Air-portability As of early this week, only one campaign committee weighing in on the move of San Diego International Airport from Lindbergh to Miramar had filed its official papers with the county registrar of voters. A group calling itself Support Our Military—Vote No on Miramar registered last week, saying it will oppose November's ballot measure, according to a spokeswoman with the registrar. Its treasurer, she says, is listed as Bill Baber, one-time staffer to ex-mayor Dick Murphy, always a big booster of moving out of Lindbergh; John Kern, Murphy's top aide, is working for the pro-new-airport side.

Meantime, rumors are circulating that Qualcomm billionaire Irwin Jacobs is preparing to sink a small chunk of his fortune into the drive to keep the airport downtown and may have been responsible for that poll a few weeks back conducted by Houston-based Voter Consumer Research. A nominal Democrat who normally shies away from hot local causes, Jacobs did give $100,000 to the failed November 2000 effort to dislodge school board incumbent Fran Zimmerman.

But don't look for another veteran of local big-money politics to get into the Miramar fray. In 1994, bayfront hotel magnate Doug Manchester was a prime mover behind a ballot measure in favor of relocating the airport to Miramar. His ally in that fight, U-T owner Helen Copley, spent $50,000 on the campaign, which garnered 52 percent in favor of the move. This time around, though, Copley is in the grave, and Manchester, who's negotiating with the Navy to build an office and commercial complex on government property at the foot of Broadway, is said not to be in a frame of mind to cross the military brass, which is bitterly opposed to turning Miramar over to civilians.

71,500 seats, river view San Diego mayor Jerry Sanders has quietly approved a $50,000 contract to appraise the 80 acres under Qualcomm Stadium owned by the city's Water Department, which holds it in trust for the benefit of its water customers. The remaining 80 acres under the stadium are owned outright by the city. The purpose of the appraisal, according to a memo attached to the mid-May agreement with the firm of Desmond, Marcello & Amster, "is to establish fair market rent for the Stadium's use of Water Department land as required by the City Charter." But insiders question the timing of the move, coming as it does on the heels of an effort led by county supervisor Ron Roberts to keep the Chargers at the Mission Valley venue. Sanders's chief development honcho Jim Waring signed off on the appraisal contract on May 16, the same day that the city gave the Chargers the right to look elsewhere in the county for a venue. Also that day, the board authorized Roberts and colleague Dianne Jacob to talk to Chargers owner Alex Spanos about a range of possibilities, including keeping the team at Qualcomm with some kind of county financing.

One prominent scenario, according to a city hall insider, would be for the county or another government entity to purchase the 80 acres of Qualcomm land owned by the Water Department and the 80 acres owned by the city and turn the land over to the Chargers. The purpose of the appraisal, according to skeptics, is to generate a "lowball" figure for the value of the land. According to a "scope of services" included in the contract, the appraiser will "conduct economic, industry and market research to ascertain the Stadium's profit potential as currently configured as well as comparable agreements of similar type venues." Notes the agreement: "This valuation is not intended to be representative of or to be used in any negotiations for a new stadium in this or any other location." An official in the city's Real Estate Assets Department says that means what it says, nothing more: the appraisal will determine how much the Water Department should be paid as its share of the stadium rental.

Puff piece San Diego Metropolitan magazine is out with its annual issue dedicated to the "Tribute to Women and Industry," a dinner run by the YWCA recognizing local female professionals. Part of the celebration includes dozens of paid advertisements in the magazine in which employers of the honored women give them a pat on the back. But one prominent notice is raising eyebrows. The city's taxpayer-funded Centre City Development Corporation paid an undisclosed amount to buy an ad congratulating one of its board members, Jennifer LeSar, a downtown banker and real estate developer. "She has shown great leadership in many areas, especially in her role on the CCDC Board of Directors," says the glowing quarter-page write-up, which features a photo of a beaming LeSar. "She also has been a key member of the Board of Directors for the San Diego Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual, Transgender Community Center."

One role not noted is LeSar's longstanding relationship with San Diego city councilwoman Toni Atkins. CCDC spokesman Derek Danzinger acknowledged that the agency paid for the advertisement and promised to find out how much it cost but did not call back.

What's Gerry Parsky Doing In Caribbean?

By Don Bauder

The Parsky team" is now famous — as well as infamous — in Rancho Santa Fe.

There is another "Parsky team" in the secrecy-shrouded Caribbean tax haven of the Cayman Islands, but that's barely known at all, just as its creators intended.

Until recently, multimillionaire Gerald "Gerry" Parsky — chairman of the University of California board of regents and George W. Bush's main advisor in California — was better known in the state than he was in Rancho Santa Fe, where he has occupied a horsey estate for 16 years. He takes his own jet in the morning to Westwood, where he is chairman and a founding partner of Aurora Capital Group, which acquires companies with borrowed money and attempts to rake in bucks by offering the stock to the public.

He largely kept to himself in his well-heeled hometown hamlet until he took a leading role in Proposition H, the bitterly contested June 6 vote on a site for a new Rancho Santa Fe school. He vociferously opposed it, donating funds for its defeat and filing two lawsuits against it. He and his fellow opponents became known as the "Parsky team." Since traffic changes caused by the proposed school would discommodate equestrians, school proponents said Parsky cared more about horses' comfort than children's education — a rather hypocritical stance for the UC system's top regent.

Parsky claims he is not a hypocrite: his main point was that the new school would cost far more than the average school. Bond proponents grinned: Rancho Santa Fe's financial geniuses should realize that land in their area will cost more than land in, say, National City.

In any case, the proposition failed to get the 55 percent it needed to pass. Rancor will intensify. The current school was built for 600 students and has 837, housed in 17 portable classrooms. Whatever happens, Parsky will be both adored and despised. But he is used to that. As a moderate Republican, he is regularly assaulted by conservatives. They even have a website, Parsky-watch.com, which flays him, although it hasn't been too active lately.

By contrast, his adventures in the Cayman Islands have been hush-hush, buried deep in turbid prose in the financial filings of companies that Aurora took over and subsequently took public. When taking control of companies, Aurora Capital set up entities in the Cayman Islands controlled by the Aurora partners, including Parsky.

This strategy raises numerous questions, as do most corporate adventures in offshore tax and secrecy havens. There are no capital gains taxes in the Caymans. Nor are there corporate or personal income taxes, withholding taxes, gift or inheritance taxes, sales taxes, or employment taxes.

I asked one of San Diego's foremost securities lawyers, who did not want to be iden-

Barbie in Bondage

By Joe Deegan

Offense, too, is in the eye of the beholder. On April 29 and 30, the Imperial Beach Art Guild sent eight members to display their work at Little Italy's ArtWalk San Diego. The guild's president, Kelly Tracy, received an e-mail nine days later from ArtWalk's event manager. "The real reason I'm writing," said Paula Kwast, after dropping several pleasantries, "is that I would like to talk to you about one of your artists that I have received numerous complaints about. He is the gentleman with the blue hair (can you please tell me his name?).... I've had phone calls from attendees and other artists who felt that his art involving the Barbie dolls was a little over the top.

"Granted I did not actually see what was going on, so I am taking this information from others, but from what I have but I don't want to cause any problems with other artists, attendees or yourself. I hope you understand."

The artist in question was Eider de Mello of Chula Vista. When I call Kwast, she says that several of those upset by de Mello were mothers with little girls. "The girls had Barbie dolls," she says, "and were upset with what they saw." But the only complainer willing to go public with his views is painter Mark Donnelly, who displayed his works at ArtWalk two booths away from de Mello's.

"I tried to ignore what was going on and focus my attention on speaking with the people visiting my booth," Donnelly tells me. "But I did glance foot booth you are provided. They do allow you to sit in a folding chair outside your booth so that visitors can get closer to the art. But [de Mello] had wagons and all kinds of things piled in the middle of the street, making his space about four times the size we'd all paid for. The booths lined the sides of the street, and we were supposed to keep the middle clear for foot traffic."

Donnelly says that he did look up one other time to see de Mello scampering in and out of his booth. "He was wearing what looked like a Viking helmet," says Donnelly, "with dolls' legs sticking out of it instead of horns." As for de Mello's art, some people coming from his booth "did think [it] was obscene," says Donnelly. "They were saying things like 'Let's get the kids out of here.' Other people were saying that he wasn't selling his art, only trying to get attention. Then I want to know, 'For what?' Is he promoting something?"

On a visit to de Mello's studio in Spring Valley, I learn that the artist considers "performance" to be a big part of his art. He did go to ArtWalk to make sales, he says, selling two ceramic doll heads. I bring up the rattraps. "I wasn't 'shooting' Barbies into traps," says de Mello, "but using the traps to fling the Barbies across the street. To me that's what society does to women today."

The 44-year-old de Mello, who came to the United States when he was 5, makes his living constructing custom water displays. On the inside of his left arm is a long scar inflicted by a sheet of wire meshing. De Mello speaks rapidly, and his six-foot-four-inch frame seems never to stay still.

"People bring me most of the materials I use to create my art," de Mello tells me, "old Barbies, Barbie parts, doll heads of all kinds, tin and wooden boxes, and lots of other junk. I use a lot of wire too." A future project, says de Mello, will be to pay homeless people to bring him things they find on the street. "I want to get them involved in a found-object sculpture."

The pieces de Mello is showing me in his studio look as if they already belong in that category. I ask if any of the pieces he showed at ArtWalk are here to see. De Mello shows me a sculpture he calls Two Left Feet. It features a lantern with a plastic doll head on top of it. Below the lantern dangle a pair of small tennis shoes turned outward away from each other. "It's all about the clumsiness we all feel at times," says de Mello.

The assembled figures filling the studio leave me seeing only a welter of indistinguishable debris fragments. But de Mello focuses my gaze on a piece he calls The Bouncing Bungee Barbie in Bondage. "People can think S&M if they want to," he tells me, "but they're misreading it. We're all in bondage to our issues: alcohol, drugs, sex, whatever it might be." Another sculpture is called Trammeled. It appears to display a Barbie hanging by her neck. Looking more closely, however, one can see that the impression comes from the doll's head being encased in a small box, more of de Mello's "trapped" symbolism.

Males are not absent in de

Mello's work, but they seem to find their meaning in relation to the females. He shows me a caged male figure with a "robot head" ascending a ladder, the infamous corporate ladder, of course. "Notice that his colleague there [a smaller doll] is mangled," says de Mello. At the sculpture's apex, the aspiration of the climb, stands a Barbie, also in a cage. "It's the trophy wife, what women are tortured to look like. The man is saying, 'I can buy you a bigger house, spoil you more than the next guy.' But she's in a bait trap, stuck too."

During his two days at ArtWalk, de Mello took names and e-mail addresses of people he spoke to about his art. Jennifer Woods, the first one I contact, writes me back with characterizations of his work as "a bit disturbing" and "fairly offensive." "He seemed very proud of his work however," she writes, "and was very outgoing to anyone who 'cruised through.'" Woods says she admired "the fact that he... did not really care about what people thought about his work." She found the work "entertaining" but adds, "I am not a five-year-old girl or a sixty-five-year-old lady.... I could see how some people would have been offended."

Before Felicia Morgenstern comments, she wants to know whether de Mello was the Barbie "S&M artist." That's part of the controversy, I reply. To which she suggests several things he might have been doing, including manipulating Barbie in a "misogynistic/sadistic bent." Or "is he exposing women's tendency to self sacrifice, self mutilate and ultimately imprison themselves in... the pursuit of physical perfection?" Morgenstern then asks whether ArtWalk is such an "improper venue" for the Barbie art. "Do we want a Stepford wife white-washed local art scene? Do we want paintings with pearls or do we want art which causes heard he was shooting naked Barbies into rat traps. I know that there are different forms of art and different values, but since I have received complaints about his art, can you please make sure that he does not do anything like this again if he will be participating next year? I know this is getting into the area of freedom of expression, over and see [de Mello] holding up a naked Barbie and a rat trap. That didn't affect me much. What bothered me was that, little by little as the day wore on, stuff started trickling out of his booth into the street. As a first-time participant in ArtWalk, I was trying to follow all the rules. And the rules require you to stay in the ten-by-tentified, about Aurora's Cayman Islands entities. The response: "It probably means hidden ownership or tax avoidance," although there could be other explanations.

Parsky in Caribbean

David Dunn of La Jolla's Idanta Partners has long been San Diego's most prominent venture capitalist. (Last fall he sold his La Jolla house for $24.5 million.) Without identifying Parsky or Aurora, I described to Dunn the Caymans structures. "There are several reasons people locate over there. I have never done it," says Dunn. "Lack of disclosure requirements is one, and two is tax avoidance." Such an offshore operation can relieve a U.S. company of "a lot of securities regulations in the U.S. and a lot of disclosure rules." The company may be able to delay disclosure of deals. Use of offshore havens can facilitate asset transfers within families too.

"It's bad to generalize," says Dunn. "There may be other reasons and valid reasons." The big tax advantage could be on relief from capital gains taxes when shares are sold, he says.

I both e-mailed and faxed detailed inquiries to Parsky, giving him more than four days to answer questions about Aurora's Cayman Islands units. I heard nothing.

I scoured documents filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. In 1994, Aurora Capital organized a company called Aftermarket Technology, which distributes rebuilt auto and truck parts. To put the company together, Aurora purchased four auto parts companies. Aftermarket is now based near Chicago.

In late 1996, Aurora made a public offering of the shares. Aurora Equity Partners, based in the United States, had 10.7 million shares. A group of Cayman Islands-based entities in them had 4.5 million shares. Parsky and his partners controlled much of the Caymans-domiciled shares. One filing put it coyly: "Parsky has a pecuniary interest in an indeterminate portion of these [Caymans] shares."

The insiders such as Aurora paid $1.67 per share, and outside investors paid $13.50 each.

By late March of 2005, the Aurora entities, including those based in the Caymans, had sold all their shares for between $14 and $18. Parsky shortly resigned from the board.

In late 2004, the Aurora group paid $1 billion for K&F Industries, which makes aircraft wheels, brakes, and brake-control systems. It's the largest supplier of wheels and brakes to the U.S. military. Aurora financed the buyout mainly with debt and in 2005 took the company public. Most of the proceeds from the offering went to pay off the debt incurred for the buyout and to pay a fat dividend to the insiders. The prospectus warned, "We do not intend to use any of the proceeds of this offering to grow our business or develop new products, which could negatively impact the value of your investment." In short, the leveraged buyout had little economic purpose other than to enrich the insiders. It's called financial engineering.

K&F had been spun off by Loral, a bankrupt aerospace company. When Aurora took K&F public, there were accounting changes made. "It's buyer beware on this kind of stuff," analyst Francis Gaskins of Ipodesktop.com told Reuters at the time. In addition, he was concerned about the debt piled up in the buyout. K&F warns

in its filings that it has "substantial debt," now two-thirds of its capitalization.

The Aurora partners, including Parsky, own more than half of K&F (now called K&F Industries Holdings) through both domestic and Cayman Islands entities. The Caymans units have names like Aurora Overseas Equity Partners II and Aurora Overseas Capital Partners II.

The K&F insiders, including the Caymans units, paid $2.16 a share, and the new investors paid $17.50. When Aurora partners start selling their shares, questions will be raised: Are capital gains taxes being paid? Is Aurora taking advantage of other offshore tax breaks? Is Aurora dodging some disclosure requirements? Are there hidden partners taking shelter in the Caymans? If Aurora is not using the tax and secrecy advantages offered by the Caymans, why bother setting up these entities?

Parsky's Statement of Economic Interests for 2005, required for his UC post, shows that he had $10,001 to $100,000 in Aurora Overseas Capital Partners II. But the document doesn't list its address. Nor does it list other Aurora "Overseas" entities. It mentions that Parsky had stock and "indirect interests" in Aftermarket. ■

us to stop, think, and yes...possibly shudder?"

Eileen Rubio, who says she is 22, writes that she found de Mello's art to be "original and creative." It "spoke" to me.... [And] it was definitely feminist.... I loved it! It makes you think of how women are perceived through society and men. It's so unjust.... Every woman knows this and has felt they have to measure up to standards of beauty [that] society and men created. And this is where insecurity, jealousy, competition arise. I'm sure this art...touched every woman's heart."

Lindsey Gorman believes that the reason de Mello's art created antipathy for "people in our 'beautiful' town of San Diego is that it hits too close to home, to the image that most people are trying to attain, the perfect trophy appearance. His art bluntly expresses just how transparent these people are."

"Oh yes, the Dead Barbie Doll collection," writes Steve Covault. "Good art doesn't have to always be pretty or soothing. Art that is a little disturbing shows us more, and makes us think. The objectification of women, the plastic nature of Southern California culture, etc.... I found his stuff...full of energy and dynamics. Odd, perhaps, but fascinating!"

And Jeremy Norton thought de Mello's work to be "introspective, not done for shock value." At ArtWalk, "It was refreshing to see bizarre stuff. I got sick of seeing 5000 pictures of Italy or flowers."

However, the appearance of Barbie in art is hardly original, a fact that has long irritated the doll's manufacturer, Mattel Inc. According to numerous websites, the company unsuccessfully sued Utah photographer Tom Forsythe for using the doll in his work. A written opinion of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which upheld a 2001 federal district court decision in favor of Forsythe, said, "Most of Forsythe's photos portray a nude Barbie in danger of being attacked by vintage household appliances."

Eider de Mello considers his use of Barbies mild in comparison with what he has heard others have done. "Some artists have put nails through their bodies," he says. "I know what I do is edgy, but at least I've gotten a strong reaction. That validates what I'm doing. And it's normal for people to dislike some art."

But it's not an aesthetic issue to ArtWalk's Paula Kwast. "It's one thing to go to a gallery where you know what you're going to see," she tells me, "and another to come unexpectedly upon something offensive in a large outdoor exhibit meant for the general public, especially families." ■

Ollie, You Fool, Hah Hah

Oh, Ollie, you think you are wise, but it is I who will prove the most clever at the last. I have indeed deciphered the code so crudely hidden in your last column ("Remote Control King"), and it is I, your nemesis, who shall have the elixir first. Even now I am constructing my plans to defeat your simian army before your mandibles have even formed. My next message will be hidden within the laugh track of Love Monkey.

The game is on.

I Love Ollie, Too

This is in response to Neacy, who wrote the letter about Ollie (May 25). I agree with you. I love Ollie. He is a great writer. He's super talented. He's entertaining. That's what it's about. Everyone needs to chill.

Condolences

We at the Dijkstra Agency were shocked to learn of Judith's passing. Although she was working from the Bay Area (and we missed having someone on this gig who was locally based), she more than made up for her geographical separation from the San Diego literary community by the quality of her work and her passion for good writing. We always appreciated the coverage she gave to important authors coming to town (and also to those who skipped San Diego). We shall miss her enormously and do hope that the Reader will do its best to find a replacement soon to fill her big shoes!

Been Waiting For Years For This

Thanks for the article in the May 18 issue regarding the Salton Sea ("You Could Hear a Pin Drop at Night," Cover Story). Being a frequent visitor to Borrego Springs and the Salton Sea/Thermal area, I had been waiting for years for the Reader to publish something about this unusual place and the land grabs going on over there.

From what your writer says, the "NAFTA Highway" (widening of Highway 86) seems to have opened up the entire area to development and speculation. I find it ironic that the Salton Sea Authority wants to "save" the Salton Sea by selling hundreds of acres of public lands to developers. I am not sure how turning the west shore of the Salton Sea into another Temecula/Hemet/Murrieta sprawl benefits the sea. How does it benefit anybody except the developers hoping to line their pockets by jamming more housing into one of the few empty tracts of land in that portion of Riverside County?

Wasting valuable water by building suburban developments in the middle of the desert makes little sense. Surely wiser, conservation-minded organizations can foresee ways to preserve some form of the Salton Sea without smothering the desert with housing tracts.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP

BY MATTHEW ALICE

Illustration by Rick Geary

Hi, Matt:

I see "tribute" bands in the Reader all the time (the Steely Damned, a Steely Dan tribute band; the Iron Maidens, female Iron Maiden tribute band, etc.). Do these bands have to get approval from the artist to perform in public, use their likeness/name, etc.? Can they record and sell their performances of the music? What would I have to do to set up my own tribute band, and what would the limitations be?

— Mike, Linda Vista

Dear Matthew:

The other day I was watching Wolf Creek; and while I was trying to console myself over the rental fee during the closing credits, I noticed that the movie's soundtrack was available on some record label. The only music I remember from Wolf Creek was your typical cheesy horror movie mood-setting background noise. Curious, I went through my DVD collection and noticed that all my movies have a soundtrack available. Pulp Fiction's soundtrack is available on MCA, which is understandable, as the movie did have good, memorable music. Independence Day, where I don't remember any music at all, has their soundtrack available on RCA; 28 days later on XL Records, I, Robot. What gives? Is there some rule that movies have to release their music on CD?

— Mark Hettergott, Rancho Peñasquitos

Oh, Mark...Mark...once again an innocent stumbles into Logicland and opens the forbidden pop-culture door. Out flies a sensible question: Why would anyone release a CD of forgettable music that you can't sing along with at the top of your lungs on the freeway or even dance to? Sorry to say, soundtrack CDs aren't much different from any other trash that bounces off the back of the movie-promotion truck. Slurpee cups, bobble-head dolls, Reservoir Dogs flea powder, Da Vinci Code decoder rings... They illustrate a basic pop-cult business principle. If you own something, you can always sell off pieces of that something and increase the income you are already making from that something. "Something," in your case, is Wolf Creek, in all its cheesy Australian glory.

That's our liberal rephrasing of an answer we got from Mark Meyerson, an old M.A. road dog who, unlike the rest of the crowd, actually made something of his pitiful self. He's worked for the likes of ASCAP, Atlantic Records, MCA, and Twentieth Century Fox. He loves copyright law so much he's even vice president of the L.A. Copyright Society. He denies any knowledge of Wolf Creek but suggests that the worthiness of the music has not a lot to do with it. Sure, the CD of a song-oriented score like, say, Dead Man Walking featuring a heap o' stars (Springsteen, Vedder, Lovett, Waits, Shocked, et al.) makes artistic sense to a consumer. A company like Columbia is more than happy to whap out a bazillion soundtrack CDs. But even if it's just hackneyed mood tunes from Wolf Creek, some company will take a chance that enough somebodies out there will want to part with 15 bucks for them. In the case of Wolf Creek, the record label is Rubber (also Aussie), and unless they have some whiz-bang distribution deal in the U.S., I doubt that the CDs will be cluttering up the shelves at Wal-Mart.

Remember that CDs and DVDs are cheap, cheap, cheap to manufacture. And if you have access to the master recording of the film's score, you have near-zero production costs. You pay a reuse fee to the film company for the rights and some fees to the musicians involved. A little studio editing time and, bingo, a marketable product.

There have been music companies that specialized in releasing soundtracks. Some film companies have deals with music companies for CD releases. And, of course, if your corporate family tree includes both a film branch and a music branch, then you really have a cheap product and it's pretty much your fiduciary duty to release a CD. And there's always that X factor. When we consumer sheep hear the tag line "Soundtrack CD available from Earpain Records!" do we think, "Hmmm, maybe it's a worthwhile flick if they've gone to all that trouble"? Maybe. The suits all hope so. And, of course, in the end, we'll just be skunked once again by trailers and hype.

Moving on to the creepy world of tribute bands, our source recommends his favorite, Dread Zeppelin — "Stairway to Heaven" to a reggae beat. But if you, Mike, want to salute your fave, you won't have to do much except practice hard in the garage, then scare up some gigs. You can't borrow anything from your musical idols that is trademarked or otherwise legally protected, but for most bands that's just their name. A band might have a "look" (grunge, glam, etc.), but that's not copyrightable. Your performance rights are covered, as with any band, by the club owner. You'll pay a license fee for recording rights, but that's standard for any previously recorded song, whether you're a tribute band or not. So as long as you don't call yourselves the Carpenters or Alvin and the Chipmunks or use their pictures in your ads, you're home free. Or relatively free, anyway. A tribute band is like any other band, just a little more obsessed.

Soon To Be A Major Motion Picture

On June 6 — that's 6-6-06, for Satanists keeping score — federal agents raided the Scottsdale home of Arizona Diamondbacks reliever Jason Grimsley. This visit was a follow-up to an April 19 drop-in conducted by Internal Revenue Service agent Jeff Novitzky, lead agent in the BALCO case, and 12 members of the IRS Criminal Investigation, the FDA's Office of Criminal Investigation, FBI, and U.S. Postal Inspection Services.

The April visit came immediately after an undercover postal inspector delivered a package of human growth hormone that Grimsley ordered and paid $3200 for. Grimsley was given the choice of going with the nice agents to another location for an interview or else the entire gang would trash the living shit out of his house as Grimsley's wife, three children, and guests looked on.

On second thought, perhaps agents didn't say those exact words, although I'd bet a lot that, "trash the living shit" conveys the exact meaning of the words they did use. In any case, Grimsley chose to go with the nice men and be questioned.

According to a search-warrant affidavit written by Novitzky, "...Grimsley also provided details about his knowledge of other Major League Baseball players receipts and use of athletic performance-enhancing drugs, including several close acquaintances. At the request of agents, Grimsley also made a recorded phone call to his supplier of human growth hormone.... Throughout the course of the approximately next two hours, Grimsley voluntarily provided agents with the following information..."

I'll cut to the chase. Grimsley admitted using human growth hormone, steroids, and amphetamines throughout the course of his major-league career and then ratted out fellow ballplayers who are or had used illegal drugs.

Grimsley has had a hell of a career for a pitcher with a lifetime 4.77 ERA and won/loss of 42-58. He made it to the bigs in 1989 and has played every year since starting with Philadelphia, moving on to Cleveland, L.A. Angels, Yankees, Kansas City, Baltimore, and Arizona. So, when Grimsley ratted out fellow ballplayers, the number of names he gave the feds came from a pool of hundreds. Former teammates include Jose Canseco, Roger Clemens, Sammy Sosa, and Rafael Palmeiro.

Cops, being human, took all this down and wanted more, wanted Grimsley to wear a wire into the clubhouse. Grimsley refused, wishing to remain a partial rat.

What to do? Well, the feds ratted out Grimsley. They raided his house on June 6, trashed the living shit out of it for six hours, and then unsealed their search-warrant affidavit, which made public Grimsley's rat-out and connected his name to such evil legal terms as, "Illegal possession of anabolic steroids and amphetamines, illegal receipt of a misbranded drug, human growth hormone, distribution of anabolic steroids and amphetamines, money laundering..."

Grimsley left the Diamondbacks and his $825,000 salary the next day, "for the good of the team," or, "in order to continue breathing," pick one.

The feds are playing hardball. They must have the names of 50, 100, 150 ballplayers and have proven to every one of them that they may well destroy those who refuse complete cooperation. MLB's locker rooms will never be the same.

PADRES: THE MOTION PICTURE
AFTERNOON

ANGLE ON two posters hung on clubhouse wall. One reads: Scott Free Bail Bonds. Get Out and Get On with Your Life. The other says: Warren Rodent Attorney at Law. DUIs, steroids, human grown hormones, and sexual predators.

ANGLE ON two San Diego ballplayers, one sitting on a bench tying his shoes, the other standing in front of an open locker buttoning his jersey.

BALLPLAYER ONE: "Why don't you come over after the game? My wife will throw on some steaks, the beer is cold."

BALLPLAYER TWO: "No, thanks. I don't want to know where you live."

An OUTFIELDER walks by, jokes: "Why are you two talking amongst yourselves? Looks like a conspiracy to me."

PLAYER ONE bolts. PLAYER TWO shouts: "We weren't talking, we were reciting the Pledge of Allegiance!"

PADRES MANAGER enters, beckons to PLAYER TWO: "I want to see you in my office."

PLAYER TWO: "If you have anything to say to me, you can say it to me in a public swimming pool, on the deep end, at noon, on a Sunday."

EXT. PETCO PARK, ANGLE ON first base. Two outs, bottom of the seventh, Mets lead Padres 5 to 2. Padres have a runner on first.

PADRES RUNNER takes a modest lead, says to the Mets first baseman: "I hear your son hit a home run in the College World Series."

METS FIRST BASEMAN: "What makes you think I have a son?"

ANGLE ON home plate. Padres batter takes a ball and two strikes. BATTER mumbles to himself: "Pitcher's got some heat today."

CATCHER: "Make that accusation one more time and I'll report this conversation to federal authorities."

“Lord Jesus,” said worship leader Jason Denison after the opening set, “we come before you with all kinds of stuff going on in our lives.... Would you meet us where we’re at, Lord Jesus? Would you let something start up?” During the set, the display screens at the front of the chapel had worked like video displays at a concert — highlighting each performer, zooming in on busy fingers during the guitar solos. But, before the set, the screens were decorated with the red, spray-painted outline of a heart, and the words “Sexual Wholeness.”

Before the sex talk, however, Pastor Ed Noble brought a small child up on stage, along with his parents. “This is Ricky,” he announced. “And his parents are coming to present him, as an acknowledgment.... ‘Jesus, this is your creation...and also these guys are making a commitment in front of their community, saying, ‘We’re planning to raise little Ricky to know Jesus and to walk with Him.’” Noble thanked God for entrusting children to “fragile, mortal, frail people like ourselves” and prayed for the parents. Then he committed Ricky to God, and prayed “that he would find Jesus as his all in all.”

Members of a mission team to Angola came up on stage for a blessing. Denison explained, “We’re going to help a city of about 200,000. The average age there is 15, and the average kid who is 18 has already had 19 sexual partners, so AIDS is kind of going through like wildfire. Our goal is to build some infrastructure, some youth programs.” Pastor Noble prayed that “the darkness would be beat back a little bit by these small candles that you’re sending out, Lord.” The band played again, a surrender song: “I’m giving you my dreams/ I’m laying down my rights/ I’m giving up my pride/ For the promise of new life.”

A short video jokingly acknowledged that “at church, there’s at least one thing people don’t like to talk about: sex.” It gave a short indictment of the culture as sexually saturated, and then it was lights up and Noble’s sermon. (To keep things comfortable, he went heavy on the humor and anecdote, and the congregation responded heartily.)

Noble argued that God was pro-body — He created man and called it very good; He “sent forth His son, born of a woman.... Christ-followers have a unique respect for the body, which is why it seems like every time a Christ-follower ends up somewhere explaining to people about their relationship to God, they build a clinic or a hospital. Your body isn’t your earth-suit; it’s something God has made, and so we take sickness seriously.” Further, God was pro-sexuality: He created humanity as male and female, and blessed them, saying, “be fruitful and multiply.” It was only after “human evil entered the world” that man and woman stopped being “naked and unashamed.”

Noble cited C.S. Lewis: “Chastity is the most unpopular of the Christian virtues.... Obviously, either Christianity is wrong or our sexual instinct, as it now is, has gone wrong.” He mentioned sexual trafficking. “How did that enter someone’s mind? I’ll tell you where it starts. It starts with the unlinking of sexuality and justice.” God, said Noble, wants “you to be a person who doesn’t manipulate and oppress and abuse and hurt other people.” He also said that God’s prohibitions regarding sexuality came from His desire for man “to really LIVE...to live abundantly.... God’s point is not dutifully obeying the rules.” He quoted Psalm 36: “And You give them to drink from the river of Your delights.”

“Our problem,” continued Noble, “is that we think too little of sex. Sex is a whole-person thing, a uniting thing. This thing was meant to unite and stick. The bodily uniting is a picture of the soul — spiritual — life — uniting.” He compared sex to duct tape: “The more times you take it up and try to reattach it in a different place, there’s a part of the duct tape that doesn’t quite work right anymore — the sticking, binding part.”

At the closing, he suggested a prayer for those who needed to begin with God: “God, as best as I know how, I am giving you my body, my soul, my heart. Would You forgive me? Forgive me because somebody else’s body — Jesus’ — was broken. Because His blood was shed. Forgive me, God, and enter my life, my being, my body, and help me follow You.”

What happens when we die?

“The biblical version of that,” begins Noble, “the way the church has stated it for centuries, is that there is a resurrection of the just and the unjust. Everybody appears before God, and God judges them and assigns them an eternal destiny. Here at Journey, we kind of feel that’s God’s department. We’ll let God sort that one out.”

—EVE KELLY

My friend Bernice has shed the poundage. Dutifully hitting the gym every day and sticking with her South Beach Diet brought back her pre-baby body. Next month she and her husband are celebrating their anniversary and her new slimness with a trip to Cancun. “I just bought my first bikini,” she laughed over last week’s coffee clutch. “Believe it or not, I’ve never worn one, and if I don’t now, I just might never.” We had a good laugh and discussed styles. She insisted on buying a teeny bikini. “But I’m going to need some waxing help.” Laughter erupted again and I agreed to research for her. Bernice is a bit leery of delving into delicate topics with perfect strangers. Though I knew a bit from my own research about bikini waxing, it looked like Bernice might need a Brazilian wax, of which I knew little.

Juliana Rodrigues, esthetics director for downtown’s Spa Velia, filled me in. “A bikini wax is a hair removal procedure,” explained Rodrigues. “Typically most spas have three types of bikini waxes. The first one is the regular bikini wax [$30-$40], which is waxing the sides of a bikini bathing suit line. The second kind, instead of just waxing the sides, it goes a little bit farther down for the smaller bathing suit. Then there is the famous Brazilian wax, where everything is waxed out [$55 to $80]. With the Brazilian wax, you do have choices on the top of the pubic hair. Most people like a little strip, right above the lips, a long one-finger type of strip so it is very sexy. They feel like a Playboy woman. Or they want a triangle style, where you leave a small triangle of hair. But some people wax it all out. Though some people feel like they have too childish a look when they wax everything, especially people who have children. They like to leave a little something to differ from the younger people.”

What was the origin of the Brazilian wax?

“It originated in Brazil because of the smaller sizes of our bathing suits,” replied the Brazilian native. “And Hollywood and Playmates really adopted it because of its perfect clean look. So the idea from Brazil and a touch of the sex industry made everything happen. It’s been a trend for quite a while, and I think it has come to stay. It’s what’s hot right now. The guys are loving it. Basically it has an impact on a man. If your guy kind of likes the clean cut, most women will go for that. And now I get a lot more moms. Five years ago it was just strippers. Now it is all kinds of women.”

Is there any preparation the client should do before waxing?

“There are two things you can do,” continued Rodrigues. “The best thing is to come with the hair not so long; a quarter of an inch works. Also, there are some creams that can numb the area a little bit. There’s disagreement with the creams; some people don’t know if it really works. I think it is more of a psychological thing. I think for some people the cream works really well; for other people, no.” The cream, called No-Scream Cream, runs about $16 to $20 for a six to eight usage tube. “So that you don’t scream about it,” chuckled Rodrigues. “You apply a small amount everywhere in the area 35 to 45 minutes before your procedure.”

“Some clients tell me they have a glass of wine or take a muscle relaxer before they come in.”

There is some disagreement over ingrown hairs and waxing. “Some people say they get ingrown hairs because they are doing waxing. I don’t think so. I think it’s actually one of the best ways to go, much better than shaving. It should help with ingrown hairs, if it is done properly.”

Does it hurt more than waxing your legs?

“It hurts and definitely more than waxing your legs,” she said. “But the legs are a larger area, and the bikini is an intense but quick pain procedure. Some clients tell me they have a glass of wine or take a muscle relaxer before they come in. And there is the No-Scream Cream. I try to distract my clients by having funny or interesting conversations with them.

I think my accent really helps. And I help them take deep breaths, so when they realize that I will pull the strip, it is already done. And since I have been waxing for seven years, I am very fast. After you have a few treatments the pain is better because you know what to expect and the hair is easier to work with. After the procedure, we apply a treatment that kind of calms down the skin; it is very nourishing to the skin. I recommend people not to take a hot shower right after because the skin is a little sensitive. But after a couple of hours, it should be fine.”

How long should the wax last?

“It varies,” Rodrigues answered. “The first time it can last for two weeks because your hair is not used to it, and when you shave you shave in all directions, so the hair is kind of confused and goes all over the place. But for a regular user it lasts for three to four weeks. It also depends on how much hair you have. Some women have more hair, so the hair grows in a lot faster. Some women have a lot less hair, so it lasts for a month even. And it also depends on how picky you are. If you are the kind of person that likes a very clean area all the way around, then you will come back more often. But I think three weeks is perfect. And after two or three times, you have the perfect skin, like babies, all nice and smooth right off of the wax. There is no dark shadow. It is really good.”

THONG ON FIRE

by Josh Board

mary Jo and her friends Jackie, Mary Ellen, and Kelly decided to form an organization that “fights frump,” an anti-Red Hat Society. A friend once told Mary Jo, “We don’t see you wearing a red hat, but a red thong.” I asked the Blue Thong Society women at their party at the Marriott Del Mar why the color of the thong changed from red to blue. Jackie said, “[Blue] stands for harmony, sympathy, friendship, and loyalty among the enlightened and dynamic women of today.”

The Blue Thong Society expected attendance at their event to be about 100, but they received a crowd of almost 250. I was one of the few men there, but I wasn’t complaining. I was happy with the ratio.

I saw a few customized hot rods in the parking lot when I arrived and thought, These women have some sweet rides. I discovered the Good Guys Rod and Custom Association was also having a party here, in conjunction with a car show at the Del Mar Fairgrounds. They didn’t seem to mind the women partying nearby.

I said to my friend Julie that the band should do a version of “Devil in a Blue Dress” and change the lyric to “blue thong.” Someone overheard me and suggested “Blue Thong” instead of “Blue Moon.” We spent five minutes going through song titles like that. The crowd got going when the song “Chain of Fools” was played.

I couldn’t believe the number of women crammed into the room. There were 20 people in line for drinks — the Blue Martini was the most popular. The cream.

There were blue thongs piled on a table, a mix of what thongs used to be — flip-flops — and what they are today — bikini bottoms. Trying looked around. Only one woman noticed. I folded the thong so the black spot I burned in it wouldn’t show. The woman smiled at my clumsiness. I said, “Well, instead of bra burning, it was thong burning.”

Julie and I went outside so I could smoke a cigar. A waiter came over and asked us what we wanted. I said, “A bottle of your finest champagne.” As he said, “I’ll go get the wine steward,” I had to yell, “I’m joking. Just a bottle of your finest water.” I’m not sure if he was joking or this is how they roll in Del Mar, but I was given a liter bottle of Acqua Panna. It would to get a picture of both types of thong, I moved them together. As I snapped the photo, I noticed smoke. I had thrown a bikini onto a candle and it caught fire. I put it out and take me a week to drink that!

I talked with Mary Jo, who was an athletic looking blonde surfer. She said that today’s 50-year-old is like yesterday’s 30-year-old. I asked her how much it costs to join The Blue Thong Society, and she told me $29 annually.

I heard her talking later about a surf camp she runs for girls called Surf Divas.

Since there were only a few men here, I asked each one why they attended. One told me he was a cameraman filming the event for KUSI. Another told me he was their attorney and was invited. Another guy was a high-school friend of one of the founders and was there to show his support.

I noticed that there was a basketball game on TV and mentioned that none of the women here would be interested in hoops. A woman overheard me and said I was being sexist, that she was a basketball fan. I asked her to name the teams that were in the NCAA Final Four this year. She named them all without hesitating. I felt stupid. And sexist.

When the door prizes were given out, the women went crazy. A number was called out, and a woman said she won. She went to pick up her prize, and it turned out her number was one off. They said, "Oh, well, that's close enough. Here you go."

I talked to another founder, Jackie. I called her Jackie Blue, after the song. She told me that she knew Marlon Brando and James Coburn and that she partied with comedian George Carlin before his show at Humphrey's. Jackie told me a story that won her a prize on the Jeff and Jer radio show. The story involved her climbing up a billboard with a boyfriend, and the rest isn't fit for print.

There were several attractive women at this event, correcting another sexist thought I had, that women over 50 can't be hot. But they can. I noticed a few who looked crazy, such as the woman with curly hair who reminded me of Glenn Close in Fatal Attraction. She looked like Close and kept looking around wildly as if she was playing the part. When they ran out of wine glasses at the potato bar, a waiter explained that they were in the process of washing them. I thought two women were going to kill the man. I had his back, though.

There were women here from New York, Wisconsin, Oregon, Texas, and Florida, and I talked to two from Arizona. One of them said, "I like this group of women. This organization is about having people get the pickle out of their ass. No religion, no politics...." She gave me a business card from her organization in Arizona — Champagne Sistas. When I mentioned that there were several women who were obviously under 50, I was told that they have different chapters and that there are different age groups of Blue Thongers.

Julie was getting buzzed from her second Blue Martini, and she asked me if I wanted to finish it off before we headed out. The women had more prizes to give out. They ranged from free haircuts to surf lessons to a skin-treatment party. When I found out that the crowd would be voting on what their favorite thong was and realized that they would see that I had burned a hole in one, I told Julie we had to leave. ■

Girlfriends Interrupted

Do not allow children to mix drinks. It is unseemly and they use too much vermouth.

— Fran Lebowitz

"Ah, shit, don't open it. I already know what it is. Look, there's a rattle drawn on the back."

Catching my drift, David handed over the sticker-laden herald as if he were a postal worker handling an envelope addressed to Washington, D.C., after noticing a peculiar white powder along its edge.

Using my nail, I tore open the envelope and removed the invitation card. David braced himself by squinting his eyes and nodded his permission for me to read it aloud.

"We are tickled pink and happy to say, a baby girl is on the way! Please join us for a baby shower blah blah blah. Do you want to know the date?"

"No," David answered in a clipped tone. "No need. It's not like we're going to go."

"You don't want to go?"

I asked, more out of a playful urge to poke a cranky tiger than actual curiosity — I already knew his answer.

Rather than uttering the two-letter word, David rolled his eyes.

"That's another couple we have to replace," I said of our expectant friends.

"Yup," agreed David. "Too bad. I really liked hanging out with them. Oh, well," he conceded, "it's not like this is the first time I've lost friends to children." At 40-something, David's already been through this phase I am experiencing for the first time; I have only just reached the age when most people advance to the next step of the social norm — get married, buy a house, settle down, and pop out some mini-mes.

Each time I learn that one of my friends is bursting with baby, I experience two emotions. First, I am happy for my friend, ecstatic that she (or the father-to-be, if I am closer to the male half of the couple) is getting what she wants and deserves and creates for herself out of life. Second, I am sad, in the way of a college senior at graduation who has just learned her best friend has received an amazing job opportunity in a different city. I'll visit you, I might think, but I know I don't want to live there.

When someone has a child, his or her life is transformed — the child becomes priority numero uno, as it should be for all good parents. But to become a great parent, one must make sacrifices in all areas of life. My sisters have done this — they scaled back their work hours, substituted Baby Einstein DVDs for primetime programming, and replaced the Crate & Barrel glassware in their cupboards with plastic sippy cups. Rather than meeting up with friends for fine dining or a night on the town, they began to surround themselves with other young parents and limited their socializing to kiddie birthday parties and gatherings at the local playground.

I don't dislike children, but I don't like them either. I don't want to "play." I want to participate in conversation, in a coherent, symbiotic discussion. It is impossible for me to obtain this goal with a child in the room. So when someone says, "I want to see you, come hang out with me and my new baby," I feel it is the same as me saying, "I want to see you, come hang out with me while I'm on this conference call for work." Because it never fails, every time I say yes and go to hang out, it takes three hours to have what should have been a 20-minute conversation. This is because my friend's attention is, understandably, focused on the baby.

What many parents don't realize is that not everybody wants to have children. Perhaps more mind-boggling is that a great many people, even those with children of their own, do not enjoy spending time with someone else's children. If you choose to reproduce, that's fine, but please do not be offended if I have zero interest in meeting, ogling, admiring, or hanging out with your kid, at least not until he's old enough to mix a good cocktail.

