hen a Boy Scout offers to help a little old lady across the street, she should check her purse upon reaching the curb.

That may be the message of a securities arbitration that has just been completed. The arbitrators, assessing speculative ventures peddled to an elderly, disabled San Diego woman, cited "fraud, to a supposedly impartial, knowledgeable panel. Since 2007, such arbitrations have been handled by the nongovernmental Financial Industry Regulatory Authority (FINRA).

Attorneys Brian Miller (left) and Bradd Milove represent a local retiree who was scammed out of her life's savings.

gross misconduct, breach of fiduciary duty, and/or gross negligence" by the financial swingers who claimed they were helping her across the street.

"The panel's biting commentary about taking advantage of an older, retired, unsophisticated client through deceit has to sting," says Bill Singer, who writes Broke and Broker, an Irreverent Wall Street Blog and also writes for the Huffington Post.

Securities arbitration is a dispute-resolution process. Instead of going to court, parties take their arguments

The victim is Martha Campbell, 63, a retired, disabled customer-service agent who had worked for San Diego Gas & Electric for 34 years as a single mother with a high school education. Her life savings were $428,000, according to arbitration papers filed by her San Diego attorneys, Bradd Milove, Brian Miller, and Paul M. Jonna.

According to Miller, Campbell was in the process of selling her $400,000 home, "but the market went against her" as San Diego home prices plummeted at the time she became ill.

Finally, she decided to do a short sale, a transaction in which a lender takes less money than is actually owed on the mortgage.

Her nephew-in-law, Daniel Guillen, assisted her in the short sale. According to her attorneys' presentation in the arbitration, Campbell "was led to believe Daniel Guillen was acting altruistically."

But that was questionable. According to information presented at the arbitration, Guillen got $18,000 from financial operator Kevin Williams, who put her retirement money in investments that the panel considered wholly unsuitable. Williams, who has offices in La Jolla and Orange County, put $350,000 of Campbell's $428,000 in a real estate investment called the Land Entitlement and Opportunities Fund. Williams told her that she would make $3333 a month on her money.

Campbell's attorneys say that Guillen was a money finder for Williams — that is, one who is paid a commission to recruit investors. "Daniel Guillen is not now, nor has he ever been, a money finder for Kevin Williams," says Guillen's lawyer, Andrew Stilwell, who would not say how Guillen got to know Williams. At the hearings, Williams's lawyers argued that Guillen and Williams had a business together, and that explains

Fenter rests her head in the palm of her hand and sobs in front of 21 of her neighbors, all residing in the Mission Valley Village mobile home park. Someone reaches over and rubs her back as she weeps.

Fenter, who will be 81 later this year, has lived in the park since 1987. She's joined her neighbors at their makeshift dog park to discuss living conditions

The dog park has been the meeting place for residents to socialize and talk over the latest turns in their lawsuit against Archstone-Smith Development Group, which purchased the seniors-only mobile home park in 2007. Neighbors erected the knee-high foldaway fence two years ago in an empty space after construction crews tore up a home and removed it from the property.

"We were sick of looking at all of the empty spaces and just thought we should make something for the community," explains one resident.

Most of those sitting inside the 15-by-30-foot pen are women, and all are between the ages of 68 and 81. They sit on white plastic chairs positioned around four patio tables. Some have walkers, and one man, who is missing his right leg, sits in a wheelchair. A few hold umbrellas to shade themselves from the afternoon sun. They share stories about those who have left and updates on new ailments of those still there. They say stress is slowly killing off everyone.

It started on April 26, 2007, when residents received a letter from Archstone-Smith announcing that it had purchased the property in February. The correspondence informed them that the company planned to cease operating the mobile home park on April 26, 2008, and construct a 444-unit condominium complex.

Skip's the Man

Skip Frye is an icon in the surf world and a world-class boardmaker ("I Finally Got Skip Frye to Make Me a Surfboard," Cover Story, October 14). He keeps his own schedule and chooses his projects. He is gracious to his friends; however, when I asked him to make boards for first my grandson and later my granddaughter, he obliged without reservation. I am so pleased to say that I know a man like Skip, who values friendship (even childhood friendships like my husband's and his) and makes himself and his talent available to those friends. He is a remarkable craftsman and, more importantly, an amazing friend. Time is irrelevant when it comes to Skip's work. I'd wait forever for his combination of talent and mindfulness. It shows in his work, his relationships, and the very spirit of the man in the water or the workshop.

Bravo For The Birds

Cool essay on our feathered friends in Lakeside ("Wild Birds of Lakeside," Feature Story, October 14), and worthy of a prize! Kudos to the author(ess), even if she did use a field guide. The essay was educational, yet naturally refreshing to read.

Most San Diegans can readily identify a snowy egret or a red-tailed hawk, but many of the smaller species go unrecognized, although they do humankind a great favor by reducing the insect population.

Reading this essay brought back vivid memories of sitting on the beautiful secondstory deck of my brother's house in Taos, Missouri, field guide in one hand and cup of coffee or cold beer in the other, marveling at the number of wild birds visible along the Central Flyway. My brother kept three large seed feeders and three hummingbird feeders stocked, and the number of avian visitors to his yard was astronomical. Wild birds of all shapes, sizes, and colors, let alone amusing habits, would drop in to hit the feeders.

I've always been a hummingbird man, but the colorful cardinals and comical blue jays were my welcome companions at coffee time or beer-thirty. Every so often, a new arrival sporting a "trick paint job" (vibrant plumage) would lead me to consult the guide in an effort to identify the newcomer.

The backyard sloped downward toward a woodline 100 feet away, and it was there in that woodline that I first glimpsed the majestic pileated woodpecker, cousin to the fabled ivory-billed woodpecker, the presumedto-be-extinct-but-quitepossibly-still-living Holy Grail of all birdwatchers. When the pileated woodpecker hammers away at a tree in the forest, it sounds like a machine gun firing in the distance — an awesome bird, much larger than woodpeckers found in this area. Just hearing a pileated woodpecker was enough to remind me of my infantry days, and I was fortunate to spy two in the woodline during my stay.

Of course, hummingbirds have always been my favorite birds, and there was no shortage of them along the Central Flyway. I keep a broad HummZinger feeder here in our yard in Coronado, and it brings in the birds, but nowhere near as many as I saw in Taos, Missouri. Mornings, when I stepped out on the deck to have a cup of coffee, each hummingbird feeder was literally surrounded by eight or ten birds, all gracefully swirling around in an aerial ballet an aerial ballet in triplicate, since there were three feeders evenly spaced amid the seed feeders. An unreal sight, those hummingbirds, mere feet away at eye level, since all the feeders were suspended from a long tree limb that ran above and roughly parallel to the handrail of the deck. Many times my spirits were lifted by stepping out to greet my little feathered friends in that beautiful environment, not counting the extensive woods below.

My brother had an oak, a cedar, and a hickory in his yard, so every songbird had a refuge nearby in case a predator (i.e., raptor) appeared on the scene. I once looked out the sliding glass doors leading to the deck and saw various songbirds cowering inside the wooden handrail, gripping its posts and looking skyward. Stepping out, I saw a small but fierce pigeon hawk (falcon) perched above

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP BY MATTHEW ALICE

Hevmatt:

I've been watching my crazy cat and was wondering if animals have mental illnesses like people do. We get schizophrenia and paranoia and other things.

Are animals vulnerable to them too? Sometimes I wonder about my cat...

— Anonymous, via email

I'll leave you wondering about your cat. No matter what the science guys say, personally, I'm convinced that cats are mad. I won't bore you with my reasoning. You know what I mean. But you cat people seem to love it, so I'll let that go, too. However, a bipolar elephant is another thing altogether.

And a schizophrenic rat is yet another thing altogether. However, we've got some of them, according to the National Institutes of Mental Health unit of the National Institutes of Health, your government in action. Of course, no one is saying that the schizo rats have the same neurochemical basis for the strange behavior, which in humans might even be partly genetic in origin. What we've managed to produce are rats that exhibit major behavioral traits of human schizophrenics; so by our definitions, they're schizoid on the outside but not the inside. If you're prone to picketing university labs carrying signs that say, "Rats are people too!" maybe you'd better move on to the breast-augmentation ads. The situation is sort of poopy, I think. But science must march on, and sometimes that means it must step in horse puckies from the equestrian unit in front of them.

Doctors of people believe the hippocampus, a part of the human brain, is quite involved in schizophrenia. So if we're using rats as our brain model for science purposes, the animal doctors inject a toxin into the rat's hippocampus and wait a few weeks or months for human-like schizophrenic behaviors to appear. And appear they do. So this, they say, is how we're going to make progress in understanding and treating the sometimes baffling diagnosis of schizophrenia.

However, I'm pretty sure this isn't the question Anonymous asked. Nameless wants to know if one day you're sitting around the house and suddenly your iguana develops multiple personality disorder. Pish, tosh, you might say. Well, if you say it, don't say it around the American College of Veterinary Behaviorists. This is a subspecialty of the veterinary profession that helps zookeepers, pet owners, dog trainers, whoever, diagnose and remedy unacceptable animal behaviors that are not the result of bad training or bad environments. (Those two probably account for the vast majority of bad pet behavior. Clueless owners/caregivers are at the heart of those dilemmas.) They're not dog trainers or dog psychics; they're regular vets. Mostly they see animals who are exhibiting typical behaviors for their species but the behaviors are carried to some terrible extreme. The animals are examined medically then behaviorally, the symptoms are considered, then a plan of meds (if called for) and much behavioral therapy are drawn up for the beast in question.

Of course, vets can't say, "Your dog/elephant/snake is schizophrenic." That's a diagnosis that requires the ability to talk to the patient to get details about those delusions and hallucinations. Behaviors might be schizo-like (withdrawing from social contact, hyper-response to stress, and poor memory), but in the vet's office, the animal is suffering a "mood disorder." These vets also suspect some dogs inherit a genetic component that makes them susceptible to these behaviors if the animals find themselves in a stressful environment. But dog and cat behavioral genetics have a way to go before anything can be said definitely.

So, what's the answer. It seems that animals don't suffer human-type mental disorders, but they sure can act weird. And that weirdness can be diagnosed as an animal-type mental disorder, perhaps even inherited, though we don't know enough about that yet. We don't know what Anonymous means by her cat acting weird, so we can't give a prognosis. But considering it's a cat, it's probably normal behavior designed to drive humans a little crazy.

Hey, Matthew:

I left some toenail clippings in the sink, and when I got home later there was a stream of ants trying to carry them off. Mainly they go for things like Popsicle sticks and honey. Why would they possibly want toenail clippings, and what were they planning on doing with them?

— J.B., San Diego

What a charming picture you paint of hygiene in the B. household. I'd say you were lucky the ants stopped by to clean up. But since you've asked, we dialed up UCSD's Cooperative Extension and got the full ant/toenail picture. The ants (likely Argentine; hear their little accents?) were out foraging for whatever they might come across. One guy found the toenails, whistled to his buddies, and they descended on them. Toenails are keratin, the perfect protein for the ants to chew up and feed to their larvae. If you had a few dead animals or a pile of flies around your house, they would have liked that, too.

Are Cash-Strapped City Officials Considering Assassination as Solution to Fat-Cat Pensioner Problem?

When city councilman Carl DeMaio released his scathing analysis of the city's pension system on October 4, he estimated that the City's highestpaid pensioners will be paid $61 million over the next 25 years. That number includes over $225,000 a year for librarian Anna Martinez and very nearly $300,000 for assistant city attorney Eugene Gordon. Shocking numbers, but perhaps even they are not quite as galling as the thought of comparatively young people such as former councilmen Michael Zucchet and Ralph Inzunza pulling down a check for the rest of their (ostensibly productive and lengthy) lives after just a few years of public service.

Not that Zucchet and company are abashed, mind vou. "It's old news," said Zucchet, 40, who will snag a government check for nearly $15,000 every year until he dies. "The elected officials retirement system has been discussed and even litigated for the last five years. The case was literally laughed out of court, and the City was then obligated to pay our legal fees. Which fees, I can tell you, included more than a few VIP-room client-attorney 'conferences' at Cheetah's, the strip club, which, in perfectly legal fashion, lobbied me to have its 'no-touch' lapdance ban lifted way back in 2003. Speaking of old news, I was convicted of wire fraud, conspiracy, and extortion for that one, but I was later acquitted. And the U.S. Attorney's Office just decided not to seek to retry me! Ha, ha, ha! Maybe I'll blow this year's check getting private dances from Jezebel - girl is smoking!" Zucchet then picked up a second-grade public school teacher's severance check, set it on fire, and used it to light a $34 Cohiba cigar, which he tossed in the trash after a couple of puffs.

But Sacramento-area accountant Marcia Fritz, who made the projections as part of her work for the California Foundation for Fiscal Responsibility, suggested that there may be a solution to the problem of these greedy jackanapes. In a brief interview conducted as Fritz headed down the jetway at San Diego International Airport on her way out of town, she noted that her dire projections take into account such factors as cost-of-living increases and life expectancy (emphasis added).

"If, God forbid, something were ever to happen to these gentlemen," said Fritz, before trailing off. "Well, I'm gone. Best of luck to you, San Diego!"

As she stepped over the threshold and into the plane, a business card fluttered down from her purse. "SD on the QT" attempted to return the card, but was prevented by airport security. Upon inspection, the card proved to be entirely black and perfectly smooth. This reporter decided to hold on to it for further investigation, only to have his house burglarized and ransacked two days later. The card was the only item removed. A Freedom of Information Act request for information on Ms. Fritz indicated that no such person exists, and there is no public database listing for the California Foundation for Fiscal Responsibility. City officials have not responded to repeated requests for comment.

Tough love: Needle exchange program seeks to save lives and also to help build valuable life skills

Mark it in your day-planner, people — it's not like the ice-cream truck.

The San Diego Clean Syringe Exchange Program operates just two days per week, in two different locations at two different times of day — but it's all part of the plan. "You can't buy needles 😤 in San Diego without a prescription, so we're pretty much the only source a lot of these people have," says program coordinator Katrina Flores. "By limiting accessibility and changing locations, \( \gamma \) we encourage IV-drug users to develop better time-management and organizational skills. And if they happen to miss a week for some reason, they can always use one of our bleach kits to clean their old needles. The kits, when used in exact accordance with the included specifications, will most often remove the danger of HIV, if not necessarily Hep C. Following directions is an important part of responsible living. And remember — don't share needles!"

zoomed in on a glittery globe that contained translucent swirls of pink, purple, and green. The sky was a clear, rich blue, and the sun was high above. My high-def Canon camcorder captured brilliant starbursts in all of the glossy surfaces. I panned over a line of glass sculptures that had been shaped and colored to look like pumpkins. A few steps away, I recorded several seconds of a man playing guitar in the shade of an umbrella. Behind him was a colorful sign that read, "Art Glass."

"This is going to come out great," I said. I turned to see that only David was standing beside me. Josue was busy catching up with one of the artists; Rosa had wandered off to check out the show at her own pace. My friends were happy to tag along while I gathered information and collected footage for a segment I do on NBC/KNSD's News in the Morning. It was a gorgeous Saturday to be at the park, and once I was done filming and they'd finished browsing, we were going to drive 26 miles north to have lunch at Hacienda de Vega in Escondido.

"You know, they're doing a live demonstration of glass-blowing right now. Over there." David gestured to his left.

"Fantastic," I said. "You hang back with Josue; I'm going to grab some action shots."

Once I reached the spot (a work area about 12 feet square that was enclosed by a waist-high wooden fence), I fumbled to switch on my camera in time to capture a young man pulling a long rod out of the circular opening to a furnace, which David later informed me (and which I refused to believe until I confirmed it online) is called the "glory hole." At the end of the metal pole was an orange-hot clump of molten glass. Before the furnace stood a middle-aged woman, who stepped forward to assist in the shaping of what was beginning to look like one of the many vases I'd already seen at the show.

Realizing I'd get a better angle from the side, I hustled to reposition myself in the small crowd that had gathered to watch. As I moved in closer, an older woman who had been studying the artists and asking them questions about their process noticed me, smiled, and stepped to her right to give me more room. My eyes were on the video display when I detected a glare of hostility from the woman in the work area. I assumed she was irritated with the lady asking questions until she looked directly at the camera and said, "No video."

"Isn't this a public display?" I said.

"Well, it's our work studio — we could do it inside, but it would be too hot," she said, despite the fact that on its website, the artistic community known as the Spanish Village invites the public to "Come and watch our artists work!" so that people could "Experience the process of creativity."

I hit the pause button and lowered the camera. I was itching to argue. The bratty kid in me wanted to retort, "How do you know I don't have a photographic memory?" This wasn't the first time I'd encountered a cameraphobe who was not learned in the laws pertaining to photographing in public. Even if my video was for personal use, I was within my rights.

"This is for NBC," I said. "Still want me to stop?" I tried hard to withhold from my tone any hint of the derision.

The woman lifted her hand to brush behind her ear a few strands of hair that had come loose from her ponytail. "The NBC?"

I nodded. "You don't have to worry about looking bad on camera, I'm only interested in the process. In the end, there's only going to be a few seconds of this included in my segment." I would have mentioned this earlier if I hadn't been in such a hurry to catch the action, but now I was annoyed that I had to explain myself.

What had she thought I was going to do with images of two people shaping a vase? Run home, fire up my kiln, and flood the market? Sell her trade secrets in the art-glass underworld? I refrained from mentioning that I'd already seen her ten-minute instructional YouTube video (which, at this writing, has received nearly 700 views).

When they realized my intentions were not nefarious, the artists relaxed and I raised my camera to get a few more shots of the lava-like glass. But minutes later, as the man moved to return the blob of melted goop into the glory hole, he looked at me and said, in a polite tone, "Actually, this part is kinda proprietary. I'd prefer it if you didn't film." I noticed he did not request anyone in the crowd to avert their gaze.

The indignant bitch in me wanted to point out that even Dale Chihuly shares his process, so unless this guy had figured out a way to spin glass into gold, a few seconds of footage was not likely to ruin his career. Instead, I swallowed my temper and said, "No worries, I have what I need."

I reconnected with the group and relayed the experience. "It reminds me of when security told you to stop taking pictures in the airport terminal," I said to David. "As if a guy with a giant-ass camera and tripod would be on a covert mission. You couldn't have been more conspicuous." I let out a long, vocal breath of frustration and said, "I hate people." Not wanting to bring down Rosa and Josue with my sour mood, I brightened a bit and said, "I'm just going to get one more pan of this jewelry and then we can go."

As I filmed close-ups of some lovely, colorful glass earrings, I sensed someone staring at me and looked up. A man had narrowed his eyes at me. "I don't think Lori would appreciate that," he said. Here we go, I thought

I was tempted to say, "If I wanted to steal her designs, I'd just buy a few pairs, go home, and copy them." I marveled at the absurd level of paranoia in the lower echelons of the arts-and-crafts world. People freak when they see a camera in the vicinity of their work, even though they put it on display to be seen.

"Oh, Jesus," I said. "Tell her not to worry, I'll edit it out. No earrings on TV."

"Well, I'm sure if you asked she wouldn't mind," the guy said.

"Forget it. I'm done." I turned to David, Rosa, and Josue and said, "The only thing keeping me from breaking something right now is the thought of that Hacienda margarita waiting for me. Let's go." ■

BACK WHEN in the Reader

Thirty-Five Years Ago

These days, Tom Waits is sleazier than ever. He looked like he'd wandered in off Broadway that night, straight from the doorway he'd been sleeping in. It isn't often that you see a performer in a suit and tie at the Back Door, but the way he looked could put an end to suits and ties forever. The old wrinkled white shirt, the crumpled, loosened narrow tie, the battered coat with the sagging pockets that must hold a half-empty bottle of cheap wine (well, I was close...halfway through the show he pulled out a can of beer from one of the pockets.)

