Hannah. 2004. ● (GASLAMP 15; LA JOLLA 12)

The Ladykillers — The Coen brothers' first-ever "unoriginal" work: a remake of a mid-Fifties British caper comedy by the underappreciated Alexander Mackendrick. In mitigation, the brothers throughout their careers have been so partial to the pastiche — the neo-noir Blood Simple, the imitation-Hammett Miller's Crossing, the imitation-Cain The Man Who Wasn't There, the alternately Capra-esque and Hawksian screwball comedies, The Hudsucker Proxy and Intolerable Cruelty — that an actual remake constitutes only a subtle difference in degree. Then, too, their shared interests with the Ealing Studios original — an interest in the unravelling criminal scheme and an interest in human stupidity — renders the Coens' appropriation of the material into an act of tribute rather than of plunder. With The Big Lebowski and Fargo in particular, they have earned their rights to The Ladykillers. Finally, they have effected so many changes — in milieu, in plot, in character, and in language — as to reclaim a measure of originality. They have much fun, as has Tom Hanks, with the high-flown diction (periodically brought low by the self-conscious adolescent snigger) of the criminal mastermind who styles himself an Old Southern gentleman and scholar: "portal," "redoubtable," "ignoble," "derring-do," "cogitation," "contretemps," etc., etc., not to mention his impromptu recitations from Poe's poetry. And J.K. Simmons, the best thing in Spider-Man, made by Coen crony Sam Raimi, is the best thing here as well, a bald-pated, handlebar-mustached ordnance specialist, a former Freedom Rider, and a lifelong irritable-bowel sufferer, with a small grab-bag of blustery catch phrases: "Easiest thing in the world" and "Child's play" when confidently on the offensive, or "Just a trial balloon" when in apologetic retreat. Still, there is no getting around our awareness that this, however well done, is a job of renovation rather than invention. And no getting around our legitimate reasons for disappointment, however slight. With Irma P. Hall, Marlon Wayans, Tzi Ma, Ryan Hurst. 2004. ★★★ (GASLAMP 15)

Laws of Attraction — Romantic-comic trifle to do with two divorce lawyers of opposite sexes locking horns in the courtroom and bumping uglies in the bedroom. In essence, it asks Pierce Brosnan and Julianne Moore to be Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Moore is enough of an actress to respond to the challenge, however far beyond her reach. Brosnan is too much of a peacock to bestir himself. (Frances Fisher, at an age differential of eight years, is asked to be Moore's mother, and doesn't let it get her down.) The theme, if any, loses its thread on a touristic jaunt to Ireland. With Michael Sheen, Parker Posey, Nora Dunn; directed by Peter Howitt. 2004. ★ (GROSSMONT TROLLEY)

Life of Brian — The emotional blackmail implicit in this tedious Biblical spoof, from the Monty Python group, is that by not finding it funny, you are liable to be taken for a bluenose. It could be argued, though, that the followers of Cecil B. DeMille actually have more reason to be offended than those of Jesus H. Christ. With Graham Chapman, Michael Palin, John Cleese, Eric Idle, and Terry Jones; directed by Jones. 1979. ★ (KEN, THROUGH 6/3; LA JOLLA VILLAGE, FROM 6/4)

Man on Fire — Soft-boiled thriller about an alcohol-impaired bodyguard (Denzel Washington) who goes on a revenge rampage after his button-cute charge (Dakota Fanning) gets snatched by a Mexico City kidnapping ring. Long and lugubrious, the movie sets aside a full hour for the guard to bond with the body, dropping his defenses under her peppering of personal questions, helping her with her homework, treating her to ice cream, and most significantly, perhaps even self-consciously symbolically, pulling double duty as her swimming coach: she's slow off the blocks, like the movie itself. Things hardly pick up once the murder and the mayhem start: Tony Scott's jiggy, jumpy, jerky visuals propel the action sideways rather than forwards. Christopher Walken, Radha Mitchell, Marc Anthony, Giancarlo Giannini, Rachel Ticotin. 2004. ● (FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; TOWN SQUARE 14)

Mean Girls — A home-schooled teenager, raised in the wilds of Africa, is let loose as an innocent in the American public school system, and the worn-out subject of adolescent cattiness and bitchery receives an infusion of fresh blood, or at any rate a megadose of caffeine. The snap-crackle-pop script (from a book by Rosalind Wiseman) is by Saturday Night Live veteran Tina Fey, who also plays the sympathetic math teacher, the most human character in the group. In truth, the script could stand to take a breath once in a while, and the nominal heroine (Lindsay Lohan) too facilely straddles too many fences — a naif, a misfit, a hottie, a math whiz — but then again, the real heroine is Tina Fey, who we