David and I toyed with the idea of posting a sign at our front door that reads, "You must be this high to enter." Our home is not baby-proof. We have sharp sculptures on the floor and exposed art on the walls. We have easy-to-stain rugs and soft, unprotected, Italian leather sofas. We love to have friends over to sip wine, nibble cheese, and talk about anything from traveling and world affairs to local politics and stories of day-to-day life. Desiring the company of our friends does not equal desiring the company of our friends and their offspring.

Because most of us are well trained to believe that people who like babies are good and people who don't like babies are bad, I offer this analogy: Say I LOVE to bird-watch and you know that it is the one thing around which my world revolves. I call you up and say, "Hey, come bird-watching with me this weekend!"

Because you can't think of a good enough excuse to get out of it, you find yourself sitting with me on a hillside overlooking a canyon with a pair of binoculars in one hand and an illustrated bird book in the other.

You say, "So how's your week been?"

I say, "Great, how 'bout yours?"

You say, "Well, I wanted to tell you about—"

"WOW, you see that?" I excitedly point to a leafy area. "That's a Cassin's Kingbird. I haven't seen one around here before." Jamming a finger at the book in your left hand, I order you to note the pale yellow belly beneath the greenish-gray wings. "Wow, beautiful. Don't you think it's beautiful? Seeing that bird fills me with such joy! Sorry, you were saying?"

You say, "Yeah, pretty cool bird. Anyway, yesterday, Brian called, and he was all—"

"You hear that? I'm sorry, but did you hear that? God, it sounded just like a Horned Lark. I wouldn't expect one out here, but you never know." I hold one hand up, gesturing for silence as I strive to hear the call once more. After a few minutes I drop my hand and say, "Guess not. Okay, sorry, go ahead."

"Yeah. Anyway, Brian called and said his parents were going to be on the Daily Show because—"

"LOOK! A turkey vulture! I don't mean to cut you off, but I thought you might miss it." I begin to elucidate upon the eating habits and digestive processes of the carnivorous bird, sparing no detail about the color and texture of its excrement. Then, remembering you had something to tell me, I say, "Sorry, go ahead. You were saying?" You say, "You know what? Forget it."

Two hours after receiving the happy and sad news, I sat in my office staring at the invitation, thinking up ways to R.S.V.P. a regretful declination when David appeared in the doorway.

"Hey, is there anyone you want to ask to join us at the Prado for tonight's wine-tasting dinner?" David had a hopeful look about him.

I thumbed through my phone book to see who remained and came upon the same name staring up at me from the invitation. I'll miss her, I thought. Now she will enter the world of new parents, taking comfort in the company of others of her kind. I made a mental note to switch my friend from my "Hey, it's five o'clock, want to go get drinks at six?" list to my "Want to have dinner in a month? That should be plenty of time to find a sitter" list, and continued my search. ■

The World Is a Cactus

The color and variety of many cactus flowers could make your irises swoon, no pun intended. Cactus flowers are generally short-lived. They bloom in the desert, and they usually last only a day or two. Ever seen an epiphyllum? The jungle cactus, or orchid cactus, grows extravagant, ostentatious flowers in unbelievably rich colors. There's an epiphyllum collection at the Wild Animal Park in Escondido that'll take your eyes to a new spectrum. Orchids are okay, and roses carry pedigree, but if you ask me, cacti are the floral kings and queens of the plant world.

To look at cacti is to see the imagination of evolution dramatically played out in audacious gestures. How did life come up with so many shapes? Cacti grow in buttons, angles, columns, cushions, cylinders, flat pads, pendants, globes, ovals, sprawls, tubers, pyramids, and treelike, shrublike, and rocklike forms. The names of cacti reveal the attempts to describe their incredible variety — prickly pear, rainbow cactus, crab cactus, barrel cactus, candelabra cactus, rat tail cactus, chain-link cactus. After reading a few dozen of these names, we might visualize gardens full of teddy bears, cucumbers, and mini spaceships.

Among the thousands of varieties of cactus, we find a link to religious images and holidays: the Christmas cactus, Easter cactus, mission cactus, and bishop's cap.

Many cactus enthusiasts make wreaths out of cacti and other succulents. In Native American societies, hallucinogenic cacti were used in holiday ceremonies. So, although corn takes Thanksgiving, the pine owns Christmas, and the pumpkin has Halloween, the cactus lands a spine or two in these holidays and more, which might make the cactus the Great Celebrant of the plant world.

For two days, the first weekend of every June, in room 101 of the Casa del Prado in Balboa Park, dozens of vendors, thousands of hobbyists and scientists and the curious, and tens of thousands of very special plants unite.

The San Diego Cactus and Succulent Society's annual show and sale, which is free and open to the public, spills out of spacious room 101 — potted cylinders and stars, planted pendants and pyramids — and juts and sprawls into the inevitably sunny courtyard, a million spines and barbs and the loyal fans of the family Cactaceae.

The society meets monthly in the Casa del Prado. When I went to one of these get-togethers recently, I expected to see nine or ten botanists standing around talking about how to revive their sick pet cactus, "Spike." What I witnessed instead was a vibrant scene: 80 or 90 gardeners, horticulturists, collectors, plant photographers, and other enthusiasts milling through a collection of hundreds of thriving cacti with names like night-blooming cereus and red pitaya. There was a slide show about a trip one of the society members had taken to photograph and collect cactus in Argentina. There was passionate conversation, not to mention ample refreshments. And alongside the usual harmless geekiness that attends esoteric seminars and conferences, at the Cactus and Succulent Society meeting there was also that infectious eagerness that radiates from dedicated hobbyists.

Tom Knapik is a past president of the society who teaches math at Patrick Henry High School. He has a master's degree in botany. When I was introduced to Knapik in the Casa del Prado, he was deeply engaged in a conversation using Latin names and technical lingo. Thankfully, Knapik had no trouble toning it down to chat with me.

"Many collectors can tell you the moment they saw a special cactus for the first time," Knapik said, "that moment when it hit them, and they realized that this was something they wanted to grow in the future. For me, the moment was when I was visiting a friend up in Northern California, and his girlfriend was growing succulents in her attic, under a light. And she showed me these plants, and I went, 'Wow!' And that was it. That started it all. And literally my life has been altered in where I live, in the hobbies that I have, in the people that I've met, in the friends that I have, in the vacations I take: it's all been shaped by my interest in these really unique plants."

The plural for "cactus" is either "cacti," "cactuses," or "cactus." (Many of the collectors I talked to prefer "cactus" as the plural for cactus, kind of the way "sheep" is plural for sheep.) "Cactus" itself is a Latinized Greek word, hence the us ending and the fact that an i at the end can make the word plural. It's the same with those other great ancient Greeks and Romans: octopus, hippopotami, alumnus, nuclei, and syllabus. Which means the cactus is like the imperial Roman senator of the plant world.

"I think it's an underappreciated plant,” Knapik said, “since we have cactus in our back yards and in our surrounding areas. People kind of take it for granted. This hobby is much bigger in places like Italy and England, probably because they don’t have cacti growing in their back yards. The collectors in those countries are really passionate.”

Cactus are not indigenous worldwide. They’ve been spread around the world by collectors, but, with one exception (Rhipsalis baccifera), they developed in the Americas only. Many plants in Africa look like cacti but they’re not, they’re usually euphorbias (common name “spurges”). Cacti are native to 45 states in our country, all but Alaska, Hawaii, Vermont, New Hampshire, and Maine.

Knapik told me, “European collectors have been caught with cactus filling their suitcases, and the plants sell for hundreds of dollars on the market over there. A lot of collectors here focus on buying only seed-grown or propagated plants, instead of collected plants, which is a good ethic to go by.”

Then Knapik said, “Many of the top collectors in this area feel, in one sense, like we’re preserving things that are sometimes close to extinction in the wild. We can produce seed from species that are extremely rare because of habitat destruction.”

Cacti can be relatively pricey — especially if you want some specially bred variety — but compared to orchids, for example, they’re cheap. The most you might pay in San Diego for a rarer cactus would be about $80.

At swap meets and most nurseries, vendors have what many expert

collectors call “introductory cacti”; that is, cactus varieties that are common and easy to grow.

Most of the introductory public just wants to see flowers, but serious collectors don’t care about flowers. They care about the species and the form of the plant and staging it in a wonderful pot. It becomes more like a sculpture. One collector I talked to told me that he’d seen grocery stores go so far as to glue flowers on the top of cacti — flowers that don’t belong to the cacti, of course — but they glue them there so that the cacti will sell. That’s just bizarre.

And speaking of bizarre, here’s an interesting coincidence; call it an evolutionary mystery. The forms of many underwater plants and animals are eerily similar to the forms of cactuses. The tuna fish and the fruit of the prickly pear cactus, the “tuna fruit,” look more than a little alike. Anyone who’s ever seen a sea urchin knows that they would seem right at home on a sand dune. In fact, the rolling sandy bottom of the ocean even looks a little like the desert. So what gives? The wettest and the driest ecosystems on our planet have developed almost identical shapes and forms. Weird. (Cue the music from The Twilight Zone...doo-di-doo-doo, doo-di-doo-doo....)

At one point, Knapik gently took issue with the name of the cactus club. He said, “Back when I was president, I asked them if we could change it, and they said no, it would be too hard to change the paperwork. But it should be ‘The Cactus and OTHER Succulents Society.’ Because cacti are succulents.”

Cacti are succulents because they remain succulent (moist) in the most arid conditions. Many varieties of cactus are edible, and some would even pun that they are succulent in salads. In the plant world, succulents store water in their stems, leaves, or roots. It wouldn’t be too much of a reach to call cacti

(and other succulents) the camels of the plant world.

The spines on a cactus are a modified form of leaf. The spines are designed to protect the cactus's new growth from the pounding desert sunlight and to regulate water loss (more on this point later). The spines also often keep the cacti from being eaten by desert animals such as the bighorn sheep. Many cactus spines are more like hairs than thorns, and in some cactuses these hairs grow coarser and coarser until you'd rather pet a porcupine than toss a cactus-football. In fact, the cactus is like the porcupine of the plant world.

Neither the spines nor the succulence of cacti is a defining characteristic. But the areole is. The areole in a cactus is a highly specialized, cushionlike tissue structure out of which the spines and flowers grow. No other plant in the world has one. Toughened, hardened, and drought tolerant, all cacti are succulents, but not all succulents are cacti. Which is to say that cacti store water, but other water-storing plants don't have an areole that grows spines.

Cacti take the thorny crown as the most popular of the succulents. People champion cacti for their brilliant flowers, unusual shapes, and the fact that, in pots at least, they grow slowly and take up little space. Cacti are also generally easy to care for and can survive long periods of neglect. In fact, a cactus is a veritable model of resiliency.

Cacti generally have fleshy stems, brilliant flowers, and spines instead of leaves. Often, terms such as "skin," "flesh," "hair," "spine," "joints," "cuticles," and "ribs" are used to describe cacti, terms we also use to describe people. It's as if the cactus is the human being of the plant world.

I asked Knapik to list a few of his favorite cactus groups and to tell me why he thought they were exceptional.

"We have one cactus along the border of our country," Knapik began. "It's called Ariocarpus, and it's one of my favorite cactuses because it has no spines. It has these very modified tubercles where the spines normally would have come out and little wooly tufts. They look like stars. They're absolutely stunning. It's an untraditional cactus, and people are usually surprised how beautiful and symmetrical they are. I've seen them in habitat, and when you find one, it's like you've found gold."

Knapik went on. "The Astrophytum group has beautiful forms. The bishop's cap is a famous Astrophytum that doesn't have any spines, and it's shaped like a star, and it has this white flecking all over it. The Japanese have revolutionized the Astrophytum group with some of their hybrids. They've produced a hybrid called 'Super Kabuto' — and there are clubs in Japan that focus only on this hybrid — and some of these plants sell for thousands of dollars. They look absolutely fantastic.

"My other favorite cactus is the Copiapoa," said Knapik. "I've been to Chile three times to see them in habitat. They form mounds that are four or five feet tall and ten feet across, and the body of the plant is bluish gray, and their spines are black, and the number of heads could be hundreds, and they can live to be 500 years old. And they're fantastic. They're absolutely the most stunning plants I've ever seen in the wild. I go to Chile to photograph them.

"The Lophophora

group are also very advanced and very beautiful," Knapik concluded. "This is the peyote group, and they've developed alkaloids in their tissue, which prevents animals from eating them. They've gone beyond spines; they don't need spines anymore. It's a beautiful plant, but unfortunately most of the species are banned because of the drug implications."

Because of "drug implications," Lophophora williamsii (common name "peyote") can be cultivated and kept only by Indian tribes. As you might guess, Southwestern Native Americans and cacti have a long history together.

I called around looking for a specialist who could paint me a picture of that history, and I found Richard Carrico. Carrico teaches part-time at San Diego State in the American Indian Studies Department and also works on environmental impact reports for a bioconsulting company.

How did Carrico come to be an expert on Native Americans and cacti?

"I've published books and done research," he said. "And over the years I've hung out with a lot of healers and shamanistic people

Are You House Rich and Cash Poor?

Are accelerated mortgage payments killing your cash flow? Many people sink as much as 50% of their gross wages into their mortgage payment so they can get their home paid off as quickly as possible.

Accelerating your mortgage payments is part of a smart financial plan, but only if you do it right.

Unfortunately, most people approach the acceleration of the mortgage payoff the wrong way.

If you were to separate equity from your home and put it in an income-earning side fund, you could grow that equity and use it to fund that mortgage. At the end of your mortgage term, you would have your house paid off and the original equity draw-out as well.

Now is the perfect time to implement this strategy as many California homeowners have seen a 120% rise in home values. In fact, those homeowners have more equity in their homes than in all of their other assets combined — an amazing 3 times or more homeowner equity to liquid assets.

Is it a bad idea to be overweighted in homeowner equity? Yes, and for several reasons.

First, homeowner equity is least available when you need it most.

Second, you earn a 0% return on that equity. You have all that money locked up and you get nothing for it. It's just sitting there, virtually unemployed.

Third, it's depriving you of huge tax deductions and another income stream of as much as thousands of dollars a month.

There is a way you can maintain control of your homeowner equity and add a rate of return to an asset currently returning zero, zip, nada. Learn how you can safely accelerate your mortgage payoff by using that slush fund of equity to fund your mortgage, increase your tax deductions and lock up a rate of return to pay off your mortgage faster and keep more of your money.

I am Chris Wagner, a Certified Mortgage & Equity Planner. I would like to personally invite you to use these free educational seminars entitled "Common Sense Strategies of Successful Home Equity Management," which will be held Wednesday, June 21, 6:30-8:30 pm at the Marriott in Del Mar, or Saturday, June 24, 10 am-12 pm at the Marriott Mission Valley.

These seminars will teach you how you can turn that lazy equity into income and accelerate the payoff of your mortgage the smart way. We will also have real-life examples showing how others in your position were able to use these commonsense strategies to achieve their long-term and short-term financial goals.

These educational seminars are taught nationally by the Institute of Education & Advanced Learning at a nominal rate of $100.00. However, California homeowners are cordially invited to attend this presentation for FREE, compliments of Teamwork Mortgage and Teamwork Equity Management Group.

Chris Wagner, CMP & Equity Advisor, will be presenting on June 21 and June 24.

Space is limited and reservations are required. For guaranteed seating, please call our 24-hour toll-free registration line at 800-686-8538 or e-mail: jterry@teamworkmortgage.com and folks who use the local plants, like Jane Dumas, who's a local Kumeyaay practitioner and healer. I've learned the plants, taken the drugs, and done what I've had to do to learn how the environment was used by these folks."

I wanted to know how today's Native Americans put cacti to use.

"With a few exceptions," Carrico said, "anything I'll tell you about how Native Americans used cacti 2000 years ago will still be true today, at least in some places, especially south of the border. Near Tecate, there are certain villages where the people still live essentially in the prehistoric period."

Carrico told me that the Kumeyaay used cacti for multiple artistic purposes. "They used the ing under their chins." Then Carrico mentioned the Kumeyaay rock paintings in the county, called pictographs. "The Kumeyaay would use the mucilage from cactus as a fixative, to make the paint stick to the rocks."

And what about medicinal uses? I'd read that cacti and other succulents were often used to cleanse the skin and as an antibacterial agent. It's said the juices of various cactuses prevent infection and promote healing.

Nopalitos are soft and crunchy, like okra or jicama. They're good in salads and remind me a little of some kind of tart bean or bell pepper. Apparently, cactus pads are full of vitamins and minerals as well.

I've eaten the cactus salad at El Agave Tequileria in Old Town, and I found it tasty. I called the chef there, Juan Carlos Gomez, and asked him how to prepare cactus.

Mexican market, it still has its spines, so we have to be careful and wear some kind of gloves. You take every pad of the cactus, and with a knife, you take out all of the spines. It doesn't take that long, just 20 to 30 seconds for each pad of the cactus. It's kind of like cleaning a small fish. And after you take out all of the spines and cut out the places where the spines come out, then you cut around the edge of each pad, and it's ready to be cooked in water. We boil the pads with salt for about 20 to 30 minutes. And after that, it's done. We mix the cactus with tomato, onion, and cilantro and then add some lime juice, and that's it."

As if all the unusual individuations of cacti weren't enough, these plants don't even breathe like other flora. They can't, because if they did, then the desert sun would kill them. Without getting too scientific, we might think about it like this: in order to photosynthesize, most plants exchange water and gas with the environment during the daytime, opening tiny holes ("stomata") on their leaves. If cacti did this during the heat of the day, all their water would evaporate, and they would shrivel and die. Instead, cacti open their stomata at night, bring in carbon dioxide, and store the gas as an acid. To photosynthesize, they must wait for the morning sun. Because cacti gradually fill with acids overnight, a morning cactus will taste sour, whereas an evening cactus is sweet. So if you're starving in the desert, and you're willing to risk a bloody fist or two, then you should harvest your cactus feast during late-afternoon hours.

The John James Audubons of the cactus world, the Lewis and Clarks, the Christopher Columbuses, if you will, were Nathaniel L. Britton and Joseph N. Rose, or, more simply, Britton and Rose. In 1919, Britton and Rose published the great seminal work for all cactusdom, The Cactaceae. People who've read The Cactaceae are surely die-hard cactologists.

Jon Rebman owns all four volumes of the Britton and Rose work, as well as dozens of other cactus books besides. Rebman is a taxonomist and is also the curator of botany at the San Diego Natural History Museum.

I went down to the museum to visit Rebman in his element, namely, among thousands of stacks of folders filled with plant specimens. Rebman's been at the museum for over ten years, but cactologists before him began a large cactus collection there, thousands of plants. The museum's plant collection numbers over 165,000 specimens, and it dates back to the 1870s.

In each folder in the collection are cuttings of specimens, photographs, and a few words documenting and identifying a particular species in a particular place at a particular time. Making archival-quality specimens of cacti — cutting, flattening, bathing in alcohol, drying, and gluing multiple segments of spiky stems onto acid-free paper — can be a “painful and bloody experience,” according to Rebman.

But, like Adam in the Garden, Rebman the taxonomist scrupulously collects, catalogs, studies, cross-checks, and, finally, identifies classifying plants, animals, and microorganisms into increasingly broader categories based of what plants exist, what they’re like, what they’re called, and what qualities link or separate them. He must trace lineages and study features. And after months of checking through the annals of plant history, he may find that he has a heretofore anonymous member of the kingdom Plantae; then he’ll land on what seems like an accurate genus and submit the information about the new species to a professional journal for peer review.

“A name should arise from an understanding of the evolution of a species,” Rebman said. “And before you name something, you’d better be certain that it hasn’t been named already.”

Unfortunately, over the years, not everyone has followed this sage advice. For the 2000 or so species of cacti that exist, there are over 12,000 names. This hyper nomenclature is due partly to overzealous early hobbyists but also to the fact that scientists recently began changing names based on how DNA affects ideas of what's related to what.

The species name can come from anywhere: from a distinctive characteristic of the plant, from the place where it was discovered, in honor of someone important, or you might even name a plant after yourself. "But that's a faux pas," Rebman assured me. I suggested that it might be a good idea to name a plant after someone else who names plants. Then that other person might feel obliged to name a plant after you. "That might work," Rebman said laughing.

Rebman has dubbed about ten species in his career — five names accepted by his peers and five names pending — and he's in the process of christening quite a few more. Rebman's personal goal is to name a species a year. We're "far from understanding our biodiversity," he says.

The biodiversity in San Diego County is unmatched in the United States. Rebman told me that 2315 different plant species are native or naturalized in our county. "That's more than many whole states," he said. (Incidentally, a "naturalized" plant is one that, although it may have been brought here by a human being, now reproduces and grows in a natural environment on its own.)

At his home, Rebman has a xeriscape that includes 150 or so cacti and succulents. (That positively succulent word, "xeriscape," means "dry landscape." Rebman's xeriscape comes complete with rocks and sand and nothing that you wouldn't find in a desert.)

At one point, I detected a prickly tone in Rebman's voice as he mentioned cactus hobbyists. What did a scientist think of our typical, average cactus enthusiast? "Today's hobbyists are different from the hobbyists of yesterday," Rebman said. "Most of them are very respectful of habitats and delicate species, and they often take very good pictures of specimens in the field. But hobbyists can also be a problem to rare species. Something that's rare gets a higher value on the market, and then those rare things can get compromised."

Rebman and I took a walk across the street from the museum, into the Balboa Park cactus garden. Now, I'd been to the rose garden on Park Boulevard a half dozen times before I even knew there was a cactus garden just a few yards away. But the cactus garden is a thousand shapes better and more interesting than those more or less uniform roses. Maybe it says more about me than it does about the plants, but the cacti speak to my imagination more clearly than the roses. Roses are fluff and fuzz and bubblegum, unicorns and fairy tales, velveteen and toy balloons. But cacti are drama and truth, philosophy and fortitude, sobriety and severity.

"Only some of the plants you see here are cacti," Rebman said. "But they're all cactus-like. The thing is that, because of convergent evolution, many plants that aren't cacti have grown to look like cacti over time. Their forms have converged. There are lots of plants that, if they weren't in flower, I wouldn't be able to tell whether they were cacti or not."

Rebman began pointing out how certain euphorbias, for instance, have grown spines, waxy skin, and ribs, just like their cactus counterparts, but the euphorbias are from a different part of the plant kingdom and have no areole, so cacti they are not.

"Spines on cacti are like hairs on arms," Rebman told me. The skin where a person has hair "dries last because the hair sets up a barrier to water loss. That's one function that spines serve for a cactus. So the spines set up a gradient — from the high humidity of the plant to the low humidity of the desert — to slow water loss to the environment, controlling the rate of diffusion."

When we came to the chollas in the cactus garden, Rebman raised his voice melodramatically, "Watch out for glochids!" He was only half-kidding. He showed me how chollas have tiny, hairlike, almost invisible spines in between their bigger spines. "Those little hairs are called glochids," he said. "They're far worse than regular spines." He led me over to a fluffy-looking cactus with no spines at all. He said, looks so friendly! They should put a warning sign up. It probably gets people all the time."

Ironical that the friendliest-looking cactus in the garden is actually the meanest. The more I looked at these wonderful plants, the more I couldn't resist falling prey to what, in philosophy and poetry, we call "the pathetic fallacy." That is, I kept imagining human traits for these humble yet prickly plants. I mentioned something about the pathetic fallacy to Rebman, and I was grateful that he didn't laugh at me: he'd never really imagined any humanness for these plants he admired so much, but he could see why I might. The only humanlike trait he added to my sense of cacti was when he told me that "a cactus will take a bullet just like a person, because of the thickness of their skins and all the water in them." Great. So now I could picture a cactus gunshot and bleeding.

Eventually I found myself identifying with cacti in the profoundest way. That is, I pictured not only human traits but my own personal traits (and traits that I wish I had) played out in cactus facts and gestures: the way they had to cling lovingly to the rare thing that sustained them (water); the ways they worked to turn the most stark and uninviting environments into comfortable homes; their witty innovations (on the leaf) and the ways that innovation had rendered them untouchable (covered with spikes); their unwavering silence, as in you'll never hear wind whispering through a cactus.

What hasn't killed cacti has indeed made them stronger and more distinctive and more beautiful as well. We all can only hope for the same rewards through our own adversities. But who among us can manage to be a cactus in the person world? ■

second wind

That day I made quite a few good plays at second and went four-for-four, driving in a couple of runs.

I remember an incident in junior high school that changed my outlook on life. I was a fat kid, going through the changes of leaving old friends behind. Because I was overweight, I had no social life at all, so to occupy my time I got involved in my classes. History was my favorite subject, followed by math. The class I disliked the most was — you guessed it — physical education. I looked ridiculous out there in shorts and a tank top. A lot of people thought so, too, and they let me know about it. I shied away even further so I couldn't hear their remarks that hurt me.

One day in physical education, I suited up to go through our daily routine of running laps before we broke off into teams for the sport of the week. This week was softball and I was looking forward to it because baseball was the only sport I played. Being so big, I had lots of power. My arm had accurate aim, but I lacked a running game, so I guess it all evened out.

Emerging from the locker room, I spotted a group of guys from my class. They were all the super-jock type, the ones we all wanted to be — popular with everyone, especially girls. It's just like how in every group there is always one who stands out as a leader; he's usually the best at everything. Our leader was a muscular, black-haired boy named Joe. Unlike most jock leaders, Joe was modest instead of bragging all the time. And he made it a point never to criticize anyone — a suggestion here and there, but it was up to you to take it.

So the coach sent us down to the other field to run laps. As we got started, I knew I was destined to finish with the back of the pack as I usually did. As Joe passed me he smiled and said, "Come on, Ray, pick up those legs." I don't know what came over me, but I took his advice and started to run all-out. I trailed the jocks by a quarter of a lap all the way around on each lap. It felt good to be out of the back of the pack and actually ahead of someone.

Coming up to the last lap — breathing heavily, feet pounding on the ground, and a red face covered with sweat — I struggled to make it. The end of the lap came within sight and I felt so happy to accomplish what I did.

After finishing, I slowed my pace to a walk so I could catch my breath. Getting ready to go back to the top field, I saw my coach. Knowing what I had just done, I beamed a big, proud smile and said, "Hi." The coach responded with, "What did you do, cut across the field?" I told him I didn't, but my protest was in vain. He sent me to run another lap. I felt crushed. All I did... just to have it destroyed by some words. So I ran the lap with a heavy heart. This time I finished in the back of the pack.

We made our way up to the top field and listened to the coach pick captains for the softball teams. Joe turned out to be one of them, but I was so downhearted it didn't matter. The captains started calling names for their teams. I knew I didn't have to listen for my name because I was normally picked toward the last, like all the other back-of-the-packers. But to my astonishment and everyone else's, I heard my name. I turned around to see if it was true and it was! Joe looked at me and said my name again. I was flabbergasted. I walked over to the team and the thought that I ran for nothing disappeared. Someone had noticed! It paid off!

After the teams were chosen,

Joe asked what position I'd like to play. I said, "Second base," and he replied, "You've got it." That day I made quite a few good plays at second and went four-for-four, driving in a couple of runs. Everyone was amazed, especially my coach. After the game, I received many compliments.

From that day on, I ran the laps with everything I had. I watched what I was eating and I played harder, which resulted in weight loss. Before I knew it, I had shed the old image. I was nominated by people, especially girls. My social life took off!

It all changed because of this event. I tried for something, and someone helped me stay on the right track. But there was one thing I forgot to do, not realizing then what had been the turning point. I'm saying it now: Thank you, Joe, for the helping hand. May your life be filled with the happiness you put back into me after running those hard laps. ■

THE PARROT WAKES THE BABY AND THE BABY WAKES THE PARENTS AND THE PARENTS, THE BABY, AND THE PARROT ALL SQUAWK TOGETHER IN THE NIGHT.

THE EVIDENCE of Her Sorrow

Back when I thought if you could “see” it, you could have it, I pictured myself warmly ensconced in a real California house.

It was adobe, of course, with thick whitewashed walls. Tile floors stretched into unseen rooms, all facing a central patio where there was a fountain, much greenery and bougainvillea. I could hear birds, the fountain’s soft sounds, and some vague background murmuring of what might have been a family. There were no roads. There was no neighborhood. And there were no neighbors.

Well, IF you concede that a hacienda is no more indigenous to Southern California than the transplants that followed (see the Italian villa, the Cape Cod copy, and the imitation ranch — available in Montana Ranch, Taos Ranch, and Fairbanks Ranch), then you could, perhaps, also concede that I achieved a true California house. It's a big concession.

In my personal compromise, the tile floors have become a tiled entry, the splash of the fountain is more likely my neighbor watering pots on his patio, and the thick whitewashed adobe has become three inches of the Pink Panther's finest fluff between my walls and studs, with three more awesome inches to go before reaching my neighbor's wallboard. I live in a condo.

What was mere background and/or absent in my projection has become foreground in the present. There are roads, the I-5 freeway convergence, for instance, and yes, I do have neighbors. All that insulation muffles detail, but it doesn't eliminate divorced lady with two grown daughters. I have met her but not the girls. I went over and introduced myself one afternoon because I knew the police were going to arrest one of her daughters for burgling my house, and I felt rather obligated to tell her first, because we were neighbors. It was an awkward conversation, strained and rambling, but we were able to find the bonds that constitute understanding. Our children had attended the same high school, we were both single, we even had some common acquaintances. Once this base was established, we could approach the problem together.

It seems her daughter and her daughter's boyfriend came down for a short visit. While she was at work, and in broad daylight, they had climbed the fence and entered my place, walking out the front door with my stereo, my guitar, my children's mostly junk jewelry, and my housemate's boxed checks and business stationery. The stereo and guitar were pawned in Pacific Beach

Do you or anyone you know have SCHIZOPHRENIA or SCHIZOAFFECTIVE DISORDER?

Optimum Health Services is currently conducting a research study to find out how two common antipsychotic drugs, Olanzapine and Risperidone, may affect the way the body uses sugar.

Participants should be aged 18 to 65 years with schizophrenia or schizoaffective disorder, and have not been hospitalized for psychiatric reasons in the last three months.

This study does not involve a sugar pill, otherwise known as a placebo, and all the study drugs have been approved by the United States Food and Drug Administration (FDA).

Some symptoms of schizophrenia include:

to cash yet another check. The girl was off and running.

So the mother and I sat in her quiet living room, identical to my quiet living room, and commiserated about the hazards of adolescence, the availability of drugs, the difficulty of single parenthood. And the weather. I believed her when she said she had no idea where her daughter was or how to find her. My belongings were returned, with police assistance. The bank covered the check/money loss. We have not spoken of the event again.

Next to the mother is a grandmother. She is a vivacious woman with a busy social life and a job selling real estate. Her exchanges with me chiefly concern her blond moppet of a granddaughter who has grown in the past several years from a diaper-clad cooer to an active and verbal little girl. Life over there seems to be full.

Next to me is Sam. He was single for years with a divorce behind him of some bitterness, as one tapped into instantly when he stopped long enough to talk. All that is forgotten now because Sam is in love. His temper is sweet. His new wife is young and attractive, and they appear to be in perfect harmony. Though the sounds of their daily life come mostly through the patio, there has been an exception.

One evening, while we were having a small family birthday dinner for my 79-year-old mother, our conversation slowed and then stopped altogether when a dull, rhythmic banging began against the living room wall.

As the thuds grew louder and faster, we glanced at each other in mutual recognition and finished the dinner with laughter. The next time I saw the couple together, I suggested that in order to keep their private moments more private, they move the bed frame a few inches from the wall. Sam has been referred to ever since, privately, as Slammin' Sam, the happy man.

On the end and completing our circle once lived an incredibly handsome family. The father used to sit in the kitchen and play his guitar and sing folk songs to his two young daughters. The mother had the only bountiful garden in our complex. But that was in good times... which ended when this man died in a car accident, creating a beautiful young widow who cried in the night. You could hear the evidence of her sorrow and loneliness through the upstairs bedroom window.

The growing girls turned into teenagers and adopted white face makeup and wore mostly black. It became hard to tell them apart. There were parties and late-night arguments and lots of company. And lots of heavy metal.

There was also an old family friend who dropped by now and then. His presence brought a calmness that had been missing for a long time. His visits became more frequent and lasted longer. One day he moved in and soon there was a wedding. And one late evening sometime later, a new baby was delivered in that same bedroom where the young widow had been so sad.

Three days after the birth, I passed the father on the walkway in front of our units. He had his newborn daughter in his arms and was talking softly to her. I stopped. The father was blissful, his child wide-eyed and silent. "I have her out here," he said, "to show her the night sky and the stars, so she'll know how much more there is to her world than walls and ceilings. We named her Amelia, after Amelia Earhart, in hopes that she'll be healthy and strong and independent."

That starlit walk was about a year ago. The child is now a solid chunk with curly brown hair and a giggle that echoes through our neighborhood during the day, when the rest of us are all at work, and brings a smile when we pass by at dusk.

Unfortunately, the newly formed family is moving out. It would have been nice to watch Amelia grow up, but that is not to be. The parents have been talking of more space and less traffic noise for some time and have finally found an old, run-down place in East County somewhere. It has lots of land and no close neighbors, a dirt-road entrance, and needs lots of work. They can afford it, barely, and they are young and willing and resourceful and very enthusiastic about the potential of the house, which is not adobe but is, no doubt, a real California house just the same.

I asked them if they wouldn't miss the neighborhood a bit, thinking to myself how varied and dramatic their stay here had been, but all they could talk about was the openness and freedom their new life would bring and how they couldn't wait to be off.

Not me, my friend. I like my house. I like the sun in my bedroom in the morning and the cozy feel of my neighbors all living and loving around me. The compromises don't seem very big after all. I think I'll stay. ■

Trailer Monk

PART 2 OF 3

I checked my rear-view mirror. The patrol car was sliding onto the blacktop.

I got enrolled in traffic school in the usual way.

It was a special day. I was heading south on Highway 101, on my way to Irvine where I was to sign papers that would make me the official owner of an Airstream trailer. I was in a good mood, daydreaming of how wonderful, how extraordinary, life would soon be inside my new trailer, when I noticed that in my lane, the fast lane, cars were far ahead. I could barely see them. I checked my rear window. So far behind me was the car at my rear that it appeared the size of a gumball. I looked to my left, out onto the flat, fertile, and utterly anonymous landscape of the Central Valley. It might have been the Sahara, so empty did it seem; I saw not a single human being. Clutched by a sudden, annihilating loneliness that was close to terror, I jammed down hard on the gas.

What was behind me winked into nothingness while in front, as I drew closer, the cars ahead grew to the size of mice, then cats, then dogs. I floored it. Suddenly, at exactly the spot where I happened to be, there came a break in traffic on my right. The gap was as real as a curtain opening on a play — a play of the absurd, like Waiting for Godot. And if Godot never shows up in the play, surely I was acting the role of Estragon, one of the two lead characters in Beckett's drama. I glanced over and tasted instant dry-mouth when I caught sight of Vladimir. He sat in the shade of an overpass, in a black-and-white Highway Patrol car that juttied at an angle, its nose aimed into the traffic like a hound sniffing the air. The deputy wore a wide-brimmed hat, dark aviator glasses, and a black mustache. In a blink of an eye, I not only saw him, and saw that he'd seen me, but knew as well (though I'd never seen one before) that the small megaphone-size object he held, aimed at me, was a radar gun.

My foot jerked back off the gas as if struck by one of those little rubber hammers doctors use to tap on the knee to test reflexes. My stomach was already flopping around on the floor of the truck, inches from my right foot (the same one, no longer occupied with the gas pedal, that was madly pumping the brake). I checked my rear-view mirror. The patrol car was sliding onto the blacktop. I swerved into the right lane and into that bracelet of slower-moving autos, seeking sweet invisibility. I checked. On my left now, the patrol car was closer and gaining. As much as I have ever wanted anything in my life, I wanted that black-and-white GMC anywhere else, but most particularly two car lengths ahead of me and going-going-gone. And then how suddenly, how inevitably, flashing lights washed across my rear window, and a rainbow of red-blue-and-white light smeared my rear-view mirror. Numb, my heart racing, I pulled off the highway. I handled the car well, coming to a stop while a river of bright metal and burning rubber flashed past. I was in a kind of robotic shock, the flip side of hysteria. I turned off the ignition and pulled out my wallet. I retrieved from the glove compartment my pink slip. I waited.

The deputy approached from the passenger side of my truck. I rolled down the window. Neither of those who wait for Godot have last names; printed neatly on the deputy's nametag pinned on the left side of his khaki-brown shirt was the name Meza. In his mirrored aviator sunglasses, I saw my reflection. I was doubled and much reduced.

My notice of violation came in the mail ten days later. I marked the box that indicated my wish to attend traffic school (so as to avoid a rise in my insurance rates), and the next week the postman dropped into my mailbox a twelve-page booklet from the California Traffic Safety Institute. Listed on gray paper recycled to the quality of cheap newsprint were all the traffic schools offered in the state's counties. According to CTSI, it was my responsibility to select a school from the list, telephone and arrange for my enrollment, pay the school fee, and attend the class on the assigned date. The traffic school would notify the Department of Motor Vehicles of my successful completion of the course.

I flipped pages. San Diego County offered classes in Spanish. "Cheap School" out of Alameda Judicial County sounded a tempting no-frills note. I liked that. Many schools promised pizza, but pizza gives me indigestion. By far, in almost every county, the largest number of traffic schools offering a specialty experience went under names like "Lettuce Amuse U Comedy School," "I'll Never Speed Again Comedy Traffic School," and (in a sure-fire mix) "Pizza 4U-Great Comedians." I chose "Comedy for Less" as my traffic school. I'd paid $241 for speeding 82 mph in a 70 mph zone, added to which was an additional administration fee ($22) for the privilege of signing up for a CTSI traffic school, plus the $35 it cost to actually enroll. It can hardly be said, then, that "Comedy for Less" came cheap. But the class met on a Sunday, and that was convenient, and maybe, who knows, it might be fun.

How to put this? It was not fun. It was agony.

The instructor was a blanched and unhealthy-looking septuagenarian afflicted with an angry wife he'd married in the Philip-pines, and three ungrateful children whom (so he shared with the class) he'd sired the three times his wife had allowed him near her. If he was no Chris Rock, neither was he Rodney Dangerfield of "Can I get some respect?" fame. What might have been amusing, if sad, was only embarrassing. There were two dozen of us in his class (ages ranged from 19 to 80 with an even distribution of men and women), and we miscreants could have taken better advantage of our time with Mr. Smith, as I shall call him. But early on, after a tiny alarm went off somewhere on his person and he stopped whatever he was saying to pop a red pill for what he described as his bad ticker, it was more or less down-hill. (He and another elderly driver shared medical horror stories during the ten-minute break before lunch.) He was teaching, he said, because his wife wanted him out of the house on weekends. We were informed that his meager teacher's salary went to supplement his less-than-adequate retirement income.

We met in a cheap motel next to a highway. The room was converted to a classroom by the addition of hardback chairs and metal tables. Mr. Smith's handwritten visual displays, mounted on cardboard years before, were edged with decade-old grime. The videos on the dos and don'ts of safe driving featured blank-faced actors of the kind favored in 1950 sci-fi classics like War of the Worlds. The stupefying documentary voiceovers grew only deadlier after our forty-five minute lunch break. However, in a bid for what he called "truth in advertising," in the last hour of class, Mr. Smith handed out a list of jokes a former student had compiled for him. This joke list was entitled, "Things You Should NEVER Say When Stopped by the Police."

I can't reach my license unless you hold my beer.

I was going to become a cop, but decided to finish high school.

Gee, that gut sure doesn't inspire confidence.

Months before, I'd read an ad in the online "Airstream Newsletter" in which a man named Rebel wrote that he was searching for a 25-foot 2005 trailer, used but in good condition. He offered $35,000 (more than $15,000 less than the manufacturer's suggested price). I wrote and asked if his name were really Rebel and if his ad had paid off. He wrote back: yes to both questions.

"I got exactly what I wanted and it's beautiful!" he said. "You should try the same thing. It can't hurt."

In my ad, I offered the same figure of $35,000 for a 2005 trailer in good condition. Eventually, Rebel would indirectly point me to the dealer who would give me the best price, and from whom I would buy my trailer, but after two months with not one bite I decided to go shopping.

The Airstream dealership closest to my home sits in a charmless suburban sprawl. I'd earlier called and spoken to a gentleman who was cordial and informative, but he was out of the office the day I visited the lot. In his place was Shane, a man of about thirty who may have played a decent game of high school basketball and looked surely as if he never intended to get over it. He referred to the absent salesman as his partner, but I guessed the "partner" was actually his father-in-law, and that it was he who owned the dealership. Shane, the basketball star, had married the blonde high school cheerleader and was working for her daddy. How else to explain that in the face of a sale of a big-bucks item, Shane just pointed. Out in the lot, amid a host of RVs, the half-dozen

The 19-foot Bambi, as precious as a jewel, was the same model I'd fallen in love with at the museum two years before. Unfortunately, it was clearly too small for fulltime living. There were many larger trailers, and I visited them all; but the next size up from a Bambi, the 25-footer, was as large as could fit on the Vajrapani site.

"Sorry," said Shane, behind a desk whose blunt edges and walnut wood gleamed under a thick coat of polyurethane, "but that's the only one I don't carry. "Why not go for something bigger?"

I explained again that the space where I meant to park the trailer was a little more than 30 feet. I needed a 25-foot trailer. NO other size would do, but this exactitude seemed to annoy Shane. He repeated that he didn't have a 25-footer, then threw at me the name of another dealer who did.

"But he's a hundred miles from here," he said, and then, seeming to think better of the matter, added, "If you're really interested, I can have one sent here."

I asked how long would it take. He thought maybe a week to ten days. I said I did not want to wait that long.

"Well, like I said, the dealership is a hundred miles away." (Airstream places strict limits on the number of its dealerships.) "You can always try them."

At home that same afternoon, I made a long-distance phone call. The receptionist at the RV Center gave me over to someone who introduced himself as Henry and who was pretty sure that there was a 25-foot Airstream International on the lot. "Just let me go outside and look. Can you hold the line?" I said I could, and heard him lay the telephone down.

"Yes, we have one available," he said when he returned. "Just one."

next day. Henry said that'd be fine.

I assumed that he worked on commission. "I'll ask for you," I said.

"And I'll keep a look-out for you."

It was a long drive that ended abruptly in a dusty hard-scrabble little town-ship. I drove onto the lot where were jammed more than a hundred new RVs, all models and makes. Some were being hosed down, others were under inspection by prospective buyers. All the activity reminded me of a scene from the western film Red River. Montgomery Clift has got his herd to market after having gone against the wishes of his guardian, John Wayne, who is out to kill him. "They sure are a pretty sight," one of the actors says, gazing at the sea of lowing cattle. I might have said the same thing about those trailers, whose combined value had to be in the neighborhood of, say, $70 million, easy. I was certain that so large an inventory assured cheaper prices.

"This is where I buy my trailer," I told myself.

A woman's voice, amplified by loudspeaker, ordered Tom to "pick up, pick up." I parked and stepped out of my truck. A murmur moved through the gallery of men and women sitting on the shaded veranda of the main building. There were nearly a dozen of them, some middle-aged, and all wearing green short-sleeved shirts and tan Bermuda shorts. Shane's office had been ugly and tasteless. This murmuring gallery offered a wall of interdiction that was also ugly, but hardly bland. It was as if I'd colored my skin, shaved my head, and chosen monk's robes only for the chance to insult these people's tastes and affront their imaginations. That group of salespeople radiated an enmity so real that I felt its heat.

