Haughty Arrogance

Kudos to you for your article about attorney Mary Prévost's lawsuit against the government for sponsoring and inviting illegal blood draws for drunk driving arrests, and kudos to her for that valiant fight ("His Eyes Were Red and Glassy," "City Lights," August 11).

It is disgusting that the government and their judges and appeals courts do not appreciate the counterproductive irony in advancing a public policy of breaking the law to enforce it. We claim to be a nation of laws, but that boast finds a home only in civics books and international propaganda: the reality is that there is rampant lawlessness practiced by the so-called law enforcers across our fruited plain, and the judiciary not only turn a blind eye to the scams, but they expressly endorse and enable it.

While Prévost was making her attacks on the illicit scheme down there, I was making similar attacks on the illegal blood draws in Riverside and San Bernardino Counties, and the powers that be here are the same as down there: "We can break the law to enforce it, because we are government."

That haughty arrogance explains why the youth of today have diminishing respect for the rule of law and why peoples around the world have no respect for our claims of being a nation of laws. Nor do I. Revolution might be the only solution now.

Damned Straight

I couldn't concur more with Barbarella's assessment of the effect gay men have on property values ("Diary of a Diva," August 11). Three years ago, I moved from North County to a cottage in Kensington. Soon thereafter, two pairs of gay doctors moved in on either side of me. Four men, four male incomes, no kids. They tore out all the landscaping, ripped up the carpeting to reveal 1911-era oak floors, and their new furniture blew my college-era Ikea and rattan out of the water. Who the hell did these guys think they were, moving in and screwing up the neighborhood? My little 500-square-foot cottage looked shabby by comparison. So I called on the only person I knew with any sense of style: my mom. We ripped up weeds; we planted little English flowers. I repainted the trim a rich espresso color. By the time my new bride moved in, things looked damn straight — er, shipshape. Oh, whatever.

Unfortunately I was renting, so the only person who benefited from this gay renovation was my landlord. My wife and I just bought a condo in Scripps Ranch. I drove by it yesterday, and my stomach did a slow flip-flop at the sight of the rows and rows and rows of anonymous, fearful little white boxes. What was wrong with this picture? It looked so button-down and so North County that my heart quailed.

I already have the new bathroom paint picked out — pear.

I Opted Out

Thank you for publishing the story on Polyheme ("Bad Blood," July 28). I opted out of this study when it started and was interviewed on the news — seems I was one of the few who opted out — probably one of the few who even heard about it. I was mailed a few silly plastic wrist bracelets that they expect me to wear for 24/7 till the study ends, which is ridiculous!

We need more of these kinds of stories, and I hope there will be some follow-up. Thanks again!! Thumbs up to Matt Potter.

So True

Thank you! Thank you to Kara Murtey (Letters, August 11). I don't know why it took me so long to realize what she said was so true. I

Scam Wizards

By Don Bauder

This is a tale of an author and an alchemist. One writes books about corporate governance, and the other says he can make mercury into gold. That's a feat that alchemists and assorted mystics of the Middle Ages, who claimed they could transform base metals into gold, couldn't have pulled off.

The author, San Diego attorney Michael D. Spadacini, and the self-proclaimed alchemist, former San Diegan and jailbird William L. Telander, are among a group of companies and individuals charged by the Securities and Exchange Commission with running a "hype and dump" fraud. Allegedly, they were selling unregistered shares of Illinois-based Wind Farming, which supposedly was selling energy windmills to farmers but mainly was a fantasy pumped up by a publicity machine.

The charges were filed in late July. Last week in federal court in Chicago, the company agreed to a permanent injunction barring it from breaking securities laws. Preliminary injunctions were instituted against Telander, San Diego penny stock peddler Anthony M. Necoechea, and companies that had been set up to sell U.S. Wind Farming stock. Telander's assets have been frozen, and he has resigned as head of the company. He is now in Napa Valley.

In the early 1990s, Telander was running a supposed foreign currency trading operation, Southwest International Exchange, from the basement of his grandmother's house on Eagle Street. He promised annual returns of 25 to 41.6 percent to investors from San Diego and Orange counties and assured them that their funds reposed safely in Switzerland. This pitch was similar to that of J. David Dominelli, whose Ponzi scheme had rocked the community less than a decade earlier.

Alas, history did a rerun. Telander's investors didn't get their money. In 1994, he admitted to defrauding 380 victims of $11 million. He was sentenced to 37 months in prison and served half the term, later finding his way to the Chicago area.

Telander admits that some of his Southwest International Exchange investors' money went into his so-called Philadelphia Project, named for an experiment that Albert Einstein had run decades earlier in that city. Telander provided the funds to a Texas A&M University chemistry professor, John O'M. Bockris, to experiment with modern-day alchemy in his laboratory. They claimed they turned lead and mercury into gold; skeptics cocked their eyebrows.

Telander fed the university $200,000. A friend of Telander's, Joe Champion, helped in the lab. Champion landed in jail too. Champion "was cleaning out my bank account — $35,000 a day," claims Telander, but Champion went to the slammer for an unrelated charge of passing a bad check.

Texas A&M was embarrassed. In Texas, the butt of a dumbbell joke is almost invariably a "Texas Aggie." One professor said Bockris's research had turned into "a typical Aggie joke." Another said Bockris was "a disgrace to science" who was "consorting with known stock swindlers to support his sleazy so-called research." The Aggie professors were particularly suspicious, because Bockris had been involved with questionable science before. He had declared that cold fusion — purported nuclear fusion at or near room temperature — was "the greatest discovery in energy of the century." Cold fusion has been touted but not convincingly demonstrated.

The university investigated the $200,000 gift and vindicated Bockris, but the faculty was unappeased. Bockris has since retired and could not be reached for comment. However, he wrote an online paper defending the whole adventure.

Telander has not lost his enthusiasm, as a wide-ranging interview reveals. "We did positively prove we could convert mercury into gold," he insists. "But it was a political hot potato." He says that one time in Mexico officials of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and Federal Bureau of Investigation told him he had to

Anything Is Possible

By Ernie Grimm

In 1980, the city of Escondido stood on the verge of a decade of explosive growth.

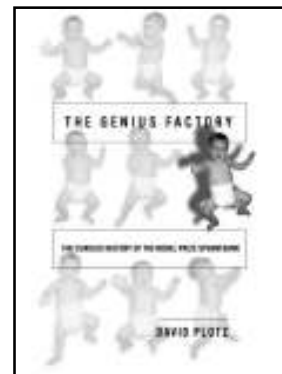

Within ten years, the town of 30,000 would become a city of 120,000. And on a ten-acre ranch outside of town, a millionaire scientist and inventor named Robert Graham dreamed of that kind of growth. But the expansion of Escondido wasn't his goal. The expansion of a race of genius babies was Graham's dream. Already, the seed of proven geniuses chilled in liquid nitrogen vats stored in an underground vault on his ranch. And Graham spent every day courting the brightest minds of science and industry, flat-

Sperm Bank, despite the fact that not one child was ever produced from the sperm of a Nobel Prize laureate. His most famous Nobel laureate deposit came from William Shockley, the inventor of the transistor and the founding father of Silicon Valley.

Shockley's involvement is the reason author David Plotz first heard about Graham's repository. "When I was ten years old," said Plotz, "I heard my father, as he was reading a newspaper article in 1980, start to wax indignant about this crazy idea. I remember him saying, 'What's wrong with Shockley?' It just stuck in my head, and the name Shockley became a symbol of science gone wrong for me. Then, 20 years later, I came across Shockley's name in a newspaper article, something about Silicon Valley, and bells went off in my head."

The bells in Plotz's head became a minor obsession for Plotz. The obsession grew into several articles for the online magazine Slate and finally blossomed into the recently released book The Genius Factory, in which Plotz finds and talks to mothers, children, and sperm donors tied to the Repository for Germinal Choice, which closed in 1999. In a late-July phone interview, I talked with the 31-year-old writer about his book.

what happened to the children captivate you?

I read that article about Silicon Valley about the time that my own first child was being born, and I just figured,

"Wow, what happened?" It occurred to me that these children had been part of the most radical experiment in human genetic engineering in American history, and no one knew what had happened. It was known that these children had existed for 20 years, known that these children were kids — had been born — but who they were and how they turned out and who the donors were and how that whole experiment had kind of gone down was all unknown, and it was sort of a fascinating mystery for a genetic age. I thought I would try to solve it.

This Isn't a Free Library

By Joe Deegan

Late last summer, the New York City-based Library Journal named then-San Diego mayor Dick Murphy the 2004 "Politician of the Year." What attracted his editors' attention, the magazine's editor in chief, John N. Berry III, wrote in the September 15 issue, was "the rare combination of a mayor giving the city library system as high a priority as other crucial city services...and sticking with would offer the latest in information services with state-of-the-art technology. The state of California has awarded a $20 million grant to help get the project off the ground. That money must be returned if the library is not completed by 2008. A major requirement

Dick Murphy

it even when it became a campaign issue." The article acknowledged Murphy's efforts to expand the San Diego branch library system. But it especially praised his leadership of the campaign for a new main library downtown.

The proposed new library would cost $150 million and of the project is that the San Diego Public Library Foundation raise $50 million in private funding. The Centre City Development Corporation will provide the remaining $80 million.

Saying that "we deserve a world-class library," Murphy led the city council's decision on April 19 of this year to spend $6.5 million on completing architectural designs and clearing the site for the new library. But only six days later, Murphy announced his resignation. Library proponents were left reeling. In an April 27 Union-Tribune story, Martin Stolz quoted major donor David Copley as saying, "The sheer confusion and chaos at City Hall...may well scare [other] donors away."

Donors are crucial to the plan, because the city council required the San Diego Public Library Foundation to raise $33 million of the private funds before construction could begin late this summer. The council established a deadline of July 31. In the meantime, according to a July 5 U-T story by Stolz, the San Diego County Taxpayers Association has voiced opposition to the project and the local chamber of commerce is noncommittal after initially supporting it. The chamber has complained of having difficulties obtaining accurate information about the library's construction.

At the end of July, I called Councilman Jim Madaffer, who became the point man for the new library after Murphy's departure, to inquire about its progress. The library is to occupy the blocks bounded by Park Boulevard, J Street, 11th Avenue, and K Street. A police garage has operated on the block's northeast corner for the past 20 years. The city had the garage torn down this spring and built a new one on Federal Avenue. Madaffer tells me that "remediation" already is going on at the old garage site. "When the city council appropriated additional funding for further design of the library, that included initial site remediation, the idea being that, since the police garage is being vacated anyway, the site's got to be remediated anyway."

In the area of funding, "Things are moving on track quietly, as you would expect," said Madaffer. "The philanthropic community operates much like diplomacy. Most of it is done behind the scenes. And the interest in the main library, I would say, is very high. Capital dollars are clearly available. We hope to announce some major gifts in the next few months so we can follow through on our promise to the citizens of San Diego to build a new library."

What about the July 31 deadline? "Based on construction going on over at the library's new site," Madaffer tells me, "we pushed the deadline out a little ways."

"According to what decision of the city council?" The question is community gadfly Mel Shapiro's. I am listening to him in his Normal Heights apartment. "The library proponents seem to do whatever they want," says Shapiro, "without regard to legal requirements."

Shapiro raises another concern. He rejects Madaffer's contention that the police garage was going to be moved "anyway." A July 14 SignOn-SanDiego story supports this: "The old Central Division garage at 11th and K streets," the article says, "has to be torn Shapiro, that cost amounts to adding another expense to the already $150 million library price tag. On July 17, the Union-Tribune reported that the newly completed garage cost the city

Proposed site of new library

Neal Obermeyer

down to make way for the new downtown library." And an April 13 San Diego city manager's report on new funding for the library cites "demolition of the existing police garage" as one of the costs the funding would pay for.

The cost of the new police garage is not in the library's budget. But, according to $10.7 million. "It seems funny," says Shapiro, that a police garage would be part of a library's cost.

CITY LIGHTS

go see Interpol, the international criminal police organization. "There were guys on the roof with machine guns," claims Telander. The alleged Interpol sleuth said the Chamber of Mines of South Africa was told that "your technology will destroy the whole precious metals industry. I can't believe somebody hasn't taken you out."

Back in the early 1990s when investors couldn't get their money, they were told that U.S., Swiss, and South African officials were secretly tying up Telander's assets because they fretted that the Philadelphia Project would toss the world into financial chaos. Few investors bought the alibi.

Now hear this: Telander asserts he has a process for extracting high-priced metals such as platinum and palladium from the tailings of closed-down mines. What's left over "can be turned into an excellent replacement for portland cement," he asserts.

CITY LIGHTS

"The only waste we have is salt." But he has a problem attracting capital: "I have to be careful how I raise money because of my past."

He claims to have developed a very special mineral: "We can stop a 44-magnum bullet at ten inches," he avers. Both of these purported inventions are now controlled by U.S. Wind Farming, he says. "The SEC [has] no idea of these assets."

The filing by the Securities and Exchange Commission mentions windmills — not purported platinum extraction from mine tailings. The agency charges that Telander put "fraudulent and misleading" press releases on the company website. For example, the company said in a press release that it had a $10 million grant from the Polish government to develop a wind farming cooperative. There was no such agreement, says the agency. And he never told investors that he had previously gone to the hoosegow and been permanently enjoined from committing securities fraud.

According to the agency's

complaint, Spadaccini and other individuals set up companies with names like Mad World Capital, Kyoto Capital, Oronex, and Ashlin Capital to sell unregistered shares in Wind Farming. Spadaccini was selling the shares to get fees for his work in the adventure, says the agency. Telander issued the companies 150 million shares in the year ended March of 2005. More than 60 million were sold to the public at prices from effectively zero to around five cents, says the commission.

Necoechea alone sold 22 million unregistered shares to the public through an unregistered firm he controlled, according to the agency. He is not a registered broker with the National Association of Securities Dealers. Regulatory filings indicate that a Tony Necoechea twice failed his brokerage exams in the 1990s while with Desert Mountain Securities, a penny stock brokerage that handled the stocks promoted by Melvin Lloyd Richards, a San Diego stock tout who ended up in prison. After four days trying to reach Necoechea's lawyer, I gave up.

CITY LIGHTS

Spadaccini has written several business books, including The Complete Corporate Guide and The Essential Corporation Handbook. The books show executives how to fill out government forms — something he is charged with not doing. His online report, LearnAboutLaw.com, dishes out corporate legal advice. "I love your column, but I don't want to be in it," he says. He will only say, "I don't think forming an entity is a crime. I represented Wind Farming but not the individuals from April of 2004 to November of 2004. I did not know about the felony until everything was under way."

I'd love to know one thing: were the investors told that Wind Farming controlled this wondrous technique for extracting platinum and palladium from old mine tailings? Or about the mineral that can stop a 44-magnum at ten inches? Anybody believing such stories would pay $5000, not 5 cents, for the stock. But sources such as Dan Gregus, assistant regional director of the SEC in Chicago, aren't talking.

As punishment for his 1990s Southwest International Exchange scam, the federal government ordered Telander to pay $6.7 million to investors. But he figures he owes them $15 million. He is confident he will pay them back. How? "Further exploitation of the technology from the Philadelphia Project," he says.

Oh. ■

No, the first thing I did was write a story for Slate saying this is the little bit we know about the Repository for Germinal Choice. If you were involved in this and would like your story to be told, contact me.

Did you have any inkling as to what these children would be like?

No, except little bits written about a couple of kids. But I really didn't have a sense about who the donors had turned out to be and where the kids were and whether they turned out to be geniuses or whether they were just regular kids or how this all affected them.

Did you have any opinions about sperm banking before

you launched this project? Was it something you had ever thought about?

You know, I didn't think about them very much, except in college I had heard people talk about being sperm donors. And then, when my own wife and I were pregnant, we had to do some minor fertility intervention. So I have seen some of the fertility-industry complex at work. I had a sense of how infertility and the pressures it puts on people were affecting people in my generation. But of sperm banks themselves, I didn't really know anything. It was all an education.

Do you think Robert Graham thought he was doing something to save the human race by spreading the seed of geniuses through his sperm bank?

Absolutely. That was his goal. One thing that was surprising to me was to discover the way in which all modern sperm banks are fundamentally eugenic sperm banks.

They don't have the explicit eugenic goals that Robert Graham did for his bank, but they effectively are eugenic because that's what women want. Women won't select donors who aren't tall, who aren't smart, who don't have perfectly clean health histories. So [sperm banks] are forced to buy for commercial purposes — to become eugenic. And parents, in their kind of private way, act eugenically.

My impression of Graham and Shockley was that they were products of the explosive scientific age of mid-century America. They were true believers in the idea that science will solve all our problems and answer all our questions.

Absolutely. A perfect characterization. They were part of that 1950s, 1960s scientific age, the Sputnik era. They had a sense that science is incredibly important to the national interest, and science is capable of these amazing things.

There seems to be an "out with religion, in with science" aspect to it.

I think that is exactly right. One of the interesting points that I have talked about with people is that Graham was, politically, extremely conservative, but not by the standards of today, because he was basically atheistic. I think science was his god, and rationality was his god.

You mention that your father was of that mold, but he was disgusted by the scheme?

Yes, right. My own father was of that mold. But he was repulsed I think by [the Repository for Germinal Choice] because the science of it was no good. You have an optometrist and a physicist trying to do genetics that they don't really understand. And also he thought it was an unseemly way to use science. Aesthetically, he was repulsed by it.

Did your father's Jewish background contribute to his repulsion?

A couple of people have asked me that. I don't actually think it does. In my conversations with my father about it, that would never come up.

In the book you say, "We live in William Shockley's world." You're referring to his invention of the transistor, which made possible the computers we all use. And you mention how, as a man with no naval experience, he figured out a logarithm, which was very successful, to predict where German U-boats would be found. I could see how a man with that kind of success identifying and solving problems would buy into the idea that human problems could be solved similarly through eugenics.

That is exactly it. And both of them were like that. Shockley was truly a gigantic figure in American science invention, but Graham was no slouch. Graham's invention of shatterproof plastic eyeglasses was an incredibly important invention. It saved literally thousands of people from blindness every year. He also was one of the pioneers of contact lenses. He made lots of important advances in contact lens technology. He was a great inventor. They were both men who made such incredible contributions to American life, to improving the way we live. Yet they had these odd side interests which stain their legacies.

Do you think the Southern California setting is no accident?

I absolutely think that is no accident. It might not be a picture of Southern California today, but the whole venture seemed to be an example of Southern California libertarianism, in a sense of here is a place where anything is possible, where you are allowed to try anything. It's where the great new American businesses were being built and where the greatest liberty of ideas was occurring...the sense that here is America and possibility and that we can try.

And I think that Graham at once represents the sense of possibility, that you can try anything, and that this is a place where there are no rules and anything is allowed to be done as long as it doesn't raise property taxes. And yet also at the same time represents a kind of conservatism in the sense of social control, that he's got this idea of a kind of libertarianism, but libertarianism that will ultimately fuel this intensive control over these sort of idiotic masses. And I think geographically — in the book I probably make more of this than there is to be made — but that Escondido is right in between the [conservative] Central Valley and the [more liberal] Southern California coast...

I remember that part of the book, and I have to challenge you on your geography. Escondido is a half hour from San Diego and three and a half hours from the Central Valley.

No, really? Wait, I'm looking at a map.... Okay, you're right. It is a long way from the Valley.

Did you visit Graham's ranch in Escondido?

Yes, I went out and met Mrs. Graham. She is still there.

What were your impressions of the area? Did your visit enlighten you at all on the culture surrounding Graham's sperm bank?

Yes, coming from the East Coast, one thing I sensed was a combined existence of great natural beauty and incredible development — possibility and nature mixed up together. And there's a sense that it's a place where you're allowed to do whatever the hell you want. Here's this land that is extraordinarily beautiful, but you know that it was your right as an American to take it and try something. So it was enlightening to me in that sense.

My feelings toward the sperm donor you call Donor White, whom you helped unite with one of his 19 sperm-bank babies, vacillated. At times, I was touched by the paternal feelings he showed toward his biological offspring, especially in contrast to the reckless seed spreaders you also met. But other times he struck me as a silly old man who should have adopted children instead of donating sperm.

I am totally on the first side of that. I think he is in fact a wonderful man. The one thing that I wanted to make very clear as I was writing about him was how completely lovable he is.

The scrapbook of information he kept on his sperm-bank kids, that didn't strike you as creepy?

Yes, that was the particular statement where I really wanted people not to think that it was creepy. It was incredibly neat and sweet. There was nothing creepy about it. And frankly, as a father myself, as a new father, I found it so moving.

ing. He wasn't doing this in a freakish way at all. He was doing it in a way that you want someone who has some sense of paternal obligation to do it. Like it killed him that he couldn't know who these children were, that he couldn't be there for them, and so this was the closest that he could get. And it was purely an act of love. ■

Not a free library

ment Corporation, which has pledged to contribute $80 million to build the library if private donations meet expectatations, is chaired by Harold Sadler. Sadler is also the chairman of the board of Tucker Sadler Architects, which, in a joint venture with Rob Wellington Quigley Architects, is designing the new library.

Last year, Mel Shapiro filed a conflict-of-interest complaint against Sadler with the San Diego Ethics Commission. The commission pursued the complaint, and Sadler "stipulated" to violations of two sections of the San Diego Municipal Code. He admitted that he voted to approve Centre City Development Corporation budgets in 2003 and 2004 that contained appropriations for the new main library project. He also admitted that he voted for the issuance of bonds to fund building of the library. As part of his stipulation, Sadler promised not to vote on any further items affecting his own company.

According to Shapiro, when the development corporation revoted on these issues, Sadler abstained. But Shapiro raises the question: "Are development corporation members going to vote against the financial interests of their chairman? I've never seen that happen," he adds. "And members abstain like mad over at the corporation anyhow, because they all have conflicts."

Meanwhile, Shapiro says, in an ongoing dispute, the development corporation won't pay $100 million it acknowledges owing the city. He wonders, "Why shouldn't they put that money toward the city budget while we're in tough financial times these days instead of spending it on a big new library?"

Shapiro mentions that Councilwoman Donna Frye voiced related sentiments when she cast the lone vote against spending the $6.5 million for the library. In an April 20 Union-Tribune article, Martin Stolz quoted Frye: "I think it is disingenuous to tell people, once again, that it will have no impact on the general fund," she said. "This isn't a free library." The article continued, "Several council members joined Frye in expressing concern at the prospect of using general fund money to finance the library project, especially in light of the city's tight budget and a $1.4 billion deficit in the pension system."

Councilman Madaffer has a different point of view. "The current fiscal problems we are having are shorter-term issues," he tells me, "and a main library is a 100-year project, an icon for the ages, if you will. You need a cultural icon designed for San Diego to last over the next 100 years."

But Shapiro notes that early in the spring the city council voted to cut back branch library hours to save money. "I think these downtown library people just have an edifice complex," he says. ■

"I now have 20/15 vision."

I knew I'd never need to wear glasses or contacts ever again, but I was shocked at how much my vision has improved. Everything is clear and sharp now. I can see colors and details now that I couldn't see before. I can read street signs from further away. My vision is far better than it was with my glasses or contacts. It was so easy, I only wish I'd done it sooner."

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Illustration by Rick Geary

Dear Matthew Alice:

Why do judges wear black robes? Do they come in different styles? What's the bill to the taxpayers so they can dress up?

— Quinn, the net

Ma Alice has spent so much time in the house of black robes, we figured she'd have some good input. She wanted no part of it. But Ma Alice has never been accused of having a great attitude. So we had to fall back on more boring sources. Seems that if you're in the market for a choir robe, you can probably pick up a graduation robe and a judge's robe, too, without leaving the store. Or the catalog, anyway. Manufacturingwise, robes is robes is apparently robes. Perusing an old Jostens book, somewhere past the school rings and mortar boards, we find a basic black judicial number called the "Decision" robe, with traditional full-swinging hemline and wrist-length bell sleeves. Probably gives you that dramatic sweep of fabric as you charge off the bench after a hard day of sentencing. It has a very conservative square yoke, front and back, with tasteful gathers at the yoke and sleeve caps. The perfect ensemble for an easy day of low-profile arraignments.

If you're expecting the press or you need a slightly stronger air of authority to augment your bailiff's sidearm, how about the "Judgment" model? Again, a simple shoulder, front, and back yoke is highlighted with machine-sewn fluting and braided cord and button accents at the back. This model comes with optional button-cuff sleeve insets for the traditional bell sleeves for that all-important pulled-together look and to cover the fact that underneath you're wearing golf shorts and an Izod.

If you're expecting Court TV, consider the "Justice," with satin-lined bell sleeves with inset cuffs. Over-the-shoulder V-shaped panels across the back yoke meet in a double-V at the back. Coming or going, you have the definite air of a decision-maker not to be trifled with. Considering you have a choice of ten fabrics from polyester to silk, you can pay anywhere from $100 to over $500 for just the right robe and just the right statement. Or maybe if Mom is handy with a sewing machine she can whip you up a few one-of-a-kind ensembles that will be the talk of the courthouse.

The state Government Code 68110 specifies that in open court, while the court's business is being discussed, judges must wear robes. It doesn't say the robes must be black, but it does say the Judicial Council will specify those details. Judicial Council rule 54.5 says that no matter how bad you think you look in black and would really prefer a nice mauve robe, black is the only acceptable color. The robe also must extend from the shoulders in front and back to at least knee level and have sleeves that come to the wrists. So, a judge's robe is basically a state-mandated uniform. And, by the way, GC 68110 says the judge foots the bill for the robe, not the taxpayers.

Educating Doritos

What's the world coming to when a big, fresh, crunchy corporation like Pepsico/Frito-Lay can't keep straight what it's sold and what it hasn't? We knew Kelly wasn't going to be any help, but we sure had our money on Jared. Poor guy, he was duped by his own employers, who seem to have very short memories. Well, I guess a failed product doesn't have the same magic as the current best-seller. So, when I got two e-mails from irate Doritos fans, I felt compelled to reveal Jared and Frito-Lay as liars, liars, chips on fire.

This is about the question from Rudedog, who asked you about the Sour Cream and Onion Doritos. He was correct. Doritos had a sour cream and onion flavor in the early 1980s on their regular triangle chip in a dark green bag. I remember specifically because my buddy Jeff and I ate an entire bag in one sitting. This is not to be confused with Doritos Thins of the early 1990s.

— Brian, the net

Re: the sour cream and onion Doritos story, the folks you contacted are wrong if they say the flavor only existed in the early '90s. I distinctly remember being on vacation in Illinois during the summer of 1979 with my dad and nana and seeing green bags of Sour Cream n' Onion Doritos that were NOT available in our hometown of Seattle. My dad and I loved them and often spoke of how that was the only place we'd ever seen them, and we looked in different locations that we traveled to for years afterward with no success.

Now, I'm not saying the flavor was released throughout the whole U.S., mind you. But I AM saying that the flavor was at least released in the Midwest in a test market. I'd bet my life on it.

— Jessica Olson, Everett, WA

Padres Puzzle

Here's what we know: (1) The Padres are in first place in the National League West. (2) The Padres have lost more games than they've won.

Why is the NL West, in all of Major League Baseball, the only division wherein no team has a .500 record after four months of play? This is a unique happening, has never been seen since Major League Baseball re-organized itself into divisions back in 1969. Simple-minded observers and paid media hacks blame lousy pitching, lousy hitting, and lousy fielding. If that were all there is to it, why haven't other teams — any other team, in any other division, since 1969 — fielded equally lousy pitching, lousy hitting, and lousy fielding?

There is something impossible to believe about the 2005 Padres. Something sports and science cannot explain. Perhaps, sports and science are not allowed to explain, if you get my meaning.

The job falls to us. "What is the real reason the Padres lose more games than they win, yet still remain number one?" To get at the truth we'll need to safari into strange, unknown territory. We'll begin our journey at the trailhead of sports and science, the lead of a Weekly World News think piece:

HOW TO TELL IF YOUR PROSTITUTE IS AN EXTRATERRESTRIAL.

Here, from government experts, are ten warning signs that the prostitute you've picked up is a sinister space babe:

1. Looks too good to be true. If that curvy cutie working the street corner is a dead ringer for Catherine Zeta-Jones, odds are the gorgeous star isn't moonlighting. A shape-shifting ET has probably adopted the form of your dream girl.

2. Sex was "unbelievable." If the encounter was "everything you've always fantasized about," chances are the memory was implanted by ETs.

3. Abductions. San Diego Padres report abductions by inhabitants of Alpha Centauri. Space creatures strip ballplayers, probe and prod, then complain that Petco Park was designed to give humanoids an advantage.

4. Squeamish about spanking. Terrestrial prostitutes are willing to perform virtually every sexual act if the money is right. But ETs don't like having their butts touched.

5. The San Diego Padres' starting nine no longer pat each other on the fanny when celebrating a home run.

(Warning Signs 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 were redacted by the Department of Homeland Cleanliness.)

I am saddened to report that Trapper & Predator Caller Magazine did not publish my latest letter to the editor complaining about the Padres' won/loss record and the subsequent world sports media cover-up. It's beginning to look like somebody has gotten to them.

We learn more from Ladies Home Journal. A headline screams, "10 GREAT PLACES TO MEET A MAN."

1. Comedy classes. Acting classes are filled with gorgeous nymphets and men who make great shopping buddies. Your average stand-up class, on the other hand, is a festival of testosterone.

2. Baseball diamonds. Even if you know nothing about the game, you can still enjoy sitting outside on a summer night with a bag of peanuts and a hot dog. The beer line should be packed with fans, so get behind a cute one and ask him about his favorite team, advises a 39-year-old from Vancouver.

3. Avoid San Diego Padres fan-club meetings. If anyone shows up, they are likely to be looking for food.

(Great Places to Meet Men numbers 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 were redacted by the Department of Patriotism.)

UFO Magazine scoops the world.

It is alleged that the U.S. government is holding a number of alien bodies. Below is a list of these bodies that the U.S. would have if all the sightings and accounts concerned were true.

Date	Place	Number (of bodies)
22 July 1947	Roswell, N.M.	4
13 Feb 1948	Aztec, N.M.	12
13 Oct 1953	Dutton, MO	4
May 1989	South Africa	2 (living)
August 2005	Petco Park	9 (unconscious)

And Flying Saucer Review puts it all in perspective.

"The whole [alien] phenomenon involves a mass of features that conflict with modern science, and many researchers now believe that more than one type of being may be involved, some of them originating from outer space and some of them of an 'interdimensional' nature..."

Indeed. We have come to the end of our quest. The sack of fumlbers we call the Padres are actually "interdimensional" beings and therefore cannot be expected to know the nuances of professional baseball.

But, wait till next year.

"Today's passage tells us about a slave girl that was pimped twice over. She was being pimped by her master and she was being pimped by Satan," said Pastor Andrea King. King's sermon, The Art of Praise, was based on Acts chapter 16. "The girl earned a great deal of money for her owners by fortune-telling. But after Paul cast out the demon, the Psychic Friends Network was canceled; the dial-a-demon network was disconnected. That's the danger with the power of messing around with Jesus. You may get saved. You can't come into the presence of God too many times without being changed.

"The girl's owners wanted Paul and Silas arrested because they cast the demon out. They had no formal charge, so the authorities arrested them by pulling the race card. The only charge against them was being a Jew. I wonder if someone here can relate," asked Pastor King rhetorically. "Has someone here been pulled over for something, or maybe it would be better to say nothing." Pastor King went on to encourage the congregation to praise God no matter the circumstances.

Pastor Andrea King and her husband Kurt rotate who preaches, Le Tibs, a member of the worship team, said. "It is great having a husband and wife as the senior pastors; they complement each other."

The Kings returned last Wednesday from a trip to Nigeria. "We were in the mother country," commented Pastor Kurt King. "Nigeria is a country where you have nothing, so people have to live by faith. There are none of the materials we have to distract you. Churches in Nigeria are very progressive in how they worship." Kurt King explained that the congregants dance and move freely while they sing. "I was the stuffiest one in the church," he commented. While their worship is progressive, King said their theology is conservative. "Women aren't ordained in Nigeria, but they let Andrea preach," said Kurt King. "The leadership in Africa doesn't want to ordain women, but the people do." I asked Pastor Kurt King about Seventh Day Adventists' stance on women pastors. "In America, the General Conference still does not believe women should be ordained. When other churches are discussing homosexual pastors, we are discussing whether women should be pastors. We are part of the South Eastern Conference that allows women as pastors."

Maranatha is distinct from other churches because they believe Christians should meet on Saturdays. "The Bible tells us in the Ten Commandments, don't kill or commit adultery. In this same book of the law, God says to remember the Sabbath day," said Andrea King. King said the Sabbath is the seventh day of the week, the day God rested after creating the universe. "We take this literally, because we believe in the Ten Commandments. People who meet on Sunday are not following all ten of the commandments."

King said another distinction is their church's emphasis on prophecy and the end times. "Maranatha means the Lord is coming. When Jesus returns, He won't be in an Internet chat room or on Larry King. The whole earth will know that he returned. He is going to come in the clouds and we are going to meet him in the sky. The dead will jump out of the grave; there will be no doubt about it," said Pastor Andrea King. "We are getting ready for God to come back.

When I say get ready, it's more that we need to let the world know that they need to get their life ready. We need to help people be free from things that bind them on earth. We want to give people as much of heaven as possible, here on earth, so that they can taste a bit of heaven. This way people will be ready because they will want to get out of here."

Andrea King said people will be able to see signs prior to Jesus' return. "Jesus gives several signs in Matthew chapter 24. There are going to be wars, rumors of wars, pestilences, famines, strange things happening with the weather. Even now we are seeing a lot of earthquakes, weather catastrophes, and wars. These are the beginning of sorrows. People should perk up that the end times are happening. We can't keep living like we are living and dying like we are dying. We have to live like we know God is coming. People should look for a spiritual revival, that everyone will have a chance to hear the gospel.

"When Jesus returns we will reign with him for 1000 years in heaven, looking over the books. Everything we have done in this life will be written in the Book of Life. When we are in heaven, we're going to be confused why so-and-so isn't here, he was a good person. Or some people might be in heaven who we don't know how they got there," said Andrea King. "Jeffery Dahmer became a Christian before he died, if some people see him up there, they might have a problem with that. But after we are in heaven, we will deduce that God is right, good, true, and marvelous in our eyes."

I asked Andrea King what happens to a person who does not go to heaven. "A person who dies will eventually be destroyed," replied King. "Seventh Day Adventists do not believe people will spend eternity in hell."

Dear Saffron,

A good friend of mine is about to head down the highway of embarrassment at a giant wedding reception all of us are planning to attend. My wife and I love her like a little sister. We're very concerned for her and want to stop our friend from making a huge ass out of herself at this function. "Rose" has already been dropping hints about someone from the wedding party whom she's only spent time with as a friend for less than a week. She's planning to put the moves on him at the reception, yet she doesn't know if that person feels the same way about her. Rose has been single for a while and is a fun-loving, intelligent, lovely lady. However, instead of just being herself and having fun at parties, she's become the joke of the party. Rose is gaining a reputation as a crazed guy chaser. It's put fear into all our male friends. The guys won't come over or hang out with my wife if they know Rose is going to be there. To make the situation worse, Rose's obsession with guys she hardly knows is heightened when she drinks. She has chased guys with such intensity that the whole room notices. How can I talk to her and let her know that this behavior makes her look foolish? I thought that if she heard it from a male point of view, maybe she would listen this time. My wife has tried to talk to Rose. My wife has told her that if she would be her sweet and normal self, she would probably get an offer. She should not have to "give chase" to get attention. I wish Rose would let the fellas come to her instead of hunting them down. How can I talk to my friend without hurting her feelings?

BIG PARTY IN CHULA VISTA

Dear What To Do,

It's sadly perverse how wanting something too much, with all your heart and soul, can sometimes prevent you from getting it. This can happen with love, jobs, an apartment, getting pregnant, you name it. Feeling lonely and like you've been waiting forever for Mr. Right to come along can be terribly depressing. Rose probably feels like she's spent ages waiting for guys to come to her and that her patience hasn't paid off. Now she's resolved to be proactive and grab one before it's too late. I can't blame her. This is a tricky situation, because if you or your wife have another talk with Rose about backing off, you risk humiliating her — no matter how delicate you are. You want to do just the opposite: make her feel so self-accepting, optimistic, and relaxed about romance that she realizes she doesn't have to chase men in a way that makes them nervous and causes them to flee. I think your best bet is to be as honest as you can. Be supportive and kind, and let her know that she is a remarkable, valuable, adorable cutie pie who doesn't need to throw herself at anyone, ever. She's too classy for that, and she just doesn't need to go there. The more her confidence builds (taking the edge off the desperation), the less she'll be inclined to feel like she's sunk unless she goes out with a tranquilizer gun and a big burlap sack and bags herself a dude. You have to appeal to her sense of dignity and self-worth, which might be in short supply right now. A great friend of mine once said to me, when I was in a similar situation to Rose, "Saffron, you're great and someone will be very lucky to get to be with you. You're the prize. You have to remember that and conduct yourself accordingly." Because I admire her and because she really meant it, her words about being the prize made a big impression on me, and I call them to mind from time to time when I need them. Obviously, you can't give another person a sense of self-respect, but you can encourage that feeling in them, over time, with your friendship, frankness, and love. I know it's a tall order, but you sound like wonderful friends — I know you'll give it your best shot.

BestBuys

—EVE KELLY

My husband Patrick is a terrible book snob. Not a literary snob, mind you — he'll read anything that catches his wandering attention, regardless of pedigree — but a book snob. Most of the time, only hardbacks will do. He won't even try to explain it.

Not me. Ever since we unplugged the TV five years ago, I've become a paperback junkie. I'll read the occasional biography or memoir, but most of the time, I'm up to my eyeballs in novels. I plow through them too fast to afford hardbacks all the time, and the bendy covers don't bug me.

These days, however, the bookshelves in the family room are beginning to sag under the weight of books shelved too deep. I thought about trekking around to the used bookstores to unload a few boxes. "Don't bother," said Patrick over his latest hardback. "I'll bet a lot of them already have more paperback novels than they want. Just donate them somewhere and rejoice in your good deed." My friend Bernice added her two cents on behalf of my two cents. "If you want to donate them, I think you might be able to get a deduction on your taxes..." Perfect.

My first stop was with Barbara Bain Mello, EA, of BBM Financial and Tax Services (619-579-5530). "Books are considered a non-cash donation," she told me. "If the value is under $500, it just goes under Itemized Deductions on the Schedule A form. What you need to include is the name of the charitable organization, the date and location of the contribution, a reasonably detailed description — you don't have to write down every book's title, you can just say, '10 paperback novels' — and then the fair market value. For used paperback books that would be thrift store value: I'd say $50 to $1.00 a book.

You kind of do your best estimating, but a tax practitioner can tell you best. Now, if you have hardcover books and they're in excellent condition, they could be worth $10 a book." I could almost hear Patrick chuckling.

"If the value of the books you're donating is over $500," continued Mello, "you still submit the same basic information, but you need Form 8283. On that form, you must also show what your cost was and the date of the acquisition — when you bought the bulk of the items you are donating. You can sometimes get the form at a post office, or you can call 1-800-829-1040, and the government will send it to you. If you have access to a computer, you can download it — the IRS site (www.irs.gov) is user-friendly."

Also crucial, said Mello, was getting a receipt. "All the organizations will give you a receipt. Even when Goodwill, Am Vets, or the Salvation Army picks stuff up from your house, they will leave a receipt. They may not fill it out, in which case it's up to the person donating to fill it out. You should keep the receipts for three years in the case of federal taxes, and four years for state taxes." And, of course, she reminded me as I headed out, "You need to make the claim in the same year that you make the donation."

I started my spree of charitable book donation at what seemed the most likely place: the library. Jose Aponte, director of the San Diego County Library, told me, "We encourage book donations from the public, but the collection has a selection policy, a plan. We accept all books, and if some of them don't go into our collection, they work their way down to the Friends of the Library. They in turn sell the books, and the money goes to support library services. Ultimately, one way or another, your donation goes to support our broad-base bottom line."

What makes it into the collection? "Libraries have broad-based collections that reflect the entire spectrum of thought, philosophy, and politics. We have a Nazi book, a communist book, the whole complement. And if we have 20 Danielle Steel novels, we may not need 21. And the selection policy changes: in the next two years, we'll be working to build up language services. There will be a focus on Spanish-language material. Three years from now, we may shift to Korean."

Aponte said that books could be donated to any one of the 32 county library branches, and also to the two bookmobiles, which make regular stops (branch locations and stops can be found at www.sddl.org). "Just let the staff know they are donations."

At the San Diego City Library's central location (820 E Street, open Monday and Wednesday, noon to 8 p.m.; Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.; Sunday 1 to 5 p.m.), I was told, "We take books anytime, and we give receipts. However, we don't accept encyclopedias, Reader's Digest, or National Geographic. If you want to donate to a city branch, call ahead of time and make sure they have enough room to take them (check www.sandiego.gov/public-library/locations/ for branch locations and hours). If you have a whole bunch of books and want someone to pick them up, call The Friends of the Public Library at 619-542-1724." The Friends of the Public Library's offices are located at 4193 Park Boulevard and are open for walk-in donations on Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Other places to donate:

Disabled American Veterans, 1-800-795-VETS. Limit of two small bags or two small boxes. No textbooks accepted. Will pick up only if books are accompanied by at least one bag of clothing.

St. Vincent DePaul Village, 619-446-2100. Limit of two bags or two boxes. Call to schedule pickup.

Salvation Army, 619-758-1716, 3240 Sports Arena Boulevard. Accepts all books (but no magazines) anytime during business hours, Monday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.

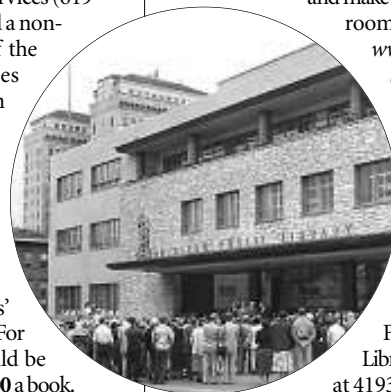

Alvarado Hospital, 619-229-4619, 6655 Alvarado Road. Can accept a limited number of paperback books and magazines (no magazines older than three months) brought to the volunteer office during business hours, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

San Diego Hospice, 619-688-1600, 4311 Third Avenue. Can accept a limited number of books. Call ahead.

My Sister's Closet, 619-299-1474, 3590 Fifth Avenue. Works in conjunction with Battered Women's Services, which provides vouchers for the store. Accepts books Monday through Saturday, between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m.

BACK WHEN

In the Reader

Thirty Years Ago

"I'll give you a dolla for the coat." My sidewalk saleswoman instinct is aroused and practically swallowing the stem from the grapes in outrage, I intone, "Look, lady, feel the material. Genuine London gabardine. It cost my brother-in-law $125 and he wore it just a few times. I couldn't let that coat go for less than...five dollars!"

—"SO YOU'VE BEEN TO ALL THE THRIFT SHOPS..." Barbara Rand, August 21, 1975

Twenty-Five Years Ago

"When I first came to the station, I was ahead of Ted in terms of salary," said News 8 anchorman Michael Tuck, who, at 34, is one year older than Leitner. "My base salary is ahead of his, but he derives income from other jobs, and now I'd say we're about even. He calls me 'Bags.' He stops by my office and says, 'Hey, Bags, how's it going?' But lately I've been calling him 'Bucks.' We don't call each other by our names anymore — it's either 'Bags' or 'Bucks.'"

—"THE SCORE ON TED LEITNER," Greg Kahn and Joe Applegate, August 21, 1980

Twenty Years Ago

Ten years ago, when Buzz Johnson moved from Colorado to the 650 acres he owns on Angel Mountain, ten miles south of Mount Palomar, the property was so thick with manzanita and chamise that a person couldn't walk through it. So he bought a few dozen goats to eat the brush, and by the time they had eaten their way through 120 acres, the goats had increased in number to 580. Then about two years ago the goats began disappearing — sometimes two or three per night. The 73-year-old Johnson button-holed the local game warden, Carl Baumgarner, and said, "The goddamn lions are eatin' all my goats up! They go killin' my stock, that's when I'm gonna go killin' them!"

—"RETURN OF THE MOUNTAIN LION," Steve Sorensen, August 22, 1985

Fifteen Years Ago

The place should be a welfare hotel with a stuttering indigo neon sign outside the window. There should be a bottle of cheap bourbon on the nightstand and a .38 lying on the once-gaudy, now-faded bedspread. This isn't. There isn't. It's my apartment in Kensington, and while there is no gun, bourbon, neon, or even a bed-spread, the place is filled with diabolical instruments of torture — chief among them, the stereo.

—"SET A NEEDLE ON MY HEART AND PLAY THOSE SONGS OF LOVE AND PAIN,"

John Brizzolara, August 23, 1990

Ten Years Ago

Here is a story of tragic disillusionment.

As with most American women, the chief influence on my character was Nancy Drew. I have so internalized the heroine of books for 8- to 14-year-old girls that I can't tell where Nancy Drew ends and Violet Rosenbloom begins. Every time I am locked in an airless closet or thrown into a dank cellar, I ask myself, "What would Nancy do?"

Like Nancy, I have been a self-reliant woman. When the distributor gets wet, Nancy and I pop up the hood and fix it. When necessity required it, I have piloted a plane, shot big game, deciphered codes, and tap-danced in Morse code.

—CALENDAR: "DEEP IN MY HEART, I AM NANCY," Violet Rosenbloom, August 17, 1995

Five Years Ago

Gregory at Whole Foods Market in Hillcrest...let me in on three traits of a ripe watermelon. "Bee stings. You'll find little bumps on the melon. Not all the time, but if you see some, that's a good sign that the melon is sweet. Another thing to look at are the lines on the watermelon. Make sure the stripes are solid and not broken. The last test is the tom-tom test. You want the melon to have a hollow sound, as opposed to a dull thump. The dull thump means the water is starting to break down inside it."

MUST LOVE DOGS

by Josh Board

Last month, Norma and Joe of Rancho Bernardo had a luau-themed party for their dog's first birthday. I'm not sure if that meant dog years. I'm not sure the dog realized that this event was for him. It never stopped yapping.

That party was scheduled from 4:00 p.m. to midnight. When I got there at 4:00, there weren't many people, and Norma and Joe were setting up tents and tiki torches.

I grabbed a glass of wine and joined the few people who were there. A little girl was offered five bucks to eat a dog biscuit. She was willing to, but they couldn't find one. A guy said, "It has to be a big one, not one of those tiny biscuits." One guest brought liver treats for the dog, but I don't think those were part of the wager.

There was a woman called Black Widow who said she won a competition eating 20 grilled cheese sandwiches before a baseball game. (I think this is how competitive eaters must start. People offer them money to eat weird crap, or a lot of something, and they find they have a knack for it.)

Their back yard was above a canyon, and I saw a guy spraying something. I asked what it was. I think the guy said, "Hawaiian ginger." He told me if snakes smell it, they stay away.

I went inside the house and saw two parrots. Since this was a Filipino family, I asked if the birds spoke English or Tagalog. One guy smiled and said, "They say 'Go Vikings,' and whistle a few songs."

The birthday dog was a canines were friendly, though.

I heard a couple of girls talking about Polynesian dance. I told them I can do the limbo, but the bar has to be high. I asked if they would be dancing and they told me broccoli, chow mein, fruits, salads.

One couple was talking about a kitten that came inside their house, and their dog killed it. They brought their dog to an animal psychiatrist to make sure it wouldn't kill a child. (I wonder what an animal psychiatrist does. Do they show the dog inkblots, or pictures of human legs, to see which ones they want to hump? Does the dog lie on a couch? These are questions I'm asking Matthew Alice.)

One lady joked, "We're having a party for dogs here.