The Passion of the Christ — A work of devotion, and a big gamble, for Mel Gibson, financed out of his own pocket, boasting no big-name stars (Jim Caviezel and Monica Bellucci, the biggest), not to mention English subtitles for ancient languages, graphic gore, and a firestorm of pre-release publicity on its latent anti-Semitism. A version of this story that would bear down on the bodily punishment absorbed during Christ's last day on Earth was probably, in the fullness of time, inevitable. And it's a short step from saying that such a version was inevitable to saying that it's a particularly appropriate one for its time: a Passion, if you will, for the new millennium. More specifically, bereft of the spiritual and obsessed with the physical. In the end, there's really very little to it, apart from duration: the arrest in Gethsemane (with such excessive force as to leave Jesus at the outset looking like Rocky Balboa after a fifteen-rounder); the kangaroo court; the interminable public torture (Mel's martyrdom in Braveheart was but an appetizer); the marathon uphill climb to Calvary; the spikes in the hands and feet and the spear in the side; and scarcely more than ten seconds for the rolling-away of the stone and the restoration of the body for the ascent to Paradise. A major contributor to the aforesaid duration — two hours plus — is the willy-nilly use of slow-motion, always a handy access to dramatic emphasis for a filmmaker too lazy or inept to achieve it by honest means such as pacing and camera placement. And please don't bother to voice any misgivings over the suitability of so voguish a device in so classical a setting: that just goes along with the ultra-violence to identify the film as of its time. 2004.

three children from her deceased sister, and meets a hunky Lutheran minister. (She’s stunned to learn a Lutheran cleric can date.) True-to-form Garry Marshall comedy: starry-eyed (over Kate Hudson), saccharine, smarmy, and of course a small part for Hector Elizondo. With John Corbett, Joan Cusack, Helen Mirren, and (fleetingly as the departing sister) Felicity Huffman. 2004.

(KEN, 6/4 THROUGH 10)

Shrek 2 — Another dose of foam-rubber animation, rapacious capitalism, mainstream hipness, and coy vulgarity (“It looks like we’re up Chocolate Creek without a popsicle stick”). Viewers of the forerunner will know what they are in for, and will have only themselves to blame. One new character, Puss ’n Boots, is well drawn whether coughing up a hairball or soliciting poor-kitty pity, and well voiced by Antonio Banderas. With the returning voices of Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz, and Eddie Murphy; co-directed by Andrew Adamson, Kelly Asbury, and Conrad Vernon. 2004.

Since Otar Left — Three women — Otar’s mother, sister, and niece — cope with life in post-Soviet Georgia after the man of the family seeks a better life in Paris. The biggest problem they must cope with is Otar’s accidental death, a piece of news which the sister and niece conspire to conceal from the mother. Dowdy, well-detailed humanism from French director Julie Bertuccelli, daughter of director Jean-Louis Bertuccelli (Ramparts of Clay). The soundtrack, if you’re keeping score, features the same Arvo Pärt number heard in Heaven, Swept Away, and Gerry. Esther Gorintin, Nino Khomasuridze, Dinara Drukarova. 2003.

★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE, THROUGH 6/3)

A Slipping-Down Life — Lili Taylor, much in her element, plays one of Anne Tyler’s lonely, loopy protagonists, an amusement-park bunny in North Carolina, living at home with her shortwave-hobbyist father (“There’s too much Spanish in the world”) and nurturing a fixation on a garage-band rocker called Drumstrings Casey. (On impulse, she carves his last name in her forehead, but backwards in front of a mirror: an excellent job of makeup at all stages of freshness and fadedness.) The story unfolds slowly, takes some unexpected turns as well as some expected ones, and gradually engulfs us in an individual destiny. The soundtrack is overloaded with pop tunes, albeit some well-chosen ones, including Nanci Griffith’s rendition of Stephen Foster’s “Hard Times” behind the opening credits, and the Girl Rock classic, “Tell Him,” for the wedding day. With Guy Pearce, Irma P. Hall, John Hawkes, Shawnee Smith, Sara Rue, Tom Bower; written and directed by Toni Kalem. 2004.

Stateside — Crazy love between a USMC virgin and a schizophrenic actress, ca. 1980, with the standard complement of period pop songs. Writer and director Reverage Anselmo finds ways — no small feat — to freshen up boot camp (Val Kilmer as the foghorn-voiced D.I.), but not the ups and downs of the rocky romance. Jonathan Tucker, Rachael Leigh Cook, Agnes Bruckner, Joe Mantegna, Diane Venora. 2004.