At the candy counter of the newly reopened State Theater, on El Caion Boulevard at Euclid, there is a curious assortment of Occidental and Oriental snacks: Milk Duds and prepared cuttlefish, Mars bars and shuet fa mui (dried and salted plums), M&Ms and shrimp-flavored chips.

Filling the refreshment stall with Asian favorites was one of the first things Thoai Tang Minh did when he opened the old movie house three weeks ago.

While a manmade bridge of concrete and steel bids a majestic welcome at San Diego's northern frontier, the eastern approach to the county is guarded by ancient, brooding monoliths of granite. Stabbing into the relentless wind of the Carrizo Grade, the boulders line Interstate 8 like a petrified army, inert and mysterious. Many of the rocks seem to mock natural laws, their huge mass held aloft by the tiniest thread of stone. It is a renegade army of glittering granite, locked in mortal combat with superior natural forces.

This summer, a secret $6900 poll was conducted to find out whether San Diegans wanted to spend more tax money on public libraries. The results turned out to be grim for the library lobby. According to the survey, only 43 percent of San Diegans think that a new main library is needed, and a substantial minority don't want one at all. Most voters make it clear that if a new library is built, they don't want it downtown but in Mission Valley.

BY PATRICK DAUGHERTY

Patric Douglas. Part Two

Douglas and crew named this one "Chompers."

ere's a brief catch-up for last week's truants: Patric Douglas, 42, is CEO of Shark Diver, a shark-cage-diving enterprise that will hook you up with a 20-hour boat ride to Isla Guadalupe, one of the few places in the world where great white sharks congregate. You will be placed in a 100-square-foot cage and lowered into the water, thence to wait upon 1800-pound white sharks. Douglas will also see to your fun requirements if you'd like to try out tiger-shark cage-diving in the Bahamas or deep-water submarine trips out of Honduras. Perhaps giant squids are more your style? Need a hand with a movie or TV project?

And then there is one small corner of the empire, something not advertised, something that happens three or four times a year, to wit: providing custom shark cages, custom shark trips, and personal support for the rich, unbelievably rich, in-your-dreams rich, mostly on their yachts, and always at their convenience.

I ask, "How do you talk money with "Up front," Douglas says. "We don't jag 'em — too many people do. As soon as a big yacht pulls up, everybody has their hand out. We do a little research on the client. I look at what the job's going to take. You always add, probably, 5 percent onto that, because they are notorious for changing their minds at the last possible second. That's one complaint I have about people in big yachts: they have no perception, or very little, about how the rest of us live.

"A classic case... We got a gig for the Bahamas. [The client] wanted to do a oneday tiger-shark-diving trip. They didn't have their own vessel. So, we sourced the yacht, we sourced all the food, upscale liquor — the whole nine yards. They were going to spend a full day [cage diving] and then come back [to the Bahamas] on the boat. We sourced a private jet to pick them up in Miami. My crew was waiting at the Freeport airport [Bahamas]. I got a call — 10:40, they're not there. Eleven o'clock, they're not there. One o'clock, they're not there. My guys waited until three o'clock and then I got a phone call from the client. Not apologetic at all. He said, yeah, they were in Las Vegas partying and the girlfriend cut her hand and they didn't wake up until two in the afternoon in Miami. 'Sorry, can't make it.' Completely, completely unrepentant about the whole thing.

"They spent $150,000 on the yacht. They spent $25,000 on our services, and it all went for naught. So, my crew got on the yacht, cracked open the champagne," Patric laughs, "and enjoyed themselves. That's how it rolls."

"You get the money up front?"

"You bet. Oh, God, yeah. Yeah, yeah, yeah. Always get the money up front," Patric laughs. "It's the dive industry."

"Does anybody have a job?"

"There're two types of yacht owners: selfmade men or mafia - I mean, full court. And it's Russian mafia. It's ugly Russian money. I've seen yachts that look like Tijuana whorehouses."

"Have you ever had a client who scared you?"

"Russians scare me. They have the ability to make people disappear and do so on a regular basis. A lot of these guys have been brought up the rough way. They don't value human life at all. At all."

"You must have liked some clients."

"Most of them," Patric says. "There are only one or two that I find disruptive. And it's not so much them as their hangers-on. Each client has their own groupies. Depending on how seasoned they are, how long they've been around that kind of money and that kind of lifestyle, they can either be absolutely monstrous or cool ass.

"For the most part, I like the clients — I love their backstories. One of them, his father owned a meat-packing factory. He worked his way up, had some great ideas, expanding on his dad's ideas, got a few breaks, sold at the peak, and made hundreds and hundreds of millions of dollars. Now, his son...what

"We're on the yacht and I say to him, 'What do you want to do with your life?' Without missing a beat, the guy looked me right in the eyes — a 20-year-old kid — says, 'I think I want to own a basketball team." Patric laughs, "'I think I want to own a basketball team,' and there's a dead seriousness in his face that betrays the obvious. He's got the money to buy a basketball team."

Game of the Week: Ramona at Poway Titans start fast, throttle Bulldogs in lopsided upset

Poway — Against No. 10 Ramona on Friday night, the Poway Titans scored touchdowns on their first seven possessions on their way to a convincing 49-22 upset.

"We were able to jump on them early, and I think that was the key for us. We just kept the momentum going all the way," said Poway head coach Damian Gonzalez. "The outcome was very much a surprise, as far as the points being

Early on, Poway (4-2, 1-0 Palomar) turned Ramona miscues into quick points. After a Ramona fumble to end the first quarter, Poway wasted no time moving down the field for their first of three second-quarter touchdowns, a one-yard keeper by quarterback Gabriel Isaak. Evan Gray scored on touchdown runs of four and five yards, and the Titans defense shut down Ramona to give the hosts a commanding 35-0

"You can't turn the ball over on the road," said Ramona head coach Damon Baldwin. "You give a chance for a good team to get up on you like that and then you're out of your plan."

After losing their first two games of the season, Poway has now won four straight. The Titans rolled up nearly 400 yards of offense and held the Bulldogs offense to ten points below their previous season average.

University City shocks Morse to extend surprising streak

University City — After ending a 22-game losing streak earlier in the month, University City is starting a new streak. The Centurions stunned Morse 11-8 on Friday afternoon for their third win in a row.

"It's probably the biggest win we've had here in a long time," said University City head coach

In a defensive struggle, University City running back Parris Jordan scored the go-ahead touchdown on a one-yard run with 8:18 left. The subsequent two-point conversion from quarterback Logan Stewart to fullback Kendrick Morris put the Centurions up for good at 11-8.

"You can keep telling them they're better," Hutsel commented, "but unless they see it on the scoreboard...it's almost impossible for kids to understand that."

On the game's opening drive, University City (3-3, 2-0 Central) scored on Travis Nicklaw's 37-yard field goal. Morse (5-3, 2-1) took the lead back in the second quarter on a James Roberts 25-yard scoring run and two-point conversion to give the Tigers an 8-3 lead at the half.

It looked like Morse would extend their lead late in the third quarter when they had a first-and-goal at the one. But University City's defense stiffened and kept the Tigers out of the end zone.

"We thought we could make you stop mining your front yard with poop and shooting us with paint pellets."

Countdown to Halloween right here on TGIF: the Gutenberg cyber all-hits all-thetime blogorama and alternative weekly fishwrap and freaky friday funfest!!! your DJ? Whaddami sayin? Your KJ! That's keyboard jockey — Johnny Lira! Comin' at ya with all that's spooky and kooky on this third weekend of Rocktober, the scariest month of the year for all you girly goblins and gory guys!!!

He shut off the computer screen, closed the free paper, and palmed a handful of candy corn into his mouth, thinking he could save even more this year by handing out melted candles mixed with Sweet'N Low (jacked from McDonald's) and orange and yellow food coloring. He could roughly shape the warm waxy gunk into a large cone shape around a few Ex-Lax lozenges for the brats next week those who would brave his front porch past the GET OFF MY PROPERTY sign. A knock at the door interrupted his scowling recollection of the price of laxatives.

"Can't you read? Who is it?" He wrapped the shawl more firmly around his withered, pale, and liver-spotted legs above his fragrant Depends.

"It is I," came a youthful voice, that of some teenaged hellion, no doubt. "The ghost of Halloween Past."

"What? Go away, punk! I'll call the cops." Ol' man O'Lara lifted the polo mallet that rested against the front door and brandished it at the peephole. "I'm armed, I tell ya!" The door swung slowly open.

The young O'Lara set his Zippo lighter against the crumpled brown paper on the doorstep. Cackling to himself, he lit the bag filled with the mephitically odoriferous dog feces and stepped away from his neighbor's door.

From the cover of an oleander hedge, O'Lara watched as his suburban neighbor, Guzo the cop (called Boozo by O'Lara and his greasy, leather-clad companions in crime), who snarled and drove the flaming bundle across his yard with the putter he had just been practicing with in his den. "Ya little bastids. I know who ya ahh!" And he slammed the door, his brogan unscorched and unfouled by dog leavings. The young O'Lara waited to high-five his pals, but they seemed to have slunk off in either fear of Boozo or disgust that the prank hadn't worked. "I should have let it burn down some more," he thought, and looked up and down the small-town Illinois street filled with costumed children. The year was 1965.

The image of O'Lara's teenaged, leather-jacketed, and duckassed, Brylcreem-coiffed self shimmered and faded in the doorway as a new, gradually solidifying image took shape. The man standing there was also O'Lara, in a few short years it seemed. His older self was beaming and healthylooking with a bow tie and plaid sports jacket topped by an all-white, flat-top crew cut. "Howdy. I'm the ghost of Halloween Future, naturally. Meet my new friends." The ghost, looking like a geriatric member of the Lettermen, moved aside, and children fanned out from either side of him, each of them rosy-cheeked, smiling, and dimpled.

"Hi, Mr. O'Lara," they chimed in unison.

"What is this?" The diapered curmudgeon with the polo mallet squinted at the

"Just wanted to congratulate you, boy-o," the aged, varsity-cheerleaderlooking version of himself said. "You turned a new leaf. Straightened up. Flew right. Adjusted your attitude and became proactive as a born-again good neighbor. Just wanted to let you know, it all worked out."

"What?"

"That's right, Mr. O'Lara," a spokesmidget for the children said, a kid who looked like a ventriloquist's dummy. "Us kids in the neighborhood got together this Halloween present and asked ourselves what we could do to change your grumpy ways. We figured if we were just completely open, honest, and sincere with you and just be the sweet little muffins we are, we could make you crack."

"Yeah," another freckled urchin chirped. "We thought we could make you stop mining your front yard with poop, shooting us with paint pellets, and lobbing wormy apples at us. We were right. You really shaped up, and we came to thank you. Oh, yeah, and thanks for donating your driveway as a skateboard mini-park next year."

"You see, Sourpuss? You turned that frown upsidedown. Accentuated the positive. Eliminated the negative. You donate your time at the day-care center, you're a major contributor to the Policeman's Benevolent Fund, your guest sermons at the First Existential Church of Family Values are extremely popular. And in 2013 you'll be named Republican of the Year in Whittier, California, Richard Nixon's old what's wrong, Smiley?"

The seated O'Lara dropped his polo mallet to the floor. His lips trembled, and he clutched at his pacemaker with shaking fingers. "Ah — bu — glu —" He couldn't quite scream before he croaked.

-EVE KELLY

am in full Earth-mama mode these days, using a natural remedy whenever possible. So when Patrick started moaning from the bathroom about inheriting his father's bad digestion, I started looking into aloe.

Yes, aloe. "We have a whole section for dealing with constipation," said Jan at Jimbo's Naturally in Del Mar (858-793-7755). "First, you need to drink a lot of water and maybe take some probiotics — anything with acidophilus. Something such as Bio-K. That's a yogurt that you shake up and drink [$4.35 for a single bottle, $25 for a 6-pack, $48 for a 15-pack]. It can be used whether you have diarrhea or constipation. The large intestine will use the acidophilus in the Bio-K, while the small intestine will use the bifidus. There are probiotic strains that prepare the gut so that other strains can take root and multiply, and all this helps you digest

Jan's other recommendation was aloe juice. "I'm trying to suggest things that are not addictive. With some herbs, such as cascara sagrada, you get a good result but then you start needing more and more to get the same result. But aloe juice is a great way to go. I recommend whole-leaf aloe juice — it gives you all the constituents of the plant. The whole-leaf brands we carry are Lily of the Desert, Real Aloe, and Aloe Life [prices range from $3.95 to $32]. We also carry Georgia's, but it's distilled and tastes watery. A lot of things have been removed, to the point where it tastes like water."

Sandy at Henry's in North Park (619-291-8287) jumped on the Aloe Life bandwagon for natural constipation relief. "I use the Aloe Life Cherry Berry [$12.99 for 16 oz.]. I take a swig in the morning. It keeps me regular, and it's very gentle. There are no harsh stimulants."

The Aloe Life company happens to be based in Santee (800-414-2563; aloelife.com), and I called them up to ask about their product. The first woman I spoke with, Lacey, was a true believer.

"I was one of those who had chronic constipation, even from childhood. I thought it was normal. But when I got on our products, I noticed an improvement within days. We recommend one ounce a day."

"Aloe juice is a great way to go. I recommend wholeleaf aloe juice — it gives you all the constituents of the plant."

Next I spoke with Aloe Life owner Karen Masterson-Koch. "We've been pioneers in the field of aloe juice," she began, "though the plant itself has been used for thousands of years, going back to the ancient civilizations in Egypt and the Mediterranean.

The ancients knew about its incredible uses for healing the skin, but in the old herbalist books, aloe is listed as a cure for digestive ailments. The juice is 100 percent safe to drink for everyone, including children and the elderly. There are no contra-indications with any kind of medicine.

"Aloe juice," she continued, "has been sold in health-food stores for about 50 years, so that's not new. What is new is the technology that allows us to process the whole leaf instead of just the inner gel. The gel just isn't as potent a therapeutic as the whole leaf. We sell a whole-leaf concentrate. It takes 25 pounds of aloe vera to make a 32-ounce bottle.... We use cold processing, and that lets us avoid breaking the long sugar chains, or polysaccharides, that would normally rupture during pasteurization."

> But on to more, er, pressing matters. "Aloe juice is also an herbal bitter. Bitters cause an increase of digestive juices such as hydrochloric acid into the stomach. If you don't have enough of those juices, you can get heartburn. Further, when aloe juice is not overfiltered, it provides a laxative effect similar to that of prune juice. So it will help to move the bowels. And it contains five natural anti-inflammatories, which can help with irritable-bowel syndrome."

Masterson-Koch compared the taste of her aloe juice ($14.29 for 16 oz., $24.19 for 32 oz., available at most health-food stores) to "tomato juice, with a bitter kind of bite. It's not quite as thick as tomato juice, but it does have body and a dark-yellow color. For kids, or for people who just like it better sweeter, we have flavors such as orange-papaya, cherryberry, or super fruit."

bad, makes good again

Of course, he didn't stay here.

Most likely, you wouldn't either, not if you were young and ambitious and living a two-hour drive up the freeway to get to Hollywood. Not if you'd grown up mostly fatherless on your grandparents' farm outside Dodge City, Kansas, cherishing your Saturday visits to the movie house and the glimpses they provided of a world more magical than your own.

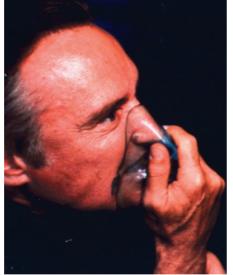

Most likely, if you had just finished four years of high school and had a note of introduction from an actress like Dorothy Maguire, you'd hightail it out of San Diego, just the way Dennis Hopper did.

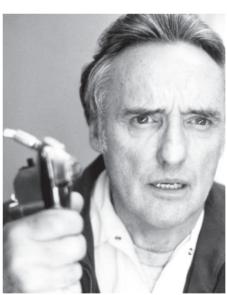

Even if he didn't stay, he started here. He attended Helix High from 1950 to '54, got himself voted most likely to succeed.

And he began acting here — slipping under the shadow of Dorothy Maguire's wing at the La Jolla Playhouse for The Postman Always Rings Twice, then moving on to Shakespeare at the Old Globe. So, in a small way, we get to claim him.

Easy Rider (1969)

The first film directed by Dennis Hopper.

Easy Rider gave us an anthropology of hippies.

Blue Velvet (1986)

Hopper called *Blue Velvet*director David Lynch and said, "I have to play
Frank Booth, because I am Frank Booth."

Speed (1994)

Hopper plays a bomb cop who got his hand blown up in the line of duty.

Carried Away (1996)

Hopper gives a subtle but deeply pressurized performance as the bored schoolteacher who tries to break free erotically. Just now, the Museum of Contemporary Art, Los Angeles is finishing up a major exhibition of Hopper's paintings and photography. But in June and July, we had our own tribute to the man, a collection of Hopperbilia spread across two walls of the Edgeware Gallery in Kensington. Sectioned-up photos of Hopper, plus a poster from Easy Rider the first film he directed, and the one that made him famous. A plaster life mask hanging below a Warhol video of the actor putting his face through its paces. A mug shot, a photo from the Old Globe days, and a book in which you can write a line or two on the topic of "What did Dennis Hopper mean to you?"

That's pretty much what I asked David Elliott, longtime film critic for the San Diego

Union-Tribune. (Before that, he wrote for the Chicago Daily News and USA Today. After that, for the website San Diego News Network.) He gave me a sampling of Hopper films to watch: Rebel Without a Cause (1955), Easy Rider (1969), The Last Movie (1971), Out of the Blue (1980), Blue Velvet (1986), Hoosiers (1986), Paris Trout (1991), Speed (1994), and Carried Away (1996). Hardly comprehensive — Hopper loved to work and wasn't overly discriminating — but covering a wide swath, timewise and otherwise. Then we started in discussing the man and his work. (Spoilers abound ahead.)

Matthew Lickona: On the lobby walls of the Grossmont Healthcare District's Dr. William

C. Herrick Community Healthcare Library in La Mesa, you will find the East County Gallery of Honor. According to the brochure, the gallery serves to remind local residents of "the significant roles that our fellow citizens have played in shaping the world of today." There are some locally famous names on those walls: Fletcher, Bancroft, etc. You've got your famous athletes (Bill Walton, Greg Louganis), your famous personalities (Regis Philbin, Ed Meese), and your innovators (Taylor guitars, Deering banjos). Then you've got Helix High graduate Dennis Hopper.

From the write-up under his smiling young face: "Best known for his work as both the director and performer in the 1969 motion picture Easy Rider, Lemon Grove's Dennis Hopper has enjoyed five decades of stardom." Enjoyed and stardom are both tricky words, to say nothing about the claim about which film he's best known for (I sort of suspect that Speed occupies a bigger place than had come out of Rebel Without a Cause thinking about James Dean. Nobody came from Giant thinking, "Wow, that was a great Dennis Hopper picture," since the late Dean took the honors again and got his second Strother Martin, George Kennedy, and Dean's old colleague Jo Van Fleet.

Matthew Lickona: Maybe so, but the only names I recognize from that last list are Hopper and Newman. So there's that.

Hopper finally did rival Dean, in the sense that he kept coming back from career death.

Easy Rider in the popular consciousness today). But maybe we can get into that later.