In the Philippines, we eat them." There were a few uncomfortable laughs, but I thought it was funny.

I saw a bunch of golf balls by the fence. I asked Joe if they were for the dogs. He said, "No. In Tiger Woods's book, he said he practiced in his back yard, so that's what I do." I laughed, imagining a hiker in the canyon getting hit by this guy driving golf balls from his back yard.

I didn't stay at this party long. I had another dog bash to crash. When I was leaving, I heard one kid ask, "Is the dog going to blow out the candles?" The thought of putting a dog in front of a cake seemed like a bad idea.

I drove to my next party in Hillcrest. It was for a French bulldog that had just been adopted.

Enrique's voice-mail invite said, "The crowd will mostly be gay. Don't worry; we won't attack you or anything. Just don't wear cologne."

The dog was named Boris. I had the Who song "Boris the Spider" stuck in my head for the next couple of days.

Enrique, in gold shoes, said to a friend, "Only one person brought a gift." His

"Is the dog going to blow out the candles?"

Yorkie. Someone else brought a miniature Doberman to the party. A Doberman bit me when I was in the sixth grade. And having a stepfather who was a letter carrier didn't help my fear of dogs. These they hadn't performed in years.

Our hosts Norma and Joe made sure everyone had enough food. They had a tent with a variety of things to eat — roast beef, pig, beef friend replied, "I would have, but you said not to." Enrique said, "No. The only thing I said was to get ice. I never said anything about gifts."

Enrique, who looked like a thin Jack Black, told me about his television career in Mexico. He was a TV star while going to college, but he got burned out and gave it up.

Every person who passed by the house walking a dog was invited to the party. A few people looked at him like he was crazy; others brought their dogs over. The conversations always started about dogs. I found out that bulldogs have problems with their hips and jaws, and there are certain breeds of dog that have bad breath.

One person told me that some owners have microchips put in their dogs to help track the animals if they get lost or stolen. He told me a story about a dog that was stolen from the East Coast and tracked down in California.

There was one woman at this party who I was trying to avoid. She grabbed me and said, "I'm a lesbian, but I do go both ways. Just tell me if you want to go into the other room." I said, "Ah, okay."

I talked to a lesbian couple who happened to walk by with their German shepherd. The dog started barking at the other dog guests but soon quieted down.

As I was talking to them, the obnoxious woman said, "Can you believe this guy?" They looked at me, as she continued, "I offered to give him a BJ in the other room, and he turned me down."

One guy at the party, laughing into his cell phone, let me listen to the message. He told me he ran an apartment complex six months earlier, and a crazy female tenant keeps calling him. Her message was about some bizarre plot the government has to kill someone, and using candles to start fires that look like accidents.

Someone wanted me to try the guacamole dip. "You have to try it. My sister made it."

"I don't like guacamole," I said, but that did nothing to stop him from pushing it on me. I grabbed a chip and tried some.

A dog running around outside knocked over a barbecue grill, but other than that, the dogs were well behaved.

When I left the party a few hours later, I heard a message from Enrique on my voice mail. He sounded a bit buzzed, and he told me I had forgotten my doggie bag, which was filled with gifts he had for everyone that attended. He said they held dog treats, candy, and handcuffs. A weird combination of items. Maybe the handcuffs were for police dogs. ■

Freakish Overlap

We need objects to remind us of the commitments we've made. That carpet from Morocco reminds us of the impulsive, freedom-loving side of ourselves we're in danger of losing touch with. Beautiful furniture gives us something to live up to. All designed objects are propaganda for a way of life.

— Alain de Botton

We're both curious to see the result of this work we're doing to create a home that reflects our freakish, counter-culture personalities.

Too green," David said, shaking his head at the slip of paper I was holding against the wall. "How 'bout this one?" "Too brown. I hate brown." This he said calmly, as though stating a simple, known fact — brown is bad. "And this?" I pointed to a grayish green color swatch. It was the only one left. "Hmm. Huh. You know? I'm almost positive there are some colors we missed." "Then let's go back to Home Depot! While we're out we can stop by Copenhagen and Plummers to see if anything else catches our eye," I said, slipping on my sandals in anticipation of David's assent. I've always thought that home-improvement television shows, magazines, and conversations were exceptionally boring. But now that we've moved into our new home (or, as I like to call it, our "clean slate"), I've become a fixture at local furniture and home supply stores. My interest, however, takes me only so far. I'm enjoying the process of choosing colors for our home, but I'd sooner lick the ground than lift a finger. Only once have I helped paint a room and, by no coincidence, that was also the only day David and I have ever had a heated argument. The argument ended when I accidentally sat in the recently refilled paint pan — I learned from my sage-green behind that mere clothes are no protection against liquid pigment. But even though my darling and I worked out the core issue (I am selfish and demanding and when someone offers to paint my bedroom I wrongfully assume that manual labor on my part is not required), the lesson remains — I do not "paint" well. The word "paint" can be replaced with "move," "clean," "cook," or anything else that sounds either domestic or proletarian in any way. Yesterday, nearly two years after my unintentional experiment with body paint, David suggested that every wall in our new home be colored. It did not take long for me to convince him that it would be best to hire someone who could get the job done right, sans drama. The only thing better than having something done, in my opinion, is having someone else do it for you. The agreement we made before moving was that we would get rid of our respective furniture so that we can create a new home environment together. I told David his red leather chairs had to go. He nixed my framed print of Bouguereau's Birth of Venus. I refused to suffer his four- by six-foot painting of complex, geometrical lines, and David said there was no way in hell he would wake up every morning with my collection of fairy statues staring at him. So that we would not come to resent giving up everything we once held sacred, David and I agreed that we could each keep one chair from our previous lives — David's, a mid-century contemporary number with harvest gold fabric and sleek wooden legs; and mine, a claw-footed, velvety, flower-printed chair worthy of any French grandmother's tearoom. While shopping for our new decor David and I were pleasantly surprised to discover — considering how much our styles seemed to clash — that we have a huge overlap in taste. For the first time, I am beginning to find joy in the process of conceiving and implementing ideas in home improvement. David likes to do things differently. "I want to rethink every single thing about our new place," he said when we first began to look at the blueprints a few years ago. "I don't want to be constrained by what is commercially available. I want to try and put our own personal imprint on the space by taking the time to be creative and bring in materials and ideas that we love. I think our home should reflect our own unique vision rather than that of some corporation." There are no boundaries for his brainstorming. Our bed is being custom made to David's specifications by Wood FX, a gallery on Park Boulevard, and just this morning, David suggested that we could line the four walls that surround the toilet in the master bathroom with Scrabble tiles. It took a few peeks into our new neighbors' homes and several trips to IKEA and West Elm for me to realize how much our choices in furniture, paint colors, and things that go on shelves reveal about our personalities and experiences in life. As we “nest” together, David and I are not just choosing an Italian-leather sofa, we are choosing a new lifestyle.

While considering the many choices available to us, my thoughts turn to friends’ homes, every square inch of which must have been the result of careful consideration. Kip and Renee, a creative couple who staged their wedding at Burning Man, surround themselves with original pieces of art they purchased from talented friends. Ben and Grace, ever the entertainers, focused on building areas in their home and yard that would be conducive to their guests’ comfort. Jennifer’s home looks like a combination of India, Thailand, and other countries she has visited; and Nathan, who is going through a Zen-like self-improvement phase in his life, chooses to sleep on the floor next to his desk in a room painted red.

Until now, David and I have held on to objects that reflected our personalities before we met each other. As with any two friends or lovers who spend all their time together, we have influenced each other and have come to think of ourselves as a single entity.

We’re both curious to see the result of this work we’re doing to create a home that reflects our freakish, counterculture personalities. Whether it’s the color of the walls or the firmness of the mattress, every aspect is a collaborative effort.

That is, everything except for the kitchen, which falls into the “domestic” category. David was quick to intercept when he caught me trying to unload a box of silverware into the “spice drawer” and put glasses where the dishes, as he said, “should obviously go.” Though we stand united as one, we have not lost our individual charm. At least this is what David will discover when he opens the cabinet above the oven tomorrow and is greeted by a formation of little fairies on bejeweled flowers. ■

The Good Shoem

On the afternoon of April 15, 1920, in the small industrial town of South Braintree, Massachusetts, a paymaster named Frederick Parmenter and a guard named Alessandro Berardelli set out to carry cash boxes — which contained the payroll of the Slater & Morrill Shoe Company — from the factory's upper office to a lower one at the end of Pearl Street. Due to a spate of recent payroll robberies, many of which were committed by gangs of Italian immigrants, Berardelli was armed. South Braintree lay ten miles outside of Boston, and as Parmenter and Berardelli passed by its stables, poolrooms, meeting halls, and factories, they chatted with some of the city's 15,000 residents. Parmenter was in his early forties — a burly, loquacious man. Berardelli was a quiet and withdrawn 28-year-old. Each held a steel box fastened with a Yale lock. Taken together, the boxes contained $15,776.51.

Midway up Pearl Street, Parmenter and Berardelli were attacked by two men who had been idling beside a fence. One wore a cap; the other, a felt hat. The man in the cap grabbed Berardelli's shoulder, swung him around, and fired three shots into his chest. Parmenter had been walking slightly ahead of his partner, and as he turned the man in the cap shot him in the chest. Parmenter staggered, turned once more, and received a shot in the back. According to an eyewitness, as the men lay "twitching" in the street, the robber in the felt hat snatched up the cash boxes, the man in the cap fired a shot in the air, and a green touring Buick sputtered down the street, arriving slowly enough that a host of people remembered its noisy shifting of gears, as well as the two men inside.

Just as the robbers jumped in, a wounded Berardelli raised himself up on hands and knees, and a fifth man ran out from behind a pile of bricks, leapt onto the Buick's running board, and shot him once more. The bullet severed Berardelli's great artery, and he fell back into the gutter, blood bubbling from his mouth. Berardelli died a few hours later; Parmenter, the next day.

The men arrested for the crime were named Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti. Seven years later, Sacco (a 36-year-old shoemaker) and Vanzetti (a 39-year-old fish peddler) sat in their cells in Massachusetts's Charlestown prison — near the obelisk monument to revolutionary resistance at Bunker Hill — and waited for the executioner to arrive.

Demonized as Italians, anarchists, and antiwar activists, they'd been found guilty in 1921. The prosecution's case had been based on conflicting eyewitness testimony and unconvincing ballistics evidence, but despite nine appeals — including two to the Supreme Courts of Massachusetts and the United States — and the confession of a man who claimed to have participated in the shooting itself, they were denied a new trial and sentenced to death. By 1927, Sacco and Vanzetti's case had become the most famous in American history, with a majority of working people, and a great many of the world's intellectuals, convinced of their innocence.

And so, on the evening of August 22, 1927, more than 500 policemen in

blue uniforms enforced a mile-long barricade that encircled the prison. Most carried tear gas and gas masks. Mounted horses clip-clopped on the cobblestones, firemen stood ready with hoses, machine guns peeked over the top of the prison’s red granite wall, and searchlights probed the surrounding darkness. The thousands of protesters who milled against the barricade included Dorothy Parker and John Dos Passos, as well as a host of anarchists, immigrants, day laborers, and a clique of garment workers, who kept up a constant round of “Solidarity Forever.” The crowd swelled, with placards reading “JUSTICE IS CRUCIFIED” swaying overhead. Militants from the Hog Carriers’ Union ran at the prison gate, and mounted troopers charged the masses. Several were hurt, many more were arrested. A cheer had gone up at the appearance of Sacco’s wife, who’d brought their two children, and Vanzetti’s sister, who’d arrived recently from Italy. But the women — who had bid Sacco and Vanzetti farewell a few hours earlier, then hurried to the governor’s office, got down on their knees, and begged for a stay of execution — were defeated.

The condemned men’s white-tiled chambers contained a cot, a chair, a table, and a toilet. Electric lamps burned within the cells and in the corridor that led to the electric chair. Sacco and Vanzetti were close enough to talk but didn’t. Perhaps they were weak — they hadn’t eaten for most of the previous month, saying they wouldn’t be fattened for their execution. At 11:15, the warden appeared. “It is my painful duty to inform you that you have to die tonight,” he told each man. From below, they could hear the crowd chanting: “No God! No Master!”

Vanzetti paced; Sacco finished a letter. A church clock tolled 12 times, and Celestine Madeiros — who’d been convicted of a separate murder and had then confessed to being in the Buick that carried Berardelli and Parmeter’s killers — was walked to the death chamber. There, Madeiros’s arms and legs were strapped to the electric chair. A metal helmet was placed on his head, his calves were wired with electrodes, and his eyes were masked. The warden nodded and the executioner, who stood behind a screen, connected a switch that ran electrical current through the electrodes and into Madeiros’s body. Madeiros stiffened, convulsed, and turned red. Observers smelt burning hair. The executioner then disconnected the current and connected it again — three times in all. Sacco followed, and Vanzetti entered last.

man, to witness his death — would later say: “His time came. He walked to the chair. He told the guards, ‘Don’t touch me.’ He went by himself. He made a little speech. He had the courage to say he was forgiving some of the people who was doing what was going to be done to him. He say goodbye to his wife, he say goodbye to his friends, he say goodbye to his children. He say, ‘Long Live Anarchy!’ He shook hands with the warden and he say, "Thank you."

Vanzetti's final words were, "I am an innocent man."

The next morning, San Diego's daily newspapers ran banner headlines: "Sacco and Vanzetti Electrocuted: Radicals Die Game," one read. "Rioting Begins as Sacco, Vanzetti Die: Execution Dignified," read another. But in truth, most riots took place overseas and were squelched quickly, while in America protestors simply wept from exhaustion. Both the San Diego Union and the San Diego Sun had been covering the death watch on a daily basis — after all, it was the biggest story since Lucky Lindy's flight across the Atlantic, which had taken place just a few months earlier.

This week marks the 78th anniversary of Sacco and Vanzetti's execution. And yet, evidence of Sacco and Vanzetti's innocence — or, at least, doubts about their guilt — has continued to accumulate. Countless college courses, websites, and library projects have been dedicated to the case. Dozens of attorneys, scholars, and historians continue to apply themselves to its minutiae, and Felix Frankfurter's Case of Sacco and Vanzetti, which was published in early 1927, remains a most compelling argument for the never-granted retrial. In brief, Frankfurter, a Harvard Law School professor — and from 1939 to 1962, an associate justice on the United States Supreme Court — argued that the first trial was tainted by prejudice and incompetence and that the following evidence had emerged during the six years Sacco and Vanzetti spent awaiting execution:

- Sources charged that the presiding judge, Webster Thayer, made statements — "Did you see what I did with those anarchist bastards the other day?"; "those sons of bitches"; "those dagos" — which compromised his objectivity.
- The jury foreman had referred to Italians as "guineas" and said they "ought to hang anyhow, guilty or not."

- Italians who could back up Sacco and Vanzetti's alibi — Sacco claimed to be in New York applying for a visa, while Vanzetti swore he was delivering eels to his customers — were considered to be too sympathetic to their fellow countrymen and barred from testifying.
- Eyewitnesses who were said to have placed Sacco and Vanzetti at the scene of the crime did not pick them out of a lineup, despite the fact that the police had forced them to pose with guns in their hands.
- Eyewitnesses admitted after the trial that they were coached by the prosecution to testify to certain facts and not others.

- A ballistics expert confirmed that the bullet that killed Berardelli was “consistent with having been fired from that gun,” which had been taken to mean Sacco’s 32-caliber Colt automatic. He later testified, under oath, that he’d meant a Colt .32, but not necessarily Sacco’s. Neither the judge nor the defendants’ counsel challenged or clarified this testimony.

- Every subsequent appeal was heard by Judge Thayer himself.

- Madeiros, who was executed just before Sacco and Vanzetti, confessed in 1925 that he rode with a certain Morelli, who had committed the South Braintree murders, and that Sacco and Vanzetti had not participated in the crime.

Several of the prosecution eyewitnesses had changed their stories prior to the execution, and in the weeks leading up to it, their accusations of coercion were taken up by anarchists, unions, and scholars like Frankfurter, who agitated for a new trial, a new venue, and a new judge.

In major cities, where “factories” were synonymous with child labor, 12-hour workdays, and unsafe working conditions, protests erupted. Upon Sacco and Vanzetti’s sentencing, hundreds of thousands of protesters gathered in front of U.S. embassies in Paris, London, Berlin, Tokyo, and Buenos Aires. Thousands in Italy looked upon Sacco and Vanzetti as Italians first, and Americans second, and sympathizers urged Benito Mussolini to make some dramatic gesture that might save them. (Mussolini did not interfere.) President Calvin Coolidge was placed under heavy guard as bombs — referred to in the press as “infernal machines” — destroyed the mayoral residences in Baltimore and Cincinnati. In New York, two subway stations were blown up, and a week before the execution, some 150,000 New York barbers, pocketbook makers, clothing workers, and mill hands walked off the job for an afternoon. “There was no picketing,” a reporter wrote. “The workers put down their tools and left without disorder.”

In Los Angeles — a city otherwise engrossed in a feud between Aimee Semple McPherson and her mother — 11 men and women circulated mimeographs calling for a general strike and were arrested for “suspicion of criminal syndicalism.”

And in San Diego?

San Diego saw little, if any, protest on Sacco and Vanzetti’s behalf. True, our distance from Boston and the nonanarchist character of San Diego’s Italian community may well have contributed to the city’s nonchalant reaction to the execution. And yet, in the early 1900s, San Diego had been a center for radical activity — of the shipped-in variety. Years before the Sacco and Vanzetti trial, the Wobblies — members of the Industrial Workers of the World, or IWW — had descended on the city, spreading the gospel that workers should own the means of production, that men should go on strike and stage boycotts, and that, if necessity called, they should commit sabotage. The Wobblies spoke on “soapbox row” — a free-speech spot on E Street between Fourth and Fifth Avenues — calling for “direct action” on the part of San Diego’s workers. Despite denials that they worked to overthrow the U.S. government, they were branded enemies of law and order.

In 1912, San Diego’s city council caved in to pressure from business leaders and passed an ordinance forbidding street-corner meetings (ostensibly for traffic concerns). The Wobblies and their partisans defied the order — more than a hundred were arrested, and the showdown, which became known as San Diego’s “free-speech fight,” eventually attracted 5000 radicals to the city. Many were arrested and taken to the county line near Fallbrook, where they were run through a gauntlet of clubs and forced to kiss the American flag. Sometimes, they were tarred and feathered before being given the boot.

One of the lawyers who represented the Wobblies and their attorneys in 1912, and who would play a role in defending Sacco and Vanzetti, was Fred H. Moore, who hailed from Spokane, Washington, and is described in Francis Russell's 1971 study Tragedy in Dedham: The Story of the Sacco-Vanzetti Case as a "bohemian lawyer." One afternoon, Russell writes, "when a casual IWW acquaintance arrested in a free-speech fight in San Diego telephoned him for help, Moore picked up his broad-brimmed hat and a revolver, told his associates he would be back shortly, and walked out of the promise of his law career." According to another historian, the eccentric and unstable Moore was "an able attorney who was prone to nervous attacks which kept him out of court."

According to the San Diego Sun, Moore was in San Diego in May of 1912, defending the IWW. Moore alleged in an affidavit that he, his law partner, and their stenographer, were told by more than a dozen businessmen that Fred Moore and his ilk had "better leave town" or "take the consequences." The San Diego Union — the paper of John D. Spreckels, which had always railed against militant dissent — reported that San Diego Chief of Police J. Keno Wilson had picked Moore "up in an automobile, carried him to Sorrento and there told him to leave the city and not return."

Soon afterwards, the Union reported that the IWW, and Moore, were leaving San Diego to its own devices. Labor conditions in Los Angeles were far worse, the IWW alleged, and the Wobblies would agitate for a new law guaranteeing the eight-hour workday. The IWW songwriter Joe Hill — who would someday be shot by a firing squad, after a suspect murder conviction that brought Sacco and Vanzetti's trial to mind — had this to say of the city: "There is too much energy going to waste organizing locals in jerkwater towns of no industrial importance. A town like San Diego, for instance, where the main 'industry' consists of 'catching suckers,' is not worth a whoop in Hell from the rebel's point of view. Still there has been more money spent on that place than there ever was on Pittsburgh, Detroit and other manufacturing towns of great importance."

Fred Moore went on to represent two men who'd been falsely accused of murder in a Lawrence, Massachusetts, textile strike. He defended "Big Boy" Krieger, an IWW organizer from Tulsa, Oklahoma, who'd been framed for the dynamiting of a home of a Standard Oil official. And he was on a team defending Washington State Wobblies who'd been charged with murdering two vigilantes during the November 1916 "Everett Massacre."

But in 1920, Moore was summoned to prepare a brief for the Sacco and Vanzetti trial, which was set to begin the following year. Moore, who was in his late thirties and believed the case to be crucial to the cause of the working class, told a friend that “in saving them we strengthen our muscles, develop our forces preparatory to the day when we save ourselves.” Francis Russell’s description of Moore’s efforts on Sacco and Vanzetti’s behalf brings William Kunstler to mind: “His long hair seemed to flow back from his forehead, he often wore sandals, and the broad-brimmed Western hat he brought with him from California became almost his trademark in Boston,” he wrote.

America’s entry into the First World War slowed the stirrings of working-class revolt, but the Bolshevik victory in Russia sparked new protests in America’s industrialized cities. By 1919, reactionaries were grouping left-wing dissenters in with the Red Menace. Battle lines were drawn. Anarchists and communists organized strikes, whipped up by spontaneous meetings, and distributed anti-government propaganda. Bombs targeting elected officials convinced the United States Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer that anarchists were intent on overthrowing the government. He began with isolated arrests of foreign-born radicals and deported those for whom he had evidence — sometimes scant — of seditious activity. The self-avowed anarchist-feminist Emma Goldman, who had visited San Diego (and been kicked out of town) during the 1912 free-speech fight, was deported to Russia. And in the 1920 “Palmer Raids,” thousands of “reds” were rounded up in 33 American cities. In the course of these sweeps, agents often disregarded the detainees’ civil liberties; it was widespread shock at their strong-arm tactics that helped form the American Civil Liberties Union, but not before

Palmer had arrested and begun deportation proceedings against hundreds of people.

The San Diego Union welcomed the crackdown: a 1919 editorial, “Suppress These Agitators,” begins: “We confess... that we don’t like to hear these persons uttering the indecencies of their crooked mentalities in depreciation of our form of government and the institutions we have erected upon it. Neither do we believe that they should be permitted to do so.... There are traitors of the tongue and pen as there are traitors of the bomb and rifle.” Another item, in the San Diego Sun, cites General Leonard Wood’s comments about the radicals: “I believe we should place them all on ships of stone with sails of lead and that their first stopping place should be Hell. We must advocate radical laws to deal with radical people.”

In 1920, San Diego police arrested Jane Street, an “alleged IWW leader” who was seized in a rooming house on Market. Her crime was spreading propaganda and soliciting Wobbly membership, which warranted a charge of sedition under California’s new syndicalist law. Not long afterwards, a Swede named Jacob Stromquist was arrested for the possession of anarchist leaflets. According to the Union, Stromquist had “advocated anticonservative theories.” During his hearing, Stromquist told the judge that he claimed allegiance to no country. “I am an internationalist,” he said, and a member of “the universal brotherhood of man.” A few months later, Stromquist and Street were acquitted and released.

Additional Regulatory Programs Fee of 86¢ per line/mo. applies. This is not a tax or government-mandated charge. Taxes and other charges (including Universal Service charges) additional. If you are not satisfied with our service, you may cancel within 14 days of activation (longer in certain states, e.g., 30 days in CA), with no early cancellation fee. Both this offer before activation, and this plan after activation, may be modified and/or discontinued by T-Mobile, with or without notice and with respect to all or only certain customers. 30¢-45¢ per additional minute (or fraction thereof), depending on plan. 5¢ per additional text message. Rates are for calls originating and terminating in the U.S. Coverage only available on our U.S. GSM/GPRS network and the network of our U.S. roaming partners ("Get More network"). Credit approval, $35 activation fee and 1-year agreement required, with $200 early cancellation fee per line. Unused allowances lost. Partial minutes used are rounded up and charged at the full-minute rate; calls are measured from when the network begins to process the call (i.e., before the phone rings or the call is answered) through the network's termination of the call. Billing of roaming charges and minutes of use or services may be delayed to a subsequent billing cycle. Call duration and/or your continued eligibility for this plan may be limited or terminated in T-Mobile's sole discretion, especially if monitoring of your usage discloses abusive conduct or abnormal call pattern(s). Devices sold for use on our GSM/GPRS system may not be supportable on or compatible with other wireless systems. Weekends are midnight Fri. to 11:59 p.m. Sun., based on commencement time of call. Nights are 9:00 p.m. to 6:59 a.m., based on commencement time of call. Mobile-to-mobile means a directly dialed call between T-Mobile subscribers while on our U.S. network. Call minutes currently rate in the following order (as available): weekend/night, mobile-to-mobile, WHENEVER. Phone/Rebate: At participating locations; while supplies last; phone or accessories may be substituted for items of equal or greater value; additional taxes and shipping charges may apply. Rebate offer requires purchase of the phone listed and new activation on a qualifying rate plan. You must be on a qualifying rate plan when rebate is processed. Allow 8-10 weeks for rebate check. Use of our service constitutes acceptance of our terms and conditions (including mandatory arbitration), viewable on www.t-mobile.com. Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968 (Fair Housing Act), as amended, prohibits discrimination in the sale, rental, and financing of dwellings, and in other housing-related transactions, based on race, color, national origin, religion, sex, familial status (including children under the age of 18 living with parents of legal custodians, pregnant women, and people securing custody of children under the age of 18), and handicap (disability).

ethnicity and crime. "Out of the sly and crafty eyes of many [Italians] leap cupidity, cruelty, insanity, and crime," he wrote. "From their lopsided faces, sloping brows, and misshapen features may be recognized the unmistakable criminal type." And one of the most notorious anarchists in America had, in fact, been an Italian — Luigi Galleani, who'd been the author of a widely circulated manual on bomb-building and become the target of constant surveillance initiated by J. Edgar Hoover. (Hoover was then a 24-year-old director of the Justice Department's General Intelligence Division. Sacco and Vanzetti had met at a Galleani meeting.) Galleani was deported in 1919, by which time the press had branded him as the epitome of a "bomb-throwing Italian anarchist," and by 1920, every mustachioed, swarthy man of Italian descent who huffed about the boss became a "bomb-throwing Italian."

And so, when police began searching for the killers of the paymaster and his guard, they paid special attention to eye-witnesses who said the assailants were "Italian-looking." Within weeks, Sacco and Vanzetti were arrested. They carried radical propaganda and guns. They were self-described anarchists. But perhaps they were more guilty of being Italian.

This prejudice against Italians also manifested itself in San Diego. In 1925, Italian-Americans constituted just one percent of San Diego's 100,000 residents. Most of these paisanos were tuna fishermen or the families of tuna fishermen. The majority were immigrants, though a small contingent of Italian-Americans had arrived from San Francisco after the 1906 earthquake. San Diego was home to a booming cannery business, employing 2500 workers. But tuna fishermen, who spent much of their days at sea, kept to themselves. The last thing Italian-born men would do, without the backing — some might say the order — of union bosses, would be to march on behalf of inconclusively tried Italian hotheads in Boston.

And so, Little Italy was a conservative enclave, with few radicals or communists. There is no local record of the kind of anarchist culture that was rife in the Northeast. In fact, by the mid-1920s, organized labor in San Diego had dwindled; by 1926, work was so plentiful that some contractors were granting dollar-a-day raises to their workers.

Undoubtedly, many of San Diego's Italians were aware of the anti-immigrant rage that the Sacco-Vanzetti case had stirred up: As the Italian-American scholar Nunzio Pernicone describes it, this rage against foreigners was based on "Nordicism" — a "racial hierarchy" that placed Scandinavians, Germans, and Anglo-Saxons at the top of the social ladder and Mediterranean peoples at the bottom. The worst of the bottom-dwellers were the southern Italians, who were not considered white. For Italian immigrants in San Diego, to support Sacco and Vanzetti in public was to court hostilities that already threatened to bubble over.

In Southern California, the San Diego Labor Leader was one of the few papers to take up Sacco and Vanzetti's case. A large-format weekly that propagandized for the trade-union cause, the paper featured strike news, stories urging workers to drink milk, and syndicated stories by prounion authors like Eugene V. Debs and Samuel Gompers. A 1925 article claimed that one-fifth of San Diego's citizens belonged to unions and that 85 percent of them owned their own homes. These "members have their every interest in the building up of the city and are loyal San Diegans," the paper enthused. "How many unorganized workers own their own homes?" During the summer of 1922, the paper reprinted "Vanzetti — Tribute and Appeal" by Upton Sinclair, the author of The Jungle who was then working on a novel about the Sacco and Vanzetti case. Sinclair visited the two in jail, and his articles did much to give their story a human dimension. He had a particular affection for Vanzetti: "This humble Italian workingman is precisely what he pretends to be, an idealist and an apostle of a new social order," Sinclair wrote. "He is simple and genuine, open-minded as a child, sensitive and possessing that innate refinement which makes good manners without need of teaching."

Vanzetti, an autodidact who had become an elegant writer while in prison, had read Sinclair's novel, Jimmy Higgins. "It was very plain to me that he had entered into the soul of that working-class martyr," Sinclair wrote, approvingly. "That he had shared all those dreams, endured all those privations and conquered all those terrors. He is indeed 'Jimmy Higgins' incarnate — the same as thousands of others who have vowed in their hearts that life has no meaning apart from freedom and that justice for all the oppressed of our social system is their god in life."

After putting forth an anarchist credo, Sinclair continued: "After meeting Vanzetti, one cannot think of legal systems, one can think only of the man. This brother of ours must be saved."

Still, for the next several years, only occasional mention of the case appeared in the Labor Leader. In "Are Sacco & Vanzetti 'Frame-Up' Victims?" the paper reported that "at her hearing for a divorce, Mrs. Jessie Henry Dodson stated that her husband, now serving a penitentiary sentence for automobile theft, was associated with the murders for which Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti are now under sentence of death. A vigorous agitation by workers and sympathizers has been conducted since the trial against what is declared a 'frame up.'"

The woman said her soon-to-be ex-husband told her that he got $1000 for driving the getaway car and that Sacco and Vanzetti had had nothing to do with the crime.

In her "News Notes and Notions" column, Binny Wallace misidentified Sacco and Vanzetti as "members of organized labor in Massachusetts" who "may yet be sent to the electric chair on 'circumstantial evidence' so flimsy that it would not hold thirty seconds were the two men grasping capitalists rather than union men. The latest deflection of the case is the testimony of Lola R. Andrews, the stellar witness against the men, who has confessed that her identification 'was in its entirety unqualifiedly false and untrue,' having been made 'under the intimidating and coercing influence' of police officers and the district attorney's office."

In 1923, Wallace wrote that Andrews "has changed her testimony since the trial first commenced some years ago. Twice she has disowned her testimony against the defense on the grounds that she had been 'coerced and intimidated' by the prosecution's lawyers and testified for the defense. Now she is again a prosecution witness with the same excuse, that she had been 'coerced and intimidated,' this time by the defense!"

Later that year, the Labor Leader prefaced a story about Sacco and Vanzetti with a quote from the New Testament: "Now the chief priests and the whole council sought false witness against Jesus, that they might put him to death; and they found it not, though many false witnesses came."

was a lone voice in full support of the condemned Boston anarchists. In the weeks leading up to the execution, the Sun, the Union, and the weekly San Diego Herald seemed to hedge their bets and filled the front page with standard-issue wire-service reports.

The Union steered to the center but once, in a lone editorial that read, in part: "Judicially, the Sacco-Vanzetti case is the fight for a retrial of two men convicted of the crimes of murder. Politically, it is the conflict between radicals and conservatives." The editors wrote that if there was no reprieve, then "the radicals would affirm a new victory of 'class prejudice'...while the ultra-conservatives would celebrate a new victory over radical agitation.... No one cares about the 'merits of the murder case against the men.'" According to the editors, the case had "degenerated" into little more than an "international popularity contest."

As the execution neared, the Herald did call for a new trial. "We have no proof that Sacco and Vanzetti are innocent, neither have we seen any evidence that furnishes conclusive proof of their guilt. Without such evidence it is a crime, an injustice and a national disgrace to execute them," the editors wrote, citing the case of 20 Wobblies who were sent to jail in Los Angeles under California's syndicalist law (which the Herald vehemently opposed). "If Sacco and Vanzetti are no more guilty than are the hobos who were convicted in our own state, then they are the victims of judicial prejudice or incompetence," the editors concluded. And two days before the execution, the Herald argued that Sacco and Vanzetti should be given a reprieve on the grounds that their deaths would instigate widespread violence: "The lives of thousands of innocent men and women... may be sacrificed by mobs as unreasoning as the public officials."

The Sun, which printed dozens of death-watch stories, seemed to take a middle course, contrasting Vanzetti's "philosophical anarchist" with Sacco's "practical" one and arguing that Vanzetti's death would only provide his cause with a ready martyr: "Compel him to live," the editors argued. "To prove that all governments are not evil. Compel him to serve as living proof that government — our government at least — can be humane, that government can go to the limit, even beyond the fixed limit to assure even the humblest fish-peddling immigrant his every right as a member of civilized society. Make him prove this with his life — not by taking that life but by giving it back to him.... The electrocution of Sacco and Vanzetti will make two anarchists for every one that exists in the world today."

After the execution, the Sun ran a front-page report by Scripps-Howard reporter Ruth Finney, who'd covered the prison death-watch that April: "The two wretched, tragic lives are ended," it read. "They died gallantly; there was no moaning from their cells.... The priest, whom the two men would not see, stood in the prison yard, under the dark sky, and prayed." But the last words belonged more properly to Sacco and Vanzetti themselves, and Vanzetti, in particular,

L O N G - A G O S A N D I E G O

THE BATTLE OF SAN DIEGO BAY, PART I: SAIL WEST YOUNG MEN.

“Merchant navigators” — a polite phrase for “smugglers” — William Shaler and Richard Cleveland agreed on almost everything. Both were New Englanders, born in 1773. Both went to sea as teenagers. Shaler, whose ancestor Thomas Shaler came from Stratford-on-Avon, got work as business manager on a ship transporting goods from the French West Indies to France. Cleveland’s first job was Captain’s clerk, which kept him, he boasted, “free from the vulgarity of the forecandle.”

Cleveland was seasick the entire tour. When he docked at Derby he was so glad to leave the “wearisome rolling and bad odor of the vessel,” he vowed to travel no more. But even though merchant trading meant “uncommon exposure” to “sullen sailors,” and “robbers and pirates,” the promise of profits lured him back to the open sea.

Cleveland and Shaler met on a voyage from Capetown to Copenhagen. Shaler’s ship, carrying a large cargo of wines, had been raided by privateers — a polite expression for “pirates.” Back from Calcutta (and dealing, among other things, in opium), Cleveland wanted a partner to sail to the Pacific, where the sea otter trade had begun to flourish. Merchant navigators could trade trinkets for pelts from friars and Indians, smuggle them to China, and sell them for up to $80 each (the equivalent of $1000 today). But there was a catch: Spain prohibited foreign trade along the California coast.

The New Englanders agreed to purchase a brigantine and try their luck. Brigs were small ships — 100 to 200 tons, 65 to 100 feet long — with square-rigged fore and mainmasts. They got their name from the sea brigands of the Mediterranean, galleys compact enough for tight maneuvers along coastlines and shallow bays — and ideal for smuggling.

Shaler and Cleveland thought so much alike that when they purchased the 175-ton Lelia Byrd in Hamburg, Germany, each wanted the other to be Captain. They drew lots. Shaler won. Cleveland became business manager. But “these designations were only for form’s sake; the duties of each station were to be reciprocally performed.”

Rare for an occupation rife with suspicion and lethal hatreds, the pair remained lifelong friends. About the only thing they couldn’t agree on was the name of their brig. Cleveland called it the Lelia Byrd; Shaler, the Delia Byrd.

The ship almost sunk at the refitting dock. A storm swelled the river near Gluckstadt. Debris flooded the channel and a cable snapped, prompting a sailor’s nightmare: the Lelia Byrd dragged anchor. The brig slid downstream toward a pier. To save lives, Shaler wanted to cut away the masts. “No,” shouted Cleveland, “the second cable holds!”

Held fast by a 200-yard-long rope of woven hemp, the brig waited out the deluge. It lost the stern boat and an anchor. After a month of repairs to the battered hull, the Lelia Byrd left Hamburg on November 8, 1801, a cargo of tin plates and household utensils in its hold. It had a crew of 15, including two cabin boys and the Count de Rouissillon, a deposed Polish nobleman along for the ride. Twelve other large craft sailed west that day.

A voyage down the Atlantic, around Cape Horn, and up the Pacific Coast took so long, says Richard Batman, “[sea] grass had time to grow on the bottom.” After many dull weeks, each day a replica of the day before, the Lelia Byrd came upon water churned muddy brown by fierce storms. They’d reached the Cape.

A brig was perfect for close maneuvers but not large enough to negotiate the Straits of Magellan without danger. Blasted by shifting squalls and spears of rain, Shaler ordered the foretopsail furled. Not enough. The boat still bounded like a bubble.

Close-reef the mainsail!

Several crewmen climbed to the yard, the wooden spar that crosses the mast. One of them, a Norwegian named John Green, slipped, fell, cracked his head on the main-chains — a small platform on the ship’s side — and plunged into roiling foam. “He was seen but a moment, his head very bloody, and then disappeared.”

“Lower the launch!” someone shouted.

They couldn’t. Any sudden windshift would swamp the small craft.

“Thus perished in an instant,” writes Cleveland, “an excellent young man, in the prime of life, beloved by his shipmates. This distressing event cast a gloom on the spirits of all on board, which was not entirely effaced during the remainder of the passage.”

For protection from worms, barnacles, and sea growth, ships were “bot-

QUOTATIONS:

1. Adele Ogden: “Mummy brown, with a ‘frosted’ appearance...sea otter fur was sought for both practical and ornamental purposes. It became the royal fur of China.”

2. Cleveland: “[The Count de Rouissillon’s] earthly course was cut short not long after we parted. To our great grief we learned that he died at Mexico some time in the year 1803.”

3. Roy F. Nichols: In later life, Shaler became a diplomat. “One of his duties: face the difficult question of whether the American Consul should kiss the foot of the Dey of Tunis.”

tomed" with copper (and if they came from the Boston area, Paul Revere did the work). But when they refitted the Lelia Byrd, Shaler and Cleveland only bottomed to the "light-water mark." By the time they navigated Cape Horn and reached Valparaiso, on February 24, 1802, the brig leaked aft.

Steep, green slopes rise from crescent-shaped Valparaiso Bay, where they stopped for provisions. But Shaler and Cleveland didn't note patchworks of houses on the hillsides, a sandy plain, and a 15-foot wall surrounding a fortress. An odd sight struck them: four American vessels anchored in the harbor.

The ships were being detained, said a Spanish officer, because they aided English privateers or were smugglers. Shaler and Cleveland would need permission from the acting governor — since the real governor, Captain-General Muñoz, was at Santiago — to anchor.

"If we were surprised to meet so many of our countrymen here," writes Cleveland, "we were equally mortified, and in some degree alarmed for our own safety, to find them all under seizure."

It took three letters to the Captain-General, each vowing they weren't smugglers, before the Lelia Byrd got permission to anchor. During their fourth week in Valparaiso, the young New Englanders watched Muñoz and 30 troops, "drums beating, royal colors flying," march from the fort to the seashore. They climbed into a launch and rowed beside the American ship, Hazard. Through a megaphone, Muñoz ordered the Captain to surrender 200 muskets known to be on board. The Captain, named Rowan, refused. Muñoz raised his voice. Rowan still refused. Muñoz vowed vengeance.

The moment he stepped off the launch, Muñoz ordered every American on shore imprisoned. An armed guard led Shaler, Cleveland, Count Rouissillon, and four others to the fortress, where they passed "a most uncomfortable night, without beds, annoyed by myriad fleas, and without food of any kind." They had planned to sail that evening.

Realizing the arrests were unjustified, Muñoz freed the prisoners the next morning. But Shaler had a plan. He'd learned "subterraneously" that they could sell their cargo at Santiago for a "handsome" profit. But they needed permission to enter the bay. So Shaler would protest the ill treatment by continuing it: he'd stay in prison, demand a written apology from Muñoz — and a passport to Santiago. Shaler also sent a letter, in passable Spanish, to officials at the Chilean capital, complaining of gross injustices.

He spent the next 10 days in confinement, writing letters and scratching fleabites. John Quincy Adams said Shaler was "arrogant and indiscreet" with "an undue sense of his own importance." His angry letters to Santiago must have reflected these traits. Officials refused his request.

The passport denied, Shaler walked out of prison. On April 19, almost two months after arriving at Valparaiso, the Leila Byrd prepared to depart. Just then, two privateers came alongside. A lieutenant climbed on, followed by an armed force. "One of our sailors, an Irishman who had deserted," writes Cleveland, "had given information that we had many kegs of dollars on board, stowed under the ballast."

They found quicksilver, instead. Even though it wasn't illegal, under the governor's orders, the soldiers confiscated four kegs.

Shaler exploded. He demanded his goods returned — and safe passage to Santiago.

Muñoz shot back: Why hide the quicksilver? Whose was it?

The ship's.

Would Shaler swear to it — and swear that the Leila Byrd would never deal in contraband?

Most assuredly.

Muñoz produced a volume of Shakespeare. Shaler placed his left hand on the leatherbound tome, raised his right, and swore to the almighty Bard that he and his ship would never smuggle on Pacific shores.

Muñoz returned the kegs. On May 6, after a two-and-a-half month delay, the Leila Byrd left Valparaiso, Cleveland complaining that "in no respect" does it deserve the name "valley of paradise."

Nothing they saw did. The New Englanders regarded every Spanish official as "a large edition of pompous vanity" or a "poltroon"; they regarded "Creoles" as living in "degradation" and Indians as "miserable savages." Everyone they met had "long languished under the shackles of ignorance and superstition." Shaler and Cleveland regarded themselves as a "duumvirate" of missionaries bringing the "gospel of American enlightenment" to the Pacific. Wherever they stopped, they lectured on “rational liberty” in a language most of their audience didn’t understand.

They voyaged north. Because their “unfortunate controversy” at Valparaiso would spread through every port from Chile to Peru, they “judged it most prudent to proceed to some place distant from the scene of our late transactions.” So they sailed straight to Mexico. In the next two months they saw no vessel “of any description” along the way.

San Blas received them favorably, at first. In no time, however, they had created “hostile attitudes” in “the two great officers of the government.”

They found buyers for their cargo. The Commissary sanctioned the exchange. But the “rancorous” governor wouldn’t grant a trading permit and ordered them to leave. The Count de Rouissillon would go to Mexico City for the permit. Twice he headed inland — and the second time, he disappeared. To await the permit in an “uncontrolled” bay, and to escape oppressive summer heat, the Lelia Byrd sailed to Tres Marias Island, 60 miles off the coast.

A sailor had betrayed them. With the Count gone, they distrusted the rest of the crew. They’d allow them to go ashore for exercise, but only half at a time. And the duumvirate would never go together. One always remained on board.

During a quiet afternoon, they broke the rule. After exploring the thick jungle growth, they returned to the beach and saw the unthinkable: the Lelia Byrd was headed out to sea!

“The mate was going off with the ship!” Their crew had been “disgruntled” throughout, but mutiny?

Cleveland: “With such an impression on a desert island, without a boat, without provisions, and destitute of a change of clothing, our situation may easily be imagined to be a forlorn one.”

Six hours later, the brig found a favorable breeze and returned to the bay. A chafed anchor cable — most likely the one that saved their lives at Gluckstadt — had snapped. False alarm. Though “such a protracted state of suspense and uncertainty had become extremely irksome and embarrassing.”

They stayed three months at Tres Marias, enough time to rig a mizzenmast and convert the brig into a three-masted ship. When they finally returned to San Blas, it had a new governor. He’d permit trading, but for an excessive fee. When they refused, he ordered their departure. They pleaded for and got 10 more days (and needed them because — the Bard be damned! — they were dealing on the sly for 1600 sea otter skins fresh from California).

Their prize being “most valuable and our culpability most palpable,” once they had the pelts on board, Shaler and Cleveland dreaded a "visit" from government soldiers. To assure a fast exit, they kept the topsails unfurled.

On the 26th of January, 1803, 15 months after leaving Europe, the Lelia Byrd set sail for California. And didn't get far. "The worms had made dreadful havoc" with the hull's sheathing. It leaked so bad "both pumps were necessary to keep her free." So they stopped at Tres Marias. They careened the ship — beaching it on its side — and applied a fresh coat of boot-topping. Because they lacked expertise, and now had a working crew of only 10, the operation took two weeks.

While at Tres Marias, they learned that seizure at San Blas "had been much greater than we had apprehended." The chief mate, a young Englishman whose "reprehensible" behavior cost him his job, kept a journal. But the pages about their misadventures at Valparaíso were torn out. Had he sold them to San Blas authorities? Were his dealings "more than was consistent with our safety?"

They never learned (nor do they mention the Englishman again). Making the "prudent" choice, they sailed for San Diego on February 14, 1803. "We had information," writes Cleveland, "of there being a parcel of sea otters' skins, which might be obtained advantageously."

Tacking into stiff northwest winds for a month, the Lelia Byrd arrived off Point Loma, March 16, 1803. The next day the ship navigated through acres of kelp and entered the narrow channel. It passed Fort Guijarros, the shore battery where, a few days later, William Shaler and Richard Cleveland — the "advance agents of American destiny," as one biographer hails them — would fight the Battle of San Diego Bay. ■

Oh, I've been to concerts. I've seen everyone from Jewel to Natalie Merchant to the Temptations, albeit always accompanied with someone over the hill. Recently, I went to a concert sans adults. A few months ago, my friend Ellen suggested that we and all of our friends caravan down to SDSU to see Jimmy Eat World and Taking Back Sunday. My parents were easy enough to convince; my dad is a music fan and my mom trusts me. The only problem was that the concert would occur on a Sunday, a school night, which meant that everybody had to be home by eleven. It was a small price to pay for a night out.

When the night came, eight friends and two cars made the trip. Upon arrival at SDSU's massive arena, I felt nothing but thrilled. The first band took the stage at seven o'clock. The opening act wailed and harmonized at an excruciating pitch for 45 minutes, much to the dismay of many concertgoers. The serene nature of emo kids prevented any rudeness or jeering, but an odd quiet settled over the audience; the calmness was more appropriate for a wake than a concert.

Soon enough, though, Taking Back Sunday's obnoxious front-man cavorted about the stage. If inaudible wailing/screaming over thrashing guitars happens to be your cup of tea, then TBS might be the band for you. If not, you'll find yourself in my company.

The high point of the night came when Jimmy Eat World took the stage. JEW (as the band is affectionately referred to by its fans) is good on CD, but nothing could outdo their live performance. The band inspired everyone in the audience to leap to their feet and sing and dance. It was one of the best experiences I've had as a teenager so far. I came back from that concert on Sunday night with a new favorite band (I rushed out and bought their latest CD the following Monday) and an important event in my life behind me.

— Anne Baker,
Carlsbad H.S.

I had a pessimistic attitude toward concerts, although I had never attended one. Musical performances by "today's hottest new artists" did not seem appealing and neither did squeezing myself into a crowd of sweaty, smelly strangers. I was under the impression that the speakers blasted music at decibel levels harmful to human ears, there were copious amounts of mind-altering substances circulating within the crowd, and, most importantly, live music sounded like crap. But my friends told me how cool concerts are and how much of a party-pooper/loser I was, so I eventually agreed to go to one.