★ (GROSSMONT TROLLEY)

(LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Super Size Me — Hectoring documentary on the relationship between American fast food and American obesity, and insufficiently funny to compensate for the preachment. Filmmaker Morgan Spurlock, attempting to walk in the shoes of Michael Moore, risks his own body for science, if not for art: eating nothing but McDonald’s for thirty days straight. He doesn’t die, but he throws up on camera, puts on twenty-five pounds, and imperils his liver, among other things. The video image is as rough as the rhetoric. 2004.

★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

13 Going on 30 — With a sprinkle of Wishing Dust, the disaffected young heroine, on her first day of teenhood, is spirited into her future life as a “thirty and flirty and thriving” editor of her favorite fashion magazine, Poise. Yet she’s still thirteen in her head, with none of the knowledge, the experience, and the self-sullyng that it took to get there. As in Big (the official point of reference), this proves to be less of a handicap than you might expect. The callowest mind has the best idea for the magazine's makeover ("I want to see my best friend's big sister!"), and the path to Enlightenment, as any adolescent devoutly believes, can be circumvented by shortcut. The movie, blithely directed by Gary (Tadpole) Winick, has a hard time grasping, or keeping a grasp of, its own concept. The spectator's tolerance of it will probably depend on his tolerance of the bony allure of Jennifer Garner — a death's-head with dimples, and not the most credible spokesperson for the Natural Woman. With Mark Ruffalo, Judy Greer, Kathy Baker, and, the rubber-faced charmer who embodies the heroine at age thirteen, Christa B. Allen. 2004.

● (FASHION VALLEY 18; GROSSMONT TROLLEY; HORTON PLAZA 14)

Troy — Big (two hours, forty minutes) old-fashioned (not to say ancient) sword-and-sandal epic, complete with the traditional Cast of Thousands (however many of them may nowadays be computer-generated) and the mandatory Wooden Horse, plausible in its physical appearance if implausible in its placement at the foot of a downsloping sandy beach several miles from the city walls (why bother to lug it inside?). In basic outline a fairly straightforward illustration of events in The Iliad, or at any rate events on the human plane, it is all apt to seem terribly familiar to anyone who made a habit of actually reading his assigned reading in high school, regardless how long ago. Which is not to say it is all apt to seem terribly interesting. The casting of the movie, to begin with, can be said to be a little off when Achilles and Briseis (Brad Pitt and Rose Byrne) look prettier than Paris and Helen (Orlando Bloom and Diane Kruger, a Teutonic Ursula Andress type). Nor is it good storytelling to balance the legendary love that brought down an empire, and even to overbalance it, with a rival love whose only purpose is to flatter the movie's star.

The Twilight Samurai

And not even his prelude one-on-one duel against a bald, multi-scarred, mountainous Goliath, and his zigzagging jump-and-stab maneuver in slow-motion, can convince us of Pitt's claim as the Greatest Living Warrior. A larger problem, though, seems to have to do with the aforementioned familiarity: the plainness, the bareness, the rudimentariness of the basic myth. Myth demands a bit of dressing-up if it wants to continue to turn heads in the modern world. (See what the Coen brothers did with The Odyssey in O Brother, Where Art Thou?) And it's not enough simply to instill the characters with a self-conscious, an unbecoming, an almost obnoxious certainty as to their own immortality and their place in history: "This war will never be forgotten, nor will the heroes who fight in it." They're right about that, but it's not for them to say. With Eric Bana, Brian Cox, Peter O'Toole, Sean Bean; directed by Wolfgang Petersen. 2004.

The Twilight Samurai — Unmythic contribution to the classic Japanese martial-arts genre. It skimps on action and piles up, instead, the domestic problems of a modest master swordsman of the mid-19th Century, widowed, deep in debt, burdened with a senile mother, two little girls to raise, tattered clothes, and b.o. An assassination assignment in the final quarter of the film ("Bring me the head of Zenemon Yogo") restores a modicum of dignity. The calm, measured, sure-footed style of veteran director Yoji Yamada (forty-odd films, alone, about the "lovable tramp" known as Tora-san) has a dignity of its own. Hiroyuki Sanada, Rie Miyazawa. 2003.

★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Valentin — Harsh realities (a broken home, an absent mother, a fickle father, a domineering granny) and lofty dreams (to have a real family, to grow up to be an astronaut) of a cross-eyed eight-year-old in late-Sixties Argentina. The solitary goal of the film is to ensure that the little hero be adorable, and although it permits him to talk too much in voice-over, it exceeds its goal: "Who wouldn't love you, sweetie?" With Rodrigo Noya, Carmen Maura, Julieta Cardinali, and Mex Urtizberea; written and directed by Alejandro Agresti. 2002.