David Elliott: Why wait? Hopper's stardom was always an ambiguous commodity, without a lot of market value. People came out of Easy Rider thinking about Jack Nicholson, as they

Oscar nomination as a dead actor. John Wayne was a friend of his first wife's family and later got Dennis back into movies with True Grit and The Sons of Katie Elder. But even then, a dozen years after Rebel, he was still a side-player. In Cool Hand Luke, he was overshadowed by Paul Newman,

David Elliott: Right. And in that way Hopper finally did rival Dean, in the sense that he kept coming back from career death. His drive to be associated with quality was lifelong. Did any other actor work with Dean, Brando, and Nicholson? Certainly none that also directed Sean

Penn and Robert Duvall. Dennis wanted to avoid being stuck in the velvet casket of approved success with studio-tamed actors like Robert Wagner and Tab Hunter. Some were gay and feared exposure. Tony Perkins got so sick of the game that he fled to Broadway and then Europe. Dennis was more extreme: he burned the golden bridge by becoming a human torch, career-wise, and later this created a myth that paid off. He was a celebrity of recycling, and in time that took on luster. The fact that he could seem stoned even when he wasn't certainly added

To be specific: at least three times in his career, Hopper was involved with projects that caught the zeitgeist of unrest and instability square on the nose with a rolled-up newspaper. Granted, he was just a bit player in Rebel Without a Cause. Still, it's the most famous depiction of youthful angst in the midst of American postwar prosperity, and he's there in the thick of it, hanging chickens and rattling chains. Then he directed Easy Rider, which gave us the crumbling of an old social order and the uncertain vision of those who would craft its replacement.

That film, of course, was a social phenomenon, much bigger than Out of the Blue, which he also wound up directing. But if Easy Rider gave us an anthropology of hippies, Out of the Blue did the same for punks. Young Linda Manz flails about all over the place, full of rage at her parents' failure to stop indulging their various demons and start being parents. She reveres Elvis and Sid Vicious two guys who knew something about longing for love — and disdains the woozy pleasure-vibe of disco. It's brutal and ugly and right on target.

In every case, youth must be served, and age either doesn't want to or doesn't know how to serve it. And Hopper is there at the cinematic point of fracture between the two. (Mind you, this was before he started playing scary nutjobs.) Now he's up there on the wall of a public institution.

David Elliott: And he's got a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame. It reminds you of John Huston's great line in Chinatown about politicians, whores, and ugly old buildings finally becoming respectable. Survival pays.

Matthew Lickona: Nice. Now, you were saying about Hopper and James Dean?

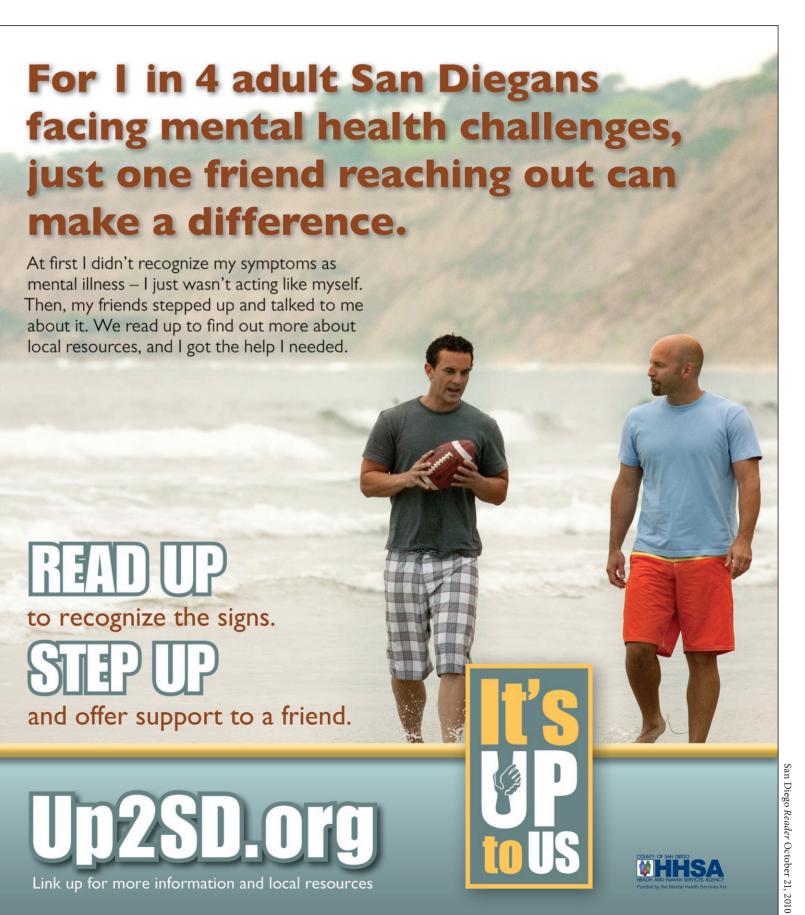

David Elliott: Actually, the useful comparison is not with Dean because Hopper was never an actor at that level, even in his best psycho parts. (Though I bet Dean would have loved Frank Booth in Blue Velvet.) The more valid comparison is with the other "kids" in Rebel Without a Cause. Nick Adams, another gang member, had a desperately ambitious career that found only brief success on TV. Natalie Wood was already a Hollywood star child who had once bounced on Orson Welles's knee. She had major roles without ever quite matching the fresh vulnerability of Judy in Rebel, though she came close in Splendor in the Grass. Corey Allen, who went over the "chickie run" cliff as Buzz, had a certain Brando vibe but faded out as an actor and became a respected acting teacher. (Interestingly, Allen died just a month or so after Hopper.) Sal Mineo's vivid little career is too sad to linger over. Apart from Matthew Lickona: Granted that Hopper was no match for Dean, but your use of the word "vulnerability" got me thinking. It's what Dean has in spades in Rebel — the boy who desperately wants his father to show him how to be a man, who cannot bear to be called a chicken. The guy that every girl wants to cradle in her arms and comfort.

Then, when Hopper delivers his first line in Rebel, he asks Buzz, vous and hesitant. To me, it looked as if he was trying to play just what Dean was playing — especially in light of the stories he told later about being dazzled by Dean and trying to act the way Dean acted. But of course, it didn't quite come off. He's not vulnerable, just lame. I saw one Hopper interview where he talked about his early Westerns just brokenness leading to evil. Rough casting but smart.

It's there in the very beginning: Hopper the young gang member, nervous and servile, but already tinged with the vicious madness that would make him famous (again) in Blue Velvet, 30 years later. When Plato wakes up in the abandoned mansion, there's Hopper standing over him with a chain. Suddenly, Hopper's face crinkles and splits into a huge, mirthless grin. His eyes go hard and sparkly, and it's crazy time. But it's a certain sort of crazy, tinged with pathos — or maybe just pathetic. The weakling son of the villain, after all, is not the bad guy, but the sorry spawn of the bad guy. A poor copy of the bad guy. It's a status that makes for meanness, and you can see it right there in that grin: the whipping boy is going to do some whipping of his own. It's a part he would play again and again.

David Elliott: You're right about that slightly fevered stare Hopper has in his little role as Goon and then again in Giant. He had arrived in Hollywood as a rising talent after working at the Old Globe, and he was cocky. But he was clobbered by Dean's far more developed and versatile intensity. With his chiseled good looks, Dennis was in line to become another John Kerr (Tea and Sympathy), but suddenly he had to act with this intuitive powerhouse from Indiana and New York theater. Being handsome and saying your lines well just didn't cut it anymore, if you wanted to be more than studio lumber.

awed by Dean and then got scared, realizing he might become the new Richard Davalos — the hunky, gifted actor who played Dean's brother in East of Eden but was completely eclipsed. Lacking Dean's sure instincts, Hopper amped up the intensity and played the wild man, on set and off — he was like a zoned William F. Buckley Jr. trying to escape his preppy shell. He stayed handsome but got hairy, sometimes crazy.

Matthew Lickona: Okay, so that's the thesis. Let's dive into the nine films for a portrait of the artist as damaged goods. It's a funny list because, as you note, he had tremendous perseverance — coming back from two exiles from mainstream Hollywood (one after tangling with the director Henry Hathaway in From Hell to Texas, the other after the failure of The Last Movie). That takes strength, or at least drive. A lot of folks would have just folded up, especially under the added weight of all those drugs. And there's a kind of strength in cozying up to one's demons. The famous story is that he called Blue Velvet director David Lynch and said, "I have to play Frank Booth, because I am Frank Booth." Frank Booth is a monster, and playing a monster with whom you identify can't be an easy thing. Neither can playing so many parts in which your character's demons — which are also your own — lead to his destruction. Onward.

Rebel Without a Cause Matthew Lickona: As we've noted, he's very much a weakling here obeying the lead dog in noble teen myth — even though Dean was rather old to play a teen. Nobody could ever fill that flamered jacket again, and I a drink and cigar. Hopper, still in hippie mode, looks stoned and uneasy. Briefly, he was the heir apparent. More like the think because Hopper knew he couldn't do it in film, he tried to do it in life. The drug and drink binges were not just poses, though. They were symptoms of an angry man who couldn't figure how to connect his talent with his acting ideals. Another contradiction was that he hated Hollywood — the system and said he would destroy it (and almost did). But he loved L.A.

Easy Rider

David Elliott: The burial in hippie outlaw hair was a way of escaping the chisel-cut-looks-ofthe-'50s Hopper, and by becoming a director he finally did something Dean only aspired to. The film's huge cultural impact and profit ratio overshadowed its flaws. Nicholson effortlessly takes over the movie from its stars; much of Jack's work as the lawyer seems self-directed. What Hopper best showed was a keen visual feeling for American places, and the ending is such a knockout you almost forget the stupid cemetery scene shortly before it.

The problem was that Dennis now thought of himself as an auteur in a European sense. There's a rather embarrassing photo taken two years later. It shows John Ford propped up in a hospital bed, looking almost dead, while John Huston smiles baronially, holding hair self-evident.

Matthew Lickona: That's fun about the long hair being a double rebellion — onscreen, it played against the conventions of the Southern hicks who feared for their women. Offscreen, it played against the conventions of the Hollywood bigwigs who feared for their box offices. What I hadn't considered, and what you seem to understand, is how much of what Hopper did was intentional part of a managed career trajectory. I keep thinking of him as some kind of purely responsive thing, a live wire full of juice, flopping around dangerously, and every now and then exploding in a shower of sparks. My impression explains his willingness to play awful, awful characters — some of them even protagonists (who therefore need humanizing). But your version explains how he hit pay dirt as often as he did, even in the midst of serious substance abuse.

I agree that Nicholson owns the film, if only because he's clearly a character — a person, complete with history, home, flaws, and virtues. Fonda is a seeker, and while it's fun to identify with the seeker, it doesn't make the seeker interesting. He hasn't found what he's looking for, and so he doesn't register all that much. You see him with the American flag on his jacket, and you think, Yeah, I get it, he's a symbol. But he's not much more than that. Hopper just comes off goofy and dumb. When Fonda says at the end, "We blew it" i.e., we're just part of the system, looking to make money and feel good like everybody else — Hopper can only look on in sad confusion.

David Elliott: Nicholson escapes the easy rebel branding because his cagier rebellion as George has roots and a context, along with his funny twang and charisma. And so he says the remarks that are truly subversive and memorable. Harry Dean Stanton (Paris, Texas) had hoped to get the role of George and would have been very good, though not likely with the same impact. Bruce Dern (Coming Home) might have come

Matthew Lickona: As a director, I think Hopper was wa-a-ay too in love with shots of dudes on bikes. My wife kept exclaiming, "Oh, look, they're riding motorcycles again!" Maybe we were supposed to be paying attention to the scenerv and the music, but too much of what you see from the highway looks vaguely the same, and a song like "Don't Bogart Me" gets old fast. But agreed — he did understand place. I really think Fonda realizes that the freedom they sought was right there at the beginning — the rancher living life on his own terms, eating his bread from the sweat of his brow, raising up a family to follow after him. The dreamy dropouts throwing seeds into the sand didn't get it. And better living through chemistry came back to bite our heroes on the behind in the cemetery.

David Elliott: About those cycle shots: Don't forget that Easy Rider was a spin-off of the chopper movies that the three actors had made for Roger Corman. During production, that audience was the target. Nobody knew the film would resonate so widely beyond the drive-in circuit, though I suspect that Hopper had the ambition. He was never a shrinking violet.

He and Fonda certainly wanted to upgrade the quality of the pulp goods. Also (small point), the film was supposed to be a landscape portrait of America, a reverse Western, so the cycle images were obligatory.

Matthew Lickona: Fair enough. I've seen that strange photo you mention of Ford, Huston, and Hopper. I wonder what the old men thought of him at the time. Your mention of Europe and auteurs reminds me that, supposedly, Hopper's next film (The Last Movie) originally had a fairly straightforward narrative. But then his buddy Alejandro Jodorowsky made fun of him for being conventional, and so he went and completely reworked his footage. It's a little bit heartbreaking, especially when you hear him on YouTube in The American Dreamer, comparing himself to Orson Welles making The Magnificent Ambersons, talking about how there will be an audience for his film, and if not, then fuck them. Though maybe not so heartbreaking when you Unlike Welles, he really came back from defeat. Not to detract from Welles's career, but he but less lasting impact than Citizen Kane, which was way ahead of its audience in 1941

Are diet and exercise not enough for your DIABETES?

Local doctors are evaluating an investigational diabetes drug. This study is designed specifically for type 2 diabetics whose diabetes is not controlled by diet and exercise alone.

Local doctors are now evaluating the safety and effectiveness of an investigational, oral type 2 diabetes medication for its ability to manage blood sugar levels, when used alone or in combination with metformin (an approved, oral diabetes drug).

To prequalify for this study you must:

- Be 18 to 80 years of age, AND
- Have a medical diagnosis of type 2 diabetes that is currently not controlled with diet and exercise alone, AND
- Have been treated for T2D with diet and exercise for at least two months, AND
- Have received less than seven days of any diabetes medication within the past two months.

All study-related tests and evaluations will be provided to participants at no cost. Reimbursement for time and travel may be provided.

Throbbing. Burning. Stabbing. Tingling.

If you have painful diabetic peripheral neuropathy, please consider calling.

You may be eligible to participate in a clinical research study to test the safety and effectiveness of an investigational medication, which is taken by mouth, in people who have painful Diabetic Peripheral Neuropathy (DPN).

Participants must:

- Be at least 18 years old
- Have had pain caused by DPN for at least 6 months but not longer than 5 years with pain that must have started in the feet
- Have been taking pain medications for DPN for at least 2 of the last 3 months and the medication is not helping the pain
- Have had stably controlled blood sugar levels for the past 3 months

Other criteria will be reviewed with you by the clinic study staff. Participants will need to make about 15 visits to the study clinic over about 6 months. In addition, one visit to an eye doctor will be scheduled at the beginning and one at the end of study participation.

All study-related office visits, study-related medical examinations, and study medications will be provided to qualified participants at no cost.

Do you have chronic low back pain?

Adults experiencing chronic low back pain are needed to participate in a clinical trial of an investigational pain medication.

If you have chronic low back pain (CLBP) you not only struggle with the pain itself, you have to live with the way it affects your ability to work, and participate in an active lifestyle. And you're not the only one who suffers with this life-altering condition. With about 30 million people in the United States suffering from chronic back pain, CLBP is a major health problem.

Currently available medications can help with the pain but often cause unwanted side effects and research is still needed to provide additional treatment options. Local doctors are evaluating an investigational medication to determine how well it relieves pain in adults with moderate to severe CLBP.

Would I be eligible to participate in this study? To prequalify for this study, you must:

- Be 18 years of age or older
- Experience moderate to severe CLBP
- Have been on a consistent, daily regimen
- of pain medication for CLBP for at least three months
- Be willing to discontinue your current pain medication

Qualified participants will receive:

- Study-related procedures at no cost
- Study-related physical exams and lab tests
- Study-related monitoring and ongoing evaluations throughout the study
- Extensive eye examinations
- A small stipend for time and travel expenses

Depression

Are you or someone you know

- Suffering from depression
- Are 18 years of age or older
- Have had symptoms for greater than 2 months

You may be eligible to participate in a clinical research trial for an investigational new medication.

Participants will receive free of charge:

- Study-related exams
- Investigational drug
- Compensation for time and travel

Has schizophrenia affected your life?

From social withdrawal to a lack of motivation and emotions, these negative symptoms can seriously impact the way people with schizophrenia lead their lives. Unsurprisingly, this impact often reaches beyond the immediate sufferer to friends and relatives who often feel helpless and confused by their loved one's behavior.

We are conducting a research study of an investigational drug as an add-on for people with schizophrenia. We are looking for men and women, aged between 18 and 55 years old, who have been:

- diagnosed with schizophrenia
- taking Zyprexa, Risperdal, Seroquel, Geodon, Abilify or Invega for at least two months and are still experiencing negative symptoms.

Participants will not have to stop taking their current medication.

Qualified participants will receive a study drug or placebo (an inactive look-alike substance) in addition to their current medication, and all study-related medical care at no cost.

way was Hopper a creative force like Welles, or, in a very '70s way, Robert Altman. But like M*A*S*H, Easy Rider had meteor-impact resonance. Neither director repeated that level of commercial impact.

The Last Movie

Matthew Lickona: This one struck me as most clearly a work of art, as opposed to Hopper working something out. He got self-conscious on just his second outing as a director and made a film about the dangers of moviemaking. It's something of a mess. The whole thing is on YouTube in ten-minute segments, and each segment has a smaller number of views than the one before. But there are some amazing moments, maybe especially the very last scene, where Hopper learns that he's just given his nest egg to a guy who learned everything he knows about looking for gold from The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.

David Elliott: Hopper's ego was engorged when this labor of love and drugs won the Venice festival prize, and then Pauline Kael wrote a rather mournfully supportive review. It has the fascination of a road kill that keeps twitching, and the feeling for Peruvian landscapes and the Indians is quite acute. But too much of it feels like a shapeless inflation of the cemetery drug trip in Easy Rider. There are elements akin to Peckinpah's great, doomed Mexican noir of the same time, Bring Me the Head of Alfredo Garcia, but that one had dynamism and Warren Oates. And Werner Herzog went into South America and filmed the truly hallucinatory Aguirre, the Wrath of God, which made The Last Movie seem even more woebegone. Maybe it's a great, wrecked student movie that should have been kept in the can for 20 years.

Out of the Blue

Matthew Lickona: Now this feels like Hopper much darker." And I kept being wrong. I also kept thinking, "Did people pay to go see this on a Saturday night?" Nothing but damage as far as the eye

David Elliott: Hopper took over the direction and did not protect himself as a star. He is very effective in a raw way as working something out onscreen. He plays a ruined man responsible for the deaths of a busload of children. Also, a violent drunk. And, hey, on top of that, a guy who molested his own daughter. I kept thinking, "Well, this can't get the father, though you suspect that much of the script came from whatever he took that day. And he is often overshadowed by little Linda Manz as the daughter. Commercially, it was hopeless, like Bertolucci's incest movie of the same time, La Luna.

"Well, this can't get much darker."

This is the same Hopper who staged his own suicide as performance art, using sticks of dynamite at Rice University.

Matthew Lickona: "Did not protect himself" is a nice way to put it. "Crucified himself onscreen" might not be too far off. When your opening scene is you getting into a fatal crash, it's hard not to read it as the director coming clean about himself (and his career). It's a tough scene to watch in 2010, when we're not so used to our protagonists being real sinners. And then it gets tougher.

David Elliott: Agreed. Hopper played a radically confused, selfish jerk without completely demonizing him. Nicholson had done something similar in Five Easy Pieces, but the role was smothered in his sly, au courant charisma, and he had easy targets for his sarcastic bile (the obnoxious waitress, the pompous musical family, the ridiculous hitchhikers). Still, it's a great performance. Hopper's is just a gutsy one. Jack advanced his career, while Dennis dug another crater for his. And yet Out of the Blue is a bolder film, a fringe foretaste of David Lynch (who would stage Hopper's comeback).

Matthew Lickona: I'll argue a bit on the script — the picnic scene seems too spot-on and artful to be the product of that day's high. Dad taking his daughter for an outing, and, oh yeah, let's get your mother. Pulling Mom out of work over the protests of her boss (who is also the man who really loves her). It's happy family time, but then Mom says one thing about his driving, and bam, he's done with her — she's the enemy, just like all those jerks who are still mad that he drove a truck into their kids five years back. Next thing we see, he's playing catch with his daughter while mom sits and shivers in the wind — it's pretty clear where his heart lies.