The flyer read, "Sugar Ray like you've never seen them before! Raw and uncut! Come and experience the musical show of your lifetime at the naval airfield adjacent to highway 17! Jacksonville, get ready for Sugar Ray! Tickets on sale now." At the time (it was 1999 and I was 12), Sugar Ray was pretty popular and this was the biggest thing Jacksonville had experienced in a couple of months.

My parents were easily convinced that my friends and I would be chaperoned by one of the boy's mothers. In reality, we were driven to the field by the boy's older sister, who had just received her license! The excitement in the car was obvious, yet we all tried to remain calm, as if we attended concerts on a regular basis. We thought we were so cool.

An hour later, Sugar Ray was jamming away, I had my fingers pushed into my ears, and the fun was about to begin. In the corner of the green, grassy field, smoke billowed and a funny smell entered my nostrils. "Are they smoking marijuana?!" I wondered. Apparently,

WELL-KNOWN PHARMACEUTICAL COMPANIES ARE CONDUCTING IMPORTANT RESEARCH STUDIES FOR A LIMITED NUMBER OF QUALIFIED PARTICIPANTS.

I sleep, I wake up, I sleep, I wake up...

A new study of an investigational medication for insomnia may help put you to sleep.

- Restless sleep disturbs the normal rhythms of the body.
- When poor sleep becomes a regular problem it can affect your health.
- If you wake up tired or feel sleepy during the day, you are not sleeping well at night!

If you have chronic problems falling and/or staying asleep, you may qualify for a research study in our state-of-the-art sleep clinic and receive an investigational medication for poor sleep.

Every study conducted by California Clinical Trials is staffed by a team of skilled and experienced physicians and medical professionals trained to place your comfort and well-being first.

Qualified participants:

- Will receive up to $2450 for time and travel.
- Receive no-cost study-related medication and study-related medical care.
- No reports are made to employers, schools, or insurance companies.

Sleep Interfering with Work? Work Interfering with Sleep?

Are you working 3 to 5 nights in a row or rotating shifts and experiencing excessive sleepiness? Is your sleep restless or do you wake up still fatigued? Most mistakes made working nights are due to worker fatigue. We're looking for volunteers 18-65, male or female, in good health, to take part in a clinical trial of an investigational medication being studied for Shift Work Sleep Disorder.

This research study conducted by a well-known pharmaceutical company allows you to try an investigational medication being studied for a limited number of qualified participants.

If you participate, there is no cost to you...instead:

- You receive up to $600 for time and travel.
- You receive no-cost study-related medication and study-related medical care.
- No reports are made to employers, schools, or insurance companies.

Depression

Loss of interest or pleasure? Sadness or hopelessness? Sleep disturbance? Are you or someone you know over the age of 18 and suffering from Depression? If so, you may qualify to try an investigational medication being studied for Depression.

Every study conducted by California Clinical Trials is staffed by a team of skilled and experienced physicians and medical professionals trained to place your comfort and well-being first.

If you participate, there is no cost to you...instead:

- You will receive up to $1000 for your participation.
- You receive no-cost study-related medication and medical care.
- No reports are made to employers, schools, or insurance companies.

Schizophrenia can tear families apart.

Do you or a loved one have Schizophrenia? Tried Haldol®, Prolixin®, Zyprexa®, Seroquel® or Risperdal®? Still feel hopeless, have side effects or continue to suffer from troubling thoughts or voices?

We are caring, experienced professionals funded by a well-known pharmaceutical company to conduct an inpatient and outpatient research study for qualified people with schizophrenia.

If your loved one participates, there is no cost...instead:

- They receive up to $1285 for time and travel.
- They receive no-cost study-related medication and study-related medical care.

no one else cared.

The concert turned out to be a blast, mostly because I was introduced to crowd-surfing that night. I surfed like a maniac, again and again, despite the repeated appeals from security to cease. I would hop on to the many hands at the back of the crowd, make my way up to the front and be lifted down by a big, buff, bouncer-looking fella. Then I'd do it all over again!

So, readers of the Reader, if you're ever feeling downtrodden, form this mental image: a 12-year-old boy crowd-surfing to the tunes of Mark McGrath.
— Patrick Cole,
Eastlake H.S.

On a chilly Sunday evening in February, I was dressed in a sleeveless burgundy top. My mom said I would freeze, but I had heard that Ground Zero, the El Cajon concert venue, would get pretty darn hot. My best friend, Laura, pulled into the driveway in what she refers to as the "box van." I was psyched to head off to see Reliant K, one of our favorite bands.

News reports had warned of rain, but, thankfully, during the long wait in line outside of the venue, we weren't threatened. It was cold, but I knew I would be grateful for my lack of warm clothes once inside. I was excited to come across my good friend Daniel waiting outside.

During the opening band's set, the crowd was pretty dead, so we didn't have a chance to dance much. Laura, a seasoned concertgoer compared to me, wondered if anyone would get a mosh pit going. It sounded exciting to me. Maybe everyone liked the second band better because I got my first taste of moshing then. Exciting! Not really dangerous, but just daring enough. Laura and I avoided the hardcore mosh pit, but we were still getting knocked around.

Before Reliant K's set, we retreated to the back of the venue, where souvenirs were being sold. Laura bought a brown shirt adorned with a white rose. I asked Daniel which shirt I should buy. He narrowed it down to two — both Reliant K — one with dandelions drifting across it, the other with spouting, multi-colored whales. I went with the whales.

For Reliant K's part of the show, we wanted to get as close as we could to the stage. If you want to move through a tightly packed crowd, you can't be afraid to shove people somewhat. Laura and I found ourselves fairly near the stage. The band was great, though, regardless of distance from the stage.

— Michelle Diaz,
Poway H.S.

I was excited and terrified before I attended my first concert without parents. I had never been to a concert that didn't include the flute or clarinet. If my parents found out who I had gone to see and hear (50 Cent), they would have probably destroyed every CD I own.

- Waking up too early in the morning
- Unrefreshing sleep

If you or someone you love is suffering from insomnia, and between the ages of 18 and 64, you may be interested in learning about a research study of an investigational medication for insomnia.

Experiencing severe mood swings?

Individuals with bipolar disorder seek control over their symptoms almost every day. Sometimes they may feel trapped in either a manic "up" episode or in a depressive "down" episode.

A nationwide clinical research study is now seeking volunteers with bipolar disorder. The purpose of the study is to evaluate the safety and effectiveness of an investigational medication in treating individuals with bipolar disorder who are currently experiencing symptoms of depression.

If you are between the ages of 18 and 65, diagnosed with bipolar disorder, and currently experiencing symptoms of depression, you may be eligible to participate.

General Anxiety Disorder?

Millions suffer with General Anxiety Disorder (GAD) — constant worry, fear, and tension, often without an apparent cause. This constant anxiety can interfere with daily life and be harmful to one's well-being.

Medical researchers are enrolling men and women in a research study evaluating an investigational drug for GAD.

Participants must be 18 years or older and diagnosed with General Anxiety Disorder.

Participants receive supervised medical care and medical tests related to the clinical research study, investigational study drug and compensation for time and travel.

For more information or to schedule an interview to see if you qualify, please contact:

Look Familiar?

It was 2:15 the last time you looked. That seems like ages ago. Time is at a standstill and all you can do is lie in bed, staring into the darkness. By tomorrow you'll be so tired that you'll fall asleep at your desk, but chances are you won't sleep tomorrow night either.

We are currently conducting a research study of an investigational medicine for insomnia associated with Generalized Anxiety Disorder (GAD). Participants will receive study-related exams and study medication at no charge. Qualified participants may be compensated. Participants must be between the ages of 18 and 64 and the study requires 8 office visits.

Research Focused on Making You Feel Better

We are a mental health clinic with a focus on research studies for psychiatric conditions and mental health symptoms. We conduct several inpatient and outpatient clinical research studies at any given time, and we may have something that makes sense for you.

Our most common studies involve investigational medications for depression, manic-depression (bipolar disorder), schizophrenia or schizoaffective disorder, generalized anxiety disorder, pathological gambling, attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder, and insomnia (sleeplessness).

If you or anyone you know suffers from any of the above you may qualify to participate in our research studies. Qualified candidates will be provided with free medical care and medication and you will be reimbursed for time and travel.

Some additional benefits we offer are paid transportation, we accept collect calls and we pay for qualified referrals.

I was 16, and I'm pretty sure my parents — my mother, especially — wouldn't have appreciated the choice of words used at the concert. I would trade George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" for 50 Cent's "21 Questions" any day of the week. For some reason, I prefer explicit lyrics over a string

I couldn't have gotten away with it if it weren't for my cousin. I never thought I would be bobbin' my head to 50's beats live until my cousin came up with the plan: we would say we were going to the movies. We left the house at around seven o'clock without any questions from my mom.

The gas light in my cousin's car was on and beeping, so we had to refuel on the way. We almost didn't make it on time. We entered the facility like two kids in a candy shop. All around us were activities that I probably can't go into much detail about on paper...but I will. From the alcohol consumption to the blunts being passed, the whole thing was crazy. People just having a good time with whatever they were doing...but we had no part in it. That night we were there to watch 50 Cent do his thing. The chanting and hollering from the crowd filled the air throughout the night.

The concert was rather short; I felt it was kind of ridiculous to see him perform for about 40 minutes. I now wish I hadn't gone behind my parents' backs. As a matter of fact, I hope my parents aren't reading this.

— Joel Herrera,
Monte Vista H.S.

My parents left town for ten days in February, and I embraced the opportunity to attend a concert; I finally dared to defy my parents at the age of 16 years.

Nothing compares to the experience of being crammed in between not-so-sweet-smelling six-foot men at a Reliant K concert. The temperature at Ground Zero (located in the suburbs of El Cajon) reached exhilarating heights (about 85 degrees) and the sweat and dribble of taller people, along with our own, accumulated in our hair and drenched our shirts. We found ourselves in the middle of mosh pits and struggled

Excessive Sleepiness Research Study Apnea and narcolepsy rob young minds of the sleep they need

Even with treatment, some kids don't get enough sleep. This lack of sleep at night can lead to excessive drowsiness during the day. And when kids can't stay awake, they can't learn.

A research study is testing an investigational medication to see if it can promote wakefulness in children with obstructive sleep apnea and narcolepsy. Children may qualify for this research study if they:

- ☐ Are between the ages of 6 and 16
- ☐ Have been diagnosed with apnea or show signs of narcolepsy

If your child qualifies, he or she will receive all study-related care and study medication at no cost and you may be compensated for time and travel.

to hold our stances, but everything paid off in the end. We started out in the back of the crowd, but thanks to the moshing and ferocious pushing on our part, we ended up in the front.

My best friend and I have no sense of direction, but this worked in our favor that night. As we attempted to find our ride home, we discovered a crowd gathered around the tour bus, where Reliant K signed autographs on shirts, tickets, guitars, and arms.

The memories of moshing, the stench of human perspiration and intense body heat, and our off-key singing brings warmth to my heart every time I think of the experience.

Mt. Carmel H.S.

I went to the first concert without my parents when I was a sophomore in high school. It was at Soma.

The headlining band was Hoobastank, though several other opening bands filled the couple of hours after 7:30, when the doors opened. I went with a friend of mine from a different school. The concert took place in the middle of my school's finals week, so most of my friends' parents wouldn't allow them to go. Though I did not have to beg permission from my mom to go, I had to endure an extensive question-and-answer session: "Is Soma safe? Is there going to be alcohol? Who else do you know that is going? What if I need to get in touch with you?"

As my Mt. Carmel friends sat at their desks cramming for finals, my friend's mom drove the two of us to Soma, where we stood in a lengthy line until the doors opened and everyone flooded inside.

The concert was similar to what I had expected. Though Soma

"prohibits" moshing, numerous people joined the mosh pit. One girl was crowd-surfing until one of the security guards picked her up, tossed her over his shoulder, and continued backstage with her. I am still unsure whether she was hurt, in trouble, or both. People were drinking outside, and the room smelled like alcohol with a hint of marijuana.

Because the only concert I had been to previously was N'Sync at Qualcomm Stadium with my mom a year or so before, I wasn't used to the aftermath. My ears were ringing for the entire day afterward, and even some of the following day, which didn't mix well with the 200 years of history that I had to review. However, the excitement that filled me when Hoobastank did "The Reason" was priceless.

WHAT WAS WILD IN ME LOVED SUMMER

THE LAST DAYS BEFORE SCHOOL STARTED

my mother would drag me, unrepentantly

streets. While I was still brimming with memories of bottling

fireflies and plunging underwater to

bodies, we would ride the creaking elevator up to the department store girls' section and buy plaid dresses trimmed with white collars. We would go to the shoe store. I would climb onto the seat and unbuckle my sandals. I would pull on stiff new socks over my stubbed toes and the salesman, leaning over me, would force my feet into ungiving leather oxfords. I would do as he said and walk in the tight shoes, up and down carpeted floor, stopping in front of him and my mother. They poked at the leather over my big toe and talked about growing room.

At home my mother would make me stand on a dining room chair to try on last year's dresses, to see what fit and what needed a hem let down. The air would be muggy. Outside windows, beneath eaves, hornets whirled, and on the kitchen windowsills, fruit flies circled above ripening tomatoes. Houseflies sleepily patrolled the tablecloth, straying across our lunch leftovers. I remember thinking that when we were all dead the insects would still be alive. They would be eating the leftovers we would be by then.

I would slip out of shorts I'd worn at camp (I'd be wearing my sun-faded swimsuit for underwear) and wriggle into one after another of the dresses, which inevitably would have grown snug. Buttoning the tiny buttons, my fingers would seem too big and I would grow impatient with effort. I would perspire and scratch at a real or imaginary mosquito bite. I would fidget. I would feel as if I were itching all over. My mother, on her knees on the carpet, would look up at me, pins pinched between her lips at one side of her mouth, skewing her heart-shaped face. She'd frown, say, "Stand still."

While my mother adjusted hems, abjuring me again and again not to wiggle while she stuck in pins, I would count down how many days left to Labor Day. I would tally the few remaining evenings I could stay up late as I liked and do all day what my mother when she scolded me said was all I ever wanted to do: "what I God damn well pleased." She would often add, "Left to your own devices, you would grow up wild."

She was right.

What was wild in me loved summer.

Those remaining preschool days, when neighborhood friends and I played out of doors under the evening sky, we would play as recklessly as gamblers down to their last dime. We would swing each other perilously high on swings, throw balls without caring where they landed. Indoors, I would go around hunched over and my mother, ten times a day, must have been saying, "Stand up straight!"

Summer existed in a golden present tense, past and future no more than vague margins. As Labor Day Saturday passed and Sunday arrived, the future gobbled up the hours. I brooded over the impossibility of eating Cream of Wheat at six-forty-five in the morning and learning long division and conjugating etre. I dreaded sitting cramped behind a school desk, dreaded memorizing for piano lessons. I worried about who I would get for teachers. I flinched against being bossed about and made to stand in lines and ask permission to use the bathroom. Gym mats' soured sweat smell came back to me. I worried about bullies. I mourned (with I would guess, vast sighs) the lost hour after school that would be given over to scales and dull horrid compositions written for children, pieces whose tunes didn't sound anything like radio love songs I'd begun to learn the words to.

Cowboy movies I'd see on Saturday afternoons showed scenes in which cowboys corralled and broke wild horses. The horses reared back their huge heads and snorted and whinnied. Their unshod hooves stirred dust clouds. The cowboys kept after them. So that no matter how heroically the horses resisted, there always came the terrible moment when the cowboy triumphed and the horse relinquished its will.

This morning on my corner a woman with a red scarf tied over her hair hoisted what must have been a six-year-old boy up onto the first step of the school bus. From almost every window children's faces looked out, and their voices, pitched high with excitement and reverberating within the closed metal, made me think of pet cages filled with wing-to-wing with bright birds.

The boy's right foot reached the second step, then he turned, seeking out his mother's face, a terrible look stamped on his tiny features. His eyes, the dark brown velvety color of the horses' eyes, were filling. "Goodbye," his mother waved, her wave tense and unconvincing, "goodbye."

So palpably painful was their parting that even above the bus's noisy idle and squawking children, it seemed that anyone who passed by could hear the break between mother and child. I did. The bus door wheezed shut, muffling the shrill children; the driver eased back into traffic. The mother watched the bus pull away and then headed back down our block, dabbing at her eyes with the red kerchief. She walked, then, like old women walk.

Rising sun warmed the morning air, burned off dew. I took shoes to be reheeled and soled and polished, picked up the dozen brown eggs brought to me from a country henhouse, visited for a few minutes with their bearer who added to her gift of eggs a fat warted Hubbard squash to which was still attached a frayed umbilical vine.

"Summer's over," my friend said matter-of-factly as she wrapped the squash in newspaper. As if to underline her statement, was primarily about a child's break with his mother. I knew the story was as much about mother as child. But what the sight provoked in me was my own childhood sorrow at summers' endings.

I unwrapped the gray, warty Hubbard squash, spreading out on my counter the newspaper in which my friend wrapped it, noting beneath my hands the photographs of high school football teams — the boys' faces blunt — and the ads for lunchboxes and notebook paper and she led me out to her back yard and showed me her sunflowers. They had grown six feet high and flowered big around as her patio table and were strewing saffron powders onto the fence. "The weight," she said, "the weight tipped the flowers over."

Some weight tipped me over, too.

Back home, I paid bills and answered letters and answered the telephone when it rang and thought of the little boy, followed him in my mind's eye as the noisy bus swallowed him up. I had known as I walked by the bus stop that the story acting itself out there crayons.

While I licked the last stamp on my stack of envelopes, I thought, "The little boy must even now be opening his lunchbox." I said to myself then, as rebelliously as I must have said it when I was ten, "Why does summer have to end, why does push have to come to shove, why do I have to wear shoes, why do I have to speak not sing, why do dreams have to be knit — tediously — into thoughts, why all those long years ago did I have to learn to multiply vast sums I've never earned? Why, why, why? ■

Eucalyptus

(Meaning "Hidden")

They began arriving in California from the other side of the world during the latter part of the 19th Century — first a handful of them, then en masse, once the idea got around that they might prove useful in helping to build the railroads. Hardy, resilient, and fecund, they multiplied and spread till they became a significant component of the state's predominantly immigrant culture. Admired for their grace, resourcefulness, utility, they were established in ever-growing permanent settlements. But not everyone was happy with them, and as time went on, an increasing groundswell of opinion held that they were too fecund, too resourceful, that they were greedy and unruly and incorrigible. And dangerous. Certain individuals were held responsible for violent deaths and summarily dispatched. Today, these immigrants are to be found in multitudes all over San Diego County. With increasing ire, their critics deride them as foreign, or at least non-native — a true charge, but one that comes from people who themselves arrived on the scene very late.

This controversial population is the state's ubiquitous eucalyptus trees. Eucalyptus (meaning "hidden") is a genus of tree whose name derives from its flower buds, which are capped by a pulpy lid. Botanists have identified more than 500 species of eucalyptus worldwide, many of which are evergreen and some of which are among the tallest trees in the world. A mature Eucalyptus regnans, for instance, can reach 300 feet. The trees are ideal for drought-prone areas, since they make efficient use of whatever water is at hand; the seeds, bark, and leaves are rich in oil, used for cold remedies and disinfectants; and they are exploitable for lumber and firewood and grow rapidly. The young trees of one common species of eucalyptus grows 10 feet a year. While oaks take several human generations to reach adult size, eucalyptus seedlings will become a towering grove in just a few years.

In 1787, when a fleet of ships laden with English criminals and their keepers arrived in Australia's Botany Bay for purposes of colonization, these newcomers were unprepared for the environment they found. Australian life had evolved for millions of years in isolation from the flora and fauna of the American, European, Asian, and African land masses. This was as true of the Australian gum, or eucalyptus tree, as it was of the kangaroo — both species for which no close cousins could be found on the shores of the West. Historian and art critic John Hughes, in his book on the colonization of Australia, The Fatal Shore, says that "it took at least two decades for colonial watercolorists to get the gum trees right, so that they did not look like English oaks or elms."

Australia's aborigines had lived with the eucalyptus as with the kangaroo and the wallaby and the dingo for millennia — indeed, eucalyptus composed (and today still composes) three-quarters of all Australian forest. The trees were indispensable to the thirst on ground in which water-rich eucalyptus roots abounded.

If the Australian aborigines were never to extend beyond their homeland in a great migrant flood, the eucalyptus tree had a different fate in store. It was to be transplanted to regions all over the globe — from Ethiopia and Madagascar to Spain, Israel, Kenya, Brazil, and California. A United Nations study from the 1950s holds that eucalypt-tus is an exceedingly valuable tree for purposes of reforestation and industry and advocated its liberal use in developing areas.

In 1858, William C. Walker — owner of the Golden Gate Nursery in San Francisco — published a handwritten catalogue in which he advertised three species of eucalyptus for sale at five to ten dollars each. An article in the 1902 issue of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's "Bureau of Forestry Bulletin" provides additional history of the eucalyptus in California.

[Eucalyptus was] introduced into California in 1856 by Mr. Walker, of San Francisco, and in that year 14 species were planted. In 1860 Mr. Stephen Nolan, a pioneer nurseryman of Oakland, being greatly impressed with the rapid growth of these first trees, and also with their evident adaptability to the climate, commissioned a sea captain sailing for Australian ports to secure any Eucalyptus seed he could, at the same time furnishing money with which to make the purchase. A large supply of seed of several species... was received from this source and sown in 1861. Mr. Nolan continued to import seed in quantity for several years, distributing the seedlings widely through the state.

Walker, Nolan, and others ballyhooed the trees' excellent ornamental qualities and outstanding rate of growth. During the next ten years, the trees were transplanted to Southern California, a region that was nothing more than coastal desert characterized by thousands of square miles of nearly treeless, brush-covered mesa and flatland. On August 11, 1872, the San Diego Daily World newspaper reported, under the headline "The Eucalyptus in San Diego":

It is well known here that this tree, better known as the Australian gum, grows vigorously in this city, but few realize how vigorously it grows. Three years ago Mr. E.W. Morse planted a eucalyptus seed in his garden, and from that seed has sprung up a tree which is now more than eighteen inches in circumference two feet from the ground, and not less than twenty-five feet high! Several other trees in the garden, the same age, have done nearly as well. The wood of this tree is very hard and tough.

Only a few months later, on November 16, 1872, the Daily World reprinted an article from a publication called Science and Industry:

In this plant (eucalyptus) we may have a very important addition to our material resources, its great merit consists primarily in its adaptability to regions otherwise unsuitable for the growth of forest vegetation, in the extreme rapidity of its growth, and in the great value of the wood for economical purposes. When planted in marshy land it has a very decided effect in draining the soil and freeing it from a malarious tendency, while it is said to thrive where the annual rainfall is scarcely sufficient to keep ordinary trees in proper vigor. As is well known, trees having this rapid growth are generally soft and spongy and of comparatively little value for timber; but the gum is quite the reverse, the wood being very heavy and hard, resisting the action of air and water, as well as of most kinds of insects. In general properties it resembles the wood of the oak, and it is employed very largely for ship timber in Australia. The growing plants disseminate an aromatic fragrance, which is supposed to be conducive to health. This is due to the volatile essence of the oil, which can be readily collected and is known as eucalyptol. The leaves furnish two and one-half percent of their weight of this substance, which has come into use already as a solvent of resins...and it is warmly recommended for the manufacture of varnish.... [In] Spain and the south of France it has been made to replace quinine with decided advantage. Paper prepared from its bark answers for packing.

But in the San Diego area, the most immediate benefit of eucalyptus was as windbreaks — an important contribution to a terrain where ocean winds sweep over the brush-covered slopes to wreak serious havoc on homesteads, fruit orchards, and crops. The trees also made the area seem to be something that it was not. Jeff Levin, the current curator of plants at the Museum of Natural History, explains the popularity of eucalyptus this way: "We don't have many native tall trees in Southern California, so the desire to have something that you could put in and would grow to a nice height and give people in this area the image that they were living somewhere else was very popular, and so quite a number of eucalyptus species were introduced and planted extensively as street trees and specialty trees in yards. For a very long time, the image people have had of Southern California is of eucalyptus trees and palm trees — almost a symbolic image.

"Essentially," Levin goes on, "all the people who live in Southern California, and certainly those who have economic power and are going to be selecting what's planted, are themselves imports from the Midwest or eastern United States, and the image of the habitat in which they want to live is one with green trees. They've made some concessions to the climate, in that some of the popular plants are ones that don't require huge quantities of water; although palms require a fair amount, eucalyptus are quite drought-tolerant. I think it's a reflection of the transplant characteristic of the region that not only do you have people who are not native to the area, for the most part, but they've brought in plants that aren't native. Most of the horticultural plants that we use are non-native, so that the landscape is pretty much composed of this whole collection of things that we've put in, trying to reproduce something that we — because of our upbringing, I suppose — find more attractive than what normally would be here."

Contrary to popular belief, eucalyptus was not introduced into California by the railroads. The idea that eucalyptus would be a good material for railroad ties was hatched in the first decade of the 1900s, and by this time, the trees were already widespread in large and small groups all over the state. In 1906, the Santa Fe Railroad Company purchased an 8000-acre tract of land known as San Dieguito Ranch, renamed it Rancho Santa Fe, and commenced the wholesale cultivation of eucalyptus for railroad ties. This was the beginning of what has come to be known as the county's "Eucalyptus Boom."

For example, a firm calling itself the Pratt Eucalyptus Company obtained 700 acres near Escondido in 1909 and began planting huge quantities of eucalyptus there. The company speculated that the trees could be used for lumber, medicine, and railroad ties, and if Australian animals were imported into the new forest — koala, wallaby, kangaroo, kookaburra, maybe even some dingoes — Escondido could be the proud host to an authentic little piece of Australia, a sure-fire tourist attraction. This plan came to nothing, and the commercial returns on the various applications of eucalyptus — cough syrup, aromatic woodwork for homes, croquet sets, and bowling balls — yielded little. In 1919 fire destroyed the company's groves, but not before the City of Escondido had installed specimens in public places and private yards all over town.

In 1911 Max Watson, forester for Torrey Pines, undertook the transformation of the coastal region stretching from La Jolla to the bluffs at Torrey Pines by planting the area in eucalyptus. "There was not one tree growing in that area when I took the job," he recalled in an interview in 1959. "There were thousands of acres of fine land going to waste. Eucalyptus at least offered it the possibility of producing something."

He requisitioned a batch of prisoners from the city jail for labor and instructed them in how to plant eucalyptus trees. "We worked them hard for ten days," he remembered, "fed them well, paid them five dollars, and then released

A year later, Watson's trees were seven feet tall; so he requisitioned more prisoners and planted thousands of additional trees. The result today is the familiar coastal sweep of eucalyptus groves in that area. Indeed, when the University of California decided to build a campus at La Jolla, Watson said of his stands of eucalyptus, "I don't think the university would have agreed to locate a branch campus there if it hadn't been for that."

At the same time Watson was planting trees along the coast, the Santa Fe Company's chief of timber and ties was learning a sad truth in Rancho Santa Fe. The chief had journeyed to Australia in 1906 to hand-select the eucalyptus species he believed most likely to yield the best ties, and thousands of acres of land had been planted with about 30 different types. But in 1915, when the company began harvesting trees and manufacturing the ties, they discovered that the eucalyptus tus wood warped, it was hard to cure, and it wouldn't hold a railroad spike. The Santa Fe Company was left to contemplate its vast, useless spread of Australian gum trees. The company's solution was to plant citrus groves side-by-side with the groves of eucalyptus. But by 1927, Rancho Santa Fe's true destiny was realized, a residential covenant was promulgated, and houses began to be built on the site of the company's failed experiment. The broad outlines of this tale might also apply to Scripps Ranch, where the Scripps family had embarked on a like scheme of eucalyptus cultivation that came to a like conclusion.

By the late 1920s, San Diego's eucalyptus ghettos were well established: Rancho Santa Fe, Scripps Ranch, La Jolla/Torrey Pines, Balboa Park, and the San Diego Zoo. All these areas had turned into dense collections of a tree that no Westerner had even heard of a scant century and a half earlier.

The Natural History Museum's Jeff Levin points out that "most of those areas were predominantly covered with either chaparral or coastal sage scrub, both of which are brushy vegetations. Also, those areas are mostly up on mesa tops. Before we imported eucalyptus and other kinds of trees, most of the mesa tops at that elevation were brush-covered. Trees were restricted to the canyons and drainages where there was some water. All of those areas you mention, if they had oaks or sycamores, they would have been found only in the canyons.

"Now, botanists, ecologists, zoologists classify our brushy vegetation into two types. One is chaparral, which is composed of things like manzanita and wild lilac. In the lower areas closer to the coast, we have vegetation that's called coastal sage scrub. In San Diego County, 70 percent of the coastal sage scrub has been removed. Furthermore, what remains tends to be in pretty small patches — 10 or 15 acres here and there, rather than there being the large expanses that some animals would need. The result of removing much of the coastal sage scrub is dramatic declines in some plant species, but also, because of the way it's been partitioned, in some cases it's affected some of the animal species more drastically. There are a number of endangered species of mammals and birds that only live in coastal sage scrub, and as a consequence of this removal and chopping up, those species have become endangered. There's one mammal, a subspecies of the kit fox, that's extinct, and it lived primarily in coastal sage scrub; at least part of the cause of its extinction was the elimination and partitioning of the coastal sage scrub habitat. The importation of eucalyptus in large numbers has certainly played a part in that. On the other hand, any type of introduced tree — it didn't have to be eucalyptus — probably would have had the same effect."

It's the old American story; immigrants are welcomed because they are badly needed to perform some sort of work, but when their usefulness ends, so does the welcome. This is as true of eucalyptus as of any other imported group. Even while the genus was in its honeymoon period, during which the trees helped make the region attractive to settlers and developers, an occasional word of warning was sounded. As early as 1889, the San Diego Union reported items like this: "Giant eucalyptus trees are soon to be plentiful in Prospect Park, Coronado.... These trees have been secured from the Botanical Gardens of Australia. If the half is true which is told of them, we fear the view of the Pacific Ocean will be shut off from San Diego." Similar complaints can be heard today.

In 1938 another Union story told how one eucalyptus tree in La Jolla was no longer considered by some to be a desirable neighbor. It was alleged that the tree's roots had gotten tangled in the sewer system; also, a next-door neighbor claimed that it gave her yard too much shade and was constantly dropping debris on her lawn. "It's the best tree of its kind in La Jolla," countered John Morley, La Jolla park superintendent. "If we take it out, there will be a move to take out all similar trees, and the La Jolla Conservation Society never will stand for that."

What finally became of this tree is unclear. It's interesting to note, however, that one of the people quoted in the newspaper account speculated that the tree had already been a bone of contention for 15 years. If the La Jolla Conservation Society carried the day, it's possible that the current residents of the neighborhood are still casting hexes in that tree's direction.

In fact, the massive importation of eucalyptus trees has caused many problems for many people. The branches grow so fast that they cut off views; the roots crack sidewalks, curbs, and roads; they steal water from nearby plants, drop litter on the ground, and exude an oil that kills other plants, except for the flowering varieties. They are of little use as food or nesting trees for most birds (the wood is even too hard for woodpeckers to penetrate); and some people say the trees smell like cats' urine. Today's homeowners, as a result of our eucalyptus legacy, face large annual landscape-maintenance bills. And over the last few years, an even worse problem has arisen: Apparently, the trees are quite capable of killing people.

In 1983 a limb fell from a eucalyptus tree at the entrance to the San Diego Zoo and struck and killed four-year-old Freida Williams. And during the stormy winter of 1987, Dortha and Marion Miller were driving past Eucalyptus Park in La Mesa when a giant tree fell over, struck their car, and killed 80-year-old Mrs. Miller and put her 83-year-old husband in the hospital with serious injuries. People were shocked and outraged, of course, but none more so — or more tenaciously — than John Sevier, a tree-trimmer specializing in eucalyptus and now an expert witness in personal-injury lawsuits involving trees.

At the time of the Freida Williams tragedy and, later, when Mrs. Miller was killed, Sevier made clear in newspaper reports his allegations that the deaths could have been avoided if proper maintenance had been performed on the offending trees. Today, he still has a great deal to say on the subject and has even referred to Eucalyptus Park as "a death trap."

The trees in Eucalyptus Park were planted around 1880, purportedly by one C.S. Crosby, and the stand was deeded to the county for park land on Christmas Day, 1929. It is now a handsome little area, and anyone strolling through, checking out the trees, would almost certainly think the county had taken care of any problems since the Miller accident. But John Sevier will disillusion you in about a minute, dragging you here and there, from one suspect tree to the next.

Sevier approaches one eucalyptus that sits next to a volleyball net strung between two poles and points to a place on the tree trunk where the stub of a broken limb pokes out. The missing limb once hung directly over the net. "When that branch was still intact," he explains, "I took a photograph of it for the purpose of showing the county what a hazardous condition the tree was in. A couple months later I came out, and the limb was gone! And so was the pole! The limb had obviously broken off right over the pole." He says it was just dumb luck that no one was injured.

He scrambles up a slope toward the playground to point out another tree. "We can walk right up to this tree and see that its trunk is not only deteriorated but it's completely eaten up and infested by bugs," he says. "And it's right here by the playground, so the county can't say, 'Oh, that tree's out in the south 40; nobody would be in that area, that's no threat.'"

He next heads down toward Bancroft Road, which skirts the front of the park; alongside the road are numerous sawed-off eucalyptus tree trunks. "After the Miller incident," he says, "the City of La Mesa came in — they control the right-of-way in front of the park — and removed every eucalyptus by the side of the road and replaced them with what appear to be carrot wood trees. Which is a smart move, because the carrot wood is easy to maintain.

"But look around the park itself," he goes on, turning. "Look how the grounds are just littered with tree limbs. The county is either so dumb or so arrogant they don't even get rid of the bodies — they don't get rid of the evidence that trees are dropping branches."

Finally Sevier alights on a picnic table bench and continues to spout an earful. "The county is only one of a number of public entities that, whether for budgetary reasons or priority reasons, just refuse to do what they know needs to be done for the safety of the public. We could go cruising all over

San Diego, and I could show you places where eucalyptus trees have grown out over streets so that branches could break off and hit cars or pedestrians. The City of San Diego, Caltrans, the San Diego City Schools, the San Diego Zoo, which is leased from the City of San Diego — all these entities are negligent, in my opinion."

Sevier, who has served as an expert witness in about 30 personal injury matters (the Miller case was finally settled out of court), takes pains to be very clear that he is not "anti-euk," that he doesn't advocate the wholesale extirpation of eucalyptus trees from the regional scene. What he is opposed to is something he terms "a mindless Mother Earth, let-it-grow-let-it-flow mentality that says, 'Oh, we have these beautiful, big, green eucalyptus trees here, and some people like John Sevier say we should trim them heavily, but then they won't look pretty anymore.' That's where the mindless part comes in. I'm all for trees and green things. I belong to the Sierra Club and all that stuff; but eucalyptus is the wrong species to take that attitude toward. With eucalyptus, uniquely, it's 'nice and big and healthy' that's the culprit. Eucalyptus rapidly outgrows its own strength, so you're left with a tree that has long branches and a brittle personality. If you don't keep it heavily trimmed, you're asking for trouble."

The Freida Williams case of 1983 still excites Sevier's ire, and he can name a number of ways in which he believes the zoo to have been at fault — and in which it continues to be at fault. "Every year in San Diego — in December, January, and February — we get some rain and some high wind," he says. "And every year when the trees go down, they act as though it's the very first rainfall and the very first 25- to 30-mile-an-hour wind we've ever experienced in the county, when it happens predictably every single year, year after year. That's what made me so disgusted with the zoo; they said, well, when the limb fell and hit Freida Williams, there was some wind that day.

"When it's a matter of keeping visitors safe from the animals, it's a different story. For instance, they put a moat around the tiger. They built the moat high enough so that if the tiger is hungry and he just wants to jump out and get some extra food, he won't be able to do it. And they take into account combined influences. Maybe he's hungry, maybe he's in heat, and maybe lightning strikes and scares the hell out of him, all at the same time. So they build the moat high enough. Yet they trim the trees only for everyday beautiful conditions. Then when a limb does fall off, they say, 'Oh, we never expected there to be a wind of 35 knots and rain too.' It's just bullshit."

The San Diego Zoo began as a collection of exotic animals at the San Diego-Panama Exposition of 1915; when the fair was over, the collection's mastermind, Harry Wegeforth, agitated for the development of the exhibit into a permanent world-class zoo. For this purpose, eucalyptus seemed perfect. Here was an exotic, interesting tree that you could plant in vast numbers and in almost no time get an extensive tree canopy in return for your trouble. At this time, before eucalyptus was as widespread as it is now, the exotic trees also helped give zoo visitors the illusion that they were someplace other than San Diego. Paradoxically, this key objective of "landscape immersion," as it's presently called, is one of the reasons why eucalyptus is no longer considered by zoo personnel to be an everlasting boon.

"I don't think people fully appreciated the nature of eucalyptus when they were introduced," says Charles Coburn, the zoo's chief horticulturist. "Eucalyptus are extremely competitive for light and water, and the oils from their leaves tend to allow for a limited number of compatible plants. Another factor that has surfaced recently for people here at the zoo and in Balboa Park and in other county parks and botanical gardens is the fact that the summer limb-drop from mature eucalyptus, and the fact that they tend to fall over in storms, is more of a problem than people anticipated. In a public garden it's a real problem, because you never know which limb is going to break. They can break from absolutely healthy trees and in a size that's extremely dangerous. The predictive ability just isn't there. The limb that killed Freida Williams fell from a healthy eucalyptus, one that had been periodically pruned and had no noticeable problem — no disease, no nothing. I took that eucalyptus out, and I'm going to take all the eucalyptus out in that [entrance] area."

According to Coburn, the eucalyptus's reign over the botanical scene at the zoo is gradually coming to an end. "Dr. Wegeforth had the idea of displaying animals in a parklike setting, and of course trees are an essential component of any park," Coburn says. "But he had eucalyptus gaining dominance. We're in the midst of transforming the zoo not only in terms of the animal collection and the way the collection is organized in bioclimatic zones, but we're taking a different tack with the entire plant collection. The plant canopy is already evolving very dramatically; if you were able to see aerial photographs of the zoo over the last ten years you'd notice some real significant differences in the nature of that canopy. We have ten bioclimatic zones now, and for a long time eucalyptus was the dominant tree in all of those areas. In the Tiger River zone, for instance, we've taken out over 100 eucalyptus. They weren't really the most desirable tree for that zone anyway; they aren't really Asian tropical. We took out the eucalyptus, along with 20 feet of soil, put the soil back, and planted different trees altogether, among them figs and palm.

"One factor is that certainly many San Diegans and Southern Californians are used to seeing eucalyptus. People from the East or from other countries might be interested in them for a while, but one of the things we're trying to do in landscape immersion is take people out of their everyday perceptions. And a more diverse and exotic tree population does exactly that."

Only a few years ago, it appeared that the entire eucalyptus controversy might be settled by an act of God. The eucalyptus longhorn borer, a member of the beetle family, somehow found its way here from Australia and began making alarming inroads into the resident gum-tree population. The cry went up all over Southern California that the eucalyptus tree was doomed. No doubt the arrival of the longhorn borer caused certain factions to smile at the prospect of a eucalyptus-free Southern California.

The borer made its first known California appearance in a eucalyptus grove in El Toro, in Orange County, in 1984 and was worrying San Diego officials by 1986. Although the incidence of infestation was far worse in Riverside, Orange, and Ventura Counties, the beetle had been found in Balboa Park, Torrey Pines, and Oceanside. Indeed, the Oceanside grove had to be cut down, and at least one infected tree was removed from Balboa Park. Officials were sufficiently concerned that they sent two experts to Australia to locate insects that prey on the borer. A preliminary finding was that the eucalyptus catastrophe might be averted if certain types of Australian wasps and bees were imported and released across the San Diego countryside. But finally, the once-urgent vision of the loss of ail the county's eucalyptus came to be seen as a long-haul proposition, and the sense of official alarm simply dissipated.

"There definitely have been losses," Jeff Levin says of the longhorn borer phenomenon, "but we haven't seen anything like the complete demise of eucalyptus. What we've had is more of a gradual decline. I think it's certainly possible that we won't see as many eucalyptus in the future, since it's no longer a pest-free tree; people may choose to plant other things in new landscaping, although I haven't seen much evidence of that as yet. The thing is, a eucalyptus tree that's healthy and has adequate water is pretty well able to resist the infestation and produce a gum which, as the beetles try to bore in, is exuded and blocks off the tunnels and jams up the beetle's mouth parts. A healthy tree will do that, but if the tree is stressed — not getting water, or overcrowded, or getting too much competition from other plants, or whatever — it's not able to produce as much gum. As a consequence, the beetles are able to infest it. But the dire predictions we were hearing a couple of years ago are greatly overblown in that the time scale we're talking about — not losing eucalyptus altogether but seeing fewer of them — is probably twenty to thirty years instead of five or ten, as the initial predictions were."

Whether you're talking with Charles Coburn, John Sevier, or Jeff Levin, one thing everyone seems to agree on is that the San Diego area will be best served in the next few decades if the mass planting of eucalyptus is no longer regarded as the only way to deal with barren areas slated for development. All three emphasize that persons managing such development will be well advised to acquaint themselves with the downside of eucalyptus importation — with the fact that they'll pay a price, in terms of high upkeep and high liability, for the expedient of cheaply producing a piece of Australian forest to surround their office parks or housing tracts. If a reasonable approach is taken to landscaping, it's likely that aerial photographs of the whole county will over the next couple of decades show a process similar to Coburn's hypothetical zoo panoramas: the eucalyptus ghettos, if not actually shrinking, certainly not expanding much further, with new areas under development being shaded by canopies less weed-like and with more tractable trees.

Eucalyptus's detractors might say that the tree is an interloper from foreign shores, a tree that was never heard of, let alone seen, in California before 1850, and one that has caused problems for residents of the state and helped reduce the region's indigenous vegetation. But in that sense, the tree and its history are not so different from the human influx into the area. Everywhere from El Cajon and La Jolla to Scripps Ranch and South Bay, up to Hollywood and Santa Barbara, is a transplanted culture founded on the principle of make-believe that has little (if anything) to do with what was originally here. Eucalyptus — fast-growing, ethereal, fragrant, foreign — is the perfect arboreal symbol of the entire process, the quintessential set decoration for Southern California. ■

Southern Californians Caught in the Tangled Web

The Ponzi scheme had a great run, as Hoover and Dominelli spent wildly and wormed into powerful circles. But as Chapter 12 discusses, once Dominelli confessed and was sentenced to 20 years in prison, further big questions had to be resolved: was Hoover astoundingly naïve or a key participant from the beginning? Why didn't other insiders come to their senses earlier? Were the enabler-lawyers really fooled or just protecting a client they knew was guilty? Was the whole J. David adventure a portent that San Diego was corrupt from top to bottom?

Chapter 12

"Now will I show myself to have more of the serpent than the dove; that is, more knave than fool," wrote Christopher Marlowe 300 years ago.

When many scams collapse, observers ask whether the key players were knaves or fools. Was audacity part of their plan? Or were they just stupid? Was the chaos a deliberate smoke screen, or didn't they know any better? Were they cool under fire because they had deluded themselves? And what about the investors? Were they victims of their own cupidity? Or stupidity?

In the J. David aftermath the knave-fool question became the dominant one. In spring of 1985, an accountant for the bankruptcy trustee explained in court that nobody at J. David knew how much money was in company bank accounts. Judge Irving asked if this was a matter of "design or incompetence." Sighed the accountant, "a little of both."

In retrospect, J. David "Jerry" Dominelli's lies were startlingly brazen, his behavior startlingly bizarre, and his business acumen startlingly nonexistent. It's astounding that the tangled web he weaved hadn't ensnared and strangled him earlier. As journalists and investigators pieced the story together, partly from Dominelli's own confession that the money he took in was gone, it was evident that Dominelli had run a rather crude Ponzi scheme — nearly as crude as the scheme Ponzi himself had run. Almost as quickly as investors' money had come in, Dominelli had dissipated it on J. David subsidiaries, dubious loans and investments, gifts to charities, race cars and sports cars and racehorses and huge estates and ski condominiums and jewelry and art objects and memorabilia. In December 1983 insiders and their friends had smelled trouble and started pulling their money out. As word got around, the inside run became an avalanche. By the time the company collapsed there was virtually nothing left. Some investors continue to believe that insiders have stashed a portion of the money in tax-haven banks, but few think Dominelli or Hoover has done so. They were broke. The spree was spent.

The legal tally? Dominelli pleaded guilty on March 21, 1985, to two counts of mail fraud that stripped investors of $80 million, one count of bankruptcy fraud, and one count of evading $10.7 million in taxes. He admitted that he had fabricated his track record and investors' monthly profits, that he had lost money on what trading he did, that he had falsified corporate records, that he had diverted customers' money to his own uses, and that he had lied to the Department of Corporations to avoid regulation. "Only by soliciting and using new funds from new investors could I satisfy demands for withdrawals," confessed Dominelli. In short, he finally owned up, it had been a Ponzi scheme. He could be sentenced to up to 20 years.

That hardly set the matter to rest. Investors and J. David insiders are under intensive examination by the IRS, which has reconstructed investor lists from what records are available. Hoover, Dominelli, Mayor Hedgecock, and Hedgecock's aide Thomas Shepard have been indicted on one count of conspiracy and several counts of perjury for allegedly funneling $357,000 into Hedgecock's 1983 election campaign. The California Fair Political Practices Commission (FPPC) has sued the same four, plus two others, on similar grounds for $1.2 million. And numerous civil suits remain.

One of the defendants in these cases is now on the sidelines — Dominelli himself. In October 1984, just a few days before his second round of indictments for bankruptcy fraud, and just before his political perjury and conspiracy indictments were handed down, Dominelli was talking with Hoover on a jail phone. Suddenly, he became silent. Alarmed, Hoover called the prison. Guards rushed him to the jail physician, and then to a hospital. He had suffered a severe stroke.

It wasn't surprising. Dominelli's health had been deteriorating: He had been treated for an ulcer while his company was foundering and had suffered from hypertension in jail. He had looked increasingly ashen and weak in his court appearances.

When news of his stroke got out, people wondered if Dominelli was concocting another hoax. A stroke can be faked by a skilled con artist, and Dominelli was certainly that. But a team of court-appointed physicians attested that it was the real thing. "God seems to have stepped in. Jerry Dominelli can't tell any more lies," says Sandra Kritzik.

Psychiatrists examining Dominelli found that his vocabulary had been reduced to yes, no, yeah, I, that, oh God, and all right. He communicated by grunts and written messages, but his scribbles were difficult to comprehend. The doctors said, though, he was not insane.

But they were confused by his behavior. Dominelli had long refused to wear a hearing aid. (A judge ordered him to use one in court, however.) In the rehabilitation sessions, doctors couldn't tell if his poor responses to questions resulted from his inability to hear or from his mind's inability to process the instructions.

During one therapy session, the beeper in Dominelli's watch went off, and he scrawled on his notepad, "Telephone." The doctor permitted him to make a call. He was able to punch out the long-distance number and punch in his credit-card number and somehow communicate by only grunting a few sounds. Those who know Dominelli were smiling. Someone with a nine-word vocabulary and poor physical coordination was able to punch out accurately more than 20 digits on a telephone and get his message across when it was to his advantage? The con artist was still at work, even after the stroke, they said.

Despite his incapacitated state, Dominelli was declared competent to stand trial. When he confessed on March 21, he could not pronounce the word "guilty." Judge Irving had to lead him through the exercise.

Now, with Dominelli's fraud case finished, prosecutors said they would continue trying to learn who helped Dominelli in the fraud.

Throughout Southern California, people wondered about Nancy Hoover. After all, she had spent 24 hours a day with Dominelli. What was her role? Why had she only been indicted for her involvement in the election, not in the scam?