★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Van Helsing — The brand-name vampire hunter seen as an Indiana Jonesian swashbuckler, armed with a rapid-fire crossbow and saw-toothed boomerangs, rather than an ivory-tower savant: Hugh Jackman in gunslinger's garb rather than Peter Cushing in gentleman's get-up. What Stephen Sommers did for the Mummy, twice over, he now does for a horrific Dream Team made up of Dracula, the Wolfman, Frankenstein's monster, and Mr. Hyde. Lest that be misconstrued as a compliment, let's be clear that what he does for them amounts to a steroidal disfigurement, an abomination against nature — or, as you like, against art. (Sommers appears to have borrowed from The League of Extraordinary Gentlemen, not just the Dream Team idea, but the particular misconception that Mr. Hyde is bigger than Dr. Jekyll, when the reverse should be the case.) It takes some doing, to give credit where due, to conceal completely the talent and the beauty of Kate Beckinsale; even Underworld couldn't do it; but this busy, noisy, instantaneously tiresome movie succeeds spectacularly on both counts. With David Wenham and Richard Roxburgh. 2004.

SLOW WAVE

by Jesse Reklaw ©2004

I HAD A DREAM THAT MY DOG, DUCHESS, WAS A CHEF AT AN ITALIAN RESTAURANT.

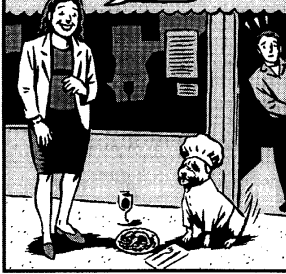

I WAS AFRAID SHE WOULD BE FIRED FOR MOVING SO SLOWLY.

Two more specials and a Fettuccine Alfredo!

PLUS SHE WAS GIVING THE FOOD AWAY FOR FREE.

For me?

I HAD TO STAND BETWEEN HER AND THE CUSTOMERS SO THEY COULDN'T SEE THAT SHE USED HER MOUTH TO PUT THE PIZZAS IN THE OVEN.

Ask Jesse to draw your dream! • PO Box 11493 Berkeley, CA 94712-2493 • reklaw@slowwave.com

CONGRATULATIONS CLASS OF 2004

Your time is here!

You have crossed the bridge all successful individuals must cross.

You have closed the gap from knowing what you want to do to what you love.

Now come the rewards for all your meticulous hard work and dedication.

When you first began your journey at Platt College, you were held to high expectations.

You have exceeded those standards and embraced the challenges.

Success does not come easy.

Success may come in many different ways, but when dreams materialize you realize all the commitment was well worth the effort.

So now you are off on your own...or are you?

You can take comfort knowing you have an institution that will continue to guide and nurture your media arts future after graduation. The bonds we have formed is one of mutual respect, admiration and a complete fondness for you as a dynamic individual. Do you think we would let a relationship like that end?

Platt College exists for YOU.

For all of you graduating with a:

A.A.S. Degree in Graphic Design

A.A.S. Degree in Multimedia

we are proud to call you...

Platt College's 2004 graduating class.

Congratulations from all of us at Platt College, YOUR Media Arts campus.

Andrew Student
La Jolla

I don't think that I would. I'd feel guilty if I never had to work again; I wouldn't know what to do with myself. I might consider it if I could still have a side job that would keep me occupied. If there were some personal or intellectual interest in the woman, I don't think it would matter what her physical appearance is. If this woman were a hag, having children wouldn't be a problem. I still wouldn't feel as good about myself if their mother were taking care of me. I trust my own parents in many ways, but I don't think that I'd trust them to find me a wife.

Irv Wolfe
Lake Tahoe

Never. If I met a woman who possessed everything else that I was looking for in a woman and she happened to have money, the money would be an added bonus. But money would never be the reason. I have my own standards of what I'm looking for in a woman, and I would say that being attractive is part of my criteria. I have a twin brother; he's married and she isn't rich. If I were to marry for money, he'd probably slap me around. I don't think it would ever get to the point where I would need my parents to arrange a marriage, but I would trust them to set me up. They have good taste.

Sonya Albin
Artist
Ocean Beach

Definitely. As soon as the marriage is over, you could do whatever you wanted. I would still be the one in charge. If some guy is desperate enough for someone to marry him that he's essentially paying me...I would definitely have control. I would marry the person for money, but if I weren't in love with the person, I wouldn't pretend to be in love. My siblings wouldn't care if I got married for money. The only question that they'd ask would be, "How much are you getting?"

Kurt
North County

Yup. Women do it all the time. I wouldn't be against having a sugar mama, a woman that's a couple years older than me to take care of me. I've met a few who are recently divorced and looking to meet younger men. Most of them have the houses and cars left over from the divorce, so it would seem like an ideal trade-off. It comes down to whether you're looking for love or [looking for] a good time. If you happen to be looking for the right one, then getting with a sugar mama wouldn't be the right choice.