The scene is a twisted attempt to return to family normalcy after trauma, but of course, things weren't actually normal before the trauma, and that comes through in spades. Though it still doesn't brace you for Dad suggesting that his friend bang his daughter. Or mom's fearful acquiescence to the notion. It's a rare film in which clubbing a guy to death with seeks re-entry of another sort, screaming, "Daddy wants to fuck!" as he does just that.

David Elliott: You see this David Lynch vision, and you never feel the a tire iron barely registers amid the horror.

Blue Velvet

Matthew Lickona: Speaking of horror...here, instead of a child abuser, Hopper plays Frank Booth, an abused (and abusive) child. In "the scene," where he snorts amyl nitrate and rapes Dorothy, he begins by staring between her spread legs and repeating, "Baby wants blue velvet." It's only after playing a child trying to crawl back into the womb (an effort that is of course doomed to failure) that he same again about velvet, gas inhalers, or Pabst Blue Ribbon. Hopper fits perfectly into the style jacket created by Lynch. It's a showy, wallowing role but also a consummation. Frank Booth is, of course, the living god of the creepy bugs seen early in the film...

success: as a stylized lunatic for a more cynical era in films. He is a seedpod for the nuts in Quentin Tarantino's work. Frank is the rebel whose only cause is being a creep.

Matthew Lickona: Hey, nice James Dean reference!

Hoosiers

Matthew Lickona: The same year he plays Frank Booth, Hopper also goes mainstream to play Shooter, a drunk who cannot bear to face the way he's failed as a father. When Gene Hackman tells him, "You're embarrassing your son," the pain in Hopper's eyes is enough to make you want to look away. (It's worth noting, however, that it's one of his rare roles that allows for redemption.)

David Elliott: You are right about the failed-father aspect being the key to this very good work. In Rebel, Dean found his father (Jim Backus) an embarrassment, and Hopper had felt embarrassed by his Texas macho father (Rock Hudson) in Giant. Like Brando and Dean, Hopper had a tormented relationship with his dad. "I very seldom saw my father," he once said, "which I resented tremendously."

Matthew Lickona: Partly because his dad traveled for work, partly because his dad had his death faked during WWII so that he could do undercover work for the government in Asia.

drunkard in his career, he gives one of his most lucid performances. Hopper said he preferred drink to drugs.

Matthew Lickona: "Preferred drink to drugs." You're good at understatement, aren't you? The famous line I keep running across is "Honestly, I only used to do cocaine so I could sober up and drink more." But if druggie Frank Booth was the terrifying, angry side of the wounded Hopper, drunk Shooter was the pathetic, needy side, the side that wound up in a mental institution and eventually dried out. He may have wanted to play Frank Booth because he identified with the character, but Shooter was perhaps the purer biography.

David Elliott: I completely agree with you on the Hoosiers role vs. Blue Velvet. But remember: we nearly all recall Frank in Blue Velvet, whereas only some basketball buffs and maybe reformed alcoholics remember Hoosiers. And it was really Gene Hackman's film. The truth is that major leading men didn't feel threatened by Hopper. I don't consider Kyle MacLachlan a major leading man.

Paris Trout

Matthew Lickona: Maybe Hopper's most affecting villain. Paris Trout is a bad man who cannot bear to admit his own badness. even when the rest of the world declares it. His suffering is monumental his last word to his wife before he shoots himself is "You never felt sorry for me." This to a woman he raped with an open bottle of soda. As a result, he is utterly alone — it comes through beautifully as he sits by his comatose mother's bedside, asking her if she's there.

David Elliott: That bedside scene with the mom echoes Dean's famous closing scene with his stricken father in East of Eden, the Dean movie in which Hopper did not appear. (Another inspiration could have been Brando's famous monologue to his dead wife in Last Tango in Paris.) This is an unusually well made TV movie that broke out into theaters, and Hopper is fascinating because he makes a sick, sadistic racist and rapist oddly pitiful. He seems to know he is deranged, but his crazy bull pride won't let him face it, so he bunkers into it.

Matthew Lickona:

Wow, you're still getting echoes of Dean even at this late stage of Hopper's career? Maybe I was wrong in saying that Welles was haunted and Hopper wasn't.

David Elliott: I think Hopper was haunted by Dean his whole adult life and career. He basically admitted it.

Speed

Matthew Lickona: Well, things got a little shallower in the '90s, so along with the cute kill-phrase at the opening ("Nothing personal") and the silly speech at the end, we get a character with more obvious damage: a bomb cop who got his hand blown up in the line of duty.

Carried Away

Matthew Lickona: Did I say things got shallower in the '90s? I should be more careful. True, Hopper's character is again damaged in an obvious, physical sense — a mutilated foot that sentences him to life as a stay-at-home also-ran in a tepid affair with his best friend's widow. But in Speed, the blown-up hand caused Hopper to go nuts and start killing people. Here, it takes a quieter toll: it contributes to a suffocating, immobile life. So when Hopper sees a chance to get carried away, he takes it. Smaller scale but more dramatic.

formance as the bored schoolteacher who tries to break free erotically. He doesn't bluster the role or soap it sentimentally. Of course, Hopper fans mostly avoided this one, but I suspect Dennis was happy not to be jamming a screwdriver into a security guard's ear, like he did in Speed, or again upstaging Chris-

The guy was a great sidewinder. He could dominate Water World as a screaming skull from hell but also play Frank Sinatra in The Night We Called It a Day. And as a director, he could take a TV-generic cop script like Colors and give it some real force of style, using cinematographer Haskell Wexler. It was a fairly dangerous movie to make, but Hopper caught the L.A. streets and gang life. And he was not overawed by the two heroes, Sean Penn and Robert Duvall. I interviewed him for Colors and he was a total charmer, but door), and it reminded me how much I love to bike ride around

Point Loma. So, on a Tuesday, we took a 22-mile ride that we fondly refer to as the "Tour de Pointe."

We left the house at 5:15 p.m. and rode out Catalina Boulevard to the guard station. You used to be able to go to the lighthouse and Cabrillo Monument during the summer, but they changed the hours and now no one can get past the guard after 5 p.m....which kind of stinks for people wanting to ride their bikes down to the tidepools after work or people who have out-of-town guests because this site is a favorite destination for out-of-towners as well as locals.

I asked them why they were closing early now, and they told me it was for security reasons. I think it has more to do with saving money, but I can't confirm it.

Turning around at the guard station, we stopped at the red light and watched a motorist stop and then proceed to go through the light while it was still red. Some people do own the whole damn road. We turned into the Wooded Area and rode down Silvergate — a lovely street dappled with rosebushes and festooned with BMWs and Mercedes Benzes — and past the gated entrance to Kellogg Street, home to Point Loma glitterati such as Joseph Wambaugh and the WD-40 heir. Flying down Gage at 30+ mph, I felt exhilarated and fortunate to be alive on such a beautiful day in such a beautiful place.

In the village of Point Loma we turned to get to Shelter Island. Going past the Le Rondelet condominiums, I was reminded of their swinging history, where the occupants reportedly had a swell time in the '60s and '70s. It seems that the same swingers still live there, only now they have walkers and blue placards. Sadly, their swing has swung.

We passed my old office, still a place I can walk into anytime, any day, and be welcomed with a smile and a (love him, but he really does have a face for radio).

wheels. I looked to my right and saw the marina, filled with giant floating condos and lots of other watercraft, big and small, and wondered at which end of the happiest-days-ofour-lives spectrum are the owners.

We turned into Harbor Island and passed the Sheraton, the site of many a work party I've attended over the years. There was a strong headwind heading north on Harbor Island, so it was a relief when we turned at Tom Ham's Lighthouse, benefactor of one of the best Bloody Marvs I have ever had (and there have been many) and began the southward portion of our lap.

Looking to the right, there was a small sailboat relay race going on, consisting of maybe 20 boats. Their pretty white sails stood in stark contrast to the bright, cloudless blue sky. The downtown skyline was sharp and glinting and brilliant, so bright I had to squint my eyes to take it all in. There were many people fishing off the rocks lining the bay husbands and wives and children and dogs.

We continued down to Island Prime and C Level, and I couldn't stop thinking of C Level's amazing garlic fries. Thin, crispy, and fragrant with garlic, I can stuff ten of them in my mouth at once, and I do whenever we go there. We took another lap around Harbor Island and headed back to Harbor Drive for the trip home.

As we passed the airport, I was grateful for its proximity to our home. Some want to move the airport. I think it is just fine where it is, and so do our visitors. We can hear the planes where we live, but just barely. I do feel for those directly in the flight path. I used to live in the flight path, and it can be deafening.

Crossing over Harbor Drive, where Nimitz connects, we had to ride in the center of the road. I looked over my shoulder once, twice, three times and finally shouted "clear" to my husband, and we raced to the center bike lane while cars whizzed by. Up through Rosecrans we went, left onto Locust Street through Tunatown, then past our old condo where we lived when we first got married.

We reached Canon Street and began the slow climb back home. I wanted to turn at Point Loma Avenue, but my husband wanted to go all the way up Canon, so I followed him up, maxing out at 7 mph on the incline. Going past the new Fresh and Easy, I thought about the store being nominated for an "Onion" architectural award for not using a different façade than all the other Fresh and Easys. We are just glad a grocery store is there.

Turning right on Catalina, we barreled home like horses after the turnaround. I was tired, but in that goodexercise way, and as I pulled off my helmet I caught a glimpse of myself in the bedroom mirror. I was grinning from ear to ear.

Sometimes I think I have no memories here because none of my family lives here. When I ride my bike, I am astounded at how many people and places in this 22-mile loop hold memories for me. They are everywhere, and I was lucky to have had the opportunities to create them. I just have to remind myself to remember that.

My purse is so much part of me I'm surprised I don't yell "Ouch" when someone bumps it. I'm surprised it doesn't bleed.

My mother's purse could not be opened without permission. Even granted that permission, asked perhaps to retrieve her glasses, I averted my eyes and searched for her glasses with my hand blind as a mole through lipsticks and compacts and keys and cash. You just didn't look in your mother's purse. Nobody did. Not even your father did.

Your father had pockets. Your mother had a purse. You have to ask yourself, "Why is it women weight themselves down with purses and men don't? Why can a man get through the day with his wallet and comb while a woman hefts a bag weighing two, three, even four pounds?" Not that I want to make too much of this, but I don't want to make too little.

All of us have these photographs. In mine I am four. It must be summer, I'm wearing a sunsuit. My feet occupy mere inches of my mother's open-toe pumps. Her castoff Lilly Dache (I know the hat's designer because years later I ask) sits askew on my head. Shirred gloves reach to my bare shoulders. Over my arm hangs what appears, next to my four-year-old body, to be an enormous alligator bag. I appear happily weighted down by these appurtenances of womanhood. Ear to ear my smile is all white milk teeth.

What I loved most about my mother's handme-down purses were the purses' insides. I would reach down with my small hand into the purse's darkness and stroke the satiny lining. I would poke in my nose and inhale the face powder smell. I loved the zippered inner pockets. I hoped always, unzipping one of these, that my fingers would ferret out a coin or earring or stick of yellow-wrapped Juicy Fruit gum. I loved filling up these purses, if only to go with them into the next room, toting my doll clothes or a terrified, mewling kitten.

When I closed my mother's old purses, I loved the clasp's satisfying snap. I loved knowing everything I'd put in would be leading its own mute life in the silky darkness and would be there, waiting, when I reached in for it. Boys must love that about pockets.

In the first grade class of my Manhattan school, boys and girls carried buckled leather school bags in which we kept books and papers. We girls also carried purses. As easily as boys did, we could have tucked money and keys and Kleenex into our school bag. We didn't.

Purses made boys nervous. They did not touch your purse, in part because they had learned not to touch their mothers' purses. As we got older, graduated from grammar school to junior high, our purses became larger and boys became even more anxious about them. They made the ritual uneasy jokes about how much women crammed into purses. They tensed when a girl, hunting for pencil or keys, scrambled through her purse's holdings. "I can't stand it when you do that," a boy growled at me.

At this same time, our menstrual periods commenced — or, more colloquially, we were "getting out periods." We were then truly fearful at having anyone, especially a boy, see into our purses. For underneath the rubble of notes passed among girlfriends and the rarer note from a boy (all of this perfervid writing was about love), we had hidden sanitary napkins.

Nothing after this, of course, would ever be the same. Even those tomboys among us, who'd gotten by with wallets, would now carry purses. The purse would become a veritable organ of womanhood.

Even as a seventh-grader I could not imagine leaving the house without my purse. It did not matter that most days I used little more from its contents (which grew in number as I grew older) than keys and cash and lipstick. Without my purse, I felt uncomfortable (and still do). Amputees speak of "phantom limb pain," in which someone whose leg, for instance, has been amputated feels pain that seems to originate in his now absent leg. Researchers who study pain theorize that an amputee experiences this phantom limb pain because of a lifetime accrual of mental images of his leg. Likewise, when I'm without my purse, I feel the absence of my purse. When a woman has fallen deeply in love and believes herself loved in return, you will sometimes see her, out at night with her beloved, not carrying her usual capacious purse. She will have given him her lipstick and an infinitesimal coin purse into which she's tucked her driver's license and house key. She has him. She doesn't need much. White-haired Pearl sits, ankles crossed, at a cafe table in a museum garden. When I tell her, "I am interested in your purse," she regards me so quizzically her hyperthyroid's

"Okay," Pearl sighs, "now you're coming to me with one of those surveys about what ladies carry in their bags? You are going to ask me to take everything out to show you while you laugh and make jokes?" No, no, no, I tell her. No survey. I had been curious lately about purses. Did she know the word "purse" comes from Latin bursa, meaning oxhide? That derivations include "pursers" and "bursars" and the bulging blue eyes look as if they're going to pop out.

Paris Stock Exchange, "le Bourse"?

Pearl fixes me with a pitying gawk. Well, her purse came from Macy's, the New York Herald Square original Macy's, and was given her for Christmas by her elder daughter, the one, she adds, in case I've forgotten, "who moved from Rego Park to Cincinnati. The

she says, raising her white evebrows, but she doesn't think that I would be interested to know all this.

I am, I say. I am. "Well, then, it was the very day that the Challenger exploded. You remember that? Mrs. Bigaggio was on her way to the supermarket. The purse snatcher hit Mrs. Bigaggio on the head. On top, here." Pearl one married to the male nurse. It's real leather, as you can see." She thumps the purse so hard that it exhales a sweet-smelling cloud of the face powder she keeps in a round box down inside it (and whose perfume scents the purse's satin lining).

So we are talking about her purse, a crumple now of black leather showing lumps of what's in it, and beaten in a bit by her and invitingly half open between us on the round table. Our gaze stays on it. We each keep reaching across the tabletop and touching its cool tough Pearl's hair mists above her pink scalp, as pink as the pink hibiscus flowering near us. Pearl's mouth opens wide. Her tongue glistens and her teeth, her own, ground down by some 70 years' chewing, form a tidy row. Pearl's stories push out of her, squealing as newborns squeal. A groaning sow Pearl is, laying down in straw, giving easy birth to "I don't know if I ever told you but my friend Mrs. Bigaggio, she went on her way down the street in broad daylight..." It is all coming back to her now, thumps her own head. "With a hammer. Mrs. Bigaggio went into a coma. Imagine laying there tubes running in and out of you and you no more than a slab of meat and the nurses laughing at your body parts while they're washing you off. That's what a coma is." Pearl studies me, frowns. "I am getting off the subject, huh?"

My subject is what Pearl implies. My boring subject I am insisting we discuss. I say, "No, you're not," and watch Pearl sip at her coffee.

"Well," she says, "Mrs. Bigaggio came out of her coma. She is okay now."

What I have to remember about purses, Pearl says, her eyebrows rearing up, is that the purse is also something that makes you desirable to the person who would grab it. The purse makes her — "and you, too," she stares hard at me — desirable to the world. "What do you think of that?" I think that is terrible, of course.

As the morning wears on, Pearl begins to pull items from her purse to show me. She hands me a scrap of pale blue brocade that she wishes to match, for color, for new slipcovers. We look at snapshots of her daughter, her grandchildren, and great-grandson. "I have also, here," Pearl smiles, "the curl from my greatgrandson." She holds up an auburn curl. We examine a photo of Pearl and George, a gentleman with whom Pearl keeps company, in square dance costumes. "I will never," she says, "let him move in with me."

Medicare cards, Social Security card, health insurance ID, bus passes, pill bottles, handkerchief, rent receipts, several business cards, a tumult of receipts, wallet, sunglasses, eyeglasses, a rhinestone necklace, cologne, folded dollar bills, grocerv list, keys, more fabric swatches, letters, lipstick, blusher, powder, aspirin, address book, checkbook, eye shadow and mascara, ballpoint pens, Dentyne, clove Life Savers, threaded needle woven in and out a black felt square, silver compact, brush, comb, rubber bands, bus schedules, square-dancing club schedule, tooth brush, tiny toothpaste tube, extra pair of pantyhose, a string of safety pins, a religious tract someone gave her when she was waiting for a bus, clear nail polish ("in case," Pearl explains, "my stockings run, I can paint them with it and stop the run"), a recipe for vegetarian chili. "Nothing," says Pearl, snapping her purse shut, "that you wouldn't expect, is it? No surprises,

I agree. No surprises. I say that my purse feels like it's part of me, almost part of my body. Some odd body part. Does she feel this way? Pearl laughs, cackles. "My dried-up old womb." She pats her purse, thumps it. "It has come down to this." ■ the $18,000, according to Campbell's lawyers.

I also asked Stilwell if Guillen told Campbell that he was steering her to Williams for altruistic reasons. "Mr. Guillen will not comment on the facts at this time," says Stilwell.

According to testimony at the hearing, a full $340,000 of the $350,000 was transferred to Sycamore Ventures, which was owned and controlled by David Romo, a convicted felon. In December of 2002, Romo was sentenced to a year and a day in federal prison for bank fraud and transporting stolen securities.

According to the Sacramento Bee, Sacramento U.S. District Judge David F. Levi said that Romo had pulled off "a large fraud scheme" and told him, "This was not a momentary lapse in judgment. There is something deeper in your character that allowed you to be grossly dishonest in the business world."

Romo's Sycamore Ventures owned raw land in an undeveloped area. The project flopped. "As best as can be determined, the $350,000 investment...is a total loss," said Campbell's lawvers in the arbitration.

I also asked A. Kipp Williams, the attorney for Kevin Williams, some questions about the matter. How did Kevin Williams get to know Romo? Kipp Williams didn't know. Did Kevin Williams do his due diligence on Romo's criminal background? "I can't tell you that," said Kipp Williams, who accused me of representing one of Campbell's attorneys, Milove, and hung up the phone. I called back and Kipp Williams said he couldn't answer most questions because of attorneyclient privilege, but he did say that Campbell "didn't understand the documents" in the short sale and that she had not opened Kevin Williams's statements for six months.

CITY LIGHTS

Kevin Williams had given her a private placement memorandum and explained the risks to her, claimed Kipp Williams. She doesn't do her homework, he said. I then asked why the arbitration panel had come down so hard on Kevin Williams. The arbitration guidelines "are very skewed toward the investor," said Kipp Williams. There has been no decision whether to appeal, he said.

Kipp Williams's assertion that arbitrations are skewed in favor of investors will get a strenuous argument in many quarters. For example, a nonprofit group called Project on Government Oversight told Congress in February that "FINRA's track record... is typical of financial selfregulators that have a cozy relationship with the industry they are supposed to be regulating." Self-regulators "have effectively been asleep at the wheel during all of the major securities scandals dating back to the 1980s," said the oversight group to Congress, citing the Bear Stearns, Lehman Brothers, Merrill Lynch, and Bernard Madoff debacles that went undetected for years.