At least publicly it seemed she had decided to sleep the whole thing off. When J. David went under, she would sleep from sunup to sundown. On one of the rare occasions when she made a public appearance, she enraged investors by wearing a T-shirt emblazoned Nobody's Perfect.

In late May she came out of her cocoon to be interviewed by Tom Blair, San Diego Union gossip columnist. She was the Hoover of old, laughing and quipping, leaping from topic to topic. But her humor was tinged with an uncharacteristic sarcasm and flippancy. For example, noting that some of the checks that had gone to Shepard had come from a firm named Cheyney Associates, Blair asked her who Cheyney was. With her former ebullience, but not without irony, Hoover admitted that Cheyney was her 14-year-old German shepherd, "a magnificent, wonderful animal. I got tired of reading about these things, so I started using phony names so people wouldn't know it was me." The dog, Hoover added, "felt he made a bad deal."

The grand jury that indicted Mayor Hedgecock apparently thought so, too. Among the overt acts it cited against Hoover was the fact that no Fictitious Business Name Statement had ever been filed for Cheyney Associates.

At the end of Blair's interview, Hoover breezily pointed out that the press had made a mistake in its coverage of the gift she had offered Hedgecock. The papers had said it was a Rolls-Royce. "It was a red Ferrari," she laughed.

The interview infuriated those who had lost money in J. David. "I had defended her. I had never called her a cold, calculating bitch. But..." says Sandra Kritzik bitterly. "She's laughing at the rest of us. She's still around, smiling." Quickly, many of Hoover's former supporters started dropping away.

In the early days of the J. David collapse, Hoover had taken the Fifth Amendment. But eventually she cooperated with investigators and the bankruptcy trustee. She tried to get immunity in return for testimony but was refused, insist prosecutors.

There are two general theories on Hoover. One is the Rebecca-of-Sunnybrook-Farm theory, that she was hopelessly naïve and didn't know what Dominelli was doing. As the scandal unfolded,

Hoover had told Sandra Kritzik, "I feel as though I'm on a ship and very big waves are coming, but the captain won't tell me anything." (Handyman Parin Columba, who was indicted along with Dominelli, adopted a similar defense, what Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Rose calls "the Nuremberg defense" — the accused admits the crime but says he was doing it under orders from his boss. Eventually he pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge and got only probation.)

The second theory is that Hoover was cunning and avaricious, that she might have held Dominelli captive while she and others (such as Yarry) ran the show. There is little doubt she was consumed by greed and is a pro at Machiavellian maneuvers. And she certainly pulled massive funds out of the company — a few say as much as $6 million. Some Hoover defenders say she was mainly involved in noninterbank matters, particularly J. David Securities. However, she did pay the interbank money-finders and keep some interbank records, she was on the board of J. David Banking, and she did help plot the escape from Great Britain to Lugano.

Since she had had experience in the investment business, some find it incredible that she didn't realize Dominelli was doing very little trading. She should have known he was not getting confirmations; after all, she opened all the firm's mail, contend these critics. They also say that she should have known that he couldn't possibly have been earning money at the rate the two of them were spending it. Several knowledgeable persons claim she was with Dominelli when the "earnings" for investors were invented each month. "I would love to have been a fly on the wall, overhearing those conversations when they came up with the month's winnings," says attorney Kenneth Poovey. But Dominelli and Yarry both insist Hoover was not present at such times, and one prosecutor says there is no evidence she was.

In the end, Hoover's actual role may fall somewhere between the "Rebecca"

I WAS ONE OF THE SIX MILLION OBESE PEOPLE IN THE U.S.

Vacations weren't fun anymore. Getting there was hard and getting around was even harder. Weight loss surgery has been a treatment for obesity for more than 30 years, but I didn't realize how technology has not only improved the outcome but also the recovery process.

Dr. Wittgrove performed the first laparoscopic gastric bypass in the world. Since I made my decision to work with him, I've not had one moment—one second—of regret.

I lost 130 pounds, not to mention my high blood pressure, joint pain, sleeplessness and pre-diabetic condition. I feel 20 years younger. I have total mobility. I even took the dream cruise I always wanted. Dr. Wittgrove and his team gave me the support and education I needed to understand the changes my body would undergo. I tell my husband everyday how much I love my new insides! If you're 100 pounds or more overweight, attend the seminar on September 17th to find out more about how you can live a healthy, hopeful life.

and "guiltier than Dominelli" extremes. There is still plenty of spadework to be done, say investigators. Awaiting court appearances, she no longer lives on the Rancho Santa Fe estate. Her ex-husband is paying for the education of their daughter, and her children, now in their early 20s, are helping pay for her lawyers. After always siding with Dominelli initially, she is now telling intimates that his dishonesty has made her disenchanted. (But the disenchantment is not mutual; according to one investigator, "Dominelli will never rat on her.")

Still a mystery, too, is Mark Yarry's role. Many, such as former portfolio manager Robert Mengar, think Yarry engineered the foreign-exchange strategy. "I was always told that Yarry came to Jerry [in mid-1981], set him up with the offshore bank, set up the accounts, and told him he'd teach him about inter-bank," says Mengar. "As far as I knew, Yarry had set up the whole thing." It was Yarry who moved the money around tax-haven banks. "Dominelli didn't know anything about offshore banks, or other banks."

Dominelli feels Yarry walked off with some money, and many investors suspect it, too. Yarry left for France shortly after the bankruptcy, later went to South Africa, then returned to France. The U.S. government has not called him back, and nobody had explained why it let him go. He is a defendant in the third-party suits, but some doubt he would return to be tried. Yarry, like Hoover, is still under investigation by the U.S. Attorney. Yarry's lawyer says his client will be taking the Fifth Amendment indefinitely.

Many questions remain. Investigators looked into Dominelli's activities under the Racketeer Influenced Corrupt Organizations (RICO) statutes, a key part of the 1970 Organized Crime Control Act passed by Congress. The FBI probed whether Dominelli laundered money for hoodlums—sending cash to a tax-haven bank and repatriating it as "clean" money for a fee. He may not have had the sophistication for that, but others in the organization may have. And because he always carried great wads of cash and had a huge safe at corporate headquarters, it's possible that he accepted cash from investors who were desperately trying to get rid of it. Private investigators are looking into some apparently questionable uses of the limousine service, some unusual flight patterns of corporate jets, and mysterious money transfers, among other things.

Certainly, Dominelli had relationships with persons who have been identified as having organized crime contacts: Gatto, Bonnano, and Glick. Las Vegas attorney Oscar Goodman, who filed incorporation papers for a Las Vegas subsidiary in 1983 and also served as J. David's landlord, has had clients such as Anthony "Tony the Ant" Spilotro, considered by authorities to be a Las Vegas front for mobsters.

Another major issue is whether the list of people who received preference payments is complete. Some investors suspect that many others — mobsters, perhaps, and Dominelli family members — got their money back surreptitiously. There is a theory that J. David always had two client lists: the respectable citizens, and the mobsters, who remained secret and were paid off before there were outward signs of trouble.

Nagging questions also remain about the role of the regulators. The California Department of Corporations and the Banking Department in particular must be made to explain their pathetically inept actions, which some believe raise the possibility of corruption. Dominelli's pools were clearly securities and should have been registered. And how the Banking Department could conclude, with the massive body of evidence at its disposal, that J. David Banking was doing no business in California defies rational analysis.

The federal regulators could have cracked down early. One former J. David employee told the FBI in 1983 that the firm could be forced to open all its books through use of a legitimate, if aggressive, ploy. The J. David Trading subsidiary was fully registered with the Commodity Futures Trading Commission. Dominelli and Hoover were listed as principals. According to CFTC rules, Dominelli and Hoover "were subject to inspection at any time," says the former employee. "And not just J. David Trading. The FBI or Justice Department under this mandate could have gone in and demanded to see details of all businesses, whether registered or not." The FBI didn't buy the argument. The Bank of England appears to have used a similar tactic and turned out to be the hero.

There are questions about the government's current role as well. Robert Rose, the Assistant U.S. Attorney probing the J. David scheme, has a small staff; not surprisingly, the case is moving slowly. "If only to allay public anxiety, they should have a decent-sized staff," remarks a San Diego criminal lawyer. But some suspect the government is dragging its heels because it does not want to get any deeper into the case. Hoover and Dominelli had connections with many big-time politicians. According to rumor, there are big names that have not yet come out. That's why, say some, the government has not released the names of investors obtained from Dominelli in Miami and recovered from Lugano. Some feel that in the spring of 1984, when the bankruptcy trustee was supposed to be negotiating with Switzerland over the return of the Lugano records, he was in fact negotiating with the U.S. government, which, say these cynics, was trying to protect some important politicians.

Could the scheme have been detected from inside? Former employees agree that J. David was highly centralized: All decision making was in the "throne room," as Dominelli's office was contemptuously called. Hoover and Dominelli were shrewd in shifting employees around, playing them off against each other, and making sure no two people became intimate enough to start comparing notes. If all the employees — and investors who were constantly around headquarters — could have huddled together and shared what they knew, the whole thing might have been thwarted, comments a former financial official of the firm. But Mr. Inside and Ms. Outside made sure that didn't happen.

Those on the J. David payroll certainly should have been more alert. Numerous interviews reveal that employees believed that people in the J. David inner circle were alcohol and substance abusers.

Could the service professionals — law, brokerage, and accounting firms and banks — have prevented the swindle? The courts will decide that in the third-party suits. The suits maintain that if Rogers & Wells had not helped provide false information to the state of California, the interbank contracts would have been regulated, and the scheme would never have gone on.

Without a doubt First National Bank knew that J. David was commingling investors' funds with its own corporate funds. Indeed, in setting up a loan to J. David, First National requested a letter from Dominelli authorizing the removal of money from any account that might be overdrawn. On January 12, 1984, Dominelli wrote to First National and empowered it to tap the J. David Banking account — supposed to contain only the investors' funds — for a $248,000 check to Hoover Farms, the Hoover-Dominelli horse stables. The J. David Banking account, said Dominelli, should also be charged to pay off Fitzpatrick Racing and a lawyer from Wiles, Circuit & Tremblay. The note was an obvious example of commingling.

However, in today's "zero balance" banking, such intermingling of accounts at a bank is permissible if, from an accounting standpoint, the customers' money is kept segregated — that is, if any money taken from one account and transferred to another is quickly replaced. Thomas LaHay of First National says that if the books are straight, the money going out of an account doesn't have to be the same money going into it. But, concedes LaHay, that's a mighty big "if." In the case of J. David, the money was clearly not replaced. The J. David Banking account had run down to close to zero. So had the other accounts. The bank also said it was not its job to monitor accounts for irregularities such as commingling.

"The one organization that knew what was going on and could have told the others — the employees, the brokerage houses, the accounting firm, and the law firms — was First National Bank," states a former top financial official of J. David. First National strongly asserts it has no liability and that it didn't know of the fraud until the end. President E.G. Cunningham also points out that it was First National which first closed down Dominelli's checking accounts.

There are known instances of checks made out to J. David Banking that were endorsed to another account at First National. The bank honored the endorsement. "If you're looking at this as a morality play, here is a question investors would ask: 'If I write a check to a particular account, shouldn't it be deposited there?'" says Assistant U.S. Attorney Rose. On the other hand, comments Cunningham, "It's the responsibility of the bank to see who is signing the check," not where the money comes from or goes.

And there is another angle. Some feel Dominelli had deluded himself into thinking that in spending his investors' money, he was actually just borrowing from his Montserrat "bank." In many Ponzi schemes, the perpetrators believe they are only "borrowing" the investors' money and will replace it later. Dominelli did borrow from the Montserrat bank; a Laven-thol & Horwath letter proves it. Robert Mengar, for one, believed early in the game that Dominelli was able to spend extravagantly because he was borrowing from the

Eliminate Fat & Cellulite Without Surgery

Why use Mesotherapy instead of Liposuction?

- No downtime • No anesthesia
- Innovative technique micro-injecting proprietary formulas under the skin
- Used for spot reduction for problem areas or for overall weight loss
- Liposuction does not treat cellulite

"bank." But the "bank" had only his customers' funds.

Should investors have sniffed out the scheme? The Oklahoma investor did. But investors who exercised normal due diligence didn't figure it out. Clearly, a Monday morning quarterback can say that no one should invest in a scheme in which there is no paper trail, no information on how your money has been invested, and no audit. A 40 to 50 percent annual return, with only one down month in three years, is absurd on its face, particularly since in the commodities business, about nine out of ten outside investors normally lose money. Yarry even said that in his book.

However, it must be kept in mind that to many customers, interbank was not an investment. It was purely a speculation and a gamy one at that. And people gamble for the same reason they climb mountains, shoot rapids, drive cars at 110 miles an hour, or parachute for sport. Part of the thrill is the risk.

"At first, I thought the investors were generally stupid. But later I came to the conclusion that it was more a case of the Greater Fool Theory. People were in it with the idea of getting out quickly and leaving the losses to the next sucker," says a former high official of J. David.

There's no doubt that some sophisticated investors knew, or at least suspected, that J. David was a scam. But the excitement was to get in and get out with fat profits before the music stopped. The tragedy is that in all such scams, a high roller's less affluent employee or neighbor sees him making money in the game and then mortgages his home to get in as an investment. When it comes apart, the investor loses everything—the speculator just goes on to another thrill.

The J. David investors fell into two basic categories. There were the "hot money," well-heeled speculators, concentrated in Palm Springs and Orange County, who were in it partly for sheer exhilaration. Then there were the "family" folks—Hoover and Dominelli's families, friends, employees. Many of them could not afford to lose their money and had no business being in the game.

It's important to remember that the rich should put 10 to 15 percent of their portfolio lios in risky ventures offering big payoffs. If they win, fine. If they lose, they take a tax write-off. For this reason, people of modest means shouldn't pursue the same strategies. Don't invest in a scheme in which others are speculating.

And don't be afraid to use guilt by association as an analysis tool. If you suspect there are organized-crime-related people or questionable tax-haven banks involved in a scheme, don't wait around until all the evidence is in. Get your money out.

Schemes like J. David will continue to flourish in part because the public remains ignorant. As recently as spring of 1985, San Diego TV stations were routinely referring to Dominelli as a "fallen financier." He was not a financier, because he did little investing with the money his customers entrusted to him. He simply took his clients' money and used it for his own purposes.

Similarly, a San Diego columnist in late December told his readers that he felt sorry for Jerry Dominelli; after all, he had given so much to local charities while his operation was succeeding. Obviously this columnist did not understand that Dominelli was not giving his own money to charity. He was being generous with his customers' money. And from a financial standpoint, his operation had never really succeeded. It only stayed in operation until his customers' money, which he had been diverting illegally, ran out.

Amateur psychologists are now having a field day hypothesizing whether Dominelli was mentally unraveling as his firm was financially unraveling. Dominelli stayed absolutely cool when the heat was on. One investor, a doctor, at first interpreted his behavior as an indication of Dominelli's innocence. He later concluded that Dominelli was cool because he was detached from reality. He blamed his downfall on the media and the authorities.

That wasn't surprising: The flip side of a con man's delusions of grandeur is paranoia. At the end, investors who had called Dominelli a pathological liar were beginning to think the description might have clinical meaning.

Like many con artists, including Ponzi, Dominelli had come to believe in his own scheme. That's one reason he never took off when it was evident J. David was coming asunder. "He went from day to day thinking he could come out of it. He thought he could get ahead of the wave. It had worked so well for so long, the dream would still serve him," says Poovey. In addition to money, the scam gave him another kind of return. Like other con men, he derived great satisfaction from devising a new lie at every crisis point.

The J. David affair was largely a fantasy—a love fantasy. Many say it was a case of cherchez la femme—Dominelli turning crooked to win Hoover's heart. A lot of evidence points in that direction. Dominelli apparently concocted his fraudulent track record, for example, to impress Hoover. Hoover was everything Dominelli was not—physically attractive, dynamic, vivacious, sociable, powerful in the community. He lived vicariously through her.

And in selecting handsome, macho salesmen and beautiful secretaries, Dominelli was also living vicariously. For three years he could be their guru—he could fulfill his lifelong dream of giving orders to the Beautiful People, rather than the other way around.

He commanded their respect because they believed he was a financial genius. He may have been diffident and insecure and homely, but he was a genius. Of course, he was a genius in only one respect: "He seems like a nice, simple shit, but he's a devitious guy...a pro at deceit," says a former J. David consultant.

The fall of J. David wasn't just the crash of a financial house of cards; it was the shattering of one man's fantasies about himself. His so-called genius was his only asset—and it was proved a sham in front of the whole world.

Dominelli simply did not have the moxie to compete with the pirates who operate out of Caribbean coves. He was stunned by his success. Even he seemed to understand that the more the money poured in, the deeper he would eventually be buried. "When he was sitting there pretending to be trading currencies, I think he was trying to figure out how to get out of the thing," says a former consultant.

Of course, he never did figure that out.

But Nancy Hoover says she finally figured him out.

At first, she appeared almost as head over heels for him as he was for her—her "grade-schoolish" love letters reveal that, says an investigator who found them in the company rubble. "At the end, after the company had collapsed and they were all engulfed in scandal, they went to dinner. She chewed him out all evening. Do you know why? Because he hadn't committed himself to marrying her," recalls an official. According to one insider, Dominelli got so much heat from Hoover that he arranged to have one of his lawyers tell her that he was working on divorce papers, even though he wasn't.

By late 1984 Nancy Hoover was saying Dominelli had lied to her. She began cooperating with the bankruptcy trustee and the U.S. Attorney's office. Soon she was stating that Dominelli was the perpetrator and that she was completely innocent.

Shortly, she fell in love—and once again, with someone unlike herself: Kenneth H. Hunter, Jr., a rigidly conservative Republican businessman, 62, a resident of a super-upscale community near Santa Barbara, who was recovering from a stroke. The pair met through their daughters, who were college friends.

ASK YOUR DENTISTS!

"People Say I Look 20 Years Younger with My New Teeth!"

For years I was used to my lower jaw almost touching my nose when I would bite something. I was a young man, but my profile was like that of someone much older without their dentures. This was because when I was young a country dentist took out many of my teeth. He didn't realize that I might grow up to be 6'5".

"I FELT LIKE I LOOKED LIKE AN OLD MAN AT 30."

I wanted to get married and lead a normal life for someone my age, but young women would take one look at me and run the other way. Then one day I consulted with the dentists at Sonrisa Dental Group and they showed me "How Whitening, Restoring, Replacing My Teeth and Changing My Jaw Position Could Totally Change My Appearance and Give Me a More Confident and Attractive Smile!" Not only that, it was Quick, Easy, Pain-free and Very Affordable!

It absolutely changed my life. Now I just love to smile and the confidence it has given me is amazing. I am now getting married and starting to realize my dreams, thanks to the dentists at Sonrisa Dental Group.

Hunter is a multimillionaire — and a handsome, dashing one at that. “The Hunter family is megabucks. Back in the 1950s, when his father was an oil industry kingpin, young Ken Hunter would walk into a room, and the women would all swoon. They thought he was a movie star,” recalls an oil industry investor.

Now, Hunter owns golf courses and an extremely controversial toxic waste dump. In fact, Hoover accompanied him in summer 1985 when he inspected the dump site as environmentalists were picketing.

Initially, Hoover and Hunter were to be wed in an ultraestablishment Episcopal church, with a reception at a carriage-trade country club. However, publicity got so nasty that the pair informed the press the wedding was canceled — and then tied the knot before a local judge on September 25, 1985. They honeymooned in Hawaii and returned to his estates in the Santa Barbara countryside, where Hoover is taking care of one of Hunter’s children by a previous marriage.

“I feel sorry for Ken, her new husband. He has no concept of the possible trouble she is in. Since he is in a controversial business, he assumes she is just being hounded unfairly by the press and the government, as he feels he is,” says one of Hoover’s friends.

For many months, Dominelli would continue calling Hoover, who, according to reports, didn’t inform him of her new love. However, one friend insists that Hoover has told Dominelli that they cannot resume their relationship when he emerges from prison — and that in fact she never wants to see him again. Meanwhile, Hoover continues to assert that she is completely innocent of all wrongdoing.

On Christmas Day 1985, Dominelli’s estranged wife and children visited him in prison. He remains in poor health.

For many months after Hoover started blaming Dominelli for the scam, he remained quiet. “Dominelli will never rat on her,” said an investigator. But in early 1986 he pleaded guilty to his role in Hedgecock’s 1983 campaign financing and implicated Hoover. It was not known whether he was also feeding information to the U.S. Attorney’s office, which was looking further into the scam. One thing was certain: The romance between Captain Money and the Golden Girl was over.

Epilogue

“Things are seldom what they seem. Skim milk masquerades as cream,” according to Captain Corcoran and his Buttercup in Gilbert and Sullivan’s H.M.S. Pinafore.

And so it was with Captain Money and his Golden Girl. He sold himself — and she and his salespeople sold him — as a captain of finance, a guru, a genius in foreign currency trading. He was none of those things.

His Golden Girl, too, was merchandised as warm, savvy, a shrewd organizer. She fell short.

A smooth talker with a criminal past sold himself as an expert in overseas banking.

A real estate lawyer and a divorce lawyer suddenly became experts in international financial law.

A glib gadfly became an in-house cleric, political powerbroker, dispenser of largesse — and the one whose presence convinced many in the public that J. David was a truly superior organization, morally and intellectually.

Alas, it was so much skim milk. But thus far, only one person — J. David Dominelli — has admitted as much. All the others, who once paraded as leaders of Southern California’s emerging cerebral elite, are pleading naïveté. Repeated over and over again are the words, “I didn’t know what was going on.”

Even William P. Rogers, the internationally acclaimed lawyer, could only offer the same explanation: “We did not think the whole scheme was fraudulent. We were just as fooled as everybody else was,” said Rogers in a deposition related to the civil suits.

In retrospect, many people of influence — regulators, journalists, bankers, lawyers, government investigators — should have spotted the masquerade. Steven Gourley, deputy commissioner of the California Department of Corporations when J. David was just emerging in 1982, says, “We had no evidence Dominelli was doing anything wrong, but we had an awful lot of reports of 40 percent profits. Anybody who has been in securities enforcement knows that when four things combine together, you have something to look at.”

The four telltale signs of investment fraud are promised high returns to investors, lavish offices and lifestyles of the principals, “high profile” political involvement and charitable giving, and “a boy genius with a secret plan,” says Gourley.

spades — and just as importantly, a gaggle of greedy, gullible potential investors who had made money in the 1970s Southern California real estate bubble and were looking for a place to stash it outside the government's gaze.

But it's almost a certainty that no one — Jerry Dominelli, Nancy Hoover, Mark Yarry, or some unknown puppeteer — sat down and choreographed the whole caper.

It was evolutionary. A dreamy, passive, but driven man fell in love with an ambitious, charismatic woman who desired to be a philanthropist and political string-puller. He needed her status, and she needed the money he would provide her. More than anything, each longed to live the good life, the sooner the better. Soon, they attracted aggressive people who had the connections and chutzpah to merchandise both the investment and the sociopolitical programs.

J. David was an instant marvel. But as one of the first employees points out, J. David was doomed to collapse, even if Dominelli had been an authentic genius and investors had actually been making 40 to 50 percent returns. The shallowness, callowness, and incompetence at every level foreordained that outgo would eventually swamp income, and the entire edifice would topple.

J. David had no monopoly on incompetence, as we stumblers — journalists, government bureaucrats, lawyers, and accountants — soon proved. At this writing, the U.S. Attorney's office has only convicted one main character: Dominelli. When Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Rose resigned as prosecutor of the case in early 1986, he blamed his boss, San Diego U.S. Attorney Peter K. Nunez, for not providing him with adequate personnel. But Nunez blamed Rose for not pursuing the case aggressively. The inaction had persisted a year and a half. Former J. David insiders who had gone to the FBI in 1982 and 1983 had not even been interviewed by investigators who insisted they were trying to ferret out Dominelli's accomplices.

Nor did J. David insiders have a monopoly on greed. By early 1986 investors and creditors had filed claims with the bankruptcy trustee for a staggering $1.75 billion. In court, Judge J. Lawrence Irving wryly remarked to bankruptcy trustee Louis Metzger, "You're a little short, aren't you?"

Some of the lawyers pursuing the deep-pocket civil suits recruited dubious plaintiffs, thereby inflating the sums they sought to recover, or offered to refrain from suing potential defendants in return for information. In late 1985 these lawyers began pressuring San Diego's Michael Aguirre to drop Hoover from his lawsuit so that Hoover would cooperate in the civil suits. He refused to do so on principle.

Will there be more

J. Davids? Of course — unless you believe that there will never again be a confluence of gurus, greed, glitter, and gullibility.

Such confluences are common in Southern California. But again, there is no monopoly. In November 1984 San Diegans flooded to an auction and paid inflated prices for items that had belonged to Hoover and Dominelli. At the very same time, in Moses Lake, Washington, in the heart of the Columbia Basin, one Kenneth D. "Kenny" Oxborrow was being charged with defrauding 1,100 investors of

Oxborrow, who was eventually sentenced to 15 years in prison, had for three years promised investors returns of 2 to 2.5 percent a week — more than 100 percent a year. He told his investors he was putting money in commodities futures. He had developed a computerized technique for beating the game. What's more, people didn't have to pay anything if they lost money — Oxborrow just got 20 percent of any profits.

Oxborrow had 3 airplanes and 12 autos, including a Mercedes-Benz, a Cadillac limousine, and two Rolls-Royces.

People contended he had done a lot for the economy of Moses Lake, buying real estate at above-market prices, for example.

Oh, there were cynics. "As a teacher, if I had had to predict what he'd do in life, I would have said he would become a potato-chip driver in Moses Lake," said Arnie Brown, his high school counselor, explaining that Oxborrow had been a C student, although he was "polite, cooperative — I never had a nicer-mannered kid in class."

That's what everybody said. "We heard he was such a Christian man. He had such a good track record," according to a woman in Moses Lake. A farmer observed, "Oxborrow is a nice guy. He did so much for the community. They [the critics] want to kick him when he's down." ■

Riot Lyrics

As a 47-year-old native, I would like to convey the following lyric from Mr. Zappa's first album. It, by the way, was written during the Watts riots. This goes out to Jason Williams ("Touch One, Touch All," "City Lights," August 4): "I'm not black, but there's a whole lotta times I wish I could say I wasn't white."

Snack Break

I appreciate a lot Ed Bedford's "Tin Fork" reviews. However, something is missing this week (August 4): to get a chance to try Sharp Coronado Hospital's meals, I'd like to have his friend's address in Coronado. So I can break a leg first!

MTV Update

Two weeks ago it was printed in the "Blurt" section (July 21) that our band, Cape May, would be appearing on MTV's Room Raiders on the tentative date of August 11. We have just been contacted by a representative in New York who has confirmed that the show will be aired on August 24 at 4:30 p.m. I'm not sure if you would print this as a correction or an update, but if it is too much of a hassle, don't worry about it. Thanks.

Bigot View

I am a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. I enjoy your paper and read it every week. But I felt the last religious section, where you rate churches, was a very bigoted view of church doctrine by an ex-Mormon who seems to have an ax to grind ("Sheep and Goats," July 28). It seems you have never put down any other church's doctrine. But last week you did. The article was filled with misrepresentations of the church and things taken out of context. So in the future, please tell the truth, and if anyone wants information on church doctrine, I will send you a Book of Mormon and church literature.

James Sindar
Escondido

Pointless

I found it quite amusing that so many people felt they had to complain about the July 28 "Sheep and Goats" column. I can understand the one letter by someone who's never read the Reader before, but assuming the other people have looked through the paper more than once before, they all sound pretty stupid. Every single "Sheep and Goats" column I've ever seen in the Reader has been the same: a description of whatever church is the focus for that week. It's pretty much an advertisement for the church disguised as an information piece. So the focus of his church is against Mormons. If you don't like that, don't listen to his radio show, as that's all he's got anyways. There's no point in railing against the Reader for printing the information in the first place.

Ignoramus Pastor

Re "Sheep and Goats," July 28.

What were you thinking when you published this abomination? I have waited a week before writing this, to give myself time to cool down. These articles have always been informative, up to this time, and then you give this ignoramus a pulpit to spread his garbage. I couldn't believe you could allow such a muckraking article to be published in your publication. Please replace Mr. Drew Goodman immediately with a rational, sensible columnist who knows how to properly report on denominations in a proper manner. He has completely lost his credibility. As for "Pastor" (ha!!) Carlin — what a loser!

Mormons In Denial

Name Withheld's indignation regarding Mormon beliefs was laughable (Letters, August 11). "Christ is the center of our religion" is but one example of Mormon silliness. I'm sure Jim Jones in South America claimed similarly. Polygamy was never sanctioned by Jesus. King James: Mark 10 verse 6, "But from the beginning of creation God made them male and female." Mark 10:7: "For this cause shall a man leave his father and his mother and cleave to his wife." Please note "wife," not "wives"!

Name Withheld obviously is not knowledgeable about tenets laid down by Mormon cult-manipulating nabobs and is probably one of those Mormons in denial who don't know about Arizona Strip polygamy, as well as that practiced in northern Mexico. Visit Colorado City, Arizona, or check out Nixon Springs and dry farmers in that little piece of religious insanity north of the Colorado River and south of St. George, Utah. If you are not a "fundamentalist Mormon," you won't be any more welcome than a Christian in Iran. This area is a real polygamy hotbed, pun intended, within our United States, one which has yet to be properly addressed on a state or federal level. But then, we have terrorists taking top priority but not for the last 100 years. Despite Latter-Day Saints' church elders' pontifications to the contrary, polygamy in Arizona Strip gets a little wink and no intervention by leaders, who officially denounce it but could stem this often pedophilic behavior. Hmm! If they were Roman Catholic priests, well, who knows.

Name Withheld might also like to address other "News of the Weird" things such as crotchless men's underwear. Oh well, you get this picture, or perhaps you wouldn't want to envision that one. Do I sound like a former Arizona Strip Mormon? Quite possibly.

Usually, I sign my name, but to honor anonymity of Name Withheld, I sign,
Name Withheld

Gray Cancer

Jeffrey Lauber of Newport Beach wrote that Brian Fies's cartoon on cancer was "in the worst taste" (Letters, July 7). I disagree. We are a society so much in denial about death and disease that we don't take responsibility for our health. Cancer recently overtook heart disease as the number-one killer of Americans in 2004. What will make us sit up and pay attention?

Cartoon comics have long been a useful tool for opening our eyes — recently to explain scientific and religious theories, decades ago to explain modern health care, and hundreds of years ago to stir up social unrest and start a revolution (French Revolution). As recently as last year, comics were used in Tijuana to educate people about Alzheimer's disease. So why not cancer?

Brian Fies poignantly illustrated the complicated — and sometimes irrational — emotions, thoughts, and resulting behaviors that adult children and their cancer-afflicted parents struggle to address. His "art" is powerful because of his skillful blending of humor, truth, and pain.

Life isn't black or white, comedy or education. Fies's cartoon fits neatly into the gray real-school-of-hard-knocks experience as simultaneously funny and sad. Keep up the creative methods of communication — keep opening our eyes.

Jeffrey Lauber may not patronize your advertisers, but I picked up the Reader for the first time in years and made time to read it all because of Brian Fies.

No Jewel in La Jolla

San Diego County Place Names

The thing that convinced me that I should write the book on San Diego place names was the discovery of errors in earlier books on the subject," writes Leland Fetzer in the preface of his new book, San Diego County Place Names A to Z. The book is encyclopedic, with information on more than 1600 San Diego locations. On Saturday, August 20, Fetzer will discuss his book at Rudolph Schiller's Bookstore in Old Town.

"I am less patient when I observe the same error repeated again and again in different sources," writes Fetzer, who was unavailable for comment. "This indicates that writers have simply copied from their predecessors without questioning the accuracy." These erroneous statements include "Guatay means 'large rock,'" "Batequitos means 'little baptized girls,'" and "Wire Mountain was named for the nearby Marine Communication School."

LOCAL EVENTS

"There's a lot of misinformation out there," says the book's editor, Jennifer Redmond. "The Loveland Reservoir was supposedly named for a farmer, but it turns out that it was named for Chester H. Loveland, president of the California Water and Telephone Corporation, [which was] the company that built the dam."

"One of [Fetzer's] pet peeves is that developers will come up with names that don't reflect history or something descriptive [of the location]," Redmond shares. Fetzer writes that he's excluded most "recent, forgettable names" like Vacation Isle or Riviera Shores.

"[Those names] don't say anything about San Diego; they could be anywhere," says Redmond. "Carlsbad or Coronado hearken to history, whereas Vacation Isle — what does that mean? It's like saying, 'Nice place to take a vacation.'"

Fetzer writes, "I think that a resident of El Cajon would like to know that the Kumeyaay [Indians] called this valley something like Matari, 'wide valley.' The mission fathers called it Santa Monica, and Spanish-speaking laymen called it Rancho El Cajon, 'the box,' because it appeared to have no exit."

Leland Fetzer

Every entry in San Diego County Place Names A to Z includes the area's name, a translation (if necessary), a general location, commentary, and references to earlier investigations. "The bibliography is very thorough," says Redmond.

Caves of La Jolla

Of all the name origins she has read, Redmond's favorite is La Jolla. Many people believe La Jolla comes from the Spanish word joya ("jewel"). "And they really want it to mean 'jewel,'" says Redmond. The most likely source for the town's name is a Spanish geographical term, hoya, also spelled joya or jolla, referring to hollows on the coast worn by waves. There are many caves in La Jolla. "People think the word 'jewel' has a fancier connotation than a place that has holes or caves," says Redmond. "Margaret Langdon [an authority on the language of the indigenous people, the Kumeyaay] asserts that the word's origin may lie in Kumeyaay, and that word is matku-laahuuy, a place that has holes or caves. It could be from either [Kumeyaay or Spanish], but it almost definitely is not derived from the Spanish word for jewel, joya."

Another place name fraught with misinformation is Carlsbad. "Writers say that Carlsbad changed its name to Carl during the First World War, but there is nothing to support the statement," Fetzer writes. "When an untruth is repeated it is called a canard, a duck. The most famous canard in American history is George Washington's cherry tree, while San Diego's hardest duck is the claim that Julian nearly became the county seat in the early 1870s."

Fetzer informs his readers that because he has included names from the past, "The book can also serve as a finding list for names not found on contemporary maps."

"Long ago I read that the heaviest annual rainfall ever recorded in the county was at Nellie, but I couldn't find Nellie on any current maps. This book would have told me that Nellie was the name of the post office for the community on Palomar Mountain from 1883 to 1920."

Brownfield Naval Auxiliary Air Station, located east of Imperial Beach, was named after Melville S. Brown, who died while trying to land his aircraft near Descanso on November 2, 1936. "Generals and admirals, understandably, choose to name military posts for other generals and admirals. But there is an exception to this rule: according to U.S. Signal Corps policy, army airfields were to be named for men, usually junior officers, who died in airplane crashes in the line of duty. I am happy to include in my book the names of these young men who died too soon."

OUTDOORS

Ocean Water Temperatures are probably peaking now, the result of many weeks of summer sunshine and warm coastal air temperatures. While the water offshore seldom reaches 70 degrees Fahrenheit, shallow-water temperatures of 70–75 degrees are not uncommon on gently shelving beaches late in the day. Wide, sandy beaches such as Coronado, south Mission Beach, and La Jolla Shores are now at their best for comfortable bathing.

Highest Tides this month are associated with the full moon. ## ROAM-O-RAMA

A GUIDE TO UNEXPECTED SAN DIEGO AND BEYOND | BY JERRY SCHAD

Parsons Landing on Santa Catalina Island is not only the site of a small beach and a spacious camping area; it is also the home of one of the best examples of native Southern California grassland habitat. Gray-green after winter rains, bleached gray during drought, the perennial grasses here thrive with the right combination of fine-grained soil, soaking winter rains, desiccating summer drought, and the absence of much grazing in the past by domestic and feral animals.

The native grasslands of Parsons Landing are only one example of the botanical richness and diversity of the north slope of Catalina's west end. On these sheltered, north-facing slopes, you'll find plenty of luxuriant chaparral vegetation — most notably Catalina cherry, a large shrub or tree displaying spike-shaped clusters of white flowers in the springtime. Its dark, red fruits, which mature in summer, resemble large black cherries.

First, of course, you'll need to navigate to the island itself. Visit the Santa Catalina Island Company's website (www.scico.com) to help with your plans and needed reservations. You'll need to drive to the port of San Pedro, catch a Catalina Express ferry to Two Harbors on the narrow isthmus of the island, and either lodge in Two Harbors or camp at nearby Little Fishermen's Cove Campground or remote Parsons Landing Campground.

Parsons Landing Campground, accessible by foot from Two Harbors either as a day hike or as an overnight backpack, involves a trek of seven miles one-way on a gently graded dirt road. The road hugs the shoreline, circuitously swinging around every ravine and canyon along the way, offering ever-changing perspectives of interface of land and sea. Early on, the route detours into Cherry Valley, where plenty of cherry trees grow to heights of 30 feet or more. Later, you'll pass several organizational camps and private marinas.

Nearing seven miles in, the dirt road bends left (southwest) and you continue going straight (west) on a trail through grassland to the scattered camp and picnic sites of Parsons Landing. There are eight campsites on the beach here, with a capacity of six persons per site. Overnights are provided with picnic tables, fire for registered campers. All other supplies must be carried in.

KEATS

When Keats, at last beyond the curtain of love's distraction, lay dying in his room on the Piazza di Spagna, the melody of the Bernini Fountain "filling him like flowers," he held his breath like a coin, looked out into the moonlight and thought he saw snow. He did not suppose it was fever or the body's weakness turning the mind. He thought, "England!" and there he was, secretly, for the rest of his improbably short life: up to his neck in sleigh bells and the impossibly English cries of street vendors, perfect and affectionate as his soul. For days the snow and statuary sang him so far

A Mouth Like Yours: A Novel

Daniel Duane

By Daniel Duane
Farrar, Straus & Giroux, 2005; 195 pages;

FROM THE DUST JACKET:

A brutally honest novel about love and illusion from the author of Caught Inside.

Cassius Harper, ambivalent child of the Seventies, is leading a modest and respectable life in San Francisco's flush Nineties: he has a promising doctoral thesis, a doting new lover, the company of old friends and adoring parents, even a rent-controlled apartment by the beach where he's surfed all his life. So why the upwelling of nameless dread? Why the regret after cocktail parties and the road rage and, worst of all, the certainty that he is somehow a stranger to himself? Harper has always seen transformative love as the heart's salvation; but he's found his elusive ideal only twice, with miserable consequences. A Mouth Like Yours tells of a third and grand collision, with the vulnerable, volatile, and addictive Joanie Artois.

So quickly does Harper lose himself in Joanie, so thoroughly does she colonize his heart, that he sets out to understand why, exactly, love always unmans him this way. Exploring what carnal love can do for us and what it cannot, A Mouth Like Yours is a poignant statement about the growing pains of a generation.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

The New York Times: Cassius Harper, a Berkeley graduate student, delivers a three-by-three account of his painful subjection to Joan Artois, daughter of a vague California aristocracy and flakier than a mille-feuille. She seemingly rolls up together every wild and witchy heroine in modern fiction, from Hemingway's Brett Ashley to Capote's Holly Golightly.

Publisher's Weekly: Duane tracks the emotional meanderings of Berkeley grad student Cassius Harper in this meticulous study of the ambivalence and romantic bewilderment of privileged American 20-somethings.... Duane offers moments of keen observation and emotional lucidity.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Daniel Duane is the author of Caught Inside: A Surfer's Year on the California Coast (NPP, 1996) and Looking for Mo (FSG, 1998). He lives in San Francisco with his wife and two young daughters.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR:

In a year's time I read perhaps 50 novels and leaf through many more. Of new novels I've read in 2005, I cannot think of one that moved me more deeply than A Mouth Like Yours. The novel reads as if the reader were playing and re-playing an old and favorite love song, a song perhaps popular when the reader herself were younger and in love. With each replay the text reveals some new aspect of a lover's character or a view across water or a night when too much wine was drunk. The story is fraught with gawky tenderness and pain and told in sentences that dig into the memory the way worms dig into compost. Duane knows what hurts and he knows how to get that pain onto paper.

I asked about Mr. Duane's title and said how much I liked it.

The title, of course, is from Joni Mitchell's song "A Case of You," from which comes the line, "She had a mouth like yours."

"I'm glad you like it. I like it too," Mr. Duane said, "and I like saying it. I'm a big Joni Mitchell fan, and so was the Joan character until I confronted the fact that you have to pay an arm and a leg to reprint even a line or two of a Joni Mitchell song. Several Joni Mitchell songs seemed to me to capture the Joan character, or the character of women like her — like the song 'Cactus Tree.' But the title came to mind while listening to 'A Case of You,' as in 'I could drink a case of you darling/Still I'd be on my feet.'"

"Once I'd picked the title it had a life for me separate from the song. I liked the various possible meanings — I liked the sense of people echoed through other people, lives echoed through other lives. I liked the hint of Joanie's sharp tongue being bound up with her erotic allure, the hint of reprimand."

Daniel Duane was born in Washington, D.C., in 1967, to a lawyer father and housewife mother. Mr. Duane grew up in Berkeley and went to public schools.

He graduated from Berkeley High in the class of 1985. He graduated from Cornell in 1989, where he fell under the spell of A.R. (Archie) Ammons (1926–2001).

As a child Mr. Duane was a reader of pulp. "My mother really didn't approve of all the things I read. I devoured science fiction and fantasy novels and Tarzan; I read the entire Tarzan series. John Carter of Mars and all that stuff. Anyway, my mother used to raise her nose at it and tell me how when she was my age she was reading, I don't know..."

"War and Peace?"

"Yup, that's what it was actually. 'A great Russian novel,' that's actually what she said.

"But at some point in high school, in 10th grade, somebody asked me what I wanted to do when I grew up and I said I wanted to be a writer. I didn't have any sense that I would actively pursue that. So I had that idea. But as far as reading, I did, in my junior and senior years of high school, have English teachers I liked a lot. I got — this is embarrassing — but I was completely swept away by Fitzgerald.

"I read Fitzgerald all the way through in high school. This Side of Paradise, I was knocked out by it. I actually badly wanted to go to Princeton because of the fantasy of what that would be."

"Isn't it amazing when you come up on those first books and they take over your life?"

"Yeah. Yeah, yeah. In graduate school, where I did a Ph.D. in English at Santa Cruz, I was doing 19th-century American prose in critical theory. While I was there I had great experiences reading Joyce and Yeats. But I was reading all of this obscure 19th-century stuff. I had big experiences, you know, the big obvious 19th-century novels and Twain, especially Twain. But at some point in graduate school it occurred to me that I was on my way to getting a Ph.D. in English without having read any novels by Hemingway. So all of the 20th-century fiction that I read was as a result of that.

"One of the best reading experiences I had in college was when I took a seminar on Patrick White. I remember being transported and having that ache to imitate. 'The ache to imitate' has been really strong for me always, and yet I never really feel like I can do it. This novel I set out to write a very different book than I ended up writing. I had big ideas of copying various books that I admired, or emulating them I should say, and I put this book through so many forms trying to emulate one thing or another, and the form it ended up in was just the only form it would finally work in, and it wasn't anything like how..."

"How it started?"

"Yes, it really wasn't. It wasn't anything like what I dreamed of doing, formally speaking. The book it came closest to is Benjamin Constant's Adolphe, a very short French novel, written in 1816, one of these just beautifully compressed little, totally interior products. I also read books like Silk, and Duras's The Lover. Also, The Good Soldier, the Ford Madox Ford thing, excited me."

In 1994, Mr. Duane's first book was published. I asked how he happened to start publishing so early.

"Tom Farber. He just was a guy off the street from my parents' street and my parents knew him from the neighborhood. Berkeley is like that. What a great town. My parents must have told him at some point that I wanted to be a writer. You know what it was like, I was skateboarding up and down the street in front of his house, and he one day stuck out a bony claw and said, 'Come inside.'"

"He said, 'I'll give you a book.'"

"Yeah, he did. And he gave me a book. I mean, he gave me my first book in that he held my hand through the whole thing. I was 21. I was rock climbing a lot at the time, and he gave me marching orders. He said, 'Look, there's a book right in front of you and here's how you do it. Just for the next few months do X and then report back to me.' So I did that ferociously and reported back. And then he said, 'Okay, now do Y,' and then I did that ferociously and reported back.

"I came back home from Cornell in '89. And I lived in Berkeley for a year. Then I got into graduate school at Santa Cruz. I lived in Berkeley for two years and commuted to Santa Cruz while I did my coursework there. My life then was really all about rock climbing and writing that first book.

"That was a great experience. I moved to Santa Cruz to study for my qualifying exams. Graduate school was never really for me. I'd only applied to graduate schools that were near good surf breaks. I went just to have a flag to fly under for a while. The job market was terrible, and I didn't know what I wanted to do, and you could get funding and TA-ships, and I could read a lot, and blah, blah.

"But then as the years go by, people get further and further entrenched in what they're doing, and you start to want the thing you're doing to add up to something. So I did eventually want very much to be an English professor, but the truth is I was ill-suited to the style of thought and style of life.

"Academia was not a good fit for me. So Caught Inside opened the door to a different way of making a living. When it came out, I had another chapter or two to write on my dissertation. Farrar, Straus & Giroux gave me a contract for another book, and I was asked to write for some magazines. While these wonderful things were happening I couldn't even get a preliminary interview for an assistant professorship at Southern Oregon State University. Life was nudging me one way and not the other way. And there I was. I was 28. It was scary for me. I was really scared, yeah.

"So I took this plunge of moving to San Francisco and seeing if I could make it just writing. I got to working on a novel, and I started writing for surfing magazines. I actually loved it. I was on a boat in the Galapagos Islands with all these loud, young professional surfers, and I had a moment of feeling... I just loved it. I felt like this is the way I want to be in the world more than being a scholar. I wanted to have this crazy engagement with things. I've been living exclusively as a writer since then in one way or another."

Mr. Duane finished his dissertation, titled Dark Carnival. He taught off and on. He lived almost exclusively on book advances. "And that is to say I lived very modestly. I did a little bit of other stuff here and there to supplement, but that was it. Then I got married and our first daughter was born. I was well into working on this novel when that happened. That was quite a while ago. I've been working on this novel for way too long. Seven years."

"This book was really very hard for me to write. At times the manuscript was 550 pages long. And then it would shrink back down again and then it would expand again and shrink again and expand again and..."

"Like an accordion."

"Yeah, my editor went through this with me for a long time. And he said it was as if the book was breathing. You know, it would inhale and exhale. I just had the hardest time settling on the very fine parts. It was pretty difficult material for me. I had a hard time deciding what the story meant to me."

"Did you ever decide that?"

"No. I don't mean to say that this was some colossal act of creation. Just that it was hard for me. And a lot of that had to do with ery that were there.

San Diego Maritime Museum, the museum features permanent exhibits documenting the history of San Diego's waterfront and the building of the West Coast by sea, the old San Diego-Coronado ferryboats, the tuna fishing industry, and the military. The museum fleet consists of the 1863 bark Star of India, the 1898 San Francisco ferryboat Berkeley, and the 1904 Scottish steam yacht Medea. The H.M.S. Surprise, used in film Master and Commander, is permanently on exhibit; see artifacts, costumes, props used in making of the flick. Also open for touring: a B-39 Soviet attack submarine, among the largest conventionally powered submarines ever built. This Project 641/Foxtrot class diesel-electric submarine was designed to track U.S. and NATO warships throughout the Earth's oceans. There are also nautical exhibits, ship carpenters, model building, ships in bottles, woodcarvers, and a complete research library.