Frida Hyatt Flight Attendant
Denver, CO

No. I knew this woman who did. She ended up divorcing the guy after a couple years. The guy was the same age as her. He was a DJ and made good money, but she didn't love him. She basically married him for his money and for his job. The poor guy was definitely into her more than she was ever into him. This woman, she hasn't changed her ways; she's moved on to baseball players. If I'm interested in someone, money is a bonus.

Maurine Seamen
Tierrasanta

No. I have a brother, and I can picture him marrying a woman for her money. If he were to marry a sugar mama, I'd tell him to hook me up. It's entirely his decision; he's an adult. My brother has also already been through a divorce, so he probably wouldn't be excited to do that again. I believe in the sanctity of marriage, and that's why I think I could never marry anyone who I wasn't in love with.

PICTURE STORY

Photograph from the San Diego Historical Society

San Diego citizens and Navy personnel await the funeral procession of those who died on the U.S.S. Bennington, a 1700-ton gunboat. On July 21, 1905, 65 men died in a boiler-room explosion while the vessel was moored in San Diego Bay. During an overhaul of the boilers, a fireman erroneously closed a valve to a pressure gauge. An oiler “pushed” the fires without noting that the gauge wasn’t registering, and...that was it.

Attention: Honda/Acura Owners

To: Jerry and the Crew at Greenlight Auto Repair

Robert and I just wanted to say "Thanks!" for all the hard work you've done with our NSX, Legend, Vigor and Civic. After corresponding with you on nsxprime.com, my husband felt confident that you would be "THE MECHANIC" to handle his car. After seeing all the hard work you guys put into diagnosing, explaining the problems, and fixing the NSX, I realized that he was right. Since then, we've decided to take all of our Acuras/Hondas to you. It's hard finding a good, quality mechanic to trust (without paying dealer prices) and we trust you. Granted, it's never good when you have problems with your car, but you make the experience as painless as possible. Every time we bring one of our cars in, you treat us like family. The work you do at your shop is EXCELLENT and Acura must have been sorry to lose such a dedicated professional. Too bad for them, GREAT for us! It's nice to know that if anything goes wrong with our cars, we have you and your crew to take care of us. We are telling everyone we know that Greenlight's the place to go when you have trouble with your car. Once again, thank you so much for everything you've done for us and our cars.

Sincerely,
Robert & Kim Gavina

LEAD STORY

— In May, California law firms asked a court to approve $258 million in fees for their handling of a lawsuit against Microsoft Corp., amounting to $3000 an hour for the lead attorney (who billed for 6000 hours of his own time, even though three dozen lawyers from more than 30 firms had a piece of the case) and $1000 an hour for administrative work, all for the following consumer bonanza: Each victim will get a coupon worth $5 to $29 toward the purchase of another Microsoft product.

Finer Points of the Law

— In April, a judge in Ocala, Fla., sentenced a 27-year-old man to probation for having sex with his then-girlfriend's rottweiler (with the man admitting that he had a "lifelong problem") and lamented that under state law, the man could not be forced to register as a sex offender, since the victim was a dog. ... Also in April, authorities in Nashville, Tenn., charged Metro News with violating the state's Sunday-closing law for adult businesses, but the owner said he would fight it since he had recently tried to avoid the law by occupying most of his floor space with a Sunday-law-acceptable retail furniture and garden business (although his sign still said customers had to be age 18 or older to shop for furniture).

Government in Action

— Although 50 countries have now banned American beef because of inadequate mad-cow controls, the U.S. Department of Agriculture not only has declined to order widespread testing but has prohibited one farm, Creekstone (Campbellsburg, Ky.), from voluntarily testing. The USDA said such conscientious testing would imply that America's entire 35 million yearly slaughters should be tested (which the industry says is too expensive). The USDA said it aims to test 40,000 cows, up from 20,000 for the past two years (although it has been unable for nine months to document those tests in response to a Freedom of Information Act request by United Press International).