A man stepped from the veranda and into the sun. I said that I had an appointment with Henry. The man turned and yelled at that staring gallery. "Henry!!" A figure emerged from the shadows.

"I'm Henry," he said, introducing himself as Portuguese.

I stuck out my hand and he took it. Shorter than me, Henry was plump and middle-aged, with kindly eyes and a sad smile. I introduced myself and reminded him that I had an appointment to view a 25-foot Airstream International. "Oh, yes!" he said, and pointed me to the trailer. "I unlocked it earlier."

But when we tried the door, it was not unlocked. Henry told me to hold on just a minute and ran off in search of the key.

Sorry Officer, I didn't realize my radar detector wasn't plugged in.

This was to be another two-role performance. It is called Good Cop, Bad Cop. Henry, a bartender for 28 years, was well rehearsed for his part. Before accepting the commission-rich (but salary-poor) job of selling recreational vehicles, he'd served so many drinks and listened to so many hard-luck stories that, just as some women sprout mustaches, he'd grown a slightly doleful aspect, a maternal gaze powerful at drawing forth the longest-held secrets. In my case Henry did not have to wait long. He returned with the key, we stepped inside the trailer, I sat down in the cramped dining area, and I spilled my guts out. I talked about my love of the Airstream trail-

"If someone had told me that I would be biking to work and loving it, I never would have believed the person."

—Marcus Pless

Losing Record: 125 Pounds

When you've got this kind of losing record, you know you're a winner.

At 320 pounds, Marcus Pless knew he had to take action. After careful research, he determined that Alvarado was the "gold standard" for weight loss surgery. Four years later, he's logging more than 4,000 miles a year on his bike, and has left his high blood pressure and sleep apnea in the dust.

If you or someone you love is 100 pounds or more overweight, Alvarado Hospital's surgical weight-loss program may be a winning option.

ers, about my move to a Bud-dhist retreat center, about Shane and how he'd dismissed me, and how relieved I was to find someone like him, Henry, from whom I was sure I was going to buy my trailer.

"When you told me you'd unlocked it earlier, preparing for my visit, I knew that you were my man. Of course," I added, "I want the best deal." I pointed to the sheet taped to the table where was listed the standard features of this trailer and the retail price. "You're asking almost $2000 more than Shane's dealership."

"So how much do you want to pay?"

I admired his directness. Rebel, my Internet friend, had gotten a nearly new Airstream for $35,000, I said. That figure, I explained, was my benchmark; but at the barest hesitation on Henry's part, no more than a glance to the side, I upped my price by $4000. I suggested that $39,000 was a good place to work from. Henry promised to show any offer I made to his accountant people, but they were the final arbiters. He assured me that any reasonable offer would be considered, "but between you and me, I can tell you they're going to laugh me out of the office with that figure." His eyes were the same warm honey-brown hue as Jim Beam whiskey.

In the end, I agreed to open negotiations with a figure of $43,000. "But tell your people that I'm not happy with this and that I'm still going to shop around." With a promise that he would, Henry took my offer, plus my driver's license (which he needed, he said, to run through the Department of Motor Vehicles) into the office. He was back in ten minutes. Sweating a little from the heat, he apologized and reported what he'd been told (supposedly), that the figure was too low to even consider. He spoke as if he were, himself, in pain, as if it were his money that he was spending.

Forty-five thousand, I said. "But that's out the door. No add-on costs."

He seemed impressed that I knew the lingo like "out the door" and "add-on costs," phrases which I'd picked up from Rebel over the course of a half-dozen

e-mails. Henry smiled. "Why don't you come inside with me?" he said.

I followed him across the yard and into the office, a set of small rooms joined together in what was made to look like an oversized pre-fab log cabin. The blasting air-conditioner made the world cool, wonderfully habitable, and I felt good. Outside, people under glaring sunlight were stepping in and out of trailers, while I knew exactly what I wanted and was ready to pay for it. Behind the closed door at my back, groups moved heavily down the corridor. It was noisy with floorboards squeaking under feet, but I caught more than one salesman's voice. They were always embroidered with a

So, Officer, uh, are you on the take, or what?

He knocked and entered. It was hard to do, but Henry looked at once absolutely distressed and supremely hopeful. My heart sank even as it was buoyed.

"What did they say?"

The accountant, he said, had checked figures and had come up with something. "I told him you might not like it, but I think it's a place at least where we can start from." He showed me the paper.

of the page, to the figure that remained well over $51,000. I climbed back up the page and did my arithmetic to see how much less this was than the original quote.

Three hundred dollars!

In true bargaining, there is one rule of which parties do not speak but agree by which to play. It is called give-and-take, and no matter how much at loggerheads all parties are, there must never be lost the sense of give-and-take. I had offered a fair price for the trailer — much more than I wanted to pay — and in a business where, clearly, there was an inventory worth millions of dollars, they'd given me a break of $300.

"This is an insult!" I sounded positively Victorian.

Henry saw at once that the hand had not been played well, and tried for immediate damage control. Let's talk about it, he soothed. But I was not mad at him. (If the game is played well, the Good Cop is almost invisible. It is the Bad Cop who takes center stage. It is a perfect setup — when it works.) My umbrage was directed to an unseen accountant, someone in a back room.

"I want my license," I said. "Please give me my license."

"I don't have it. It's in back on my behalf, and he did return; and again there was no shift in the price and again he was without my license. I said that I could not leave without my license and that I wanted to go. I raised my voice. Good Cop left the room, and two minutes later Bad Cop entered. We shook hands. He said his name was Kevin, and that Henry, who was a new person on their sales team, had the other room."

It was hard controlling my voice. "Well, then please get it. I want to leave."

"Are you sure you don't want to think about this? Let me go back and speak with the numbers people..."

I told him that I wanted my license and that I was not making another offer. In the end, I did let him go perhaps not given me a full picture.

In his early 40s, Kevin was as short as Henry, but ten years younger, 60 pounds lighter, and he looked as if he'd lived a life in which many of his expectations had been met simply because he'd made sure of it. He was a bantamweight fighter, someone who knew what to do in a barroom brawl, and he thought it was to his benefit to show me that he knew how to pull his punches and when to deliver. I felt a stab of actual fear.

"With the Airstream line, the manufacturer gives us a very small window for negotiation," he said.

I admit that I cannot fight, but I know how to pick up a chair and throw it. So I am not altogether useless. "You mean wiggle room?"

"Yes, wiggle room." His smile was thin, but I did not smile at all. I had the advantage: I no longer cared about owning the trailer. I took my seat again. How, I asked, on an item that cost over $50,000, could he drop down by only $300? "Let's not look back," Kevin urged. "Tell me how can we get you into your Airstream. That's what we're here for, to get our customers into their trailers."

In the give-and-take of bargaining, one must get a quick fix on the pride point of each party. Used to bartending drunks, Henry was perhaps taken in by the red skirt and the easy confession. Or maybe he was just dumb. Kevin would not have misjudged and misrepresented me. He might have thought that I was a sissy boy but not a creampuff.

"I want my license," I said. Kevin slid it across the table to me. I don't want it, he said and smiled. Bad-Cop - now - Good - Cop explained briefly (and clearly) the limits that Thor Industries, who manufactured the Airstream, placed on their dealers, but when all was said, I could not believe that the dealership's margin of profit was just three hundred dollars. Kevin turned snappish. "Ignore that figure," he said.

"The weekend is coming." He looked out the window. "That's the only 25-foot Airstream on the lot. You see all the people here. Someone is likely to buy your trailer. What can we do to make sure that doesn't happen?"

A little for you and a little for me seemed fair, I said, but I'd been bitch-slapped and Kevin (at least with me) was not prepared to kiss the hurt and make it feel better. As much as it was for me, for him it was personal. He did not like me.

Henry walked me to my truck and gave me his card. Kevin stood off away.

"Do you want me to try that early figure for you, the 'out the door' figure?" Henry spoke sotto voce, but by now I knew it was a game to get me back inside, where he and Kevin would again play ping-pong with me as the ball. Henry was not on salary like Kevin and needed the sale more. I backed out of the lot and into the street. Kevin stared.

Didn't I see you get your butt kicked on Cops?"

* * *

I called Shane. I'd been to the dealership he'd mentioned, I'd said, and asked how much he could better his own asking price on a 25-footer. He called back 20 minutes later.

"How does forty-seven five sound?"

I said it sounded pretty good and that I'd call back the next day, but when I went online that evening, Rebel was there with news. His father-in-law, he wrote, had been in the market for a trailer and worked with a guy named Troy in Irvine. "He didn't buy there, but he liked the guy."

I e-mailed Rebel's father-in-law and got the particulars back within the hour. The next morning I called Southwest Coaches and spoke with Troy Bailey.

"You mean I only have to do better than forty-seven five?" he asked.

I said that he should give me a price that would make me want to buy one of his trailers.

He promised to get back to me in two days. When we next spoke, he sounded a jubilant note. "I just got through talking to my boss," he said, and offered the Airstream at a price that, after some quick subtraction, finally gave me the semblance of a deal (the trailer being sight unseen, of course) and him a sale. Troy took my credit card information by phone, a non-refundable deposit of $2000, and a promise that I would complete the deal in Irvine in ten days. Henry called and left a message. I called Shane back, thanked him, and said I was buying elsewhere.

And elsewhere, which is to say Irvine, was where I was speeding to when Deputy Meza pulled me over. I was on my way to complete the sale of my Airstream trailer, and to see it for the first time.

Officer, you're not going to check my trunk, are you?

At the "Comedy for Less" traffic school, I was reminded of speed laws, traffic signs, the protocol for driving behind a school bus, and more. I had broken the law and attending the school meant my insurance would not be raised, and so I was grateful. But the eight long hours of that sunny summer Sunday, the 480 minutes, the 28,800 seconds, drained so slowly from the hourglass. For it was dampened with our tears. If time lived is always time lost, blessedly we are seldom aware that the loss is happening right now. At "Comedy for Less" you knew. That was the real torture.

To end the class, our teacher chose one piece of rare and particular near-uselessness. From his moving vehicle, said Mr. Smith, one may legally dispose of just two things. Did anyone know what these were? No one did.

"Clean water and chicken feathers," he said, and crowded. ■

A LAWYER'S JOHN WAYNE

AVID CASEY WAKES UP SUDDENLY. He points his finger at his son. “I’m going to sue you. I’m being held here against my will. Call 911. I want my son!”

David, Jr., had thought he was losing him this time. His dad, David Casey, Sr. The guy who’d inspired him to become a lawyer; this hero of the under-represented — victims of accidents and corporate carelessness. The guy who’d started it all and went on to become president of the California Bar was lying in a San Diego hospital in a state of delirium.

And just when the firm he created was having its most stunning success. Earlier this year, Casey Gerry Casey & Westbrook won an incredible $5 billion from Exxon on behalf of a thousand Alaskan fishermen affected by the ’89 Exxon Valdez oil spill, part of the largest payout ever in a lawsuit. On July 28, David, Jr., was just back from New York, where he learned he’d won $3 million in a personal injury case and $18.5 million in an asbestos suit — a career record — only to find his old man and mentor at death’s door.

The news makes his father smile. It’s a helluva lot more than he ever won in court. When he was starting out, he’d have been happy to win 50 bucks. But on the other hand, the whole notion of personal injury, sticking up for the little guy, was Casey, Sr.’s idea. It’s what he’d fought for all these years in San Diego, all the result of a decision he made back in 1944, pawing in the water one night, clinging to a life raft in the Pacific...

“I was going to die. I knew that. The Japanese had left for the night, but tomorrow they were coming back.” It’s a couple of weeks before Casey, Sr.’s medical crisis. He’s talking to me in the summerhouse of his lush La Jolla garden, which looks over a valley to Joan Kroc’s estate. There’s still a flash of those Errol Flynn good looks that wowed juries 50 years ago: the pencil-thin mustache, the piercing eyes.

“We were right outside Okinawa. We were hit by the kamikazes, then we were surrounded by the whole Japanese fleet. We had seven little carriers, converted oil tankers, and I think 11 small destroyer escorts. The Japs came in with their big guns and their big battleships and their big cruisers, and the aircraft carriers surrounded us, and when night came, none of our ships had any firepower left. And we figured they’d be back in the morning. Our ship, the Santee, a light carrier, was hit by a kamikaze and two torpedoes. I was knocked over into the water. Out of 3000 people aboard ship, we lost half of them.

David Casey, Sr., downtown San Diego, c. 1963

"I remember holding on to the side of the raft and thinking, 'If I ever get home, the first thing I'm going to do is leave St. Louis — where I'd grown up — and come out to La Jolla.' If I had kids, I wanted them to live a good life."

The Santee was disabled, but it didn't sink. Casey was eventually hauled back aboard to await the return of the Japanese fleet.

"But next morning when we woke up — and we never thought we'd wake up — they'd all gone on to meet [U.S. Admiral] Halsey at Surabaya Straits. We went off for repairs. I survived the war. I went back to St. Louis, and I realized for sure this was not the place where I wanted to live."

David Casey had a law degree from before the war. He could have joined his brother as partner in his St. Louis law firm. But that night in the water was fresh in his mind. He was going to make it "out west," on his own.

"I came with the $100 mustering-out pay they gave you. That was it. I found a house in Pacific Beach to rent for $28 a month. I shared an office with a retired policeman, and I paid $15 a month for that. I was the only lawyer in Pacific Beach. And this retired cop, his friends would come by, and I got to know a lot of policemen and did some work for them, and finally I was made attorney for the San Diego Police Officers Association.

"I began trying cases right after I came to San Diego. And I really didn't know how to try cases. But by the time a year was up, I found out how to try cases."

Still, things were tough, until one of the policemen Casey got to know wanted to retire and go into business as a bail bondsman.

"So I did the work for him to get him in as a bail bondsman, Doyle Bail Bonds — it's still in business. I would go by there in the morning, and he would have maybe four or five sailors who'd been arrested for driving while drunk. And they left $100 with him for bail and to pay the fine. These guys were just about to leave San Diego. So I would take over their cases and go down in the morning and appear for them before Judge Brennan — Judge John Brennan — at the old police station on Harbor Drive. And I would appear on behalf of these fellows and plead them to maybe drunk driving or something else. He'd reduce it. The fine would usually be $50 that Brennan would give, and I would have their other $50 as my fee. That really got me started on getting some criminal cases. And I ended up getting a lot of criminal cases. I was in trial all the time. I learned to think on my feet, quick.

"When I came into San Diego, there were between 250 and 300 lawyers — now there are 6000! They weren't busy, but as the sailors came back, there were divorce actions and things like that. They got a little busier. But there were no big firms and nobody who really tried cases. Those who did used the old-fashioned manner. I remember this one guy, Charlie Crouch. He'd stand up in court in a frock coat, striped pants, and one of these ascot ties that you wear with tacks."

But the farther out of town you got, the more tacked together justice became — paradise for a fiery Irish think-on-your-feet attorney like Casey.

"I want a jury, judge," Casey said one day in 1949 up in Ramona.

The judge—a justice of the peace — wasn't even a lawyer. Casey was defending a guy accused of shooting a deer out of season.

The judge looked across at the bailiff. "Bailiff, I want you to go out and find 12 people to sit down here as jurors. Right now."

"And he did," says Casey. "Plucked them right off the sidewalk. And we tried the case. I was able to prove that nobody actually saw my man shoot the deer. Sure, they found him near the deer, they found the deer dead, but they weren't able to prove that he'd shot the deer. Trial took one day. 'Course, you couldn't do that now. There'd be months of depositions, litigation over discovery, what's admissible, a fortune in lawyers' fees..."

He thinks for a moment. He grins. "My guy probably did shoot the deer, but I didn't have to put him on the stand. Sort of like O.J. Simpson."

But Casey's main business was as a plaintiff's attorney, fighting for victims of accidents. Not a popular nor prestigious beat for San Diego lawyers — or with San Diego jurors.

"San Diego was known as a place where you could not get a very good verdict," Casey says. "It was a place where people came to retire. And usually they didn't have very much money, and they lived on a static income. And I'm talking mostly about admirals and generals and people like that. Those were the kind of people you got on your jury. And they were cheap!

"I would have to stand up and try to figure out different ways to get a jury to respond in damages. Because as a rule they did not. The death of a child four years of age, they figured $1000 for each year of his short life: $4000. So I would get up on a death case, and I'd put a little passion in it: Your honor! They pay $50,000 or $100,000 a year for a baseball player. They pay $200,000 for a painting by Michelangelo. They have no hesitation putting a value of $100,000 on a Stradivarius violin. Now my client is broken. He's not a Stradivarius violin, but he's a real live person who's entitled to proper damages. At least as much as a piece of wood with a couple of strings on it."

"Well, that was a start on how to try cases in a dramatic way. They were not being tried in a dramatic way before me. There were no good trial lawyers in San Diego. But they became competitive as I became competitive. I got them going.

Painless Laser Treatments

Because they would have to come back with comments. If I expressed a comment about a violin, they'd have to come back with something."

* * *

"Dad had a fervor about him," says David Casey, Jr. The younger Casey is in many ways the direct opposite of his father — he's slim, sandy-haired, compact, distinctly yuppie. Tolerant rather than fiery. "Emotion would well up in his voice, and he would speak with a great deal of feeling. Real caring. He was extremely aggressive. If it meant that tears would flow from his eyes, tears would flow from his eyes."

"He was a lawyer's John Wayne," says Ed Butler, a retired Court of Appeal's judge. "If Casey pulled a [verbal] gun on you in court, you were dead. He always did his homework. He pounded the pavement. He'd go see accident sites. It takes a person who can take risks to work on a contingency-fee basis. You have to put up the up-front cost. That can be substantial. A lot of people don't have the stomach for it. When you hit big, it's very good, but when you strike out, it hurts.

"David is a little hard of hearing, more so now than then, but he had a way of leaning toward a witness. The witness would utter something that was quite devastating, and David would cup his hand behind his ear and lean forward at the witness stand and say, 'What was that, sir?' And the guy would repeat it in a louder voice, so the jury heard it twice.

"And he would ask a question, and he would seem to be fumbling for a word. And the word would be a fairly common word, but he couldn't quite get it out. And by the time he was [into] a trial, the jury had such empathy with him, they would frequently blurt out the word that he was groping for from the jury box.

"He's from St. Louis, which doesn't make him Southern, but he had a nice gentle way. He'd put out the dumb country-boy thing, wisps of hay sticking out of his hair, bit of mud on his boots, put his hands in his pockets, and if he had calluses he would snap them. He came across that way. He had a great ability to simplify what seemed to be a complex issue and bring it right down to where we all live. That was his technique and modus operandi in court, and it worked very well. He was gentle like a fox — in sheep's clothing."

Legend says Judge Brennan called the ginger-haired Casey the "Red Fox." Perhaps that name came after Casey's "Shaky Courthouse" victory.

One day 25 years ago, he was walking to the old courthouse on Broadway with a young client accused of driving drunk. The building was due for earthquake retrofiting. Halfway across the lawn in front of the main entrance, they were confronted by a new sign stuck in the turf: "Condemned Building."

"So my client says, 'What does that mean?'"

Casey senses an opportunity. "I said, 'Well they've got a penal code underneath. Let me go read it.' I bend down. I read the penal code. The penal code said that anyone who entered a condemned building was guilty of an infraction of this particular penal code.

"So I read it over, and I told my client, 'Stay outside.' And I went in to Judge Toothacre's court, where the case was to be tried. And the judge said, 'Mr. Casey, are you ready to try this case before a jury?'"

"I said, 'Yes, your honor, I am.'"

"Well, where's your client?"

"Well, my client's outside, your honor, on the front lawn."

"He said, 'Why isn't he here with you?'"

"I said, 'Look, judge, let me read this to you. "Anyone who enters into a condemned building is guilty of a misdemeanor."'"

"And he said, 'Well, what does this have to do with this case?' And I said, 'My client is accused of driving while drunk. A misdemeanor. And I don't want him to be accused of another crime. So he doesn't have to come into this building."

"The judge said, 'Let me read that.'"

"And he read it. He said, 'I guess you're right. I'll send you down to Judge Brennon. His building is not condemned.'"

"So we went down to Judge Brennon in his small court in the old Spanish police station. Told him that Judge Toothacre had sent me down there. I said, 'I'm ready to try the case, but I want a jury.' And Brennon said, 'We have no provisions for a jury down here. So you can't try him with a jury. You go back and tell Toothacre that I can't try it down here.'"

"So I went back and told Toothacre. And he said, 'What are we going to do?' I said, 'Well, that's not my problem, judge. I'm ready to try this case on the front lawn if you want to.'"

Casey was starting to make his way. "He was handsome and dynamic," says his first wife, Alberta, "and intelligent. He was a brilliant man. He had a lot of ambition and get up and go. That's what attracted me to him. He was excellent at personal injury. I'd always wanted to sneak into court and hear him perform because I'd heard how good he was. But the one time I did, the whole court stopped, and David introduced me to the judge, the court — in those days it was different. I never went back! I was embarrassed.

"It was a wonderful time because people were so glad to get the war over with," Mrs. Casey continues. "We were so happy about that, and it was all uphill. We didn't mind that; we'd already been through the poverty and putting up with the things we'd had to endure over those hard years. This was all bonus. Everything was turning out on the positive side.

"We started off in a dump of an apartment in Mission Beach but then moved up to La Jolla. It was a quiet village then. The air was clean. You could hear the coyotes howl in the hills... Then suddenly I had no husband at home. I found out he was playing the lead in a play, The Man Who Came to Dinner [at the La Jolla Community Players], and I think he did that because he wanted to become part of the community, wanted to make a name for himself. He was a very good actor. That's when he met Neil Morgan."

It was a friendship made in heaven for Casey — at least partly because Morgan meant access to the press.

"Casey became known among defendants' lawyers as an 'ambulance chaser' — before that craft had been honed to such a fine polish as it was later by Melvin Belli and others," says the Union-Tribune's Morgan. "He was a very charming, handsome, aggressive young rogue with all the Irish attributes — and clearly intending to make an impact in the conservative San Diego legal world as a plaintiff's attorney. That was a phenomenon then. And yes, he was constantly feeding items to me. He was a pioneer in that too."

Casey fired his wife's maid outright the night she cooked asparagus and threw away the wrong ends..."

Item (date illegible): "Alberta Casey plopped her baby son on the scales when she visited her La Jolla butcher, and the needle showed 28 pounds. Next day at the doctor's office, the kid weighed only 26 pounds. Thereupon she changed butchers..."

Item, 4/22/55: "David Casey, whose name is still carried through a law firm in the St. Louis telephone directory...saw a divorce client who was greatly disturbed. 'My husband is back in St. Louis and says he's got a lawyer who tells him he can really give us trouble. Funny coincidence, his name is the same as yours!' Casey figures the husband picked a name from a phone book to try to bluff his wife..."

"Yes, I used Casey a lot," says Morgan. "He made himself a very good friend of newspaper people and radio people — this was pre-television — and he always anticipated things that would be interesting to us and made sure to make them interesting to us, and therefore he got more publicity at a time lawyers didn't believe it was ethical to use the media in that way. He very quickly became the best-known plaintiff's attorney and therefore became a target of the attorneys who represented the insurance industry. The 'ambulance-chaser' tag stuck pretty well, and I think they were responsible for that phrase."

"He certainly pounded the pavements," confirms Judge Butler. "And he worked and he marketed. Got his name out. Talked to the clerks of the court, talked to ambulance drivers. The Defense Bar of San Diego had some...disapproval. And they tried to get him in difficulty with the state bar. They tried to get him for 'running and capping' — the old English practice of paying people to bring cases to you. Like, if you're standing on a corner and you see a pedestrian hit, you'd rush right over and hand him my card, and I'd reimburse you for that. That's what the bar charged him with, but they didn't get anyplace. I don't think he was ever charged."

Casey is especially bitter about this episode. "This was a lawyer — James Archer. He was with Gray Cary Ames. I tried a couple of cases against this lawyer, and I beat him. One particular case was a crossing case, where a car had been hit at a railroad crossing. And Archer said, 'I've never lost one of these cases in my life.' But I beat him on that case. Next thing I know, I begin getting calls from some of the people that I had represented. The state bar was investigating me because this attorney indicated that I had been soliciting cases! They came up with nothing. But I did receive a call from an attorney, John Holt. Holt told me that Archer was trying to get me disbarred. From that moment on, I never settled a case with James Archer. I tried every single case. I refused to settle cases with him.

"David Casey survived," says Judge Butler. "He persevered through all of that. He had the feeling then, which has been proven since, that [ordinary] people needed lawyers, and the only way to let them know he was a lawyer was to let them know he was a lawyer. And when people were injured, the word would go around that David Casey was the person to see. The Defense Bar thought that he was out 'ambulance-chasing.'"

"They also were enormously unhappy with him because he had a marvelous way with juries. He consistently got good verdicts against the insurance carriers. So David was not very popular with the Defense Bar at that time, the late '50s."

"I think that's one reason why David was so pleased later to become president of the California Bar [in 1973]," says Morgan. "It was a nice opportunity to say, 'Stick it.'"

Casey confirms the feeling. "I was for the little guy," he says. "Insurance attorneys had a free ride in San Diego till I came along."

Despite all this, Casey can't help comparing being a lawyer now to being a lawyer then.

"Then," he says, "it was fun. You had to think on your feet. This happened often — one day I went before a judge with the defense lawyer to work out a timetable.

"So the judge says, 'How much time do you need?'"

"I said, 'Four days.'"

"The other side said, 'Four days.'"

"And the judge said,

"We'll give you one day. Mr. Casey, you start right now, we'll stay here till tonight, till the case is over with.' And we got the case tried in one day. Tell that to O.J.'s lawyers!"

"That O.J. Simpson case — back in my time, if that were being tried, at the very longest it would go one week — at the very longest!"

On the other hand, things were a lot more casual back then. Judge Brennan, for instance, was known to shoot from the hip and get through a prodigious number of cases each day. At least up to lunchtime.

"Usually," says Eugene

Horton, a San Diego attorney since 1941 who knew Casey and Brennan, "Judge Brennan would have a couple of belts at lunch as well as his lunch. And in the afternoon session he'd be kind of sleepy. And here would be the prosecutor, and they'd put these guys on for traffic violations or drunk driving. Well, one day the judge had dozed off, and then he came to, and he said, 'I've heard enough. Find you guilty. Ten days in jail!'"

"And the prosecutor said, 'But Judge Brennan — this man is only a witness.'"

"He said, 'I don't care. Send him to jail!'"

"Brennon did epitomize that time. First of all, he was a good Democrat and a good politician. And somewhere along the line he got on the bench, and I've forgotten just how. But he had a good relationship with all the union fellows in town. They respected him and he respected them. And a lot of these union agents would go down there with a fistful of tickets their drivers got, particularly the longshoremen, and they'd go into Judge Brennan's chambers, and they'd work things out. Minor traffic violations: the worst ones would be 502s, DUI — not so serious an offense in those days. The union guy would say, 'Here are the facts on the back of this case,' and he and the judge would confer, and the judge would say, 'I think he ought to pay a fine of so much.' He was a gregarious, outgoing sort of guy. He'd put bad guys on the train out of town. A regular Judge Bean, he was.

"That was probably the most casual court in town. It was a lot smaller town than it is now. That was the flavor of the times David Casey grew up in. Each judge was a personality. They'd usually know counsel on both sides; maybe they'd practiced [with them]. Just the way things were handled by all parties, the counsel and the judge — there was this background of friendliness and courtesy and respect. We don't have so much of that anymore.

"I think there was a lot more fun in practicing law in the olden days. Things were handled on a kind of small-town basis, including the practice of law. It was pretty informal. You tried the lawsuits, and there was not so much in-depth pursuance of victory. I think there was more of an effort to just get at the truth and enjoy the presentation of the lawsuit in the case and let the chips fall where they may. The adversarial aspect of it wasn't so highly pursued."

You also did your own research. "Even before we were married," says Alberta Casey, "we'd be going along a road, David would be looking for skid marks. That was part of his life. It didn't seem to bother him like it bothered me. He was always doing his own investigations of crashes."

Or boning up on blood types in a day when scientific evidence was much less sophisticated...

It's 1950. A woman goes into the hospital for a minor operation and dies there.

"I learned all about blood in that case," says Casey, sitting back at his desk, stacked high with memorabilia. Outside in the garden, a waterfall gurgles the pool he swims in daily. "I represented [the victim's] relatives. The other side brought in doctors. As a matter of fact, [one was] the head of Mercy Hospital — a hematologist. And he testified that it didn't make any difference what kind of transfusion of blood this lady had received. That if she did receive a different type of blood, it wouldn't have made any difference.

"So I had been doing a lot of reading on blood. And I took this book that I had been reading — it was written by a Mayo Clinic guy — and I said, 'Doctor, you studied where? At Mayo Clinic?'"

"Yes, I did."

"And that's where you got your hematology degree?"

"Yes, it was."

"And what doctor did you study under? And he gave me the name. And I said, 'Well, I have his book here. Have you read this book — from cover to cover?'"

"Yes, sir."

"Is there anything about it that you disagree with?"

"No, sir!"

"So I opened the book at a particular page. I said, 'Doctor, read to the jury what it says here.'"

"The doctor started reading and his face got red because it said, 'Care must be taken to see that the patient receives the right type blood. If the wrong type blood is given, it can cause the death of the patient.'"

"I said, 'Well, doctor, does this make any difference to your...'"

"Well, even if he said it, I don't agree with it."

"Then I said to him, 'Doctor, I have here what they call a dog tag. This is what I wore during the war. And will you read to the jury what it says on there?'"

"And he read my name and my number. Then I said, 'What does it say under there?' He says, 'There's a letter C.'"

I said, 'What does that refer to?' He said, 'That is a kind of blood that you should be given if something happens to you.'

"I said, 'And they do this with all the soldiers and all the sailors and all the Marines?'"

"He said, 'Yes.'"

"I said, 'Tell the jury why.'"

"Well, again his face got very red. I got the biggest verdict ever secured in San Diego on a woman's death: $25,000. At the time, that was something."

The session has become too much for Casey, Sr. He excuses himself to go to the bathroom — a result of the medication he was taking. Casey, Jr., and I shuffle through old photos — Dad aboard the Santee, Dad in a play, a letter to Casey from Adlai Stevenson soliciting his support against Ike in 1956 (too late: Casey had already started a "Democrats for Ike" campaign). Casey, Sr., returns. He doesn't want to give up the conversation. It's typical of him, says his son. From the start of his career, Casey, Sr., always worked nonstop, days and nights. Both father and his son admit that Dad became a stranger to his children.

"I had to make an effort always to keep my name before the public," Casey, Sr., says. "Every way I could. I was probably at one time in 20 different organizations; I was secretary of most of them. Every time I got an opportunity to try a case that would get me some publicity, I would do it, because lawyers were not allowed to advertise at that time. You had to keep your name before the public and let them know that you're a lawyer."

It turns out there was more than just a work ethic at play.

"I had a childhood where my dad, although he was a lawyer, he was hard of hearing — the Casey Curse — so that he could not try lawsuits after he was about 35, and at the time we were in the midst of this terrible Depression. Our home in St. Louis was mortgaged, we were thrown out of our house. We had to get another place to live. We would walk — Dad, with eight kids — to church over a mile in the morning, rather than spend a dime or a nickel to ride on the streetcar, which went near our house."

"Dad might have an occasional case where he got a good verdict, and he would buy a fur coat for my mother, he'd buy velvet suits for all the boys, he'd buy little fur coats for the girls, and he'd buy an automobile if he could. Three months after he got this big verdict, we'd be broke, and we couldn't pay for coal for our furnace. So we had buckets, and my brothers, Jack, Brew, and I, we'd walk along the railroad tracks, pick up the coal that fell off the trains, and fill up the buckets, bring it back, and fill up the coal bin."

stores. I know, because I used to work there. My brother and I, when we got out of school at three o'clock, we would run home and go to a Kroger's store — it was part of the chain — and work there till nine o'clock. From four till nine every day, and on Saturday we'd get there at six o'clock in the morning and work till midnight — for $5 a week. And we were lucky! We were lucky to be able to have a job that paid that kind of money. It was a different kind of a world. When Mother's Day came along, we'd go into the forest and pick flowers for Mother, pick up nuts — walnuts, things like that — that we'd take home.

"And in those circumstances my mother made sure we all eight made it to college. When I was in law school, it was a very depressing time. All these young guys that were in my class were despondent about what the future held for them. This was a time when you had the Hoovertowns in St. Louis, where people lived in cardboard containers, where you could not get a job for anything. Of the people that got out of law school with me, I was the first one to get a job remotely connected with the law, and that was when I came out to San Diego and got a job as an investigator, because nobody would give the young lawyers a job in St. Louis. Matter of fact, if you wanted to join some of the firms in St. Louis, you'd have to pay them $100 a month."

"The future looked so terribly bleak, so terribly dark for us at that time. And that's when Hitler was coming into power. I had come out of the 1918 First World War old enough to know how bad it was. Then you had Prohibition and gangsterism with Al Capone. It wasn't a pretty picture that I was looking at. I hated to live in that type of dirty world — and it was a dirty world. Then the Second World War came on, and I thought, 'What are we doing?'"

"I made up my mind that I was not going to live in fear of being poor, that I was going to work and not buy anything that I could not afford. When I started in San Diego, I'd go down to the office not just six days a week, but seven days a week. I'd go down on Sunday after church — and I used to go to two churches! — and take up collections at both of them so people would see me. Keeping before the public, having my office open..."

"When I finally was able to buy a house in La Jolla, I did not buy furniture, and we sat on boxes for a while, till we were able to get enough money to pay cash. I didn't want to buy anything that I didn't pay cash for. Cars too. Absolutely never bought an automobile on time in my life! Nor furniture.

"I decided to become a lawyer because my father was a lawyer, and I had great admiration for my father. But I wanted to be a lawyer who wouldn't have to try cases after I was 40 years old because I had an idea that I would have bad hearing by the time

I was 40, and I wanted to be financially independent by that time. So I had to work fast.

"I never wanted to want like they wanted. I wanted security, and I wanted everybody around me to be secure."

I ask him what was the most important case he worked on. Casey excuses himself again for the bathroom, then returns. "It was a criminal case. I worked hard on it, as always. I figured that if I could work harder than the other guy, I'd have more chance of success. I was appointed to represent a guy who was accused of murder. Which means a judge would say to the guy when he's arrested, 'Do you have a lawyer?'"

"'No. I don't have a lawyer.'"

"'Can you afford a lawyer?'"

"'No, I can't.'"

"'Okay, Mr. Casey, you handle this case.' Was I paid anything for it? No."

"The guy worked for Rohr. He was accused of murdering his wife. And they were very serious about it. No doubt that he knocked her down the stairs. No doubt that he hit her a couple of times before she went down the stairs. And no doubt that she died as a result of going down the stairs...but I got him off."

"And the reason I got him off was that I was able to develop the type of wife that she was and the type of man that he was."

"He would work at Rohr aircraft, hard. Come home and he'd give his check to his wife. And his wife would go out over the weekend and come home very late at night. So one weekend he gave her the money, and she left. She said she was going to the store to buy some things, and she left — this was Friday afternoon — and didn't come back until Monday. And she came home and she was half drunk. And he says, 'Where have you been?' She says, 'I've been shackled up with a fine young sailor. The one that I've been going with all these weekends that you missed me.'"

"'Where's our money?'"

"'I spent it all on him. We got a cabin and we drank...'"

"And with that he began to hit her and finally knocked her down the stairs. She died."

"I got that guy off because he deserved freedom," Casey says, quite sure. "He just lost his ability to control himself. I think I felt better about that case than I did about others."

If honors are the measure, David Casey, Sr., has more than earned his right to respectability. He's been president of just about every legal group you can put an acronym to. The State Bar (the first lawyer representing victims to be elected president), the American Trial Lawyers' Association, the San Diego Trial Lawyers' Association. He's been "Trial Lawyer of the Year" and recipient of the Award of Honor by the San Diego Bar Association. He led such movements as Proposition C, which brought in the (very profitable) hotel room taxes, and he came in third in San Diego's 1963 mayoral campaign.

Over 30 years, "Red Fox" Casey has fought 200 civil cases and 500 criminal cases. In these days of heavy paperwork and "discovery," nine out of ten lawyers never even see the inside of a courtroom. Of the rest, a criminal trial lawyer will be lucky to do three or four trials a year — say 90 in a career. A medical malpractice attorney, who tries as many cases as anyone in San Diego, may max out at five to ten trials a year. So Casey's 700 is a kind of record.

The end for crusading Casey came during a trial in the mid-'70s. "I was working with Dad on that trial," says David, Jr. "I can remember the moment. Someone was giving testimony. Dad heard the testimony wrong. He said, 'Aha!' and restated what he thought he'd heard. But it wasn't the right thing. He knew then it was time for him to step down."

Now, at the age of 82, Casey, Sr., is very deaf. But deafness aside, according to Casey, Jr., it was time for Red Fox's style of lawyering to end anyway. The shift had started during the '60s. Discovery — where each side is told everything the other side knows ahead of trial — cut all surprises. Everything turned to pretrial interviewing. Litigation. Mountains of pretrial paper. Trials needed gray suits, not gunslingers.

"Dad's firm had already gone into more complex product liability," says David, Jr., "environmental litigation, business fraud litigation. We — the next generation of lawyers — decided to expand into those areas. We were more suited to it, and it was where law was going."

David, Sr., is the first to admit that rehearsed-to-death trials, orchestrated ad nauseam months before the court date, are not his cup of tea.

"The biggest shift," says his son, "was moving from a time when Dad would go down every Monday ready for trial, to now, where we may try 10 to 15 cases a year in our firm among all the attorneys involved."

"It's not like in Dad's day, when each Sunday night he would give me an opening statement for dinner. I never knew what it was when I was a little kid. He'd say, 'I want to tell you a story. There was this little old lady. She was knocked down...' And years later I went downtown and listened to him give an opening statement for trial. And I suddenly realized — that's the story! That's what he was telling me!"

"It was the cases that stopped, not Dad."

David, Jr., will tell you he's the negotiator, not the warrior his dad was. But one thing he has inherited from Casey, Sr., is that legacy of the Depression: the work habit. "I have to say I'm a workaholic. I work extremely hard. My father always instilled in me the drive for independence and the drive to be secure. He would always remind me that his father was thrown out of his home when he was a child, that they picked coal from the tracks to keep warm. That always made its point with me."

"When I came to work as an attorney with his firm, he walked into my office at the end of the very first day and he said, 'Well, what new business did you bring in today?'"

"And I said, 'Dad, I didn't bring any new business in today.'"

"And he said, 'Well, how are you going to support yourself?'"

It was New Year's Eve 1993 that David, Sr., was rushed to the hospital with septicemia (blood poisoning) following a heart-valve operation. He fought his way back, until his most recent crisis, when his gall bladder erupted and he was hospitalized again. But the doctors are confident. "He'll be back home soon," they tell his son. "The man's a fighter. He's still got some living to do."

to be some errors and major omissions as I understand things, though I am no horse expert. Yes, the species has survived "millennia" (at least), but the Ice Age-era American horses went extinct 13,000 years ago, probably because of hunting by the newly arrived Native Americans. The horses we associate in history with the Indians were descendant of those transported on ships millennia later by Spanish conquistadors. Horses were critically instrumental in the Aztec, Inca, and Plains Indian genocides. The latter did not have, as stated, an empire but rather were Stone Age hunter/gatherers. Horses continue to be warrior beasts — the mounted police I've seen recently at Balboa Park. Feral horses remain today in America so numerous they must be culled to protect against overgrazing and starvation. Not only are horses still eaten today by people, as author Chamberlain correctly noted, they are notoriously eaten here by dogs (slaughterhouse processed). Most famously, they entertain people — in movies, at circuses, on trail rides, in rodeos, at bullfights, in parades, by pulling Seaport Village park carriages, in zoos, and at dude ranches. Horses are kept as pets. Horse racing (and gambling on it) is a huge industry, featured in today's L.A. Times at the top of the front page because of a tragic injury to a champion stallion. Mentioned were the winged chimera (Pegasus), but not mentioned were unicorns and centaurs. I could go on with a larger list of omissions.

Instead, I address the claim that horses shaped civilization. Certainly I understand the point and do not entirely object. However, other critters were right up there in importance, such as cattle, dogs, and poultry, even fish. And it was people who domesticated and exploited horses for their own ends that actually changed civilization. Horses had little say in the matter and probably would have been perfectly content had humans let them be. I do appreciate the "playful exploration" of the English prof author, but I also would caution readers as to the possibility of pandering, anthropomorphizing, and gaps in the story told.

Possibly Anger, Even Rage

I want to thank you for printing my letter (May 11) regarding what I considered one negative, vacuous statement in Geoff Bouvier's otherwise excellent article about two local saxmen, Charles McPherson and Joe Marillo ("Sax," April 20). The Reader provides an excellent forum for debate on a great variety of issues, artistic and otherwise. I did expect some reaction and took note of Don Ridgway's letter (May 18) indicating his support for Mr. Bouvier's statement regarding Kenny G's music and his agreement with Pat Metheny's famous comments about him.

I would like to offer one more set of facts and alternate concept for Mr. Ridgway and his musical ilk. I have heard Pat Metheny live in concert at the Escondido performing arts center two years ago, going to hear his stylistic compositions and especially the brilliant pianist Lyle Mays. When Pat played some of his more melodic numbers, he had the audience, including myself, intrigued and entranced. However, when he proceeded with his entire band to play some jazz fusion pieces, the sound was so incredibly overamped, overplayed, confused, and just plain cacophonous that people were seen running for the exits to rescue their eardrums. I have never heard such noise that was not beautiful before or since. I can't imagine what emotional associations someone would have to that music except possibly anger, even rage. Perhaps this is what drives comments such as Pat's and Mr. Ridgway's.

Far Magic and Art

Indulge Your Perceptions in Jacumba

Telemagica means 'far magic.' We're expanding as far as possible, to other planets, to other beings we can't see," says Kirk Roberts, cofounder of Telemagica, an annual arts-and-music festival in Jacumba. "For example, we needed a shade cover for the audience in front of the bands. But we don't just see this as a shade cover, we see it as a sculpture, so we commissioned a woman from Jacumba to sew the 60-foot by 60-foot shade covering, and [we told her] to be as free as possible [with design and color selection]. So from outer space, [the shade structure] will look like an undulating abstract painting suspended by painted telephone poles."

LOCAL EVENTS

On Friday, June 16, through Sunday, June 18, more than 20 bands and DJs will perform at an abandoned railroad station off Old Highway 80 for the third annual Telemagica festival. "We found this old railroad station out here with a warehouse; it was kind of a waste dump in disrepair for a number of years," says Roberts. "We cleaned it up and started the Institute of Perception."

The Institute of Perception, founded by Roberts and his wife, Noor Bar, offers a workspace for artists, musicians, and writers. Membership to the organization is $25 a year. The band Maxvend from Encinitas recently used the facility for one week to record their new CD. In exchange, members of the band will work the ticketing booth at the Telemagica Festival.

After obtaining an art degree in Pasadena, Roberts worked at the Exploratorium Art Museum in San Francisco. "[The museum] brings together artists and scientists as a vehicle where physicists studying light could be paired with artists [depicting] light," says Roberts. Bar, a graphic designer, owns a business designing websites and product packaging. The couple moved to Jacumba from Northern California to start their institute.

According to americansouthwest.net, "Jacumba is not signposted and has no facilities." The town is located at the southeast edge of San Diego County, along the northern border of Mexico. "Jacumba means 'hut by the water,'" explains Roberts. "In the 1920s Jacumba was where people from the valley came to get out of the heat. We're up at 3000 feet. El Centro is 40 miles away, at sea level, and is very hot."