Guillen was not a part of the arbitration process because he does not belong to the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority. So Campbell and her lawyers are suing him in superior court, alleging securities fraud, illegal securities sales by an unlicensed broker, negligence, breach of fiduciary duty, and other transgressions.

I asked Stilwell about these charges. There has been no decision how to respond to the charges, says Stilwell. "Mr. Guillen is adamant that the allegations made in Ms. Campbell's complaint are completely false and bordering on frivolous," says Stilwell.

But the arbitration panel

CITY LIGHTS

came down extremely hard on Kevin Williams, charging him with "taking undue advantage of an older, retired, financially unsophisticated, and financially limited client," as well as placing his own needs and interests above those of his client and using "deceit and misleading and reckless behavior" in the process.

Kevin Williams and his companies must pay $397,000 to Campbell, plus $75,000 in punitive damages and $165,000 in legal fees.

"This is another chapter in the annals of Scam Diego," says Milove. "Moral depravity is increasing." Bandits "are emboldened by the lack of enforcement of securities laws by regulators and courts over the last ten years."■

In the months that followed, residents received more letters.

On June 29, Archstone retracted its notification that the park would close in one year.

On September 11, the company informed residents that closing the park would be a lengthy process. "I know many of you have enjoyed living in the park and we hope you will continue to enjoy living at the park over the next months and years," read the letter from Archstone-Smith's director of land acquisition, Michael Walseth. "I mention months and years because the park is not closing anytime soon."

The homeowners spent the next year fighting the proposal to tear down the park. Meanwhile, the value of the mobile homes dropped. Residents began to move, and empty concrete slabs became permanent fixtures.

ways separate vine-covered coaches on the ten-and-one-half-acre property. Electrical conduit and PVC plumbing pipes that once supplied power and water to homes stick out from the ground. Wood and debris litter the gravel plots where doublewides once stood. Two years ago, the park housed 119 mobile homes. Today there are only 70.

Of those mobile homes remaining, many are in disrepair, with missing metal siding, weedy walkways, and bushes that branch out into the street. Some residents no longer maintain their homes. They feel it's a waste of money. Other homes appear to be in pristine condition; bushes are trimmed, yards manicured. The residents say that everyone deals with the stress in his or her own way.

"People just think that we can up and move our homes," says someone else during the meeting. "We can't. Most parks don't even take the older coaches, and most of us can't handle a move."

Toward the end of 2008, tenants learned that on November 18 the city council would hear Archstone-Smith's proposal to demolish the park. The residents contacted media outlets. Homeowners wrote to councilmembers and conducted traffic studies. News crews filmed them standing on Mission Gorge Road holding signs opposing the project.

On the day of the council hearing, residents implored the city council to deny Archstone-Smith's petition to lift the Mobilehome Park Overlay Zone — a city ordinance whose purpose is to preserve mobile home parks — and reject the developer's proposal. Their efforts failed when councilmembers Scott Peters, Toni Atkins, and Jim Madaffer joined Ben Hueso and Kevin Faulconer to approve the proposal.

The motion, presented by then-councilmember Madaffer, whose district encompasses the park, did include some good news for the residents. The motion enhanced the relocation assistance that park residents are required to receive by law. It allowed residents to choose between two options: Archstone-Smith would relocate their mobile home or the company would pay a rental subsidy. The city council requested that the developer provide seven years of rental subsidy, instead of the four years City policy requires. This meant that homeowners could be paid in a lump sum the difference between their current rent, which was $725 at the time, and the fair market rent figure listed by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for a similar-sized dwelling in San Diego.

In 2009, Housing and Urban Development listed rent for a two-bedroom home at $1418 a month, amounting to a payout of approximately $58,212 to most of the homeowners.

But in the nearly two vears that followed, the victory has amounted to nothing. No relocation benefits have been awarded. Archstone has taken the position that until it issues a six-month notice of closure, it does not owe the benefits to residents who move. In addition, Archstone claims that the relocation benefits cannot be inherited or transferred to a new owner. As a consequence, the homes are unsellable.

The park still exists, but barely. Since 2007, rent has been increased by $50 per month, and many of the elderly residents are unable to pay their bills. Fortynine homes have been removed, 6 residents have been placed in assisted living facilities, and 25 residents have died.

CITY LIGHTS

The majority of those remaining plan to stay until Archstone-Smith kicks them out, or as one neighbor describes it, "until they roll me out of here feet first."

Carolyn Gunnon, president of the homeowners' association, speaks up as some neighbors express their anger. "I think that's what Archstone is hoping for is that people will just give up and leave. If we leave, then we don't get anything. It's money for them."

In December 2009, the Mission Valley Village Mobilehome Association hired lawyer Peter Zamoyski to represent homeowners in a multimilliondollar class-action lawsuit against Archstone-Smith. The lawsuit alleges that Archstone violated the Mobilehome Residency Law by denying homeowners the right to transfer relocation benefits to new buyers or heirs. The lawsuit contends that the developer, by delaying park closure, caused home values to plummet. It accuses Archstone of "fraudulent conduct and misrepresentations" in inducing owners to sell their homes to Archstone.

The suit also asks Archstone-Smith to base the rental subsidy on the rent at the time the park was purchased, $725 a month, and not the new rate that's $50 higher.

"It doesn't sound like much," explains Zamo-yski, "but one of the largest components of the relocation package is seven years of rent differential. Every time they raise the rent, the benefits get smaller.

"They have done everything to make life more difficult for these folks, to try to help out Archstone-Smith's bottom line at the expense of the owners,"

"Archstone-Smith said...they would not raise the rent as long as they were closing the mobile home park." But some residents became ill and needed to move. Archstone-Smith told them that "they would buy the house for $5000 if the owner agrees to waive the relocation benefits," says Zamoyski.

To prevent Archstone-Smith from raising the rent a second time and from speaking to previous tenants or to heirs, homeowners asked the court for a restraining order. Days before the judge was expected to rule on it, lawyers for the developer asked to take the case into mediation.

In the meantime, the nearly 100 people living in the park remain unsure of their future. Sitting at the dog park on that September afternoon, the residents are upset and scared.

"So many people just don't know what they're going to do, and you can tell it just weighs on them," says former homeowners' association president Homer Barrs. "It could be months, two or three years, or maybe five years. We just don't know. A lot of people don't know we're still here. They forgot about us."

After Barrs finishes his comment, resident Heather Manues speaks in an embittered tone: "The City, Jim Madaffer, the mayor, they sold the park right out from under us, and they just are having us sit here, like we're nonentities."

"This was where I was going to die," says 22-year park resident Doris Melvin. "I was devastated when I heard the news, but I refuse to let them chase me out."

Archstone-Smith failed to respond to requests for comment. Lawyers are continuing mediation sessions.

North County Transit Discusses Train Stop

Del Mar — Several Del Mar residents and members of the press surrounded a table in Nancy Fisher's Del Mar living room. At the table sat executive director for North County Transit Matt Tucker, chief rail engineer for the transit district Justin Fornelli, and Del Mar city councilmembers Carl Hilliard and Mark Filanc. The panel was assembled to discuss the temporary train platform (expected to operate for the next 10 to 15 years) proposed for a stretch of track east of 25th Street in Del Mar, mere feet from Beach Colony homes.

Estimated to cost under $4 million, the temporary platform would be a fraction of the $80 million it would cost to build a permanent stop north of the river, away from Del Mar neighborhoods.

The benefits, said councilmember Filanc, include increased riders on railways, reduced bus trips from Solana Beach to the fairgrounds, and decreased car traffic on Del Mar streets. NCTD has estimated approximately 1200 passengers per day would use the new platform during the ten-week race season and the county

While Tucker urged residents to look at the project with a "fresh set of eyes," residents couldn't see the temporary stop bringing anything but late-night nuisance. Tucker said that NCTD would provide security and possibly build a wall to prevent pedestrians from crossing the right of way into their neighborhood.

Where, Then?

Homeless People Drummed Out of Library

Downtown — "Where, in fact, is a legitimate location for us?" asked Kate McClellan as she appeared before the city council on Tuesday, October 12. McClellan is a middle-aged homeless woman who previously sought shelter in the San Diego Main Library. She said she once had to spend a night out in the rain after being told to leave the library...because she didn't know where to go.

"In the past two weeks, I've been asked along with everyone else to leave [the library] and not come back," said McClellan, who sought an answer from the City as to where she could live.

According to McClellan, police officers get "catty" with homeless people; they threaten them with arrest and $250 illegal-lodging tickets.

"If I had $250, I would be in Motel 6, not at the library," said McClellan. "I want to cooperate with the City. If you are just clear with me and tell me what the hours are, the legitimate [alternative shelter] locations until the [winter homeless] tent opens... that's what I'm requesting."

baseball team exiting the Portland market. Moorad has until December 1 to exercise the option to purchase the ball club, and he wants to make a deal with the City of Escondido to build a home for the team prior to exercising his option.

Because funding for the proposed ballpark complex will use city redevelopment funds, the City can commit the estimated $50 million without a referendum by city residents.

Resident Sims offered several points of disagreement during his strongly worded statement. Noting that there is a short fuse on the City's decision, he stated, "The only reason there is not time for a vote is the Moorad group's unwillingness to buy the Portland PCL franchise unless the City of Escondido subsidizes his group's investment!"

Contradicting some councilmembers' assumption of community support, Sims said, "I can assure you, the community is much more interested in paying for police, firefighters, libraries, and recreation programs than they are for a new ballpark."

Mayor Sanders Still Has Eye on Closing Marijuana Dispensaries

San Diego — During the San Diego City Council's October 11 meeting, the decision was made to hold off on calling for a moratorium on the opening of new medical marijuana dispensaries in San Diego. Instead, the council moved to adopt an independent budget analyst's recommendation for further research.

After receiving numerous complaints about criminal activity surrounding the dispensaries, the San Diego County Grand Jury addressed San Diego's need to find a balance for the legitimate medical marijuana patient and the concerns of residents in the areas containing dispensaries.

The grand-jury report advises San Diego to place a moratorium or ban on the opening of any new store-front dispensaries until a set of guidelines governing the operations and locations are enacted.

Mayor Sanders stated in his issued response to the report that San Diego did not have the authority for a moratorium because the dispensaries themselves are not set up legally; the mayor declared that, under municipal code §12.0102, the City has the power to close down the dispensaries.

The Land Use and Housing Committee and the city attorney are in the process of amending the municipal code and setting up ordinances for zoning and operations of the dispensaries.

Vine Idea

California Center for the Arts Plans for "Grape Maze" Escondido — On October 13, the Escondido City Council authorized a payment from the City's public art fund to allow an art project to be constructed in the California Center for the Arts Escondido Museum courtyard.

According to Susan Pollack, a public-art consultant for the Community Services Department, the project will cost $22,000 and serve as a connector between the museum, the center's adjacent arts-education studios, and Grape Day Park. Internationally recognized artist Roman de Salvo, who's been hired for the job, plans to incorporate water conservation into the work.

CITY LIGHTS

The metal roof of the museum collects dew during the night. Pollack said the water collects in the rain gutters and drips down the downspout. De Salvo proposes installing a "Grape Maze," which will put the water to use. Concrete from the downspout area would be removed, the exposed soil cultivated and planted with a grapevine. The water would then nourish the vine as it grows and is trained to a maze. Pollack said the maze will become an attractive mural, and private events such as weddings will still have room to be held in the area.

After the unanimous vote, Pollack was asked how much time is needed to complete the project. "Now that we have the money," she said, "we don't want to take more than a year to get it implemented." She added that about $300,000 will remain in the art fund after the project is paid for.

More Decapitated Corpses Found Hung from Bridges Tijuana — After a decline in Tyuana — After a decline in grisly displays of drug-related violence, the decapitated corpses of two men were found hanging from a bridge over the Tijuana-Rosarito highway early on October 11.

Bound hand and foot, the bodies dangled upside down over motorists as they passed under the Pemex bridge located in the vicinity of the Santa Fe district on the outskirts of TJ.

The men, both estimated to be in their 20s, showed signs of torture and likely died of multiple gunshot wounds. The men's heads were found in boxes in the back of a Toyota pickup truck that had been abandoned nearby. One of the heads was swathed in baby clothes.

A "narcomensaje" scrawled on a piece of cardboard was stuck in one of the windows of the truck. This is not the first time that bridges along the route to Rosarito have been used to display corpses.

The number of murders in Tijuana for the month of October rose to 26; for the year, the tally has reached 633.

A Pawn for Proposition D?

Councilmember DeMaio Questions City Auditor's Ethics

San Diego — "Whenever we enter the political season, it is important to make sure that certain processes of government stay out of politics entirely," said councilmember Carl DeMaio at the outset of Monday's meeting of the Audit Committee. "I was shocked to see that the 'Yes on D' campaign had featured a quote from our city auditor, Eduardo Luna, as though he has endorsed Proposition D. It's extremely distasteful, and it perhaps foreshadows things to come."

District five's representative was referring to a political mailer sent out to voters pushing the sales-tax reform measure.

Luna responded to DeMaio's questions of whether he has endorsed Proposition D, whether the quote was accurate, and if he authorized the pro-Prop D campaign to use his quote.

"I am not endorsing the campaign one way or another. It was an accurate quote. I wasn't asked specifically to use that quote on that mailer."

Using Luna as a pawn in the politics for both proand anti-Prop D campaigns recurred, despite DeMaio's admonishment after Luna had delivered a presentation on his role in certifying the ten reform measures if voters approve the five-year sales tax.

"You're aware of an [ordinance] that the city council passed last Monday laying out budgetary principles," said DeMaio, referencing last week's ordinance where Prop D politicos, including the Mayor, assured that the city would curtail spending and replenish general-fund reserves if Prop D was approved.

Continued DeMaio: "What effect does that have, if any, on your obligations and discretions...to certify the ten [reform measures]?"

"Based on my understanding, it has no effect," responded Luna.

"Thank you very much. I appreciate that candid and direct answer," said DeMaio, smirking behind the microphone.

Under Fire

Councilmember Emerald Accuses DeMaio's Staff of Spreading Lies

San Diego — "I am keenly aware that I have been accused by some people in the community of sensationalizing this, as has Chief [William] Lansdowne," said San Diego fire chief Javier Mainar during a presentation before the Public Safety and Neighborhood Services Committee. "I would argue that I am not in any way attempting to do that. I've been asked by the mayor to cut $7.2 million out of the budget. I'm certainly not sensationalizing it or talking about any elective matters on the upcoming ballot."

Last week, Mainar came under fire from opponents of the sales-tax reform measure after he announced the cuts to the fire department and lifeguard services budget, which include eliminating staffing for one of the fire department's two helicopters, extinguishing five engines, potentially axing 60 firefighters from the payroll, removing lifeguards at Mission Bay and North Pacific Beach, and reducing staff at city heaches.

The political firestorm was reignited hours before Mainar appeared before the public safety committee when councilmember Carl DeMaio released a press release asserting that his office discovered $5.4 million in bonuses paid to firefighters with EMT certification.

During the committee meeting, Mainar doused the heat from DeMaio, stating that the district five representative was referring to the "Emergency medical technician pay," extra pay for firefighters who hold EMT certification, which all are required to hold.

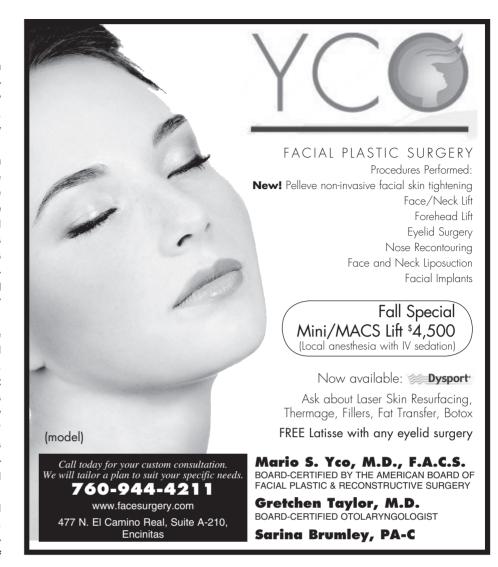

"I took it as a personal affront today," said Mainar, explaining that the additional pay has been part of the budget since the '80s and is part of the firefighters' overall salary.

From her spot on the dais, Councilmember Marti Emerald, chair of the committee, also took offense to her colleague's comments.

"It appears that Mr. DeMaio is playing some political game with public safety," said Emerald. who then directed her comments to staff members from councilmember DeMaio's office, "None of us appreciates that, from your boss or from any of you. Spreading rumors, spreading lies to try and influence your political outcome.... I hope you take that message back to your boss. We will do whatever we can to silence this misinformation, this irresponsible behavior."

I like raptors, but I didn't feel like watching winged death swoop down on that glorious morning, so I hollered and tossed a pebble or two in his general direction until he flew away. Then I looked him up in the field guide, which was always near at hand. A smaller raptor, but nevertheless an efficient killing machine. The cowering songbirds breathed a collective sigh of relief as their unwelcome visitor moved on, and I returned to whatever I was doing before I was distracted by the commotion.

The guide weighs about two ounces and is easy to carry by hand or in a backpack, and I often take it with me while hiking or camping. Every now and then, when I see a wild bird that I don't recognize, I'll break out the guide and search for my latest feathered friend and visitor.

Re "You Want Silver or Lead?" (Cover Story, September 23). This was an exceptional article. I read it weeks ago, and yet it still moves me when I think about it. I felt for the first time I understood the real cost of recreational drugs. It's not about people in the U.S. spending some time in jail; it's really about the people losing their lives and being forced to do things against their will. I believe those people who say, "I am not hurting anybody by doing drugs" need to read this article.

Personal And Short(ish)

Jim Crooks has presented me with a considerable challenge in his letter of October 14. Answering all of his objections point by point accurately and thoroughly would require a detailed exegesis and contextual exposition of each passage he cited. Space does not permit me to do that, so I will just keep it personal.

I believe in the Lord Iesus Christ. I have eternal life solely because I have put my trust in Jesus. I have not done anything to deserve, earn, or merit eternal life. My personal possession of eternal life is entirely the free gift of God. I believe this is true because the New Testament bears witness that it is true, and I believe the testimony of the New Testament. I also believe that the eternal life I possess is irrevocable, and this belief is also based on the testimony of the New Testament. As I study the New Testament daily in the Greek, my convictions concerning the terms and irrevocability of eternal salvation are strengthened all the more.

I have studied all the passages that Jim Crooks claims are contrary to my beliefs. I have studied all of them in the Greek New Testament at various times over the past couple of years. As far as I am able to discern, not one of those passages teaches that a believer can lose possession of eternal life. Neither does any passage teach that one must do more than believe in Jesus Christ in order to receive eternal life.

The New Testament is filled with commandments. I know this because the present imperative second person plural practically jumps off the page. In the vast majority of instances, these commandments are directed exclusively toward Christians. If you think there's only ten commandments, you'd be shocked to learn that from Romans to Revelation 3 there are hundreds of commandments.

Much confusion has resulted because people mistake what God requires from Christians for the way of eternal life and vice versa. An unbeliever cannot be saved by obeying commandments directed toward Christians, nor can a Christian be obedient to God simply by believing in Christ. As a Christian, when I obey God's New Testament commandments, I benefit from it. When I am disobedient to God's New Testament commandments, it's all bad. However, I am never motivated to obey God out of a fear of losing my salvation or in order to get saved again. God knows what's best for me better than me or anyone else, so it only makes sense to obey Him for my benefit, for His purpose, and for the glory of Jesus Christ.

If you have never believed in the Lord Jesus Christ, here's your opportunity. Jesus Christ is the eternal Son of God, the only one of His kind. As God, He holds the universe together. As a human being, He came into the world to provide eter-

Wow, more than $3 million for Marty Block. That accounts for his numerous and clever cartoon TV ads that show a yellow school bus advancing on the Capitol dome in Sacramento with a voice-over that says, "Marty Block, an educator for Assembly."