Can't Possibly Be True

— Until March, Mr. Dayn Riegel and his girlfriend kept 77 cats in their house in Lawrenceville, Ga., but a Humane Society spokesman said he saw no problem in that all appeared to be in good health and well-fed, and Riegel's home was clean (though filled with litter boxes). Riegel recorded each cat's history on a computer database, provided one packaged meal and one special meal a day for each, and turned over 60 pounds of cat litter a week. During a recent move from the home, Riegel gave away a few of the cats. — Veteran schoolteacher Carrie Peoples, 63, quit her job in April in Covington, Ga., after an incident in which she responded to a trash-talking 14-year-old student by ordering two male classmates to toss the girl out of an open window (even though it was a first-floor window); the boys dutifully complied, for fear of punishment. ... Teacher Jason Schoenberger, 24, was suspended from PS 279 in Brooklyn, N.Y., in March after he hung a 5-year-old student on a closet coatrack (allegedly with the kid's permission) to see the shock on a colleague's face when he walked into the closet. — Sweden's parliamentary ombudsmen's office in Stockholm, looking through some old environmental records recently, discovered that in 1986 an environmental court in Jämtland province had denied a resort-development permit to a builder because the "Storsjö monster" (serpent-like body, catlike head, first rumored in 1635) often "sighted" there had been declared endangered. Declared the ruling, "[I]t is prohibited to kill, hurt or catch animals of the Storsjö monster species" or to "take away or hurt the monster's eggs, roe or den." — In April, the Virginia Supreme Court turned down the petition for a new trial for Aleck J. Carpitcher, who was sentenced in 1999 to 38 years in prison for molesting an 11-year-old girl. The girl recently told authorities she made up the incident to punish Carpitcher, who was at the time dating her mother. The justices cited state law, which allows consideration of "new evidence" only if it is submitted within three weeks of the sentencing date. — The Boston Herald reported in April that the Massachusetts Treatment Center, at which the state's pedophiles and rapists are housed, was using a controversial aversion therapy that some experts say includes providing convict-patients with illegal child pornography and forcing them to masturbate repeatedly, past the threshold of pain, in the belief that child images will thus eventually become uninviting.

People with Issues

— New Hampshire state representative John Kerns resigned in February while on the verge of expulsion for, among other things, writing "State of New Hampshire" on some personal checks (later dishonored) to feign officialness and for threatening violence after unsuccessfully demanding a private parking space. He appeared at one court hearing wearing a black cape to, as he said, improve his credibility as a defendant. ... Presidential candidate Robert Haines, 57, of New Hampshire, was arrested while campaigning in Virginia in April after he threatened to kill a police dog over a parking ticket dispute. Last year, at a Dartmouth College football game, Haines tried to commandeer the public address system and ceremonially "throw out the first football" (which is only done in baseball).

Least Competent Criminals

— A man took $180 from another in a home robbery in Covington, Ky., in April. The money was handed over by the victim only because he was late in noticing that the gun the man was holding had no barrel. As the robber ran out, the victim called police and neighbors joined in a search, but the only thing that was found nearby, according to the Kentucky Post, was discarded clothing and "pieces of a gun."

Recurring Themes

— A 2003 "News of the Weird" report heralded a rural Peruvian doctor for performing lifesaving surgery to relieve swelling in a man's skull using only a carpenter's drill and pliers. In a similar incident near Ketchum, Idaho, in December (with medevac helicopters grounded by a blizzard), Dr. Keith Sivertson likewise saved Ben King's life, but using a Makita power drill from a clinic's maintenance shop.

More Things to Worry About

— In April, Floridian Sheryl Hardy, who was sentenced to 30 years in prison for her role in the 1989 death of her two-year-old son, asked the Department of Family Services in Illinois (where she now lives after early release) to be allowed to raise her follow-up baby, who had been taken from her by the state after she gave birth in 2001. ... In Edinburgh, Scotland, bus drivers are apparently subjected to so much abuse that transit officials recently gave all 1800 operators DNA-collecting kits so that they can swab themselves when passengers spit on them.

It's a CRIME

TERRORIST THREATS

Location: 9550 Miramar Road
Time/Date: 7:10 p.m. on 5/18/04

Officer's Investigation: An Asian male body-builder was causing a disturbance in the 24 Hour Fitness Club. [He] identified himself as "David." David's extremely muscular physique and violent temper caused the reporting party, James P., to fear for his life. P. is the manager of the gym area. P. said David was dropping the weights all over the floor and was not "re-racking" the weight plates. P. walked up to [David] and told him he needed to re-rack the weights and to please not leave them all over the floor. P. said the male became very hostile and told him: "Get the fuck out of my face or I'll kill you." P. was taken aback by David's demeanor and asked him to calm down and to understand it was the club policy to always re-rack the weights after they were used. P. said David got right up in his face and said he was "going to kick his ass." P. decided to walk away and contact the new club GM (General Manager) and asked him to help ask David to leave. P. said he did not approach David as to not antagonize him further. David told the GM [that] P. had been rude to him and he was offended. P. said the GM, being fairly new to the company, did nothing and went back to his office. David barked out to P.: "You never even asked me my name. You just started ordering me around."