At the center of town is the Jacumba Hot Springs Spa and Cabana Club, a resort that was popularized by vacationing Hollywood stars like Clark Gable. During the 1920s Jacumba's population was over 5000. In 1967 Interstate 8 was built, bypassing the town by two miles, and the population has steadily dwindled ever since. Roberts estimates that approximately 300 people currently reside in the area.

The only restaurant is the café at the spa, although, adds Roberts, "The Shell station in town has a Subway and sells small personal pizzas." Roberts knows of only one farm, on the east end of town. The farm grows organic spinach.

In a town where small three-bedroom homes often sell for under $250,000, the $12 an hour Roberts pays local teens to help around the old railroad yard goes far. "That's an extraordinary amount of money for Jacumba," he says.

Telemagica poster, by Kirk Roberts

Because of its proximity to the international border, Jacumba is frequented by Border Patrol agents. "They keep a very low profile in the community," Roberts explains. "[Agents are] mostly a rotation of young people in their 20s. We see them driving by from San Diego out to El Centro. I think they're kind of mystified about the location themselves. They're almost shy about their interaction with the [local] population."

Behind the Institute is Jacumba Peak, upon which nearly 30 stones mark a burial ground. "Because it has such a history, Jacumba can be a great tourist destination," Roberts insists. "There are sacred sites out there and artifacts like grinding stones and pottery."

Five hundred people attended Telemagica last year, but Roberts is expecting at least 1500 this year. Campers are asked to arrive self-contained. "It's a high-desert atmosphere, so people should have hats and sunscreen," Roberts suggests. "We'll have vegan food vendors, traditional Mexican food, and everything from sandwiches to desserts to coffee going all night in the lounge inside the warehouse." No alcohol will be sold, and campers are discouraged from bringing their own.

On Friday and Saturday nights, when the last live band packs up for the evening at around 1 a.m., a DJ will take over and continue until the first live band performs the following day.

Spoken word, acoustic music, performance art, and open mikes will be featured in the Institute Lounge Café. A "Perceptual Meditation Gallery" will contain the work of ten artists.

On a tribe.net message board, one camper who attended Telemagica last year wrote, "Be prepared for lots of heat and no sleep as they march at night chanting in search of space ships."

OUTDOORS

Western Azalea, a native rhododendron, is blooming this month in scattered locations throughout the county’s higher mountains. Fond of semi-shade, it’s often found growing along creeks and canyon bottoms. Like its ornamental cousins, western azalea’s fragrant white (sometimes pink or yellow tinted) flowers are borne in ornate clusters. Palomar Mountain State Park harbors a colony of them alongside a trail linking Doane Valley and Chimney Flats. White-flowering azaleas will appear again along the Azalea Glen Trail in Cuyamaca Rancho State Park, but it may take several years before that fire-damaged landscape sufficiently returns to life.

Spring Wildflowers have largely dried up in many areas of San Diego County, but in the cooler coastal enclaves such as Cabrillo National Monument and Torrey Pines State Reserve, several kinds remain. Look for paintbrush, purple nightshade, coreopsis, sea fig, popcorn flower, and red monkey flower, among others.

The Blooming of Desert Annuals is over, but not so for the stolid desert willows and smoke trees. Rooted to the beds of dry washes throughout Anza-Borrego’s lower valleys, both plants gather enough energy this time of year to put on an impressive floral show. The graceful, drooping branches of the desert willow hold fragrant, white blossoms, while the spindly smoke tree exhibits myriad blue-purple flowers. To avoid the intense midday heat, confine your desert explorations to early morning or early evening. And watch out for bees — they’re attracted to the blossoms, too.

Summer Solstice, the time when the sun reaches its northernmost point in the sky, occurs this year at 5:26 a.m. on Wednesday, June 21. The summer solstice not only marks the beginning of summer for the Northern Hemisphere; it also means that the daylight hours are maximized. San Diegans now enjoy approximately 14 hours of daylight, in contrast to the meager 10 hours or so we experience in December.

Anytime this week or next, try checking your shadow at 12:50 p.m. (the local daylight time in San Diego currently equivalent to astronomical noon). The sun is then only 10 degrees south of the straight-up direction and casts near-vertical shadows. A lesser-known consequence of the summer solstice is that our twilight periods are longer than usual. Evening and morning twilight periods are now lasting more than 90 minutes.

A GUIDE TO UNEXPECTED SAN DIEGO AND BEYOND | BY JERRY SCHAD

Topped by craggy blocks of white conglomerate rock, Castle Peak affords what is probably the most expansive view of San Fernando Valley’s west side. From the top, a sea of ground-hugging subdivisions is seen lapping at the foot of the mountain and stretching toward a vaporous horizon. In the middle distance, a bevy of skyscrapers at Warner Center rises up starkly, symbolizing the valley’s evolution toward what promises to be a more vertical type of metropolitan environment in the decades to come.

To the Chumash Indians living in the Simi Hills centuries ago, Castle

Castle Peak panorama

Peak was known as Huan, a gigantic monument (some say) that was used to keep track of repetitive celestial and earthly cycles. Every year during the winter solstice, Huan’s pointed afternoon shadow swept across a Chumash village located near the mouth of Bell Canyon. Even today, there’s a sense of timeless drama on Huan’s summit as you watch the afternoon shadows of the Simi Hills stretch across the urban plain.

Although Castle Peak’s summit can be reached from all sides, the shortest and most direct route is by way of the southeast slope. To get there, exit Highway 101 at Valley Circle Boulevard, and drive three miles north to Vanowen Street, a major east-west street in the valley. Turn left and go just one-quarter mile to where Vanowen meets Sunset Ridge Drive. Pass through a gate into what is known as El Escorpion Park, and follow an old dirt road going west into a broad, oak-dotted canyon. Stay right where the road divides into two parallel branches, and right again on a steeply inclined path heading straight up toward Castle Peak’s craggy summit. Some 650 vertical feet of scrambling (and slipping here and there) gets you to the highest outcrop.

Hawks and ravens patrol the air spaces above (and often below) you, as you survey the landscape. If you wish, you can follow the trailless ridgeline west to peak 1639 for a better view of the rolling Simi Hills to the west.

No Good Deed: A Shocking True Story of Jealousy, Rage, and Murder

By Tom Basinski
Berkley True Crime, 2006, $7.99, 293 pages

FROM THE DUST JACKET:

Two days before Christmas in 1998, David Stevens's Chrysler LeBaron exploded into flames in the upscale California neighborhood of La Jolla. The "accident" wasn't enough to hide evidence of homicide: two bullets fired into the skull of the 38-year-old dating-service employee who didn't have an enemy in the world.

WHAT THE CRITICS SAY:

"The true story of the murder of David Stevens." — Publishers Weekly

"It delves into the underworld of strippers, the exotic practice of Santeria, a publication called Testosterone, a murder for hire, and a defendant who insists on representing himself at trial. Basinski's wry humor is an undercurrent that runs throughout." — San Diego Union-Tribune

ABOUT THE AUTHOR:

Tom Basinski is the father of two, a true-crime magazine writer, and a veteran California police detective.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR:

I called Tom Basinski in San Diego to talk about his new book that revisits a notorious local homicide case. Basinski's worked in law enforcement for many years. Was he still on the job?

TB: I actually retired in January of 2005, and then I went to work for the San Diego City Attorney, Mike Aguirre, but I only worked for him for 17 weeks. He fired my boss, and he fired the guy who recruited me, and then came to me and said everything was okay between us, and I said, 'No.' He's fired about 30 of his attorneys since he took office. So, I've been unemployed for about a year.

JJ: And so you've taken up writing?

TB: I've actually been a writer since the early '80s, when I was a homicide detective for Chula Vista PD. A writer from True Detective approached me about a case, and I asked him how to go about contributing to the magazine. Also, my degree is in English, so I've always been interested in writing.

JJ: How did you go from an English degree to law enforcement?

TB: Well, I studied to be a Catholic priest. I had four years to go before getting ordained, but I changed my mind. It was kind of an evolution of thought. I became a police officer [instead]. But getting back to writing, I wrote my [first-hand] stories and then we didn't really have that many homicides for five or six years, and I started writing up murder cases from around the county.

JJ: So how many years did you spend on the force?

TB: I did 17 years with the Chula Vista Police, and I did 17 as an investigator with the San Diego County District Attorney. I actually started my career in Flint, Michigan, where I grew up. I was only there about a year and a half before I moved to California.

JJ: So, 35 years in law enforcement. What is crime like in San Diego? How many major crimes are committed annually? How many of those are murders?

TB: Last, I think they had 58. So, considering the pretty active gang population and what spills over from Mexico's drug hits, San Diego is relatively safe. But, you know, murders go in cyclical fashion. They go up and down. There's really no control the police have over it; it just happens.

JJ: What percentage of the murders are solved?

TB: I don't have those statistics. I think they solve fewer of them now than they did a few years ago because of jurisdictional body dumps. That's when somebody is killed in one city and taken to another and dumped.

JJ: Do you watch those TV shows, CSI and all those forensic programs?

TB: I like American Justice and Forensic Files on the A&E Network, but I don't see a lot of those shows. I do like that one, The First 24. That's on A&E, I believe. As far as the fictional network shows, I seldom watch.

JJ: No Good Deed is about the work of Team Three of the San Diego Homicide Division. How many other teams are there besides Team Three?

TB: There're four teams.

JJ: How many detectives are on a team?

TB: Generally, four, but the case took so long that some who were involved were eventually transferred to other teams. It's usually a sergeant and three detectives.

JJ: And a team being "up," what does that mean?

TB: When they're up that means they get every homicide that comes down the road from...I think it's Tuesday morning at 8:30 until the next Tuesday morning at 8:30. So, they're up for one week.

JJ: What do the other three teams do during that period?

TB: The other teams are following leads.

JJ: So they're working for the primary team?

TB: No, no. They're working their own cases that happened during the week they were up.

JJ: So, the assumption is that it's going to take longer than 24 hours to solve a case?

TB: Even if you solve it that fast and take someone in custody, there is always plenty more work to do. Because, though you have enough to present the case to the D.A. and file the complaint, there's so much more work that needs to be done before the case goes to court.

JJ: Describe the murder.

TB: Remains were found in a car fire just before Christmas, 1998. The fire was set to destroy the identity of the victim and any evidence. The burned corpse was identified as David Stevens. He worked for a dating service, and it was difficult to ascribe a motive, and it was difficult to find the guilty party.

JJ: The solution to the murder took some three years.

TB: Yeah, because nobody connected the victim and the killer. The cops interviewed people endlessly. A lot of leads came up, but the essential information didn't.

JJ: I was very impressed with the diligence — the pursuit of those many misleading tips and misinformation.

TB: Yeah, they just worked the hell out there.

JJ: Months stretch into years, and the victim's family becomes very frustrated and, early on, engages outside help, or a gentleman sort of inserts himself into the case and adds to the work of the detectives quite a lot. The family goes on San Diego radio shows, sometimes revealing information learned from the detectives, which the police do not want broadcast. Reporters get involved, including a writer from the Reader, filing stories about the case, and there's a lot of pressure on the police. They deal with it as they can, but they're certainly being second-guessed quite a lot. You write: "The case of David Stevens presented a first in the handling of a homicide within the San Diego Police Department," because it was officially shifted to the cold case squad, called the HEAT unit, and had attached to it a deputy district attorney. Do you think that the agitation by the victim's family kept the case active?

TB: My opinion is "no." What it was, was an annoyance to the cops. The case is what's important and it doesn't matter who the victim is. These guys, they never let up, and I don't really think that the pressure had anything to do with it. The investigators would do the same. In addition, they were very certain the family's adviser-investigator was barking up the wrong tree with his theories.

JJ: Did you finally discover that he was actually hired?

TB: I talked to him a couple times, and he wouldn't tell me, but he did indicate that some expenses were paid. Other than that, I don't know. He was, the whole time, trying to pitch this story to 48 Hours or one of those TV magazines. I honestly don't think all that affected the homicide team; they just do their job anyway.

“They lured him out of his apartment and into his automobile, and Barker shot him in the head.”

JJ: Was your wife very happy to see you retire?

TB: Yeah, because now when she comes home, dinner is on the table, and I made it.

JJ: Does she work too?

TB: Yeah, she works for the District Attorney's office. She has a degree in criminal justice.

JJ: After years of dead ends, Team Three catches a break. Someone tells someone who calls with a tip.

TB: Yeah. David Stevens

worked for a matchmaking company, and the eventual codefendant worked for him, but nobody at that company knew they ever spoke except about work. But they had an attraction, and they did go out socially one time. Keep in mind, [Stevens] was 38 years old, and she had just turned 18. And so they went to his apartment, and they had a sexual encounter. She left there afterward and drove home, and her married boyfriend, this Ronald

Adopt an Abortionist
How a Chula Vista Man Helped an Abortionist Find a New Path
BY ROBERT KRAUFEL
Doctors who perform abortions often meet in a Manhattan universe where there are only two kinds of people: Those who leave them alone about their work and the "terrorists" who stand in front of their clinics with picket signs and banners. Some have even successfully convinced them to stand out of their abortion clinics. The idea of actually having a relationship with one of the protesters is unthinkable.
Yet in early 2005, Dr. John Mendoza, an abortionist, found himself hanging out with Lou Mendoza, a pro-life activist who had volunteered to work at Chula Vista's abortion clinic.

John Mendoza
In front of this clinic, I started going more often. There was a Pro-life prayer group there on Thursdays who needed someone who could talk to them. He didn't like just put his hands straight into the abortion bag.

Barker, was waiting. He was a control freak. He demanded to know where she'd been. She tried to lie but didn't do a very good job. She gave it up. And he said, "All right, you're unclean and the only way you're going to be cleansed of your sin is that I'm going to kill Stevens, and you're going to help me." And that's what they did. They lured him out of his apartment and into his automobile, and Barker shot him in the head.

JJ: What finally broke the case after three years?

TB: Ronald Barker became so possessive, he started beating her. Barker even told his wife that they had killed somebody, and his wife told his girlfriend — Ny Nourn. If his wife knew, then Nourn figured it was over, and she wanted the beatings to stop anyway. She feared Barker more than prison. And that's why she had a friend call the police and give it up.

JJ: And the wife actually urged the girlfriend not to break off with her husband?

TB: That's correct. She [the wife] said, "He seems more calm and relaxed when he has a girlfriend on the side." She wanted the extramarital relationship to continue.

JJ: You said the homicide detectives probably wouldn't have arrested Barker for outstanding warrants: a fraud and an illegal driver's license. Is it simply that they're not interested in fraud?

TB: There are so damn many warrants out there, thousands of outstanding warrants, that it's the job of the sheriff's department to go out and track these guys down. If the cops had suspected Barker of homicide, they would have used the warrants to bag him. But as far as homicide detectives just arresting a guy they come across on outstanding warrants, they wouldn't.

JJ: Another thing that surprised me was that Mark Carlos, one of the attorneys in the case, is notified that a contract has been taken out on his life, issued from prison. He's notified by the city that, since he isn't a witness for the prosecution, the D.A.'s office would not provide protection for him. As a result, Attorney Carlos withdraws from the case. I was amazed that there was no provision made for protecting an officer of the court in that situation. He was left to fend for himself.

TB: Well, okay, that would have been up to the local police. Also, the D.A.'s office had intercepted the contract.

JJ: The threatened attorney uses his grateful incarcerated clients to sort of take care of matters privately for him and discourage any action against him. But this is strictly private. I was just surprised that law enforcement officially didn't protect the attorney in such a situation. Isn't this a kind of tampering with the judicial process?

TB: I don't know. Maybe. I certainly don't see it that way. I mean, you know a hit was attempted, it was thwarted by the D.A., and this guy was told, "Hey, you may be a target, so protect yourself." Holy Christ, we'd be protecting people all the time. That's what executive protection PIs are for. You may be surprised at that, but that is what the reality is.

JJ: A death committee is convened before the indicted are brought to trial. What is a death committee?

TB: Okay, if a case qualifies as having "special circumstances" — specific heinous elements — then the D.A. has to decide whether to try for the death penalty — execution — or ask for life without parole. And so that's what the death committee decides. Attorneys from the D.A.'s office convene and discuss the case and vote whether they think they can ask for death or not.

"I've seen as many as four juries in one case. It's common."

JJ: I've never seen what occurs in this case. Since there are two codefendants in the trial, provision is made for two juries to sit in the courtroom, one for each defendant.

TB: That happens all the time, all over the country.

JJ: So this isn't something unique to California or San Diego?

TB: No, and in fact, I've seen as many as four juries in one case, which would be 38 jurors. It's common.

JJ: Do you miss it — police work?

TB: You know, I don't. I had a great career. I had a lot of good things happen. But you know, I'm 59 years old and to really do a good job you have to have a lot of energy. And that's why I got out of homicide. When that phone rings, sometimes you're up for 48 hours, and by the end of my term in homicide, I realized it was taking me a long time to recover. In the beginning it would take me, you know, one day. I'd just go home and sleep for 12 hours, and I'd be ready to go, but it's a tough job. So, I don't miss it that much. I really liked doing that work, but, man, it's a killer.

The Freedom Machine

"They didn't realize she was there. She wasn't invading them; she was sort of floating around."

I'm a sucker for what I think of as a Conspiracy of Good Times photograph. Night owls in a smoke-threaded establishment cluster in animated conversation around linen-covered cocktail tables; perhaps one lifts a glass; perhaps another taps a cigarette on an ash-tray. You can almost hear the small-combo music in the air. The details can change — add a gardenia behind a woman's ear, subtract the ashtrays — but it always adds up to a soft, gloved feeling for an intimate social moment. E. Salomon took such a picture in 1935. He shot his Café Mac Mahon, Geneva, Switzerland, at 2 A.M. with the latest in photographic technology, the 35mm Leica. He also used it to make the first true candid of murder trials, political rallies, and celebrity life. The small, portable 35mm made it possible to catch events with gusting immediacy and without "artfulness." Its predecessor for serious photographers, the Graflex, was big and cumbersome, with mechanical gears and low-sensitivity film. The 35mm was the freedom machine.

An optics engineer named Oscar Barnack invented it as an aid to newsreel cameramen: instead of using notoriously unreliable light meters to set the aperture on their motion picture cameras, they used the little Leica loaded with film stock. A couple of these smart little beauties, with their nifty knobs, buttons, and rocket-shaped viewfinders, are on view at the Museum of Photographic Arts in Shooting in 35: The First 35mm Photographs, along with early examples of the results, like Salomon's club picture and Alfred Eisenstaedt's otherworldly, nearly abstract vision of crewmen handling guy wires atop a zeppelin over the Atlantic. The flexibility and speed of the 35mm also suited it perfectly to sports photography, and the Russians were there at the beginning to exploit its possibilities. Georgi Zelma's coverage of the 1932 Winter Games resulted in zippy pictures of ice hockey combat, a ski jumper in flight shot from below, and a high jumper clearing a (ludicrously low) bar. And the 35mm quickly became the camera of choice of war photographers. When Robert Capa was given an assignment by Life in 1943, later titled "It's a Tough War," to document Allied operations in Europe, he and his 35mm scrambled with troops foxhole to foxhole.

But World War II wasn't just a male photographer's war. Shooting in 35 is really just the threshold for an investigative, wake-up show organized by MoPA's gifted curator Carol McCusker. Breaking the Frame: Pioneering Women in Photojournalism showcases six women photojournalists who in the 1930s and 1940s were frontierswomen in what had been a very male world of war photographers and social documentarians. Except for the famous Margaret Bourke-White, whose images ranging from poor rural families in the American 1930s to South African gold miners in the 1950s have long been part of our national archive and, like the work of so many of her colleagues, an inventory of the nation's conscience, the women included here are bright discoveries. They form a little U.N. of image makers: Thérèse Bonney (French); Olga

Lander (Russian); Hansel Mieth (German); Grace Robertson (English); and Esther Bubley (American). Fearless, compassionate without being sentimental, responsive to the liberating technology of the 35mm camera, every one exemplifies what Ms. McCusker asserts in her catalog essay, that women "leave evidence of the feminine when they make photographs" and that, to a finer and sharper degree than most of their male colleagues, they express, with an apparently casual brilliance, "emotional intimacy — often raw vulnerability — and a growing solidarity among underrepresented populations." Without getting tangled in gender-politics clichés, I'd add that these artists had a penetrating eye for human interrelatedness.

From "Bus Story" series, by Esther Bubley

The German-born Hansel Mieth, for instance, came to America in the 1930s as a politically active young woman and gravitated immediately toward the Hoovervilles near Sacramento, the cotton fields picked by destitute migrants, and the entire culture of poverty that trailed behind the Great Depression. Her images — African-American families scavenging food and tools in the Sacramento dump; grimy urchins framed in a half-open car door (Cotton Workers' Kids — "Waiting All Day Long"); a surging triangular mass of hats and outstretched hands of men begging work from a jobber — match up effortlessly against more famous images of similar subjects by Dorothea Lange. And Mieth's stark portrait of a Rosie the Riveter type deserves to be an American icon: a kneeling woman welder, wearing a knowing half-smile along with robotic gloves, helmet, and black goggles, looks like a superhero prototype.

After some brief art school training, the Midwesterner Esther Bubley was more or less groomed as a photojournalist by Roy Stryker, who, as director first of the Farm Security Administration in the 1930s and then the Office of War Information in the 1940s, employed Lange, Gordon Parks, Russell Lee, and other documentarian photographers. Bubley quickly developed her own tropisms. She was attracted to family life, the American road, and small-town culture. She also had the gift of making herself invisible around her subjects. Stryker described her disappearing act: "They didn't realize she was there...She wasn't invading them; she was sort of floating around. And all of a sudden they saw themselves, not unpleasantly, yet with her discernment...and they said, 'My God, it's interesting!'" Along with nightclub imagery, I'm a sucker for "road" essays, and Bubley's "Bus Story" series, which includes shots of mechanics and window-washers, of slumped, dozing travelers in a terminal café, of affections displayed in the hazy slanted light of waiting rooms, and of curbside goodbyes, are Grade-A American classics.

Good photography scrubs and clarifies perception. These women were drawn to machines as much as their male counterparts, and they were especially keen on the relation of the human to the technological.

Thérèse Bonney, another unfamiliar but impressive presence in the exhibition (she was so famous in 1940s France that a comic book hero was modeled on her), made an image of two female mechanics symmetrically set inside a turbine. It's a witty, vaguely sexualized pairing — the sexuality of women grooming a machine. McCusker has crafted an exhibition that really snaps us to attention, and she's performing an act of cultural restoration in reintroducing figures like Bonney and Bubley into the history of modern photojournalism. Her selection demonstrates how their work forces us to see commonplaces — a barber shop, a train loaded with refugees, concentration camp inmates, Italian landscapes and street scenes, couples in dance halls, cities in ruins — as if for the first time.

A coda to Breaking the Frame extends the tradition of women photojournalists. It includes color work by two Americans born in the 1970s who have worked in Afghanistan and Iraq. The color-saturated images of Andrea Bruce and Stephanie Sinclair are, as Bourke-White's pictures often were, much closer to self-aware art photography than to the catch-me-if-you-can photojournalism of their predecessors, but they're pursuing a similar task of finding contemporary facts — of love, horror, despair, solidarity, isolation — and framing them for us.

In her catalog essay on Grace Robertson, the critic Val Williams observes that many women photographers abandoned very active careers after just a short time. Robertson's career, except for a brief later burst of work in the 1980s, lasted from 1951 to 1955, and it's telling of how much of a man's world photojournalism was in the postwar period that she pitched her first story proposal under the moniker "Dick Muir." But she soon realized that as a woman she could gain access to cultures that men were either excluded from (like ladies' Turkish baths) or shunned (like childbirth and all its messiness). Her wildest photo essay treated women on pub outings. It's a girls' world, these raucous, high-spirited, impeccably attired biddies howling with joy on an amuse-

SCREENPRINTS FROM THE COLLECTION OF THE JORDAN SCHNITZER FAMILY FOUNDATION

JUNE 17-SEPTEMBER 10, 2006

View nearly 120 screenprints by one of the most influential and provocative American artists of the 20th century. Andy Warhol's Dream America showcases a large selection of iconic prints by Warhol including his complete portfolios of Marilyn Monroe, Mick Jagger, and the Campbell's Soup Can. Works in the exhibition range in date from the 1960s to the 1980s to provide a comprehensive overview of Warhol's printmaking career.

Andy Warhol's Dream America: Screenprints from the Collection of the Jordan Schnitzer Family Foundation was organized by the Taiwanese Art Museum, Bologna, Modena, and the Jordan Schnitzer Museum of Art, University of Oregon, Eugene. Local presentation is made possible by RBC Dean Raascher and the generous support of the SDMA Artists Guild and Pillsbury Winthrop Shaw Pittman LLP.

You Bite My Back, I'll Bite Yours Last Friday, Reeve Oliver was one of the two local groups to play 91X's 11-band X-Fest show at money playing the 91X X-Fest, because if you do it, we are not going to play your record when it comes out next year.' ” (The band is in L.A. now, recording their first major-label CD on Capitol Records.)

“That is ridiculous,” says 94/9 program director Garrett Michaels of Collins's claim.

Coors Amphitheatre. The preceding Monday (June 5), 91X DJ/music director Marco Collins alluded to some inter-station squabbling over Reeve Oliver.

Collins said, “Another radio station in town, who shall remain nameless, called [Reeve Oliver] up — that radio station's music director, who is also on at the exact same time I am [a reference to 94/9 music director Mike Halloran] — called them up and said, ‘I hope you are making a lot of

He says that before Reeve Oliver was signed to Capitol Records, FM-94/9 played the band's independently released self-titled album. “That first album was chosen as one of our monthly ‘recommended’ albums [in November 2004]. We had them play at our New Year's Eve show at 4th & B that year.”

Halloran says he recently had a “private” conversation with Reeve Oliver bassist O but that “nothing was said about not playing their music” if they played the X-Fest. “In fact, I want to be the first to play it.”

Contacted in L.A., O said he had heard about Collins's on-air comments, “but I have no idea where he got that.”

O HAS NO IDEA ABOUT 91X ACCUSATION

As for music boycotts in the spirit of competition, Michaels says 91X “dropped Flaming Lips [music] as soon as possible” when that band agreed to play 94/9's Independence Jam at the Open Air Theatre on May 24. Michaels says 94/9 did not play less music by the Cult, Franz Ferdinand, or She Wants Revenge because those bands played X-Fest.

Though Collins would not comment about his on-air assertion, 91X program director Kevin Stapleford responds: “Between 91X, KBZT [94/9], O, and Reeve Oliver, we all know the truth. Our hope is that Reeve Oliver is supported by every radio station in San Diego.”

As of June 8, 2006, the Reeve Oliver song “I Want Burns” has been played 230 times on FM-94/9 and 99 times on 91X, according to airplay monitoring service BDS.

The FCC Will Do What the FCC Wants to Do A guy who identifies himself as Al operates a “punk, international hip-hop, and women's music” Internet radio station called www.radioactiveradio.org. Al says an anonymous benefactor is responsible for broadcasting his programming over the airwaves, on 106.9 FM. Thus, the station is San Diego's second illegal radio station.

“They went on in 2002,” says Al about 96.9 FM, San Diego's first pirate station.

He says 106.9 began a year later. “96.9 was all about freedom of speech. They would have hip-hop that would be derogatory against women. Freedom of speech is one thing, but being derogatory against women is another. Why do they have to be so hateful?”

Not comfortable with the playlist, Al says he and some people left 96.9 to launch radioactiveradio.com. Now on the airwaves, 106.9 FM can be heard in South Park, Lemon Grove, downtown, SDSU, and National City.

“We don't know who they are,” says Al of the benefactor who elected to broadcast the programming. According to its website (www.1069FM.com), the Communications Commission, which indicates that the programming is broadcast from 1847 Klauber Avenue. Such letters usually precede a raid and equipment confiscation. The FCC also sent a letter to an Alan M. Conrad regarding 106.9 FM. But Al of radioactiveradio.com would not say he is Alan Conrad.

Al did say that 106.9 FM was off the air for eight months and came back on “around Easter.” He says the DJs on Radioactive/106.9 select their own music. “We had a fundraiser [on June 3]

Regarding the FCC notice, Al says: "It just tells me the FCC will do what the FCC wants to do. They want to harass an unlicensed operator with fines or seizure of property. It is unfortunate that the federal government makes it virtually impossible for small, noncommercial stations to get on the air."

Name/Blame Game

"They hijacked the name [UV Tigers]," says a music-scene insider who claims that Ocean Beach band Cape May registered the Internet domain name of the UV Tigers, another local band.

Cape May lead singer Andre Che, who says none of his bandmates were involved, had this explanation: "I went with some friends to the UV Tigers' debut performance at the Casbah in February.... We got really pissed [loaded] and watched a great show. Upon arriving home after the show, it was decided that we would frolic through the cyber digital land of Ultra Violet Tigers. When arriving at their website, it said, 'THIS DOMAIN IS AVAILABLE'!!! Now, in the land of site-domain squatters and cyber sharks, one never knows from minute to minute what will be available tomorrow.

CHE: NO MALICE INTENDED

the truth. We were not malicious or ill-natured in our acquisition of their domain name. Either way, I told them I had forgotten about it, and that they could have it.... It's all squared away now. It's back in their

"So, my friend and Web guru (who wishes to remain anonymous...) says he wants to buy it in order to save it for the Tigers. He then suggests that he wants to contact them the next day and get to work on their website with them. As I was the only one on hand with [a credit card], I volunteered my Visa for what seemed like a good idea.... [My friend] ended up taking off a few days later, only to abandon the entire UV website project altogether.

"I forgot about it and paid no mind to it. I tried to contact the guys in the UV Tigers a couple times about different things, such as shows and recording, and never heard back from them until a week ago, when they inquired about me being the 'master of their domain.'

"They seemed upset that I had bought their domain name and wanted to know why I bought it. I told them

Gary Hankins, lead singer of UV Tigers, has no comment on the issue. At this time, uvtigers.com is not a working site.

Beatmaker, Pot-Stirrer

"Lots of people in San Diego listen to and/or make emo and/or screamo music (which is hard for me to consider music), and it just sounds so bad to me and lots of them have to dress weird so they can think they are different from everyone else," says Indefinable. "They also act like they are so alone in the world, cry about it, then they go on Myspace and try to get sympathy from people.... Basically, the emo scene is just a bunch of fake and/or confused people that don't know the difference between what is good and what's bad, in my opinion."

Rapper and beatmaker Indefinable uses Myspace (www.myspace.com/indefinable) to reach people outside of San Diego who might be into his music. He says he's sick of people using the website to promote businesses instead of for networking and developing friendships.

"Most younger people in San Diego are superficial.... They don't really care what the lyricist is saying, so I focus on making good-sounding/original music with words that are also original but generally positive."

Indefinable doesn't plan on signing with any labels.

"I am starting my own label.... The only reason I would want to be signed by a major label is to spread the word about my music and its purposes. Money is not my top priority right now, and hopefully it will never have to be again. Either way, it is a top priority of mine not to sell out to the corporate side."

— Jeremiah Griffey

Pay It Backward "Right before the show, the promoter, Josh Andrade, calls to say Cypress Hill wants $3000 more cash to headline," says Stiletto Silhouette singer Jason Fitzpatrick. "Something about they were paid half in Mexican money... We really wanted to play; it was gonna be a big deal, so my girlfriend went and got the cash and handed it over to him.... He kept telling us, 'Don't worry, you'll get it back.'"

Fitzpatrick alleges the band never got their $3000 back and says they were never paid for playing January's Des-Madre Fest at El Foro in us huge shows, like playing for 30,000 people at the Bull Arena with Slipknot, Korn, and the Deftones."

CYPRESS HILL WON'T PLAY FOR PESOS

Tijuana. "Cypress Hill never performed, and the crowd basically rioted.... They were throwing bottles as we tried to get our equipment out."

Stiletto Silhouette drummer Andrew Carillo says, "We haven't been able to reach Josh; his voice mail's always full.... The reason we trusted him so much is because we met him through our rhythm guitarist's dad and he was very good to the band. He talked about getting

Lazy Hands

“When the curtains opened, the few audience members scattered to the walls like roaches caught in the light.”

Discussing San Diego’s newly famous acoustic guitar crooner, Jason Mraz, Jason Turtle says, “When I was performing with Jane Lui, we had a few gigs with him and were beginning to try to collaborate. This was right before he got really big, so he was around more. He came over to write...we decided to smoke a bit to loosen things up and get the creative thinking flowing, but all it did was make me more paranoid. Between him and me, we kept trying out different melodies and chords — ‘How’s this?’ and ‘What about this?’ I couldn’t think straight.”

YOUR GUITARS?

“I’ve had about 12 guitars since I first started playing. I’ve finally broken it down to 3. One is a Martin D-1 with an LR Baggs i-Beam pickup system in it. I think I was a drummer in a former life, so I like to play the guitar as if it were one. The LR Baggs picks up my banging on it really well. Another is a baby Taylor with a Fishman piezo pickup that I had installed. It’s my practice guitar, but it definitely makes my hands lazy. When I play shows with the full size, they tend to cramp up by the third song or so. So I tell as many stories as I possibly can to let them get some rest. Of all the guitars, my Yamaha F310 is my favorite. Someone bought it at Costco for $99 and just gave it to me. It tunes great, plays great, and doesn’t sound all that great, but because it’s the same model as my absolute first guitar, I’ll never be able to let go of it.”

FAVORITE VENUE?

“De Anza College cafeteria stage in Cupertino. The stage is humongous. It makes me feel small and insignificant. Plus, it’s rather inconspicuous, so when I play there, I feel the music more. I have to work to get people to listen. It’s an honest gauge on how well I am doing. People that like it will stop and stay.”

LEAST FAVORITE?

“There’s a place in Los Angeles that I’d rather not name, but it’s a stage for rock bands. I don’t really know how I got that gig, but I think the booker that set it up thought I was part of a huge band, so they asked me to open for a couple others. The stage was six feet off the ground, and I had three or four monitors to myself. When the curtains opened, the few audience members scattered to the walls like roaches caught in the light.”

TOP FIVE CDS?

1. Glen Phillips, Abulum. “He writes songs with imagery and simple melodies that I can never seem to forget.”
2. Imogen Heap, Speak for Yourself. “Beautiful music and beautiful production. It never gets old.”
3. Toad the Wet Sprocket, Coil. “My first favorite band. Same Glen Phillips songwriting, but with a ’90s pop rock twist.”

Jason Turtle

4. Pete Dinklage, Music for the Morning After. “Simple and acoustic. I like it melancholy.”

5. Marc Broussard, Carencro. “Although he won’t be able to sing past 35 years, he’s got such a cool-sounding voice. And his performance is unbeatable. It’s music to dance to.”

BEST GIG?

“Snohomish, Washington, 2005. We drove to the place from Seattle the night before to check it out. As we got closer, the streetlights became more and more scarce. It didn’t look like much of a city. When we passed ‘Tractor Crossing’ signs, we knew it wasn’t much of a town either. But it turned out to be the best gig. For not knowing anyone, they were the friendliest and the largest audience of the whole tour. People came from as far as 80 miles away for it.”

WORST GIG?

Once again, I’d rather not name the place, but it was at a large Seattle-chain coffeeshop located in San Jose. The stage area and seating area were divided by a pathway to the register. So as people would enter the shop, they’d stand in line, ignoring the fact that there was something going on.” ■

BY DAVE GOOD

Ronnie Hawkins is a name that is central to American roots rock. With his band the Hawks, Hawkins employed and mentored dozens of musicians who would have lasting impact. Burton Cummings, Roy Buchanan, and David Clayton-Thomas were Hawks; members of Janis Joplin's Full Tilt Boogie Band were Hawks. One version of the Hawks eventually separated from Hawkins entirely and took the name the Band. They backed Bob Dylan, helping him discover his electricity before moving on to their own storied career.

Around 1956, at the age of 14, a gifted pianist from Oklahoma named Claude Bridges — he later changed his name to Leon Russell — lied about his age so that he could hire on as a pianist at a Tulsa bar.

Although he never was a full-fledged Hawk himself, he played behind them when they came to town. He was that good. His reputation grew. Two years later, at an age when most teens were still learning to drive, Jerry Lee Lewis heard the boy and made Russell a full-time member of his backing band.

After a few years on the road with the dark prince of rock, Los Angeles must have seemed normal to Russell. He settled there in the '60s and became a studio musician. He worked for Phil Spector, recorded with Sinatra, the Tijuana Brass, Joe Cocker, and the Stones — even played on that pinnacle of pop records, Pet Sounds. He eventually crafted his own brand of swamp rock tinged with gospel and blues. It was a hit. By the mid-'70s Billboard magazine reported that Leon Russell was the nation's top concert draw. He became known for chart toppers like "This Masquerade" and "A Song for You," even though the latter, too, was based on a white lie. He admitted to a reporter that when he penned the line "I've acted out my life in stages / with 10,000 people watching," his biggest audience up to then had been about 80 people.

(To hear a sample of Leon Russell, call 619-233-9797, wait for the prompt, then punch in ext. 4951.)

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

A fan-managed website is called “The Walkmen — Who Doesn’t Like Them?” It’s true, it’s hard to dislike the band. Like the Strokes, the Yeah Yeah Yeahs, et al., the Walkmen came out of New York City around the turn of the millennium and immediately started generating a lot of hype. But unlike many of their contemporaries, the Walkmen didn’t quickly grow overexposed or start taking themselves too seriously.

The Walkmen are a little older than some of their peers, and they have a self-deprecating sense of humor and a way of making friends. They’ve done the usual scene-building things, like issuing a split single (with buzz band Calla), but more importantly they record some of the big names of Northeast indie rock at their own recording studio in Harlem.

That brings a kind of freedom to try things both creative and silly. Thus we have the Walkmen collaborating as a band on writing a novel and issuing an open invitation for musicians in the audience to bring horns to their shows and play along with the song “Louisiana.” We also have the Walkmen’s new album A Hundred Miles Off, on which the band stages a daring departure from their previous sound. Where before they sounded something like the Strokes covering U2 with Bob Dylan on vocals, now they sound like...well, like a band that doesn’t care whether or not you like them. In fact, even if you loved the old stuff, you may not like the new CD at all, but you will still have a hard time not liking the Walkmen.

WALKMEN, House of Blues, Friday, June 16, 8 p.m. 619-299-2583. $14.

BY OLLIE

Album: The Morning Way (2006)
Artist: Tefflon
Label: self-released
Where available/price: tefflon.com, CDBaby.com for $14, iTunes for $10.
Songs: 1) A Long Drive 2) Ludes 3) The Morning Way 4) Drunk Her to Bed 5) Calgon Take Me Away 6) Low on the Highs 7) Kodak Moment 8) Santa Barbara 9) Lighten Up 10) The Olympics Band: Alicia Ruggiero, violin, viola, vocals; Devin Swanson, guitars, bass, vocals; Brian Cantrell, drums; Sean Rose, bass; Rob Thorson, upright bass; Jeff Berkley, vocals; Ben Moore, organ

What can you say about acoustic college coffee-house bands? Not much. That's pretty much what Tefflon comes down to: they're an acoustic indie band. Tefflon seems to be attempting to differentiate themselves on two counts: 1) They've got a violin player whose aptitude outstrips the rest of the players', and 2) They've filled their songs with abstract, often-bizarre lyrics and popular culture references. "Ludes" is built around a line from Scarface: "That's okay! Another Quaalude, she'll love me again." Coupled with the standard rhythm section, slow, sensitive vocals, and classical violin, the song seems disjointed, as does much of the album. Another pop-culture reference is in the song "Calgon, Take Me Away." Yep, you guessed it. It's about life's annoyances, anger, and frustration, and the refrain repeats, "The mirror repeats it / Calgon, take me away / The surface reflects it / Calgon, take me away." You don't get it? Yeah, me neither.

The musicians are talented enough. Every draw of the bow, slap of the drum brush, and plonk of the standup bass are in perfect accord, moving at a slow pace, swelling and flowing beautifully. That's why the instrumental tracks on this CD are worth listening to.

Atwater: Fixin' to Die

Called "the point man with the chainsaw" and "the arch-fiend of spin," Lee Atwater didn't invent dirty tricks and argumentum ad hominem personal attacks on politicians; he just used them more indiscriminately than anyone else this side of Karl Rove. Cygnet Theatre concludes its third impressive season with Robert Myers's 90-minute take on the hyperactive hatchetman. The play suffers from a linear, biographical approach (some periods, like managing the 1988 Bush campaign, being more interesting than others; and the play assumes the audience knows about Atwater already). The production wrestles with the play's rhythms, as mercurial as their subject, all evening long. Atwater was ten kinds of moral swine, but Jeffrey Jones's performance amazes. Bouncing with nervous ticks and twitches, flashing world-sized smiles, Jones's Atwater is always on. Always gaming. He suggests sides to the character better than the script, and vulnerability, and, using cutouts of political figures (George Bush, Dan Quayle, etc.), often functions as a standup comic. This is living spin. And you never know when, if ever, he's being honest, even in the end when he has a brain tumor and renounces his evil ways.

Worth a try.

National Comedy Theatre

Improvisational comedy, making up funny stuff on the spot, is difficult enough. Years ago, however, Keith Johnstone thought it'd be more exciting if done competitively. He got the idea from pro wrestling ("where Terrible Turks mangled defrocked priests, while mums and dads yelled insults and grannies waved their handbags"). National Comedy Theatre, an offshoot of Johnstone's TheatreSports (artistic director Gary Kramer says the two compare like "rugby and American football"), resembles an athletic event more than an improv. Teams wear uniforms and compete on ActroTurf. The night I caught the show, three San Diego comedians played a challenge match against players from the San Jose franchise. Using suggestions from the audience, they played "Emotional Sympathy," "Shakespeare," "Blind Line," and "Freeze Tag," with judges awarding points to the best scenes. Klunkers and groaners got booed; quick wit rewarded (one of the most refreshing parts of the contest: people acknowledge failure, abundantly, then forget it). It made for a lively, often quite funny, evening. And Gary Kramer is one talented comedian.

Worth a try.

San Diego Theatresports: The FunHouse

A cross between improvisational comedy and Family Feud. Improv, making up a funny scene as you go along, is tough enough. Add competitive scene making, with the audience awarding points to the winning team. Purists might balk at the odiousness of comparisons used in this format, but the "game show" — on Fridays — is a hoot. The 90-minute evening offers different bits. The show I caught had "Team Sports" — two pairs of players competed, taking suggestions from the audience; and "Gorilla Theatre" — five directors invented scenes, using the other four as actors. The winner got a banana, the loser a "forfeit" (other formats include "Micetro" and "Improv Survivors"). Some attempts went nowhere (I repeat: improv is tough; I did it in my, as hindsight reveals, callow youth). Others made amazing twists and turns. The group makes the hits much more frequent than the misses. Their guru, Keith Johnstone, wrote one of the very best books I've ever read about making theater. And they put his

Triple Espresso: A Highly Caffeinated Comedy

Hugh Butternutt's done his lounge act at the Triple Espresso Coffeehouse 20 years to the day. While patrons sip a house blend — "Grape," "Scandinavian Blizzard," or "Mokoko Cocoa Mocha" — Hugh plays '70s tunes on the piano. He and his companions, here to celebrate Hugh's anniversary, got stuck in the '70s. The trio used to be Maxwell, Butternutt, and Bean, a comedy group that never went far. They're "losers," they admit, but not "ordinary" ones. And, hey, their reunion could help them face searing issues from their mediocre pasts. A formulaic story line? Yep. Straight from Forever Plaid. There's also the Forever Plaid problem: the three comedians are far too talented to play inept characters. One's a whiz at the piano. Another's a first-rate mime, and the third's a crackerjack magician. The trio is so talented, when the plot has them complain of difficulties to overcome, you wish they'd quit trumping up the pseudo-drama and get on with this highly entertaining, if lightweight show. (Note: the original cast members have been replaced.)