And there's another one that says something like "Marty Block wants to build a college in Chula Vista. His opponent wants to build a power plant. Marty Block, an educator for Assembly." Slick.

I get the same type of response when I walk Gus, my 60-pound, blue-nose pit bull. "That's a beautiful dog," they'll say. People park and jump out of their cars, just to pet him. Then they laugh about his ears. "He looks like a giant French bulldog!" They all exclaim.

Then he gets tired and lies right on the ground and they laugh at that too. People will encourage their kids age 8 and under to pet him, even though the kids scream with fright. Or the kids will come running up and jump on his back--a bad move when you don't know a dog, and he tears up aluminum cans for sport.

But you've got to stop with the cute pig stories, Barb! You're leading me to believe that I should get one, and I've already got four large dogs living in a mobile home. It's killing me! And my husband is under orders to shoot me if I ever mention getting another pet again. We're broke from vet bills and we're just getting too old for this stuff altogether.

TRAVEL STORIES AND TIPS FROM OUR READERS

Whistler Inukshuk is but one feature of Whistler's eye candy.

Whistler. British Columbia

By Michelle Williams

The drive from Vancouver's airport up to Whistler Village is about two and a half hours of pure eye candy. Although I mention a drive, you really don't need a car in Whistler. This village is all about walking or biking or skating and family time.

It's easy to see how Whistler came to host the Winter Olympic Games in 2010. You can rent a bike for extreme mountain biking in the morning, then snowboard on the glacier in the afternoon. (Yes, you can still snowboard through August.) You can paddle by kayak down the River of Golden Dreams, tour the mountains in search of black bears, or take a Hummer to the Cedar Forest. There's hiking to be done on Whistler and Blackcomb Mountains...ziplining, museums, libraries, beaches, theaters, nightclubs, and shops.

When you come to Whistler, bring your spirit of adventure and your energy. The provincial liquor stores often give away free shots (I mean, samples) of various products to try. Be sure to wrap up your day with a visit to Sachi Sushi for their Agadashi Spicy Tofu dish.

Tecate, Mexico By Dominic DeGrazier

Originally a ranching community, Tecate began its brewery life in 1943. Alberto Aldrete took over a brick building previously used to produce vegetable oil in order to make his beer (which became the brand name you can already guess). The brewery jolted the town into becoming the small and somewhat industrial city it is today. But Tecate still evokes the Mexico of a bygone era.

Okay, so we visited the brewery, but what else? Continue on toward Ensenada from Tecate, via a route called La Ruta del Vino, and one can taste wines all the way to Ensenada. We only had a few hours, so this wasn't an option.

We parked our car 50 yards from the Mexican border...not in a parking lot but on the side of the road in a dirt patch. As we were the only individuals passing through the metal gates entering Tecate, my friend admitted, "This doesn't feel like a border town."

After walking four blocks from the border crossing, the town's Plaza Hidalgo came into view. This well-kept square is clearly the center of action. It's as if you jumped into the heart of the nation — into one of its small pueblos where locals rejoice in taking not one but five walks around the plaza each night. Time has stopped here...and no one is trying to sell you anything.

But my friend and I were there for a day, and we needed to figure out the town. After we visited the Tecate Brewery (open until 2 p.m. most days; not open on Sundays), we pressed on to find more.

"¿Donde estan los tacos mejores?" we asked ten locals. They all said, "¡Los Amigos!" It was there, on the corner of Libertad and Presidente Pascual Ortiz Rubio, that we found one of Tecate's charms.

With our stomachs full of tasty tacos, we began a search for liquid. The oldest bar in town, Bar Diana, is situated along the plaza. This "world-famous" bar is small and comforting — perfect for one Tecate Light. We then found out about another watering hole via locals' advice. At 3 p.m., a few blocks away, at Avenida Juarez #321, Rogavio's Bar and Restaurant had just opened for the day. Upon hearing that we were visitors to Tecate, the owner, Victor, went to his kitchen and returned with a taster plate of ceviche. "Pruebalo — este es nuestra comida mejor" ("Try this, it's our best dish").

The couple hours spent meandering through the streets, eating tacos, and talking with Victor (promising him that we'd return) turned into four. It was time to go, and we found ourselves back at the plaza enjoying our last beverage. A man in a cowboy hat and shiny boots circled the plaza numerous times in a matter of 30 minutes while we listened to a man play guitar on a nearby bench. He didn't ask for money; he just wanted to play. Well, that and he was obviously a bit inebriated. But this is Tecate, where you relish the relaxed vibe.

Tecate, you don't have a coastline, two-for-one specials, or other marketing ploys to pull in the tourists, but you have the mellow times. Please keep them, as we will be back. We'll keep good on our promise, Victor.

San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua

By Mark Robertson

On our first night at Pelican Eyes Hotel, my mom penciled us in for a midnight adventure tour to see turtles nesting on a beach one hour north of San Juan del Sur (near Playa Maderas). We boarded a boat/bus with two benches placed back-to-back.

According to our guide, the national park north of Playa Maderas was one of seven of its kind in the world — beaches where, on one crazy night, thousands of turtles nest. We walked closer to shore as dark, tearshaped shadows emerged and took shape before us.

The first turtle we found dug a hole with rubbery, shovel-like fins, tossing dirt onto our feet. She then turned away from the hole, releasing over 100 eggs. After, she tossed more sand into the hole and used her body weight to pack down the sand. We were only allowed to take pictures of their nests during the egg-laying, when mama tortuga is unaffected by visual or auditory stimulus.

I'm amazed that the mother goes through the nesting, given she will never know if one of her eggs is successful. Only one in five hatch, and only 2 percent of those reach maturity. On a 1.5-square-kilometer beach like the one we were at, only five or so babies will climb out of the nest, scuttle to the water, and swim to some kind of freedom. Only one in a thousand shelled swimmers will be successful.

One of the turtles came to the beach covered in a bioluminescent slime that lit up when the guide touched her back. Then we heard intermittent gunshots, and the guide quietly muttered, "Poachers." The Nicaraguan navy is supposed to be protecting the turtles.

When the sun goes down, the turtles hit the beach.

Another turtle came to the beach with a fish attached to her back. The guide got it into his mind to save the fish; however, the fish would not swim without accompaniment from his turtle. He decided that I would be his fish-saving assistant. The guide surmised (given the sucker-like cavity on the bottom) that the fish was a parasite, an underwater hitchhiker; our job, then, was to find another turtle returning to the sea. We found a turtle, but the fish would not attach to her.

"I guess he love your turtle, man," the guide told me. After waiting, the fish decided that the new turtle would be a suitable partner and set off for the deep with her.

The Floss Silk Tree, a conspicuous "autumn bloomer" here and there around San Diego, has been showing off its pinkish or purplish, hibiscus-like flowers for at least a month now. The broad, heavy trunks of this South American import, studded with fat, cone-shaped spines makes it easy to identify.

The Tawny Hues of the Black Oak Tree are just beginning to highlight the slopes of San Diego County's higher mountains. Named for the dark coloring of its bark, especially when wet, the black oak is the only deciduous oak native to the county. Associating with pines, firs, cedars, various evergreen oaks, and occasionally chaparral, the black oak lends a true autumn coloring to the Cuyamaca, Laguna, and Palomar mountains.

The Full Moon rises majestically in the east at around 5:50pm on Friday, October 22, some 15 minutes before the time of sunset. Rhyme & Verse Two Poems by Sandra Alcosser

What Makes the Grizzlies Dance

June and finally snow peas sweeten the Mission Valley. High behind numinous meadows ladybugs swarm, like huge lacquered fans from Hong Kong, like serrated skirts of blown poppies, whole mountains turn red. And in the blue penstemon grizzly bears swirl as they bat snags of color against their ragged mouths. Have you never wanted to spin like that on hairy, leathered feet, amid the swelling berries as you tasted a language of early summer — shaping lazy operatic vowels. cracking hard-shelled consonants like speckled insects between your teeth, have you never wanted to waltz the hills like a beast?

Spittle Bug

I watched an insect dive upside down in a crystal bowl. Magnified, it resembled a friend's identity crisis red eyes, amorphous body arched like a scorpion. Probing the water with an iris stem, I rescued the swimmer, helped it crawl to the vase lip, then complimented myself, as if the bug were my own invention. It rested on the flower's parchment, hyperventilating, while I went off to a day's work. When I returned it had climbed higher, slathering purple flesh with froth. Stalled in one spot like an indulgent head lost in shampoo, it had taken the sweet petals with it, rolling them in babble, till they were stunted and scabbed. It looked so harmless at first roiling in its own spit, I think I shall call it gossip bug.

I ANSWERED THE CALL

Church of the Nativity

Contact: 6309 El Apajo Road, Rancho Santa Fe; 858-756-1911; nativitycatholic.org

Membership: 1000 families

Pastor: Monsignor Lawrence Purcell

Pastor: Monsignor Lawrence

Age: 70

Born: Indio, California

Formation: University of San Diego-St. Francis Seminary, San Diego; Pontifical North American College, Rome, Italy

Years Ordained: 45

San Diego Reader: How long do you spend writing your sermon?

Monsignor Lawrence Purcell: Most of my time is spent trying to keep it short. It sounds curious, but the short homily — which is about eight to ten minutes — requires the most time to prepare. There's a direct correlation in my experience with the time spent in preparing and the length of the homily. The less time you spend preparing the longer the sermon and vice versa. So I try to keep it brief.

SDR: Can you think of a time when you gave a homily that completely flopped? MP: If anyone ever compliments me and says, "Gee, that was a good homily," I learned a long time ago never to ask them why because I get so depressed. I worked so hard on this and I expect them to say, "Gee, that was a good insight, a good story..." but they all say the same thing. When I ask them why it was good, they say, "Because I could

SDR: What is your main worry as a member of the clergy?

MP: As every Catholic priest is, I'm so sensitive to this embarrassment of the sex-abuse thing, and ultimately it's for the good, I'm sure, because there's a purification. If nature does that, when you clip back a rose bush, it grows much better. We all know that intellectually, but at the feeling level, it's painful to go through.... The world will be a better place in the Church and for priests, but in the meantime, it's no fun.

SDR: Where do you go when you die?

MP: Jesus used an expression in which He spoke about the Kingdom. He didn't mean to imply that it was a place. People look at the afterlife as a place. I don't look at it that way at all; I look upon it as thinking, loving and acting the way God does. That's what Jesus meant by the Kingdom. So, I don't look at it as a place we go to. I try to live very much in the moment. I just heard this one — the two most important days of the week are yesterday and tomorrow and you don't live your life yesterday or tomorrow, you live your life today. So, I'm not obsessed with sins of the past, nor am I obsessed with rewards in the future.

SDR: Is there a doctrine in the Catholic Church that states there is a heaven and a hell?

MP: Oh, sure, and I believe that doctrine. Jesus says that, too ... it does matter greatly what I do and don't do in this life. It affects me forever. That's what we believe. But it's just not a physical thing. If I'm a liar in this life, I'm going to be a liar and everything that goes with that forever.... I believe what the Catholic Church teaches, but I also believe that what is waiting for us is far beyond anything we could every imagine. I think that's wonderful.

SHEEP and GOATS

The Spirit of Pilarims by Lyman Beecher

"The government of God is the only government which will hold society, against depravity within and temptation without; and this it must do by the force of its own law written upon the heart. This is that unity of the Spirit and that bond of peace which can alone perpetuate national purity and tranquility — that law of universal and impartial love by which alone nations can be kept back from ruin. There is no safety for republics but in self-government, under the influence of a holy heart, swayed by the government of God. — from The Spirit of the Pilgrims.

Lyman Beecher (1775-1863)

was a Presbyterian minister and, serving as a sort of Billy Graham of his day, a preacher who rose to national prominence in part because of his efforts at cofounding the American Temperance Society. Beecher would father 13 children — many of whom would become famous in their own right — including abolitionists Harriet Beecher Stowe, author of Uncle Tom's Cabin, and Henry Ward Beecher. He is considered the leader of the Second Great Awakening which popularized revivalist meetings.

The Sahih Bukhari by Al-Bukhari

The Messenger of God said: "While a man was walking on the road, his thirst grew strong and he found a well and descended into it and drank and was leaving, when he saw a dog hanging out its tongue and licking the ground from thirst, and the man said, "This dog's thirst is like the thirst I had," and he went into the well again, filled his shoe with water, and held it between his teeth

(while he climbed out), and gave the dog to drink. And God approved of his act, and pardoned his sins." They said, "What, Messenger of God, shall we be rewarded for what we do for animals?" He replied, "Yes. There is a reward on every living creature." — from The Sahih Bukhari

Muhammad Ibn Ismail Ibn Ibrahim Ibn al-Mughirah Ibn Bardizbah al-Bukhari (aka Al-Bukhari) (810–870) was a well-known Persian Islamic clergyman and scholar best known for authoring the Sahih Bukhari, which Sunni Muslims consider the most faithful of all the hadith — or collections of traditional teachings — in Islam. After the Koran, the hadith are considered the most authoritative books in Muslim theology.

onnie Whiting Smith begins the Palomar College afternoon "concert hour" with a three-minute John Cage piece entitled "A Flower." The piece consists of melodic singing and the sound of Smith's knuckles and fingertips tapping on a closed piano. Although intended for performance by a separate vocalist and a pianist, she handles both.

Smith refers to herself as a "speaking percussionist" and explains that for the main event she will perform two John Cage pieces ("45' for a Speaker" and "27'10.554" for a Percussionist") simultaneously.

The audience numbers about 160 people — almost all of them students, in attendance to fulfill a requirement for their music-appreciation class.

A grid of over 100 spotlights hangs overhead, and 24 rectangular panels of gray, sound-absorbing material decorate the painted brick wall behind Smith.

Smith invites her audience to laugh if they find something funny and to enjoy the theatrical gestures Cage added as part of the score. She also advises the students not to overanalyze the performance.

"Even if you could understand all the words, it wouldn't make any sense," she says. Smith then takes her post behind the percussion stand, which has been outfitted with dangling cooking-pot lids, brass plates in the shapes of bells, a thumb piano, an empty champagne bottle, bongo drums, two tom-tom drums, a snare drum, a gong, a wine glass, and a pink-and-blue buzzer from the board game Taboo. She uses drumsticks, mallets, and her fingers and palms to create a series of plips, gongs, claps, and plops. Her voice, as she goes through her spoken lines, is at times loud and theatrical and sometimes but a whisper.

Because the lunchtime concert hour allows for only 45 minutes of performance, Smith begins at the 12-minute, 30-second mark in the score. In its entirety, her "realization" of the two John Cage pieces takes 51 minutes to perform.

"I have nothing to say, and I am saying it. And that is poetry," she says, using John Cage's words. Smith's performance is punctuated by a stretch of silence here, a yawn here, a cough — all written into the score. And at one point, Smith upends a water bottle into her mouth, gargling its contents before swallowing. A few audience members laugh.

During the performance, a Palomar College sophomore named Stina sits in the last row at the top of the carpeted risers, quietly organizing her three-ring binder. "I prefer traditional music, so it wasn't my favorite concert," she says.

John "Jack" Gallagher, who at 79 is likely the oldest audience member, has attended the Thursday Concert Hour for 20 years.

"I thought it was wonderful," he says of Smith's performance. "I don't think I could point to anything I learned. I just sort of sat back and let it flow over me."

After the concert, Smith invites audience members to come down to the stage, look over her instruments and the score. and ask questions. Several do. Many are especially excited to see the structure behind what appeared to be an improvisational performance.

Smith shows them the pages of the score, which indicates not only which note to play but when to

"In the speaking part," she points out to the onlookers, "what [Cage] has done is anything that's in italics is supposed to be whispered, and anytime it's in bold italics you're supposed to really project and be loud."

Smith confesses to her audience that the performance tired her out.

"In a hall like this, where it's pretty resonant, percussion sounds really speak, and the vocal line, less so. So I have to do a lot of work to project the vocals."

A small group of female students voiced their empathy. Then they tell her how funny they found the piece, especially the yawning and the gargling. "Hilarious!" they say.

Smith thanks them, offers a broad smile, and responds, "Completely useless. Really fun." .

Mental Eats

A reader recently asked whose food-writing I enjoy. Truth is, after so many hours of scribbling food prose, I'm totally full — when I hit the pillow I want mainly mysteries — Andy Dalziel, Inspector Wexford Dave Robicheaux, or Stephanie Plum — not food porn. But the current crop of culinary books furnished some good reasons to read.

R.W. Apple Jr.: Far Flung and Well Fed, St. Martin's Press, hardbound, 432 pp., $26.99.

After enjoying some of the late (2009) R.W. "Johnny" Apple's essays over the years in the New York Times, I bought his final book of collected essays and realized that Far Flung will occupy a permanent position on my headboard, to retaste in bedtime bites before plunging into the dark side of prose. Apple's is by far the best in this barrel of books. (This, and all but the Terra cookbook, are available on Amazon.com at a discount.)

If Anthony Bourdain's Cook's Tour (his more recent book is reviewed below) took us dining around the globe with a macho egomaniac, Apple's essays offer a series of peripatetic dinners with one of the most charming, entertaining raconteurs and awesomely knowledgeable eaters on the planet. I wanted his book to go on forever. (Doubtless, Mr. Apple did, too, but all men are mortal.) He is only a hair less adventurous an eater and traveler than Bourdain: he covered numerous wars for his newspaper, and war correspondents can't be cowards.

He goes everywhere, eats nearly everything (and so, generally, does his delightful wife — so much for culinary machismo). No food snob, he delves deep into the catching and smoking of seafood, the making of fine cheeses and wines, the seasoning of Southern sausage patties, the growing of Italian vegetables, etc. I wish I'd had this book when I traveled in India: he found the best dosai in Kerala's funky Ernakulam (which I didn't, during the whole torpid week I spent there). There's even a local angle, or angler: In a chapter on the bluefin tuna of Baja, our own professor Sam Popkin of UCSD makes an appearance.

You'll learn what's so great about Dover sole, what French three-star Michelin restaurants look like inside (ugly!), and why you can't get the best French cheeses here. (Our government, which barely blinks at E. coli and salmonella from American agribusiness, won't allow raw-milk cheeses into the U.S., despite Western Europe's stronger, better-enforced food-safety laws.)

The book also includes a few intriguing recipes, including two from the legendary Maison Troisgros (lamb rack and salmon), both made with readily available ingredients and easy techniques. There are more exotic flavors (such as shrimp in coconut milk from Brazil's Bahia) and some highly regional American dishes.

This is all about joyous learning from mentally eating with a convivial, erudite tablemate whose company and menu choices you're sure to cherish.

Anthony Bourdain: Medium Raw: A Bloody Valentine to the World of Food and the People Who Cook, Harper Collins, 304 pp., hardbound, $26.99.

Bourdain's the one with the best-seller, of course. The book is essentially reality TV in print — brutal, boastful, macho. Bourdain, less substance-

The only 24/7 restaurant in Downtown

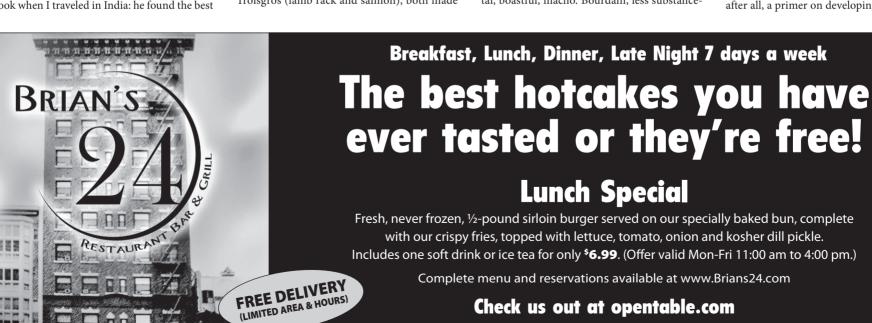

828 Sixth Avenue, between E and F Streets in the Gaslamp 619-702-8410

abusing than in his Kitchen Confidential days, has himself become a TV personality, which somehow, amazingly, seems to have swelled his ego! He loves dropping names of big-time chef buddies, but even more, dissing chefs outside his personal circle. (What could be more classically narcissistic than building up your ego by trashing somebody else's? Although I admit to a scooch of envy-driven schadenfreude when he criticizes my old friend Alice Waters — a beautiful, uppermiddle-class blonde — for her often-naïve idealism and born-to-the-manor privilege.)