P. said he tried to explain to David the reason why he was asking him to put the weights away [when] David walked right up to his face and said: "If you don't get off my back about the damn weights, I'm going to kill you." David had his hand drawn back and balled up into a fist. P. said he was afraid the guy was actually going to take a swing at him or grab a weight and strike him with it. P. said he was very nervous and decided to walk away and call the police.

ATTEMPTED ASSAULT

Location: 3965 Fifth Avenue, Hillcrest
Time/Date: 5:50 p.m. on 5/21/04

Investigation: I contacted Amber R., who was waiting outside the 24 Hour Fitness Center, to investigate an attempted assault. She was more agitated than scared, talking fast and gesturing her arms angrily. I asked her to calm down and speak slowly. She essentially told me the following...

Victim's Statement: I came here after work to exercise like I do every day. I was on the Lifecycle when I noticed this man looking at me through the window. He was in his 60s, 5'8". I didn't pay too much attention because this happens sometimes. When I went to the weights, I saw him come in, look around and look at me and then he left. I didn't see him anymore. When I went down to the parking level to my car, he suddenly showed up behind me. I didn't notice him follow me. He asked what time it was and I told him I didn't know, I didn't have a watch. He stepped close to me and I told him not to. He said, "I'm not going to hurt you, I just want to talk." I was looking through my purse for my car keys. He said, "I just want to touch your skin, I won't hurt you." He reached out his hand and tried to touch my arm. I pulled out my small can of pepper spray. He saw it and turned around and walked away very fast.

VIOLATED COURT ORDER

Location: 7620 Balboa Avenue
Time/Date: 6:15-6:30 a.m. on 5/19/04

Officer's Investigation: I was dispatched to the 24 Hour Fitness Center to investigate a violation of a restraining order. Elena A. was waiting in the parking lot. I found Elena A. sitting in her vehicle. I recognized her from a prior contact...I took a violation of a restraining order the previous week. Elena and Marvin D. were involved in a ten-year affair with one another. Both are married. Elena broke up with Marvin in December 2003. Marvin began harassing her.

Victim's Statement: I came to the gym this morning at 6:15 a.m. Before I could get out of my car, my ex-boyfriend Marvin appeared out of nowhere. He said he wanted to talk to me because he couldn't get me out of his mind...he said he was hurting. I told him that he was hurting me. Marvin then asked me why I had gotten the extension on the restraining order. I told him that I needed to protect myself. Marvin told me that he would never hurt me. I brought up him leaving slanderous posters and pornographic videotapes about me in my neighborhood and at my work. He denied knowing anything about it. I didn't see him leave, so I stayed in my car and called police.

Witness Statement: As I walked to the front of the building I passed by a car with some people I know that come to the gym often. There was a tall black guy leaning on the driver's side of a smaller car. He was speaking to a Filipino female sitting in the car. It looked like they were having an intense conversation. They weren't yelling at each other, though.

The Sport One

"Before, I had a practical college-student car," says Josh Sterns, who just graduated from SDSU. "A '97 Dodge Stratus, base model, five speed, no automatic anything. Reliable. It got me around."

"Whenever I would go home to L.A. to visit my family, I would go to this automotive row and check the cars out. And the Nissan Xterra was the only SUV I liked, as far as the design. It's got a younger look to it. The Pathfinder is more the family model, and the Xterra is the sport one. It's supposed to look rugged, with the heavy-looking rack on the top. It even comes with a first-aid kit."

"Over Thanksgiving vacation, I was staying with my brother and his wife, and they went to Target so I rode along, and the Nissan dealership was right across the street."

"I went there just to look and appease my appetite for a minute. And the salesman walks out, really friendly and all. I said, 'Just looking at the Xterra. I'm not buying anything.' He said, 'We have one of those as advertised specials in the back. Take a look at it.'"

"The advertised special is the one they put in the paper to get you in there, and they only have one of them at that price. The normal price for the Xterra is $22,300, but they were asking $16,900 for this one. It had the V-6, 190 horsepower, an automatic transmission, manual windows, and manual locks. Air and a radio/CD player came with it, and a tow package. It's supposed to be able to tow 6000 pounds."

"My uncle has been a car dealer for 25 years, so I called him ten times while we were making the deal, just to make sure all the details were the best I could do. He assured me that the advertised special really is the lowest price the dealer can go with.

"I convinced myself that I could afford it, even though I had intended to wait until I graduated and had a job and a safe paycheck."

"After I bought the Xterra, I drove several times to Vegas and to Mammoth. I put 4000 miles on it the first two months. It's such a good trip vehicle, I started planning to work two jobs during June and July and save up as much as I could before August and then take off and drive around the country and visit friends. I hadn't imagined that I was going to get paid to drive around the country and visit my friends."