Worth a try.

The Violet Hour

Most scripts play better than they read. Richard Greenberg's comedy/sci-fi/literary salmagundi's an exception. It's a fun read: notions about time and human effort jump around, as do in-jokes for the literati. Onstage, however, it unfolds like a 90-minute chamber piece expanded, with filler, to two and a half hours. And throughout, Greenberg keeps pumping the brakes when he should be hitting the gas. The idea's a grabber: what would you do if you knew how your life will turn out? John Pace Seaver, budding publisher, reads not the book of his life, but books and articles about it (some of which are wrong): what's he to do? The play's obvious answer's much less interesting than the question. Violet Hour tries to yoke antithetical canvases together. Given these tuggings it's a wonder that director

Carolyn Cantor, and a game young cast, almost holds them together. Best of show: its hyper-period look. Robert Blackman's costumes shout "1919." David Korins's scenic design recalls the box sets of the era but with a flashy warp. His has only two walls. Another corner bullies into the audience, in effect combining design elements a century apart. Matthew Richards' lighting streaks golden sunsets across a New York skyline. OLD GLOBE THEATRE, SIMON EDISON CENTRE FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS, BALBOA PARK, THROUGH JUNE 25; TUESDAY, WEDNESDAY, AND SUNDAY AT 7:00 P.M. THURSDAY THROUGH SATURDAY AT 8:00 P.M. Zhivago Boris Pasternak's 1955 novel and David Lean's movie have a majestic sweep. By contrast the La Jolla Playhouse's musical version, now in its world premiere, feels cramped, truncated, like trailers of

Dr. Zhivago performed on a sound stage. Metallic girders dominate the look. No matter where the story goes, from Alexander Gromeko's New Year's Eve party to far Varykino, the set always resembles a high-rise under construction. The story feels even more cramped. Michael Weller's book speed-reads the novel so quickly that the characters have no time to breathe. Although Jessica Burrows tries to suggest depths, her Lara's little more than a blonde object of male desire. As written (and except for the songs Ivan Hernandez sings beautifully), Yuri comes off as a shallow romantic lead in a melodrama. Moustache-twisting dialogue also makes for melodrama, as do the musical's facile hero-versus-terrorists opposition (Joe McCarthy would approve this message). The production goes for big effects, including a railroad flatcar turning around, but Lucy Simon's melodic, Russian-tinted score is a star. When Zhivago breaks into song we get pages of needed backstory and characters suddenly have inner lives so different from their non-singing selves you wonder if they're the same person. The music's of such quality it doesn't need to be sung — as just about every song is — at full summer-blockbuster volume.

Worth a try.

Rabelais in Rio

“Let the feast begin!” pretty much describes the spirit of a Brazilian rodizio — a Rabelaisian orgy of all-you-can-eat carnivorous gourmandizing, leavened by a vast array of side dishes. Never read Rabelais? Here’s an abbreviated sample translated from his 15th-century satiric proto-novel about two traveling giants, Gargantua and Pantagruel, describing a feast prepared by a fictional people called the Gastrolaters for their gourmet god: “Coming near the Gastrolaters I saw they were followed by a great number of fat waiters and tenders, laden with baskets, dossiers, hampers, dishes, wallets, pots, and kettles. Then...opening their baskets and pots, they offered their god: White hippocras, fricassees, nine cold loins of veal...Monastical brewis. Zinziberine. Brown bread. Gravy soup. Beatille pies. Carbonadoes, six hotch-pots...Marrow-bones, toast, brawn. Household bread and cabbage. Sweetbreads. Capirotadoes. Hashes. Eternal drink intermixed. Brisk delicate white wine led the van; claret and champagne followed, cool, nay, as cold as the very ice, I say, filled and offered in large silver cups.”

The closest most of us will ever come to the Gastrolaters’ food-fest is at a rodizio. In all large Brazilian cities, the most popular restaurants are churrascarias, which serve meats grilled in the style of the gauchos of the southern pampas. The rodizio is a specialized form that arose in Rio de Janeiro. It features waiters wielding swords heavy with meats, from which diners request hunks or slivers of the cuts they want to taste. The circulation of waiters is constant, and groaning buffets hold a variety of side dishes — the only limit is the diners’ appetites.

Rodizios became a fad in New York about a decade ago and have tentatively made their way west. The new Samba Grill in Horton Plaza is the second location of a Brazilian-run restaurant in Salt Lake City that’s won numerous awards in its hometown. With Father’s Day approaching, it seems a fit destination for a meat-loving, grill-hugging dad.

You can smell Samba Grill before you see it: aromas of smoke and roasting meat greet you as you turn a corner to find the source: An open grill on the patio, filled with glowing charcoal rocks, is topped with a steel rotisserie where a slab of beef browns in the smoke. You can sit on the patio or eat indoors in a vast, airy room with well-spaced gaucho-style granite-topped tables, under walls decorated with Brazilian paintings and Amazonian bows and arrows. At the back, to the right, is an open kitchen with a long series of rotisseries like the one on the patio. To the left are two fully laden buffet tables, which they call a “salad bar,” although the tables offer more than salads. If you’re not up for a meat-fest, you can buy unlimited trips to the buffet alone and feast on Brazilian entrées as well as side dishes, for about one-third the price.

First, a waiter takes your drink order. Then, you’re free to roam over to the buffet. You need not bring your dinner plate — there are plenty more at the salad bar. The best strategy, I think, is to take a spoonful of everything that looks appealing, to taste and to share, then do a second run (if you’ve still got the appetite) to bring back more of your favorites.

The buffet offerings (especially the entrée dishes) change daily, and the array is larger at dinner than at lunch. On the table closest to the entrance, I found: chicken breast pieces in a delicious, slightly spicy tomato-coconut cream sauce, a lightened version of Bahia’s famous Xim-Xim (minus the customary peanuts and the smoked dried shrimp that most Americans don’t like). An equally delicious light, spicy stew of chicken thigh pieces strewn with red and green bell peppers. Feijoada, the national dish, a black bean and meat stew, with plain rice to serve it over. This wasn’t the best feijoada I’ve ever tasted (my partner says to tell you I cook a better one at home), because the only meat in it was beef chunks, and I missed the customary pork and sausage. Next was excellent farofa, toasted manioc flour that Brazilians sprinkle over everything, even pizza, and especially over feijoada. If it’s your first time, try just a bit — it’s an acquired taste. Unfortunately, there were no sliced oranges, which are typically served with this dish. Next to that, oddly, a heap of mashed potatoes adjoining a basinful of standard brown gravy — not very Brazilian but probably required by the Utahans at the home office as ballast for the beef.

dard salad dressings and a salsa. Penne salad, chick pea salad with golden pepper chunks, green bean and kidney bean salad, hollowed red peppers filled with canned black olives. Alluring “Russian salad” (which Brazilians call mayonesa) of peas and potatoes in mayonnaise. Mushy cauliflower, roasted potatoes.

At the other buffet table: Spicy marinated cucumber slices, hard-boiled egg slices, baby corn, corkscrew pasta salad, herbed potato salad, tuna salad — tuna salad? — and calamari salad.

Bearing two heaped plates, I returned to my partner. Sitting on each table is a hemispherical wooden cradle with a pin through it, holding a bicolored metal dial the size of a CD. You turn it to the green side when you want meat and to red when you want a respite. (Don’t turn it to red if you’re waiting for a certain meat, just keep fending ’em off until your heart’s desire arrives.) Servers in semi-gauche garb (green kerchiefs, white blazers) come parading from the kitchen, each carrying a round wooden block impaled with a spear of barbecued meat. Over an hour or so, you’ll be offered nearly every muscle of the steer, plus frango (chicken and turkey), pork, and lamb. If you can hang in there long enough, you may even be offered a final course of pineapple-ham kebabs. When you’re ready for the bill, turn the red and green dial to neutral.

All the meats are marinated and heavily salted, highly flavorful but, in standard tragic South American fashion, cooked well-done. The beef is certified Angus (the equivalent of high-grade Choice), which the restaurant purchases in prime cuts; they have their own butcher behind the scenes to break it down into Brazilian-style grilling cuts. For our first meat, we lucked out with slices of top sirloin cut from the center of the hunk, showing a trace of pink and boasting a tender texture. Later came even tastier cuts of prime rib, savory with its loose-textured rich meat and fatty sizzled edges. Skirt steak, too, proved a winner on the Brazilian rotisserie.

And there were tri-tip slices, top round slices and garlic-marinated kebabs of beef, redolent of “the stinking rose.” Pork tenderloin (dry) and ribs (greasy and good, like a tasty soul-food entrée). Turkey wrapped in bacon, which wasn’t dry, and chicken kebabs (which were), and chicken kebabs encased in browned skeins of grilled cheese (which we didn’t try). House-made Portuguese sausage was delicious (if overcooked, of course). And finally, what we waited for — Australian lamb kebabs, well charred and flavorful, hinting of some pungent herb in the marinade.

If your name’s not Gargantua, one way to handle all this is to pick and choose your favorite cuts and refuse the rest. Or you can take a little bite of each. If there’s something you want more of, stick around, it’ll be back. (One caution: the prime rib comes around less often than the lesser cuts.) Alas, you can’t get a doggie bag at any “all you can eat” place of any nation, including Brazil.

To drink — ahh! The nectar of the gods, by which gods I mean, of course, the Brazilian gods collectively called orixás in the candomblé religion brought by slaves from West Africa. Like the Gastrolaters’ hungry deity, the orixás are gourmets, each of them with a favorite foodstuff, among them: Ogun — god of iron, patron of warriors, machinists, and taxi drivers — likes to feast on feijoada; Yemanjá, sweet mermaid ocean-mother, loves Bahian seafood (she must be my patron deity). Then there’s Exu, god of the crossroads (whose French name every New Orleanian calls out at Mardi Gras — “Hey, Là-Bas!” — Louisiana patois for Haiti’s Papa Legba, Exu’s voudun equivalent). Exu, whose eternal drink is cachaça, Brazilian white rum, must have whispered to me to order the caipirinha (kye-pee-REEH-ya), cut limes in their peels pounded with superfine sugar, shaken with ice and cachaça, of which Samba Grill uses the very best brand, Ypica Silver. The pretty brown-eyed “Caipirinha Girl” rolled her cart over to our table and made the best caipirinha I can ever remember tasting. The restaurant offers many other cocktails, but none better than this icy, sweet-acidic nectar to wash down a meal of such size and weight.

Yes, the orixás were smiling on us that evening. Cursed all week with an appetite-killing flu, my partner and I put off visiting Samba until a Saturday night, when we rarely want to brave the crowds. Not only was the crowd at the restaurant about 20 percent Brazilian that evening, adding greatly to the festive spirit, but partway through our meal, the local Mandingo Capoeira troupe group assembled on the restaurant patio for a performance. It was evidently their first on the site, since a mob of professional photographers was gathered to shoot them. (From now on, the headwaiter told me, they’ll be performing every Friday and Saturday night around 6:00; the owner later told me it would be Saturdays and Sundays.) Capoeira is a dancelike martial art developed for self-defense by manacled slaves on the sugar plantations of Bahia. It was perfected in the 17th Century, when groups of them escaped to the backlands to form their own self-sufficient villages, called quilombos — the first democracies in the New World. There, the escapees used capoeira to fight off Portuguese slave-hunters trying to recapture them. The Mandingo troupe at Samba accompanied their dance-duels (to which breakdancing owes a visible debt) with traditional rhythm instruments and stirring call-and-response chants — a performance so rousing, the hairs on my nape stood on end. Afterward, a Brazilian sambajazz band played inside the restaurant near the buffet tables.

The food and atmosphere at Samba Grill are uniquely authentic in San Diego, a true distillation of Brazilian joie de vivre. The staff are charming and warmly hospitable, if not quite up to speed yet. Upon our arrival, our waiter instructed us on how to use the “meat dial” but forgot to offer us the appetizer list, which includes such Brazilian delights as coxinha (cilantro-chicken croquettes) and both mild and spicy house-made sausages. At the end, nobody offered dessert either, although the kitchen makes seven of them, so we didn’t get to try a passionfruit mousse, or the owner’s late mother’s invention, “Romeo and Juliet,” an airy cream-cheese mousse streaked with guava. We were full to the gills, but no matter — I think I could’ve found room for a Brazilian Romeo.

ABOUT THE OWNER

I caught owner Ren Souza in a phone call to his office in Salt Lake City. He told me that he and the highly experienced head-chefs of both the original and the San Diego branch are from the cosmopolitan São Paulo area (just south of Rio). Souza had been a small businessman and a city councilman when, out of a Brazilian’s hunger for his homeland’s cooking, he caught the restaurant bug five years ago. “I always like to eat,” he explained, “so I thought, if I need to do something to satisfy my appetite, I need to start my own restaurant. So I changed my lifestyle, and I have been happy ever since.”

I asked why he decided to open a second location in San Diego. “San Diego is the closest thing in America to the Brazilian climate, the spirit of the people, the beautiful surroundings next to the ocean, and just a very vibrant atmosphere. And there wasn’t an authentic Brazilian steakhouse in San Diego. There’s another one, but it’s owned by Koreans and it does not have Brazilian chefs either. Ours has Brazilian ownership, management, and chefs. Yes, you can learn how to do something, but that still does not make the authenticity, spirit, and creativity of the Brazilian culture. I feel that Brazil’s culture, customs, and its people have something to add to American culture, an enhancement of what life should be. So everything that I brought — the Brazilian paintings, the bow and arrows made by real Indians from the Amazon, the piranhas (they’re not alive, you don’t have to be afraid of them) — was to bring a sense that when you come inside Samba, you’re actually entering the world of Brazil.

“The Brazilian style of eating is a more healthy style. We don’t use processed items, we don’t open cans, we don’t buy precooked items frozen in a plastic bag... Your tastebuds recognize something totally different. In our restaurants, you don’t need a steak sauce to hide whatever flavor is in the piece of meat. We serve only certified Angus beef, and we have a butcher to cut it up every day of the week. We have a little T-shirt that says, ‘Our owners are mad, our cows are not.’ Brazilians in general are a much healthier population, not overweight, and having really good energy levels in life and love. One of the things that brought us to this level is the Brazilian gauchos, the heroes of the south, in the early stages of the Brazilian cowboy pampas — in those days, there were not a lot of places to eat. You’d bring a piece of meat and put it on a stick, rotate it a little bit over a bonfire, and you’d get a knife and fork and slice a little piece, and you’d spend all day talking and eating and having a good time. And that’s what life’s all about. Life defines its own meaning when you do something that satisfies both your physical needs and your spirit.”

His plans for Samba Grill’s future? To have capoeira performances every Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. To offer free Portuguese lessons on Sunday, samba lessons on Monday, and capoeira lessons on Tuesday. Clearly, he aims to turn Samba Grill into San Diego’s own Brazilian cultural center, starting with the food and gradually expanding into all aspects of life. ■

The Pizza Pioneer Of El Cajon

"Even the ground meat's kosher, for Jewish and Muslim customers."

There's nothing like a night discovery. Talking 9:30–10:00 p.m. I've got the munchies, but I know I'm on a losing streak. Even here on El Cajon. Every eating place is either blacked out or waiters are stacking chairs.

I resist the pull of a KFC and a Wienerschnitzel, and hey hey! Reward. A glowing little island of light up by 46th Street. It's a sidewalk canopy, red and green. Mad baskets of blue and yellow flowers hang underneath. Place looks so seductive I'm not even worried about the price, just so long as they're open. "Uncle Joe's Pizzeria," says the sign. Okay, I'm kinda in pizza burnout right now, but surely they'll have other stuff, like eggplant parmigiana, and lasagna. I could do with something like that.

'Course I get wary on the approach. Why should this place be open? But then a guy goes in with two big pizza bags, as if he intends to pick up more pizza for delivery. That's hopeful. And now I see two women chatting at one of the outside tables.

"Are they still open?" I ask.

Both get up. "We certainly are," they say. "Come in, come in."

The other surprise is the inside. It's not your average pizza-joint nightmare, with piles of greasy boxes and faded posters of Napoli. This room is new, warm and sophisticated, with salmon-colored tiling, live orchids, gilded-frame mirrors, a few photos of men and women in Navy uniforms — and best of all, through an arch, a kind of living room with tables, black leather easy chairs, a hanging tapestry of an Italian seaport village. They have glass carriage lanterns on the wall and a huge TV projection screen in the corner. Bunch of guys sit around chatting and watching as if it's their regular club.

The lunch menu's out, more's the pity. They have a lot of sandwiches with strange names like "The Recruit Training Center, Orlando, Florida." (This is chicken breast, bacon, avocado, provolone cheese, spinach, tomato, and onion, $5.49.) Or the "North Island Dental Clinic" (turkey, ham, bacon, $5.49).

"The sandwich list is, basically, the story of my naval career," says the other woman. Her name's Marsha. She's the owner, started this whole thing in January 2005. Something different from what she'd done before. "I was 22 years in the Navy, a dental technician and corpsman with the Marines, Seabees, but mostly Marines."

We're talking, I'm scanning... The dinners are more expensive, of course. Hope I'm going to make this. Have three Lincolns in my pocket. "Half and Half" dinners, like spaghetti and lasagna, cost $12.99, with garlic bread. I think they include salad. Pasta dishes like penne with baby clam sauce go from $8.99–$12.99. Chicken Alfredo's $12.99. They have rosemary chicken with roasted vegetable ravioli for $9.99, and a bunch of $11.99 "pasta dinner specials," like eggplant parmigiana, and chicken with mushroom sauté pomodoro. Drat. Spending 12 bucks before tax, tip, drink...no can do.

So I go for the meat lasagna ($9.99). And a coffee ($1.00). The breakfast cawfee I never had.

But all my dinero distress disappears when Benelia brings first a bulging salad bowl, then the garlic bread on another dish, and then a huge white plate with a massive chunk of lasagna sitting like the Half Dome at Yosemite. "All made here. The pastry, the bread, everything," Marsha says. "Even the ground meat's kosher, for Jewish and Muslim customers. I get it from the Near East Food shop next door. They only buy halal meat."

If I didn't have to work tonight, and if I had just a little more cash, I'd get a glass of Two-Buck Chuck, that pretty-good red wine Benelia shows me — though here it's four bucks. The whole bottle's about twice that. As markups go, it's not bad.

Meanwhile, Benelia has brought my coffee. One dollar! A huge French-style press-the-coffee-down affair that makes for mugs and mugs of really good, fresh-brewed java.

It's heading for 11 now. People are sitting around talking, while I'm still munching my fresh-tasting lasagna. Marsha's telling how, when she was in the Middle East as dental tech and corpsman, and among the first wave of Navy women to be in a combat zone, she helped comfort sailors from the USS Stark, which had been hit by Iraqi missiles. And how her husband William is still in the Navy, soon to be joining the USS Reagan, in charge of feeding...what? Five thousand crew aboard. He's a chief warrant officer.

Will, Marsha's 16-year-old son, is helping out. Benelia's watering all the hanging flowers. I decide to come back some lunchtime, sit outside, try one of those sandwiches. And, also, their "special dessert pizza." It's $8.99. Sigh. Sweet pizza! Meanwhile, I'm gonna have to take the rest of my lasagna home. I get up.

"So how come you set up your restaurant here, on El Cajon?" I ask Marsha.

"This town's changing," she says. "El Cajon Boulevard will be changing too. I don't mind being a bit of a pioneer." ■

Sea of Labels

"It's like you're selling your soul to the devil or something."

It started 1000 years ago, in Luxembourg, in the basement of the house belonging to Brigitte Baker's grandmother. Way back then, "There were alcoves carved out of the limestone," says Baker, arched alcoves just the right size for a triangular stack of horizontal wine bottles. One millennium later, copies of those same alcoves started serving as the point-of-sale display for the bottles at the very first WineStyles (there are now 60 stores open with another 50 or so in the works). "I wanted to duplicate something that looked really authentic and Old World. The idea was to transport people to another time and place when they walked into the store." Reason number one for the "Style" in "WineStyles."

Except it wasn't called WineStyles yet; it was called Bacchus. Let's back up a bit, or rather, jump forward from that 1000-years-ago origin, all the way up to 1998. "My husband and I had a barbecue," recalls Baker. "We invited all of our friends, and everyone who came brought a bottle of wine. And every single person made the same comments: 'I'm so intimidated.' 'When I go to buy wine, I'm lost in a sea of labels; I don't know where to begin.' 'I think I like Chardonnay, but then I buy a Chardonnay and it doesn't taste anything like the last Chardonnay I had.' 'There are all these magazines about wine, but when you're shopping, there's no information at the point of sale.' And because price points are all over the board, people were misled into thinking that if they spent $40 or $50, they would be guaranteed a good bottle — and that's certainly not the case." This was eight years ago, mind you.

Crush

MATTHEW LICKONA

Things may be a bit better today. But despite the efforts of countless wine educators, wine writers, wine marketers, and perhaps even wine drinkers, wine is still not entirely free of that Intimidation thing, that Confusing thing, that Uncomfortable thing.

Baker was no expert. What she was was comfortable. "Both my parents are from Europe. All my relatives still live there. I spent quite a lot of time in Europe, and so I was sort of cultured with wine. I thought, 'How can I get my American friends to have that same comfort level?' " She conceived of a shop that would sell less-expensive wines — "If it's under $25, it's a fun thing to enjoy every day" — but still wines that had that "boutique-esoteric" quality. She didn't want to compete with Vons. A shop that would include shelf-talkers with every bottle. (Beverages & More does shelf-talkers, "but isn't it funny that they just do it sporadically?") "In the beginning, a lot of times, if the wine was written up in a magazine, I would actually put the wine critic's quote." But after a little time and experience, "I started writing my own notes." A shop with a pared-down inventory to reduce that "sea of labels" feeling: "Instead of having 100 or 200 mediocre Chardonnays, we'd have 10 great ones and somebody there to hand-sell the wine."

Oh — and someplace easy on the eye. "My husband said to me, 'The shirt you're wearing, or your watch, or your shoes, were all probably made in an ugly factory. But I'm sure you bought them in a very nice retail outlet. Wine is the only consumer good that I can think of that's the exact opposite. It's produced in a beautiful factory — the winery.' But then it's sold in a warehouse. Alcoves, anyone?"

And then she took a page from the Progressive wine-list movement in restaurants and decided to group her wines by style instead of region or varietal — reason number two for the "Style" in "WineStyles." By this point, she had gone beyond merely conceiving of such a shop and was "walking the streets of Manhattan Beach, California, where I lived," looking for a location. She found a shoe store that was closing down, and a week later, she signed a lease — blissfully unaware of what it meant to run a business, let alone a wine business. "I was a model for many years and worked in retail production. I certainly did not have a business background or a wine background."

"It's like you're selling your soul to the devil or something," she says of the response to her attempt to open an alcohol-related shop. "I had people protesting me. I had to go to city hall and go before the planning commission. I was an entrepreneur. My partner jokes that an entrepreneur is someone who has no idea what they're about to face, or they'd never do it." To add to the stress, "The day after we opened, I found out I had cancer. We had moved my mother across country to manage the store, and we had to pay our contractors and inventory and rent and we had 30 days. We had $100 left in the bank, and I said, 'Oh, my God, this had better work.' Knock on wood, it did."

Brigitte Baker

During the first year, "I was in and out of the hospital. But my mom kept saying that people kept coming into the store and asking, 'Is this a franchise? Because if it is, I want one.'" Eventually, Baker franchised under the banner of Wine Made Simple. But, she says, "I didn't know what I was doing, and it became too much." She released her franchisees, "but people kept calling. I knew I had something."

She sought help at a franchise convention. There, she met her current partners, Bob Spuck and Bob Florio. "They said, 'Let's do it. But change the name. Most Americans don't know who Bacchus is, or how to spell it.' So we changed the name to WineStyles. In March 2004, we had our first Discovery Day, which is when people come and decide whether they want to buy a franchise. Everyone who came bought one. The first one

She doesn’t write the shelf-talkers anymore or even buy the wines — she has a wine director for that. And her partners handle the business/franchise side of things. “As the founder, it made sense for me to handle the PR. Plus, I like to do it.” She’s gotten good at the barbecue story. ■

RESTAURANT LISTINGS

The Reader’s Guide to Restaurants are recommended listings written by our reviewers (Ed Bedford, Barbara David, Ambrose Martin, Shari McCullough, Max Nash, Eleanor Widmer, Naomi Wise). Each issue contains only a fraction of over 500 reviews. A complete searchable list is available online at SanDiegoReader.com. Price estimates are based on the latest information available for a mid-range entrée. Inexpensive: below $10; moderate: $10 to $19; expensive: $20 to $24; very expensive: more than $25. Please call restaurants in advance for reservations.

NORTH COASTAL

The Armenian Cafe 3126 Carlsbad Boulevard (at Pine), Carlsbad, 760-720-2233. At this large cottage with a year-round heated sundeck overlooking Highway 101, the menu offers Armenian specialties cooked with a Lebanese accent as well as generic Middle Eastern crowd pleasers, including gyros made from scratch. Lamb shish kebap is the house specialty, a “loss leader” featuring tender premium lamb cubes with assertive seasonings, grilled over gas. Even better are distinctive dishes from the owner’s family recipes: his mom’s Lebanese kibbe (a large, glorified nut-filled lamb meatball) is outstanding, as is her kashta lea dessert — an exotic nutmeg sponge cake fragrant with rose-water syrup, topped with pistachios and thickened cream. Dinner platters constitute a full meal, including a great “Armenian salad” and a tasty dip for the meat, along with less-than-great egg-lemon soup, pilaf, and pita wedges. Wine list is dreary, but corkage fee is reasonable. Three meals daily. Live music and belly dancer Friday and Saturday night. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (8/03)

California Bistro 7100 Four Seasons Point, Four Seasons Resort Aviara, Carlsbad, 760-603-6868. This restaurant features fresh California cuisine in a beautiful, luxurious hotel dining room. Open 6:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. Sunday to Thursday (to 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday). Reserve for the Friday night seafood buffet (5:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.), which includes cooked seafood, sushi, and sashimi. Moderate to expensive. — E.W. (7/00)

Juanita’s Taco Shop Estilo Tepatitlan 290 North Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-943-9612; also in

Vista at 248 Main, 760-758-4531. Enticing aromas of fresh tortillas and fragrant frijoles greet you as you enter this busy little taqueria, where the food’s cooked in the style of Tepatitlan, a small city near Guadalajara. Its local specialty is carnitas — which Juanita’s does up (by the plate or by the pound) as tender, non-greasy shreds, served with fresh, cilantro-laden mild tomato salsita. Standard wraps are fine, too, and the beans taste as good as they smell. Try a “Flying Saucer” — it really takes off, with shredded meat, onions, mild chiles, beans, sour cream, shredded orange cheese, and puréed guacamole riding high on an airy crisped flour tortilla. Quick and good, open daily, three meals until 2 a.m. Inexpensive. — N.W. (9/01)

Kealani’s 137 West D Street, Encinitas, 760-94-ALOHA. Tucked between a 7-Eleven and a pizzeria, with an exterior sign that says “Saimin” (for Hawaii’s version of Top Ramen), this island of the Islands prescribes “Living Da Aloha Spirit.” A ukulele player sometimes serenades the noonday crowd at the sidewalk tables, and at any hour the food is “plate lunch” — two scoops of short-grain rice, mild house-made macaroni salad, and a choice of authentic “grins.” Don’t miss the outstanding kalua pig, zesty, smoky shreds of imu-style roast pork, resembling a moister version of Southern “pulled pork.” The menu covers the whole panoply of island standards, from malasadas (Portuguese donuts) to musubi (Spam sushi), with a Saturday special of a luau’s worth of “local food.” While you’re waiting, check out the droll Hawaiian vocabulary lessons under the glass tops of the tables. Open Monday through Saturday, lunch to early dinner. Inexpensive. — N.W. (10/01)

Milton’s Deli Flower Hill Mall, 2660 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 858-792-2225.

This sprawling, family-friendly eatery started out as a non-Kosher Jewish deli, but has come to embrace diner food, pub grub, and Italian and Mexican favorites, along with a full cast of Ashkenazi noshes. Sit down and stuff yourself with stuffed cabbage, overstuffed deli sandwiches, crisp-skinned fat cheese blintzes, matzoh brei, hot brisket with latkes — or chicken-fried steak, if that’s your bag. Or take out from the attached deli and bakery. The yummy chopped liver will remind you of the Bronx, the smoked whitefish and silky Nova will take you home to Flatbush, but the soft, cottony bagels — oy!, so goy! Seven days, three meals. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/05)

Pamplemousse Grille 514 Via de la Valle, Solana Beach, 858-792-9090. The locals’ favorite French provincial restaurant offers exquisite, creative cooking. Favorites from an often-changing menu include white fish served any style, mushroom cappucini soup, and tarte Tatin. Serene atmosphere with excellent service. Dinner reservations urged. Diner nightly, lunch Friday only. Dinners expensive. — E.W.

Pizza Port 135 North Highway 101 (at Lomas Santa Fe), Solana Beach, 858-481-7332. (Also in Carlsbad.) “Tasty Grub & Grog,” says the sign, and that’s just what it is. You come here for three things: the pizzas, the beer, and the scene. The place is cavernous, but the tables are communal, with long wooden benches. Rub shoulders with surfers, students, yuppies, and locals. Pizza Port brews their own beer (try Sharkbite Red) and flings their own pizzas, New York style. Filling combos can be great, like the pesto, mesquite-grilled chicken, sundried tomatoes, artichoke hearts, and feta (“Pizza Carlsbad”), or shrimp, clams, onions, olives, bell peppers, and mushrooms (“Pizza Solana”). Inexpensive. — E.B. (4/03)

Poseidon 1670 Coast Boulevard (south of 18th Street), Del Mar, 858-755-9345. The two dining rooms and bar here boast airy, stylish decor and ocean views, and the SRO umbrella-shaded patio is right at water’s edge. Lunches run to sandwiches, burgers, and fried seafood of ordinary competence and uneven preparation: wonderfully coconutty fried shrimp, for example, share a sampler plate with deadly-dry salmon croquettes. Dinner dishes are modern Cal cuisine — that is, a mix-and-match of Pacific Rim-Mediterranean-Mexican flavors, with some emphasis on seafood. But the view’s the thing here. Full bar. Open daily, lunch and dinner; breakfast on weekends. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (4/05)

Roxy Natural Foods Restaurant 517 North Coast Highway 101 (at D Street), Encinitas, 760-436-5001. You don’t have to be a Self Realization Fellowship follower to fit in in Encinitas, but it helps. Roxy was made for the veggie crowd who’ve grown up around the famous seaside compound. These days, that includes surfers, vegans, and even visiting Hollywood stars picky about their food. Actually, it is no longer strictly a vegetarian eatery: the owners have added chicken and fish for Encinitas’s “new people” — the carnivores buying up property in the hills. But the vegan-veggie spirit still rules. Most popular item on the menu is owner Shahram Naimi’s own invention: the scrumptious Roxy falafelburger. Its green “meat” is made from garbanzo beans, potatoes, onions, cilantro, and herbs, all bedded down with tomatoes, a thick mat of sprouts, and melted cheese, covered by a whole-wheat bun. For chicken-lovers, the garlic chicken pizzas sell big-time. Other healthy treats include the three-egg avocado omelet with toast, the artichoke sandwich (with marinated artichoke hearts), and the squash enchilada dinner (steamed banana squash with corn, bell peppers, and low-fat cream cheese in a flower tortilla). Payoff? You come out feeling good and full, not bad and bloated. Open daily, brunch through dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

St. Germain’s Cafe 1010 South Coast Highway 101 (at I Street), Encinitas, 760-753-5411. Despite the Parisian name, the food here is all-American. Omelets are the cafe’s best-known dish — 14 variations of three-egggers (or Eggbeaters by request) served with toast or a muffin, plus tasty herb-strewn “café potatoes” or fresh fruit salad. But don’t overlook the Belgian waffles, scrambles, pancakes, Louisiana sausages, or the three versions of expertly poached eggs Benedict with genuine hollandaise. Sandwiches run to hearty American classics (including some veg choices), and along with beef burgers, turkey burgers, and veggie burgers, there are no fewer than six twists on lean charbroiled chicken breast on a burger bun. The sheltered patio is always crowded, but there's a large interior dining room with a separate smoothies-and-ice-cream bar. Open daily, breakfast to late lunch. Inexpensive. — N.W. (10/01)

The Original 101 Diner 552 First Street, Encinitas, 760-753-2123. This is where the caviar crowd from Rancho Santa Fe comes to remember their roots. It's got all the deliberately down-home cooking you could want, including all-day breakfast ranging from really cheap biscuits and sausage gravy to a pretty cheap top sirloin steak and eggs. For lunch, the bacon-cheddar burger with fruit is a good surprise combo. The turkey-cranberry salad sandwich is also good, and try the spinach salad, with bacon, feta cheese, olives, mushrooms, and chopped egg. Even though this 101's vintage (1983) in no way compares with the Oceanside 101 Café's (1928), it has become a genuine part of Encinitas life — lines on the weekends will tell you that. Open for breakfast and lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/04)

Vivace Four Seasons Resort Aviara, 7100 Four Seasons Point, Carlsbad, 760-603-3773. If you ever wished to eat like the Medicis did, here's the place for it. This lovely hotel-restaurant at a gorgeous resort showcases Italian haute cuisine which is simpler and more natural than the French equivalent. You'll find inventive combinations of first-class ingredients, skillfully executed and beautifully presented with none of the culinary clichés of the "mamma mia" joints. Reservations urged. Valet parking free for diners. "Casual-elegant" — no hats, shorts, or tennies — but room may be painfully noisy if patrons get too festive. Dinner seven nights. Four-course tasting dinner a relative bargain, but wine list may blow the budget. Moderate (pastas and risottos) to very expensive. — N.W. (8/03)

When In Rome 1108 South Coast Highway 101 (at Encinitas Boulevard), Encinitas, 760-944-1771. This elegant restaurant offers three dining areas and a menu with outstanding appetizers and pasta dishes. There are many unusual preparations. Gorgeous presentation; warm, friendly service. A winner. Dressy-casual crowd. Dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Expensive. — E.W.

NORTH INLAND

Asia Vous 417 West Grand Avenue, Escondido, 760-747-5000. Chef-owner Riko Bartolomei produces outstandingly inventive Asian-French fusion cuisine, remaking the classics with fresh twists and superb ingredients, including naturally raised meats and poultry. No one does "fusion" better, and there's not a culinary cliché on the menu: e.g., everybody else's warm goat cheese with beet salad is replaced with goat cheese tempura and braised fennel. The inspired combinations include sweetbreads with Chinese sausage, potato gnocchi with lobster and vanilla bean sauce, house-cured hamachi atop a flower-like heirloom tomato mandala, and a Kurobata pork shank treated like French "confit" but lightened by a sprightly salad accompaniment. Bartolomei's desserts are not only homemade but as brilliant as the earlier courses. The international wine list is adventurous — all this, plus the unpretentious atmosphere and considerate service, too. (But the place can get noisy when full.) Reservations urged, even for lunch. Parties of more than six accommodated only with set menus. Two vegetarian entrées (including one vegan) on the typical menu. Lunch Tuesday through Friday; dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (11/05)

Casa Reveles Mexican and Seafood Restaurant Harvest Farms Village, 29000 Lilac Road, Valley Center, 760-749-8041. (Also at 201 Mission Avenue, Escondido, 760-480-5565, with a Mexican-Italian menu.) "Revels," as the locals pronounce it, is probably the best restaurant in Valley Center proper, offering zesty, careful cooking with some unusually authentic flavors. The Michoacán-style carnitas (available in several "stuffed" dishes as well as an entrée) are outstanding for their moist smokiness, and the house's slightly crunchy fresh-tomatillo version of salsa verde is exciting. Seafood is necessarily frozen (given the inland location), but is handled tenderly. In fact, everything's a good deal better than it has to be, given the Centre City Cafe 2680 S. Escondido Boulevard (frontage road along Centre City Parkway), Escondido, 760-489-6011. In the quiet little “motel row” just north of Lake Hodges, this cute, friendly café serves classic American diner food, including all-day breakfast. The chicken-fried steak is exemplary, with a crackly batter-crust and a smooth, peppery cream gravy. Several cuts of USDA Choice steaks are offered at rock-bottom prices, and early bird dinners and daily specials offer amazing bargains. You can eat inside, in a coffee-shop ambience, or chow down on the dining terrace in front. Open daily, three meals. Huge portions, low prices. — N.W. (9/03)

In this rural golf-and-tennis hideaway, Chef Gavin Kaysen features upscale, creative French-California cuisine, incorporating old-is-new techniques and imaginative combinations of seasonal ingredients. Desserts run fancy and very sweet. The weighty wine tome starts out expensive and goes up from there, with relative bargains at the high end and some half-bottles; by-the-glass choices are just adequate. To find it: Take Bernardo Oaks Drive (a long block west of Pomerado) north to the end of the road, to the RBI parking lot (with validated parking for restaurant-goers). If disabled, specify when you reserve, and they'll set up your table in an accessible area. Otherwise, there's a maze of short staircases to negotiate en route to the restaurant. Tie-and-jacket requirement now relaxed, but still very dressy. Great service, luxury resort ambience. Dinner nightly; Sunday brunch. Very expensive. — N.W. (11/05)

Fiore's Harrah's Rincon Casino, Valley Center, 877-777-2457. This is where Valley Center goes to celebrate special occasions. An island of serenity in the cacophonous casino, the restaurant offers fine certified-Angus grilled steaks and chops of various species and a fine slow-roasted duck. For starters, the salmon tower and shrimp margarita are delicious. Choices include numerous seafood entrées, and for lighter eating there's an Oyster Bar attached. The best attraction is the long, adventurous wine list, offering international bottles at bargain prices with by-the-glass choices galore. Half the fun is matching wines to foods. The beer list is sophisticated, too, as are well-priced cognacs and aged Ports. Business-casual dress code. Kids allowed in casino restaurants, not in gambling area. Reservations advised for weekends. Open for dinner daily. Moderate at Oyster Bar; upper moderate to very expensive in restaurant. — N.W. (3/05)

Hacienda de Vega 2608 S. Escondido Boulevard (frontage road along Centre City Parkway), Escondido, 760-738-9805. This is a Mexican restaurant with a difference—or two. The setting is a gorgeous restored Old California-style hacienda set on two acres, including a verdant courtyard (complete with fountain) for fair-weather dining. The menu is also a leap upward from standard fare. Señora Vega offers authentic Mexican cuisine cooked in the sophisticated manner of Mexico City, her hometown—not border-food compromises. You'll find an array of fresh and interesting appetizers along with a wide choice of serious entrées featuring complex, delicious sauces. Each dish is seasoned to the optimum spiciness for its overall flavor—this is not the land of the bland. The Sunday all-you-can-eat brunch offers a whole sampling of goodies brought to your table, with refills as desired. Five vegetarian entrées and a kiddie menu available; casual atmosphere. Full bar specializing in margari-tas, of course. Open daily, lunch (or brunch) and dinner. — N.W. (9/03)

San Diego Artisan Bakers 1551 S. Escondido Boulevard (at 15th), Escondido, 760-740-5963. This European-style bakery specializes in hearty, handcrafted, slow-fermented breads made from natural ingredients including certified organic rye and whole wheat that are stone-ground at the bakery. Pick up their brochure for the schedule of when each of the 24 breads they bake will come out of the oven. Recipes are from France, Italy, Germany, and the U.S. These loaves have textures and depths of flavor you'll never find in supermarket-bakery breads. And for breakfast or a snack, there's nothing better than settling on the front porch with a cup of espresso and one of the moist and chewy scones. Open Monday through Saturday, morning to late afternoon. Inexpensive. — N.W. (9/03)

The Grill 10920 Roselle Street, Suite #104, Sorrento Valley, 858-587-7940. Sorrento Valley is where you commute to work, not to live, so forget warm neighborhood eateries. At first glance, the Grill is what you'd expect—standard strip mall, bare-bones furnishings, office-lunch oriented. But the Greek owners give it character with generous but really cheap breakfast dishes like the feta cheese omelets and lunch specials such as luscious Philly cheese steaks. And they're flexible. Want bacon, sausage, and ham in your breakfast pita? They'll do all three, same price as with a single meat. As of this writing, the day of the three-buck breakfast ain't dead. Not in Sorrento Valley. Breakfast and lunch weekdays. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/05)

LA JOLLA

A.R. Valentien The Lodge at Torrey Pines, 11480 N. Torrey Pines Road, La Jolla, 858-777-6635. This is the closest in San Diego to dining at Berkeley's famed Chez Panisse—but the scenery is prettier. Chef Jeff Jackson's daily-changing menu of California cuisine emphasizes peak, in-season produce and top-quality meats and seafood, cooked to maximize and not disguise their natural flavors. For restaurant food it's relatively healthy, with less fat, salt, and “bad carbs” than most. Some frequently served menu highlights include tuna carpaccio, date-marinated Colorado rack of lamb, roasted breast of duck, and dreamy brioche bread pudding. The long California wine list is pricey, but there's plenty by the glass or half-bottle, while cocktail prices are moderate. Reservations essential on weekends. Validated valet parking, free self-parking. Quiet and romantic unless packed. Business-casual to dressy-casual attire. Just south of the Torrey Pines Hilton; look for road-signs to Golf Course and Lodge. Three meals daily. Breakfast and lunches high moderate, dinners very expensive. — N.W. (12/05)

Azul La Jolla 1250 Prospect Street, La Jolla, 858-454-9616. The unobstructed ocean view and opulent interior are glamorous. Cuisine is Mediterranean with California influence. Menus change daily. When available, try pan-seared scallops and the outstanding asparagus soup, not duplicated anywhere. Fresh fish and seafood. Moderate to expensive. — E.W. (7/99)

Come On In! 1030-B Torrey Pines Road, La Jolla, 858-551-1063. Clunky name, but suave Euro-bistro feel with outside tables under trees. This is your escape to “Paree” anytime you can afford La Jolla. Actually, they keep the price of breakfasts—like two “plain and simple” steamed eggs with fresh fruit and toast, or the “Popeye” omelet, with spinach, Parmesan cheese, prosciutto ham, and diced tomato, fruit, and toast—down to a small roar. Course, everybody in this neck of the woods is trying not to eat, so expect lots of fruit plates and healthy lunch sandwiches like roasted eggplant with zucchini, bell peppers, tomatoes, and mozzarella. Open daily, weekends to 8 p.m. Inexpensive to moderate; dinners a little more expensive. — E.B. (4/03)

Donovan's Steak and Chop House 4340 La Jolla Village Drive, Golden Triangle, 858-450-6666. At this excellent traditional steakhouse, the menu includes a variety of appetizers, among them a cocktail of giant shrimp with a spicy, tomatoey sauce and a large, lightly sautéed crab cake with house-made tartar sauce. The wet-aged prime beefsteaks are seasoned with sea salt and pepper and cooked on a gas grill precisely to your order. Bleu cheese, béarnaise and peppercorn sauces are available at extra charge. Non-beef entrées include fish, seafood, veal chop, pork chop, or a delicate Australian rack of lamb. Unlike many steakhouses where your money buys only the meat, entrées are served with vegetables and potato. Additional à la carte sides include creamed spinach and sautéed mushrooms. Among the house-made desserts the highlights are a light, creamy cheesecake with fresh strawberry sauce and a traditional creme brûlée. The service is attentive, friendly, and knowledgeable, in a masculine setting with dark wood-paneling, dim lighting, and only a moderate noise level. Cigar room off the bar. Open Monday through Saturday. Very expensive. — N.W. (9/02)