This is a fast, fun, snarky read, but in the best chapters, Bourdain plunges into serious journalism. One chapter concentrates on David Chang, prickly Korean chef of the celebrated Momofuku. And then Bourdain discovers an unsung artisan in the fish-cutting room in the bowels of Le Bernardin (inarguably the best seafood restaurant in America). There, he spends a morning with its single fish-cutter, a native of the Dominican Republic named Justo Thomas. Between 6:00 a.m. and noon. Thomas dismembers and prepares 700 pounds of whole, untrimmed, ungutted fish, each species according to its nature, and mostly creating perfect, uniform fillets. There's even a happy ending. Staffers aren't allowed to eat at Le Bernardin, but Bourdain gets chef-owner Eric Ripert's permission to treat Thomas to a full tasting dinner there. Dressed in his best suit, Justo finally gets to delight in the fruits of his labor, as cooked by an extraordinary chef. To a curious eater, this chapter justifies the price of the book: You look at restaurant fish with fresh eyes.

Melanie Rehak: Eating for Beginners: An Education in the Pleasures of Food from Chefs, Farmers, and One Picky Kid, Houghton Mifflin Harcourt, 288 pp., hardbound, $25.

RESTAURANTS

the finer things or the exotic things — that's more Apple's purview. The plot: A young bo-bo (bourgeois bohemian) mom in a nice New York neighborhood with a picky-eater toddler worries about what to cook and where to buy it (e.g., local nonorganic versus nonlocavore organic? farmers' market versus supermarket?). In the early chapters, I found myself annoyed by her serene sense of entitlement. Has the author once stepped into a bodega in Spanish Harlem or the South Bronx? Has she ever ventured into anything like our own misnamed farmers' market in Barrio Logan (I call it the "used-vegetable market") or smelled the "catch" at some of the little old-fish stores along its edge? Organic food in poorer neighborhoods? How about fresh food?

The "beginner" learning to eat is her rug rat, who rejects most foods. So (don't ask me about the logic), Mom takes a kitchen job at a cozy nearby restaurant serving dishes made from local, sustainably grown ingredients. The vibes are kindly and nurturant (opposite of Bourdain's old Les Halles) as the staff and owners gradually teach her the skills of all the cooking stations. From there, she expands her horizons by taking strenuous day jobs with the restaurant's various suppliers - organic farms, cheesemakers, merciful meatranchers, sustainable-catch fishermen, et al. These chapters are pretty interesting (although Apple's book covers some of the same ground with more sparkle and sophistication, minus the personal perspiration).

The book includes several attractive recipes, including

Dine-in only. 5-item minimum order per party. Selected items only.

Sushi - Tempura - Teriyaki - Noodles

starchless crab cakes bound by eggs. But there's also solid information framed as firstperson mini-adventures in the pursuit of healthy food. The central message reveals why organic produce is more expensive than factory produce — it's not just a nasty scheme by Whole Paycheck to pick your pockets. The political infrastructure (think: senators of both parties collecting huge contributions to their reelection campaigns) supports agribiz with favorable laws, tax breaks, rare and lax inspections, and monetary subsidies that we pay for with our taxes. Agribiz food is initially cheaper, but we pay in other ways (air and soil pollution, chemical residues in our waters, etc., and E. coli and salmonella). In fact, we pay through the nose for the agri-billionaires to feed us, just not directly at the cash register.

Tom Standage: An Edible History of Humanity, Walker & Company, 288 pp., $16, paperback.

If you avoided anthropology and history in college in favor of fashionable psych or gutcourse sociology, this book offers the fun of an ungraded elective on humanity's development, centering on food in human life from the Neolithic to the now. It's a rich route into the story of humankind, because nothing matters so much as food. What we eat and how we get it plays a central role in shaping our societies, whether we're nomadic Kung tribesmen of the Kalahari or urban sophisticates glued to the Food Channel while gobbling Domino's pizza.

In Standage's account, hunting and gathering was humankind's Eden, a life of relative leisure in egalitarian,

Low cholesterol, low fat, no MSG

1025 Carlsbad Village Drive

communal social structures with shared food and minimal personal possessions. Agriculture brought our fall into a life east of Eden, of perpetual labor and anxiety. All too soon, surplus crops bred personal property, then wretchedly unequal social and gender roles, with leaders, warlords, kings, hierarchies, husbands, harems — plus cities and specialized artisans and artists, giving rise to the deadly vices of shoe-shopping and pedicures. Apparently, along with the stability it brings, surplus food breeds greed (and often slavery and war) the way rats breed fleas. A few chapters later, we're into the Medieval spice routes to Asia, and eventually, the hostility between Christians and Muslims drawn from their spice-route rivalry - and, finally, some chapters later, life as it is today.

You'll learn that the precious spices (and later, hot peppers from the Americas) were not, as the old canard says, employed to cover up the taste of rotten meat (nothing can do that!) but rather, to rub on the surfaces of meat to preserve it from rot. You'll also discover that hot-water-bath preserving and canning in metal are products of the Napoleonic Wars. But it's not all triviacontest material: The book is a slow thrust through the ages to show us how food took us to where we are.

I do have a few carps, of course, especially in paleoanthropology. For instance, the author says that in nomadic hunting societies, where everybody had to move on foot to follow the game supply, women refrained from childbearing before a move. Did they refrain by using the pill or the IUD? Infanticide was one option, but almost all societies have from animal hide to fair-trade organic Pima cotton) to carry babies on moms' backs. Heavily pregnant women, toddlers, and tribal elders would be much more trouble on a trek (perhaps they were dragged on humandrawn sledges?). So, don't take this book as a literal Bible of history with every aspect considered — just enjoy it as a survey course, larded with delicious food for thought.

From Terra's Table, Jeff Rossman, Chefs Press $32.95, 208 pp., hardbound. Available from chefspress.com or at Terra Restaurant, across the street from Trader Joe's in Hillcrest.

I originally intended to cover only food-writing rather than cookbooks, but then Jeff Rossman, chef-owner of the charming Terra Restaurant in Hillcrest, came out with a cookbook just in time for my deadline. (Official publication date is early November.)

Rossman's aim is to help you "shop seasonally, cook simply, and taste the food that is grown near your home." In light of the farm-to-fork movement, many Californians have changed the order of a typical shopping trip: Instead of choosing meats first, we look for the best produce items and then choose proteins. The cookbook encourages this new pattern. It's organized in chapters according to specific produce (from avocados to root vegetables to vines, then various types of fruits) and finally, an appendix of resources. Almost anything seasonal that you find at the neighborhood farmers' market, Whole Foods, Trader Joe's, or even in the supermarket produce bins is likely to occupy a spot here with a few tasty recipes, with or without

Many chef cookbooks are nutsy (unless the chef has a normal human collaborating with recipe-testing, etc.) because restaurant kitchen routines and recipe quantities are so different from those used at home. Happily, Rossman's recipes are down-to-earth, accompanied by Paul Body's savory photos. I didn't have a chance before deadline to try out any of the dishes personally, but I trust my gimlet eye as an ex-cookbook writer and cookbook consultant to spot any strange giraffes in the backyard. I do wish that fewer recipes served six to eight. It's the old-style standard for cookbooks, but you can't hold a dinner party every night, and these portions no longer reflect today's smaller families. The only serious recipe worries I found involved two preparations for duck, both roasted "hands off" for three hours at 350 degrees, which sounds to me like a recipe for fatty skin and overcooked breast, unless your duck is the size of a Churkendoose. (Most good cooks start off searing duck at about 425° for 20 minutes to render some of the subcutaneous fat and start crisping the skin; then you pour off the rendered fat to avoid a grease fire in the oven and lower the heat, turning the bird at least once, roasting about two hours for a fourpound Muscovy or Moularde.) With the alluring recipe for duck with fruited bread pudding, the steps are all in the wrong order — Rossman first makes the pudding, then starts the stock for the sauce, then roasts the bird. Ouch! First (even a day ahead) should come the stock, then assembling the bread pudding (also a do-ahead possibility), then roasting the duck, and finally baking the pudding alongside the bird; it can cool down a bit to serving temperature as the done duck rests.

A series of prefaces on ingredients and techniques will help new cooks get started, although some instructions are scanty (e.g., in "deglazing," Rossman doesn't mention stirring with a wooden spoon to scrape up the solids). And, given all the wonderful veggie recipes here, I wish he'd included a full recipe for vegetable stock: one can't just guess which veggies to use. A few ingredients (e.g., lemon avocado oil) are hard to find, and when it comes to achiote paste, a popular Latin ingredient bottled by Goya, Rossman sends readers up to Linda Vista for a product easily found in the central city's neighborhood groceries from North Park on south.

So far, you've heard all my reservations but not enough praise. Most of the recipes in this book sound delicious, and the great majority are easy to shop for and to cook. I like the briefings on beers and wines (and the recipe for crème fraîche, which is hard to find locally). I very much like the wine and beer suggestions with each recipe, including much good local hooch. And I totally approve the use of gyoza or wonton wrappers for homemade ravioli, including Terra's famous Pumpkin Ravioli and the delicate Spring Onion Ravioli. Some top French chefs in America employ this wonderful shortcut — why not you and I?

Above all, if you're one of Terra Restaurant's devotees or if you just prefer eating locally and seasonally whenever possible, you'll probably enjoy sampling the goodies you'll cook from these mainly easy recipes, with their distinctive emphasis on our region's best, freshest ingredients. ■

Easy to Love

"We've been here in this building since the 1940s... and in Little Italy since 1933."

ou can try to love this part of town, but it's hard.

I'm at First and Ash. Land of monthly-stay hotels and parking lots. Just a stone's throw from City Hall and its concourse, the Family Court, and Sempra Energy's skyscraper. It feels kinda lost here, just beyond the reach of downtown and Bankers' Gulch (aka B Street).

And yet, if you look hard, history's talking to you. Like, right now, I'm standing on a piece of sidewalk near the Reiss Hotel where concrete contractor Mr. O.E. Winders signed his moniker, along with the date he finished pouring the cement along this stretch of sidewalk: December 1895 — 1895! A century plus 15 years ago. How many feet have walked on his name since?

And across the road, there's that ancient liquor store. The sign looks like it reads "Nixon." Then I see it's "Mixon." Mixon Liquor. And Deli. There are still iron grilles across the deli side's windows.

But, heck, it says "Open." Which is good. 'Cause it's 8:00 in the morning and I'm starving. I cross over First Avenue. It's a big ol' two-story stand-alone. Mustard-colored stucco walls and brick with blue awnings. Living quarters upstairs. I walk in through the liquor-store area. Mostly hard liquor, but near the back there's a guy standing at a counter chopping up vegetables next to a passage that runs through to the deli side.

"Deli open?" I ask.

"Sure, we just don't open the front till around ten," he says. Oh, yeah. You know the lunch crowd has to be their main thing. But the wall menu says they have breakfast dishes, too. It's pretty simple: muffin or bagel with egg and cheese, $3.69 (you can add sausage, bacon, or cream cheese for 60 cents each). Egg burritos are $3.99, with three items from a list that includes cheese, pepperoncini, bacon, sausage, mushrooms. Man, these are great prices. Scrambled egg with bacon or sausage plus toast also run $3.99.

That's the one I go for — the scrambled-egg dish. I go sit at one of the six tables in this section. Seems like I'm surrounded by neon beer signs: "Bud Bowl, San Diego 2003." "Budweiser, S.I. Swimsuit." The tables are blond wood and gray Formica, and the chairs are solid wood. About a dozen colorfully shaded Tiffany-style lights fight the gloom. I'm the only person here, but the kitchen is chopping away.

Pretty soon, a lady named Momo brings me my breakfast. Yes, in a polystyrene box, but no worries...there's plenty of scrambled eggs, four slices of buttered wheat toast, and five slices of bacon. Good deal. I sprinkle a couple of packets of pepper on the eggs and chow in with the plastic fork and knife. Plus I get a small coffee — Juan the manager lets me have a refill — all tossed into the price. "We've been here in this building since the 1940s," he says. "And before that, in Little Italy since 1933. Grandpa Mixon got San Diego's second liquor license after Prohibition ended. Only the Waterfront Bar was ahead. It's been four generations now. Papa Joe created the deli in 1974. His son Steve took over in 1994, and now Steve's nephew Nick is working his way into the job."

Wow, 77 years, four generations. I munch through the eggs and toast and those rashers of bacon, then get up to go. I scan the big wall menu. "So, which sandwiches are the most popular?"

Juan says people like the build-your-own idea. You pick from among a bunch of meats like roast beef, pastrami, salami, tuna salad, and chicken salad and cheeses like provolone, Swiss, or pepper jack, add them to the mayo, mustard, lettuce, tomato, onion, and pickle that come with the deal, and either make yourself a sixounce sandwich ($6.49), a four-ounce ($5.49), or a half sandwich ($3.49). Half sandwich with a bowl of soup costs $6.69.

All you can eat at the salad bar runs $6.99. Plus, they have a dozen featured sandwiches, such as the Bluebird (turkey, bacon, blue cheese, $5.79); the BLT, with six slices of bacon ($5.25); and the Bronx Cheer (corned beef and Swiss on rve, $5.59).

"Actually, the most popular is probably the 'Construction," says Juan. "Turkey, cheddar, avocado, bacon, sprouts, tomato, and mayo, for $6.49."

Me, I'm happy to pay $4.34 for what was a generous chunk of breakfast and plenty of coffee.

But, next day, I can't resist coming back around midday, and, man, what a difference. Momo is running 'round taking orders. Juan and his guys are a blur at the cutting boards. The place is packed with people — office workers, lawyers, DAs, I'm betting, what with that Family Court nearby, and city workers. "You see the size of those sandwiches?" says this guy in a hard hat. "That's why everybody comes here."

I order the Construction. Mmm...plenty of avo, bacon, and turkey, and they didn't skimp on the mayo. It fills me totally.

I look across the road for the ghost of Mr. Winders. Sure he'd have appreciated a sandwich after long days laying down his concrete sidewalk. 'Specially with all those horses and buggies to dodge, navigating the mud and dust of First Avenue

Alpine

Mediterraneo 1347 Tavern Rd., Alpine, 619-445-9902. Tasteful, ambitious little trattoria with scenic patio dining. The pizzas are outstanding with airy, silken crusts. Entrées change with the seasons. Desserts are big and sweet. Expensive.

Baja

From the United States use the prefix 011-52 when calling Mexico.

Big Boy Restaurant Boulevard Agua Caliente #9892, Tijuana, 664-686-3788. Besides having excellent Mexican-American food and big gringo breakfasts, this Big Boy knockoff draws a cross-section of Baja's big shots. Open 24 hours. Inexpensive.

La Espadaña Avenida Sanchez Taboada #10813, Tijuana, 664-634-1488. This place does great oven-cooked leg of lamb, tasting like wine, garlic, and herbs, but the owners insist it's just Tecate lamb baked slowly in its juices with oregano. Terrific flamegrilled beefsteaks, too. Moderate.

Mercado Sobre Ruedas Colonia Lucio Blanco (from Tijuana, on toll road, take first Rosarito exit: turn left at third), Rosarito. This huge flea market materializes every Sunday (morning to mid-afternoon); food booths offer a carnival of authentic dishes like barbecued mutton, savory Jalisco-style goat stew, street tacos. Rock-bottom prices; cash only.

El Rincón del Oso Mercado Hidalgo, Calle Victoria #47, Tijuana. Kid for breakfast? You scoop the juices and meat into a hot corn tortilla, adding cilantro, lime, grated onions, and a splash of salsa. It's meaty, slightly rich, almost gamey — like deer or buf-

El Rodeo Boulevard Salinas #1647. Tijuana, 664-686-5640. Steak haven with Old West decor. Entrée price includes soup of roast beef juices, beans, a quesadilla, a salad, two botana (snack) plates, and a beef-liver medley with any cut of steak you want. Or try the parrillada, a multi-meat BBQ sizzling on a tabletop grill. Inexpensive to low-moderate.

Tacos el Francés Paseo de Plavas de Tijuana #2553, Tijuana. Cisco the cook flaps the cloth open, pulls a tongue out, plonks it on the chopping block. Chop chop chop. Your first cow-tongue quesadilla? Inexpensive.

Vallarta Natural Boulevard Agua Caliente #1252 (just before El Toreo de Tijuana), Tijuana, 664-686-1560. Smoke-free, lacto-ovo-vegetarian haven, making their own sov hash, breads, salsas, and wheatgluten-free fake meats. Wonderful juices, breakfast scrambles, excellent soups like the filling caldo Tlalpaño. Inexpensive.

Banker's Hill

Bertrand at Mister A's 2550 Fifth Ave., 12th floor, Banker's Hill, 619-239-1377. Bertrand Hug's airy, open eatery offers a panoramic city view with a casual-chic, romantic ambience and fine modern French cuisine. Expensive.

Inn at the Park 3615 Fifth Ave., Banker's Hill, 619-291-0999. Despite a touch of mango here, chipotle there it's the nice, conservative, meat-andpotatoes comfort food that the regulars here prefer. Wilder hits include calamari fritto misto, duck breast, and coconut-lime crème brûlée. Moderate.

Bonita

Romesco 4346 Bonita Rd., Bonita, 619-475-8627, Sophisticated Mexican food, including smoked marlin carpaccio, grilled duck breast, escolar. The whole menu is worth exploring. full of surprising treats. Moderate to

Carlsbad

Armenian Café 3126 Carlsbad shish kebab is the house specialty, but even better are the owner's mom's kibbe (nut-filled lamb meatball) and rosewater-scented kashta lea dessert. Lovely elevated patio. Moderate-plus.

California Bistro 7100 Four Seasons Point, Carlsbad, 760-603-6868. Fresh California cuisine in a luxurious hotel dining room. Moderate to expensive.

Nozomi 3050 Pio Pico Dr., Carlsbad, 760-729-7877. Gorgeous Japanese inn-style premises with food ranging from simple nigiri-zushi to party rolls to fusion grazing dishes and entrées (including genuine Wagyu beef) and back to Japanese standards. Don't miss the ankimo (monkfish liver pâté). Moderate to expensive.

Carmel Valley

Ruth's Chris Steak House 11582 El Camino Real, Carmel Valley, 858-755-1454 Also 1355 N Harbor Dr., Downtown, 619-233-1422. Flashcooked steaks of USDA Prime, topped with butter and parsley, are the hallmark of this chain. Side dishes are à la carte. The broiled tomatoes are a delight. Very expensive.

Chula Vista

D'Lish Pizza and Pasta 386 E. H St., Chula Vista, 619-585-1371. This chain prides itself on its Italian/ California pastas, pizzas, and salads. Now it's adding marinated flank steak and a rib eye to the "bistro entrées."

Galley at the Marina 550 Marina Parkway, Chula Vista, 619-422-5714. The tasty happy-hour specials make a visit worth the trip: Have a 1/2-pound hamburger with french fries, chicken Caesar salad with sourdough toast, or a filet mignon steak plate with steak fries. Inexpensive.

Village Club Card Room 429 Broadway, Chula Vista, 619-425-3333. Down-home dishes like grilled chicken breast sandwich, spaghetti with meatballs, or garlic shrimp with fried rice and egg, plus Chinese dishes including Kung Pao beef or chicken, Mongolian beef, and a good wonton soup with noodles. Inexpensive.