"When California Was an Island," on view through Tuesday, September 6, includes illuminated period maps and nautical charts documenting the "jumpy evolution of California's geographic image in the western worldview." "The Spirit of Sailing," an exhibit of photographs capturing "the romance of tall ship sailing" by Michael Kahn, closes Tuesday, January 3, 2006.

The museum is located at 1306 North Harbor Drive, along the Embarcadero at the corner of North Harbor Drive and Ash Street; 619-234-9153. (DOWNTOWN) material I was very uncomfortable dealing with.”

“Which is the best material to work with. It’s alive.”

“Yeah. I was really afraid of the material a lot of the time.”

“One thing I note about this book is that it is your first book in which the narrator is not always a good boy.”

“That’s right. These are thoughts I have had myself quite recently. But there’s a way in which in those earlier books I was, particularly in the first two, I was really being my parents’ perfect child.”

“I couldn’t have done any better growing up in the Berkeley that I grew up in and the household I grew up in, you know. I was really fulfilling some particular dream of our neighborhood and our family with those earlier books. And this book, imagining it coming out, has felt, to me, relative to that world, a little bit like I imagine coming out of the closet might feel. I finally have to say, ‘This is also who I am.’”

“What do you think women will make of Joan?”

“I thought she was the kind of girl that intrigues almost every young man.”

“She’s very Scott Fitzgerald.”

“Yeah, and in that way she’s a woman who lends herself to becoming a feature of a man’s imagination. And I don’t know what women will make of her.”

“I didn’t find the novel funny.”

“It wasn’t funny for me. That’s for sure. Maybe there’s a wry line or two here or there.”

“There are odd and interesting time shifts in the novel. Can you explain them to me?”

“Let me see if I can. This is what I’m embarrassed to tell you — one of my favorite books of all time, maybe my favorite book of all time, is Herzog. Anyway, maybe Herzog is doing that. Or the technique of that novel works that way — the shifts. I guess I was groping for some of the freedom that Bellow claims for himself there.

“The reason the novel kept inflating and contracting as if there was this big net is that there was a pretty wide net of material that felt to me like it belonged in this story. And there were themes about the narrator’s mother and the narrator’s father and Joan’s mother and Joan’s father. And the narrator’s grandfather and the narrator’s past sexual history and other things as well.

“As I tried to pare the book

down to what was essential, to what had to be there, which was very hard for me to do, I was left with short threads of many of these different pieces. But some felt to me like they had to be a part of it. So I was trying to find a way to make the argument that all of these things were a part of the same experience. All of these memories somehow informed the same emotional conclusions.”

“It’s odd to me that a novel like this new one of yours is so interior and private and secretive, almost coded, and yet is such a page-turner.”

“It does feel very private to me. I’m actually anxious you know about it coming out.

“There’s material in it that’s so personal, that’s part of what makes me nervous about it. I imagine going to give readings from this thing, which I’m going to do, and standing up in front of groups of people and thinking, ‘Oh, my God.’ Where in this book can I possibly read without doing an emotional striptease?

“Just to revisit a point I already made which is that when I say I set out to write a different book and that point is that there was just a huge amount of emotional material for me that I wanted to deal with here. I wrote very elaborate, fully realized subplots that were hundreds of pages long that are not a part of this. That aren’t here. Whole scenes and parties and characters and all kinds of stuff. It was ultimately humbling for me how the book just kept coming back to something like the form it’s in now.”

“The book feels entirely finished and perfectly polished.”

“I really wanted it to feel finished. I think I tortured my editors with this thing. All the books prior to this one I wrote in a white heat. Caught Inside I wrote in seven months. My first novel I wrote in about a year. They came one after the other, and by the time the first one came out, I was halfway through writing the next one, and I think I assumed it would always be that way for me.

“And then I hit some wall in my life; this story was like a wall for me. Whatever it was, this book wouldn’t yield.”

“I would think before I would give this book to a 15-year-old. Whereas the others I would have given to a younger person. This is a very complex book. It also has something de Sadean about it — don’t you think?”

“Of course.”

“It has that darkness in it. Especially in the New York scenes.”

“People were really being bad to each other.”

“Also, I think that the narrator shows himself in sections of the book to be such a cad. That’s hard to write. No wonder it took all those years. And how old now is your oldest child?”

“She’s going to be three in September. And do I want my daughters to read this? Hell no. When they’re in their 30s, if they’re interested, they can track it down and never tell me that they’ve done it.”

“So what do you do all day?”

“I write. I write all day.”

“What do you see out your window?”

“I see a cute little picket fence.”

Girls on Rocks

"I'm hopelessly commonplace. How can these avant-garde people get any fun out of my work?"

I'm not a barfly, not yet anyway, but I am a connoisseur of, so to say, bar environments. I'm an equal opportunity appreciator. My favorites run from select dives and honkytonks to swankier hotel joints like the Old King Cole Room in New York's St. Regis and the Pied Piper Room in the Palace here in San Francisco, each of which takes its name from the large Maxfield Parrish murals hanging behind the bar. Neither of these appears in Maxfield Parrish: Master of Make-Believe, currently on view at the San Diego Museum of Art, but the show does include a color sketch of the Old King Cole triptych. There he sits on his throne, bespectacled, pigeon-toed, and hapless, chagrined because, as the leers and wrinkled noses of his jesters and guards make clear, his majesty has just broken a bit of royal wind.

Maxfield (née Frederick) Parrish, born to Quaker parents in Philadelphia in 1870 and supported heartily by them in his artistic ambitions, by 1901 had become the most famous illustrator of his time and, to judge by his astonishing commercial success, America's favorite painter, as Norman Rockwell would become a generation later. Like Rockwell, he's been the subject of exhibitions meant to rehabilitate his reputation as a "mere illustrator." But Parrish himself didn't see the point of a major exhibition in 1964, Maxfield Parrish: A Second Look, that tried to position him vis-à-vis postwar abstraction and Pop Art. "I'm hopelessly commonplace," he said. "How can these avant-garde people get any fun out of my work? I've always considered myself a 'popular' painter." The "popular" in his work is indeed what makes him fun. Within his limits he made what many viewers find sensuous, pretty, otherworldly images. The work may not be exciting to somebody like me, but it's authentic in what it offers — facsimile dreamlands.

Parrish was much sought after for his lithographic illustrations of famous children's books like Mother Goose in Prose and The Golden Age, and I think many of us have at some time internalized his 1909 "Alphabet," that jungle gym of hooked-together letters with a rather worried-looking boy seated on a huge F reading his abecedarium. His paintings feature glassy, nearly transparent images of coy damsels and swains, tentative, sexually harmless beings inhabiting a "magical" story-bookish kingdom of some kind, where the light is always penumbral or crepuscular: in the background swell alpine heights and divinely serene lakes. He had much in common with mid-19th Century Pre-Raphaelite painters, who looked back beyond the Renaissance to the Middle Ages for their decorative, space-flattening patterning and some of their subject matter. Like them, Parrish paints high finishes and in some of his murals strives for a Giotto-esque fresco look: sandy light tones played off against ruddy darker ones, with figures that look cut into the wall with an exacto knife. The King Cole and Pied Piper images — the latter disturbs with its expression of music's darker, insidious charms — are different in that they aspire to the more painterly effects Parrish sometimes achieved in illustrations he provided for books by Frank L. Baum (of the Oz series) and Washington Irving. In his larger murals, though, he had a hard time deploying multiple figures, especially in the one he made for the Vanderbilt mansion, in which the figures look cut and pasted in, because they were, sort of. He used pencil cut-outs to shape his figures before "modeling" them into a scene.

The high finish of the pictures results from Parrish's assiduous technique. He worked first with a sketch done in pencil, crayon, or color wash over which he laid numerous layers of very even oil glazes, between each of which he laid a layer of varnish. This allowed him to get the depth of field, hyper-illusionary, fairyland effects he desired. His paintings, unlike many of the illustrations he produced for Collier's, Harper's, and Ladies' Home Journal, are mood pieces, like musical tone poems. Characters may appear engaged in some sort of action (even if they're just lying around — delicately, yearningly), but mostly we're meant to feel a titillating transport to a realm of experience normally unavailable to mortals. It's escapist, but an escape to what? A tamed, becalmed world, I suppose, where nothing threatens happiness and humans are free to indulge their every yearning, uncomplicated by sex. (If you're thinking, "What world would that be?" you're not having fun.) In a large exhibition of this kind, the pictures start to bleed into each other. Their temperatures don't much change, whether the dominant tone is mood indigo, ethereal cerulean, or moist amber. It's a curious phenomenon that a popular artist should become so wealthy and famous making imagery that hardly exists in any shared modern reality. Even his landscapes are stranger than nature. He was certainly a strategic manipulator of the interplay between art and commerce but never pretended to be otherwise. He knew that even once he wearied of making what he called his "girls on rocks" pictures, prominent in the lithos he made on commission for the Edison Mazda company, all he had to do was leave out the girls. Sales wouldn't dip.

Like the Pre-Raphaelites, Parrish valued good craftsmanship and even built a workshop where he could design and construct his own props for paintings, like the architectural columns that appear in "Daybreak." Decorative, crafty pattern-making mattered, as it did to the Pre-Raphaelites. He used stencils at different stages of composition, and we see the cut-out effect in the crisp luminosity of his mountains and foliage. The illusionism was contrived to be compelling. Landscape painting became finally his great passion, and his best pictures come late. (He lived well into his 80s.) The Hopper-esque Plainfield, New Hampshire Village Church at Dusk (1941) captures the celadon calm of an eastern winter sky and the shut-in quietude of small town winter life. Parrish didn't lose much when he eliminated the figure from his work, he only lost the pictorial agent of never-never land

Parrish was one of many painters who, instead of being intimidated by photography, relished its uses. (His son, coincidentally, helped to develop the Polaroid Land camera.) He entered the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts several years after the great Philadelphia painter Thomas Eakins, a notoriously daring teacher, was forced to leave. Eakins had already experimented with photographic models for pictures, and Parrish pursued that experimentation. He photographed his paintings in progress, blew up the print, then painted the photograph with quick-drying oils and watercolors. Photography helped him develop crisp effects; he knew that faux-realism can heighten the feeling of make-believe, and heightened illusionism is popular because it's immediately grasped. Parrish knew, as popular artists do, that we take pleasure from the artificial because we know it's artificial, inauthentic, unreal. This is not entirely a bad thing; fantasy is essential to complete consciousness. It deludes but it also cleanses. Parrish, in any event, had some historical reasons for the escapism his imagery offered. He worked through two world wars and wanted to provide passing respite from bad realities. His viewers weren't reminded of a time that once was a more innocent time, but of a time that never could be, so far removed was it from the life of contingency we actually live. Parrish had no delusions of grandeur. He knew the use his images were put to. One of his admirers wrote of his fantasies — nubile nudes seated on rocks in the middle of a nowhere lake or landscape — as places “where impossibilities are treated as realities.” For many people the pictures haven't lost any of that value. The impossible, in a bad world, is always attractive. Parrish went one better and glossily prettified the attraction. ■

ART

ART MUSEUMS

California Center for the Arts Museum, 100 black-and-white photographs are gathered in “Live With History: Photographs from the New York Times’ Photo Archives.” Exhibit boasts iconic images by Alfred Stieglitz, Edward S. Curtis, Berenice Abbott, Andreas Feininger, among others.

Concurrently: “Piece Me Together With a Needle and Thread: Quilts by Patrice Longmire,” “10 North: An Artists’ Group,” and “Alcancia de Coco en Mexico,” a collection of carved coconut shells displaying motifs ranging from memories of loved ones, mythology, more.

All four exhibitions close on Sunday, September 4. The museum is located at 340 North Escondido Boulevard; 760-839-4120. (ESCONDIDO)

Mingei International Museum, art and significance of Japanese dolls from the Edo period showcased in “Ningyô: The Art of the Japanese Doll.” As cultural artifacts, ningyô embody the customs, tastes, fashions, and politics of the time. Through Sunday, January 8, 2006.

“Kazuo Kadonaga — Elemental Materials in Contemporary Art,” on exhibit through Sunday, October 2, showcases sculptures fashioned from glass, wood, paper, and bamboo. Kadonaga’s art makes visible “the hidden life of seemingly inanimate matter.”

“Elemental Art of the Indonesian Archipelago” includes more than 100 objects such as textiles, jewelry, puppets, baskets, beaded objects, ritual dance masks, architectural ornaments, household objects, ancestor figures, and shrines. Through Sunday, August 28.

The Mingei is located on the square with the San Diego Museum of Art and the Timken Museum of Art. 619-239-0003. (BALBOA PARK)

Mingei International Museum, North County Satellite, “The Beaded Universe — Strands of Culture” includes beads from 40 cultures, inspired by and based on The History of Beads by Lois Sherr Dubin. Exhibit includes beaded globe four feet in diameter created by Huichol Indians, a Yoruba chief’s robe, garments by New York artist Sandra Rubel.

Concurrently, see “JoAnn Tanzer — Architectural Enamels.”

Works were created by painting with vitreous glass on steel. Continuing.

Ongoing: “Horses — Circling the Globe” includes animals from India, China, Japan, Indonesia, Sweden, England, Guatemala, Mexico, and the U.S. Some have religious connections, some were made as toys. A selection of Navajo blankets is also on display. Find the museum at 155 West Grand Avenue. 760-735-3355. (ESCONDIDO)

Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, Downtown, “Richard Allen Morris: Retrospective, 1958-2005” explores oeuvre of this “painter’s painter” with 150 paintings on view through Sunday, August 28. Exhibition includes examples of Morris’s work from the many different styles he has adopted throughout his career.

In “Cerca Series: Yunhee Min,” the Los Angeles-based artist creates work juxtaposing color and form to explore “the possibilities of the space” the piece inhabits. The pieces are “a hybrid of painting, installation, and architectural intervention.” Closes Sunday, August 21.

Find the museum at 1001 Kettner Boulevard (at Broadway), directly across from the Santa Fe Railroad Depot. 619-234-1001. (DOWNTOWN)

Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, La Jolla, “Threshold: Byron Kim, 1990-2004” focuses on the artist’s significant body of easel paintings, presenting four major bodies of paintings. Color, “as signifier and as metaphor,” dominates Kim’s work, and “he has maintained a steadfast commitment to exploring the potential content of abstract painting.”

“Location, Location, Location” highlights architectural drawings and photographs from architects and landscape architects, as well as painters and photographers who focus on aspects of the built environment from the 1950s to the present. Exhibit includes works by Richard Neutra, Frank Gehry, Robert Irwin, and Lawrence Halprin.

Both exhibitions close on Sunday, September 4. Find the museum at 700 Prospect Street. 858-454-3541. (LA JOLLA)

Museum of Photographic Arts, “Graham Flint: American Panoramas at 1000 Megapixels” showcases the physicist and photographer’s project bringing “together the cutting edges of photographic optics, film technology, and digital processing, creating landscape photographs which contain an unprecedented detail and resolution.” Through Sunday, September 18.

“Snapshot: From Box Brownies to Camera Phones,” also closing on September 18, examines the way family photographs taken by amateur photographers over the past 100 years contribute to the history of photography. Exhibit includes historic snapshots from 1920s-1960s, along with “live feed” of camera phone images.

“Steve McCurry: Photographs of Asia” highlights history and faces of places the artist has visited as National Geographic photographer. McCurry is most famous for Afghan Girl, the portrait of a refugee that appeared on magazine’s cover in 1985. View the images through Sunday, September 25.

Find the museum in the Casa de Balboa building, at 1649 El Prado; 619-238-7559. (BALBOA PARK)

Oceanside Museum of Art, “Illuminations: The Neon Sculpture of Brian Coleman and David Svenson” showcases neon taken to new dimensions. The artists “manipulate the technique of glass-bending with the noble gases into a dynamic and vibrant sculptural medium.” Find the museum at 704 Pier View Way; 760-721-2787. Closes Sunday, August 21. (OCEANSIDE)

San Diego Museum of Art, more than 80 works on offer in “Maxfield Parrish, Master of Make-Believe.” Exhibit boasts many of Parrish’s most recognizable art works, such as calendar and book illustrations, “classicized paintings,” and an 18-foot-long mural he painted for Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney. Show explores Parrish’s artistic development and working methods. Closes Sunday, September 11.

“Wedgwood’s Fairyland Lustreware from the Collection of Maurice Kawashima,” also closing on September 11, highlights 27 pieces produced at the Wedgwood manufactory in Etruria, England, in decade after World War I. The pieces feature imaginative patterns inhabited by fairies, sprites, goblins, and dragons.

“Tastes in Asian Art” includes “some of the most significant works” in the museum’s collection. Exhibit features new and rarely exhibited works, along with well-known pieces. Continues through June 2006.

“The Origins of Mughal Painting” examines “one of the lingering mysteries in the history of Indian art: how such a distinctive and sophisticated style as that of the imperial Mughals arose so quickly.” The new installation, showcasing 20 images from the Binney Collection, continues through Sunday, August 28.

For further information, call 619-232-7931. (BALBOA PARK)

Timken Museum of Art, permanent collection includes European masters, 19th-Century American paintings, and Russian icons. 619-239-5548. (BALBOA PARK)

The parents of Jim Morrison's late common-law wife (who share with the Morrisons a 25-percent ownership stake in the Doors) filed their own lawsuit against the new Doors. Drummer John Densmore, another 25-percent partner, was also a Ray Manzarek, in an interview posted August 5 at www.braveworld.com, said he, Krieger, and singer Ian Astbury would begin calling themselves D21C. However, post-August 13 gigs listed on Manzarek's website bill the band as Riders on the Storm.

Von Bondage? Aaron Sherman plays guitar in Guerilla Transammo and works part-time as a stagehand at the House of Blues. He recently took up the offer to go on a ten-date, 16-city tour with the Von Bondies.

"Normally, a guitar tech makes $1000 to $1500 a week on tour. The Von Bondies offered me a job as tour manager for $1000 a week.... I didn't realize I was going to be the loader, unloader, guitar tech, bass tech, and manage sound and lights."

Sherman, 30, drove the four-man Detroit band in a trailer-toting van through Iowa, Kansas, and other states. He once went two days without sleep.

SHERMAN MISTREATED BY "ROCK STARS"

4 p.m. and set everything up. Some of their amps were really heavy, with no wheels. Nobody in the band lifted a finger. They never loaded anything....

"Jason [Stollsteimer], the lead singer, [broke] a string onstage.... It was the last song, so I just handed him his backup guitar. When he walks offstage, he grabs me and says, 'When I drop my guitar, you change my strings, motherfucker. Do your job.' I walked outside and debated whether to tell them to fuck off and just leave. I sucked it up."

After the band's Street Scene show, they played the Grove in Anaheim.

"[Stollsteimer] breaks a string on his pink — or, as he calls it, 'salmon' — guitar. I restring it in 90 seconds flat. I rush up to hand him the guitar. He just looks at me and leaves me hanging. At that point, I told their management I was going home." The band drove themselves to Denver.

Guerilla Transammo plays Saturday at 10 p.m. with Nihilist at Squid Joe's in Carlsbad. Must be 21; $5 admission.

"I Insult Women, homosexuals, and drug addicts...especially tweakers. They are at the low end of the food chain," says Mike Hood, who admits he's a recovering addict.

After playing guitar for years with the Shot Out Hoods, the Suicide Kings, the Cutthroats, Redeye Gravy, and Unregistered Sex Defenders, Hood says, "I'm 54, and I don't know how much longer I can be a rock-and-roll star. I'm moving into comedy."

In his new band, the Dukes of Haggard, Hood insults audience members between songs about large women and bike-riding meth addicts. He writes all the words and music for the Dukes of Haggard: Down in San Diego none of my friends say they're gay / But every year there's another million at that rainbow parade.

"We're just making good fun at how fucked up our society has become.... I'm not leaving myself out [of the insults]."

Hood says the Supersuckers and Southern Culture on the Skids inspired him to move into comedy. "So many bands are so moody, so serious. They just stand there and stare at their feet. I talk to the audience."

injunction prohibits the two former Doors members from using the name that made them famous.

Octogenarians George and Clara Morrison (who have lived in San Diego for about 50 years) filed their suit in April 2003. It alleged that the two ex-Doors "maliciously misappropriated" the band's name and logo in order to market "a new band that they recently organized with two other individuals that have never been associated with plaintiff.

"It didn't have to come to this," says the Morrisons' attorney, Jeffrey Forer. "We asked [Manzarek and Krieger] in January 2003 to respect that 50 percent of the partnership disagreed with what they were doing.... [Manzarek and Krieger] made millions of dollars as 'the Doors of the 21st Century.'"

L.A. Superior Court judge Gregory Alarcon ordered the duo to pay into the Doors' partnership all profits

The Nortec Collective's new disc, Tijuana Sessions, Vol. 3, recently edged out such platinum acts as Enrique Iglesias and Shakira to reach number one on the iTunes Latin Albums chart. Robert Mendoza (known as Panoptica) talks about some of the issues associated with being a norteco-techno fusion band from Tijuana.

"The biggest problem? You're not exactly from California or the U.S. And, in Tijuana, you are so far away

— Dave Good

iAy, Frankie! San Diego crooner Frankie J's next single will be a remake of Extreme's 1991 ballad "More Than Words." "I don't think anyone's ever done it in Spanish before," says the 24-year-old. "I'll be doing an English version, too, but I really want to get back to my roots.... My next album will be all Spanish. We're trying to get [a duet] going with Shakira.... I never met her, but I tried to hook up with her at a CD-signing in New York. I couldn't get near her, but I put out the word to her people."

On any such recording, I should be sure to enunciate clearly. Two of his songs are singled out at www.amiright.com for being "Misheard Lyrics," from Mexico City.... We never thought about American labels.... It was easier to get to the labels in Mexico City."

COLLECTIVE DISREGARD FOR AMERICAN LABELS

Is Europe an easier market to crack than the U.S.?

"I think so," says Mendoza. "It's really difficult to get [music] into the U.S. It's far easier to get it into Europe. From Spain, it's easy to cross borders."

What about the availability of music gear in Tijuana?

"I can recall being a kid and crossing over to San Diego to get music gear. We went to the swap meets, places where you could get cheap prices." Otherwise, he says, "Those things in Tijuana including a line from "Don't Wanna Try": "You kept insisting and resisting that you would not fall again" can be misheard as "You kept insisting and resisting that you would not fornicate."

— Jay Allen Sanford

It Was 40 Years Ago Today (almost) when Helen Halmay interviewed the Beatles before their only San Diego concert (August 28, 1965, at Balboa Stadium). Halmay, who was 20 at the time, says she has a few regrets.

"Nobody who interviewed them asked for their autograph.... I had never been to a press conference before. I didn't know I didn't need tickets

OVERHEARD IN SAN DIEGO: CITY FEST

since I was with the press. After the press conference, we went out and went in through the gates. I thought, 'By God, if I bought tickets, I'm going to use them.' Do you know how much those tickets would be worth if I had saved them?"

Of the 28,000 tickets available, fewer than 18,000 were sold for $3.50 and $5.50. The Beatles reportedly earned $50,000; promoters, $6000.

What questions did reporters ask the Beatles? "People tended to ask them what they thought of San Diego. That was really dumb. They had never been here before, and they had just gotten off the bus. My one question was 'What's your favorite American TV show?' I think they said The Man from U.N.C.L.E."

Halmay, who was the society editor for the weekly La Mesa Scout, says she "asked my owner/editor/publisher if I could cover it. He said, 'None of our readers are interested in the Beatles.'" Halmay got permission to go (off the job) and bought her own film to take pictures.

"They are not very exciting. It just shows them sitting in a row at a table." She says all four were heavy smokers. "I guess I've forgotten how much people used to smoke in those days."

THE BEATLES DON'T SELL OUT IN SAN DIEGO

As it was with Balboa Stadium, Halmay says the La Mesa Scout "...never made it out of the '70s."

Corporate Rock Albums Sound Better

Fifteen years ago tomorrow (8/19/90), Nirvana played the year-old Casbah. This gig (a year before the release of Nevermind) has appeared on two bootlegs. The first to surface featured only 46 minutes of the band's 17-song set and is missing the last 5 songs ("Stain," "Negative Creep," "Blew," a bluesy jam, and "Verse Chorus Verse"). In March 2003, a more complete and better-recorded version surfaced; it's 62 minutes long, but with almost a minute of "Dive" missing (complete on the older, poorer-sounding version). Dave Grohl was not yet with the band (he joined in September of '90); drummer Dale Crover played San Diego and a few other West Coast dates.

Damn the Torpedo, Tuna Salad Instead

When Tom Petty & the Heartbreakers play Coors Amphitheatre on Saturday, August 20, the band hospitality suite should be stocked with a six-pack of Budweiser ("long necks"), a six-pack of Corona, two quarts of Knudsen Recharge Sports Drink, three liters of original Rice Dream, a quart of Lactaid 2 percent lactose-free milk, tuna salad ("sufficient for 6 sandwiches"), six bagels ("egg, onion, and water") and two Naked Juice shakes

TOM LIKES HIS COKE BOTTLED

("Vanilla Creme and Chocolate Creme"). Petty wants his personal stash to include a box of corn flakes ("Trader Joe's"), and his tour bus requires a bottle of Chardonnay wine ("very good California"), a bottle of red wine ("Cabernet or Merlot"), and a dozen eight-ounce Cokes ("glass bottles"). "Beans and rice are a veggie's best friend."

Peter Sprague was eight when his family moved from Cleveland to Del Mar, where surfing and music became, as he puts it, his "life and religion."

Peter continues, "Though I hate to admit it, I don't really like surf music. The Beach Boys? Well, I used to like it when they'd mention Del Mar in their 'Surfin' U.S.A.' tune, but the music that really moved me between surf sessions [was] the Beatles; Joni Mitchell; Jimi Hendrix; Crosby, Stills, and Nash; Buddy Miles; and Santana. Try putting on 'Black Magic Woman' and then paddling out at Eighth Street in Del Mar. That combination works for me."

Sprague picked up the guitar at 12. He turned to jazz and formed the Minor Jazz Quintet with like-minded schoolmates. "When we played gigs we had to legally stay on the stage during breaks to keep the ABC [Alcoholic Beverage Control] from busting the club for 'minors roaming in an over-21 environment.'"

Sprague later studied with Pat Metheny in Boston and performed with Chick Corea's band. "Here I am, a young musician, and I'm hanging with my idol Chick Corea. I'm thinking everything is just right in his world, and as far as I can see he's living the great ride. He's playing insane music with off-the-Richter musicians and plays concerts for audiences that devour his every note. Then he tells me that he wishes he could fill large arenas instead of small concert halls. Wow — that human trait of always wanting more and always being a little dissatisfied with what you have."

Sprague eventually returned to Del Mar and has become a fixture in the local jazz scene, along with brother Tripp (sax and flute) and father Hall T. Sprague (percussionist). Peter Sprague will appear at Ki's Restaurant in Cardiff on Friday, August 19.

LISTS

WHAT'S IN YOUR CD PLAYER?

1. John Coltrane, Coltrane's Sound ("One of my absolute favorite musos playing lyrical and modern at the same time.")
2. Solas, The Edge of Silence ("Great Irish folk rock group, their remake of 'Darkness, Darkness' is way up there.")
3. Allison Krauss, New Favorite ("This is aural beauty in its most elegant form.")
4. Chris Potter, Traveling Mercies ("Chris on tenor sax playing with an amazing band, completely devouring odd-meter compositions and making them feel like 4/4.")

HARDEST THING ABOUT TEACHING GUITAR?

"How does the student take all of this information and make it sound like music? How do they cross this bridge and make meaningful notes that tell a story and at the same time live a congruous life with the harmony of the tune? How do they make it sound good instead of a pile of forgettable academically charged eighth notes? As a teacher, I wish there was a magic combination of 'do this and then that.'"

THREE REASONS DEL MAR IS BETTER THAN BOSTON?

1. "Summer in Del Mar is as good as it gets."
2. "Summer in Beantown is humid beyond belief. I never want to live that kind of heat again."
3. "There are some great views in Boston, but my Del Mar bedroom view is out to the blue Pacific."

FAVORITE LOCAL EATERY/ BEST DISH?

"I'm a vegetarian...beans and rice are a veggie's best friend, so Rubio's burritos with non-lard beans fit the bill on a weekly basis."

WORST GIG EXPERIENCE?

"I get a call from pianist Rob Schneiderman and he's got a gig playing jazz in Spain for a month starting in one week and invites me on the tour [but] someone steals my precious handmade guitar...next I'm off to Western Union to receive some wired money from my folks to buy a new guitar. While at the Western Union an armed gangster holds up the bank next door and I'm gathering my money amidst some gunshots...then I fly to Spain and I land at the airport and my friends are not there to pick me up. I'm young and I didn't gather all of their info and so I don't know how to get a hold of them...I take a cab to the city central and I'm literally wandering around the streets not sure what to do. Then I hear the sounds of Charlie Parker playing 'Just Friends' from a nearby street café. I move a little closer and discover my friends listening to Bird and having an afternoon coffee. Unbelievable...I was saved, I thought, but it turned out that the rest of my time in Spain was filled with lousy gigs, canceled gigs, [and] very little vegetarian food. I survived and gained some wisdom, but I also got really sick and spent a week in bed with food poisoning." ■

NOTE

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

Although he died a little more than two centuries before Chuck Berry was born, Louis XIV was the greatest rock star the world has ever known. MTV's Cribs would have required an entire season to show off his palace at Versailles. He nearly bankrupted the richest nation in Europe to keep the party going. If that's not rock 'n' roll, I don't know what is. And I haven't even got to the outfits — Louis made Elton John look like an indie rocker. And so, when members of San Diego's roots-rockish Convoy formed a new band called Louis XIV, I expected to see lace cuffs and curly white wigs, maybe an anthem along the lines of "lé tat, c'est moi!" Maybe I was thinking of the Upper Crust, a Boston band that uses such a gimmick whilst churning out AC/DC-style hard rock with humorous lyrics. You can see how I might get confused: Louis XIV, the band, also plays AC/DC-style hard rock with humorous lyrics. The San Diego guys, however, do it while dressed like the Rolling Stones circa 1975.

Of course, you can't get very far by criticizing Louis XIV for a lack of originality, nor for its boneheaded, double-entendre lyrics — for this band, being derivative and horny is sort of the point. There are only two questions to ask here: 1) "Do the guitar riffs rock?" and 2) "Does the band perform with swagger and aplomb?" The answer to both is yes. Like Louis XIV the monarch, the band will distract the populace with trivialities while they seize absolute power.

NOTE

BY DAVE GOOD

Funny, but it's more sideman Amos Garrett than Maria Muldaur who comes to mind when I recall "Midnight at the Oasis." Muldaur, sweet of voice, sang the story of a desert hussy with carnal ideas, but it was Garrett's guitar that set the tone for love in the dunes. His playing was slick and sexy, the kind of thing that made you desire to pick up a guitar and learn how to play and landed him a slot in Music Magazine's Top 25 Guitar Solos.

For Muldaur, "Midnight" was a cash cow. She'd been a waitress following the breakup with her husband and musical partner, Geoff. "Midnight at the Oasis" pushed sales of her eponymous debut album into platinum status within two years, but the song's success may have created more baggage than Muldaur was ready for. The pop hit became a radio programmer's staple for decades and crossed over into the dreadful immortality of Muzak. Nothing she's recorded since has been able to best it.

Muldaur's career trajectory in the music business has been peripatetic. Her earliest recorded work was with jug bands; she studied Appalachian-style fiddle with Doc Watson. After cutting the blockbuster in L.A., Muldaur became a born-again Christian and recorded nonsecular music. She joined forces with Dr. John and recorded bluesy soul music. She took turns acting in musicals, singing country, gospel, jazz, R&B, folk, blues, and recording children's albums. In the end, a reviewer called her one of the best interpreters of anything in the broad category of American roots music. Along the way she fell off my radar. I haven't heard much from Amos Garrett either.

MARIA MULDAUR, Humphrey's Backstage Lounge, Saturday, August 20, 9:30 p.m. 619-224-3577 or 619-220-8497. $15.

Website: www.erasetheday.com

In accordance with its title, Erase the Day's debut, Afraid of Nothing, fiercely explores the themes of heartbreak, uncertainty, self-doubt, and the many ways to numb oneself from them.

The band is skilled at crafting dismal reverberations with a sound that is similar to that of Disturbed, Staind, and Godsmack. The title track is heavy with a driving rhythm, crashing guitars, and a mess of colliding sounds. Lead vocalist Eric Koonze's knack for melodic screaming possesses its own allure. The foursome is best at delivering the heavier tracks, but they also pull off the disc's smattering of pensive ballads.

4 a.m.; 21 and up. Shooterz, 3815 30th Street, North Park. 619-574-0744.

Transport: First and third Saturdays of the month, Brit rock, indie, and electroclash with DJ Gabe Vega and guests. The Whistle Stop, 2236 Fern Street (corner of 30th and Juniper), South Park. 619-284-6784.

"Life" is poignant as it grapples with regret. "Another Day," a slower, partially acoustic number, is also a standout. The songs are drenched in melancholy melodies and heavy riffs that are often shattered by a throaty yell.

"Can't Put You Down" features the most evocative lines, "I spent my cash / had to borrow / to help me make it through / promise you I'll quit tomorrow / I hate the things I do." If not for the shredding guitars, the words would lack force. "I was up, now I'm down / between the dark and gray / inside the bottle is where I'll be found / that's where I'll lay." Depthless lyrics aside, the song's fusion of thundering percussion and heavy guitar distortion is a unified jolt.

With this album, Erase the Day hasn't accomplished anything original. Still, the riffs delivered with urgency in 11 melodic packages make for a good time.

NightSpotting

RED FOX ROOM
2223 El Cajon Blvd.
North Park
619-297-1313

MUSIC ► piano bar, lounge, jazz, Dixieland jazz, standards
SPECIAL NIGHTS ► music Wednesday through Sunday
CLIENTELE ► all ages in restaurant, 21 and up in lounge; average age is late 30s (a few people in their 20s, a few people in their 80s); mostly couples; 60 percent Caucasian, 20 percent African-American, 20 percent Latino
COVER ► none
HOURS ► Monday through Thursday, 11:00 a.m. until midnight; Friday and Saturday open until 2:00 a.m.
DRINKS ► no happy hour and only two beers on tap, but people come here for the martinis and steaks; they don't have drink specials, but drinks aren't expensive

FOOD ► moderately priced; entrées average $16.95; burger and fries $5.95; three desserts ($3.95); other restaurants in area
ACCESS ► from I-805, west on El Cajon Boulevard; small parking lot in back, street parking is easy to find
DRESS ► there is no dress code, but waitress told me they would ask someone to leave if they were dressed horribly; a few younger guys looked silly in their baseball caps (although one took his off when he ate); not many T-shirts ("New Jersey Nets," "Reebok," and "The Doors")
DANCE FLOOR ► none
BATHROOMS ► men's had two urinals (an inch apart from each other) and one stall; graffiti had been washed off; women's had two stalls;

both had an air dryer and paper towels and were clean
CAPACITY ► 150
SPECIAL AREAS ► dining room (from which you can hear the music; from some tables you can see the performers)
FURNISHINGS ► it looks like a Rat Packer lounge from 1963 (minus the smoke clouds); the menu says the decor is hundreds of years old, but it looks like the living room of my mom's childhood home; stained-glass panels, mirrors, 15 tables in dining area, 6 small ones in lounge (and a few booths), 15 seats at the bar
DECIBEL LEVEL ► 104 when a guy sang "Some Enchanted Evening"
QUOTABLE ► "That guy singing reminds me of Mickey Rooney."

Longtime piano player Shirley Allen passed away last year. Now a couple of guys play piano and horns and people request songs and sing. It's an upscale karaoke joint.

When the youngest guy (approximately 40 years old) started singing, we damn near covered our ears. He was enthusiastic, but he had a horrible voice. It was like Bill Murray doing that lounge-singer character from Saturday Night Live. He did "Mack the Knife" and six other songs.
I asked a group of young people how often they come here. One of the guys said, "Maybe once a month. We look classy when we bring our chicks here." His friend interrupted, "Don't say 'chicks.' At a place like this, I think they are called 'broads.'" Their dates giggled.
When I asked an older man if he was a regular, I think he thought I was asking him if he "was regular." He seemed bothered by the question. When he realized what I was asking him, he said, "What's with all the questions, son? Just sit down and listen to the music."
— Josh Board

Scar Portrait

"My desire to keep beautiful objects safe is stronger than any other."

At the end of World War II, as Allies stormed across Germany, Charlotte von Mahlsdorf got released from Cell 13 at Tegel House, a prison for juvenile delinquents. She'd been sentenced four years for murdering her abusive Nazi father — an act of "preventive self-defense," she said, to save the lives of her mother, sister, and brother.

She got dismissed when low-flying planes bombed nearby buildings, and a "Judgment Day mentality ruled inside the prison." She wanted to take the train to her home in Mahlsdorf but "Ivan" — i.e., the Russian Army — already controlled the station. So she started out on foot, through rubble and broken glass. At Mullerstrasse the planes came back. She ran into a house and saw the scalloped top of a cupboard, vintage 1890s. "My God," she thought, as the city erupted like a chain of volcanoes, "what a beautiful top! It has to be saved."

In her autobiography, I Am My Own Wife, Charlotte admits that worrying about a piece of carved wood must seem odd, given the havoc surrounding it. "But that's how I am. My desire to keep beautiful objects safe is stronger than any other."

Charlotte not only survived the Russian blitzkrieg of Berlin, somehow she also lived through Nazi Germany and the communist occupation of East Germany ("the same stalls," she wrote, "only different pigs"). She ran an underground cabaret, and a museum, which specialized in the hand-crafted, "charmingly proportioned" Grunderzeit style (1870 to 1900). Hounded by the SS and the Stasi, Charlotte had often been told she "shouldn't exist." She was born a he,

Lothar Berfelde, in 1928. "Even while in school, I thought, sure you're a boy, but you are really more like a girl." Her gender preference led to continual harassment, including an assault by neo-Nazi skinheads that turned her hair white overnight.

In I Am My Own Wife, Doug Wright's Pulitzer Prize-winning play (2004), Charlotte gives a guided tour of the Mahlsdorf mansion. "People come to see me, but soon they look at the furniture." I Am is quick to point out, however, that Charlotte was a living museum.

There are creators and destroyers, of course. But there are also preservers. Charlotte made the latter an art form. "My driving need has always been to preserve things, not for myself, but for posterity, to establish a continuity, not a senseless ending. I am inspired by that idea."

She'd been bombed, despised, imprisoned. She knew what the expression "called for" meant, when the Germans allegedly deported Jews. She waded knee-deep in evil. So why didn't Charlotte von Mahlsdorf become a blind, raving lunatic?

In one sense, she resembles John Merrick, the famous Elephant Man who was treated lower than garbage yet somehow retained an inner

ironic half-smile, and her selflessness, reflected in the way her large, delicate hands cherish each museum piece like a miracle of creation. Mays also convinces, in his piercing thousand-yard stare and unflinching things-as-they-were recollections, that Charlotte has seen humankind at its absolute worst and can say, with her uncle, "Who knows what's still to come?"

THEATER

Mays is extraordinary. Wearing a black dress, with apron-like front, black orthopedic shoes, black scarf-cap, and pearl necklace, he's etched a rich, detailed, unforgettable portrait. And he plays everyone else — cameos of more than 30 others: Russian and German soldiers, aunts, lovers, bureaucrats officious and smarmy, each so precise you'll need to expand your idea of acting versatility.

When Mays was performing I Am on Broadway and won the Tony Award for best actor, he needed a vacation. So he took a few days off. Because he had no understudy, the theater closed down. No one could replace him. Others now essay the role(s) across the country, but it's doubtful they can equal the original, Mays has set the bar so high.

I Am My Own Wife was the La Jolla Playhouse's inaugural "Page to Stage" script. The series allows works-in-progress to develop without the media treating them as finished products. I Am became the template of that process, winning every conceivable award. When it came to the LJP in 2001, it only had a first act. Page to Stage enabled the playwright, Doug Wright, to embed himself into the second.

Often when authors make themselves a character in their work, it's because they've run out of ideas. Just as often the character only gets in the way. Wright's immersion is different. It shows what writers face trying to fund a work (even having to sell his Honda when grant money runs out). Also, as the play proceeds, his persona grows, changes, and faces a major conflict: what happens when your subject, so intriguing from afar, turns on you? What happens when new-found contradictions — like the "nicks and cuts" on an heirloom — scar the portrait you envisioned?

Wright, who "didn't know what the Cold War was until it ended," gets an education in I Am. He evolves from a comic foil in act one to a central figure in two. His writing throughout is stark and polished. Both he and Mays are skilled at crafting instantaneous beings. Wright's also adept at mirroring the German language's periodic sentence, in which at the end of the sentence comes the most important word.

lot happening on the raked stage. Except for the revelation of an entire wall of antiques — including gramophone bell-horns that shine like baby sousaphones — the lighting, the set (diaphanous wallpaper and spare, elegant furnishings), and all the production values throw full support to Mays, and the stories he spellbinds into art. ■

The Attempted Murder of Peggy Sweetwater

Broadway Players present John Rustin and Frank Semarano's Monty Python-esque 1930s pot-boiler. Three "bumbling upper-class twits" try to solve several attempted murders. Nathanael Siegel directed. BROADWAY PLAYERS, 402 EAST WASHINGTON AVENUE, EL CAJON, THROUGH AUGUST 27; SATURDAY AT 3:00 P.M. AND 7:00 P.M. 619-507-7765.

Beads, Bangles, and Baggy Pants

CentreStage Players present a revue-tribute — jokes, sketches, musical numbers — to "the golden heyday" of burlesque. ADAMS AVENUE STUDIO OF THE ARTS, 2804 ADAMS AVENUE (CORNER OF ADAMS AND IDAHO), NORMAL HEIGHTS, THROUGH AUGUST 21; FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. MATINEE SUNDAY AT 2:00 P.M. 619-462-2131.

Bloody Poetry

6th@Penn stages Howard Brenton's drama about radical poet Percy Bysshe Shelley and his "band of atheistic poeticals" in Italy. Doug Hoehn directed. 6TH@PENN THEATRE, 3704 SIXTH AVENUE, HILLCREST, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 7; MONDAY THROUGH WEDNESDAY AT 7:30 P.M. MATINEE SUNDAY AT 4:00 P.M. 619-688-9210.

The Comedy of Errors

Nature or nurture? Most Comedies of Errors stress how alike Shakespeare's two sets of twins are, as if growing up in separate cultures had no effect. Director Darko Tresnjak shows how different a similarity can be. When at Ephesus (site of sorcery, according to St. Paul) Antipholus of Syracuse and Antipholus of Ephesus share the same identity but are opposites. Complications ensue. In some ways, the frame of this staging's more arresting than the middle. The 90-minute version moves well, but on opening night the acting was technical, not felt. You could sense that performances would grow, however. Plus, having Charles Janasz (as bedraggled Egeon) and Kandis Chappell (the Lady Abbess as a force of nature) guarantees quality. As do Liam Craig and Evan Zes as the dual Dromios: played as a cross between Charlie Chaplin and the Cantinflas of Around the World in 80 Days, their slapstick antics guarantee laughs. Then there's the conjuration dance. When Dr. Pinch tries to exorcise Ephesian demons, his conjuration makes everyone weirder. They flop into a snaky, ritualized Bollywood dance that, while Pinch's spell lasts, is a hoist. Worth a try.

42nd Street

"Julian Marsh is doing a SHOW!" 42nd Street is musical comedy's lottery fable. It proves that "raw beginners can be winners," especially if, like young Peggy Sawyer, they've got talent and are driven by grim-faced producer Julian Marsh, yelling, "Sawyer! Think of Broadway, dammit!" The first test of any 42nd Street production comes right off the bat. The show opens with a splashy tap-dance "Audition." If the chorus isn't clacking the floor as one, forget it. The Welk Theatre passes the test and the others as well. Director/choreographer Jon Engstrom has staged the musical many times. His expertise and some fine casting make for one of the Welk's better efforts in some time. Young Nicole Werner, from the MFA program at SDSU, brightens the stage as Peggy, in spite of a murky lighting design. Erika Amato makes Dorothy Brock a dour diva adept at torchy laments. Andrew Husmann does the impossible: he brings nuance, even some tongue-in-cheek humor, to musical theater's most one-note role: Julian Marsh. The strong-voiced Husmann even turns the producer's famous Gipser speech into a kind of music: "Sawyer. You're going out there a youngster. But you've GOT to come back a star!" Worth a try.

Fritz Blitz: 2005 Festival of New Plays by California Playwrights

I want to plug this enterprise sight unseen. For 12 years the Fritz Theatre has presented world-premiere works by California authors. This year savvy local directors — Delicia Turner Sonnenberg, Duane Daniels, Katie Rodda, Tim West among them — stage ten new plays selected from over 100 entrants. The four-week festival offers a different program each week, and a zodiac of genres, from comedy to drama to experimental pieces that otherwise might never find a hearing. The Blitz has become a cauldron for the creative process. It also showcases local actors and designers and, quite possibly, future voices of the American theater. Worth a try.

I Do, or Die: The Mother-in-Law of All Weddings

For its summer show, onboard the sternwheeler William D. Evans, Mystery Cafe presents one of its most popular productions: the best array of credible suspects, and also the funniest of those I've seen at the Imperial House. Patricia "Patti" Peccarino (Emily Anne Smith), heir to the Peccarino cheese fortune ("The Cheese Stands Alone"), is about to marry Wilhelm "Willie" Schmeterlinck (Ben Gilbert), last of the Schmeterlincks (who, some allege, invented Cheez Whiz) and a groom given to quoting Shakespeare ("To wed, or not to wed"). There's a death. Then another. Was the murderer "the Bavarian Battleaxe," Gretchen Schmeterlinck (Ellyn Hae)? Or Patti's mother, Theresa Rodham Peccarino (Bonnie Stone)? Both exude insidious intent. Or was it lactose-intolerant Patti, who lost 17 minutes of her life at age nine? Or one of several other candidates, each eager to make a hostile takeover — of anything — and each living proof that "cousins shouldn't marry"? Authors James Pascarella and the late Will Roberston set the piece in the 1950s (yet are somehow able to make numerous topical references to today?). It's a consistently fun, goodnogginscratching evening of interactive theater.

Macbeth

Double, double, toil and trouble? No. Something tasteful this way comes. Paul Mullins has directed a safe, formalist Macbeth, substituting stage pictures for substance. Instead of the Macbeths' insatiable frenzy, fed by "slaughterhouse thoughts," we get choreographed, often mathematically precise visuals. Some do catch the eye (white-faced Weird Sisters in sleek, red, late-medieval chic; Macduff's spears poking through Balboa Park toward Dunsinane). But the Sisters are cupcakes. The slo-mo battles are aesthetic affairs. And the leads are lame. Tom Hammond's Macbeth's a thoughtful, perplexed guy who delivers his lines with slow, sculpted cadences that don't come near the lion's roar. As Lady M, Deirdre Lovejoy resorts to deep breathing to convey emotion and plays her scenes as set pieces, apart from other actors (when she sleepwalks, Lovejoy makes Lady M a batty, candle-hypnotized Ophelia: an odd, albeit showy, choice). Worthy of note: what lighting designer York Kennedy does with darkness. It shrouds the stage like a fogbank. And since the rest of the production prefers the stately to the gritty and the tragic, Kennedy's shadings become the only place where evil gets to stake its claim. LOWELL DAVIES FESTIVAL THEATRE, SIMON EDISON CENTRE FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS, BALBOA PARK, THROUGH OCTOBER 2; MACBETH RUNS IN REPERTORY WITH COMEDY OF ERRORS AND THE WINTER'S TALE; FOR SPE-CIFIC DAYS AND TIMES: 619-239-2255.

The Male Intellect: An Oxymoron?