Great Khan's Mongolian Festival 4545 La Jolla Village Drive (University Towne Center), 858-678-0950. This is a chain that stretches almost as far as the Mongolian Empire, but that's because the idea is good. One meal, plenty of it, and guaranteed fresh because it's either frozen (curled shavings of beef, chicken, turkey, pork) or raw (veggies including cabbage, celery, broccoli, cucumber, green peppers, carrots, mushrooms, pineapple, water chestnuts). Stuff as much as you can into your bowl and hand it to the chef to braze on the huge hotplate, and add noodles. Bonus: gallery view of skaters or an ice hockey match while you eat. Open breakfast through dinner weekdays, earlier closing weekends. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/04)

Sante Ristorante 7811 Herschel Avenue, La Jolla, 858-454-1315. The name is Italian for “saint,” and the Northern Italian/regional cooking shines here, especially the fish and seafood dishes. Fresh seafood specials are available every night, in addition to those on the menu. Excellent pasta with mushrooms, ravioli with quail, and lamb chops. Separate room for bar; separate private dining room. Lunch Monday through Saturday, dinner nightly. Enclosed patio for lunch. Not to be missed. Moderate (pastas) to expensive. — E.W. (4/99)

Tapenade 7612 Fay Avenue, La Jolla, 858-551-7500. This is not only one of the finest restaurants in the county but in the country. Featuring sunny Provençal flavors, famed chef-owner Jean-Michel Diot offers superb seasonal ingredients treated with the consummate ease of a master chef. Among the special joys here are a sophisticated foie gras torchon, luscious free-range veal, and top-quality seafood, with garnishes that display an impressive balance of venturesome creativity and rigorous technique. Desserts are worth the calories, matching the style and flair of the earlier courses. And you don't even have to dress to the nines for your first-class dinner—the sixes will do in the easy bistro atmosphere. Serving lunch (including a moderate two-course prix fixe) and dinner daily, including bargain-priced three-course prix fixe “sunset dinners.” Otherwise, expensive to very expensive, and worth it. — N.W. (9/03)

MISSION VALLEY & THE MESAS

Boo Cho Korean Barbecue 7905 Engineer Road (a block east of Convoy), Kearny Mesa, 858-573-2585. What sets Boo Cho apart from other Korean barbecues is that wood charcoal rather than gas fuels the tabletop grills—proving easier to control as well as lending more flavor. The galbi (short ribs) here are outstanding, with tender meat and a subtly sweet marinade, and the hae mui pa jun (mixed seafood pancake) is moist and light. As at all Korean restaurants, with any dinner you'll receive numerous small plates of relishes and vegetables (called pan chan), lending a multitude of flavors to the meal. But since Korean dinners are traditionally served all at once, if you want a first-course soup or appetizer, order it separately, and when it arrives, order your main course. (Table room can get skimpy once the grill gets going.) The menu includes three “family combination dinners” but they're written in Korean; if interested, ask the owner or manager to translate for you. Open Monday through Friday for lunch; daily for dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (11/03)

China Max 4698 Convoy Street (at Engingineer), Kearny Mesa, 858-650-3333. The decor is plain and bright, the sound-level loud, but this is a major resource for authentic Hong Kong cooking — creative and multiregional, filtered through the refined wizardry of the genuine Cantonese style. The seafood aswim in the live tanks includes such delicacies as black cod (bony but wonderfully sweet), Dungeness crab, and (if you've got the money) abalone — but even inexpensive, homey dishes (e.g., wonton soup, crabmeat cakes) sing with flavor. The exemplary crispy squab and Peking duck must be ordered at least a day in advance, but you'd better call ahead anyway for reservations to avoid a wait at the door. A Pan-Asian community throngs here, for good reason. Lunch weekdays, dinner seven days, with lunch menu returning nightly from 9 p.m. to midnight. Inexpensive to exorbitant, but mainly moderate. — N.W. (1/04)

IKEA Restaurant & Cafe 2149 Fenton Parkway, Mission Valley, 619-283-6166, ext.1200. Central shrine for San Diego's 10,000 Swedes, so they say. They come to taste open-faced sandwiches, salmon, shrimp, and meatballs again. This restaurant inside Sweden's wildly successful "home interiors" chain is a great intro to Swedish tastes. The food's more sensible than exciting, of course. But healthy — beef and pork for the meatballs are guaranteed hormone-free. You eat the meatballs with Swedish lingonberry (not cranberry) sauce. Fish is big: the shrimp open-faced sandwich, the salmon plate with potatoes and broccoli, and the Gravad Lox Plate (cured salmon), are always on. And if you want to be disgustingly healthy, chew on their fresh vegetable plate (raw carrot sticks, cauliflower, garbanzo beans, and mushrooms). All for a song. The only health hazard: hordes of babies and kids romping in the restaurant's mother-friendly play area. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

Seoul B.B.Q. 4344 Convoy Street, Kearny Mesa, 858-505-8700. This Korean restaurant means sitting before a sizzling cast-iron grill, sipping hot sake, the smell of grilled beef, grilled onions, and fresh garlic in the air. Try the "Korean B.B.Q." marinated short ribs (tong galbi) or thick marbled slices of sirloin (beef gui). You'll enjoy all the accompanying dishes that make the meal, like crunchy seaweed salads, radishes in gar-licky tomato sauce, slow-cooked potatoes with soy sauce and jalapeño pepper. Feeling adventurous? Go for the goat meat hot pot or Korean steak tartare (yukhwoe). This is sensual, elemental, hairy-chested food. Lunch and dinner daily. — M.N. (12/99)

Tropical Star 6163 Balboa Avenue, Clairemont, 858-874-7827. A modest café and grocery offers Puerto Rican and Latin American food and groceries. Very modest surroundings; good authentic inexpensive food. Same menu all day Monday through Saturday; closed Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.W. (8/99)

THE BEACHES

The Australian Pub 1014 Grand Avenue, Pacific Beach, 858-273-9921. A great place to take your kids after a morning at the beach. This relaxing pub, owned by a true-blue Aussie, offers heaps of good Aussie food. Try the Road Kill

(grilled chicken breast with pico de gallo sauce and cheese "run over" between 2 pieces of sourdough) or the Aussie Burger (1/2-pound patty, with a fried egg, cheese, bacon, grilled onions, beets, pineapple, and a side of steak fries). And for an "outback experience," order up Vegemite (a beefy kinda paste) and four slices of bread — it's the Aussie national food, mate. Open Monday through Thursday 11 a.m. to 1 a.m.; Friday 11 a.m. to 2 a.m.; weekends 8 a.m. to 2 a.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/01)

Broken Yolk Cafe 1851 Garnet Avenue, Pacific Beach, 858-270-YOLK (9655). Breakfasting PBers love this place for three reasons: its sundeck, its 26 different four-egg omelets (which you can split with your partner, no extra charge), and the challenge of omelet #27. The dozen-egg "Broken Yolk Café Special" comes stuffed with a mountain of mushrooms, onion, cheese, chili, plus home fries and biscuits. If you can down it in an hour, pay just $1.98 — you've got huevos. If you can't, the yolk's on you — pay around $17. My advice: split a 4-egger. Open 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (2/04)

The French Gourmet 960 Turquoise Street, Pacific Beach, 858-488-1725. In the mood for pâté, ratatouille, or calf's liver in a homey atmosphere? Make a reservation at The French Gourmet's toute suite. Start off with traditionally prepared escargots or mussels. The onion soup is good, but hope that the soup du jour is gingered cream of carrot. Entrées include rack of lamb, veal tenderloin, bouillabaisse, and fish, with several preparation choices for chicken or filet mignon. The pan-roasted halibut is gently enhanced with a champagne beurre blanc sauce and topped with crispy braised leeks. Desserts abound, with an imported French cheese plate topping the list — along with pastries, meringues, etc., all freshly prepared in house. Open daily for lunch; no dinner Sunday or Monday. Bakery open daily. Moderate to expensive. — S.M. (9/04)

Hancock St. Cafe 3354 Hancock Street, Loma Portal, 619-296-2060. If you spot Marilyn, Elvis, and Lady Liberty waving at you from the sidewalk, you're here. They are life-size fiberglass looka-likes, but Mario is real, and his restaurant is a living shrine to jazz pianist Herbie Hancock. Mario has pianos, guitars, and drums inside — even a little stage where you're often welcome to perform. The food? Italian home cooking. Mario is from New York and knows his pasta. You can usually expect a good-value special, like spaghetti and meatballs. Sometimes he'll even throw in a bottle of red wine. Here among the little factories and auto shops of Loma Portal may be San Diego's most popping cultural phenomenon. Worth investigating, even if you just want to eat. Open daily, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/04)

Lamont Street Grill 4445 Lamont Street (between Grand and Garnet), Pacific Beach. 858-270-3060. PB's most romantic restaurant serves California comfort food, punctuated by bold and sometimes strange Mexi/Asian/Cajun flavors, in a rambling converted residence with several rooms and levels. Dinners come with soup or salad, and many entrées are served over marvelous house-made fresh pasta. Salmon over fettuccine in a delicate dill cream sauce is especially fine. The huge array of desserts is house made, too, with something for every palate. The most desirable tables (available first come, first served) are on a lovely fireplace-heated patio. Wheelchair ramp and parking in small lot behind restaurant (call ahead and they'll save you a spot). Homey atmosphere; can get loud. Affordable wine list, full bar. Open daily, dinner only. Moderate. — N.W. (2/03)

Saska's 3768 Mission Boulevard, Mission Beach, 858-488-7311. Venerable, local steak-and-seafood joint that tries harder, from the broth-thin homemade teriyaki sauce (sweet up front, fading to bitter ginger) for the well-cooked (if mild-flavored) fish to the cut-on-the-premises aged beef. The interior's low wood-slat ceilings, driftwood beams, dim light, and red-leather booths combine with the stay-up-late kitchen to make the space feel like a cozy haven, a respite from the brighter buzz of Mission Beach. The wine list runs the gamut from Cook's sparkling wine to Cristal champagne, stopping along the way at an interesting (if expensive) collection of reserves. Next door is the restaurant's serviceable sushi bar (858-488-7255) and two-story patio dining. Lunch weekdays, brunch and lunch weekends; dinner seven days. Sushi bar open nightly, 5:30 p.m. to 10:30 p.m. Moderate. — A.M. (8/02)

RESTAURANTS

the street, is first of all a wine shop selling most global bottlings for just 20% over wholesale. It's $5 to pop the cork there if you plunk down at a table among the racks to enjoy casual bistro-style food designed to go with wine. You can snack on goat cheese salad, smoked duck salad, a cheese plate or a pâté plate, or get serious with braised short ribs or duck confit surprisingly paired with spicy Nawlins red beans and rice. No reservations accepted, so best to go at off-hours or you'll wait for a table. Comfortable lounge with fireplace for sipping. Full bar. No corkage charge after 11 p.m., when restaurant staffers drop in for after-work noshing. Lunch and dinner until 1 a.m.; closed Monday. Low-moderate. — N.W. (12/05)

Umi Sushi 2806 Shelter Island Drive (at Shafter, off Scott), Point Loma, 619-226-1135. An instant neighborhood success, this large, cheerful sushi bar and dinner house also offers Japanese and Korean entrées, including teppanyaki (cooked in the kitchen, not at the table), Korean ribs, and excellent beef teriyaki of gently grilled prime beef. Sushi highlights include lemony ama ebi, rich garlic tuna, and a “Crazy Boy” roll spicy enough to divert your palate from the presence of imitation crabmeat. Free parking lot (often full). Special kids’ menu available. Lunch Monday through Saturday, dinner daily. Sushi prices lower than most; entrées inexpensive to moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

CENTRAL SAN DIEGO

Apertivo 3926 30th Street (between University and Lincoln), North Park, 619-297-7799. This wine bar-bistro offers “Italian tapas” of simple Italian classics lightened up and scaled down to medium-size portions — about the size you probably eat at home. All the condiments are on the table, so you can season or cheese your food to taste as you go instead of having a waiter waft them before you’ve lifted a fork. Good dishes include prosciutto-wrapped shrimp, eggplant rollatini, and for dessert, an airy lemon cheese cake mousse. Parking via alley 1/2-block west. No reservations, but for weeknight large groups, call ahead. Weekends, arrive very early or late or expect a wait. Call-in/take-out food orders okay. Check chalkboard on sidewalk for specials. Plenty for vegetarians and vegans. Sound level: roaring. Dinner Tuesday through Sunday (weekends until 11 p.m.). Inexpensive. — N.W. (7/05)

Big Kitchen 3003 Grape Street (between 30th Street and Fern Street), South Park, 619-234-5789. This isn’t just a restaurant, it’s the social center of the universe — and Judy “The Beauty” Forman is its queen. Blame her for the Fern Street Circus, for driving the Miss California beauty pageant out of town, and for disgustingly healthy dishes like Judy’s Favorite (spinach, mushrooms, sherry, and eggs). Our favorite: the avocado, cream cheese, and chives omelet. Vegans’ fave may be the “veggie option”: sautéed spinach, mushrooms, onions, cilantro, brown rice, tofu, and roasted garlic. Her cooks make pretty much everything on the spot, including muffins, waffles, and pancakes. While you’re waiting, they always have this “out there” eclectic crowd, plus walls filled with pictures and bon mots like “Will Be President For Food.” Breakfast and lunch only; closes at 2 p.m. most days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/02)

Chicken Pie Shop of San Diego 2633 El Cajon Boulevard, North Park, 619-295-0156. How much do people love this place? Count the chickens lining the walls — ceramic, wood, beaded, painted, even feathered. Hundreds. They’re gifts from generations of customers. Now, as in the 1930s when it started up, the basic chicken pie comes filled with big chunks of chicken meat, doused with white gravy and accompanied by mashed potatoes, veggies, coleslaw, a roll, and dessert — like the delicious pineapple pie — all for one really low price. The menu also offers fried chicken, burgers and steaks, but 90 percent of customers still order that same old chicken pie. Seven days. Cash only. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Kensington Grill 4055 Adams Avenue, Kensington, 619-281-4014. This spiffy spot in an old, staid neighborhood proves change can be good, delivering intelligent, inventive cuisine. Preparations follow the convention of contrasts in sophisticated cuisine — sweet vs. salty, soft vs. crunchy, hot vs. cold. Kensington Grill proves a talented, hardworking kitchen. Open for dinner nightly. Moderate. — M.N. (8/99)

Krakatoa 1128 25th Street, Golden Hill, 619-230-0272. This used to be an abandoned property. Now the swamp-green clapboard house is the coolest, if (reportedly) ghost-ridden, coffee-eatery hang-outery in Golden Hill. Its garden is lush and tropical, and on its wooden deck laptops unfold, essays get written, relationships get worked out. The menu is light, the names heavy: the breakfast sandwich (scrambled eggs, cheese, fruit) is the Wonchi (an Ethiopian caldera); the roast turkey sandwich with ham, cream cheese, and cranberry sauce is the Ubehebe (a dormant volcano in Death Valley); the Amboy (a Mojave desert volcano) is a peanut butter, honey, banana, cinnamon, and bacon sandwich. Open 6:30 a.m. to 8 a.m. seven days, Sundays till 6 a.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/05)

La Dona 1784 Newton (at Beardsley), Barrio Logan, 619-233-4939. This café is steeped in Mexican history, especially Barrio Logan history. You half expect to see several L.A. Zoot-suitors drift in as you inspect the black-and-white shots of the late actress Maria Felix (Mexico’s Marilyn Monroe) or the great photos of the Mexican Revolution that include Zapata and Pancho Villa. The place has been here for 63 years, and old timers say it reminds them of long-ago cafés in Los Angeles, Modesto, or Madera. The food is home cooking, Mexican style, with meals like scrambled eggs and chorizo with rice and refried beans. Watch out for the pot o’ salsa. It’s a real jaw-slammer. Other dishes to sample include chicharrones, menudo, and pozole. Seven days, breakfast to late lunch. Inexpensive. — E.B. (10/05)

The Linkery 3386 30th Street (at Upas), North Park, 619-255-8778. The artisanal “slow food” cuisine here features local ingredients and made-from-scratch preparations. Despite the name, there’s a full menu that includes tasty grilled vegetable appetizers and some fine entrées. But the focus is on the side dishes of fresh sausages made daily on-premises. These vary not only in composition but in palatability. Good ones include chicken curry, linguisa, Polynesian pork. Venturesome international wine list at low markups, plus international beers and Mexican Coca-Cola (better-tasting than U.S. made). Small parking lot (enter by alley on Upas just east of Jack in the Box). Noisy even when nearly empty. No reservations. Lunch and dinner daily, until 11 p.m. Moderate. — N.W. (7/05)

soned (and potentially very spicy) Ethiopian cuisine, served communally on a tray lined with a porous pancake, injera, which looks like an edible dish towel and serves as both an edible spoon and an edible tablecloth. (Use pieces of it to scoop up morsels in your right hand.) The meat combination platter here isn’t nearly as exciting as several of the specialties. The kiffo (spicy beef tartare) is very good, the gored-gored (meat cubes in spicy butter) is excellent; both are cooked (or not cooked) to your order, and seasoned to your specifications (if you say “hot,” expect fire). Vegetables are fine, too; the yellow split peas, especially, sing with flavor. Rest rooms not wheelchair-accessible. Vegetarian-friendly. Can be noisy on weekend evenings. Open daily. Very inexpensive. — N.W. (12/00)

South Park Bar and Grill 1946 Fern Street, South Park/Golden Hill, 619-696-0096. A genuine American bistro. This loud, lively, local watering hole serves savory comfort-food to an appreciative neighborhood patronage. Appetizer/bar menu includes excellent crab cakes with house-made tartar sauce, lively red pepper hummus, and a spicy chipotle-dressed shrimp cocktail, etc., plus lots of salads that can double as main dishes. The entrée side of the menu has literally “beefed up” to feature several steak cuts, but you can still get somebody’s mom’s mushy meatloaf (served with BBQ sauce), pork chops, simple fish preparations, chicken saltimbocca. Dark, swanky atmosphere, considerate service.

EAST COUNTY & COLLEGE AREA

Geno's West Coast Style Barbecue 291 West Main Street, El Cajon, 619-444-3667. Geno's a real guy, a refugee from corporate America who turned this ex-Taco Bell joint into a surfing-themed BBQ place. He's a surfer but he's serious. He has won lots of prizes for his BBQ sauce, using a chili pepper he says nobody else has. There are three strengths: "Round-up" (mild), "Giddy-up" (spicy), or "Stampede" (hot). Try #5, pulled pork and slaw, or #9, shredded beef, melted jack, and sautéed onions. Sides like dirty rice and cornbread are good, but if you're light of pocket go for the "Ripcurl" hot dog, the best deal on the menu. Open 10:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday, closed Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/04)

Johnny B's 4738 Fourth Street (at La Mesa Boulevard), La Mesa, 619-464-2465. This "Burgers and Brew" bar is a real 1950s place with burgers to die for and good bar snacks, including a zesty jalapeño dip. Play pool, watch TV, hide from your ex on the smoker's patio out back. On Sundays (1 p.m. to 7 p.m. only), their ten-ounce New York steak, fries, beans, and salad is a must-eat at a rock-bottom price. Open daily, lunch and dinner Monday through Saturday, three meals Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/05)

Sala Thai 6161 El Cajon Boulevard (College Plaza), College Area, 619-229-9050. With purple cloth napkins, white tablecloths, green banquettes, butter-colored walls, and a portrait of King Chulalongkorn, Sala Thai has all the trappings of a class joint — except you're only paying six or eight bucks for main dishes. The food? A bit gentle on the spice front. Tom yum kung, the famous shrimp soup, should make your neck hairs stick straight out, but if that's what you want you'll have to ask the cooks to make it spicier. Chicken mus-saman, labeled "medium spicy," is pretty tame but still delicious with its authentic taste-boosters like kaffir lime leaves. Hottest curry: "chicken green." Health treat: Som tum, the famous papaya salad. Lunch, dinner daily; dinner only on Sunday. Inexpensive. — E.B. (4/04)

Toshi Sushi 5943 El Cajon Boulevard, College Area, 619-287-3536. Don't ask what's in the "dynamite" sauce (besides the obvious mayo and smelt roe) — it's a house secret, one the restaurant dangles before you in numerous contexts. Try it baked onto the rich, everything-goes Garbage Roll, where deep-fried shrimp, freshwater eel, and tuna add flavor to the creamy-crunchy interplay of sauce and vegetables. Rolls, both plain and elaborate, abound here. While some can be heavy on the rice and light on the fish, others are triumphs. The Toshi Tempura Special Roll takes battered whitefish and wraps it around the seaweed casing, which is then filled with just-cooked whitefish and a host of garnishes — an exotic-yet-honey fried-fish alternative. The Johnny Roll shows octopus at its most tender, but watch out for spotlight-hogging sweet cream cheese. The simpler sushi can vary — a brilliant, translucent slice of tuna offset by a blander, duller salmon. Japanese entrées are also available. Inexpensive to moderate. — A.M. (4/02)

Valley House Restaurant 10767 Woodside Avenue (at Magnolia), Santee, 619-562-7878. This is for Cornbelt folks, plus wannabes who enjoy plain-speaking, plenty-of-it Iowan food. Take the morning special, "Iowa Breakfast": breaded pork tenderloin, two eggs, and hash browns, fries, or grits, plus a choice of biscuits, muffins, or toast — it's delicious. Lunch or dinnertime you can't go wrong ordering the signature "Iowa Porker" hot sandwich (breaded pork tenderloin in a bun with soup, potato salad, or steak fries) or the "Iowa Beefers" (seasoned ground beef simmered in chicken broth, piled into a burger bun). Open three meals, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (8/01)

FAR EAST

Bernard's The Mall (way in back), 503 Palm Canyon Drive, Borrego Springs, 760-767-5666. Owner Bernard Hess must be from Alsace, on the French-German border — who else would offer both frog's legs in garlic sauce and a tasty, credible choucroute garni (sauerkraut and smoked meat casserole, including house-smoked pork chops)? At this local favorite, the space divided between a convivial bar and a dining room with lunch-counter and booth seating, the menu includes German, French, and truck-stop U.S. classics — schmitzel side by side with chicken-fried steak. The waitresses know most patrons by name, and the patrons walk in already knowing what they're going to order — mainly the Alsatian specialties. Wine list runs to third-rate Californian, but there's an affordable chardonnay (and beer works with this food, too). Closed Sunday. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

Mediterraneo 1347 Tavern Road (Alpine Creek Shopping Center), Alpine, 619-445-9902. The vibe in this tasteful little trattoria (with adjoining bar) is young, and so is the chef, still slipping new dishes into a menu stuffed with local favorites. The theme is Tuscan-American, shrimp involtini alongside applewood-smoked pork salad (the latter, especially, is a smoky, nutty, tangy hit). The pizzas are outstanding — such a lovely, airy, silken crust! Such wafer-thin rounds of pepperoni! Entrées change with the seasons. Desserts are big and sweet. When the weather's fine, dine on the patio and watch the sun drape light over the piney hills. Daily, lunch and dinner, plus Sunday brunch. Expensive. — A.M. (12/03)

Paipa's Oasis Sycuan Casino, 5469 Casino Way, Dehesa, 619-445-6002. Forget gambling — gambol through the slots till you pass under two huge elephant tusks. The "Joe and the Volcano"-style place with a fountain tower gurgling in the center is Paipa's. Pay the woman. Now decide: a lot of a little, or a little of a lot. The huge salad bar is surrounded by a groaning U-shaped table laden with everything from peel 'n' eat shrimp to baked cod to Certified Black Angus prime rib. Keep coming back. Save them from throwing away this stuff. End with, say, strawberry cheesecake and coffee. Unlike the other suckers, you've gotten a return on your money. Moderate. — E.B. (10/01)

UPTOWN & OLD TOWN

Blue Water Seafood Market and Grill 3667 India Street (at Chalmers), midtown, 619-497-0914. This bright, clean charmer a half-block south of El Indio has a double identity: First, it's a retail fish market; aside from Whole Foods, this is the only restaurant-quality fresh raw seafood south of I-8 and west of City Heights. If you love oysters, don't miss the big, buttery bivalves here. Second, it serves simple, terrific seafood to eat in or out. Plates are plastic, but don't look for greasy fried stuff. Entrées are grilled gently until perfectly done, topped with your pick of flavors (the lemon-garlic butter is especially tasty) and come with rice and a huge salad with your choice of terrific house-made dressings. If indecisive, ask what's best that day. The overstuffed grilled fish tacos are messy and perfect, with just the right proportions of ingredients. Reachable only by driving north on India. Metered street parking by day. Good choice of beers, a few affordable wines, no corkage for BYOW. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Inexpensive to low moderate. — N.W. (4/05)

Bombay Exotic Cuisine Of India 3975 Fifth Avenue (between University and Washington), Hillcrest, 619-298-3155. We're talking northern India here, right? That means lots of lamb, potatoes, creamy sauces, tandoor-baked breads, chicken, and less of the south's mouth-scalding heat. At least in its daily buffet, Bombay's a lot less spicy, (though their sag paneer — creamy, cheesy spinach — delivered a surprising punch). The buffet includes tandoori chicken, assorted pakoras (lentil-batter fritters), mock duck, chicken tikka, and, if you hit the right day, an addictive mango soup. If you want meat or spicy food, best to order from the menu — say, a creamy tikka masala with lamb, or long kebabs of minced lamb (kebab curry), or the rich Bombay Coconut Malai. Tell them whether you want it mild, spicy or, for leather-mouths, tikhi. For a cheap, light meal, try a couple of lamb samosas. And be sure they bring the chutneys, India's real unexplored treasure. Lunch and dinner; buffet at lunch and Monday evenings only. Sister restaurant, Monsoon, 729 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-234-5555. Moderate. — E.B. (4/03)

usual Mexican specialties in an intimate Spanish-style dining room or on a small heated balcony. The menu celebrates three great pre-Hispanic cuisines — Aztec, Mayan, Nahuatl — with discreet admixtures of France, Spain, and Italy. (It's the history of Mexico on a plate.) Among the highlights are the five different Oaxacan moles (plus a sixth from Chiapas), local sea bass in tangy jamaica (hibiscus) sauce, and a unique appetizer, tlacogos cuiltlacoche, ovals of blue corn masa topped with a sort of "mushroom" that grows on corn ears. (In English it's called "corn smut," but it tastes much nicer than that sounds.) The bar stocks over 600 tequilas and makes a food-friendly on-the-rocks margarita with fresh fruit juices. Open daily, lunch and dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (2/01)

El Indio Mexican Restaurant 3695 India Street, midtown, 619-299-0333. El Indio, "the god of Mexican food," presides over this bustling (expect a line), airy restaurant in an atmosphere of pale blue 1940s solidity. The menu includes the usual suspects (burritos, tacos, etc.), plus slightly less common items (machaca, chile rellenos). Excellent house-made corn tortillas help the standard fare to better approximate the divine. So do the sublime core flavors of the meats — the chicken in the taco and the beef in the enchiladas. The carne asada sports a pleasant char, and the beans have a raw-beany intensity. Less heavenly: seasonings (especially paprika and salt) tend toward the heavy side. Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Inexpensive. — A.M. (11/01)

El Zarape 4642 Park Boulevard, University Heights, 619-692-1652. This stylish little Mexican restaurant on a tony stretch of Park Boulevard is proof that not all taco shop food is equal. Try a shredded beef or chicken taco or tostada and you'll know what we mean, with their generous mounds of juicy, slow-cooked meat. Many enjoy their unusual scallop burritos, vegetarian potato-filled burritos and rolled tacos, and well-prepared soups. We go for the stewed meat. El Zarape is dependable, serving Mexican with solid, homemade, handmade flavor. Three meals daily. Inexpensive. — M.N. (1/00)

Islander Grill Embassy Hotel, 3645 Park Boulevard (at Cypress), 619-297-3929. Here's a chance to sample the unique tropical cuisine of Guam, an island at the crossroads of the South Pacific. The cooking includes traces of Mexico, the Philippines, Japan, and Hawaii — all filtered through the spicy Chamorro palate. Try the chicken kelaguen, a citric salad resembling ceviche, or the brilliant coconut shrimp (available as a starter or entrée). Stews are flavorful: The saucy "pot roast" is definitely not your mother's, unless Mom's from Guam, and the chicken stews are equally savory. Other choices include a range of salty, teriyaki-style barbecued meats, barbecued chicken in a less salty marinade, plus numerous exotic appetizers. Free parking in small hotel lot. Everything available for take out. No alcohol. Lunch through dinner daily, early dinner Sundays. Very inexpensive. — N.W. (3/05)

Jimmy Carter's Cafe 3172 Fifth Avenue (at Spruce Street), Hillcrest, 619-295-2070. This comfy, middle-class eatery has a surprise — great Indian breakfasts (until 11:30 a.m. weekdays, 3 p.m. weekends). Try their chicken curry or pessaratu (mung bean crepe with onions, peppers, ginger, dhal, and chutneys). Or vegetarian vindaloo. Jimmy (no, not the ex-pres) does Chinese too — like the Mongolian beef (Chinese vegetables and beef in a hot chili sauce over rice or noodles), or good Mexican dishes such as chili verde (pork or chicken simmered in spicy tomatillo sauce). But center stage is his all-American Jimmy Burger (1/3-pound patty with potato or carrot salad). One bonus: a fine tangential view of Balboa Park's lawns and trees. Open daily, breakfast through dinner. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/01)

Laurel Restaurant 505 Laurel Street (at Fifth), uptown, 619-239-2222. Freshly remodeled and remade by Tracey Borkum, the owner of Chive and Kensington Grill, the restaurant looks like a million bucks (the price she bought it for). In a chic, creamy dining room below street level you'll enjoy modern eclectic cuisine with French and Mediterranean flavors showcasing premium in-season ingredients, including free-range chicken and pork. No bread unless you pay for it, but you get edamame to nibble while awaiting your order. The global wine list is extensive and expensive; selected bottles are half-price on Sundays. The full bar features creative cocktails and 20 sakes. Valet parking $6. Several steps down from street level; disabled access via carport on Fifth Avenue (phone before coming to ensure that entry is open). Open for dinner nightly. Expensive, but an early-bird three-course chef menu is moderate. — N.W. (3/06)

Parallel 33 741 W. Washington Street (at Hawk), Mission Hills, 619-260-0033. Southern China, Pakistan, Algeria, Morocco, et cetera — are all on the 33rd parallel. This ethnoblend restaurant in Mission Hills is a hit for shrewd, thoughtful creativity. It's not just "fusion food." Try the superb mango and ahi appetizer. Entrées show that chef Amiko Gubbins, of Café Japengo fame, knows what she's doing. Dinner Monday through Saturday. Moderate to expensive. — M.N. (10/99)

in La Mesa!

Shakespeare Pub & Grille 3701 India Street (at Washington), South Mission Hills, 619-299-0230. Probably the most convincing English pub in town. The Bard's brew-house boasts bare-board floors, diamond lead-glass windows, and authentic Brits sitting around the bar quaffing ale from their own pewter mugs. Pub grub is bluff and plain-spoken. Shepherd's pie, bangers and mash, ploughman's plate (the pickled onions and cheese, Scotch egg, and Branstons pickle make it the real thing) — all are great with a pint of rich English beer, say a Boddington's Pub Ale. Sunday's roast beef dinner is worth dragging yourself out of bed for, too. The pub includes a shop that sells British goods. Lunch and dinner daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/01)

Trattoria Positano 142 University Avenue (at Third Avenue), Hillcrest, 619-294-6995. This younger sister to its namesake restaurant in Cardiff-by-the Sea is sure to be one of your favorite restaurants, not only for hearty but refined Italian food, but also for the warm atmosphere. Try sea bass, salmon, or any of the pasta dishes. A treat. Lunch and dinner daily except Monday. Upper moderate. — E.W. (5/99)

DOWNTOWN

Brickyard Coffee and Tea 675 West G Street, downtown, 619-696-7220. The problem, if you're rich enough to live in the Marina District, is the lack of café life. That is, until this modest little eatery and café settled in next to the tracks by the Seaport Village trolley stop. You sit under eleven poplar trees in a brick patio that has one unusual downtown advantage — except for the wind sifting through the poplars (or a trolley pulling in), it's completely silent here. Sipping coffee and reading your paper is the thing here, but you can fill up, too, with items like "Texas chili," or grilled cheese and tomato sandwich with a cup of chili, or spinach and mushroom quiche with a small Caesar salad, or panini. You can also order half a sandwich — turkey, ham, beef, or tuna — with a cup of soup or Caesar salad. It's the nearest thing to a French country café. Open early morning till 2 p.m. daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/04)

Cafe Cerise 1125 Sixth Avenue (at C Street), downtown, 619-595-0153. The name is French for "cherry," and although the café's logo looks more like a cherry bomb, this craftsmanly kitchen is no dud. Chef-owner Jason Seibert seems blessed with an instinct for deciding what goes with what, and in what proportions. His daily-changing Euro-Cal bistro menu emphasizes fresh, in-season produce and plenty of slow-cooked comfort foods, prepared honestly from scratch. Don't miss the day's choice of house-made pâtés or sausages, the herb-stuffed organic chicken, or the fish en papillotte. There's an adventurous, affordable wine list and a full bar. The modest bill for such an indulgent feast is the cherry on top. Lunch weekdays; dinner Tuesday through Saturday. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (5/04)

Cafe Chloe 721 Ninth Avenue (at G Street), East Village, 619-232-3242. How did we ever manage before this indispensable bistro opened? In a bright and beautiful setting with small tables, bar-seating, and a patio, you'll find light and lovely Parisian-style bistro fare with substantial breakfasts, svelte lunches and dinners, and sophisticated bar-nibbles. Don't miss breakfast's poached eggs with sage-truffle beurre blanc or, at later meals, mussels in saffron broth with frites or lamb with chermoula. Nightly specials keep the menu interesting, and desserts are worth every calorie. Beverages include divine lavender lemonade, specialty root beer, and an intelligent wine list at modest markups, everything available by the glass. Metered street-parking daytime. No reservations except large groups. Three meals Monday through Friday, brunch and dinner Saturday and Sunday. Moderate. — N.W. (7/05)

Chive 558 Fourth Avenue (near Island), Gaslamp, 619-232-4483. Here you'll find a new cuisine for the upscale residential neighborhood rising around the restaurant. Diners can choose an adventurous meal or an evening of sophisticated comfort food. Urbane multicultural fusion dishes dance cheek to cheek with remade American classics and the occasional sleek French luxury dish. A "grazing menu" features small bites for folks on a diet or on the run. The menu changes seasonally, but you can trust the kitchen any time of year. Very noisy. Full bar. Dinner nightly, until 11:30 p.m. week-ends. Full meals expensive; "grazing" can be moderate. — N.W. (3/06)

Dobson's 956 Broadway Circle, downtown, 619-231-6771. This reputable downtown restaurant offers class and comfort, geared for people who enjoy eating well. The food is good, often very good, as with chicken liver mousse pâté, Mediterranean blue mussels, and, when available, the crude but virtuous soft-shell crab. Their sweets, such as brownies, are hefty, louché, and cheap. Bring a date to the upstairs dining room. Dobson's is suave, its confidence infectious. Lunch and dinner Monday through Friday; dinner only on Saturday. Moderate to expensive. — M.N. (10/98)

George's on Fifth 835 Fifth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-702-0444. This steakhouse is in a historic building that was once a hangout of Wyatt Earp — it now boasts faux-Victorian decor and amusing wall art. Formerly Roger's on Fifth, it was owned by former mayor-felon Roger Hedgecock; now Roger's rabbit and left it to his partner George Harrington. It's still wildly popular with conventioners on expense accounts. The menu offers Prime and ultra-Prime steaks, some of it at jaw-dropping prices — although entrées do include free vegetables. Ask for sauces on the side unless you like them thick and heavy. Some of the best items are nonbeef: the cold seafood appetizers ("lobster Martini," oysters, tuna tartare) and a juicy grilled pork chop. Good range of wines at normal to slightly high markups; full bar. Valet parking; cheaper lot through alley next to restaurant. Dinner nightly. Expensive to extreme. — N.W. (3/04)

Harbor House 831 West Harbor Drive, Seaport Village, downtown, 619-232-1141. This two-story Midwesterner-friendly eatery caters mainly to tourist families and conventioners, but the upstairs Oyster Bar is a pretty spot to chill out and watch the sailboats over a good margarita and a plateful of iced bivalves. Upstairs preparations tend toward simple American coastal dishes; the menu includes more appetizers and the drinks include artisan beers. The downstairs main dining room features more old-fashioned "haute" preparations and has a longer wine list but no view. All foods and drinks from both venues are available by request on both floors (but not all servers know this). Parking free with validation for two hours. Reservations strongly advised for after 6:15 p.m. any evening. Accessible via elevator from main dining room, with entrance on the park (south) side of the building. Lunch and dinner daily upstairs; dinner only downstairs. Moderate to expensive. — N.W. (8/05)

Indigo Grill 1536 India Street, Little Italy, 619-234-6802. This second — and much grander — incarnation of Chef Deborah Scott's Indigo Grill expands her original Native American motif, with its focus on root vegetables, game, and roasted spices. Now, the Pacific Coastal cuisine takes in more coast than most, drawing upon ingredients and techniques from Alaska to Oaxaca. (The decor, dark and urban-primitive, follows the theme.) Unexpected combinations are a mainstay; a single dish, such as the seafood mixto, may span the entire distance, bringing together a multitude of flavors that work together to create a wondrous whole. Fine breads are made in-house, as are desserts (try the decadent, crispy-creamy plantain cheesecake flautas). The wine list includes interesting varietals. Lunch weekdays, dinner nightly; closes early Sundays, but open until 11 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Lunch: inexpensive to moderate; dinner: moderate to expensive. — A.M. (11/02)

La Casita 1247 C Street (at 13th Street), downtown, 619-531-0044. Don't be fooled by the li'l old blue-and-white clapboard house at the bottom of City College's hill. Princes and politicians come to this full-service restaurant to hammer out deals, mix with the Latino (or Anglo) community, and eat some of the best chorizo con huevos (spicy pork sausage with eggs) in town. Fair-weather eaters flock to the spacious garden patio to chow down among the songbirds. In the cozy Mexican-style interior, the pictures on the walls tell you who-all comes here for the good tacos and enchiladas or the delicious pork burritos. Most delicious of all is watching Anglo City-Hallers trying valiantly to learn to love the house-made menudo (tripe soup). Lunch delivery anywhere downtown. Open weekdays, breakfast through early dinner; Saturday breakfast and lunch. — E.B. (11/00)

vention Center finally had to bow to conventional tastes and simplify into a fifties-style steak-and-seafood house. Kings Seafood is still the owner, so the fish quality remains fine. The fare is simple, with minimal sauce or garnish; vegetables cost extra, coming in large portions but merely adequate preparations. Best dishes include “BBQ Shrimp, Man-ales’ Style,” a buttery, spicy New Orleans extravaganza (available as starter or entrée), and the huge, juicy rib-eye “Cow-boy Steak.” Valet parking at door. Wraparound heated dining patio. Noisy in dining room near bar; request “Nude Room” for quiet. For interesting wines at good prices, look into “Adventures” sections of the list. Dinner nightly, week-ends until 11 p.m. Fish moderate, meats expensive. — N.W. (7/03)

Napa Valley Grille 502 Horton Plaza, Gaslamp, 619-238-5440. This restaurant at the top of Horton Plaza is staffed by professionals and the food is very good, including the excellent calamari plate. Try the airy, sweet goat cheese cheese-cake for dessert. There is an elegant homeyness to Napa Valley Grille, a com-forting, satisfying dining experience. Moderate to expensive. — M.N. (3/00)

Sixth Avenue Bistro 1165 Sixth Avenue (at B Street), downtown, 619-239-4194. This charming, airy café offers some very credible New Orleans-style cooking at affordable prices. Among the sandwiches are an outstanding oys-ter po’ boy (with big juicy oysters and good light batter) and a fine, fully-packed approximation of a muffaletta, albeit with a kaiser roll standing in for Central Grocery’s big, round Italian bread. The mix-it-yourself jambalaya is tasty, too, even if kielbasa proves a lame substitute for chaurice or andouille. Wine and beer. No reservations, breakfast to early din-ner (closes 8 p.m.). Inexpensive. — N.W. (3/01)

SOUTH BAY & CORONADO

Azzura Point Loews Coronado Bay Resort, 4000 Coronado Bay Road (Silver Strand Boulevard), Coronado, 619-424-4000 or 619-424-4477. The quietly luxurious dining room with a serene bayfront view is romantic and a bit dressy, but far from stuffy. It’s not just for tourists, but a lovely evening’s getaway for locals. The California-French cuisine with an occasional Hawaiian touch em-phasizes seasonal ingredients in slightly unexpected combinations. Along with a multi-course chef’s tasting menu and à la carte dishes, a “sea spa” dinner show-cases fresh seafoods in healthful prepa-rations. A good wine list at reasonable markups is strong on half-bottles. Free valet parking at the porte cochere of the main lobby. Dinner Tuesday through Sunday. Very expensive. — N.W. (11/01)

Bay Beach Cafe Ferry Landing Mar-ketplace, 1201 First Street, Coronado, 619-435-4900. The dinner menu here has California’s typical dumbed-down world-appetizer array, plus salads, pas-tas, grilled meats, a few sautéé items and children’s plates. The restaurant is very family-friendly (full o’ kids, actually), with a menu that appeals to the young in mouth: The chef seems to have a sweet tooth, since almost every dish involves honey or sugar — for example, the table butter that’s intriguingly flavored with a honey-basil mixture. Your server will tell you about the day’s fresh-fish selections, which are more attuned to adult palates with fresh, fine-quality seafood done simply and well. Ultra-noisy inside when crowded; reserve for the lovely terrace with a view of the beach. Open daily, lunch and dinner, with weekend break-fast. Moderate to slightly expensive. — N.W. (8/01)

Flamingo Cafe 396 Broadway (at G Street), Chula Vista. 619-691-1076. Gen-erations have been coming to the Flamingo ever since its grand opening in July, 1925, when it was a lone build-ing amidst the vegetable fields. Regulars on fixed incomes form the backbone of this institution, so the meal deals are real: hearty portions of chipped beef on toast, meatloaf sandwiches with fries, or lunch specials like half a sandwich and a cup of soup. One favorite: the beef stew special in a bread bowl. Breakfast and lunch daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (5/02)

L’Escale Coronado Marriott Island Re-sort, 2000 Second Street, Coronado, 619-435-3000. Probably the pink flamin-gos and bay views bring you here first. But L’Escale (“Port of Call” in French) delivers to the taste buds too. For “Northern Mediterranean cuisine with California flair,” read lots of pasta, fish, salads, sandwiches. Try the grilled salmon niçoise salad with its richly sauced fish, crunchy green beans, red potatoes, strong olives, and rosemary-flavored bun. Entrées like grilled chicken and mushrooms in Parmesan cream with penne pasta are safe enough. Or bone-in filet mignon with black pepper zin-fandel sauce. But for sheer architecture, check out the tuna salad sandwich wrapped in lavosh: three vertical Arme-nian bread tubes, angle-sliced to reveal interiors of tuna and greenery. Eat on the pool and bay-surrounded patio if you can. Breakfast, lunch, dinner. Moderate to expensive. — E.B. (2/03)

Spiro’s Gyros Ferry Landing, 1201 First Street #4, Coronado, 619-435-1225. The food, the music, the view — are we outside Athens? Is this the Aegean? This inside-outside Greek café is located at the water’s edge, and the heated patio has a spectacular view of San Diego, the bay, and the boat traf-fic. At sunset, sipping their excellent Greek wine (cheaper than their Cali-fornia), watch the sun set the city ablaze in gold. The prices keep Spiro’s popu-lar with the locals as well as tourists. Try the moussaka (eggplant casserole) or the souvlaki chicken, marinated in tzatziki sauce, served with tomatoes, onions, and pita bread. Open seven days until 8 p.m. Inexpensive. — E.B. (11/00)

Tango Grille Argentine Steak House 635 Broadway, Chula Vista, 619-420-0384. Play gaucho and enjoy the most authentic Argentine parril-lada (mixed grill) in town at this charming, warmly decorated bistro about two minutes from the Chula Vista Shopping Center. Fine, smoky wood-grilled Colorado beef appears in several unusual cuts (including succu-lent steak-cut short-ribs). You can choose from two different mixed grills (sized for one or two), the first with conventional meats, the other — the more adventurous — includes organ meats and blood sausage. For starters, there are brilliantly seasoned mini-em-panadas of amazing lightness, as well as several interesting salads. Those not in a grilled-meat mood can opt for nu-merous pastas (including a big, meaty lasagna) or the ubiquitous milanesa (breaded beef or chicken patties) of the pampas. Portions are more than gen-erous, and so are the flavors. Open daily. Low moderate. — N.W. (4/02)

Village Pizzeria 1206 Orange Ave-nue, Coronado, 619-522-0449. In the back, Mootime Creamery makes all its ice cream. In the front, Mootime owner David Spatafore decided to set up what he’s always wanted: A cheap, back-east Italian, red-and-white-tablecloth, dan-gling Chianti bottle eatery where local families and amateur sports teams can come in and pig out. He wisely didn’t destroy what was half of the famous old Mexican Village. Instant atmosphere! Ancient murals of guys with guitars ser-enading señoritas, arches, illuminated clusters of red grapes. The bad news: You might have to handle pumped-up kids’ sports teams cramming the booths around you. The good news: Great cal-zones and pizza by the slice. Open lunch through dinner, seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (12/04)

BAJA

From the United States use the pre-fix 011-52-664 when calling Tijuana; when calling in Tijuana use only the restaurant’s seven-digit number.