"It turns out I'll be working as a counselor at a summer camp for teens in New Hampshire. I'm going to be two hours from Montreal, two or three hours from Boston, so I'll be able to pile the other counselors into the truck and take road trips on the weekends. I've already got tickets to see a game at Fenway. The Dodgers are playing the Red Sox on June 11, and I've got two tickets. I grew up in L.A. and worked at Dodger Stadium during high school, so it's going to be a thrill.

"And my Xterra will make the trip all the better."

Mommy's Mad

Last Saturday I got mad. I don't get mad very often. I'd been building up to this particular tantrum for the past few months. Jack has been busy. Jack's always busy. Since the first of the year, Jack has been busier than normal. In addition to his more-than-full-time job as a magazine editor, Jack took on too many extracurricular activities.

First, Jack took a screenwriting class in February and March. Every Monday evening, when Angela had pitching clinic from 5:30 to 6:30 for her softball team, Jack went to class. His class ran from 6 to 9. The first pitching clinic, I sent Rebecca with Angela. "You'll need a catcher," I told Angela. "I don't know how to catch. Rebecca does. Besides, I'll be watching Lucy and Johnny and Ben." Angela went. Rebecca went. They didn't like going without a parent. "Everyone else had a mom or dad with them," Angela said.

Over the next few weeks, Jack missed a couple of classes to take Angela to pitching clinic. She still didn't go to as many as she should have.

When screenwriting class finished, Jack turned his attention to the yearbook. Two years ago, I signed Jack up to be the yearbook advisor at the small Catholic academy where our kids go to school. Jack is a talented editor and designer. In March and April, he scheduled yearbook meetings after school and on weekends. I tried to be a good, supportive spouse. After all, I was the one who got him into the yearbook-advisor position in the first place.

One Saturday as Jack loaded up his car to head off to an all-morning yearbook meeting, he said, "I'll meet you at Johnny's T-ball game. I promise things will slow down as soon as I get the yearbook done."

After Jack got the yearbook sent off to the printer, he was appointed to the executive fund-raising committee at school. Last year, the school purchased some land in San Marcos. They're trying to build a permanent facility so they can move out of the commercial space they occupy now. Because of Jack's expertise, he was named head of the publicity committee. During April, Jack spent long hours attending meetings and designing fund-raising brochures. He also got roped into playing in a band with some friends at church. Between fund-raising meetings, he started going to band rehearsals.

Finally, three weeks ago, Jack signed up to take a two-week photography course at North County Camera. He's been interested in photography for a long time. In the past year or so, he's begun taking family portraits for friends. Half the Christmas cards we received last year contained pictures Jack had taken.

Last week, Jack had a class or a meeting or a rehearsal every night except Thursday. I tried not to complain. Every night, I made dinner and got the kids fed and cleaned up the kitchen and did the whole bath and bedtime routine by myself. Some nights, I was still awake when Jack got home. Other nights I wasn't.

Saturday morning, Jack slept in. I got up with the kids at 6:30 and went downstairs to make breakfast. I planned to take Angela and Lucy to Target when it opened at 8:00. Angela needed a birthday present for a party she was going to that afternoon. Lucy needed craft materials for a class project. Jack was scheduled to spend most of the day taking pictures at a first Holy Communion. He had to leave the house a little after 9:00. Sunday he would be away all day at photography class and band rehearsal.

I stood at the kitchen counter and asked the kids, "What do you want for breakfast?"

No one answered. I asked again. The kids stared at the TV. Somewhere in my gut, my frustration at spending another long weekend by myself with the kids exploded like a depth charge.

"WHAT DO YOU WANT FOR BREAKFAST?" I bellowed.

"Okay, Mom," Rebecca and Angela and Lucy and Ben muttered.

As I slammed open the cupboard where I keep the bread, I heard Jack get out of bed. I heard the stairs creak as I got plates out of another cupboard and threw them down on the counter.

"Can I do that for you?" Jack asked. He reached for the butter knife and glanced at the sourdough bread in the toaster.

"NO," I told him.

"I'm happy to help," he said.

"No," I said and started to cry. "That's not your job. Your job is to go off and have fun and pursue your hobbies and take pictures and play in a band. My job is to stay at home and feed the kids junk food and let them watch too much TV and play on the computer too much so you can be mad at me for that." I dissolved into sobs.

Jack held me for a moment. He took the bread from the toaster and slathered it with butter. He carried the plates into the family room.

While the kids ate, Jack told me, "I'm really sorry. I didn't know everything would pile up like this. I promise things will be better next week."

When I took Angela and Lucy to Target, I felt so guilty for yelling that I bought Jack a new shirt. He wore it for the rest of the day.