Julie dumped Bobby two weeks ago. Just split. His fiancée. Now he's so conflicted, so "out of balance," he can't even remember why. So Bobby decides to "find out what women want." He drinks Coronas and tries to discover as well his right-brain, "feminine" side. He's a dysfunctional mess, but to his credit, and thanks to Julie, he at least recognizes it (though he shouldn't blame the Y chromosome; that's an old-hat dodge). Male Intellect never dips beneath pop psychology stereotypes about gender but is a consistently funny 90-minute take on today's dating scene. Like Scrooge, Bobby is haunted by visitors: five male chauvinists ranging from a 123-year-old geezer still searching for the perfect woman to the Colonel, who deals with women by the book...his book. Ford Austin plays Bobby and the MCPs with an engaging audience rapport and an ability to disappear into another character. Robert Dubac wrote Male Intellect, which, like Forever Plaid and Late-Nite Catechism, has become an international touring show (you can't help but hear the author, behind the jokes, patting himself on the back for being such a sensitive dude). Asked which character he identified with most, Dubac replied: "Separately they are individuals, but put together all one guy. Women who see the play say, 'I've been out with every one of those guys!'"

Moonlight and Magnolias

"The problem with the motion picture business," complained Raymond Klune, production manager for Gone with the Wind, "is you make nothing but prototypes." Three weeks into filming GWTW, producer David O. Selznick shut down operations. He, director Victor Fleming, and script doctor Ben Hecht reworked the screenplay. Ron Hutchinson's loopy comedy imagines what that process was like. As if trying to save the Old Globe's production the way Selznick's trying to save the movie, director John Rambo gives it a slapstick, cartoony staging, including a food fight and comic book fisticuffs (POW! KER-BUNK!) with intermittent moral interludes (questions about racism and anti-Semitism that never get beyond the asking; clichés about movie magic, and loyalty to Margaret Mitchell's book versus loyalty to emotional truth). As Fleming, Tom McGowan gets yuks by having the macho man do things he never would (like giving birth); the script makes Davis Manis's Hecht, truth's brave interrogator, a whining party-pooper. And Dan Castellaneta's Selznick, though preachy, does some impressive GWTW imitations. This giddy bagatelle has funny moments (and a gorgeous Art Deco set by Alexander Dodge) but will do anything for a laugh, even warp the facts. (Note: Due to popular demand, the Old Globe has extended the run of Moonlight and Magnolias.)

main the same. Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone's Theatre-Sports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on ActroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a challenge match against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played "Emotional Sympathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledge failure, abundantly, then forget it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Ragtime, the Musical

The four-Tony-Award-winning musical, based on E.L. Doctorow's novel about life in turn-of-the-century America, comes to the Lyceum. Shaun T. Evans directed. LYCEUM THEATRE, 79 HORTON PLAZA, DOWNTOWN, THROUGH AUGUST 21; THURSDAY AT 7:00 P.M. FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 7:30 P.M. MATINEE SATURDAY AND SUNDAY AT 2:00 P.M. 619-544-1000.

San Diego Theatresports

A cross between improvisational comedy and Family Feud. Improv, making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add competitive scene making, with the audience awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odiousness of comparisons used in this format, but San Diego Theatresports' "game show" is a hoot. The 90-minute evening offers different bits. The show I caught had "Team Sports" — two pairs of players competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla Theatre" — five directors invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit" (other formats include "Micetro" and "Improv Survivors"). Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, callow youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group makes the hits much more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, wrote one of the very best books I've ever read about making theater. And they put his pearls to good use. Their motto: "Remember, when it's not funny, it's art."

Worth a try.

THE FUNHOUSE, 6822 EL CAJON BOULEVARD (BETWEEN 68TH AND 69TH), COLLEGE AREA, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY AT 7:45 P.M. (THE "FAMILY" SHOW) AND AT 9:45 P.M. ("RATED PG-13"). 619-465-7469.

The Sopranos' Last Supper

Dillstar Productions presents an evening with the notorious Baritone family: "gambling, dinner, dancing, and good old mobster fun." LAFAYETTE INN AND SUITES, NORTH PARK, OPEN-ENDED RUN; "SELECTED FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS" AT 7:30 P.M. 800-944-5639.

The Sound of Music

Starlight Theatre presents Rodgers and Hammerstein's popular musical about the Von Trapp family and their problematic tutor, Maria. Dan Regas directed. STARLIGHT BOWL, BALBOA PARK, THROUGH AUGUST 21; THURSDAY THROUGH SUNDAY AT 8:00 P.M. 619-544-7827.

Tale of the Allergist's Wife

Marjorie Taub lives in a $900,000 NYC condo. Her husband of 32 years is an allergist/saint. And yet Marjorie hungers — because her therapist died recently? — "for meaning!" She's a "cultural poseur," which her kvetching mother complains about almost as much as her own digestive dysfunctions. In Charles Busch's over-the-top comedy-fable, the fortuitous arrival of Lee, a long-lost friend who has influenced four decades of cultural high-points, from Kerouac to Warhol to Princess Di (and who may be a figment of the family's collective imagination), could change all three lives: if they let her. The 6th@Penn production's a mix of funny moments and overcooked attempts to force laughter. Much of the show is comedy- but should be character-driven; emphasis on the latter would help-bridge Busch's leap from a whacko first act to near sobriety in the second. Lee Scaritt's Marjorie's appropriately (though often calculatedly) manic. As Frieda, Lee's mother, Carlyn Ames needs to vary jackhammering deliveries. Rhys Green and Fred Harlow blend humor and character effectively. And, too long absent from local stages, Glynn Bedington's terrific as the smiling, gentle — or is she a sinister, controlling Golem/monster? — Lee, the "terrorist of the heart" who infects the silver-striped, posh condo with the virus of liberation.

Worth a try.

6TH@PENN THEATRE, 3704 SIXTH AVENUE, HILLCREST, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 25; THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. MATINEE SUNDAY (AND WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31) AT 2:00 P.M. 619-688-9210.

Triple Espresso: A Highly Caffeinated Comedy

Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffeehouse 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend — "Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard," or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" — Hugh plays '70s tunes on the piano. He and his companions, here to celebrate Hugh's anniversary, got stuck in the '70s. The trio used to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they admit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept characters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackerjack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficulties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudo-drama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. (Note: the original cast members have been replaced.)

The Winter's Tale

A "sad tale" may be best "for winter," as a character says, but the Old Globe's splendid Winter's Tale could become the hit of the summer. Although King Leontes has it all — loving wife pregnant with their second child, dear friends, sumptuous palace — for uncountable reasons he goes absolutely nuts. Mad as Lear, blood-thirsty as Macbeth, Leontes breaks every bond he's ever known. Shakespeare supplies causes (at least five) but is much more concerned with healing the effect:

how do you, or even can you, repair ultimate damage? How do you de-Hyde Dr. Jekyll? In Shakespeare's most amazing, open-hearted statement about human nature, The Winter's Tale shows that a person can change, or change back, if given support, conviction, and time. The play jumps 16 years, and from winter to spring ("from things dying to things newborn") and tragedy to comedy. Directed by Darko Tresnjak, the production's so adept at evoking the play's extreme atmospheres that when you're in the winter scenes, like being in the real dead of winter, it feels as if spring will never come. And, in the midst of chipper Act Four, scene four, vice versa. From Bruce Turk's solemn/loony Leontes, to Katie MacNichols' forthright, aching, wonderful Hermione, through all the ensemble work, the acting is first-rate. As is the design work: Ralph Funicello's spare, stained-wood set, Linda Cho's solemn/celebratory costumes, York Kennedy's Rembrandt-like lighting, and Christopher Walker's subtle sound design. Gosee this one! Treat yourself.

Tourist Class

Shiver me timbers, the “tall ships” are here this week for the Festival of Sail (August 17–21), a treat for residents and visitors alike. Twenty vessels are plying the bounding main (well, the placid bay) along the North Embarcadero, from the Cruise Ship Terminal to Hawthorn Street. If trudging the waterfront leaves you with tired tootsies and a longing for a sit-down seafood dinner, Harbor House is a short pedicab ride or a brisk walk from the south end of the festivities. In business since Seaport Village’s beginnings in 1980, this imposing two-story building is off Kettner, smack-center of the Village’s southern edge.

You can eat in two distinct venues. Each has its own entrance and kitchen, but both are supervised by aptly named executive chef Ken Cooke. Wherever you sit, you can order food and beverages from either menu — although when we tried to order an “upstairs” fish downstairs, our waiter was unaware of this possibility.

The wooden stairway on the Village side of the building takes you to the oyster bar and pub, a vast, informal dining room that includes a bar (for oysters, hooch, whatever). The decor is nautical, with pillars made of faux pilings, brick-façade walls, and wood floors — it looks like a renovated 200-year-old building. The peaked ceiling shows off a complex pattern of sound baffles, which lowers the noise level, even if squalling babes and squealing tots are nearby. Three sides of wraparound windows overlook water vistas and greenery. If you arrive early enough (before 6:15 p.m.), you should score a window table, as we did. (Arrive near 7:00, without reservations, and expect a minimum half-hour wait.) Watching a sailboat glide along the bay, my partner sighed happily. “I’m already glad we came here,” he said. “I needed a break from the city.”

An “oyster sampler” should include more than one species, but our half-dozen bivalves were all from Fanny Bay, farm-raised in a warmish-water inlet in Vancouver. They were mild-flavored and a little mushy, as you’d expect from the sheltered upbringing. The made-from-scratch cocktail sauce was tastier than supermarket versions. Fried clams consisted of thick cornmeal batter (resembling strung-out hushpuppies) around tough, skinny clam strips. You’re buying the batter — plus that cocktail sauce and a clean-tasting house-made tartar sauce.

PHOTOGRAPH BY JOE KLEIN

The hefty clam chowder was enjoyable, with diced potato, minuscule corn kernels, tender clam meats, and near-imperceptible bits of bacon. A dozen oyster crackers were already afloat in the liquid, not served in the package, so we couldn’t dole them out gradually to keep a few crisp ones on top. They mushed out in moments.

The oyster bar menu centers on simple, popular American seafood dishes. Current fresh fish and their various preparations are detailed on a two-sided menu card. “Be sure to read both sides,” the waiter reminded us. Lightly smoked Alaskan King salmon fillet, finished by broiling, proved a fine piece of fish, if cooked to an Arizonan dryness — parched at the edges, slightly moist at the center, like a Yuman who’s spent too much time in the sun. The plate included a ramekin of vinegary remoulade sauce to moisten the fish. A chewy, undercooked Sysco-style veggie medley (broc, zuke, carrot, one mushroom cap) rode along, unredeemed by a sprinkling of minced fresh herbs. The highlight of the plate was a skin-on red potato sprinkled with chopped fresh rosemary — a taste of home.

The menu features several seafood showpieces, including paella and cioppino. Looking around at our fellow diners, we decided that simpler might be better. We settled on “the Nantucket Bucket,” offering New Zealand “cockles” (clams) and Atlantic blue mussels in a broth of white wine, olive oil, butter, and herbs. The mussels were all open (no stiffs in the group), sweet, and cooked just tender. But the clams may have been sleeping off jet lag, since their juices failed to bring the broth to life. An accompanying slab of garlic bread was compromised by a glaze of burned tomato sauce.

A page of the oyster bar’s menu is devoted to margaritas and martinis. After recently suffering lousy margaritas at three successive Old Town restaurants (two of which also flunked Dinner 101), I was delighted to find the house version here honest and tasty, with Sauza, Cointreau, lemon juice, and little (if any) sweet-and-sour filler. The beer list not only features microbreweries on draft but also boasts three-beer tasting “flights.” An ab-

Harbor House

★★ (Good)

831 West Harbor Drive, Seaport Village, downtown, 619-232-1141, www.harborhouse-sandiego.com.

HOURS: Oyster bar and pub: Daily, 11:00 a.m.–10:00 p.m.; main dining room: Daily, 5:00–10:00 p.m.

PRICES: Soups and salads $6–$10; appetizers $8–$20; dinner entrées $14–$28, lower at lunch. Desserts $7.

CUISINE AND BEVERAGES: Seafood, plus grilled Choice-grade steaks, other meats, and poultry. Upstairs oyster bar preparations tend toward simple American coastal dishes, and menu includes more appetizers. Drink menu includes artisan beers. Downstairs main dining room includes more old-fashioned “haute” preparations, longer wine list. All food and drink from both venues available by request wherever you sit (but not all servers know this). Full bar.

PICK HITS: H.H. Margarita, shrimp La Costa, cold seafood platter with house-made cocktail sauce.

NEED TO KNOW: Parking free with validation for two hours, thereafter $1 per half hour. Reservations strongly advised for after 6:15 any evening. Very family-friendly. Disabled access via elevator from main dining room, with entrance on the park (south) side of the building.

breviated version of the multipage downstairs wine list is printed on the back of the menu. Up or downstairs, you’re sure to find something you like at the price you’re prepared to pay. (For me, at our downstairs meal, that was a crisp Karly Sauvignon Blanc from Amador County for $30.)

Both the main dining room and the oyster bar offer dessert carts. I later learned that the fruit tarts and profiteroles are made in-house; other choices come from a small local dessert company. The carts’ contents differ between the two venues, but many items are common to both. A New York cheesecake drizzled with Chambord raspberry liqueur was tall, dense, and velvety over a graham cracker crust, so rich that I doled out the leftovers for my next three breakfasts. A key lime pie had an alluring graham crust amended with crunchy minced almonds. Its filling was standard, but the topping tasted like nondairy whipped chemicals (e.g., Cool Whip), which is to whipped cream as Nucoa is to Plurra.

Next evening, still looking forward to the Festival of Sails, we moseyed over to the downstairs main dining room, which has its entrance on the south side, facing Embarcadero Marine Park North. Strolling all the way around the building is a treat, with park views, bay views, and a "secret" lagoon with a small waterfall and a wooden footbridge. The dining room is plusher than the oyster bar, with thick carpeting, ecru-clothed tables, and napkins swirled inside the wine glasses — not wrapped around the silverware. The ceiling is low, however, and the view is, too, eye level with the upper halves of joggers in the park. The crowd here is no more formal than in the oyster bar: The same board shorts and T-shirts prevail upstairs, downstairs, and outside.

A much larger kitchen allows for a more ambitious menu. Many dishes are embellished by classic butter-based French emulsion sauces: beurre blanc, Hollandaise, Béarnaise. In the Eisenhower era, these sauces were icons of upscale cuisine, the province of fancy French restaurants and ambitious Junior League hostesses (or their maids). If you've ever cooked them at home, you know that their textures are as trembly as the arms of the breathless amateur who's just whipped in the butter. Today, restaurant kitchens use foolproof shortcuts and ingredients with neither the flavor nor the mouth-feel of the perilous, precious emulsions of old. The mixtures are thicker, often stabilized (e.g., with cornstarch), and if egg yolk is involved (e.g., in Hollandaise), it's likely to be a grainy, pasteurized commercial product that eliminates the danger of salmonella. You may not be thinking about germs; restaurant owners have to.

Oysters Rockefeller and lobster bisque are drawn from the haute cuisine of the ancien regime. The oysters were nicely done, tender and just warmed through, but they were interred under heaps of mushy Pernod-spiked spinach and (at bottom, jointly occupying shell space with the oyster meats) bacon bits. On top were solidified fluffs of pasteurized-egg Hollandaise, browned on the surface — more like soft-baked egg than a sauce. The lobster bisque won our attention with tender morsels of lobster afloat in the liquid, but the sheer weight of tomato and reduced cream in the soup finally wore us out.

An interlude of Californian trendiness brought a mixed green salad with candied walnuts, poached pear, and "baked" goat cheese in a balsamic vinaigrette. Hunks of grainy-textured chevre were encased in thick batter, like frozen fish sticks. If you throw the cheese to the pigs, what remains is a charming (if ordinary) combination that's perfect for a summer's day.

Harbor House's Shrimp La

Costa is the original of this now-ubiquitous local favorite of stuffed, bacon-wrapped shrimp, a dish invented in the mid-'80s by then-chef John Borg. It's on the downstairs menu only. The crabmeat stuffing, flecked with scallion and carrot, hinted at Louisiana flavors, and the shrimp was reasonably tender. I liked it very much, but the Béarnaise sauce on top proved so weighty, "yolky," and salty, it nearly spoiled the joy. The accompanying garlic gratin potatoes rode the line between delightful and distasteful — the spuds are cooked ahead and chilled, imparting a kugel-like flavor of the fridge. The veggie medley had the same contents as in our previous meal; it was better cooked but less herbal than the upstairs rendition.

For our fish du jour, we chose grilled local white sea bass. A giant slab was again cooked dry all the way through, for the tastes of people who live far from the sea and would blanch to find an opalescent blush on the flakes. We liked the accompaniments of moist, fluffy couscous, firm asparagus, and a luscious (if suspiciously thick) ginger beurre blanc.

They say the country has fragmented into "red" and "blue" political states, but there's at least one more line of fragmentation. According to the slick cooking magazines, gourmets in Oxford, Mississippi, and Bozeman, Montana, can now pick up Thai chile sauce or Niçoise olives at their local Piggly Wiggly (I should be so lucky in Golden Hill), but there remains a division between "blue" and "red" states of food preference — places where, for instance, fish are enjoyed medium-rare, versus those whose motto is "I don't want it wiggling on my plate." San Diego is a mixture of the two. Harbor House mainly feeds visitors from the culinary red zone, although many locals also prefer that style.

"Unfortunately, we're a tourist spot," says chef Cooke, a CIA grad who worked in several fine French restaurants in New York City before deciding to move west with his family. "It's good for our business, because if the hotels are full, we're full. But most of our steak is ordered medium or medium-well. Our fish — if we undercook it, it gets sent back. When the Holiday Bowl was in town a few years ago and Nebraska was playing, we had a whole dining room full of people wearing red sweatshirts. All of our pasta dishes kept coming back, because they were cooked al dente. People said they're from the Midwest, they need pasta well-done! The fact that we're a tourist spot does affect our cooking methods, our presentation, and our prices, too, since people on vacation are willing to spend more... But if you ask for your fish medium-rare, we can accommodate you. We get a lot of special requests, and we try to accommodate everyone."

I like the upstairs of Harbor House for its view, its architecture, its drinks; I'd come back to chill with a cold seafood platter and an icy margarita. Downstairs, I like the Shrimp La Costa. If Aunt Mabel were coming to town, I might well take her to this restaurant — but I'm not from a state where girls are named Mabel. ■

Greek Triplets

"You'd pay $13, $14 at other places for what you get here for $8.61, including the tax."

Watch out, art world. There's a new Picasso on the block.

No, don't worry, it ain't Yours Truly. It's Jimmy Daglas. He's about to pick up his brushes.

Lord knows, he's earned the right.

"This was what I always wanted to do," he says. "I went to art school, I learned fine art and commercial art. I wanted to do [fine] art, but there was no money in it. I had to do something else."

So for 34 years, he ran restaurants. Places called "Jimmy's." At one point there were 17 of them, all over San Diego. I must be the only guy in town who hadn't ever eaten at one.

Until today, that is. As luck would have it, I've been down here at County Health and Human Services on Oxford Street. Trying to get coverage for Carla's rehab, all that physio she's going to need.

After, like, four hours trapped in the bureaucracy, they squeeze me out the other end, hungry as heck. On foot, I'm hitting Third and Oxford, when I notice a sign in a window: "$3.99 Breakfast. $4.99 Lunch. $5.99 Dinner."

Inside, it's all golden wood, seven-foot-high skirting, green metal-hoop chandeliers, maroon carpet, a river-rock wall. There are flowery booth seats and calming, unchallenging paintings—roads curling round hillsides, bunches of blooms.

"Hi, Jesse," says the waitress to a thin guy in the next booth. "Usual, right?" He nods, and she steps over to me. "Lunch, or breakfast?" she asks.

I've got two good reasons to go for the breakfast. One, I haven't had breakfast yet; and two, the $3.99 breakfast special is cheaper than the lunch special.

I hesitate 'cause Avelina—that's her name—has left me two big plastic-covered menus: lunch/dinner and breakfast. First, I check out those $4.99 lunch possibilities, just so I don't kick myself later. Hmm. Fried chicken salad, tuna salad, spaghetti, hamburger, chicken tenders, or a beef taco with a chicken enchilada. Spaghetti comes with salad, the burger with fries or mash, and chicken tenders come with mash or fries and veggies.

Okay. They look fine. But maybe a bit much for the first chew of the day. I study the $3.99 breakfast special. There's only one choice: two pancakes, two eggs, one bacon, and one sausage.

By the time Avelina comes with a blessed coffee ($1.49), I'm deep into the rest of the morning menu. Things cost about twice as much as the special—six, seven frogskins. (You haven't heard of frogskins? C'mon, people, they're like, greenbacks.) But some of this stuff is interesting. The "Sunriser" is a grilled breast of chicken covered with two eggs ($6.89). Or I could have a pepper char-grilled steak with two eggs ($7.79), or two broiled pork chops with two eggs ($7.49). All come with hash browns, toast, muffin, hotcakes, or biscuit and gravy.

But what really gets my clock ticking is the scramblers. Italian scramble, with "spicy sausage in scrambled eggs, cubed potatoes, tomato sauce, and melted jack cheese," $6.89. They have variations: seafood scramble (shrimp, crab, and hollandaise, $7.29), Santa Fe (shredded beef, jalapeño peppers, $6.89), and Greek (sausage and feta cheese, $6.89).

I should do the $3.99, but dammit, this has to be breakfast and lunch. "Italian scramble," I say, quick, before I get sensible. For sides, I take the pancakes made with batter concocted "from Jimmy's 50-year-old recipe book."

The mess comes in a ceramic skillet. The sausage is nice and herby. The melted cheese and tomatoes are great, and a bowl of salsa gives it all kick. The two six-inch pancakes are thick, fluffy, like blotting paper to the syrup. I eat—then sit back, sated.

"I've been coming here for lunch Monday to Friday for 18 years," says Jesse, the thin guy in the next booth. Seventy-six years old. Worked 28 years at North Island. Says he eats the seniors' deal every day. It's $7.99 and includes a main dish, plus soup or salad, dessert, and iced tea.

"You'd pay $13, $14 at other places for what you get here for $8.61, including the tax. Besides, you get used to the taste, and the company. I know everybody here."

So today, being Tuesday, is for Jesse like every Tuesday: he's having his chicken teriyaki stir-fry. "I come up from San Ysidro," he says. "They have a Denny's and a Coco's down there, but, no comparison."

At the cashier's desk, I say hi to this lanky fellow who's talking with the gal at the register. Wow. Turns out he's the real McCoy—"the" Jimmy. Okay, one of three Jimmys, all guys of Greek origin, who pooled their treasure back in 1971 and opened the first restaurant. In the mid-'80s, there were 17 Jimmy's open all over San Diego. Now they're down to 3, and Jimmy (this Jimmy) is pulling out of this Third Avenue location. "Look," he says. "I'm 75. I studied to be an artist when I was young. I've put it off long enough. I'm going to get back to that. Martha"—he points—"she's that waitress over there. Been with us 34 years. She and a partner are buying us out. But don't worry, it'll still be Jimmy's."

That's good, 'cause I like the art he created here—art you can eat. The only changes may be the paintings on the walls. ■

The Reader's Guide to Restaurants are recommended listings written by our reviewers (Ed Bedford, Barbara David, Ambrose Martin, Shari McCullough, Max Nash, Eleanor Widmer, Naomi Wise). Each issue contains only a fraction of over 500 reviews. A complete searchable list is available online at SanDiegoReader.com. Price estimates are based on the latest information available for a mid-range entrée. Inexpensive: below $10; moderate: $10 to $19; expensive: $20 to $24; very expensive: more than $25. Please call restaurants in advance for reservations.

NORTH COASTAL

101 Cafe 631 South Coast Highway 101, Oceanside, 760-722-5220. This is the oldest li'l eating establishment in Oceanside. Cooks have been flipping burgers here since 1928. The café is named after Route 101, the Pacific Highway. Old-timers remember when every one from truck drivers to movie stars would stop for a bite before heading on to San Diego and Tijuana. Try the ABC (avocado, bacon, and cheese) Omelet, the 101 Original Cheeseburger with its "secret sauce," chicken fried steaks with eggs and, of course, the Great Depression dish: biscuits with gravy and home fries. Open daily, three meals until midnight. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/01)

Azafran 1001 South Coast Highway 101 (at West Street), Oceanside,

760-435-0005. This place just feels Cuban, with its echoey inside, bongos, washed orange walls, and giant Cuban jazz mural. We're talking Caribbean-style food, not hot by Mexican standards. Most delicious intro: traditional Cuban pressed sandwiches, hot-pressed to mix the juices of, say, smoked ham, roast pork, cheese, mustard, pickles ("Cubano #2"), or roast pork (lechón) with a mojo (garlicky-citrus) sauce that makes it juicy. The bread, baked right here, is news in itself — crunchy and sometimes sweet (ask for medianoche). You get a lot, but don't leave without trying a plantain dish or the cheese flan. Or a cup of Cuban coffee. Lunch and dinner. Closed Mondays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

Jamroc 101 101 North Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-436-3162. At this former site of D.B. Hacker's, you can still get great fish'n'chips — but the Brit batter now gets its lift from Jamaica's Red Stripe beer, mon. The shack by the tracks now sports bright tropical designs on its back-patio walls, and the fare is casual Jamaican (plus a couple of Cajun dishes). Check out the bargain-priced samplers which include luscious soft-fried plantains and splendid patties (empanadas to you and me) with a choice of beef, curry chicken, or veggies. The spicing of the jerks and curry entrées are down-tuned to suit tourist tastes, but the table bottle of Walkerswood Scotch Bonnet Hot Sauce can kick that right up. Don't miss the fresh coconut water, served out of a young Thai coconut. Soca, ska, and (clean) reggae set the mood, and there's live steel pan some weekend evenings. Beer, wine, Bigga soft drinks. Open six days until 8 p.m. weeknights, 9 p.m. weekends. Closed Tuesdays. Inexpensive. — N.W. (4/05)

Kim's Restaurant 745 First Street, Lumberyard Shopping Center #103, Encinitas, 760-942-4816. Both Vietnamese and Chinese dishes are offered in a calm atmosphere with quick, pleasant service. The menu lists 265 items, including 18 Vietnamese house specialties, 28 seafood dishes, and a whopping 45 vegetarian/vegan dishes, many made with seitan (mock poultry). The seafood isn't necessarily fresh catch — some shellfish is evidently obtained frozen, scallops are phosphate-preserved, and the reasonably priced abalone dishes involve slightly chewy, rehydrated dried abalone from Asia. On the other hand, portions are enormous, and the cooking is careful and tasty, although some flavors have evidently been adapted to American palates and ingredients. Open Tuesday through Sunday, continuous service lunch and dinner; closed Monday. Moderate. — N.W. (10/01)

Meritage 897 South Coast Highway 101, Lumberyard Shopping Center, Encinitas, 760-634-3350. Chef-owner Susan Sbicca creates pristine California Cuisine here, highlighting fresh (and usually organic) local produce. A few pick hits are direct imports from her Sbicca down the coast — the irresistible lobster-crabmeat croquettes and lobster-shrimp bisque are pure Del Mar deluxe. But some simpler dishes cleverly complete themselves as you eat them — salmon served with peas and mushrooms on one side and a creamy sauce on the other creates a whole new sauce when you broach the fillet. A lemon-pistachio cake, too, changes as you cut it, the pieces crumbling into a berry coulis. It's a fun way to eat, engaging the mind along with the palate. The setting is family-friendly (only well-mannered kids come here) with a handsome, airy dining room and charming patio. Wide-ranging wine list, plenty by the glass and even some half-bottles. No corkage on Tuesdays; Mondays and Wednesdays most bottles half price. Reservations advisable. Lunch and dinner daily, bar menu ongoing. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Palomar Airport Cafe 2162 Palomar Airport Road, Carlsbad, 760-438-9665. Top Gun, anyone? Chow down and choose views of planes like the 1935 Harvard, "The Texan," or the Life Flight choppers scrambling. Expect to see greats like Chuck Yeager or his buddy Lowell Williams, who still trains stunt pilots here. It's not gourmet, but it's down-to-earth solid nosh, with plenty of beer and spirits flowing. The café's sexy waitresses serve generous plate-loads of everything from breakfast burritos (scrambled eggs, onions, bell pepper, potatoes, cheese) to corned beef hash with eggs and spuds. Or lunch-wiches with quirky plane names like Almost Famous Mustang Burger (open-faced with chili) or the B-29 (turkey, Swiss cheese, Ortega chilies "melted together on grilled sourdough"). Delish. Breakfast, lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Sakura Bana 1031 South Coast Highway 101 (Suite A), Encinitas,

760-942-6414. One of the friendliest eateries in a friendly town, this is a sushi bar where everybody knows your name (or acts like they do). The chefs love to whip up special dishes for the many regulars at the counter, so if you're a newbie, keep an eye out for what your neighbors are eating. A blackboard lists the specials, guiding you to the day's freshest catch. Should you spot pompano on the list, get two orders — with two orders (but not if you just order one), after you've consumed the delicate raw filets, the chefs will deep-fry the skeleton to a lacy crunchiness. If you don't feel like sushi, there are several tables, and standard Japanese appetizers and entrées are available. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Moderate. — N.W. (9/01)

NORTH INLAND

Bernard'O Restaurant 12457 Rancho Bernardo Road, Rancho Bernardo Village Shopping Center, 858-487-7171. Ambiance excels here at one of the prettiest restaurants in the county. High ceilings, tall arched windows, rose-cream walls, fireplaces, and charming Gallic paintings make for an eye-ful, and on many nights a harpist plays show tunes. The cuisine mingles French classics (mussels with frites, crumb-coated rack of lamb, etc.) with daily specials offering seasonal Cal-Mediterranean cooking. These dishes seem a little less adventurous than in days of yore, but this is still a place for a gracious meal in a superb surrounding. Lunch Wednesday through Friday, dinner nightly. Expensive. — N.W. (6/04)

in-line, order-at-the-counter, grab-a-table, listen-for-your-order-number kind of a place. If you're looking for pampering and atmosphere, this isn't gonna cut it. If you're wanting yummy Italian comfort food to eat in or take out, this the spot. The bread alone is worth a trip. Real, flaky, honest-to goodness French rolls complement pastas and salads or encase meatballs, eggplant parmesan, or deli meats. The meatballs, a Di-Crescenzo family recipe, are unusually moist and tender, perfectly seasoned. The subs — especially Rocco's Imperial Sub — are packed with deli goodies and just enough Italian dressing. Thin crust pizzas are a popular treat. Open Monday through Saturday, lunch to early dinner. Inexpensive. — S.M. (10/03)

The Fireside 439 West Washington Avenue (at Centre City Parkway), Escondido, 760-745-1931. The Fireside bills itself as "North County's Finest Steak House." It also seems to be the area's community center, a rambling building with a karaoke bar, nightclub, poolroom, and meeting rooms for many lodges. The dining room is large and lovely, plush and quiet, with soft lighting, a freestanding central fireplace, and seating in cushy booths. The menu is part steakhouse, part 1975 French Continental — think duck à l'orange, tournedos rossini, breaded rack of lamb — by now, these are American comfort foods. Steaks and roast beef are juicy USDA Choice cooked to your preference. The simpler appetizers and side dishes are mainly more successful than the fancy choices. Dinners include house-made soup or salad. Bargains include weeknight twilight dinners, weeknight prix fixe dinner for two, and à la carte sides for just a pittance. Good handicap access. Casual-dressy atmosphere; full bar. Lunch and dinner seven days. Moderate. — N.W. (9/03)

The French Market Grille 15717 Bernardo Heights Parkway, San Diego, 858-485-8055. Ambience is served in generous portions at this romantic establishment with elegant indoor dining or a charming garden setting. The wine list has over 50 selections, including several available by the glass, and the varied menu offers Gallic dishes of duck, lamb, fish, veal, frog legs, and more. Most dishes are served with the usual French cuisine sauces, but if you're dieting, they'll gladly omit sauce. Ingredients and execution of the entrées can be inconsistent (e.g., some nights the fish is overcooked or the meat is tough, other nights they're fine) but the crab-cake appetizer is always outstanding. Save room for dessert, especially the excellent crème brûlée. Open daily for lunch and dinner. Moderate. — S.M. (11/03)

Hernandez' Hide-Away 19320 Lake Drive (off Del Dios Highway), Escondido, 760-746-1444. The founder of Hernandez' claims he invented the margarita at his previous restaurant in Bird Rock. True or not, the margaritas (rocks, not slush-ee) are terrific, on a par with Baja's best. The food, though, is detuned for gringos, with a standard menu of Cal-Mex specialties. Even the guacamole is underseasoned, but if you like this sort of thing, a pleasant "tamale pie" is as good as any Midwestern mom's. The huge bargain-priced brunch on Saturdays and Sundays brings in the crowds; reservations urged for weekends to save a long wait. The exterior patio sports a big, funny mural, and the interior is carved into several rooms (helps keep the noise down) camped up with cute "Old West" cantina decor. Weekend brunch; lunch and dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (7/04)

Mille Fleurs 6009 Paseo Delicias, Rancho Santa Fe, 858-756-3085. One of the area's top destination restaurants, Bertrand Hug's beautiful room with beautiful food draws "the beautiful people" — Hollywood honchos, high-end high school graduation parties, and a steady influx of rarefied Rancho Santa Fe residents flaunting huge twinkling rocks. The daily-changing menu sports first-rate modern French cuisine (with a few German touches) by long-time chef Martin Woelsle. Order at will — everything's flawless. The menu's most exciting on weeknights, when crowds are sparser and the kitchen has time to stretch. The wine list is fabulous but exorbitant even at the bottom. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Reservations a must. Very, very expensive. — N.W. (5/01)

RESTAURANTS

Beach House 2530 South Coast Highway 101 (at Lomas Santa Fe), Cardiff-by-the-Sea, 760-753-1321. This beautiful restaurant with its breezy seafont patio is a branch of an upscale beach mini-chain (others are in Dana Point and Laguna Beach). Its main menu features steaks, seafood, and some “Continental” warhorses (lobster thermidor, et al) that are best avoided. The view is even more spectacular from the upstairs “Top of the House” which features pub grub and fish in a lighthouse-like setting. On Sundays, local families flock in for the moderately priced à la carte champagne brunch featuring the standard dishes of the genre plus some less-successful fancied-up ones, with endless Freixenet champagne. Whatever the meal, stay simple here — burgers, steak, unfussy eggs — and enjoy the atmosphere. Reserve for a view table or outdoor seating at Sunday brunch. Full bar but few wines. $2 valet parking. Restrooms accessible by elevator, may be tight fit for wider wheelchairs. Daily brunch/lunch and dinner. “Top of the House” serves until 11 p.m. nightly; “early bird” cut-price dinners weeknights. Brunch moderate, dinner moderate to very expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Charlie's by the Sea 2565 South Highway 101, Cardiff-by-the-Sea (a long block south of the spotlight), 760-942-1300. This seaside spot offers a blissful patio right on the breakwater and a terrific, authentic Boston-style clam chowder to match the view — it's light, creamy, and loaded with clams, unpeeled red potato chunks, and bits of honey-cured bacon. The kitchen's good with simple dishes, including fresh raw oysters and the lively “Bayou Burger” with Cajun seasonings and well-made spicy fries. The dinner menu includes more ambitious items, but the weekly main event here is Sunday brunch, with a menu of standard brunch dishes at affordable prices, featuring endless refills of champagne. (Hint: Veuve Clicquot it's not.) Huge wine list, full bar. Free valet parking. Brunch reservations advisable. Open daily, lunch or brunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (9/03)

Sbicca American Bistro 215 15th Street, Del Mar, 858-481-1001. Though characterized as an “American Bistro,” Chef Susan Sbicca (“speeka”) also reveals Asian and Mexican influences in her creative menu. Set in a one-time private home a block from the Del Mar coast, this lively restaurant boasts five dining rooms, including one downstairs with a fireplace and a “wine room” upstairs for private parties. In fair weather, the outdoor rooftop patio is the best seat in the house. The menu changes seasonally, though a few perennial favorites remain. The rich, deeply flavored lobster-shrimp bisque with overtones of sweet butter pastry is worth a return visit. A thick maple-roasted pork prime rib with vanilla-scented sweet potatoes and bourbon chantilly sauce is a house favorite, although not quite as exquisite as the soup. Monday nights feature $3 martinis; on Tuesdays and Thursdays, all bottles of wine from the fine California-centric wine list are 50% off. No corkage fee on Wednesdays. Crowded during racing season. Lunch weekdays; dinner nightly. Expensive. — B.D. (5/05)

LA JOLLA

Forever Fondue 1295 Prospect Street #201, La Jolla, 858-551-4509. Also at 6110 Friars Road, Mission Valley, 619-295-7792. Once every thirty years, a person should experience the novelty of fondue. Forever Fondue offers patrons the opportunity to cook or dip a variety of food items in a shared pot at their own table, accompanying the morsels with six different but universally disappointing sauces. Ambiance is minimal, other than the harsh chemical spray that bussers use for cleaning vacated tables. Dessert, however, is yummy — you can't miss with anything dipped in chocolate.

The restaurant is clean and the staff friendly, although service can be extremely slow. Mediocre wine choices. Seating space is limited so reservations are recommended. Open daily for dinner. Moderately priced. — S.M. (2/04)

Fresh Seafood Restaurant 1044 Wall Street (at Herschel), La Jolla, 858-551-7575. The fare is mainly fishy and the room is truly dishy, with lots to look at — the open kitchen, floor-to-ceiling sculptures, street-patio scene, or the decolleté of the date dresses among the younger half of the crowd. The older half shows up in business suits, whatever their gender. Here you'll find that Chef Matthew Zappoli's seafood creations and lush sauces live up to the restaurant's name, although reined in enough to keep from scaring business-suited palates. Fish not your dish? Meats and poultry are of fine quality, too. Save room for the hazelnut mocha mousse cake, so sensual it should be X-rated. Good wine buys in Sauvignon Blancs and “interesting whites.” Dinner reservations a must. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Marrakesh 634 Pearl Street (at Draper), La Jolla, 858-454-2500. The North African fare of Morocco is like no other in the world — influenced by Arab cuisines, but more intense and sheerly hedonistic. At our sole Moroccan restaurant, the fare is arranged into a nightly five-course prix fixe feast, with superb lentil soup (harira), a salad plate, bastilla (a chicken-filled filo pie), an entrée, and finally mint tea poured from on high to accompany almond baklava perfumed with orange-flower water. The setting and service are dramatic — tented ceilings, low banquette seating at carved round tables, belly-dancing interludes, servers in fezzes. (You're the Sheik of Araby.) A short list of entrées (a maximum of two choices per table, to be shared) features fine chicken (or lamb) with olives and preserved lemons; moist, fatless duck; lamb with couscous; and rather dry fish. On quiet weeknights, you can request the dreamy lamb with honey, an extravaganza that includes fruits, almonds, sesame, and cinnamon. Dinner nightly, reserve for weekends. Moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Nathan's at Michele Coulon's 7556 Fay Avenue, Suite D, La Jolla, 858-456-5098. Fans of The Belgian Lion, a San Diego institution for over 20 years that closed in 2001, can rejoice. Nathan Coulon, grandson of Belgian Lion founders Don and Arlene Coulon, has stepped into his mother Michele's kitchen to resurrect many of the Lion's signature dishes: cassoulet, steak au poivre, poulet Normande. He's also added a few of Grandpa's that never made it onto the menu — try the baby spinach gratin — and now and then slips in something of his own. Ingredients are often first rate and sourced from good local growers. Growing up in the old restaurant's kitchen has taught him well; the poulet Normande is one of those deceptively simple dishes that surprises you with its perfection. Thoughtful and affordable wine list. Dinner Thursday through Saturday only. Expensive to very expensive. — A.M. (6/04)

Piatti Ristorante 2182 Avenida de la Playa, La Jolla Shores, La Jolla, 858-454-1589. Whether you sit inside to enjoy the warm, rustic decor or outside under the giant ficus tree listening to the fountain, you're in for a treat at this secluded restaurant. Meals begin with crunchy corn-studded ciabatta and spicy balsamic dipping sauce, but don't fill up too soon: the appetizers and salads are varied and tasty. All pastas are house-made and served with lively, unusual sauces, including penne agnello, a treat for lamb aficionados. Lemon-herbed ro-tisserie chicken, wood-fired pizzas, veal picatta, and bistecca (a grilled rib-eye steak) round out the entrées. Portions are generous, so pace yourself if you're planning to have one of their house-made desserts. Lunch and dinner weekdays; brunch and dinner Saturdays and Sundays. Moderate. — S.M. (7/04)

Roy's 8670 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde Center (across from UTC), La Jolla, 858-455-1616. Our own noisy outpost of top Hawaii chef Roy Yamaguchi's ever-expanding chain has elements of both “top chef” and “chain” about it. Decoding Roy's Rules of Ordering can make the difference between a mediocre dinner and a very happy meal: 1. Steer clear of combination platters — the same dishes come off much better when ordered separately; 2. You can get any element of a combo (including the yummy off-menu ahi poke) by asking for it; 3. Don't waste your palate (or money) on weak umbrella drinks when the wine list is brilliant. The menu changes daily, but some frequent tasty choices are potstickers, lumpia, “Kahana” shutome (sword-fish), or chocolate soufflé. Special dietary requests accommodated, including vegetarian meals. Reserve, and hope for a table far from the raucous bar. Open nightly. Very expensive. — N.W. (4/01)

Sky Room Top floor of La Valencia Hotel, 1132 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-0771. The stunning ocean view offers three essentials for a memorable evening: privacy, intimacy, and the ability to talk without the interruption of noise. The food is a feast to the eyes as well as the palate. Best bets: abalone and scallop steak appetizer, the daily soup, diver scallops, and lobster. Dinner only, with two seatings on weekends. Very expensive. — E.W. (10/99)

Zenbu 7660 Fay Avenue (at Kline Street), La Jolla, 858-454-4540. It was a natural for fisherman-restaurateur Matt Rimel to open a sushi bar-fish house, featuring sparkling fresh catch, much of it from his own boats. Sashimi and the simpler sushi are better here than the big party rolls, which can be lunkish. Don't miss the sashimi of live local uni (sea urchin) served on its shell most week-ends. Cooked fish entrées feature equally sparkling seafood, sometimes in almost goofily elaborate preparations. No reservations; 30-minute wait likely on week-ends. Sushi bar is up a short staircase; dining room and patio tables are wheelchair accessible. Several vegetarian choices. Full bar, good sake list. Dinner nightly. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (6/01)

MISSION VALLEY
& THE MESAS

Korea House 4620 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-560-0080. Korea House offers floor seating or a table if you want to barbecue your own food. The menu offers fine “down-home” Korean food, such as traditional mandoo (beef) dumplings, gaejang backban, or raw crab, and yookhwe, a steak tartare worth risking. Make a meal from enormous appetizers like gul bosam (raw oysters, pork, and cabbage leaves). Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — M.N. (9/98)

Nijiya Market 3860 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-268-3821. If you're not willing to sacrifice quality for convenience when eating fast food, try this Japanese market in Kearny Mesa. Nijiya Market offers prepared box lunches, or bento, that are pretty to look at, appetizing, and a real bargain. I suggest, however, passing by Nijiya's steam trays and heat lamps and going straight to the coolers, where you'll find delicious chicken cutlets, fresh sushi, and chilled noodles, as well as dessert delicacies like sweet bread roll filled with sweet bean paste. Inexpensive. — M.N. (8/99)

Pampas Argentine Grill 8690 Aero Drive (at Montgomery Field), Kearny Mesa, 858-278-5971. The Argentine specialties feature grilled grass-fed beef, including a somewhat Americanized version of the gauchos' great parillada mixta (mixed grill), with a great chorizo but minus any exotic organs. The naturally raised meats are lower fat and lower cholesterol than feed-lot beef but are salted heavily in the kitchen unless you request otherwise. Specify rare or medium-rare, unless you really like brown cardboard. Lighter fare includes free-range chicken and fresh, well-treated seafood. Beef empanadas are a tasty, authentic starter. Potatoes (fries and mashed) are splendid, salads are exuberant. The full bar features Chilean and Argentine beverages with many affordable South American wines by the glass. Park in lot at restaurant's front door, not the back-door lot. Lunch (mainly sandwiches) on weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (4/02)

Prego Hazard Center, 1370 Frazee Road (at Friars), Mission Valley, 619-294-4700. In a stylish North Italian restaurant set in a come-as-you-are mall, a million-dollar renovation at the turn of our century has turned down the noise level to match the pleasing, easy-going North Italian cooking. Good starters include the antipasto platter, sparkling salads, and yeasty, fresh-baked rosemary-garlic bread (actually a mini-pizza crust). Pastas (many featuring fresh seafood) are nearly perfect, but risotto can be risky. Entrées are mainly simple grilled or rotisserie meats and fish. Service is warm and well informed. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly. Moderate (pastas) to expensive. — N.W. (4/01)

Seau's Mission Valley Center mall, 1640 Camino del Rio North (next to Robinsons-May), Mission Valley, 619-291-7328. Footballer Junior Seau contributes more to San Diego than just sacks. His extravagant multivenue sports pub is major league fun — a real-life reincarnation of some 1960s McLuhanite media art show, with 70 video screens (ranging from large-normal to giant HDTV) running sportscasts and a professional DJ on high, periodically spinning cool sounds over muted talking heads. The menu offers mainstream “something for everyone” choices, including pizza, hefty but so-so burgers, some elementary sushi, all-American entrées, and Seau’s family recipe of Samoan teriyaki “plate lunch.” Above all, there’s pub grub. The chicken wings are pretty good, and you can get all three sauces (Buffalo, BBQ, and Asian) on one order. Perfect hangout for mismatched couples with one sports fan and one fashionista (the latter can head for Nordstrom and Saks discount outlets nearby). On game days, patrons are allowed just one game in the dining room ($15 minimum), but you can linger from wake-up to closing on the patio or in the bar. Open daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (1/03)

Sheila's Cafe & Bakery 4577 Clairemont Drive (Wilson Plaza), Clairemont, 858-270-0251. A “Glatt Kosher,” a non-dairy Orthodox Jewish restaurant and bakery with a mission. Sheila was determined to create food observant Jews could eat without worrying — from Italian to Mexican to ribs to fried chicken to lactose-free cheesecakes — and that everybody else wouldn’t know was different. The result: a menu stretching from chicken soup with matzoh balls to standards like hamburgers and even Sunday prime rib dinners. You don’t need a yarmulke to feel comfortable here, but it’s comforting to know everything down to the least lettuce leaf has received extra-careful preparation. You’ll find Sheila’s breads and pastries at supermarkets all around town. Lunch and dinner Monday through Thursday, lunch Friday, dinner Sunday (closed Saturday, of course). Moderate to slightly expensive. — E.B. (11/01)

THE BEACHES

Alfiere Sheraton Harbor Island, West Tower, 1590 Harbor Island Drive, Harbor Island, 619-692-2778. Sophisticated, deluxe Italian/Mediterranean cuisine takes center stage in a handsome, view-endowed dining room decorated in a “Venetian Carnival” theme. In a menu that follows the seasons, San Francisco-born Chef Antonio Friscia proves he’s capable of brilliance. His thin-skinned ravioli stuffed with marinated braised short ribs shouldn’t be missed, and his goose foie gras on ciabatta crostini is divinely playful. Traditional dishes take on new life, too: The house “antipasta” (of marinated vegetables and top-quality Italian deli meats) is everything you’d hope for, while house-made pesto gnoc-chi float off the plate. Some dishes are invariably less successful, but boredom will not be a problem — this is nothing like “hotel food.” The Italian/Californian wine list emphasizes lesser-known Italian reds. Daily, three meals. Upper moderate to expensive. — N.W. (5/02)

Baleen Paradise Point Resort, 1404 Vacation Road (off Ingraham Street), Mission Bay, 858-490-6364. Take a quick trip to chic Miami at the local branch of Florida’s famed new resort restaurant. Whimsical tropical decor features a monkey motif (carved in the chandeliers, peeking from the paintings) and mambos play on the speakers. But the unlisted prices for chilled shellfish may make a monkey of you unless you ask before you buy. The menu features high-quality seafood and land creatures in refined renditions, including gorgeous lobster bisque, salmon with a clever hummus crust, herbed sea bass, and a hunk of free-range veal. Servers are charmers. The wine list is long and rather steep at the bottom end with better values farther up the range. Reservations recommended. Very expensive. — N.W. (12/00)

The Bar-B-Que House 5025 Newport Street, Ocean Beach, 619-222-4311. OB’s piling in, and for good reason: the chicken and ribs are smoked on an oak-wood fire, then charbroiled. Beef, pork, and ham spend eight to ten hours in the smoker. Of course, they have pork (but not beef) ribs. A good-value combo is the Southern-Style sandwich — beef, pork, ham, or chicken with coleslaw inside, along with a sauce that’s just right:

sweet, tangy, spicy. Most original idea? A BBQ burrito with meat, baked beans, coleslaw, and sauce wrapped in a flour tortilla. Open seven days, breakfast through dinner; till 10 p.m. weeknights; 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

Humphrey's by the Bay 2241 Shelter Island Drive, Shelter Island, 619-224-3577. Most diners at this resort/concert venue restaurant eat at the prix-fixe pre-show dinners because they guarantee good seats for the concerts at the next-door ampitheatre. They’re missing the best food, which emerges once the music-mavens leave the premises. The kitchen features top-quality seafood, juicy meats, and prime steaks with lively, seasonal veggie garnishes. Reserve for show-nights or to snare a window table with a gorgeous marina view. Open daily breakfast through dinner; brunch buffet weekends. Reservations strongly advised. Pre-show prix fixe moderate, à la carte high-moderate to expensive. — N.W. (11/01)

Kono's 704 Garnet Avenue (on the boardwalk), Pacific Beach, 858-483-1669. This inside-outside café is your prototypical California surfer hangout. It’s cream and green with maroon canvas window canopies, red-painted make-believe shutters, and three surfboards sprouting through the roof. On weekends, lines of tourists come looking for their California fix. But Kono’s is known among locals, too, for generous breakfasts. Check out their PBS: Pancakes, Bacon and Scrambled eggs. Or the breakfast sandwich with eggs, bacon, cheese, and tomato on a toasted English muffin. Or the CB Burger (chicken breast, green chili, and pica sauce). Best time: foggy mornings. Chow down on their patio on the pier while you enjoy a birds-eye view of surfers appearing out of the mists below. Breakfast and lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/00)

Mardi Gras Cafe 3185 Midway Drive (near Rosecrans and East Street, in mini-mall with a 7-11, across the street from Godfather Pizza), Loma Portal, 619-223-5501. The Creole cooking at this café/grocery, to eat in, take out, or have catered for your next party, is sound and tasty, if deliberately underseasoned (just add salt and hot sauce to taste). You can also buy the real and rare ingredients from the freezer, deli case, and grocery shelves, including Cajun tasso (spiced ham), boudin blanc (rice sausage) and crawfish sausage. Daily brunch through early dinner. No alcohol, everything available for takeout. Inexpensive. — N.W. (2/01)

MZM Seacoast Bistro 875 Seacoast Drive, Imperial Beach, 619-424-5800. If you can make it past the bland exterior, you’ll discover a well-disguised classy joint inside. A harbinger of a new I.B.? Interior is all peach-colored walls, trendy blue sconce wall lights, tweedy booths, and photos of owners Marek and Zofia Migdalski with people like President Bush, Lloyd Bentsen, Sam Donaldson, and Joan Kroc. Migdalski is a recognized private chef who has decided to put I.B. on the gastronomic map. Breakfasts tend to be simple but sophisticated, like frit-tata with Polish sausage, prime rib steak and eggs, or scrambled eggs with smoked salmon. Burgers at lunch are often lamb sirloin. Dinner can be anything, including New York steak or potato-crust-ed

Pacific red snapper. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.B. (6/04)

Sapporo Japanese Restaurant 5049 Newport Avenue (by the pier), Ocean Beach, 619-222-6686. It’s small, but Sapporo has big deals, particularly the lunch specials that usually give you a miso soup, salad, and a combo such as chicken teriyaki and California rolls and white rice — all presented like a piece of performance art. Other specials include yuki soba (stir-fried sautéed chicken, vegetables, and noodles) and champon noodle soup (udon noodles, scallops, shrimp, vegetables), and the value-packed Chicken Bowl — a big plate of sliced chicken, broccoli, other vegetables, and a swag of rice. Open seven days, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/01)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Asia Cafe 4710 Market Street (at 47th Street), Chollas View, 619-527-1917. May be Asian San Diego’s best-kept secret. You have to look behind the smog shop at this all-Laotian shopping center to find it. The menu’s Southeast Asian, but the owner — and most of the conversation around you — is Lao. Lao dishes include the famous larb-kai (chicken salad with hot peppers, lemon grass, and sticky rice). Good regional alternatives: bamee (egg noodle) roasted pork soup, Crying Tiger (ground beef salad with vegetables), Duck Head BBQ, and lard nar (seafood, beef, or pork with sloppy wide noodles and vegetables).