D’Stefano Pizza Restaurant Car-riльо Puerto #7835 (at 3rd Street), be-tween Martinez (D Avenue) and Mutu-alismo (E Avenue), three blocks west of Avenida Revolución, 638-4309. Evening around nine is the best time to come, when groups are in here carousing with tarros and pizza. Tarros are giant mugs that hold caguamas (large “sea turtle” bottles) of Tecate beer. There’s plenty of good standard Italian food to go along with it. You can pay a little — for basic dishes like spaghetti or lasagna — or up to around twenty dollars for a “gigan-tic” pizza. Inexpensive. Midday to mid-night, seven days. — E.B. (2/04)

El Cid Lopez Mateos #993 (just off Blancarte), Ensenada, Baja, 646-178-1809. This restaurant is at the heart of the tourist district, but the cook-ing and service are way above coach class. Look to the “Specialties” section of the huge menu for the most interesting se-lections. Crisp quail with rose petal sauce (famed from Like Water for Chocolate) proves outrageously delicious, and the seasonal chiles en nogada (meat-stuffed poblano chiles with walnut-cream and pomegranate) gain refinement from greaseless ground sirloin. Fish dishes are fresh, rich, and tender, and you’ll find nine different ways to enjoy a steak. If you can handle a tableside production number, crêpes with cajeta (caramel sauce) makes a very grand finale. Fully bilingual staff; English menus available. Sidewalk patio dining available. Reserve for weekends during tourist peaks. Full bar, with excellent margaritas, Baja wines. Open daily, continuous service breakfast through dinner. Moderate. — N.W. (4/03)

La Espadana Avenida Sánchez Taboada #10813, Zona Río, Tijuana, 634-1488 or 634-1489. If you learn only one word of Spanish, learn this one: Bor-rego. Because this place does the greatest oven-cooked leg of lamb ever. The meat tastes as if it was cooked in wine, garlic, and herbs, but the owners insist it’s just Tecate lamb baked slowly in its own juices with a bit of oregano. But most folks come here for beef — steaks and the popular beef fillet, sizzled at a big flame-and-smoke display counter BBQ grill. All terra-cotta and timber, this is where the local middle classes come for their cross-border food fix. Think Tijuana’s version of Mission Valley. Still, it’s charming, and you can have fun. For in-stance, don’t forget to ask them to ring the bells set in their espadañas (holes cut in the Mission frontage) above the great

Mr. Fish Blvd. Agua Caliente #6000, Tijuana, 686-3603. Also at City Hall, Palacio Municipal (at Paseo del Centenario and Avenida Josefa Ortiz de Dominguez), Río District, Tijuana, 682-8020. The sign is showing its age and the concept (exotic middle-class restaurant in the middle of a parking lot) seems dated, but two-decade-old Mr. Fish is still serving good fish food. Ask for the Spanish-language menu if you can handle it — it's far more extensive than its poor English cousin. Sit outside under the palm thatch if weather permits. All the basic dishes are good, like octopus in white wine, Lucifer's Oysters with white sauce and smoky chipotle chiles, or the Mr. Fish Combination: half a lobster, fish, shrimp, and calamari. Probably the most popular gringo choice is mahi mahi in lemon-pepper sauce, but consider ordering with salsa eneldo — dill sauce. Also interesting: seafood fettuccine “a la Gorvachov” (with vodka) and anything (such as the lobster Mr. Fish or thermidor) with the signature salsa blanca. It'll remind you of something (could it be Rubio's?). Open 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., seven days. Moderate. — E.B. (12/04)

Rica Torta Niños Héroes Avenida #890, between 2nd and 3rd Streets (opposite Dorian's department store), Tijuana, 685-8579. This café may have the best tortas (call them Mexican-style hamburgers) in Tijuana. Six-inch rashers of marinated carne asada, slices of ham, squares of cheese, chopped salad, tomato slices, fresh-scooped avocado...it's a double-wide, double-high burger. The menu has 16 different kinds of tortas, from chorizo with eggs to beefsteak ranchero, all served in huge, three-ribbed, crisp-toasted Mexican bread buns. There's other stuff, but to a burger buff, one of these is quite enough. Open seven days. Inexpensive. — E.B. (9/01)

Vallarta 1252 Boulevard Agua Caliente (just before El Toreo de Tijuana), 686-1560. Maybe the only smoke-free restaurant in Tijuana, this vegetarian haven was started in 1996 by health-conscious Doctor Georgina Vallarta de Alcántar. They make their own yogurt, soy hash, breads, rolls, salsas — and “meats” like a veal from their own wheat gluten — daily. You sit at wood tables and chairs next to blue-framed yellow walls splattered with Talavera ceramic suns. At breakfast, try the tartaleta vallarta, a mix of eggs, spinach, mushrooms, onions, and chile. For lunch (and it's usually busiest around three), their excellent soup, caldo tlalpeño, packed with cheese, rice, avocado, and chile, will fill you nicely. The soy hamburguesa is good, but go for the torta, which has that gluten milanesa along with cheese, avocado, and jalapeño. Good organic coffee. Wonderful juices, especially the cactus — if you need cleaning out. Open 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily. Inexpensive. — E.B. (1/06)

MULTIPLE LOCATIONS

Oggi's At least ten branches all over the suburbs; see phone book for the nearest one. Is it the pizzas or is it the house-made brewskis (six ales, one lager, one stout) that make Oggi's so popular? Is it the sports-bar ambiance (with multiple video screens) or just the near-ubiquity of branches that has won this chain numerous “best pizza” citations? The pizzas are American-style, with thick, slightly sweet crusts, many with elaborate toppings that sound more adventurous than they taste. (All the cheese alternatives are equally mild.) The menu also offers pub snacks, decent soups and salads, hearty sandwiches and American-Italian entrées so mall-adapted that no mamma mia in Bensonhurst or North Beach would even recognize them. Full bar, lunch and dinner daily at most branches; free local delivery with minimum order. Inexpensive. — N.W. (7/04)

Sammy's Woodfired Pizza It's not Italian or New York pizza, it's...San Diego pizza! The crusts are Californian: thick and slightly sweet. The toppings range from ordinary to exotic. The menu includes many salads and a handful of American-Italian entrées. Continuous service, same menu lunch and dinner. Open daily. Inexpensive. 702 Pearl Street, La Jolla, 858-456-5222; 770 Fourth Avenue, Gaslamp, 619-230-8888; 8650 Genesee Avenue, Costa Verde, 858-404-9898; 12925 El Camino Real, Del Mar, 858-259-6600; 1620 Camino de la Reina, Mission Valley, 619-298-8222. — *N.W. St. Tropez If you love continental breakfast, these bright cafés with indoor-outdoor seating offer scores of house-baked pastries (including brioche) and good coffee. Parisian-style brunch/lunch choices embrace croque monsieur and croque madame (grilled ham and cheese sandwiches, topped with either light cream sauce or an egg), crêpes, quiche, onion soup gratinée, or chicken-filled puff-pastry. Omelets are rather weighty. Some of the sandwiches offer Mediterranean flavors — try a pan bagnat (salade niçoise on a baguette) or one of the grilled panini. Desserts range from cookies on up to elaborate cakes. Beer and wine. Open daily, breakfast to early dinner. Inexpensive. Encinitas: 947 South Coast Highway 101, Lumberyard Shopping Center #103D, 760-633-0084; downtown: 926 Broadway Circle, 619-696-8695 and 600 W. At No Theater Near You

Any appreciation of trains has nothing whatsoever to do with the need to get somewhere in a hurry.

Resist though I might, the world of movies is shifting, has shifted, to a world of DVDs. Any "product" perceived to appeal to a narrow segment of the moviegoing public can be written off as not worth the marketing costs (at least in the boondocks between New York and Los Angeles) and thus sent, more cost-efficiently, straight to the video shelves. With the result that the spectrum of movies available on the big screen grows ever narrower and narrower. The big screen is for big audiences, the little for little. In that respect, the great blessing of DVDs is also the great curse of DVDs. Their capacity to fill a void inevitably increases the capacity of the void. The home of "alternative" cinema, the Landmark chain in our little neck of the woods, is still open to the period piece, the literary adaptation, the digital documentary, the Holocaust remembrance, the coming-of-age tale, anything gay-themed, but authentic cinematic genius is liable to have the door slammed in its face.

The occasion for this gloomy line of thought was the premiere in Los Angeles a few weeks back of the latest Hou Hsiao-hsien film, Three Times, wherein the same two actors play different pairs of lovers in three different time periods. Sounded good to me.

So I promptly queried the Powers That Be on our chances of getting the film down here. The answer, equally prompt, was unequivocal: no chance. (Who do we think we are? Paris?) This state of affairs, it would have been futile to plead, gives rise to a climate of resentment in which anything that comes along gets measured against the unattainable mark. We can have Wah-Wah but not Three Times... Down in the Valley but not Three Times... The Lost City but not Three Times... Keeping Up with the Steins but not Three Times... Peaceful Warrior but not Three Times... District B13 but not Three Times...

My choices, then, seemed to be to drop everything — The Da Vinci Code, X-Men, etc. — and make the dreaded drive up to L.A., or else to get in step with the times and wait for the DVD. The fact that the film has an American distributor at all (IFC Films, a Landmark ally) pretty much ensures that there will be a DVD, and it is already out, after all, in an Asian edition, orderable over the Internet and viewable on my code-free player. In the end, I made the weary choice, the acquiescent choice, the modern choice: wait. And in the meantime I could soothe my spirits by picking up at Tower (a check of the online catalogues of Kensington Video and Citizen Video had come up dry) the new DVD of the previous Hou Hsiao-hsien film, Café Lumière, which likewise had never come to town and for which I likewise couldn't mobilize myself to go to L.A.

My resistance gets worn down, sometimes to no more than an ill-humored grumble. And so here you have a familiar lament: it borders on the scandalous that our local curators of the Finest in World Cinema, the programmers of our Year-Round Film Festival, the monopolistic traffickers in out-of-the-mainstream merchandise, the cultural benefactors to whom we are in the position of Oliver Twist to Mr. Bumble, should never once have booked a single film by one of the smallest handful of top filmmakers at work today, and in my estimation the supreme stylist among that handful. He is not lost to us, even so. In the new, the emerging, the shifting world, he can be found on a four-and-three-quarters-inch disc.

Café Lumière, a Wellspring Release (another Landmark ally), is the Taiwanese director's overt hommage to the Japanese master, Yasujiro Ozu, on the centenary of his birth, and, as it happens, the fortieth anniversary (quadragenary, would that be?) of his death. I would not want to make too much of that, by which I mean, for one thing, I would not want to go back through the dozen or so quintessential postwar Ozu films, let alone the fifty-four total, looking for explicit references. It's true that the action takes place in Japan, where the heroine, a freelance writer, a little slip of a thing in a frequent ponytail and a flimsy, floppy cotton overshirt, has just returned from Taiwan, visiting her boyfriend and researching the life of a Taiwanese composer, Jiang Wenye, who emigrated to Japan in the Thirties. (Thereby establishing a cultural bridge, decades before Hou crossed it.) It's true, too, that the milieu is domestic and middle-class and contemporary, and that the interior architecture lends itself to frames within the frame, and that the low-slung camera angles often evoke the rigid Ozu rule of an eye-level point of view from the kneeling position on a tatami mat. And it's true, lastly, that the broader point of view is contemplative.

But then, Hou's broader point of view has always been contemplative, and he remains, here as before, more removed in his contemplation than Ozu ever was. Even if his camera will move within individual shots (an Ozu no-no), albeit only a slight slow sliding of its gaze, it is much less active within a scene, shunning the intimate closeups and medium shots of Ozu and the sometimes thumping rhythms of the cuts between them. An Ozu film, next to a Kurosawa, may look like a still life, but next to a Hou it's a carnival of household bustle and convivial gab. Seeking separation from his subjects, Hou picks out a discreet vantage point and sticks to it. When, for instance, food is produced for a visit from Mom and Dad, he is not about to budge from his hiding place in a shadowy corner, see what's to eat, join the party. He won't trouble to throw so much as a glance in the direction of the front door upon the arrival of the sushi deliveryman. He is only going to observe the choreography of laying the table, study the postures of the diners, their manipulation of chopsticks, the muted percussion of dishware and glassware on the tabletop. He will clock the silences, chronicle the passage of time.

The name I am tempted to make more of, perhaps more than I should, is that of Lumière, never mentioned anywhere but in the title. This, you will recall, is the surname of the French brothers who pioneered the documentary film at the turn of the last century, recording everyday events with a primitive static camera, no context, no story to tell, no instruction to impart, merely the fact of the thing, the look of it as it happened, the moment of it, and the marvel of it captured in a can, preserved for eternity. Their most emblematic film, you may also recall, the antithesis of Méliès's Trip to the Moon on the fiction side of the scales, is L'Arrivée d'un Train en Gare de la Ciotat, the arrival of a train at the station. And Café Lumière, as much as it is "about" anything, is about trains. In them, outside them, around them, about them. Trains, trains, and more trains. The first shot of the film is of a passing cable car, slicing through the fixed picture frame. There's a breathtaking repeated shot over a canal entwined by train tracks on three different levels, three different heights. In Taiwan, when the heroine happened to be visiting, the locals were celebrating the 116th anniversary of the founding of the railways. A friend of hers, in his spare time away from his bookstore, designs computer graphics of trains and tape-records the actual sounds of them. And trains — commonplace as well in Ozu and elsewhere in Hou — are the preferred mode of transportation, the preferred form of transition, from one scene to another.

Yet the thing that is most Lumière-like is not the appreciation of trains per se so much as the appreciation of the everyday, the moment, the marvel. Any appreciation of trains, moreover, has nothing whatsoever to do with the need to get somewhere in a hurry. Hou is interested in being wherever he presently is, not in getting anywhere else. Nor is he in any hurry. Almost nothing "happens" in the film, and in truth I would not have protested if a little more had happened, though I wouldn't presume to tell Hou where to start and stop with the happenings, when would be enough and when would be too much. The film is composed of what the French, if I understand the term, might call les temps morts, dead time. Approximately twenty-five minutes into it the heroine, out of the blue, drops on her mother the bombshell that she is pregnant, by her Taiwanese boyfriend, an umbrella manufacturer, whom she has no inclination to marry. Her mother and father are plainly not happy about this, but it is not openly addressed, as it would have been, exhaustively, in an Ozu film. Her bookstore buddy may appear to be a viable alternative, but never materializes as one.

The pregnancy functions mainly as a rhetorical device. It implies a future, just as the compulsory act of conception implies a past (and in some types of movie, a very photogenic past), but the film, displaying extraordinary powers of concentration, focusses obstinately on the present. The here and now. The moment. It is something of a paradox that a film so empty of incident can yet be so full of life. But there it is. Hou demonstrates over and over that if you clear away the distractions you encounter in other movies — the busyness, the rush, the flurry, the frenzy, the noise, the background music, the plot mechanics, the photographic froufrou, the CG imagery — you might then stand a chance of seeing what you are looking at, a chance of savoring the moment. The play of the breeze, let's say, on the laundry airing out on the balcony or on the dense leaves, thick as the coat of a sheepdog, on a giant tree. That might not sound like much. Especially if you treasure sensory bombardment above clarity and consciousness.

But — I can only report my own experience — it holds the eye, it holds the attention, it does not, unlike the majority of movies these days, actively and aggressively repel. No movie can do more to transform you (for the duration) into a Buddhist.

To see it as I did, on the small screen in my living room, does not make me feel good about myself, and does not make me feel good about my town, but does make me feel better about my vocation. ■ plenty of starry-eyed ideas (Gordon Willis's lighting, for instance, sets up an overstated contrast between the fluorescent spic-and-span world of the Free Press and the dim-lit treacherous world outside); but it is often impeccable on naturalistic details of behavior, speech, and journalistic procedure; and it is blessedly free of post-Watergate gloating (as in Jimmy Breslin's melodramatically titled How the Good Guys Finally Won). The old-news aspect of the story and the conspicuous absence of an after-the-fact point of view give the movie serious shortcomings as journalism and as detective story. Its chief strength is as an adaptation of book into movie, on which score it reveals the fine qualities of discretion, concision, and lucidity. With Robert Redford, Dustin Hoffman, and Jason Robards; directed by Alan J. Pakula. 1976.

Almost Famous — Cameron Crowe's most "personal" film to date, a nostalgia trip into the rock-and-roll scene of the early Seventies. The names have been changed, to cover up, perhaps, for revisions or lapses of memory, and for ingrained tendencies to sanitize and whitewash. The fifteen-year-old free-lance rock journalist — Crowe's stand-in — is now called William Miller (the dimply Patrick Fugit, projecting a Howdy Doody wholesomeness); and the fictitious heavy-metal band on whose tour he tags along is called Stillwater (Billy Crudup as the Jimmy Page-ish guitarist, Jason Lee as the Robert Plant-ian singer). Crowe has always been content to play to the crowd — and the bigger the better. Or to put it another way: the blander the better. The upside of this, from certain points of view, is that the music of the period is here dribbled out in eye-dropper doses, and with a slightly skewed bias toward the "soft" (Cat Stevens, Steely Dan, Elton John). Earplugs will not be required. And the parental figure, a single-mom college professor, for all her mortifying overprotectiveness and nonpermissiveness (confiscating a Simon and Garfunkel album: "Honey, they're on pot"), is given a distinctive voice — not to mention, in Frances McDormand's droll incarnation, distinctive mouth, chin, eyes, everything. Not a straw woman; a strong woman. (Crowe's own mother would surely approve.) A distinctive voice of a different generation issues from Philip Seymour Hoffman as the late rock critic Lester Bangs — no name-change necessary — and the hero's long-distance guru: "You cannot make friends with rock stars!" The matter of journalistic ethics — the reporter's clear choice between "friend" and "enemy," the rockers' insidious campaign to woo him and win him — is a worthwhile theme, explored with diligence. But it takes a backseat to the more moth-eaten material of the romantic triangle: the battle of the worshipful innocent and the frivolous libertine for the heart and soul of the unsullied groupie (Kate Hudson) — or, as she prefers to be known, a "band-aid," a true muse rather than mere groupie. In the end it is not so much a matter of ethics as of bathos. We must remind ourselves, after all, that the film is autobiographical, and that the guiding principle of our autobiographer is popularity at any cost. It is harder than before to begrudge him that. 2000. ★★ (CINEMA UNDER THE STARS, 6/15 AND 16, 8:30 P.M.)

The Break-Up — Battle-of-the-sexes romantic comedy accurately hits numerous notes of stridency, nastiness, pain, and so on, and next to none of laughter. More of an unromantic uncomedy. (The screenwriters, Jeremy Garelick and Jay Lavender, and the director, Peyton Reed, are all male, so no equal representation.) Vince Vaughn, Mr. Glib, comes across as too insouciant to be truly involved, and in order to convey a scintilla of commitment he must resort to the devices of Burt Lancaster as pointed out by Vincent Canby: he "acts with his hair." Or in Vaughn's case, his hairpieces, sporting a mild approximation of a 1950s rock-and-roller's pompadour for special occasions but favoring otherwise something resembling a scoop of hot fudge, creating continuity problems when he huffs out of dinner parties looking like Fabian but, a bit later at his favorite watering hole, looking more like Tony Bennett. Jennifer Aniston, Miss Coppertone 2002-06, does better at acting engaged, but the chemistry of the couple, the basis for their relationship, is never established beyond a pre-credits meet-cute at Wrigley Field and a behind-the-credits photo montage in which they look as well matched as Scott and Laci Peterson. The least you can say about the resolution is that it does not totally betray what precedes it. With Joey Lauren Adams, Jon Favreau, Judy Davis. 2006.

Cars — The Pixar people, director John Lasseter in particular, envision a world of cars without people (Mommy, where do cars come from?), but of course anthropomorphized cars, such that the windshields are eyes and the hoods, grilles, and front bumpers form noses and mouths. The vision focusses chiefly on a hot-shot rookie race car called Lightning McQueen, who, en route to the Piston Cup championship on the West Coast, gets stalled in the sleepy little backwater of Radiator Springs (soon christened "Hillbilly Hell") off Route 66 ("the Mother Road"), which time and the interstate have passed by. Whether or not you can steer around the irony, or hypocrisy, or cynicism, or what-you-will, of a computer cartoon waxing nostalgic over the slower pace and simpler ways of the Good Old Days, this is one of the better specimens of this type of animation, the airless, vacuum-sealed, climate-controlled, machine-tooled type. The clean, sleek, toy-like shapes of the vehicles (straight out of an old Chevron commercial) are easily handled, and their personalities inventively differentiated. The town itself is wittily detailed: the single flashing yellow light on Main Street, the caution-cone motel cabins, the geodesic-dome garage for the psychedelic hippie van, etc. And, outside of the herd of flatulent tractors, the sense of humor refrains from the off-color. And having to listen to Owen Wilson is much preferable to having to look at him at the same time. Paul Newman, a racing enthusiast in real life, could be said to be well cast as the voice of the legendary Hudson Hornet, Piston Cup champ from 1951 to '53, who chose to put himself out to pasture at

Cavite — Low-budget Filipino kidnapping thriller, written and directed by Neill Dela Llana and Ian Gamazon, who also plays the lead role. (HILLCREST CINEMAS, FROM 6/16)

Clean — Set in Canada, Paris, London, San Francisco, and spoken in English, French, and Cantonese, this Olivier Assayas film contemplates the possibility of change in a person, and gives full, serious, unsentimental attention to the difficulty and uncertainty of such change. The person in question is “a junkie to the bone,” the Chinese mop-top mate (a bristly mop, usable as a toilet-bowl brush) of an over-the-hill rock star who OD’s on heroin and leaves his survivor with a mountain of debt and a six-month sentence for possession. Her reason for change — her reason for taking menial jobs in a Parisian Chinese restaurant and a downscale department store — her reason for trying to launch her own singing career, capitalizing on her fleeting celebrity as a one-time television VJ and a reviled rock widow — is her six-year-old son, currently in the care of her Canadian parents-in-law. The oblique narrative snakes along like the trickle from a garden hose. It might puddle up on matters of no significance (a stylish concert performance by Emily Haines and the rock group Metric), and it might go underground on matters of great significance (the prison term), and its course is never propulsive yet never predictable. Maggie Cheung, off-screen wife of the director, gamely gets on board with the accepted French philosophy of acting, whereby her role, no matter how huge, is but another element in the film, not the centerpiece, not the raison d’être, no more important than the informally mingling camera, the unpicturesque settings, the hip musical selections (Brian Eno), or the smaller parts (Nick Nolte, as the father-in-law, rivalling David Janssen in constancy and depth of discomfort). Even her biggest emotional outbursts are just part of the flow. Or the trickle. They are not showstoppers. With Béatrice Dalle, Don McKellar. 2005. ★★★ (KEN, THROUGH 6/15)

The Da Vinci Code — Nonsensical retelling of the Dan Brown best-seller, premised on “the greatest cover-up in human history,” namely the murderously guarded secret that Jesus Christ and Mary Magdalene married and multiplied. (The additional premise that the disclosure of the secret would have the immediate effect of liberating the oppressed worldwide and bringing about an epoch of peace and harmony, and that nothing would please the Catholic Church less, seems dubious in the extreme.) The movie is of course its own separate matter, and inasmuch as it’s a Ron Howard movie it’s pretty much what we could have predicted, something dogged, diligent, uninspired, overproduced, and crowd-pleasing or at least crowd-pandering. The grainy, color-drained flashbacks, ranging back to the traumatic childhoods of the two principals — a symbologist and a cryptologist — and back, back, back to the Dark Ages, Ancient Rome, and the aftermath of the Crucifixion, testify to the unwieldiness of the transfer from page to screen. The trajectory of the narrative is an odd, dash-and-dot line of breathless chase interrupted by long-winded discourse on religion, Church history, Renaissance art, etc., a high-speed quest for the Holy Grail broken off for pedantic exegesis of what the Grail actually is. Tom Hanks, even with longer hair, does not make a credible long-hair. Audrey Tautou speaks English well enough to expand the market for her elfin cuteness. And Ian McKellen carries on in the grand tradition of stage-trained British thespians who have fallen in love with the sounds of their own voices. Still, the movie ought to be cut some slack for its abstinence from pyrotechnics, albeit no abstinence from high technology. And some more slack for its stress on the mental aspects of detective work, although even the code-breaking proceeds at a breakneck pace. And maybe, too, a bit more slack for its crescendo of rhetoric to a pitch typically in the upper range of apocalyptic science fiction. But that might altogether be too much slack for a movie with an acute predisposition to hang itself. Paul Bettany, Jean Reno, Alfred Molina. 2006.

District B13 — Paris in the near future. Berlin-style walls have been put up around the ghettos to contain the spread of crime, and a WMD has fallen into the hands of a ganglord. The Hong Kong-style action and MTV-style camerawork fail to communicate the seriousness of the situation. With Cyril Raffaelli and David Belle; directed by Pierre Morel. 2005. ● (HORTON PLAZA 14)

Friends with Money — There are, to be exact, three friends with money, and one without, a former teacher toiling now as a free-lance maid, helping herself to the bedside vibrator of one of her employers, and in her spare time harassing an ex-boyfriend with all-hours phone calls and hang-ups. The three with money additionally have mates. One of them, Catherine Keener, is collaborating with her husband on a screenplay, while adding an unsightly ocean-view second story on their home. Another, Frances McDormand, is a successful clothes designer with one child, plus a peculiar aversion to washing her hair, a reservoir of repressed anger, and a British-accented husband, a bath-products manufacturer, whom everyone but his wife recognizes as a closet homosexual (“Just because you care about what you wear doesn’t mean to say you’re gay”). The third, Joan Cusack, has a passel of kids, plenty of hired help with them, no job and no need of one, enough money to donate a spare couple of million to her children’s school. Assuming the role of matchmaker, she introduces the moneyless and mateless friend, Jennifer Aniston, to her personal trainer, who begins to tag along with her on her housecleaning jobs and to demand a cut for haphazardly pitching in. Writer and director Nicole Holofcener, of Walking and Talking and Lovely and Amazing, is very adept at finding and pointing out the faults in all these people (no one is exempt), and the entire movie has an air about it of catty girl talk, very concrete and specific and yet ultimately insubstantial and desultory: a litany of everyday outrages (people who cut in line at the cash register or steal parking spaces in the lot), a few useful tips for budget living (free cosmetics samples at the department stores), and of course some gripes about men (the cold-fish husband who won’t be drawn into an argument, the blind date who can’t tear his eyes from an old flame at the far end of the restaurant). Keener and McDormand are in another acting league, a tougher one, from Cusack and Aniston, but the facileness of the latter pair is not the sort of fault that the film-

Rob Reiner’s The Princess Bride stars Cary Elwes and Robin Wright as young lovers. Favorite line: “Mawage is wot bwings us togeder tooday.”

Robert Altman’s *M*A*S*H* offers satire at its best. It captures life, relationships, and cultural differences during a time of war with great wit and dialogue.

Based on Irvine Welsh’s book, Danny Boyle’s film Trainspotting brings heart-stopping imagery and direction together with a great soundtrack that features Iggy Pop, Lou Reed, and Blur.

With our debut CD just out and having just played in San Diego, it put me in the mood for a concert DVD. What can I say about The Police: Synchronicity Concert DVD — Gordon, Andy, and Stewart on the same stage playing all my favorites: “Message in a Bottle,” “Walking on the Moon,” and “King of Pain.” Shouldn’t that be good enough for everyone?

Amélie is a classic French love story. I loved the way this girl approached life with such humility and sarcasm for even the simplest of passions. This movie makes me remember what’s important in life.

Tron is the first computer-graphic-generated film by Disney. Watching it as a kid always made my imagination run wild. The thought of living in a universe within a home computer, fighting monsters, and racing neon-colored motorcycles is and always will be the coolest! I’m a nerd.

The Quiet Man stars the original leading man: John Wayne. It’s the go-to movie that always cheers me up when I’m hung over. Wayne plays Sean Thornton, a boxer who moves back to Ireland to forget his troubles, and ends up falling in love with Mary Kate Danaher, played by Maureen O’Hara. But he has to get by both her dick older brother and the whole town. Great music, beautiful countryside, and a great fight scene at the end!

Malena is a great story, but more importantly, Monica Bellucci is out-of-control hot. The cinematography is also amazing. But mainly it’s Monica!

Point Break has the beach, an FBI agent (Keanu Reeves), a surfing bank robber (Patrick Swayze), and Lori Petty from A League of Their Own in a wet suit. What more do you want? It’s also cool that the Red Hot Chili Peppers’ Anthony Kiedis plays a drug-dealing surf punk!

An Inconvenient Truth — A documentary for the Don’t-Blame-Me-I-Voted-for-Gore crowd. It has a nominal director, Davis Guggenheim, but it’s Al Gore’s show, a self-described “slide show,” or illustrated lecture, and not really a movie, to do with the causes and effects of global warming. This is laid out explicitly as less a political issue than “a moral issue,” and laid out, tacitly, as a doomsday science-fiction scenario (think The Day after Tomorrow, think Waterworld, or if you’re a reader, think The Drowned World or The Kraken Wakes), with a wealth of facts and figures for substantiation. “I’ve been trying to tell this story for a long time,” remarks our lecturer, who estimates that he has delivered the presentation a thousand times around the globe, “and I feel as if I’ve failed to get the

Needless to say, the identity of the messenger will by itself be enough to persuade a large fraction of the public to stay clear, on the presumption that all he wants to do is to take away from their annual stock dividends. They will miss an interesting, entertaining, and alarming show. 2006.

The Lost City — In his directorial debut, Andy Garcia conjures the city of his birth, the city of his infancy, Havana in transition between Batista and Castro. A labor of love, presumably, but laborious positively, a limp epic of flat, underlit visuals and sententious, pretentious dialogue. “Havana is no longer a capital city, but a capital sin.” “Havana is very much like a rose. It has petals and it has thorns, so it depends on how you grab it, but in the end it always grabs you.” And so on. Bill Murray plays the jester who hangs around Garcia’s El Tropico nightclub, in a seersucker suit with short pants, but his lines are written no better than anyone else’s. Inés Sastre, Tomas Milian, Millie Perkins, and (as Meyer Lansky) Dustin Hoffman. 2006.

● (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Mission: Impossible III — The throbbing Lalo Schiffrin theme music from the original late-Sixties TV show is still the best thing about this third mission, as it was about the first two. It’s hard to decide what’s the worst thing. Tom Cruise would be a too-easy fall guy. Granted, he seems to be getting worse and worse as an actor. (His brief disguise as a Czech citizen at the airport bears a striking resemblance to his Ron Kovic in Born on the Fourth of July, a reminder of an earlier and better phase.) Yet Cruise is really no more than a cog in the machine. A better actor might supply more grease, but he could not retool the machine. J.J. Abrams, the new director, the third director in three films, a TV director in his feature-film debut, is himself closer to a cog than were either of his forerunners, lacking their established personalities. But that’s not necessarily a bad thing, a worse thing, when the established personalities are as gaudy as Brian De Palma’s and as grotesque as John Woo’s. On a project such as this, there’s only so much a director can do, and most of what he can do is to make matters worse. The film — the series — the franchise — remains fatally committed to the ideal of action as swift, smooth, precise, pre-rehearsed, and worry-free as a Cirque du Soleil production number. (“This is intelligence,” Laurence Fishburne, the IMF commander, remarks at one point. “So far I haven’t seen any.” Of athletics and acrobatics we see plenty.) The film remains committed, too, to that lazy and alienating device of the latex mask which will enable anybody, good guy or bad, to assume the identity of anybody else, bad guy or good. And it’s an open question whether these masks are less bad here because they are hand-me-downs or even worse because they were held onto: less bad, that is, because innocently inherited or worse because uncritically accepted. The plot is perhaps too slight to be a legitimate contender for Worst Thing; the black-market sale of something code-named the Rabbit’s Foot, of which we know only the price ($850 million) and nothing more. Nor do we ever know more. Nor, to be frank, do we ever care to. And a late, a last, a still less legitimate contender for Worst Thing would be the hip-hop title song by Kanye West, “Impossible,” over the closing credits. This, though, can be easily avoided by heading for the exit, with all due speed, to the final reprise of that Lalo Schiffrin theme. Mrs. Palfrey at the Claremont — Softened, sweetened, sentimentalized treatment of a fine little novel by the fine English novelist Elizabeth Taylor. American independent director Dan Ireland has left the basic situation untampered with. A proud lonely widow, resettled at a modest residential hotel in London, makes the chance acquaintance of an impecunious young writer, who cultivates the relationship for his own creative purposes (proposed story title, straight from the old lady’s mouth: “We Aren’t Allowed to Die Here”), and who freely participates in the face-saving ruse of passing himself off to her fellow lodgers as her inattentive grandson. Joan Plowright is properly dignified and Rupert Friend perfectly charming in the principal roles; and all of the characters, not least the dowdy hotel itself, are sharply visualized. Zoe Tapper, Anna Massey, Robert Lang, Georgina Hale. 2005.

The Omen — Calculatingly released in theaters on 06/06/06 (i.e., 666, get it?), but not, heaven forbid, a fourth sequel, an Omen 5, but rather a straight remake of the 1976 original, about the advent of the anti-Christ (presaged now by the Space Shuttle Columbia disaster, 9/11, the Indian Ocean tsunamis of 2004) in the form of the adopted tyke of the U.S. ambassador to Great Britain. A completely uncalled-for re-make, too, unless you’ve been calling for a “better” beheading. (Director John Moore, carving out an unnecessary niche for him-self, last did a remake of the unimprovable Flight of the Phoenix.) For all its sheen, it loses some star power in the substitution of Liev Schreiber and Julia Stiles for Gregory Peck and Lee Remick, and along with it some parental power. Is Liev Schreiber apt to succeed where Gregory Peck failed? (Mia Farrow, former mother of the Son of Satan in Rosemary’s Baby, is gimmickily cast as his nanny, the anti-Mary Poppins.) At the finish, it isn’t the influence of the Devil in-side the White House that need worry us. It’s the prospect of remakes of sequels. David Thewlis, Pete Postlethwaite, Michael Gambon. 2006.

drops of perspiration detonating at the vol-ume of thunder, his right leg shattering like crystal on his dismount from the rings — comes more or less true, and he entrusts his rehabilitation to the aphoristic grease mon-key (a furry Nick Nolte) at the Texaco quickie mart: “This is a service station. We offer service. There’s no higher purpose.” The story, from a novel by self-help author and former athlete Dan Millman, is pur-portedly “inspired by true events,” and at the very least the quadrennial Olympic qualifying tournament could be said to be a true event. The rest is apt to cause difficulty swallowing. With Scott Mechlowicz and Amy Smart; directed by Victor Salva. 2006. ★ (HILLCREST CINEMAS)

Poseidon — The remake of The Poseidon Adventure trims down its 1972 forerunner

by two words of the title and twenty min-utes or so of the running time. The result is inarguably lively, although arguably so much so as to neglect to soak up the sights. And on an upside-down ocean liner on New Year’s Eve, there ought to be a lot to soak up. Inarguably, once again, the special effects are improved (German director Wolfgang Petersen, who made A Perfect Storm and Das Boot, has been through some of these waters before), and arguably the cast can hold its own: Kurt Russell, Emmy Rossum, Richard Dreyfuss, and scrubs (Josh Lucas is top-billed) versus Gene Hackman and a team of almost all-stars. 2006. ★ (FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; MISSION VALLEY 20; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18)

A Prairie Home Companion — Its title and its emcee have been taken from Garri-son (a/k/a Garrulous) Keillor’s weekly pub-lic-radio show. But there is no mention of the imaginary world of Lake Wobegone, MN. The sole setting is the Fitzgerald The-ater in St. Paul, named after native son F. Scott, and ticketed for the wrecking ball; and the plot situation is closing night of a long-running old-fashioned live radio vari-ety hour, mixing gospel music, cowboy songs, bluegrass, and blues: a fragile audio fantasy made heavily (and unconvincingly) concrete. Director Robert Altman brings, along with his drifting, disengaged cameras, a deep-seated condescension that makes the loss seem like no big loss. And it goes without saying that he also brings an en-semble cast: Kevin Kline as a Clouseau-es-que private eye unfortunately named Guy Noir and unfortunately narrating in first person, Virginia Madsen as a heaven-sent angel in a white trenchcoat, Tommy Lee Jones as the heartless new landlord, and a host of nonsingers as singers, Meryl Streep, Lily Tomlin, John C. Reilly, Woody Harrel-son, L.Q. Jones, and the regrettably irre-pressible Keillor himself. Lindsay Lohan, purportedly a professional singer, sounds the worst of the lot. (Streep, a passable war-bler, always gives more than required or re-quested, and she alone thought to give a Minnesota accent.) Inevitably there are nice touches, like the new landlord’s sour glance at the bust of Fitzgerald during Reilly’s and Harrelson’s “Bad Jokes” number (“Why do they call it PMS? Because mad cow was al-ready taken”), but Altman treats every-thing, good, bad, mostly indifferent, as a throwaway. 2006.

genteel wife (Ray Winstone, Emily Watson). Even were it a bona fide Western, it would be of the harshly, brutally “realistic” type — or in another word, decadent type — which little resembles the classical Western, short on action, shorter on galantry, long on stringy hair, blackened teeth, dirt, grime, mud, blood, flies, etc. The proper co-ordinates are probably Fred Schepisi’s The Chant of Jimmie Blacksmith and Barbarosa. Steer accordingly. Written by Nick Cave; directed by John Hillcoat. 2006.

★ (HORTON PLAZA 14)

The Shaggy Dog — Tim Allen seems to have his opportunities — wolfman transformations into an itch-scratching, stick-fetching, cat-chasing canine — but the circumstances are strained to a point of discomfort: an abducted Tibetan holy dog, animal experimentation, mixed-species mutations. With Kristin Davis, Robert Downey, Jr., and Danny Glover; directed by Brian Robbins. 2006.

● (SANTEE DRIVE IN)

Sir! No Sir! — Archive footage and present-day interviews revive the memory of G.I. protests of the Vietnam War. The physical changes in the protesters, between then and now, add visual interest to an interesting but not very visual subject. The best-known protester to take part is Jane Fonda, who brought the troops an alternative to Bob Hope with her F.T.A. tour (meaning either Free Theater Associates or Fuck the Army), though her partner-in-protest, Donald Sutherland, mentioned but unseen, apparently declined the invitation. Directed by David Zeiger. 2006.

Sir! No Sir!

★ (KEN, 6/16 THROUGH 22)

Thank You for Smoking — Satire with teeth, discolored though they may be.

There is nothing exceptional cinematically about the directing debut of Jason Reitman, son of the mainstream comedy director Ivan Reitman (Ghostbusters, Twins, Kindergarten Cop, and the like), but from the opening credits — the witty cigarette-pack graphic motif, Tex Williams’s C&W oldie, “Smoke, Smoke, Smoke That Cigarette,” in the background — his savvy adaptation of the Christopher Buckley novel does everything it set out to do. It delivers, in the phraseology of a cigarette ad, full rich flavor. Decidedly smoky, dry, sharp, acid, with a bitter aftertaste. It centers on a tobacco-industry lobbyist, the self-described “Colonel Sanders of Nicotine,” a role that returns Aaron Eckhart to the friendly climate of his name-making film, In the Company of Men, where his hard-hearted charm, his machine-gun glibness, his immunity to self-doubt, can properly flourish. (The meaty face, the steely eyes, the sneering lips do not fit him for roles of sensitivity.) The surrounding cast is studded with true stalwarts, William H. Macy as the sanctimonious U.S. Senator from Vermont (“Where the Cheddar Is Better”) who is pushing for a skull-and-crossbones warning on all cigarette packs; Robert Duvall as the industry’s grand old man with his private jet, Tobacco One; J.K. Simmons as a conscienceless yes-man; and Sam Elliott as the cancer-ridden original Marlboro Man. (Maria Bello, Katie Holmes, Rob Lowe, and Adam Brody are in there, too.) The plot angle of pitching Hollywood on the idea of making cigarettes sexy again seems a little unimaginative, or rather, unobservant. Hollywood, like France, like Spain, has remained one of the last bastions of resistance against the anti-smoking movement, defiantly puffing away on screen, defending to the death the right of free choice. (There is pointedly no puffing on screen here: over-protection against charges of hypocrisy.) But this angle nonetheless leads profitably to the inner sanctum of Entertainment Global Offices (EGO), the orientalist lair of a Michael Ovitz-type superagent: “Jeff invented product placement.” Further plot mechanics, although no more ingenious, never get to be a grind. At a brisk hour and a half, the film can be safely recommended to all who like their comedy unfiltered. 2006.

★★★ (LA JOLLA 12)

Water — Deepa Mehta’s completion of her “Trilogy of the Elements” (Fire and Earth before it) continues to march back in time — now 1938 — to focus, with barely stifled feminist fury, on the ostracism of widows, expected to remain faithful till death to their husbands even if they happen to have been a child bride. Some pretty photography, but soppy, soapy melodramatics — and the progressive male heart-throb (flute player, poetry quoter, Gandhi follower) is a howl. With Lisa Ray, John Abraham, Seema Biswas, and Sarala. 2006.

★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE, THROUGH 6/15)

X-Men: The Last Stand — The third installment (to be less melodramatic about it), and despite the deaths and genetic alterations of several key mutants, it offers no assurance that it is indeed the last. (After all, the key mutant who perished in the previous installment returns here as an upgraded Class Five mutant: “The only explanation is that her powers wrapped her in a cocoon that protected her.”) The story-telling addresses itself exclusively to devotees and does not worry itself with recruiting new ones or reclaiming defectors. Only devotees, surely, could go along with the assumption that the thing the series needed, even before the thinning-out through death and alteration, was more mutants with more powers. In sum, more mess. New to the series, Brett Ratner directed, or at any rate sat in the director’s chair. With Hugh Jackman, Halle Berry, Famke Janssen, Patrick Stewart, Ian McKellen, Kelsey Grammer. 2006.

Mezcla mortal

Una misteriosa combinación de droga ha matado a 35 personas en dos semanas a lo largo del país y se teme que esta sustancia impacte a la población hispana.

La nueva droga es una mezcla de heroína con el poderoso analgésico sintético denominado Fentanyl, provocó la muerte de 32 drogadictos en varios estados de la Costa Este y tres hispanos en Los Ángeles.

Autoridades de salud en la zona de Filadelfia y

Chicago han confirmado 100 casos de drogadictos que presentaron graves problemas de sobredosis de la combinación de droga con el medicamento para el dolor.

"Esta nueva combinación está matando personas, debido a que los hispanos son más propensos a utilizar la heroína se teme que esta población sea la más afectada", aseguró Dr. Cleo Malone, director del centro de recuperación juvenil Palavra Tree, en San Diego.

Desde muy temprano familias mexicanas de San Diego comenzaron a juntarse en casas de amigos y familiares, muchas otras acudieron a desayunar en grupos a diferentes establecimientos.

molinaron alrededor de los aparatos de televisión para ver el juego entre México e Irán.

Cerca de las nueve de la mañana cuando salieron los jugadores de la selección mexicana a la cancha, muchas gargantas se hicieron nudo cuando se escuchó el himno nacional.

Entre tazas de café, los aficionados mexicanos vieron por televisión como el conjunto azteca derrotaba 3-1 a la selección de Irán.

Bravo arranque

Dos goles de Omar Bravo (28 y 76 minutos) y otro tanto del brasileño naturalizado Zinha a los 79 dejaron a México con tres puntos en el Grupo D, que completan Angola y Portugal. Yahya Golmohammadi anotó para Irán a los 36.

Omar Bravo sucede en el palmarés a Manuel Rosas (1930), Javier Valdivia (1970), Luis García (1994), y Luis Hernández (1998), únicos futbolistas de la selección mexicana que han marcado más de un gol en un partido de la Copa Mundial de la FIFA.

El portero Oswaldo Sánchez regresó al arco mexicano apenas cuatro días después de la muerte de su padre y, como siempre, fue un muro en la valla del Tri.

México enfrenta el viernes 16 de junio a Angola, y cierra el 21 frente a Portugal, mientras que Irán choca el sábado con Portugal, y el 21 con Angola.

Abre la Feria

Abrió sus puertas la famosa y tradicional Feria del Condado de San Diego en los terrenos de Del Mar.

Este año el carnaval lleva como tema central "Va Llena de Diversión" (Ride the Tide to Fun) que proyecta una divertida ola del mar, con muchas atracciones relacionadas con agua, peces, delfines, ballenas y el mundo marítimo.

Como cada año la Feria del Condado cuenta con grandes atractivos, sorpresa, y diversión para toda la familia con puertas abiertas de las 10 de la mañana a 11 de la noche.

Uno de los mayores atractivos es la presentación del mundialmente famoso artista Wyland, que presentará sus vividas pinturas sobre temas marítimos, así que el terreno central del hipódromo se transformará en la Isla de Wyland.

En ese lugar los asistentes podrán aprender sobre como preservar, proteger y respetar en medio ambiente, además del fascinante mundo marino, visto desde la perspectiva del famoso pintor y buceador.

Le quitan brazo

Un bebé de dos meses de edad se recupera luego que le extirparon un tercer brazo.

El niño chino tenía dos brazos izquierdos, y los cirujanos decidieron extirparle uno que estaba creciendo más cerca del pecho luego que exámenes determinaron que era el menos desarrollado.

El doctor Chen Bochang, jefe del equipo de cirujanos, dijo que la operación de tres horas de duración en el Centro Pediátrico de Shanghai salió mejor de lo esperado.

"Descubrimos que los nervios y los vasos sanguíneos del tercer brazo estaban formados como en un brazo normal", dijo Chen a periodistas. El cirujano dijo que el bebé necesitará terapia física a largo plazo para que funcione bien su mano restante, que carece de palma y se flexiona en ambas direcciones.

La madre de Liu dijo que estaba aliviada de que la operación hubiera concluido, pero señaló sus temores por el futuro del niño.

Los padres trabajan como granjeros en la provincia agrícola de Anhui, al Oeste de Shanghai.

Los últimos informes médicos indican que el menor se está recuperando de buena manera tras la cirugía.

Aprietan redadas

Agentes de la Patrulla Fronteriza incrementaron redadas en el Norte del Condado, específicamente en Escondido y Vista donde la presencia de oficiales federales se ha hecho evidente los pasados días.

Diversas calles, parques, centros comerciales y hasta zonas residenciales son vigilados por la presencia de los agentes fronterizos y la policía local que han comenzado a realizar redadas en conjunto.

Tal es el caso del señor López de origen Guatemalteco, residente de Valley Center, quien junto con su primo y cuñado fueron la carnada de los agentes federales el pasado miércoles en Escondido.

López y sus familiares acudieron a cenar y enviar dinero a Guatemala, en su camino de regreso a Valley Center una patrulla de Policía de Escondido los paró porque el escape del auto hacía ruido.

"Me extrañó que me pararan porque acabo de reparar el escape, tengo los recibos, después de que el oficial revisó mi licencia, dijo López.

Para la familia López, como para la comunidad hispana de Escondido, esta ola de redadas los ha puesto en alerta, debido a que es evidente la presencia de la Patrulla Fronteriza que están operando con la ayuda de la policía local.

A MAYAN saying: "I am another yourself."

DAVEBABE, is in Boston! It's been 9 years this week. It's been 9 years living without you. My fault. Still crazy after all these years!

DEAR ZOE, I'll never forget meeting you, feeling, I've finally met the lady I would love the rest of my life. Your Full Moon Man.

HGS, When I voted for you for president, little did I realize how much unpresidential power you already had over me. TYS Michale IRLDY 24/7/365.

MISS ZOE MCFARLAND. Dear Zoe. It was great to see your smile Saturday. I'll do anything to see that smile again. Your Victoria Falls Man.

READ the lies. Ehded in the face of man, that someday he hides in shame to see. Corruption hurts all revealed.

SPECIALNESS- You and your beautiful brown-eyed face are melted into the very core of my soul, and for every true and right reason, I need to spend my life loving you. I really miss you sweetheart, "g."

THANK YOU, holy spirit for prayers answered. All.

eah. It doesn't matter for me. I don't even really like sending e-mail; it's boring for me. If I had to read my girlfriend's e-mail, I'd do it; I wouldn't like to do it. I'm not scared to read it. All girls and guys keep in touch with people [I might not like], but I don't want her to tell me about it. She does what other people do. I can't change how people are.

Tim Tatum
Student

N
o. That's like giving my girlfriend my bank-account number. You got to keep some things private. It'd kind of bug me to read her e-mail, and that's why I wouldn't want her to read mine. There's no point. If I read her e-mail, there could be some Joe-Moe I don't know and he happens to be some lost friend and I get upset over nothing. I'd definitely like to see my teachers' and maybe my parents' e-mails. I'd like to see what they're up to and stay a step ahead of them. If you read teachers' e-mails, you'd see what they put up with, and you'd know how to talk to them when you need help. I don't like all the damn junk e-mail; you also get people writing e-mail you don't want to talk to who you have to read because they wrote you. I get all kinds of junk e-mail.

Kelly Robertson
Student

Y
es. He hasn't read it that I know of. I haven't read his [e-mail]; I don't know his password. Are you trying to make me nervous? I'm not really a jealous person. If there were something I was worrying about, I'd ask him about it. I check my own e-mail often. I get e-mail from friends and girlfriends; he'd think my e-mails were pretty silly, but I wouldn't worry about anything.

Michelle Young Hostess

Y
es. I'd be a little bothered if he read it over my shoulder, but if I love him, then I wouldn't be hiding anything. I don't think he'd be cool if I was writing long-lost friends from high school, but that's okay. I'd want to read my boyfriend's e-mail; I'd want to snoop for gossip. My e-mails are to friends; they're pretty chatty. My boyfriend probably wouldn't want to read it because he'd be bored. My boyfriend is a tattoo artist, so more of his e-mail would be guys asking him about work, and it'd be kind of boring for me to read. E-mail is a lot easier than the phone. If I didn't have e-mail, I wouldn't keep in touch with nearly as many people.

Marianne Hablitzel
Student

N
o, I wouldn't. Maybe I would, but I wouldn't let them go behind my back and do it. I wouldn't give my boyfriend my password; I like my privacy. I'd want my boyfriend's e-mail password; why not? If I wouldn't want him to have mine, then I wouldn't want his. Unless I thought he was cheating or something would I check his e-mail. I wish I could take back a few e-mails that I wrote when I was mad. I lived with this person and we weren't talking, so e-mail was a better way to communicate. E-mail was easier than person-to-person because you can get all your thoughts out. The angry e-mail didn't solve anything, but it did help. I got a check from the person that I needed. I saw the person read it, but they didn't respond to it. Eventually they wrote a couple-line e-mail back to me.

I don't have the Internet, and I don't have a computer. I have a phone that I can e-mail with. It depends on whom I'm e-mailing. I don't really have anything incriminating. I'd be curious to read other people's e-mail. I work a lot and write letters by hand, so I don't need e-mail. I think a letter is better than e-mail; I'm not a really fast typist either. I don't recommend people going back to handwriting letters because it sucks. I bought the phone that I have because it has the keyboard on it. I check for texts pretty often.

PICTURE STORY

Photograph from the San Diego Historical Society

Photographer Harry Bishop took off in this balloon in 1915 to take some of San Diego’s first aerial photos. He almost didn’t make it back to earth. An 1800-foot cable anchored the balloon, but Bishop, dissatisfied, asked the balloon owner to separate it from the tether. A Santa Ana wind took them out to sea. As the day progressed and the wind changed, they drifted back over land and came back down near Otay.

Down and Up and Down Again

THE SHOW | By Frances Kuffel

“You don’t want to eat cookies, Francie,” Mom cajoled the summer before my book, Passing for Thin, was published. “You’re going to be in Oprah’s magazine.”

Indeed, I was. I was already e-mailing the editor about the excerpts she’d chosen. The photo shoot would happen soon after I returned to New York.

I was beginning to feel a bit like Lucy at the Museum of Natural History, my body and life in a glass case for the curious. My first experience of this was having my author photo taken in June. I weighed myself that morning, needing to know what, if not who I was: 174 pounds. In the one picture in which I’m seated, my boobs bulge over the strapless bra I wore, both the sweater and bra belonging to the 150-pound Frances.

I weighed 205 pounds when I got back from Montana. Thirty pounds in eight weeks. I began weighing and measuring meals. I began to lose weight.

Not enough, however, for the O shoot. “Tell me about your fashion sense,” the stylist said the week before.

I snorted. “Clean sweatpants? I have a four-month-old puppy.”

He didn’t laugh. “Ralph Lauren,” I gave in. “Dolce & Gabbana. Anne Klein.”

“Do you want to bring a couple of outfits?” “I’ve gained some weight,” I confessed. “What size are you?” “Umm...a 16? 18?” The latter was closer to the truth, but I was trying.

I was trying rather than doing. “Doing” is concrete action. Going to 12-step meetings and getting a sponsor. Hitting the weight room and treadmill. Going to therapy. Taking antidepressants.

I “didn’t,” I told myself, because the puppy was more crate-phobic than ever. She’d improved — once she got bitten a couple of times in the dog run, she reined in her hunger for human flesh. I’d housebroken her, giving her a cookie and praise for “good business” that was so effective she peed on command. She peed a teaspoon at a time.

But she also gave up electrical cords in favor of book glue. I couldn’t leave the house without casualties among biographies and Native American history.

I wrestled 30 pounds of contrariness and razor puppy teeth into the crate for the last time the day of the shoot, setting off determined to hide my chagrin and 50 pounds behind charm. The O team was prepared with plus-sizes and the photographer was set up for headshots. I regaled the gay

“Yeah, I was in the show. I was in the show for 21 days once — the 21 greatest days of my life. You know, you never handle your luggage in the show. Somebody else carries your bags. It was great.” — Crash Davis in Bull Durham boys fluffing me with puppy stories, while David Gray and Annie Lennox blasted in the background, making me feel oh-so-Vogue. In the end, I wore a white men’s shirt and scarf. It wasn’t Funny Face, but it wasn’t Kansas anymore, either, I told a friend in the dog run that afternoon, still sporting one false eyelash.

Reviews were good; the book gathered momentum. “The show,” as they say in baseball, was calling.

I got the call of all calls — Oprah. Well, from her minions. Many of them. In one day. We need you. We don’t need you. We might need you. We probably don’t need you, but you better catch the last plane out tonight in case we need you.

Wynonna Judd was struggling with her weight. Oprah was gonna set her straight. On one side of the center aisle sat her husband and mother. On the other were Bob Greene and I. Naturally, Roach and Naomi were called on stage, as was Greene, who was in charge of her “Connection.” I sat packed in my size-16 burgundy velvet dress, Number Four in the lineup, wondering what I would say if I was called. You can lose the weight, honey, I rehearsed as Naomi recalled the room-service trays outside many hotel-room doors. It’s the easiest thing in the world to lose weight. “We love Wynonna no matter what size she is,” her mom promised. But you’ll gain it back. “Of course, we worry about her health.” You want to lose it for Mom and Oprah and your kids and your husband and the tabloids. But Oprah and Bob Greene can’t save you. You can’t save you. You’re an addict. Food is stronger than any of that. Until you admit that and everything it means, you’re on the gerbil wheel forever.

I was heavy with Mrs. Smith’s cookies and chocolate-covered almonds and two room-service Cobb salads from the night before. I’d been called up to The Show and sent home with a mug. I’d been ready to preach, but I wasn’t practicing. “Denial,” Mark Twain said, “ain’t just a river in Egypt.”

LEAD STORY

— Wheelchair-confined Richard Paey committed almost exactly the same violations of Florida prescription drug laws that radio personality Rush Limbaugh did, with a different result: Limbaugh’s sentence, in May, was addiction treatment, and Paey’s, in 2004, was 25 years in prison. Both illegally possessed large quantities of painkillers for personal use, which Paey argued was (and will be) necessary to relieve nearly constant pain from unsuccessful spinal surgeries after an auto accident. Limbaugh admitted an addiction. If Limbaugh complies with his plea bargain, his conviction will be erased. Paey’s sentence now rests with a state court of appeals.

The Continuing Crisis

— (1) China, sensitive about the impression it will make on visitors to the 2008 Olympics, has undertaken a campaign against open spitting, monitored by volunteer scolders who wear shirts that spell out “mucus” in Chinese and who hand out bags to spit in. (2) India’s rural-development minister vowed in March that the country will eliminate open defecation by 2012, despite reports of toilet use in some states as low as 15 percent. The government gives homeowners toilet-installation grants.

— For 30 years now, many residents of Frostburg, Md., have been puzzled and annoyed at the three-story-high, 400-foot-long metal- and-concrete frame that Pastor Richard Greene calls his modern Noah’s Ark, at which he works off and on, awaiting Judgment Day. According to an April Pittsburgh Post-Gazette dispatch, Greene said the Ark came to him in visions during disturbing dreams in 1976. Some neighbors are patient, but others call the Ark an eyesore that depresses property values and wastes religious charity (since contributions to Greene have totaled $1 million).

— Ewwwww! (1) Again this year, in April, Jim Werych of the Wednesday Night Classics car club in Brookfield, Wis., dragged his tongue across Lisbon Road (with traffic stopped in both directions) to verify, and proclaim, that the streets are free of winter salt and thus safe for the club’s classics. (2) A March New York Times dispatch described recent successes in eradicating the grotesque “Nigerian worm,” which afflicted 3 million Africans in 1986 but only 12,000 last year. The string-like worm, up to three feet in length, produces pools of acid in legs or feet (or eye sockets) and causes excruciating pain until expelled.

Recent Notable Protests

— (1) In February, children’s book author Frank Feldmann, 35, trespassed to the top of the St. Augustine (Fla.) lighthouse in the middle of the night, wearing a tiger suit, to decry child pornography on the Internet. However, his point was not immediately understood by police on the ground below because of communication problems posed by his voice-muffling tiger mask. (2) The residents of Steuben County in upstate New York, who attended a community rally in January to protest a planned clean-energy windmill farm, mostly criticized its unsightliness, but one opponent objected because windmill blades make whirring noises that to him resemble sounds of Nazi holocaust torture.

Questionable Judgments

— In April, William Bethel Jr. confessed to police during a traffic stop that the station wagon he was driving was mainly used for transporting corpses for his friend’s mortuary service but that he was using it to deliver pizzas for Domino’s of Feasterville, Pa. Bethel resigned.

— On the day after a federal jury in Virginia sentenced “20th [Sept. 11] hijacker” Zacarias Moussaoui to life in prison without possibility of parole, a Florida jury in Orlando gave Carl Moore, 37, the same sentence. The Virginia jury had concluded that Moussaoui could have prevented the deaths of nearly 3000 people; the Florida jury found that Moore had fondled a 12-year-old girl, briefly, underneath her clothes on an elevator at a resort (his second such conviction).

Justice Delayed Is Justice Denied

— An Illinois appellate court in April upheld a lower court ruling reversing Mongo the steer’s disqualification for steroids after he had been chosen junior grand champion at the 2003 Illinois State Fair. Mongo had tested positive for the anti-inflammatory Banamine, for his sore foot, but the court declared the test improperly administered. It was a victory for Mongo’s owner, Whitney Gray, but of utterly no benefit to Mongo, who shortly after the fair was slaughtered.

The Pervo-American Community

— New York City raw-food restaurateur Dan Hoyt, 43, was sentenced to two years’ probation in April for a highly publicized 2005 incident in which he indecently exposed himself on a subway train in front of a 22-year-old woman, who reacted by photographing him with her cell phone and displaying the shot on the Internet. In an April interview with New York magazine, Hoyt shrugged off the incident, calling his habit just another facet of a “pretty cool,” thrill-seeking person. “I’ve met women who enjoy [being flashed].” Except for the subway incident, even his victim would “probably want to go out with me.”

Recurring Themes

— (1) People hit by “flying” cows (that fall out of livestock trailers on highways and overpasses), with the latest occurring near Seguin, Texas, in March, when a cow flew out onto Interstate 10, causing collisions of two police cars that soon caught on fire. (2) Patient, by-the-book, but useless police standoffs (in which cops implore residents for hours to surrender, eventually to learn that no one is home), with the latest being a suspected drug house surrounded for seven hours by SWAT officers in Oklahoma City in April.

Clumsy People with Guns (all-new) — People who accidentally shot themselves recently: Clayton Teman, 23, Springfield, Ore., January (misfired while being chased by police). A 25-year-old man, Wichita, Kan., February (driving with loaded gun between his legs). Sheriff’s deputy Jeff Hamric, Parkersburg, W.Va., March (during firearms practice at a gun range). An undercover Lauderdale, Fla., police officer, January (when a car bumped him on the street).

A 15-year-old boy, North Brunswick, N.J., March (“waistband as holster” accident). William Tyree, 33, Dacula, Ga., April (misfired while being chased by police). An unidentified man, Nacogdoches, Texas, February (shooting at an opossum). And in April, two men, a 23-year-old in Hopkinton, N.J., and an unidentified man in Grass Valley, Calif., fatally shot themselves while playing drunken games with their guns in front of friends.

Least Competent Criminals

— Short Attention Spans: Brian M. Williams, 21, was arrested for allegedly robbing Houchens Market in Glasgow, Ky., in April; police had found him minutes afterward across the street filling his gas tank. And Nathan Myles, 25, was sentenced in March to three years in prison for a lengthy, destructive police chase in Thunder Bay, Ontario; it ended when Myles stopped for a haircut. And Mario Caracoza, 26, was arrested for allegedly robbing a Bank of America in Bristol Township, Pa., in May; police had found him minutes afterward eating breakfast at the Sunrise Diner next door.

— Wrong Place, Wrong Time: (1) Konoshin Kawabata, 48, was arrested in Osaka, Japan, in March for burglarizing a temple; he wandered through an unmarked door and was surprised by 20 sumo wrestlers, who were staying at the temple and who easily detained him. (2) Police in Melbourne, Australia, arrested a 34-year-old man for robbery in January after the victim (renowned illustrator Bill “Weg” Green) provided police with an unusually helpful drawing of the perp’s face.

CORRECTION: In last week’s “News of the Weird,” it was stated that a young girl’s defective heart was removed, in favor of an artificial one, and then re-started recently, after ten years. Actually, the heart had remained inside her all along, but dormant.

BACK WHEN

In the Reader

Thirty Years Ago

When tickets for David Bowie's San Diego concert went on sale, a first-year law student from Pacific Beach bought 240 tickets — all were in the choicest sections of the Sports Arena — charged the $2,100 bill to his account, and then opened up San Diego's first scalping agency — San Diego Ticket Sales. The ticket agency, operated by a handful of students, was able to obtain more than 500 tickets, in all, to the Bowie concert — almost 3 percent of the total number of available seats. — "SCALPED!" Dan Coyro, June 17, 1976

Twenty-Five Years Ago

By the end of the '60s, the Oakwood Gardens apartment complex on Ingraham Street in Pacific Beach was the hottest conversation topic in town. (The buildings on the west side of Ingraham, called Mission Bay West and containing 505 rental units, were completed in 1968; Mission Bay East, with 564 units across the street, followed two years later.) Pacific Beach resident and school-teacher Valerie MacRae, now a grandmother, remembers the gala opening party as the most glamorous neighborhood event of the year. "Special invitations were issued. Married men who were approaching middle age wished they were single again so they could move into Oakwood and start swinging, and many of them did."

— "THE GOOD LIFE AT OAKWOOD," Sue Garson, June 18, 1981

Twenty Years Ago

Dear Matthew Alice: I had the flu and was feeling pretty bad. I was describing my symptoms to a friend, one of which was that I often began "sweating like a pig."... Why would a pig sweat so much? she asked me.

Reggie McCaskie, Imperial Beach

If you really sweated like a pig, you'd be in serious trouble on a hot day. Horses sweat, cows sweat (a little), but pigs don't — and that's why on a warm day, you'll find swine down at the local wallowing hole, cooling off their plump physiques.

— STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP, Matthew Alice, June 19, 1986

Fifteen Years Ago

The two children filed a brief with a California court seeking to invalidate the Hunt divorce. If Helen had never really divorced John Hunt, the attorneys reasoned, then her marriage to Jim Copley was also void.

— "A SON BY ANY OTHER NAME," Matt Potter, June 20, 1991

Ten Years Ago

Trying openly to inquire about nudism, it began to dawn on me, was not going to be easy. Prurience, even priapism, or what is inevitably taken for such, if not an unprepossessing persona in the first place, is not in most cases an encouraging one. I realized to approach women down there would make me look suspicious, if not unwholesome. Gay men would think I was hitting on them. And single men of whatever sexual persuasion were not down there, I concluded, to give interviews. Weren't questions themselves rude — nudism's something you do not discuss, right? (And I would soon come to see, if never quite understand or be able to explain, that nudists, at least the ones I encountered, were among the least articulate and ill-defined people I think I've ever met. But when you come right down to it, who in the world wants to explain anything?)

— "LAST EDEN," Alexander Theroux, June 13, 1996

Five Years Ago

Writers are driven to disclose secrets, to sacrifice themselves and their loved ones for an aside or a line of dialogue because writing has a special value. Everything gets swept up into the writer's need to turn relationships between real people into an interplay between fictional characters. If blood is thicker than water, printer's ink is thicker still. In this sense, writers have no families.

Dear Saffron,

My sister and I were raised Jewish in name only. We never went to temple, and we always had a Christmas tree. (I believe the word is “assimilated.”) The man my sister married is a bit more religious than that. He goes to temple four times a year, on big holidays — but he’s not devout. My sister and her husband have three sons, ages 15, 11, and 8. Their oldest boy got bar mitzvahed and was enthused about it. He studied hard and enjoyed the attention, presents, the party, and the sense of community. The next-oldest boy is coming of age, and when talk of his bar mitzvah began, he said, “I don’t want a bar mitzvah. I don’t want all those gifts. I don’t even want to be Jewish.” This seemed an important topic of discussion, but his father got angry and replied, “You are getting bar mitzvahed. This is not up to you. You have nothing to say about it. Subject closed.” I have kids too and think it’s a big mistake to force a child to do this. I want my sister and her husband to reconsider. I feel bad for the kid. Why should he have to stand up in front of a large congregation and go through all the motions of publicly declaring that he is embracing Judaism if he hates the whole idea? What can I say to convince them to let this poor kid off the hook and go his own way?

INCENSED UNCLE IN KEARNY MESA

Dear Incensed,

Matters of religion, family heritage, and culture being handed down to younger generations can be volatile. Proceed with caution. You can have a serious private talk with the parents and respectfully plead your nephew’s case. I agree that the parents should discuss the matter thoroughly with their son, not just issue orders. You may need to find out why this is so important to your brother-in-law in order to figure out how to talk to him effectively about it. Remember that even though you and I think reason is on your side, it’s ultimately up to the parents. If they continue to disagree with your views, you’ll have to accept their decision. Then it’s between them and their son, and you’ll have to let them work (or fight) it out.

Dear Saffron,

My father died recently at the age of 80. He was very popular. He had loads of friends and had been active for years in San Diego charities, so he touched many people’s lives. He left clear instructions that he wanted no ceremony or fuss after his passing, as he felt those things are depressing and waste of time and money. Many of his friends and admirers, as well as some relatives — people who know how he felt — are pressuring me to have some kind of service or wake. It seems to be something people need. Some have gone so far as to suggest that I’m being disrespectful by not having such an event, even though Dad put it in writing that he didn’t want it. I’m the only surviving member of his immediate family, so it’s up to me. I don’t want to violate Dad’s wishes, but I’m getting the intense message from all sides that people insist on some kind of event in his honor. Should I stand firm for what Dad wanted or give in to friends and fans he left behind?

DUTIFUL GROSSMONT SON

Dear Dutiful,

I am sorry for your loss. When someone greatly loved, like your dad, dies, those left behind feel robbed, helpless, and sad. Survivors want to be able to pay their respects to the deceased, as well as grieve together and comfort each other. If you feel that there must be no event, then direct people who want to “do something” to send a donation to a charity or cause that your dad favored. But I bet there are all kinds of creative ways you could cook up an event in your dad’s honor without violating the spirit of his wishes. Could you host a small fundraiser for one of his pet causes in his name? Something that would honor him and at the same time contribute to something that he would have approved of? I think if you brainstorm with a few people who knew and loved your dad, you can come up with a unique remembrance very much in keeping with all your father stood for.

JEREMY MENNING

Providence, Rhode Island

MATRIMONY EVE

First, it was more than a year away. And then it was months and then weeks. Now it is days away, and soon it will be hours, minutes, seconds....

“It” is the moment that has been building momentum for some time, a moment no longer than the one before it or the one after it. Although time will pass in this moment, it is what happens in this moment that will define how I will live the rest of my life. “It” is the moment that I become a married man.

As that life-defining moment approaches, my family and friends continue to ask a question: “Are you nervous?”

When the question was first asked of me, I thought that it was rude. Would I be human if I wasn’t nervous? In turn I had chosen to give a rude response: “Why would I be nervous?”

I have since rethought my response. My family and friends had no intention of being rude, so the answer to the question has changed: “Yes. I am nervous about the wedding.”

There is anxiety about the wedding. There is a winding list of details that will continue to be refined until the moment we put on our wedding rings. There is so much to account for — coordination, consolidation, consideration, planning, plotting, timing, seating, eating, dancing, laughing, loving — yet I find myself becoming more at ease with the wedding day and night. With every passing hour it is more welcoming and inviting. Instead of fretting over details, I find comfort in the visions the details provide — visions of friends and family from near and far sharing in the moment.

There is a lot to be said for the act of publicly proclaiming your love to one person. I know, as the groom, that I will put on a tuxedo and stand before my family and friends and swear my love, support, and soul to Rhiana. I’ve thought about the moment a thousand times. I know that Rhiana, as the bride, will wear a dress and stand before her family and friends and swear her love, support, and soul to me. I have a feeling that she has thought about the moment more than a thousand times. We have expressed to each other the significance of the difference between “having a wedding” and “getting married.” That thought is something that we are very much together on and share similar feelings about. We choose to define each of them separately, although both events will occur simultaneously. It does not mean that we choose to share the wedding with our family and friends and not our marriage. It means that we choose to share both our wedding and our marriage with these people.

While getting married and having a wedding are symbolic of becoming a husband, I am nervous about the day after the wedding and all of the days after that. There are enormous responsibilities to live up to as a husband. And on the day of my wedding, I will make a promise to live up to these tasks. There are responsibilities that require planning and follow through. There will be challenges that I will not or cannot experience until they are already upon me. I will be committing to giving my love unconditionally for a lifetime, to see us through both desperate and prosperous times. I will have responsibilities that extend backwards into the world and life that I leave behind when I die. I am promising to live with another person and love that person through all that life brings to us. I choose to stand by this woman for the remainder of my life. No decision I make going forward will direct my life with Rhiana as much as the one I am about to choose by stating “I do.”

The days dwindle to hours and hours to minutes, and the moment for me to say “I do” will soon arrive.

Am I nervous about having a wedding, getting married, and becoming a husband? Yes, I am. Given the depth that those events signify, I’d be worried if I wasn’t.

ARMED ROBBERIES

Location: 201 South Rancho Santa Fe Road, San Marcos
Time/Date: 10:01 p.m. on 6/1/06

Investigation: The San Marcos Patrol Station responded to an armed robbery at the Kentucky Fried Chicken. The reporting party described one of the suspects as a black male adult approximately 5'8" to 5'9", weighing 175 lbs, approximately 25-30 years of age, wearing a black beanie pulled over his face. The suspect was wearing a dark navy blue sweatshirt, blue jeans and black shoes. The other suspect was described as a Hispanic male adult, 5'8" to 5'9", 150 lbs, approximately 25-30 years of age, wearing a black beanie pulled over his face. He was wearing a black hooded sweatshirt and dark jeans. Both suspects were armed with semi-automatic handguns. They entered the store and demanded the cash from the register. The loss was cash from the register and the register tray itself. A perimeter was quickly set by the responding units and a K-9 was requested from the Vista Patrol Station. The K-9 tracked the suspects to an open field and it is believed the suspects fled from the scene in a vehicle.

At approximately 10:30 p.m., units from the San Marcos Patrol Station responded to an armed robbery at the Ramada Inn, 517 West San Marcos Boulevard. The reporting party stated two suspects armed with handguns robbed him at gunpoint. The loss was cash from the register and the reporting party's wallet. Two customers checking into the hotel were also robbed of their wallets during this incident. The suspects were seen leaving the area in a white or light colored vehicle (possibly a Buick or a Chevrolet Celebrity). One of the suspects was described as being a Hispanic or white male adult with a mustache. Both suspects were wearing gray hooded sweatshirts, gray pants, dark-colored Converse brand tennis shoes, and masks/gloves. Sheriff's units searched the area for the suspects but were unsuccessful in locating them.

A short time later, an armed robbery was reported in the City of Escondido. The suspects and suspect vehicle matched [these two] robberies.

HOMICIDE BY SHANK

Location: 480 Alta Road, Otay Mesa
Time/Date: 5:15 p.m. on 6/1/06

Report: A group of 59 inmates at the Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility were returning to the housing unit after finishing their evening meal. A correctional officer, who was stationed in a guard tower, with a vantage point overlooking the yard the group was in, noticed one inmate walking in the opposite direction of the group. Utilizing his binoculars, he saw that the inmate was holding his neck and appeared to be in distress. The officer immediately sounded the alarm for the inmates to get down. All of them complied, with the exception of the injured inmate.

Officers ran to the injured man and called for emergency medical personnel and transportation. The inmate was taken to the facility dispensary, where he was pronounced dead at 6:10 p.m.

An improvised stabbing instrument, fashioned from a piece of metal, was found near the scene of the assault and is believed to be the weapon used in this attack.

ATTEMPTED MURDER OF A PEACE OFFICER

Location: 946 Montecito Way, Ramona
Time/Date: 2:02 a.m. on 6/3/06

Report: Two deputies from the Ramona Sheriff's substation were dispatched to check on a suspicious person at the Ramona Airfield. The on-site security officer reported the subject refused to leave the property and appeared to have been intoxicated.

When the deputies arrived at the gated entrance to the property, they were fired upon. The suspect fired between ten to twelve rounds in three separate volleys. Due to the wide-open field and no area to conceal them, the deputies had to abandon their position while they waited for other units.

The suspect was taunting the deputies to put their weapons down and to come after him.

Sheriff's units from Poway, Lakeside, Santee, Alpine, Valley Center, Sheriff's Special Enforcement Detail and units from Escondido police department arrived on scene shortly thereafter. Mark R. (42 yrs. old) was contacted at his residence and was detained. A loaded 9mm handgun and additional evidence was retrieved from the residence.

VEHICLE PURSUIT

Location: 8761 Cuyamaca Street, Santee
Time/Date: 4:30 a.m. on 6/5/06

Investigation: Deputy Eric Franssens was en route to the Santee Sheriff's Station, traveling in an alley behind the Santee Station, when he heard what sounded like glass breaking. Deputy Franssens immediately went to a nearby business complex to investigate, when he saw a vehicle leaving the area at a high rate of speed.

A short pursuit took place ending at 10250 Prospect Avenue, where the suspects abandoned the vehicle. Two white males with shaved heads were seen fleeing the area in different directions. A perimeter was established and the area was checked by responding Santee Station Deputies, a Sheriff's K-9, and officers from the El Cajon Police Department. The vehicle was later determined to have just been stolen from a location in the City of El Cajon.

Deputy Roger Demshok was contacted by a resident on Rhodes Court that a male was hiding in an area near his house. As Deputies arrived to check the area, a suspect fled. The suspect, later identified as Justin F., was located hiding in [the] bushes of an industrial park located at 10020 Prospect Avenue.

F. was not positively identified as the suspect who fled from the vehicle, but was determined to be under the influence and arrested. F. claimed he had medical issues related to his use of heroin, so deputies transported him to the hospital for evaluation prior to booking into county jail.

WHEN I WAS EIGHT, I RIPPED THE SKIN OFF MY RIGHT ARM.

I had been riding bikes with Timmy Sanguinetti at the churchyard. It was a day of us tear-assing all over. We had seen how fast we could go before rounding the corner behind the chapel and crunching through the gravel. Our front tires would sink in the powdery dust of the lot to where we'd almost have to jump off our seats, but we'd pedal through to the other side.

Across the street from the churchyard was my house, and if I'd known I was going to peel off the skin of my right arm, I'd've peeled it off right there in my driveway instead of riding over Sunset Hill and down Greeley Road to do it. Hell, if I'd've known I was going to crash my bike so far away, I'd've probably just went inside and watched TV instead.

We checked all the doors to the church that day. Tim said one time somebody'd left the back door beneath the chapel open. He said there was a refrigerator standing inside the hall and that he'd snooped through it to see if there was anything inside worth eating, but there'd been only a jar of green olives. Timmy hated green olives.

The door at the top of the stairs that ran along the side of the church was closed, too. So we sat on the cold concrete steps and wrote stuff with a piece of chalk that'd been left there by some other kid. We wrote the names of the girls we liked and then scratched them out with our shoes. Since we were on the topic of girls, we argued about how Transformers made other Transformers.

I contended, and still do to this day, that Transformers do it, and Timmy said they just built other Transformers from spare parts and scrap metal.

"They're a race of beings from another planet," I said, my proposition as plain as day. "That means they do it."

Timmy thought we should ride over to ask Monkey, since Monkey was two years older than us.

It was over on Greeley, by the school, and about a block from Monkey's that I hit a huge pothole in the asphalt and got pitched over the front of my handlebars and tore my right arm down to the red meat.

Monkey's mom screeched her tires over to my body, loaded me into her brown Toyota Corona with the tinny doors and drove me home with my bike in the trunk. The next few days I sat on the carpet in front of the TV with a wet rag over my torn skin that I'd move around to keep from sticking to me, and I drank chocolate milk through a straw.

WHAT I WILL AND WON'T WATCH THIS WEEK

ROAD TRIP WITH HUELL HOWSER
PBS 8:00 P.M.
Huell Howser wears his accent like a midget in a corduroy leisure suit.

KATHY GRIFFIN: MY LIFE ON THE D-LIST
BRAVO 2:30 P.M.
Okay! We get it! You're a celebrity, but not a big one. Please, either do something worthy of success or go back to burning lattes at the Starbucks on Wilshire. Stop with the whole "Paris won't return my calls, but I have her number" bit. Damn.

FRIDAY, JUNE 16
THE DOG WHISPERER
NGC 8:00 P.M.
Although my parole officer and the front-desk girl at my gym don't like it, I am known as "The Underpants Whisperer" around the North Park and Ocean Beach areas.

AMAZING EARTH
SCIENCE 3:00 P.M.
Why do we call our planet Earth? They didn't even name it after a Roman god, like the other planets. The word just lays there: Earth. Let's call it Disco Disco 17. Earth sounds like we all just love cinnamon-colored sweaters and vanilla pudding. Disco Disco 17, however, that's a party.

JEEPERS CREEPERS (2001)
WB 8:00 P.M.
One of my new favorite things is to brush my teeth and quickly eat a handful of strawberries. Because — blech — it just tastes so gross...ew, yuck. I love it. Just smelling them doesn't do anything; you have to mash them up right on top of the minty sweet aftertaste. Oh, man, that's gross.

SUNDAY, JUNE 18
WHAT WOMEN WANT (2000)
CBS 9:00 P.M.
From what I can gather, number one on the list is a fundamental unseating of everything logical and efficient in favor of a world in which its every operation, including the very direction of its spin, is subject to emotion.

MONDAY, JUNE 19 WORLD CUP SOCCER
ESPN 2:00 P.M.
Why are we pretending that soccer's not dumb? It's like the World Cup is a chick who played back in college, and America's trying to get in her shorts, and we're all saying, "Oh, yeah, you were on the Lady Aztecs team? That's awesome. I respect you so much now," and we're getting a little handsy because we're drunk and we can see the lacy top of her bra.

TUESDAY, JUNE 20
BAYWATCH
SPIKE 2:00 A.M.
Sure, playing "What's in the needle that washed up onshore?" can hold suspense and make for tense drama, but remember, kids, never poke your friends without their permission, and if the label on the hypo reads, "Propertee uv Pam Anderson," be sure to throw it back!

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 21
BATMAN (1989)
HBO 5:45 P.M.
Someday I hope to be chairman of Oscar Mayer and to have an assistant named Robin so I can say, "Quick! Robin! To the Weinermobile!" And I'll be in a pinstriped suit. And I'll probably be a little drunk, too.

THURSDAY, JUNE 22
SO YOU THINK YOU CAN DANCE
FOX 9:00 P.M.
I don't like the aggressive accusation of this title. It's like I've been accosted by street toughs from Michael Jackson's video for "Beat It," and we have to hold each other's hands and pretend to knife fight, but I really just want to comb my Jheri curl and pull up my chunky wool leggings.

T.G.I.F.

By John Brizzolara

This is my least favorite time of year for many reasons that essentially boil down to the irrational. The clearest statement of the reasoning behind this is that this season is too hot. I have run Hemingway’s quote (from a letter to F. Scott Fitzgerald) pretty much into the ground every year here. It’s the one about not feeling death in the air “like you do in the autumn when the boys really get their pens moving.”

It surprises me, in a way, that Hemingway is not enjoying more of a resurgence in popularity right now; the air is so rife with not just summer and stagnation — at least not yet — but with bullshit, especially of the cracker-box literary style of chestnuts that have been gathering momentum in recent years, ever since the misquotation from Winston Groom’s Forrest Gump (“Life is like a box of chocolates” etc.). In reality, the line was, “Being an idiot ain’t no box of chocolates.” But if Hollywood is given a choice between Penny Marshall (its own sort of Forrest Gump) and some literary cracker quietly producing first-rate work like Gone with the Sun (familiar? thought not), Better Times Than These, 1942: The Year that Tried Men’s Souls, or Conversations with the Enemy, Hollywood will take the chocolate-covered Horatio Alger any time. If being an idiot is no box of chocolates, it is not box office either.

Snobbery? I guess. But this is from a guy — a gum-snapping Chicago rock muzicker — whose first novel was a literary imitation, not a parody (but a couple of laughs, though the climactic pages were compared by the Union-Tribune to an A-Team script); it was written by an art-college dropout turned bartender/sci-fi writer/rock musician and critic. Not the lowest being on the food chain, but hardly Henry James in a Tom Wolfe suit decrying how things could be done so much better in or around my neighborhood. It does give me pause to wonder how close to typical I might be for my age group in wondering whether the world is dumbing down, or am I just becoming the crotchety old guy on the front porch, toothlessly shooin’ kids away with hoarse commands to “Get offa my property!”

At any rate, that’s the guy I turn into this time of year, and I often stay that way until October, more or less. For example, today. The only thing I approve of, even vaguely, about today is that it is overcast. To me it is a welcome touch of reality in a town that has a name for days of this type; that is, of course, either May Gray or June Gloom. The rest of the world just makes do with calling it New Jersey or Belgium or something.

It seems my lousy mood has gathered momentum since I started this column. That’s unusual, really. I like writing this column and it often resurrects me from any existential morass I may have tripped into. This time it seems an occasion to take on any number of subjects, one at a time, as if haranguing the kneecaps of passers-by. The armless, legless knight in Monty Python’s Holy Grail comes to mind (“Come back here! I’ll bite your kneecaps off!” or whatever he’s yelling).

And another thing. How come everyone overseas for the past three years or so has been “on the ground?” Like, “Spokesperson Al Jazid from Jaz Alhid reports that his men on the ground have been in place since...” Or “Representatives on the ground report that...” Or “Stone Rocksmith of CNN on the ground since May of...” This seems to imply a huge number of Magritte-like characters suspended in mid-air above troubled hotspots, and I, for one, can’t help picturing their bowler hats and umbrellas as they defy gravity above the shattered domes of Baghdad or Kabul.

I’ll tell you what really gets me. It’s those kids who get on the #7 bus at San Diego High School about 2:30 or 3:00. It’s, like, “The obscenity meter has just kicked on. Whoever reaches the highest number of maximally objectionable, even vaguely English words will be tricked out with the gaudiest bling our experts can contrive and will be immortalized forever in the baseboard plaque of the urinal at the Greyhound bus terminal on Broadway.”

And then all those middle-aged, Spanish-speaking women coming home from work (seems earlier every day, if you ask me) on, say, the #30 or #34 bus, who rattle off, at incredible rates, rapid-fire español intended to disguise their comments on my once matinee-idol good-looks now gone to seed and how my corset is so visible it’s pathetic these days and why don’t I just stop dying my mustache as it’s so cheap it’s now becoming some sort of purple, which it isn’t, and who are they, anyway, with their eyelashes that look pruned from toilet brushes and...

Ah, there’s the lousy word count on the column. Want more of this? Don’t worry, there’s plenty!