RESTAURANTS

Closed Tuesdays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Huffman's Bar-B-Que 5039 Imperial Avenue (at Euclid Avenue), Chollas View, 619-264-3115. This café has a huge multigenerational following, some famous — check out their wall photos, in which Jesse Jackson and Muhammad Ali are just two — and some not so famous. The big draw is Huffman's fabulous Southern soul food. Try their gravy-smothered fried chicken served with collard greens, yellow peppers, red beans, rice, and white mopping-up bread, or their Louisiana Creole gumbo, thick with crab, shrimp, links, ham, and chicken. Other fine eats include the catfish sandwich and half-pound rib tips. Open daily, lunch and dinner, to 11 p.m. weekdays, 3 a.m. Friday and Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Nate's Deli 3120 Euclid Avenue, City Heights, 619-284-0206. This deli-café is in City Farmers' Nursery, the one with sheep, geese, Clyde the horse and a mini forest in the middle of town. The late Nate was the father of owner Bill Tall, and this deli was his dream. (Nate died just before opening.) Try appetizers like smoked salmon, or "Kishka," a spicy wrapped filling, hot with brown gravy, or the grilled chicken fillet salad. But really, sandwiches are "it" here, and huge, and you can choose your cheeses, breads, and condiments as the sandwich-making proceeds. Go for, say, beef bologna, pas-trami, liverwurst, salami, or vegetarian, then take it out to the eatin' deck, and check out the wild life. Town's a block and a world away. Breakfast to early dinner six days; closed Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/03)

Pizzeria Luigi 1137 25th St. (at C Street), Golden Hill, 619-233-3309. They claim to make real New York pizza in this tiny storefront and they're not lying. One of the owners is from Brooklyn and his origins are written all over the pies. The sauce tastes right and the crusts are thin enough that you can fold a slice into a "V" to eat on the run, New Yorker style. But it's better to take home a whole pie with your choice of toppings (or a stromboli or calzone) and enjoy it at leisure. Inexpensive. — N.W. (7/04)

Sang Dao 4212 National Avenue, Logan Heights, 619-263-0914. Laos has an exotic Shangri-La thing about it, yet the large family that run this eatery will tell you Lao food is quite plain and simple: vegetables, freshwater fish, chicken, pork, occasional beef, sticky rice, and noodles. But taste their delicious spicy catfish and you're right back at exotic. Thai basil, garlic, and most of all, the gingery galanga, a.k.a. "Laos root," help make it unfishy. Other must-tries: BBQ beef, som yum (papaya salad), and especially the spicy salad with minced meat called larb — closest thing to the national dish. The surroundings here may be homey, but not the excellent cuisine. "Sang Dao"? It means "Star Light." Lunch and dinner six days; closed Monday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

EAST COUNTY & COLLEGE AREA

Boulevard), San Carlos, 619-337-3674. In this homey little restaurant, the food is regional Peruvian, specializing in the coastal area from Callao on north, plus some recently adopted Caribbean influences from Colombia. Highlights include the elaborate "Ana Maria's Ceviche," an array of citrus-marinated seafood with sweet potatoes and cancha, smoked hominy corn kernels. The anticuchos (heart kebabs) boast a zesty marinade, and the lomo saltado (sauteéd beef loin strips with tomatoes, peppers, and French fries cooked right in with the liquid) is an outstanding version — it's made with tender steak, not the typical chewy carne asada meat. Beer and wine. Early dinner Tuesday through Thursday; lunch and dinner Friday and Saturday; dinner Sunday afternoon to early evening. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (10/04)

D.Z. Akin's 6930 Alvarado Road, Alvarado Plaza, College Area, 619-265-0218. Surely the best Jewish delicatessen in San Diego. Soups are wonderful, and so are the 110 sandwiches, especially the corned beef. The knishes and chopped liver easily rival Mother's. Excellent breakfasts and outstanding, fully stocked bakery. Open daily, breakfast, lunch, and dinner. Inexpensive to moderate. — E.W.

European Bistro Lake Murray Square, 6062 Lake Murray Boulevard (at El Paso), La Mesa, 619-698-5555. Here at the center of a Russian new-immigrant community, in a strip-mall just south of Ross and Big Lots, you'll find an array of savory Eastern European dishes. They're nowhere as heavy as Nonna's — here they're done with the lightness of the Russian-French chef tradition, applied to specialties from Russia, Poland, and the Ukraine. Following classic Russian custom, there's a splendid choice of small, savory, and substantial salads (try the sensual Stolichny chicken-potato salad) and delightful appetizers, including airy crêpes with juicy (and affordable) red or black caviar. The outstanding main course is lamb shish kebab featuring tender marinated ribs cut from a rack. But don't look for borscht; it's not on the menu. Entrées come with a choice of starches; trust me, you want fries with that. Open daily, lunch and

Jasmine Bistro Westfield Plaza, 315 Parkway Plaza (at Fletcher and the 67 Freeway), El Cajon, 619-588-8228. A gleaming little architectural jewel surrounded by the big white boxes of its mall, Jasmine Bistro is a spin-off of the well-known Jasmine Hong Kong Seafood Restaurant on Convoy. By day, the fare centers on fresh, expertly made Chinese dim sum (elaborate finger-food) offered both by cart and by menu. At night a fresh crew of multiethnic chefs step in to cook up a Pan-Asian panoply, so if you're in the mood for Mandarin and your date wants Thai, no problem. Unfortunately, eaters in this suburban milieu won't stand for too much authenticity, so sophisticated diners may find the fare a little dumbed-down. Mainly California wine list suggests wine pairings for the food; numerous Asian beers, fruity drinks. Reserve for weekend dinners. Daily brunch/lunch through early dinner (until 9 p.m. weeknights, 9:30 weekends). Mainly moderate (except for some special entrées). — N.W. (5/04)

FAR EAST

Kountry Kitchen 826 Main Street, Ramona, 760-789-3200. Thank goodness the Kountry Kitchen's still around. They still open at 5 a.m. for the farmers and anyone else who's up then. They still make their own sausages, and grind their own burger meat, too. The Italian Sausage Breakfast is truly delicious: a fat pale-brown sausage with a rich, sharp, livery flavor, along with eggs and hash browns. Up there, too, is the Cowpoke Country Special, a buttermilk short stack with eggs and sausages or bacon. Open daily, breakfast through early dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

La Casa Del Zorro Borrego Springs Drive (Rte. 73) (five miles south of Palm Canyon Drive at Yaqui Pass Road), Borrego Springs, 760-767-5523. La Casa Del Zorro is Borrego Springs' most renowned and ambitious restaurant, set in a deluxe resort five miles south of town. (Drive through the parking lots until you reach the fenced swimming pool; the restaurant's small, dimly marked door is just to the left.) The California Cuisine menu offers elaborate seafood appetizers (out here in the desert) and entrées with fine, subtle sauces, fresh veggies from nearer the coast, and rather mild-flavored, exquisitely tender meats, evidently chosen to be gentle to the dentures of the duffers. Desserts are few and very sweet. Full bar; great (but pricey) wine list. Colored shirts and jackets required on men (they'll lend you a jacket if needed), dressy-casual wear on women. Open daily, continuously (in theory) from breakfast through dinner. Reserve for weekend evenings. Very expensive. — N.W. (4/03)

The Olde Homestead Fudge Factory The Center, 590 Palm Canyon Drive (north side of the street), Borrego Springs, 760-767-7782. The Fudge Factory's greatest dish is not what it's named for, and some of its pick hits aren't fudge, either. Of the 24 flavors of housemade fudge, barely a half dozen are available on any given day. The chocolate walnut is especially delicious, but the real masterpiece is the "date shake" — a cold quaff that's ambrosial on a hot afternoon. Then, too, a former pastry chef of the famed La Casa Del Zorro provides trays and trays of delicate pastries, and this is one of the few spots in town with an espresso machine. Open 6 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Inexpensive. — N.W. (4/03)

UPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Arrividerci Italian Restaurant 3845 Fourth Street, Hillcrest, 619-299-6282. However you picture an idealized Italian restaurant — sprawling café on the strada or little cozy corner as in Moonstruck — somehow Arrividerci is "it." The straight-from-Rome look of the crowded sidewalk deck and yellow-and-white-awning helps. The menu is a big yet familiar regional potpourri. Reliable standards include vitello bel monte (veal in a brandy cream sauce with tomatoes);

"straw and hay" (paglio e fieno al pesto), pale yellow-and-green pasta with string beans and pine nuts in a delicious pesto sauce; baby rack of lamb with rosemary; or shellfish pasta dishes like linguine mediterraneo, with clams, mussels, and big garlicky shrimp. Part of the fun is bumping chairs. Think dining car on a narrow-gauge railroad — you're that close to the next table. Lunch and dinner daily. Moderate. — E.B. (7/04)

Berta's Latin American Restaurant 3928 Twigg Street (at Congress, diagonal to Rockin' Baja Lobster), Old Town, 619-295-2343. Sampling the whole range of little-known cuisines from Guatemala down to Patagonia, Berta's lengthy menu reads like a culinary "pick hits" list of each country's best flavors, typically rendered with expertise and verve. Some outstanding dishes include sweet-savory Chilean pastel de choclo (a casserole of beef, chicken, and corn pudding) from Berta's homeland, spicy ceviche and subtle seco de cordero (citrus-flavored lamb stew) from Peru, earthy Guatemalan chilemal (cilantro-laden pork stew), aromatic beef curry from Trinidad, and a sensuous vatapa (seafood in coconut sauce) from Brazil's African-influenced Bahia coast. Vegetarians will find many meat-and-fowl-free options. Lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Fifth and Hawthorn 515 Hawthorn Street (at Fifth Avenue), Banker's Hill, 619-544-0940. This warm, cozy cottage near Balboa Park offers once-radical dishes that have long since turned into familiar California comfort cuisine. The menu changes only slightly and the kitchen has the dishes down so pat that execution is almost inhumanly flawless. It's a little like an ideal airplane dinner — on the Concorde, say. Highlights include spicy duck soup, tender stuffed chicken breast, melting calamari steaks, and mustard-coated catfish. Most weeknights, couples can opt for a "wine dinner" that includes four courses and a decent bottle of wine — a great bargain. Full bar, reasonable California-dominated wine list. Good pre-theatre dinner spot (near the Old Globe); let server know your curtain time. No wheelchair access to rest rooms. Dinner nightly. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (2/03)

Hob Nob Hill 2271 First Avenue (at Juniper Street), Banker's Hill, 619-239-8176. It opened in 1944 as a 14-stool lunch counter. Now, you sweep in under the maroon canopy to shiny red booth seats, deep blue carpet, blond wood, paintings, and a half-wall of wine. You're thinking "business class," but don't be fooled. We're talking coffee-shop prices, especially with the all-day breakfasts and sandwiches, not to mention the burgers with a salad tossed in. It's across the street from a retirement condo complex and at dinner, says the owner, "We cater to seniors." While there are à la carte choices, affordable three-course prix fixe dinners (with a regular entrée for each day of the week, Mom-style) are the order of the day — e.g., tasty barbecued pork on Saturdays, roast lamb or turkey Sundays. Open daily. Inexpensive to low moderate. — E.B. (10/01)

Kazumi Sushi 3975 Fifth Avenue (at Washington), Suite 120, Hillcrest, 619-682-4054. A simple neighborhood sushi bar offering imaginative rolls, each one so distinctively seasoned that there's no need to mar the pretty fish-scapes with wasabi dip. The fish is super-fresh and includes salmon that Kazumi-san cold-smokes himself. For a family-style dinner, "The Ultimate Boat" (serving two or more) is an encyclopedia of Japanese specialties, a huge platter of sushi, gyoza, assorted appetizers, yakitori, teriyaki, and terrific tempura. Need comfort food? The tempura also graces the top of a satisfying bowl of nabeyaki udon (noodle soup) with an onion-sweet broth. With just a small staff of family members in the kitchen and house, expect a wait for food at busy times. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner daily. Inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (10/00)

Picasso Spanish Restaurant 3923 Fourth Avenue (near University Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-294-3061. Interesting Spanish tapas and entrées are served in a small, modern, art-filled room that draws a casual neighborhood crowd. The regional style is Basque, from Northern Spain, but these aren't the tiny pinxos of that area — in fact, these bites are larger than usual, sized generously for two eaters. Some top tapas include chicken-stuffed empanadillas, baby eels in garlic sauce, stuffed greenlip mussels, and an outstanding paella (available as both a tapa and entrée). A bargain-price bottomless pitcher of the house's workmanly sangria (made with Livingston Cellars Burgundy) is the patrons' favorite beverage. Lunch Tuesday through Friday, dinner nightly. Moderate. — N.W. (6/01)

Whole Foods Market 711 University Avenue, Hillcrest, 619-294-2800. For vegetarians on the go, Whole Foods' prepared food section will feed you better — and faster — than any vegetarian restaurant in town. Outstanding selections include green chili and cheese polenta; Emerald Mushrooms salad or Rapid Dragon greens, both with a sweet surprise of raspberry jam; and, especially, their farofa salad, like American stuffing, but it's couscous studded with almonds, fat raisins, thin strips of scrambled egg, and bits of carrot and bell pepper. Whole Foods' vegetarian meals will tempt any meat-eater with their delicious originality. La Jolla branch at 8825 Villa La Jolla Drive, 619-642-6700. Inexpensive to moderate. — M.N. (4/99)

DOWNTOWN

Acqua Al 2 322 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-230-0382. Despite its monicker, this isn't a seafood trattoria, but a near-fishless branch of a restaurant in Florence that won success by eschewing the standard Florentine menu while maintaining Tuscan purity of style. Chef-owner Martin Gonzales trained there and serves as charming host of the local outpost. Best bets are the vegetarian pasta and rice dishes made with aromatic porcini mushrooms. The tasting of five pastas may sound tempting, but they're chef's choice — and he tends to choose the dull ones. "Tastings" of salads, cheeses, and desserts are also offered. Mains are mainly rather plain. Moderate (pasta) to expensive. — N.W. (11/00)

Bangkok BBQ 936 Broadway Circle, 619-231-4124. "We're the revolutionaries," says the owner of this chicken-only Thai eatery. "We're taking Thai food back to its true tastes." The place may look modern, but much seems to be prepared traditionally on the spot, from tamarind sauce to bean curd. The "BBQ" part comes from the open grill up front where they sizzle chicken, marinated in coconut milk and wine, for the satés, salads, and the basic chicken with rice dish. The chicken mussamun is nice and rich with its curry coconut sauce, and you've got to try the dish the owner invented to honor the city: the San Diego Wrap, with chicken saté, avocado, raw veggies, and peanut sauce. Lunch, dinner, daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

The Blarney Stone 510 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-233-8519. This handsome establishment, made of dark wood from the Emerald Isle, includes a large, good-looking separate dining room that opens when the dining public forms a critical mass, or around 8 p.m. Like most local Irish pubs, the menu is mainly American and gringo-Mex snack foods, including an "Irish quesadilla" (corned beef and cheese on a flour tortilla). The three wannabe Celtic dishes are an in-different corned beef and cabbage, "steak Kildare" (a tough, mushroom-smothered rib eye), and "fish and chips Liffey," which aren't noticeably different from, say, fish and chips "Thames" or "Afton" or even "Missouri." Open daily. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Buon Appetito 1609 India Street, Little Italy, 619-238-9880. At the chic, art-filled fourth branch of a chain that started with Hillcrest's Arrividerci, the bill of fare combines the pick hits of the mother-ship and of Encinitas cousin-restaurant I Trulli. The menu calls the cuisine "Nouvelle Italian," blending traditional and trendy Mediterranean ingredients. Seasonal specials change monthly. Most appetizers and pastas are fine (entrées often less so), but the kitchen can be hasty, turning out hard-centered risotto or burnt seafood. Winners include antipasto, quail with lentils, and wine-braised rabbit in the style of the Italian Alps. Desserts are mainly weighty. Wine list is an affordable treat, highlighting mysterious Italian grape varieties from small-scale bottlers; the adept staff can help you choose one to match your order. Euro-pop plays loudly inside; noise-sensitive may prefer patio tables. Lunch and dinner daily (with break between); open until 11 p.m. on weekends. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (5/04)

Croce's Restaurant and Jazz Bar 802 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-233-4355. If you enjoy premises with doors open to the street and nightly jazz in the adjoining room, try Croce's. The chef prepares excellent appetizers, pastas, salads, and entrées. Menus change seasonally. Outdoor as well as indoor seating. Nightly jazz. Dinner only. Moderate to expensive. — E.W.

El Carrito 2154 Logan Avenue, Barrio Logan, 619-702-4806. It's called "El Carrito" — "The Streetcar" — for a reason. This gem was one of San Diego's fleet of trolleys that trundled around the city for 60 years from 1889. When the city opted to tarmac over the rails in 1948, a local family rescued this car and turned it into an eatery. Today it is little changed. The menu is old-fashioned Mexican, with breakfasts like ranchero-style eggs, rice, and beans; bistek a la plancha con huevos (grilled steak with fried eggs, rice, and frijoles); good pork chops; and the Big Three: caldo de rez (beef soup), pozole (meat and hominy), and menudo, the famous tripe soup hangover reliever.

Three meals, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (6/04)

The Field Irish Pub and Restaurant 544 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-232-9840. This spirited, colorful saloon, physically transported whole-hog from the Ould Sod, offers delicious Irish music live most nights, and also attempts serious Irish cooking — with some successes. Try the lovely herb-rich Irish stew, or the boxty, potato crêpes rolled around your choice from a variety of fillings (salmon, beef, etc.). Or start the day here with a huge, carnivorous Irish breakfast. Open daily. Low moderate. — N.W. (4/01)

Lou and Mickey's 224 Fifth Avenue (between K and L), Gaslamp, 619-237-4900. The onetime ornate Royale Brasserie across from the Convention Center finally had to bow to conventional tastes and simplify into a fifties-style steak-and-seafood house. Kings Seafood is still the owner, so the fish quality remains fine. The fare is simple, with minimal sauce or garnish; vegetables cost extra, coming in large portions but merely adequate preparations. Best dishes include "BBQ Shrimp, Man-ales' Style," a buttery, spicy New Orleans extravaganza (available as starter or entrée), and the huge, juicy rib-eye "Cowboy Steak." Valet parking at door. Wraparound heated dining patio. Noisy in dining room near bar; request "Nude Room" for quiet. For interesting wines at good prices, look into "Adventures" sections of the list. Dinner nightly, weekends until 11 p.m. Fish moderate, meats expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Patty's Fruitland 1789 National Avenue (at Beardsley), Barrio Logan, 619-239-3085. Patty used to sell fresh fruit drinks outside a church in Guajuato. In 1994 she came to America and married Jose. "Why can't we sell fruit drinks in America?" she wondered. Now they've opened a place where you can get combos like the pico de gallo (rooster's beak) with lots of fresh-sliced fruit and raw veggies (jicama, cucumber), all dusted with cayenne pepper. They've expanded to nonfruit (roast beef and other sandwiches, shrimp tostadas, hot dogs), but the fruit and juices define the place. The most tempting: fruit salad with cottage cheese, granola, and honey.

Calendar
RESTAURANTS

8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday to Saturday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

Pokez Mexican Restaurant and Vegetarian Cuisine 947 E Street (at Tenth Avenue), downtown, 619-702-7160. Rafael — his buddies call him Rafa — started this cool student/artist hangout years ago when he was 18. Lunchtime business people come here. Evenings, seems like it's all Rafa's friends: people from downtown, Golden Hill, City College. The food is mostly Mexican vegetarian (though he's got meaty things like chicken or steak ranchero or sautéed chicken fajitas). Tip well: the servers volunteer and share the take from the gravy pot. Three meals weekdays; closes earlier on weekends. — E.B. (12/01)

Taka 555 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-338-0555. The seafood at this always-packed sushi bar and Japanese appetizer-restaurant is top quality. Ama ebi (sweet shrimp) from the live tank go down soft and silky smooth, unlike their frozen brethren. And the chefs are highly skilled: the well-seasoned rice is freshly made all evening, and for once the spicy scallop hand roll has scallops, mayo, cuke, and hot pepper running all the way through, not just plopped on top. Savory appetizers supplement the sushi, including miso-baked black cod and mushroom-topped agedashi (lightly-fried) tofu. The one problem: the later you arrive, the louder it gets. Make reservations, and if you value your ears, go at an early hour. Dinner nightly. Most dishes inexpensive, but many little bites can eat a hole in your wallet. — N.W. (7/04)

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

Bino's European Coffees and Crepes 1120 Adella Avenue (just off Orange Avenue), Coronado, 619-522-0612. This little round-the-corner café (south of the Post Office) has to be good: it's a favorite retreat for local chefs. Bino bakes his own breads and croissants daily and creates great crunchy sandwiches. Try the Brie Fantasy (chicken breast, roasted marinated peppers, double cream Brie cheese) or the roast beef and jack cheese. Even the veggie sandwich squishes with luscious eggplant, and the crêpes are delicious and filling too. Bino's wife is Austrian and makes great Viennese-style coffee. Open daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Bob's on the Bay 570 Marina Parkway, Chula Vista Harbor, 619-476-0400. Big, breezy Bob's, with its beautiful Bay view, seems to be the unofficial community center of Chula Vista. It's a rambling building overlooking the Yacht Harbor where all sorts of folks pop in for a night off or a fun lunch. The food is serviceable American cuisine centered on steaks and seafood, but on Fridays and Saturdays the scene turns into a pretend-luau complete with Hawaiian band, hula dancers, a party atmosphere, and a few vaguely Polynesian dishes amid the standard mid-American buffet items. Full bar. Reservations advisable for luau nights and Sunday champagne brunch. Casual, family-friendly to the max. Breakfast and lunch buffets inexpensive; Sunday and dinner buffets moderate; à la carte expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Cafe 1134 1134 Orange Avenue, Coronado, 619-437-1134. Rick Chapman has created a French café atmosphere with round Parisian tables and slat chairs outside and a balcony inside. Here Coronado's arty types mix with admirals, CEOs, and SEALs. Big fat cups of tea are a favored drink. Breakfasts are mostly steamed eggs plus extras, such as the Americana with two steamed eggs, Swiss cheese and ham, a side of fruit and sliced baguette. Lunches are sandwiches (like curried tuna or brie con pesto) or salads (try the chicken). Best deal: the Combo Special, a half sandwich and soup or salad. And there's always an art exhibition going on inside. Open daily, three meals; service until midnight on weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Point-Point Joint 916 East Eighth Street, National City, 619-474-2866. You're in Little Manila here, heartland of San Diego's Filipino community. So the food has to be authentic. Your problem's going to be choosing. Dozens of dishes with mysterious meats and veggies. You can play safe and choose, say, chicken barbecue on a bamboo spit, chicken adobo, or longaniza sausage. But you should seek out less familiar choices, too. Kare-kare (yam, peanut butter sauce with beef and tripe) is delicious, and so is dinuguan, pork in pork blood, also known as "chocolate meat." Want healthy? There's monggo (mung beans) with bitter melon leaves, or point to a pile of split, deep-fried fish — daing na bangus, vinegar-soaked milk fish, said to be popular with old men with high blood pressure. Lunch, dinner seven days; breakfast Friday, Saturday, Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Rhinoceros 1166 Orange Avenue (at Loma Avenue), Coronado, 619-435-2121. This bright, hectic bistro next door to the Lamb's Players Theatre draws pre-theatre crowds as well as locals — and that may be a problem, since the rushed pace of service doesn't abate even after the playgoers have departed. Perhaps that's why there are few appetizer choices (as though to discourage diners from spending extra time at the table). You may even be charged a "split plate" fee for sharing a first course despite ordering individual entrées. Meat and fish choices are simply prepared with ingredients of ordinary quality and generic veggie accompaniments. Why, then, is Rhino so popular? Pasta (and nothing but pasta) is the answer — that's where the kitchen shines. Very noisy when crowded; street tables are slightly quieter despite heavy traffic. Reservations advised for weekends, pre-show dinners. Moderate (pastas) to expensive. — N.W. (7/01)

BAJA

From the United States use the prefix 011-52-664 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant's seven-digit number.

La Petite Cafe Avenida Constitución #720-Q, in Foreign Club Passage off Revolución between 3rd and 4th (beside Maxim's), Tijuana, 688-2171. You're in a side eddy here from the storm of Revolución among Olmec sculptures, Aztec calendars, trees, and amazing quiet. It's standard casera (homestyle) food: Spanish chicken with rice and beans, pork chops in green sauce, red enchiladas, steak ranchero, liver-and-onion stew, chicharrón (crisp fried pork rind) in a red sauce, and of course carne asada, but cooked well and priced amazingly low. Check the generous five-item-plus-coffee breakfast special. All-day breakfast and lunches, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/03)

Mariscos el Locochon Popotla fishing village, five minutes south of Rosarito Beach (non-toll road), dirt road next to Fox studios. There are smarter places to eat, like Puerto Nuevo. Even in Popotla, most other eateries look more like, well, eateries. The thing about Pedro Garcia Barcelo and El Locochón is that they are what they are. His fishermen friends hand him fish straight off the boats, he sells them on a table in the sand, and if you so desire, he'll toss one into a pan of oil on a wood fire, fry a couple of corn tortillas, add cilantro, tomatoes, radishes, fried cebollitas (green onions), and presto! He'll hand you your freshest fish taco ever. Work out a price with him. He's there every day till dusk. Inexpensive. — E.B. (3/04)

Salon Azteca Rosarito Beach Hotel, south end of Boulevard Benito Juárez, Rosarito, 661-612-1111. This fabled old hotel's all-you-can-eat Sunday brunch buffet offers a great excuse to check out the gorgeous architecture and meet other travelers in town. To reach the buffet, go to the left behind the registration desk to the Salon Azteca, walk in, grab a plate, and start dishing up your breakfast from the long line of cafeteria-like bins filled with gringo, gringo-Mex, real Mexican (menudo), and international specialties. Expect to tip if you want something from the omelet or carving station. Next, plunk down at a table where a waiter will arrive to serve you juice and endless cups of decent coffee. Casual dress. Secure parking in hotel lot for a small extra charge. Sundays only, 7:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. Somewhat expensive for the area; Visa and MasterCard accepted. — N.W. (4/03)

Saverio's Restaurant Mediterraneo Boulevard Sánchez Taboada #3151 (at Escudrón 201 Street), Zona Rio, Tijuana, 686-6442. When Javier Plascencia Huerta wanted to open an Italian restaurant, he went all the way. He built a complete Tuscan villa right next to venerable Hacienda Cien Años. "But then," says Plascencia, "I got interested in what Baja California has to offer." The result: an Italian palazzo offering an interesting and changing fusion of Mediterranean-Baja food with dishes like roasted baby octopus, local oysters cooked on the mesquite grill, mesquite-grilled quail from Ensenada's valley of Guadalupe, mussels cultivated in Baja farms, and a delicious rack of lamb raised in the local San Vicente valley. The restaurant even grows its own herbs. Dish presentation is pure art. One of the tastiest: roast duck breast in a guava sauce with a little burrito of candied leg meat. Lunch and dinner daily. Moderate. — E.B. (8/04)

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

Karl Strauss Brewery Restaurant 1157 Columbia Street, downtown, 619-234-2739. One-time Pabst brewmeister Karl Strauss heads his own brewery and a bunch of brewery restaurants bearing his name, so you can't help but be a little wary of an over-slick operation. But at least at downtown's ivy-covered brick drink and eatery, the food's honest, tasty, and sleek, not slick. And Karl's beers are still interesting. Go for honest-but-beautiful dishes like his "Hump Day" meatloaf (Wednesdays only), which comes looking like a Magic Mountain, or the grilled marinated eggplant sandwich on focaccia. Beer influence is everywhere. Filet mignon has an Amber Lager glaze. Ribs boast a Red Trolley Ale barbecue sauce. It can get pricey; try to hit happy hour. Lunch and dinner daily. Moderate. Other branches at 9675 Scranton Road, Sorrento Mesa, 858-587-2739; 5801 Armada Drive, Carlsbad, 760-431-2739; 1044 Wall Street, La Jolla, 858-551-2739. — E.B. (11/03)

The Living Room Coffeehouse 5900 El Cajon Boulevard (at 59th Street), College Area, 619-286-8434. With deep-draft couches, Persian carpets, pictures on the wall, chunky wooden tables, and a tree-shaded patio, this Swiss-owned café is a student hangout with a lively notice board, a rental computer, and good cheap breakfast food in huge quantities. Try "The Works" omelet, with bacon, ham, onions, tomatoes, pepper, cheese on top, potatoes, fruit, and bread. Open daily, three meals, until late at night. Inexpensive. Additional locations in Hillcrest, Old Town, Point Loma, and La Jolla. — E.B. (10/00)

The Original Pancake House 3906 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-565-1740. Starve yourself for eight hours, then come in here and order up an Apple Pancake — a foot-wide, batter-filled, five-egg paradise pelted with slices from two Granny Smith apples and baked till it puffs up like a golden minisuperdome. Cinnamon cinches it. The German Pancake, or its kid brother, the Dutch Baby, are good oven-baked alternatives, as is the really, really filling mushroom omelet, which comes with three pancakes. Oh, and the Eggs Michael: sausage patties and poached eggs lost somewhere under a mushroom-sherry sauce. The whole atmosphere — striped gold-and-cream wallpaper, dainty cups, shelves of ceramic dogs — feels like it's the Fifties and your granny took you here when you were five. OK, it's a nationwide franchise, but it's a comfy franchise, from Oregon. All-day breakfast only, 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. Inexpensive. Other locations at 14905 Pomerado Road, Poway, 858-679-0186; 160 South Rancho Santa Fe Road, Encinitas, 760-943-1939; 435 South Melrose Drive, Vista, 760-758-3441. — E.B. (4/02)

Wong Place, Wong Time

After the concentrated perfection of "The Hand" — Wong Kar-wai's fraction of the anthology film, Eros, earlier in the year — the defects of his 2046 are apt to appear the more glaring. Ostensibly this is a sequel to his close-to-perfection In the Mood for Love. Or anyhow the action picks up shortly after it, and centers around the same protagonist (Tony Leung), although the love-'em-and-leave-'em libertine and spicy science-fiction writer of the current film bears little resemblance to the inhibited pinner and Grub Street drudge of its predecessor, even allowing for the ravages of a broken heart. (The title refers both to the time-setting of his s-f tales and to the number of his next-door Hong Kong hotel room.) There is a patchwork feeling to this one, jammed and jumbled, diffuse and desultory, partly the effect of a fragmented narrative and a heavy dependence on the cement of voice-over, and partly the effect of a visual grab-bag that includes a lot of slow-motion, a bit of black-and-white, and extended re-enactments of the hero's visions of the future, sometimes animated, sometimes live-action, always in an illustrational style that postdates the science fiction of the mid-Sixties. The director's painterly eye ensures, at the same time, a great deal of beauty; and the wide, wide screen affords him more room than ever before for empty space, out-of-focus space, purely compositional and coloristic space. This thing of beauty, though, is rather a scatterbrained beauty, a gorgeous space case. Some hefty ideas, to do with impermanence, loss, memory, alienation, are lugged up and down the arduous stair-step structure: we skip quickly past the characters played by Gong Li, Carina Lau, and Faye Wong (if I have them in the right order), before we spend some quality time with Zhang Ziyi, and begin to work our way back, in reverse order, to Faye Wong (still going forward in chronology) and then (withdrawing into the past) Carina Lau and Gong Li. With small overlaps, the scheme goes more or less A-B-C-D-C-B-A. We can almost perceive that the top step — the peak of the pyramid — the Zhang Ziyi piece — the drawn-out "D" in the outline — might have attained the independent perfection of "The Hand," if held to similar length. The lower steps are stubbier, and slipperier. And where the Anto-nioni and Soderbergh fractions dragged down Eros, Wong manages to drag down 2046 all by himself.

With Grizzly Man, the globe-trotting Werner Herzog digs up another of those border dwellers, those boundary pushers, he loves to document — one Timothy Treadwell, b. 1957, d. 2003 — along with a hundred or so hours of found footage, a treasure trove of video shot by the subject himself, mostly of himself, to record his years in the wilderness living among Alaskan bears, capped off with an audio recording of his own death, plus his girlfriend's death, at the paws of one of those bears. ("Capped off" might not be the way to put it: he evidently didn't have time to take the lens cap off the camcorder.) Herzog neatly organizes the material into a portrait of a man who at first glance seems simply an ecological eccentric, with more than a little presentiment of his fate ("They can kill, they can bite, they can decapitate"), but a man who, at a longer look, turns into something of a self-mythologizing monomaniac. The filmmaker, in his own footage, gathers testimony from those who knew the man ("He tended to want to become a bear"), and he captures at least a couple of priceless moments: the coroner handing over to one of Treadwell's former girlfriends the still-ticking wristwatch taken from his detached arm, and his mother reminiscing about him, in the comfort of her home in Florida, with his favorite teddy bear perched on her lap. Herzog is not shy about adding his own observations in his familiar feverish idiom and his exhortatory delivery ("I discovered a film of human ecstasies and darkest inner turmoil"), nor about taking an editorial stance at variance with his subject: "I believe the common denominator of the universe is chaos, disharmony, and murder." Treadwell, in proof of Herzog's point, is in no condition to present a rebuttal to that. The film, while it acts as a powerful antidote to the chipper denial of March of the Penguins, is much less a nature documentary than a human documentary. Either way, the shadows run deep.

Red Eye is an economical, efficient, taut little thriller from Wes Craven, a terror film in place of his customary horror film. The normal business of a modern-day airport, with its flight delays and frayed nerves ("Flying's so much fun these days, huh?"), makes for a smooth and easy access to the subject of terrorism, and terrorism is indeed the subject, divested of any identifiable ideology, and therefore any possible offense. When our damsel in distress (Rachel McAdams, showing some impressive physicality in the closing stretch) finally rebels against her personal terrorizer (Cillian Murphy), you might wonder what took her so long; but the film is pretty much over by the time you can lay a finger on, or poke a finger through, any hole in the terrorist plot. At just about an hour and a quarter, it is closest thing you can find nowadays to an early "B" movie by Anthony Mann or Richard Fleischer. Close in running time, that is; close in speed; not in style.

The Great Raid recounts the true story of a U.S. Ranger assault on a POW camp in the Philippines toward the end of the Second World War, though the first-person narrator, the leader of the assault, starts back a bit further: "In 1941 the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor...." The operation is something of a beat-the-clock, to free 500 survivors of the Bataan Death March before the merciless Japanese, busy with selective tortures and executions around the island, can get around to burning alive the entire population of prisoners, as they burned those of another camp in the grisly opening scene. (After sitting on the shelf for a couple of years, the film now seems timed as a retort to the sixtieth anniversary commemorations of Hiroshima and Nagasaki: Who burned whom first?) John Dahl, the director, had had trouble enough coping with the bare-bones neo-noirs of Kill Me Again, Red Rock West, and The Last Seduction, and whatever skills he honed in that workshop are pretty well worn down on this grander scale: a three-ring circus that jumps back and forth between the arenas of the POWs, the Rangers, and the Filipino resistance. The initial overrating of the noirs, however, means that auteur-hungry critics will continue to go the extra mile to hunt down a laurel or two. To get there, they must pass through many miles of straightness, flatness, dullness, and corn, in the company of cardboard characters and second-tier actors (James Franco, Benjamin Bratt, Joseph Fiennes, and lessers). The sun-washed color, a step away from sepia, appears to be an attempt to impart a newsreel reality, but the actual newsreel footage of liberated POWs and their liberators throughout the closing credits makes you feel a little like James Agee, forever brandishing wartime documentaries as a club against the prettifications of Hollywood. That sort of tactic might have been ruled (even in Agee's day) inadmissible, had the filmmakers themselves not introduced the footage in evidence.

Junebug orchestrates a muted cultural clash, when a Chicago gallery dealer (Embeth Davidtz) drags her new husband (Alessandro Nivola) back to his Carolina roots so she can woo a modestly obscene "outsider" artist ("I love all the dogs' heads, and computers, and all the scrotums") and, secondarily, so she can meet his family: churchy folk suspicious of a different type of outsider. Her blockhead brother-in-law doesn't take kindly to her efforts to help him with his paper on Huckleberry Finn ("Did you think it was funny?" "No, I thought it was long"), and her mother-in-law sizes her up as all wrong ("She's too pretty, she's too smart, and that's a deadly combination"), and her father-in-law keeps himself to himself. Only the kin by marriage, a non-sequitur motormouth nine months pregnant, lays out the welcome mat: a showy role for Amy Adams, if a tad condescending, a hand-me-down Dixie ditz. The first feature of Phil Morrison exhibits several of the most basic "indie" indicators: a milky, diluted image; too-quiet, unatmospheric sound; a character-driven storyline that's more drifting than actually driven. There's a nice scene at the church social when the interloper finds out, to her amazement, that her husband is prized for his hymn singing, but there's no followup to it, not so much as a what-the-hell.

9 Songs, a half-baked hot dish of sex and rock-and-roll, signals another penetration (so to speak) of triple-X hardcore into the aboveground art house, a plotless chronicle of the burbling passion of two young strangers who meet at a concert and then go on attending concerts in between demonstrations of their passion: tonguing, fingering, toeing, dildoeing, and finally, certifiably, con-domed copulating. The blow job, unlike the job in The Brown Bunny, is manifestly a finished job, but then again these actors (Kieran O'Brien, Margo Stille) are unknowns, and in the case of the actress, patently nonprofessional. The director, on the other hand, Michael Winterbottom, is well enough known (Code 46, 24-Hour Party People, to limit the examples to numerical titles) if not equally well respected. 9 Songs can only widen the space between "known" and "respected." Its ill-lit, grainy video photography ranks as not just subpar, but subporn; and its concert footage, shaky, zoomy, cut-cut-cutty, achieves extreme mediocrity. Clearly this was an idea not worth doing right. ■

The Aristocrats — Paul Provenza's talking-heads film rounds up a herd of well-known and less-known comedians to tell and to analyze an old gray blue joke, the punch line of which is the film's title. (Alternately and not-as-good punch lines: the Sophisticates, the Debonairs.) The joke seems to be something of a private joke among comedians, seldom told in public out of common decency. It has an unassailable structure, a solid beginning and end, and a lot of room in the middle for extended jazzlike improvisation, often on motifs of incest, bestiality, bodily waste. The set form allows the audience reasonably to gauge who goes "too far," which turns out to be less a question of taste than a question of comprehension, a question of intelligence. Howie Mandel and Bob Saget step up as the top competitors for the worst — most uncomprehending, least intelligent — rendition, with Saget getting the edge by laughing repeatedly at his own idiocy. George Carlin makes the most sensible contributions as an analyst. And Kevin Pollak earns perhaps the biggest laughs, or anyway the most guiltless laughs, with a totally irrelevant impression of Christopher Walken. Other jokes, not all of them blue, some of them variations on or inversions of the central joke, get told as well. The central one, as much as it's a dirty joke, is also a dated joke, a quaint joke, smelling of the musty trunk of vaudeville, dulled a bit by the liberated heirs of Lenny Bruce. Taboos today are in short supply. Yet — in what appears to have been the inspiration for the film — the joke got revived and revitalized in the post-9/11 gloom, when a defiant Gilbert Gottfried chose to tell it for a tele-deeper in the direction of conviction than in that of ridiculousness. With Katie Holmes, Michael Caine, Morgan Freeman, Gary Oldman, Liam Neeson, Cillian Murphy, Tom Wilkinson, Rutger Hauer. 2005. ★★ (HORTON PLAZA 14; MISSION VALLEY 20)

dog, directed by Argentinian filmmaker Carlos Sorin, with a cast of nonprofessionals. (HAZARD CENTER 7)

Broken Flowers — Jim Jarmusch's mainstreamiest film to date has a lot of laughs in it, despite the pretentiousness of the cinéma d'ennui pacing and deliberately dissatisfying ending. Laughs are laughs, nonetheless, and once they've fought through the pretentiousness, they cannot be wiped off the scoreboard. (Another impediment to be fought through, another potential wet blanket, is an image a shade or two dark and dreary.) The idea of the film is a simple one and an immediately appealing one. We start with "an over-the-hill Don Juan" (words of a huffily departing girlfriend) who receives an unsigned type-written letter from a former lover, informing him that he has a nineteen-year-old son bent on tracking him down. At the urging of his mystery-buff neighbor (an unlikely neighbor in so swanky a suburb, a West Indian family man with three menial jobs and more than that many children), he draws up a list of possible suspects from the pertinent time period — a list of five, one now deceased, scattered across the country, as revealed through a search of the Internet — and sets out to track them down, pre-emptively, and to smoke out the source of the letter. The itinerary of our amateur sleuth leads to a broad spectrum of people and places, and in between, to some invigorating on-the-road shots through a rental-car windshield. Put more pretentiously, it adds up to a tour of Paths Not Taken, a graph of Life's Changes. With only a little effort, we can imagine Woody Allen coming up with such an idea and going to town with it. We cannot quite imagine, these days, that the idea would have turned out this funny; that he would actually have gotten anywhere near to town with it. The deadpan detachment of Bill Murray, a minimal reactor, a frosty mirror, a cautious counterpuncher, makes a perfect match for that of his director; and the humor, sprouting out of the gaps, the schisms, the chasms between people, comes through as less strained, or less buried under pretension, than normal for Jarmusch. You are free, once the closing credits are rolling, to pursue the mystery into the trackless recesses of the human heart, the enigmatic ego, the predestined identity. But you will then have to leave behind the laughs that made the trip pleasurable. Jeffrey Wright, Sharon Stone, Frances Conroy, Jessica Lange, Tilda Swinton, Julie Delpy, Chloë Sevigny. 2005.

Charlie and the Chocolate

Factory — Tim Burton's consolation prize for losing out on the Lemony Snicket concession (surely that had his name written on it) is a remake of the fractured fairy tale by Roald Dahl, a spindly little framework freighted with production values, CG imagery, and dark dense bordello color, like some scrawny four-foot scrub of a Christmas tree adorned with enough ornaments, lights, and tinsel for Rockefeller Center. (Proposed name change: Tim Burden.) The plot premise seems to combine the theme park and the reality show: an elimination game in Candy Land. Five lucky children, all of them horrid but one, win an opportunity to tour Willy Wonka's top-secret chocolate factory, in competition for an unspecified Grand Prize. Every time one of the horrid ones is bounced out (by some nonlethal but nauseating method), a chorus line of Munchkin-like midgets known as the Oompa Loompas comes out and does a musical number, combining Busby Berkeley and David Lynch. Further combinations: the reclusive chocolatier, in Johnny Depp's peculiar rendition, combines Mr. Rogers (mincing cadence) and Michael Jackson (pancake makeup), among others; and the titular little hero, the truly adorable Freddie Highmore, who played adorable Depp in Finding Neverland as well, combines Tiny Tim (poverty-line pathos) and perhaps Frodo the Hobbit (rodently cuteness). All of these combinations and others (the "teleportation" of a candy bar into a TV set combines 2001 and The Fly, more specifically the sixtieth humorous usage of the opening notes of Also Sprach Zarathustra and the fortieth humorous usage of a high-pitched "Help me!") pile up, two by two, to produce an unsubsidizing groan, arising either from the overtaxed framework or the overtaxed viewer. And the only respite from the ugly vulgarity of the décor comes from the prying impoliteness of the bulbous closeups. David Kelly, Helena Bonham Carter, Noah Taylor, Christopher Lee, Deep Roy. 2005.

Cinderella Man — The story of heavyweight boxer James J. Braddock, the Bulldog of Bergen, the Pride of New Jersey, a working-class hero for real. It's something of a puzzle why his story had not been told on screen before, seeing as how we have it on the authority of Damon Runyon, who conferred on him the titular nickname, that no human-interest story in the entire history of boxing can compare with it. Runyon, to be sure, passed from the scene in the mid-Forties, or well before the story of, say, Sonny Liston; but the latter's shadowy tale is not the type to interest Damon Runyon, or for that matter humans in general. Braddock's, on the other hand, is the "inspirational" one of a real-life Rocky, a Seabiscuit on two legs, who, after challenging for the light-heavyweight crown in his early career, broke his hand in the ring, piled up the losses, lost his license, lived with his family in abject poverty through the first half of the Depression, took work on the docks when he could get it, got a second chance in the ring as the last-minute substitute for an injured fighter, then a third chance, and a fourth, and finally a shot at the title against the glamorous heavyweight (and, unacknowledged in the film, sometime Hollywood actor) Max Baer, an 8-1 favorite with two dead men on his record. You ask yourself what sort of human would be interested in telling such a story, or what sort would be interested in watching it (cheering for the foreknown outcome), and you come up with a simple answer: a simp. More specifically, Ron Howard. Not for nothing is Howard a trusted name in the popular mind. He makes the "right" choices, meaning the expected ones, the proven ones: grainy-photography clichés for gritty authenticity, desaturated-color clichés for bleakness of mood, golden-light clichés for domestic warmth, slow-motion clichés for the fights. He is fortunate, though, to have in the lead role one of our more sympathetic, more soulful leading men, Russell Crowe, with jug ears and a haircut to show them off, looking as if he could have stepped out of a Lewis Hine photo, walking a steady tightrope between dignity and degradation. Renée Zellweger, Paul Giamatti, Bruce McGill, Craig Bierko. 2005.

Crash — Multicharacter tapestry of the seething melting pot of L.A., an object lesson on racial and ethnic stereotypes, attitudes, biases, tensions. The didactic impulse overrules good sense: a bigoted cop, for just one example, gives a hard time to a respectable black couple at the side of the road, and then both he and his bleeding-heart partner have separate, life-and-death

Dark Water — Yet another American remake of a Japanese horror film, but not, please, “just another.” This atmospheric ghost story is more coherent, more cohesive, more cogent, than any Ring, any Grudge, any at all. It has a palpable theme, motherhood, and an evocative visual motif, water, and these have been worked out meticulously and efficiently in the screenplay of Rafael Yglesias. And the action is firmly ensconced in a specific locale, Roosevelt Island, formerly Welfare Island, a tram ride from the bright lights of Manhattan, but a world apart, a world enclosed, with its ugly, utilitarian high-rise apartments “in the Brutalist Style,” exuding all the warmth and charm of the postwar Communist Bloc. So firmly and so specific, in fact, that the film decisively cuts itself free from its source. There is here a kind of Barton Fink feeling, practically a feeling of Repulsion, in the sheer physical oppression (the persistent rain, the low-watt lights, the balky elevator, the stain on the ceiling, the drip of oil-black water, the clump of hair coughed out of the bathroom faucet); and the cinematography of Affonso Beato (an Almodóvar man, plus Ghost World, most notably) admits as little color as possible, preferably gloomy, gray, greeny, yellowy, sickly color. The film would be sufficiently horrific even without the ghost, though it would then be missing two or three delectable frissons. Jennifer Connelly — pale, thin, fragile, a bit wraithlike herself, just the sort of person an actual ghost might choose to reach out to — plays, with fierce intensity, the unidealized mother who is trying very hard to surpass the very low standard set by her own mother, and not having an easy time of it. Being haunted by a ghost, needless to say, will not make it any easier, but will make it profounder. With Ariel Gade, John C. Reilly, Pete Postlethwaite, Tim Roth, Dougray Scott; directed by Walter Salles. 2005.

The Devil's Rejects — The sophomore effort of rocker-turned-filmmaker Rob Zombie is a direct followup to his House of 1000 Corpses. (To have said “sophomoric effort” would have veered from fact into flattery.) The further adventures of a yokel family of mass murderers, whose aliases are lifted from Groucho Marx characters, carom between a kind of geeky jokery and a mile-wide mean streak. The writer-director sets his sights low — early Tobe Hooper and Wes Craven would be two of his pet bloodhounds, his pointers — and shoots even lower, with telephoto closeups, spastic camera movement, colorless color, and all-around shoddiness. Looked at in the right light, his success was assured. Better, though, not to look at all. With Sid Haig, Bill Moseley, Sheri Moon, William Forsythe. 2005.
● (GASLAMP 15)

The Dukes of Hazzard — Big-screen transplant of the hayseed TV comedy circa 1980, a younger cousin of the likes of Smokey and the Bandit. There is thus a sort of rough justice in casting the mummified Burt Reynolds, the one-time Bandit, as an odious backwoods bigwig, a greedy pig named Hogg. One early chuckle — an audio autobiography of car racer Al Unser, Jr., as read by Laurence Fishburne — is followed by endless miles of teeth-grinding.

With Johnny Knoxville, Seann William Scott, Jessica Simpson, and Willie Nelson; directed by Jay Chandrasekhar. 2005.

Fantastic Four — Namely, Mr. Fantastic (a sort of Plastic Man), the Human Torch (more like a Human Comet), the Invisible Woman (plain enough), and the Thing (a cross between the Incredible Hulk and the Golem). The slender storyline explains how they got to be so fantastic, and it then gives them little scope to explore their powers. Commonplace comic-book adaptation, campy and tacky. With Ioan Gruffudd, Chris Evans, Jessica Alba, and Michael Chiklis; directed by Tim Story. 2005.

Four Brothers — The titular quartet, all adopted, all acknowledged “fuck-ups,” are of two races, evenly divided, black and white, and reunited for the Turkey Day funeral of their sainted mother, murdered in the course of a liquor-store holdup. “I didn’t come back here for the funeral,” explains the Mark Wahlberg one, making clear right off the bat that this is to be a tale of revenge, a pursuit undertaken with a singular lack of strategy and diplomacy. (Key investigative tools: a gallon of gasoline and a cigarette lighter.) The Detroit setting opens the skies to a storm of Motown — Marvin Gaye, The Temptations, The Four Tops — and the time of year opens them additionally to as much snow as in the relocated remake of Assault on Precinct 13, even to the point of engulfing the white-crowned Paramount mountain in the opening logo. Major assets, let’s count them, are multiple: unselfconscious and unselfcongratulatory racial togetherness (to get the redeeming social merit out of the way first); a hurtling pace, albeit a bit lurching, leaping, and bumping; crisp photography; tandy dialogue (“You don’t pay a whore to fuck you. You pay her to leave”); hellacious action, slickly staged by director John Singleton, most particularly the siege of the family home by ski-masked machine gunners, a sort of pocket edition of the aforementioned Assault on Precinct 13; and a vigorous villain, played against type by Chiwetel Ejiofor (the sweetly sympathetic figure of Dirty Pretty Things and Melinda and Melinda, every bit as sharp a turnaround as Jeffrey Wright’s villain in Singleton’s Shaft), who acquits himself well in the climactic mano-a-mano on the ice, bouncing on his

On the other side of the scales, causing momentary teeters here and there, would be the air of utter unreality, such that the cops will be content to cart away the bodies in the street without even checking to see the survivors’ gun permits. “Self-defense” is the on-the-spot assessment, a ruling in compliance with the hurtling pace. The first Star Trek movie was what the studio thought a Star Trek movie should be, but The Wrath of Khan’s the real thing. It’s about the human spirit. It captures the essence of the TV show, which was that it took place in the future but human beings hadn’t changed — they were still irrational but with new technology.

Key Largo is amazing.

What a cast: Bogie, Bacall, Lionel Barrymore, Claire Trevor, and Edward G. Robinson at his scariest. It’s shot so well, back when people knew how to light for black-and-white.

Spinal Tap is a movie everyone’s familiar with, but the DVD has a hilarious commentary track by all three guys in character and reminiscing about old times. It’s like getting a second movie.

I like Donnie Darko a lot. It has wonderful subtleties. It’s a perfect blend of sci-fi and ’80s nostalgia. I love the visual style. The director lets scenes play without any dialogue, with just a song on the soundtrack, and you understand exactly what it all means.

footsteps of the neighborhood success story, Skinny Black (Memphis Skinny?). Et voilà, the hip-hop pimp: “Whup dat trick, get’m! Whup dat trick, get’m!” Terrence Howard plays the role with an openness and unguardedness that offer no defense against the blunt-force poignance, a bit like a ball on a batting tee. Writer-director Craig Brewer, who likes to get two or more people talking or yelling at once, mixes in four parts grit for every one part goop, a recipe for mud pie. With Anthony Anderson, Taryn Manning, Taraji Henson, and Paula Jai Parker. 2005.

The Island — The beginning takes place in the vicinity of an Orwellian dystopia, where a closely monitored populace (“Sodium Excess Detected,” reads out a urinal at a morning pee) must live in regimented drudgery and sterile isolation, under stricter rules against intergender “proximity” than at a Catholic-school dance, and with the desperate hope to hit the lottery and a free pass to the titular paradise, “nature’s last remaining pathogen-free zone.” Roughly forty-five minutes into the movie, the Island will turn out to be, along with much else, a mirage, a figment. Further revelations trickle out, but the main business of the next hour and a half is a chase, in gaudy music-video visuals, with low angles and wide angles, flash pans and smash cuts, shafts of light and blasts of glare, plumes of steam and showers of sparks. The installation of Michael Bay in the director’s chair is your assurance that the slow start will not bar you from repulsively overscaled action à la Bad Boys and Bad Boys II, only bigger, and with more miraculous, or more slapstick, strokes of luck. Ewan McGregor and Scarlett Johansson are the two fugitives whose ostensible goal is to hang on to their humanity. But both of them had to let go of that, together with their “indie” credentials, at the front gate. Sean Bean, Djimoun Housou, Steve Buscemi. 2005.

King of the Corner — Low-key, life-sized little indie, adapted from Gerald Shapiro’s Bad Jews and Other Stories, marks the feature directing debut of Peter Riegert, the likable leading man (if more often a supporting man) of such cherishables as Local Hero and Crossing Delancey. He is the leading man here as well, and still likable, as a too-nice travelling pitchman (“Why do I have to be the prick? I don’t want to be the prick”), showing the ropes to a young corporate backstabber while test-marketing a telephone voice-transformer for making timorous old ladies sound like Gregory Peck. In his home life, he has to contend with a prodding Italian wife (well, Isabella Rossellini, anyway), a typical handful of a teenage daughter (Ashley Johnson), and a shrinking father in a wheelchair out in Arizona (Eli Wallach: “Another six months, I’ll be the size of a peanut”). The protagonist goes a bit off the rails after running into the object of his old high-school crush (Beverly D’Angelo), and takes the film with him. An off-the-cuff funeral oration gets him, and it, back on track. With Jake Hoffman, Rita Moreno, Eric Bogosian. 2005.

Madagascar — Four escapees from the Central Park Zoo — a lion, a zebra, a hippo, and a giraffe — are packed up and, in fulfillment of the tenth-birthday wish of the zebra, shipped back to the wild: “the live-in-a-mudhut-wipe-yourself-with-a-leaf wild,” in the less sanguine view of the lion. (“They are just a bunch of pansies,” observes the resident Lord of the Lemurs, even before the lion gets caught biting the zebra in the butt.) Palatable computer cartoon in the contemporary style of aggressive, hard-edged hipness. The lion’s discovery of his innate catness is worked out predictably but adeptly. With the voices of Ben Stiller, Chris Rock, Jada Pinkett Smith,

Mad Hot Ballroom — Marilyn Agrelo’s documentary on New York City fifth-graders who’ve been channeled into the stay-off-the-streets-and-stay-out-of-trouble activity of competitive ballroom dancing: “I see them turning into these ladies and gentlemen,” one teacher manages to say while fighting back tears. We follow three disparate classes (only one of which will make it through to the citywide finals: “I still really don’t understand what happened,” a dejected curly top buttonholes the emcee at the quarterfinals, after his team falls three points short), and we follow them with an almost parental tunnel vision: we cannot really judge the competition; we have eyes only for “ours.” Kids being kids, however, with no pumped-up heroes or villains (beyond a troublesome student named Jonathan, whose troubles go uninvestigated), this is an easy-to-like film with an easy-to-overlook fuzzy video image. 2005.

★★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

umentary on the reproductive ritual of the emperor penguin, the back-and-forth walk of around seventy miles, the mating dance, the harsh winter, the interminable night, the months of starvation, the high mortality rate. It’s a hard life, and fascinating. The cuteness of the creatures makes up for much of the hardness, although it also makes the hardness harder to bear. Narrated by Morgan Freeman; directed by Luc Jacquet. 2004.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith — A stargazer’s delight, if, anyway — and it’s a big if — you can take delight in gazing at Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie (lips and more lips), worshipfully photographed by Bojan Bazelli, and pamperingly enshrined in an ambience of pristine showroom opulence. There is space in this firmament for no one else, apart from a small corner for Vince Vaughn and his dimming persona of sociopathic glibness. The two stars play a husband and wife whose passion has gone out of their marriage after “five or six years,” depending on which one you ask. Unbeknownst to either of them, they both happen to be top-level, high-tech assassins for rival espionage agencies, and once this fact becomes known to them they are obliged to turn their sights on each other. If — another big if — the situation may shape up for a while as a darkly comic metaphor on the slow death inherent in the conjugal life, this impression, this hope, cannot survive their mutual revelation, after several sincere attempts at pre-emptive annihilation, that their love remains strong, that their passion can be rekindled by means of a common enemy, that their romance after all is not darkly comic, but brightly. And if — a final big if — filmmaker Doug Liman (Swingers, Go, to start with) can be seen to have come through The Bourne Identity with his “promise” unbroken — the promise of a filmmaker with, or on, an edge — he here undergoes a harder whack on the chisel. 2005.

● (FASHION VALLEY 18)

Murderball — Higgledy-piggledy video documentary on the Paralympic sport of wheelchair rugby, a/k/a quadriplegic rugby, a/k/a a murderball. We don’t learn much about the sport itself (basic rules of play, coaching strategies, etc.), and the game footage doesn’t give us much feel for the flow of the action. It’s just score, score, score: a highlight reel. But then again, this is more a human story than a sports story, and we learn a lot about the people: their personal histories, the rehab process, sexuality, and above all the fierce rivalry between the U.S. national team and the Canadian, coached by a disaffected former American star by the name of Joe Soares (“How does it feel to betray your country, man?”), who will suffer a heart attack in preparation for the Athens games, only a temporary setback. There are moments of such touching intimacy — Soares’s unathletic viola-playing son brightening up when his father arrives late to a school concert, or the consoling of players by their wives and girlfriends after a big loss — that you must struggle not to avert your eyes. Co-directed by Henry Alex Rubin and Dana Adam Shapiro. 2005.

Must Love Dogs — Hen-party atmosphere for a romantic comedy wherein the sisters of an Irish-Catholic divorcee push her into Internet dating to find a replacement. Diane Lane seems too good for the stickey John Cusack (“You seem very practiced and smooth,” she observes), who frankly doesn’t act like a man whose favorite movie would be Doctor Zhivago, and too good, too, for the “incorrigible” womanizer of Dermot Mulroney. Not to mention too good for the fast shuffle of date-from-hell auditioners. Too good, really, for the movie in toto. With Elizabeth Perkins, Christopher Plummer, and Stockard Chan-

North by Northwest — The topper of all of Hitchcock's cross-country cat-and-mouse thrillers. The species that was spawned in the Thirties with Young and Innocent and The 39 Steps has undergone some body-building after all these years of exercise, and emerges here in a form higher (the United Nations building), wider (the Midwest corn fields), and grander (the face of Mt. Rushmore) than ever before. There are ample tipsy giggles and hokey excitements, thanks largely to Cary Grant's broadly played and easily ruffled dignity, and thanks very slightly to James Mason's prissy villainy. Eva Marie Saint, done over as if for Harper's Bazaar, steps surprisingly to the fore of Hitchcock's line of icy blondes. 1959.

Sky High — Kurt Russell goes back to his beginnings: silly Disney family films, this one a sort of live-action version of The Incredibles, with Russell and Kelly Preston as the superhero parents (realtors by day) of a “late bloomer” who in his freshman year at the elite prep school must be assigned to a Sidekick course of study, otherwise known as Hero Support, while awaiting a manifestation of superpowers. Russell is very skillfully silly (“All I ever wanted for him was to save the world”), and on balance the whole show tilts more toward pleasant than painful, and in any event it's several degrees more human than The Incredibles. With Michael Angarano, Danielle Panabaker, Mary Elizabeth Winstead, Lynda Carter, and Bruce Campbell; directed by Mike Mitchell. 2005.

Star Wars, Episode III: Revenge of the Sith — George Lucas closes the circle: the last of the three prequels, evenly spaced out at three-year intervals. (The filmmaker's latter-day visual style comes back to us in a twinkling: the flatness of the humans and the overfertilized fluorescence of their computer-generated surroundings, something like sticks of wood in a stop-motion tomato patch.) Anakin Skywalker, as we all are aware ahead of time, is on course to explore the Dark Side of the Force, his personal Darth side, “motivated” by his impalpable passion for Padmé, the Senator formerly known as Queen, and by his premonitions of her death in childbirth. Looking more and more like Uma Thurman (pupils floating upwards) and talking more and more like Ryan Phillippe (pouty lips over tight jaw), the leading man, Hayden Christensen, appears to plumb the depths of darkness about as far as a college sophomore facing a term-paper deadline when he'd really rather be chugalugging beer. It's true that he has a hand in a lot of carnage (personally dispatching a roomful of “younglings,” sentimental overkill reminiscent of the slaughter of Macduff's family in Macbeth), yet the dire warnings of the film's unsuitability for children seem a bit off base. Surely it's more suitable for them than it is for adults. Lucas's obsessive castration symbolism (a fear bordering on hysteria) may be over their heads, but on the other hand they will be less likely to carp at the murky exposition of the faux-Shakespearean political skulduggery, more likely to sit there in contented incomprehension, inasmuch as the murkiness, thick though it is, fails in the slightest to obscure the goodness of the good guys and the badness of the bad. So clear is this separation that Anakin's change of allegiance — Jedi selflessness for Sithian selfhood — reduces him to a dupe at best and a loon at worst. And, in the midst of what looks to be an erupting volcano, his climactic lightsaber duel with his mentor leaves him quite literally diminished in stature (or symbolically, once again, castrated). Though he gets propped up afterwards in the operating room, he comes out of it as a sort of Wizard of Oz with the curtain thrown back. Ewan McGregor, Natalie Portman, Ian McDiarmid, Samuel L. Jackson. 2005.

- (HORTON PLAZA 14)

Stealth — The Frankenstein story transplanted to the Naval Air Force of “the near future,” where a UCAV by the name of EDI (for us civilians, that's an Unmanned Combat Aerial Vehicle by the name of Extreme Deep Invader) goes “completely haywire” and, in a voice as tranquilized as that of HAL in 2001, politely disobeys any order but his own. It falls to three top-gun humans — a piercingly blue-eyed daredevil as disobedient as EDI, a hard-bodied babe, and an expendable African-American whose namesake is the English Baroque composer, Henry Purcell — to bring EDI back or bring EDI down. (The mad scientist would be an apple-munching Navy officer who rushes too fast into the future.) The aerial action is cartoonish in both conception and execution. But the biggest laughs, unsolicited, go to Jessica Biel on the ground in North Korea, with a pack of Commie sharpshooters hot on her heels. Josh Lucas, Jamie Foxx, Sam Shepard; directed by Rob Cohen. 2005.

War of the Worlds — Steven Spielberg's retelling of H.G. Wells's s-f classic. The alien-invasion subgenre, as everyone now knows, blossomed during the Cold War, fertilized by fears of Communist takeover; and it's quite reasonable, quite knowledgeable, to deduce that 9/11 and its aftermath could dump some fresh manure in the field. Spielberg makes damn good and sure that no one will miss the relevance: the “sleeper cells” hidden beneath American streets; the hero's coat of ashes fabricated from his incinerated fellow citizens; the shower of clothes from the sky; the bulletin board of the “missing”; and of course the natural question in the first confusion, “Is it the terrorists?” All of that seems legitimate enough. This is a serious film in a way that Independence Day, merrily blowing up the White House so few years earlier, didn't need to be, want to be, or pretend to be. There's something of an air of penitence in Spielberg's choice at this time to do an anti-Close Encounters, an anti-E.T. Or if not quite penitence, then a reappraisal, a caveat. He would appear to have seen a new light. And if his conversion falls short of total renunciation, it at least infuses him with a new zeal. Still, the decision to re-do the seminal alien-invasion story, rather than to do a new one, tends to raise the familiar specter of Spielbergian arrogance. In spite of the gracious gran-and-gramps cameos for Gene Barry and Ann Robinson, the two stars of the commendable 1953 treatment of the novel, there is the inescapable implication that that version didn't have the wherewithal to do the job right. No matter how eye-popping Spielberg's special effects may be, no matter how much "improved" over those of a half-century ago, we are at every turn confronted by his belief in the almighty dollar, his infatuation with size, his complacent certainty that bigger is always better, and his dependence on mere loudness and suddenness to elicit a response from his audience. And his trusty old device of the temporary death, the takesy-backsy death, the just-fooling death, would indicate that his penitence for E.T. lacks a little something in sincerity. Wedding Crashers — It starts out as a men-behaving-badly skit about a couple of skirt-chasing cads who drop in on weddings to pick up susceptible girls and promptly drop them. After a frenetic montage of their modus operandi, however, the action settles into a perfectly conventional romantic comedy, hitting all the expected spots at all the expected times, as our two cads — the equally expected Vince Vaughn and Owen Wilson, who earlier worked with the director, David Dobkin, on Clay Pigeons and

Shanghai Knights respectively — discover their true soul mates, two sisters for added convenience, a phony virgin slash nymphomaniac slash bondage girl (Isla Fisher) and a save-the-planet altruist (Rachel McAdams) who reveals her superior sensibility by giggling uncontrollably at the self-written vows of their older sister and new brother-in-law. The funny business, in what amounts merely to a newer convention, is pushed to such extremes of crassness and grossness that you feel as if the laughs are being extracted not by feather tickler but by thumbscrew. E.g., the ancient matriarch of one of America's leading political families will pepper her dinner-party conversation with epithets like "asshole,"

"homo" (of her own grandson), and "rug muncher" (of Eleanor Roosevelt), while her granddaughter administers a hand job beneath the tablecloth. Audiences do laugh at this sort of thing. But why? With Christopher Walken, Jane Seymour, Will Ferrell. 2005.

I don't think there's an age. You have to be ready with the life you lead, so if you die today or tomorrow, then you can feel you did the best you could do. It has to do with what you do every day, so you don't leave regretting life. You can't have regrets. I have a lot of faith and I think that helps. I have faith in God, and I ask Him for forgiveness. Since I was young, I always thought I was going to die when I was 38. I must have been 16 or so when I first had the dream that I was going to die at 38. That dream didn't scare me; I don't remember what I was dying from. I had the dream a few times, and it stuck with me.

Some superstars get trophies, others get smiles.

If you have completed your bachelor's degree: Azusa Pacific University (APU) offers 35 opportunities for you to become a better teacher, counselor, coach, or administrator. And, because APU is NCATE accredited, you receive excellent preparation recognized by all 50 states and internationally.

If you have not yet completed your bachelor's degree and are 22 with 60 college units: APU can help you earn your degree and become a teacher through our human development program. APU offers an innovative, alternative degree completion program designed to provide preparation for prospective elementary school and special education teachers.

Place your Reader roommate ad today and get responses tomorrow!

Call (619) 235-2415 day or night.

For just $20 per week, you receive:

- A 25-word printed ad in the Reader
- Also on SanDiegoReader.com
- Use of a 24-hour voice mailbox service
- Placement on the Roommate Hotline

1. Pay with Visa, MasterCard, Discover, check or cash. The cost is $20. No matter which payment option you choose, you must first call (619) 235-2415 to place your ad.

2. Write your 25-word Roommate ad on this form and be ready to dictate it when requested. You will have one minute of recording time. Begin with the neighborhood, then describe the property and list the rent. After dictating your printed ad, continue to describe your roommate situation. When you are finished recording, press 2.

3. Your print ad may not describe you or the person you are seeking.

NAME This Place

Last week's place: Chuey's restaurant and cantina at 1901 Main Street, Barrio Logan. The yellow, orange, and ochre-colored exterior gives the feel of Aztec architecture, appropriate for its Chicano Park location. Next March, it will be 50 years since Chuey's opened in a quonset hut near Main Street. Chuey's son and granddaughter run this new (year-old) location. (Last week's winners: Jeannie Le, Lillian Hawley, Carol Puerling, John Mottla, Russ Sellman)

I bought the gun with the idea of killing myself, but lost my temper.” That’s what Bernice Sisson (right) told cops after she killed cab driver William Ferguson in February of 1946. The two had been living together for months. Ferguson decided to leave her. Sisson begged him for marriage. He refused. According to our local daily, she “pulled the gun out of her handbag and fired at him, hitting his cheekbone. When he jumped out of the cab and ran, she leaped out and followed him...she caught up with him and fired the second shot through the forehead.”

MOMS &amp; MAKEUP

This morning, as we were getting ready to go to the Farmer's Market, I threw a T-shirt and shorts on to my unshowered body. The Bee, in her ineffable way, was dressed to the nines in a polka-dotted skirt, pink shirt, and many pieces of plastic jewelry. She took one look at me and said, "You don't look that good. But it's not a fashion show." Then she shrugged and walked away.

Of course, I laughed out loud, and went to tell landisdad about her bout of precociousness. But it also made me think about my mom, and how I used to feel about the way she dressed.

When I was growing up, my mom rarely wore makeup, and usually didn't bother dressing that well either. She was a stay-at-home mom until I was 7, but even when she went back to work, her wardrobe didn't improve that much — she is a health care professional, and she mostly wore scrubs and those hideous white sneaker/shoes that all women health care workers wore in the '70s and '80s. She did wear makeup and would dress up on the rare occasions that she and my dad went out — I was fascinated by her false eyelashes, and used to yearn for the day that I could wear them. I couldn't understand why she didn't wear them every single day. I also couldn't understand why, as an adult who had access to real capital, she wasn't spending her money to dress better. Of course, it never occurred to me that she was spending her money to dress me and my brothers, because I felt that my share of the clothing budget was so parsimonious as to be practically nonexistent. I went through a phase in high school where I wore makeup religiously. I also went through years and years (when I was thin) where I wore clothes that were, how shall I say it, hootchie-ish. The miniskirt was my best friend. In fact, I used to regularly just wear shawls wrapped around my hips and butt, and pin them together for an even more daring look.

Since high school, I've spent most of my life with a naked face. I will wear lipstick on occasion, and sometimes (for reasons I'll have to blog about at another time), I'll just open a L'oreal lipstick and smell it for the Proustian effect I get. I've finally gotten to the point where I pay to have someone else cut my hair regularly, mostly because once I became a mom, I could no longer justify the time spent brushing out my extremely long hair any more, and had it all chopped off. But I've come to the conclusion that wearing makeup every day is way more trouble than it's worth — not just because you have to spend so much time doing the makeup in the morning, but because you have to keep reapplying it during the day, and then removing it at night.

In some ways, I feel more and more every day that I'm turning into my mother. My mom has become a better dresser than she once was, and I've become a worse one. Especially since I've been working at home, wearing anything more than a T-shirt and some jeans or capris is dressy for me now. If you saw us on the street together, you'd be able to tell we are ping, after all. I've easily spent twice on the Bee's clothes in the last 6 years than I've spent on my own. The Sweet Potato is a little different — he had a lot of hand-me-downs, although they're starting to run out. As a feminist, I worry sometimes that the Bee will turn into the kind of woman who spends all of her time thinking about her looks, and then I get convinced that a phase of the kind she's in now — while it is culturally imposed — is normal, and there's nothing to say she won't be a tomboy a year from now.

So here's a question for the women out there — what ways are you and your mom most similar?

What characteristics that you've gotten from your mom do you want to pass down from your children? And for the men, what are the strengths that your wife or partner shares with his/her mother, that you want your children to have?

bumblebeesweetpotato.blogspot.com

related, not just from our facial and physical similarities, but because of the way we present ourselves to the world too.

And I've also become the mom who spends way more time thinking about what her kids wear than what she does. The staggering pace of growth of kids under 6 does lead one to do a lot of shop-

SHOOTINGS

Location: 1205 S. Mission Road, Fallbrook
Time/Date: 7:25 p.m. on 8/6/05

Incidents: A Fallbrook patrol unit was in the area when he was flagged down regarding a person shot. The adult male victim was in a vehicle, and had been shot in the face. Deputies were only able to determine that the shooting may have been related to a robbery. The victim was transported to Palomar Hospital. A few minutes later, at about 7:33 p.m., deputies received another call regarding an adult male who had been shot at 202 W. Mission Road, less than a mile away from the first shooting. Upon arrival, deputies found the victim had been transported by a private party to Fallbrook Hospital [and] subsequently sent by Mercy Air to Palomar Hospital, where he was immediately prepared for surgery.

COMMERCIAL BURGLARIES

Location: 407 El Cajon Boulevard, El Cajon
Time/Date: 4:00 a.m. on 7/25/05

Résumé of Incidents: Officers first responded to the report of a door being forced open at the RAM Gas Station. They discovered evidence that the suspects had unsuccessfully used some type of saw. For reasons unknown at this time, the suspects aborted the burglary and left the area.

One hour later, at 5:10 a.m., an alarm call from 1057 Broadway was received, and officers were dispatched to investigate. They arrived at Rauf's Bargain Jewelry to find the door locks had been sawed open to gain entry. The suspects had entered, quickly grabbed jewelry on display in the store, and escaped before the officers were on scene.

This method of operation was similar to that used at a burglary of the Tobacco Outlet at 145 Jamacha, investigated on June 29. The suspects in that case had used a grinder or saw to cut both a security curtain and door lock to get inside the business. In that crime, the suspects made away with a large quantity of tobacco products.

RESIDENTIAL BURGLARY

Location: [1000] Diamond Street, Pacific Beach
Time/Place: 1:15 a.m. on 8/6/05

Officer's Report: I responded to a radio call to investigate a residential burglary. Upon arrival, I spoke to the reporting party, Steven N. He seemed very distraught. It took him several minutes to calm down.

Victim's Statement: I came home to find my bedroom window had been smashed. Someone had broken into my place. I walked inside my place and things were thrown around.

Whoever was in here drank the beer in my fridge because there were empty bottles in the kitchen and I never leave empty bottles around. I went into my bedroom...and saw the broken window. My guitar and amp were missing. So was my sound system and a bunch of CDs. None of my neighbors heard anything because most of everyone was out this evening. I asked around. Nothing. This place was broken into two months ago. Two guitars were stolen last time, now it's happened again. I think I need to move.

HOMICIDE

Location: [3000] Sylvia Street, Bonita
Date/Time: 8:00 a.m. on 8/9/05

Investigation: Deputies from the Imperial Beach Sheriff's Station responded to a "check the welfare" call. Upon arrival, deputies spoke with a family member of the residents who was concerned about the inability to contact the family. The concern for foul play was increased due to an accumulation of mail, newspapers and pets not being fed. Based on the circumstances, deputies decided to force entry to the home. Inside, deputies found three victims deceased. The description of the victims was consistent with that of the family living at this home — that of an adult female and two pre-teen boys. Due to the state of decomposition of the victims, their identity could not be immediately confirmed.

ROBBERIES/DEPUTY INVOLVED SHOOTING

Location: 795 Shadowridge Drive, Vista
Time/Date: 9:00 p.m. on 7/29/05

Incidents: Deputies received a radio call of a robbery at the Circle K store. Two suspects, both Hispanic males in their twenties, wearing dark clothing, entered the store, displayed a handgun, and robbed the clerk of an undisclosed amount of money. Both suspects then fled northbound on foot.

On 07/28/2005, a burglary occurred in the City of Vista...the suspects had similar descriptions. A black Jeep had been described as the suspect vehicle in that burglary. Because of the similarities, deputies responding to the robbery were on the lookout for that [same] suspect vehicle. A deputy saw a vehicle matching the description in the 1100 block of Lupine Hills Drive. The deputy pulled in behind the vehicle. The vehicle stopped and the driver ran. The driver matched the description of the suspect. The deputy pursued the suspect on foot. The suspect reached for something in his clothes and the deputy fired his handgun, striking the suspect. The suspect fell to the ground. The deputies initiated first aid. Paramedics responded and continued medical aid.

Unfortunately the suspect was pronounced dead at the scene.

Criminal of the Week:

"I know my son has done some bad things, but I did not train him to be this dumb."

Police said a 21-year-old man placed a $1,500 stash of marijuana under a rock outside police headquarters Thursday morning prior to an appearance in nearby state Superior Court. When Daniel returned two hours later, all he found was a note reading: "You're under arrest. Look up at the police station." Two police officers watching from inside headquarters then went out and placed Garcia under arrest. Daniel's father could not believe the story and said his son claimed the police planted the drugs on him.

Bad Luck Saturn

After Charles Elster lavished praise on the 1981 Toyota pickup parked in his driveway, looking dusty and forlorn, I ask, "If the pickup is such a gem, why did you park the Toyota and buy a Saturn?"

"You know how it goes," he says. "I'm a freelance writer, but the money wasn't enough after we had our first daughter. So I had to go to work."

"I took a job at UCSD, working for a political science think tank as a publications director. Sounds like a great job, I know. But I hate to commute. Anytime I have to take my daughter to school because the bus hasn't shown up, I complain the whole way or I say, 'Thank God I'm not doing this every day.'"

"I got the Saturn because my truck just couldn't take the commute from Hillcrest to UCSD. And from the first, the Saturn has been a bad-luck story. A couple months after we bought it, I got up New Year's Day and found a bullet hole in the trunk. The State Farm guy told me it was from an automatic weapon, like an M-16. He said, 'Thank God it didn't go through the roof of your house, because it could have.' Somebody had just shot into the sky, celebrating the New Year, while we were sitting in the living room.

"Not long after the bullet, I was getting my roof redone, the Saturn was in the driveway, and the roofer was putting a cap on and a piece slipped out of his hand and went whack on the front hood of the car.

"I can't wait to replace the Saturn. Not only does it attract misfortune, but the cab is so small your head brushes the ceiling. Anytime I have to take an older person or a really big person, I feel bad because it's so low to the ground. Or taking my family on a road trip, they're all crammed in.

"I'll admit it has lived up to its gas-mileage claims. It's got a great air conditioner. And it's been pretty reliable. But the dealer wasn't. I was taking it to the dealer for servicing. There was nothing wrong with the car; it had, like, 30 or 40 thousand miles and they pulled one of these fast ones: 'Your such-and-such block has a blobbety-blob, and if you don't do this, your car could end up splitting in half on the freeway, and you'll go skidding on your nalgas.' You know they're scamming you; but they've caught you off guard, and at the time you don't think about getting a second opinion.

"And the headliner is a mess. Once I was trying to fit some object in there and it wasn't quite fitting, and I flew off the handle and started shoving the thing and yelling, 'You're going in there, get in there, damn you,' and chunks of ceiling foam were flying and I didn't care."

--- DRIVER: CHARLES ELSTER
--- VEHICLE: 1994 SATURN SL1
--- BOUGHT: NOVEMBER 1993 FROM SATURN KEARNY MESA
--- PRICE: $13,500
--- MILES: 93,000

I say, "Then you wouldn't recommend it for somebody who has a temper?"

"If you're easily frustrated, don't get a Saturn. And if you have bad knees or a bad hip or something, don't get a Saturn."

To suggest future "Driven" stories, e-mail ken@kenkuhlen.net.

“UGH,” I SAY AND ROLL MY EYES. “Change it.”

“I know it’s Metallica. They suck. Change it.”

“Metallica rocks,” he says and throws his arms up. “How could you want to — wait a minute. What were you watching the other day?”

“Fleetwood Mac Live,” I answer and make a swiping grab at the remote control, but he’s quicker than me and I grab air. “Oooh. See if that’s on. I wouldn’t mind watching that again.”

“What?”

“You’re 27 years old. Have full-sleeve tattoos and half-inch plugs in your ears,” he says pointing to my arms and stretched out earlobes. “And you’d rather watch the pattering old farts of Fleetwood Mac shuffle around on stage in their Depends FOR AN HOUR than this one Metallica video.”

“Metallica sucks!” I yell at him and lean in close. “Get it through your —” and before I finish I slap him in the face and grab his hand that’s holding the remote. “Joe! Give me the remote!” I yell as I pry his fingers away from the controller. His hands grasp mine and we tumble to the floor. “Give me the remote!”

“Not until you say, ‘Metallica rules!’”

“I’m older than you. Give me the remote!”

“Four years!” he yells and I cut him off by leaning my left forearm against his neck. His voice squishes up so he sounds like Donald Duck and he says, “It’s my house. It’s my TV.”

He shoves the remote under his back and lays on it. The channels start flipping as his shoulder blades romp down on the buttons and I romp down on his neck and grab at his arms. The bars that indicate the volume level start to creep up and across the screen. Martha Stewart is yelling into the front room about decoupage. “FIRST,” her cinnamon herbal tea voice fills the space from couches to windows. “YOU CUT THESE FLORAL PRINT SQUARES.” I pull the remote from beneath Joe and hold it directed at the TV to lower the volume. “FROM YOUR Favorite fabric.” The green bars crawl back across Martha’s hands to the other side of the screen and her voice softens.

“GYAAAH!” Joe screams and makes a flying lunge for the remote.

WHAT I WILL AND WON'T WATCH THIS WEEK

THURSDAY, AUGUST 18

SATAN'S SCHOOL FOR GIRLS (2000)

USA 8:00 A.M.

Wahoo! Now we’re talking. I’ve always lamented that daytime programming is a sea of vanilla lattes, white turtleneck sweaters, and cinnamon-colored couches. Looks like USA is taking an initiative for the bachelors who work from home. I salute you, noble USA Network!

BILLIARDS

ESPN2 9:00 A.M.

My friend, Jessie, is a flannel-shirt-and-work-truck hillbilly. He only graduated high school because his girlfriend did all of his homework and he copied my answers on tests. To look at him you’d think you could break a 2x4 across his forehead and he wouldn’t even notice. But for all of his lack of apparent sense he is one hell of a pool player. We used to trawl the bars downtown with a game plan of hustling the rubes. By the time it was our turn to shoot a game, Jessie would be so drunk he could barely hold a cue. He’d wake up on my couch the next morning and ask, “What’d we win?”

“40 bucks. WE LOST 40 bucks and we had to fight those guys because you grabbed their girlfriends on the ass!”

FRIDAY, AUGUST 19

BRING IT ON (2000)

USA 6:00 P.M.

Why is this on so much? Do the network execs believe us to be sitting at home with bated popcorn breath, dateless on a Friday night, waiting for Near Smut to come on?

Oh. It’s for, “those guys.”

INDEPENDENCE DAY (1996)

XHAS 8:00 P.M.

Let’s see. Saturday night. We need some background noise while we’re showering and dressing and grooming to go out for the evening. Rambo III and A Beautiful Mind are on at the same time, but neither has the comedy that we’re looking for to put us in the mood to chat up complete strangers in a bar. HERE WE GO! Independence Day on the Spanish Channel. You won’t understand what Will Smiff is yelling out the canopy of his fighter jet, but c’mon, it’s Will Smiff yelling out the canopy of a fighter jet. It’s not Orson Welles whispering, “Rosebud.”

SUNDAY, AUGUST 21

NBC 1:01 A.M.

Get home from the bar. Forget about more booze, open a Pepsi, and pull that burrito out of the bag. Think about the girl you talked to and what could’ve happened if her friend hadn’t pulled her away and out the door. That bourbon’s going to give you a banger headache in the morning, but right now, there’s Saturday Night Live, carne asada, and the girl who got away.

TU DESAYUNO ALEGRE: FIN DE SEMANA

KBNTCA 7:00 A.M.

I think “tu” means “you” or “your.” Thinking back to my time in Spain, I recall “desayuno” means “breakfast.” Doesn’t “fin” mean “the end”? Or is that just in French films? So this program is about “Your Breakfast” something something “the End” something else. I’ll be surprised if there aren’t women dancing around in bikinis, so I’ll probably watch.

Tommy Lee Goes to College

THE KING OF QUEENS

CBS 8:00 P.M.

EVERYBODY LOVES RAYMOND

CBS 8:30 P.M.

The big three networks are losing ground to the cable channels. They’ve been bitching and moaning that we’re just not watching their shows and commercials anymore. They’re not making money like they used to. Hmmm... I wonder why. BECAUSE YOUR SHOWS SUCK, YOU IDIOTS!

TUESDAY, AUGUST 23

NBC 9:00 P.M.

Awesome. This doesn’t look stupid at all. Super.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 24

JURASSIC PARK III (2001)

TNT 9:00 P.M.

Let’s combine this technology with Jason from Friday the 13th. We could find a bit of his DNA, clone him in a lab, and build a tropical island getaway theme park around his cage. What could possibly go wrong? It’ll be titled Friday the 13th Park. We’ll drop all the Roman numerals and just start over fresh.

T.G.I.F.

“You want to buy a Roman hammer? Go to Home Depot.”

By John Brizzolara

The shaft that came striking for my guts was not hurled by one of the howling Numidian horsemen who rode for the general they called the Thunderbolt. It was hurled by one of my own kind.

...The rider thundered down. The sharp tip of his iron pilum flashed once in sunlight. He held the Roman spear tight against his side as he rode, his hand as white as his crazed, smiling face. Then, above the screams of men and animals, the clang of blades against blades, the vain bleats of our trumpets and bugles, a new flurry of hoofbeats hammered behind.

— From Traitors’ Legion
by Jay Scotland

I was guiltily excited to find this 1963 Ace paperback at Baras Foundation Thrift store, hardly yellowed and for 35 cents. But it was nothing like the inordinate delight I experienced when I visited Legio IX Hispana at 32nd and Thorn in North Park on a recent August Friday. The unscrolled 3”x4” parchment (yes, parchment) flyer reads: “LEG IX HSPA — COH III EXPG — CEN I HIB et COHORS I BRITONNUM. Roman Re-enactment. Soldiers, Auxilia, and Civilians.” Locations are listed from Okinawa to England, from Wyoming to Camp Pendleton with e-address www.legio-ix-hispana.org and the notation, “Since 1994 The largest Legion in N. America.”

“We’ve done some TV,” business owner Sean Richards told me as he showed me a gladius or short sword made in India, a reproduction of the type of weapon actor Russell Crowe wielded in the film Gladiator. “Not so much movies. But if you watch the History Channel — we’ve done The Roman War Machine — about 25 percent of the Romans you see on there are from our club.

“I grew up in a history family, in a home full of artifacts. We had an Egyptian sarcophagus in the living room. My family was Irish and deep into Irish history. I got interested in the Celts, and from there it was a short jump to first-century Rome.

“When we first started doing Roman, we thought we’d do the 120s [AD] in northern Britain. No other clubs in the world at that time — about 12 years ago — was trying to re-enact Legio [leggy-O] IX [nona] Hispana. Other clubs were doing the 2nd, the 14th, and the 8th. There is a lot of history and mythology around the 9th Legion.”

“Was that,” I had to ask, “the famous Lost Legion?”

“That was very bad 19th-century Victorian English archaeology. My friends in Scotland still hold on to that myth. They believe the Scots wiped out the 9th Legion. Well, the Scots didn’t come to Scotland until the six or seven hundreds, a couple hundred years after the Romans had left.”

My historical novel in progress (tentatively titled The Vain Bleats of Trumpets) was becoming more fictional than historical, I could see. I asked Richards if he did his own metalworking.

“Yeah. At first I had no idea how to do it, but you learn from people who do. There’s a guy named Jeff Hedgecock who lives up in Ramona; he does late Medieval and early Renaissance armor. He’s been at it for 15 years and does mostly reenactments and stuff for museums. There are people who have the skills and pass it on.

“Iron is expensive to get and sometimes impossible, so we have to use steel. There are practicalities. You see that drill on the bench, for example? Sometimes it’s more practical to use a power tool or a punch. The Romans had things much like them. You want to buy a Roman hammer? Go to Home Depot. A chisel? They’ve got great Roman chisels.”

Richards showed me a bit of bronze leg armor called a greave. Bronze, he confirmed, is a combination of copper and tin. Meanwhile, I snapped photos of the plumed helmets of officers, unadorned troop helmets, and several pilums (or spears) with bendable iron tips for weighing down enemy shields and rendering them useless.

“It’s amazing how light this armor is,” Richards pointed out. “The Roman body armor might weigh 20, 22 pounds, that’s all. The helmet is a pound and a half, two pounds. Try to lift it all in your arms and you’ve suddenly got 50 pounds of gear. It’s all flexible. It has to be.”

Were the Romans stronger than we are? “Stronger than myself. Compare us to guys in the modern military; they’re in excellent shape. But, yeah, they found the remains of a Roman soldier just north of Pompeii, in, I think, Herculaneum. His leg bones were twice as thick as anyone else’s just from a lifetime of carrying all that stuff. When a Roman soldier would go on campaign, his whole kit would weigh about 110 pounds. It’s about the same in the Marines today. We have a staff sergeant in the Marines who is a member [of the Society for Creative Anachronism] and he says, ‘Nothin’s changed.’”

FROM MONTY PYTHON AND THE HOLY GRAIL

We just got back from Home Depot

Richards had inadvertently launched me on a rewrite of Bleating Trumpets. Just the fact that Roman cavalry had no stirrups suggested a major change in the outcome of my fictional battle of Berlinia. Apparently there was no Berlin in 190 AD either, but I figured it would be cool if there was, so I’m leaving Chapter III, “Legion of Dark Death,” as it is:

“What’s the date today, Flavius?” Maximus Flavius Flatulus fondled the hilt of his gladius and squinted into the Germanian dawn of destiny. “It is the ought of Augustus, 190 A.D.” The sun of the barbarian First Reich spat morning into the Teutonic forest like an angry custard Bismarck in the sky.

“Christus!” ejaculated Marcus Publius, “I long for my home in Britannia.”

“I notice you use the name of the Christian God.”

“Aye. As you know, Flavius, the name Jesus Christ is a relatively modern usage that will not be common for hundreds of years. To Christians of the Roman Empire, the name is Jesus Christus because Christus means savior or redeemer.”

“What’s a pound?”

“As you know, Marcus, weights and measures are still only approximate, and use of the unit pound will not be widely accepted until much later when —” But just then an arrow, its head a compound of tin and copper, came whistling through the air and jammed right in the other guy’s head. To be continued.