City Heights

African Spice Restaurant 4348 54th St., City Heights, 619-342-5945. Fascinating Somalian food, just seven dollars — as much rice, salad, spaghetti, goat meat, beef, chicken (lamb and tilapia when available) as you can fit in your polystyrene box, along with a banana to break up and mix in, Somali-style. Inexpensive.

Bale French Sandwich Shop 4879 University Ave., City Heights, 619-283-4352. The Vietnamese do French baguette sandwiches better than the French — with some spicy Asian touches. Inexpensive.

Taste of Africa Cuisine 5241 University Ave., City Heights, 619-583-5788. At this gathering place for Somalis, the cuisine combines African, Italian, Arab, and Indian influences, emphasizing fish, lamb, and goat meat. Start with a fadareshin, a mixed sampler plate of meats, spaghetti, rice, and veggies. Inexpensive.

College Area

Sala Thai 6161 El Cajon Bl., College Area, 619-229-9050. Classy atmosphere, tame spicing. You'll have to ask for "hot." Chicken mussaman is delicious with taste-boosters like kaf-fir lime leaves. Health treat: som tum, green papaya salad. Inexpensive.

State Street Grill 5131 College Ave., College Area, 619-286-4700. Offcampus eatery for students who need a break from cafeteria fare. This place has similar prices but with more panache, a slightly continental feel. All-day breakfasts, arty salads, decent sushi. Try the Lollipop sushi roll. Inexpensive.

Coronado

1500 Ocean 1500 Orange Ave., Coronado, 619-522-8490. Modern Cal cuisine with a blissful bay view and superb ingredients, so finely cooked you'll be thrilled to eat your veggies. Expensive.

Café 1134 1134 Orange Ave., Coronado, 619-437-1134. Interesting omelets, salads, and panini (e.g., roast beef and bleu-cheese crumbles) from a local reincarnation of a Left Bank café to hang out, chat, think deep thoughts. Inexpensive.

Candelas on the Bay 1201 First St., Coronado, 619-435-4900. Same serious Mex cuisine as the downtown branch in blissful bayside surroundings. with great happy-hour grazing bargains in the bar. Otherwise expensive Costa Azul 1031 Orange Ave., Coronado, 619-435-3525. people-watching on the patio, with tasty Mexican seafood like coconut crunchy shrimp, swordfish tacos, lobster burritos. Higher priced: flat-iron steak with Gorgonzola, baby back ribs, garlic Mexican shrimp. Inexpensive to expensive.

The Fish Company Plus 1007 C Ave., Coronado, 619-435-3945. Think sushi, and you'll do well here. The cooks are from Thailand, but they've got Japan down nicely. This attractive place is next to the Swaddee Thai eatery — no coincidence.

Spiro's Gyros 1201 First St., Coronado, 619-435-1225. Watch the sunset sipping Greek wines. Low prices keep Spiro's popular with locals and tourists. Try moussaka or souvlaki chicken, marinated in tzatziki sauce, served with tomatoes, onions, and pita bread. Inexpensive.

Swaddee Thai 1001 C Ave., Coronado, 619-435-8110. An island of serenity, with gentle dishes cooked with care. The complex but soothing coconut-chicken soup can wash away all woes, and the calamari in seafood arrays is knife-scored to achieve sheer tenderness. Inexpensive to moderate.

Del Mar

Le Bambou 2634 Del Mar Heights Rd., Del Mar, 858-259-8138. No mere "pho joint," this gracious restaurant serves exquisite versions of the sophisticated Vietnamese dishes of prewar Saigon. Low-moderate.

Jake's Del Mar Waterfront Grill 1660 Coast Bl., Del Mar, 858-755-2002. Surf 'n' turf by the sea, with a patio overlooking the waves. Menu offers seafood with fusion-y touches, Prime or Choice steaks. Crabby Dungeness crab cake appetizer makes a whole lunch. Lunch and Sunday brunch moderate, dinner expensive.

Milton's Deli 2660 Via de la Valle, Del Mar, 858-792-2225. Jewish deli goes multiethnic. Stuff yourself with stuffed cabbage, overstuffed deli sandwiches, crisp-skinned cheese blintzewatzen brei, hot brisket with latkes — or chicken-fried steak, if that's your bag. Inexpensive to low-moderate.

Star of India 3860 Valley Centre Dr., Del Mar, 858-792-1111. Also 423 F St., Downtown, 619-234-8000. The lunch buffet can lead you by the nose into Punjabi food. Pick among vegetable pakora fritters, eggplant with potatoes, chicken curry masala, palak paneer (spinach with curry). Inexpensive to moderate.

Downtown

Bay Café 1050 N. Harbor Dr., Downtown, 619-595-1083. If famished at the ferry landing, you can eat decent burgers, good clam chowder, or other basic fare in the bare-bone interior, or tote it upstairs to a serene bay-view terrace. Inexpensive.

Blue Point 565 Fifth Ave., Downtown, 619-233-6623. In a handsome, plushy, noisy dining room, pristine seafood and Prime-grade steaks and chops. Expensive.

Brian's 24 828 Sixth Ave., Downtown, 619-702-8410. Open 24/7, it has a fabulous peanut butter burger with bacon. Plus a gothic bar with Joan Crawford's heel marks denting it where she danced. And bargain breakfast and lunch specials. Inexpensive to moderate.

Ciro's Pizzeria 534 Market St., Downtown, 619-696-0405. This small pizza parlor has that "back East" feel about it: old-time photos of baseball fields, New York City. Best combo: chicken bacon pesto. Inexpensive.

Dobson's 956 Broadway Circle, Downtown, 619-231-6771. Civilized oasis for tasty "retro" favorites, popular for pre- or post-theater grazing, including lush mussel bisque, creamy crab hash, perfect fried-oyster salad, plus heavy pastas, grilled meats. Moderate to expensive.

Dublin Square 554 Fourth Ave., Downtown, 619-239-5818. The pub was handcrafted in Waterford, shipped over, and installed (by Irish craftsmen) in the Gaslamp. There's a fine corned beef and cabbage, plus Guinness beef stew, shepherd's pie (made with ground beef), steaks, and grilled fish. Moderate.

Grant Grill 326 Broadway, Downtown, 619-744-2077. Now thoroughly Southern Californian (although they did resurrect the fabled mock turtle soup) with nods to the "slow food" movement. Well-raised meats, local produce. Very expensive.

Island Prime 880 Harbor Island Dr., Downtown, 619-298-6802. Amazing bay-view venue with delicious steaks and roast beefs, plus chef Deborah Scott's creative appetizers and sides like shaved corn with black truffle and a seared ahi stack. Very expensive.

Kansas City Barbecue 600 W. Harbor Dr., Downtown, 619-231-9680. The beef and pork ribs (or rib tips or chicken breast) are smoky, cooked over an oak-fueled fire, although some diners complain of toughness. Good happy-hour deals. Inexpensive to moderate.

Sixth Avenue Bistro 1165 Sixth Ave., Downtown, 619-239-4194. Credible Creole cooking in airy café. Sandwiches include an outstanding oyster po' boy (big juicy oysters, light batter) and a fine, fully packed approximation of a muffaletta. The jambalaya is okay, too. Inexpensive.

East Village

Basic Urban Kitchen and Bar 410 Tenth Ave., East Village, 619-531-8869. Hipster atmosphere, late-night hours, and thin-crust Connecticut pizzas, which include toppings like mashed potato with bacon and cheese, or Little Neck clams. Inexpensive.

Café Chloe 721 Ninth Ave., East Village, 619-232-3242. Parisian atmosphere, creative cooking, e.g., breakfast's poached eggs with sage-truffle beurre blanc. Nightly specials keep the menu interesting, and desserts are worth every calorie. Beverages include lavender lemonade, root beers, an intelligent wine list. Moderate.

Cowboy Star Restaurant and Butcher Shop 640 Tenth Ave., East Village, 619-450-5880. A Western-themed restaurant specializing in great steaks and game meats, where the food is as good as the decor, and the decor is more fun than a rodeo clown. Expensive.

The Mission 1250 J St., East Village, 619-232-7662. Also 2801 University Ave., North Park, 619-220-8992. Eco-conscious big breakfasts and Chino-Latino lunches in arty surroundings are halfway between health nut and old-time diner fare. Great eye-opener: bounteous chicken-apple sausage and egg platter. Inexpensive.

Salad Style 807 F St., East Village, 619-255-6731. Original salad concoctions for lunch include Scott's Grilled Skirt Steak, with organic greens, tomatoes, smoky mushrooms, hearts of palm, bleu cheese, red meat. The Totally Vegan, a golden volcano of quinoa and snowy tofu slabs, should be in a gallery. Inexpensive to moderate.

El Caion

Chen's Golden Palace 530 N. 2nd St., El Cajon, 619-442-2541. A Lao-Chinese family serves mostly basic Chinese cuisine, plus a few Southeast Asian dishes like Thai spicy shrimp noodles — and good fish 'n' chips. Inexpensive.

Palms Family Restaurant 1255 E. Main St., El Cajon. Traditional Middle Eastern eatery and social center for Iraqis, Syrians. Which means excellent food, especially appetizers like eggplant and tabbouleh. Mideast videos. Inexpensive.

Tyler's Taste of Texas 576 N. 2nd St., El Cajon, 619-444-9295. Texas-style barbecue (chicken, beef, pork, and sausage), smoky but uneven in texture. Good fried catfish, fried green tomatoes, ham breakfast. Open 24 hours. Inexpensive to low-moderate.

Encinitas

El Callejon Restaurant 345 S. Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-634-2793. Great atmosphere in a hacienda with multiple rooms and patio spaces, serving zesty mainland Mexican cooking with unusual dishes like shrimp zarandeados with sauce of chiles, beef in cilantro sauce, and a parrillada (mixed grill) to serve two. Moderate.

Juanita's Taco Shop Estilo Tepatitlán 290 N. Coast Hwy. 101, Encinitas, 760-943-9612. Also 248 Main St., Vista, 760-758-4531. The food's cooked in the style of Tepatitlán, a small city near Guadalajara. Their specialty is carnitas — which Juanita's does up by the plate or by the pound. Open late weekends. Inexpensive.

Kealani's 137 W. D St., Encinitas, 760-942-5642. At any hour the food is Hawaiian "plate lunch" — two scoops of short-grain rice, mild house-made macaroni salad, and a choice of authentic "grines." Don't miss the outstanding kalua pig — zesty, smoky shreds of *imu*style roast pork. Inexpensive.

The Original 101 Diner 552 First St., Encinitas, 760-753-2123. The down-home cooking includes all-day breakfast ranging from really cheap biscuits and sausage gravy to a pretty cheap top-sirloin steak and eggs. A bacon-cheddar burger with fruit is a good surprise combo, or try spinach salad. Inexpensive.

Vigilucci's Ristorante & Pizzeria 505 S. Coast Highway 101, Encinitas, 760-942-7332. Also in Carlsbad, Coronado, Oceanside, and La Jolla. Freshness, simplicity, and savvy seasoning — that's Italian. The pastas are luscious (try the comforting cannelloni), the staff spirited. Pastas moderate, entrées expensive.

Escondido

Centre City Café 2680 S. Escondido Bl., Escondido, 760-489-6011. Classic American fare, including exemplary chicken-fried steak with a crackly crust and smooth, pepper cream gravy. USDA Choice steaks offered at rock-bottom prices. Huge portions, low prices.

O-Nami North County Fair, 240 E. Via Rancho Parkway, Escondido, 760-738-7522. Also Mission Valley Center, 1640 Camino del Rio North, 619-295-9774. These Japanese buffets offer fresh, artful dishes, including sunomono (cucumber salad), teriyakis, sashimis, and sushi rolls. Among the winners are the California roll, tempura shrimp, guacamole roll, veggies, green tea ice cream. Moderate.

San Diego Artisan Bakers
1551 S. Escondido Bl., Escondido, 760-740-5963. Recipes are from all of Europe for breads with great textures and depths of flavor. A treat: breakfast on the front porch with cup of espresso and scones. Inexpensive.

Sand Crab Café 2229 Micro Pl., Escondido, 760-480-2722. Entrées include several crab-bucket combos, cooked in a well-seasoned boil with corn, potatoes, and spicy Louisiana sausage. Margarine's the dip, but you can BYO butter and they'll melt it. Inexpensive to moderate.

Golden Hill

Krakatoa 1128 25th St., Golden Hill, 619-230-0272. Ghost-ridden coffee house and neighborhood hangout offers garden seating and light eating, mainly breakfast or lunch sandwiches named after the volcanoes of the world (get it?). Inexpensive.

Hillcrest

Arrivederci 3845 Fourth St., Hillcrest, 619-299-6282. A narrow, ever-crowded room with a long menu offering a familiar regional Italian potpourri, including reliable veal in a brandy cream sauce, "straw and hay" pesto pasta, shellfish pasta. Moderate.

Baja Betty's 1421 University Ave., Hillcrest, 619-269-8510. Extensive cocktail, margarita, and tequila list and regular Cal-Mex food in a lively atmosphere. Inexpensive to moderate.

The Big Easy 127 University Ave., Hillcrest, 619-294-3279. Revisionist Cajun, Creole, and Southern cuisine: chef Frankie Terzolli tweaks the classics but knows what it means to cook New Orleans. Weekend breakfasts include bacon-spiked beignets; Sunday suppers highlight crawfish or shrimp boils. Moderate.

Bombay Exotic Cuisine of India 3975 Fifth Ave., Hillcrest, 619-298-3155. We're talking northetoes, creamy sauces, tandoor-baked breads and meats, rich and complex but mildly seasoned. Sister restaurant, Monsoon, 729 Fourth Ave., Downtown, 619-234-5555. Moderate.

Jimmy Carter's Café 3172
Fifth Ave., Hillcrest, 619-295-2070.
This comfy, middle-class eatery at the edge of Balboa Park has Indian breakfasts — try chicken curry or pessaratu (mung bean crepe with onions, peppers, ginger, dhal, and chutneys).
Good Mexican and decent Chinese food, too. Inexpensive.

Kemo Sabe 3958 Fifth Ave., Hill-crest, 619-220-6802. In Chef Deborah Scott's cooking, Southeast Asia meets the Southwest. Good choices include mussels in chipotle cream sauce; spicy, sweet-sour layered jerk chicken; and the signature Skirts on Fire — a tender, grilled skirt steak imbued with a picante marinade. Extremely noisy. Moderate.

Saigon on Fifth 3900 Fifth Ave., Hillcrest, 619-220-8828. Urbane, French-tinged cuisine of colonial-era Saigon and Hue. Distinctive house specialties include a smoked oyster omelet, coconut shrimp served in the coconut shell, and  $b\dot{u}n$ , a refreshing spicy noodle salad. Low-moderate.

Imperial Beach

Lydia's Café and Nightclub 1628 Palm Ave., Imperial Beach, 619-429-3603. Easygoing dancing/eatery (since 1957) offers sporadically available entrée platter of birría en su jugo (goat in its juices) and filling snacks like taquitos cucaracha (a corn tortilla stuffed with ham, cheese, and sour cream). Inexpensive.

Kearny Mesa

4633 Convoy St. #107 San Diego 92111 858-268-0668

See our coupon in this section.

China Max 4698 Convoy St., Kearny Mesa, 858-650-3333. Local Asians flock here for authentic Hong Kong cooking, including seafood in live tanks (black cod, Dungeness crab, abalone), dim sum daily, superb Peking Duck. Even homey dishes (e.g., wonton soup, crabmeat cakes) sing with flavor. Inexpensive to exorbitant, mainly moderate.

Do Re Mi House 8199 Clairemont Mesa Bl., Kearny Mesa, 858-565-2085. The BBQ meats (lamb's the specialty) are grilled in the kitchen here, but plunge into the exciting home-style cooking, including spicy stews, meaty soups — plus a generous assortment of free, fascinating sidedish relishes. Until midnight. Low-moderate.

The Original Pancake House 3906 Convoy St., Kearny Mesa, 858-565-1740. Additional locations in Poway, Encinitas, and Vista. The Apple Pancake is a batter-filled, five-egg puffed-up paradise with slices from two Granny Smith apples. The German Pancake or Dutch Baby are good oven-baked alternatives, as is the filling mushroom omelet. Inexpensive.

Tofu House 4646 Convoy St., Kearny Mesa, 858-576-6433. Korean tofu dishes, flavorful and healthy, but with meat, too. Try soontofu soups (beef, pork, seafood, or mushroom) with raw egg drop you drop yourself and a side of tasty fresh kimchi. Inexpensive.

Tropical Star 6163 Balboa Ave., Kearny Mesa, 858-488-5900. A modest café and grocery offers Puerto Rican and Latin American food and groceries. Inexpensive.

Kensington-Talmadge

Kensington Grill 4055 Adams Ave., Kensington-Talmadge, 619-281-4014. This comfortable-but-sophisticated neighborhood restaurant has found a fine formula for seasonal California cuisine. Early-bird threecourse dinner moderate; regular menu moderate to expensive.

La Jolla

Brockton Villa 1235 Coast Bl., La Jolla, 858-454-7393. Great Cove view, with best food at breakfast/brunch: Coast Toast, the French toast of your happiest dreams, puffy and airy with orange flavor. Coffee is excellent. Moderate to expensive.

La Jolla Brew House 7536 Fay Ave., La Jolla, 858-456-6279. Solid food, like the prime rib sandwich (which goes great with their Russian stout) or the roasted potato. Best of all, the hefty, low-cholesterol buffalo burger. Inexpensive to moderate.

Michele Coulon Pastries 7556-D Fay Ave., La Jolla, 858-456-5098. Cakes are light, moist, rich, and available as wholes, slices, and even "miniatures," plus you can choose tarts, chocolates, ice creams, and breakfast pastries. Moderate.

Pannikin Coffee & Tea 7467 Girard Ave., La Jolla, 858-454-5453. Additional locations in Del Mar and Encinitas. Cute cottage decor. Breakfasts are mostly steamed-egg variations, including the popular Greek eggs and breakfast burrito. For lunch try chicken curry or fresh, generous "pannwiches" like ham or tuna. Inexpensive.

Tapenade 7612 Fay Ave., La Jolla, 858-551-7500. Major French chef Jean-Michel Diot presides at this bistro featuring sunny Provençal flavors, where the dishes balance creativity and rigorous technique. Some bargain early-bird dinners. Otherwise, expensive to very expensive (and worth it).

Whisknladle 1044 Wall St., La Jolla, 858-551-7575. This kitchen bakes its own bread and makes charcuterie/salumi from scratch. Among the pleasures are roasted bone marrow, chorizo-and-date fritters, pristine "simply grilled" sustainable fish, and delicate panna cotta. Moderate to expensive.

La Mesa

Johnny B's 4728 Fourth St., La Mesa, 619-464-2465. This "Burgers and Brew" bar is a real '50s place with burgers and good bar snacks, including a zesty jalapeño dip. On Sundays (1 to 7pm only), their ten-ounce New York steak, fries, beans, and salad is a must-eat. Inexpensive.

Lake Murray Café 5465 Lake Murray Bl., La Mesa, 619-433-0180. Comfort food in generous quantities. All the omelets are four-eggers, with sides like biscuits and gravy. Evening meals include meat loaf, liver and onions, stuffed pork chops, whole (headon) fish. Inexpensive.

Mystic Grill and Bakery 6990 University Avenue (at 70th Street), La Mesa, 619-461-1985. Former pizza joint now offers exciting Middle Eastern revelations. Top ingredients (Halal Prime beef, fresh baby chickens) and skilled cooking from scratch create flawless falafel, thrilling kibbe (Mediterranean schnitzel), lemony spinach pie, sensitively grilled seafood and shawarma, and sublime desserts. (Also basic takeout pizzas.) No alcohol. Inexpensive.

West Coast Barbecue 6126 Lake Murray Bl., La Mesa, 619-462-3663. Pit-smoked Texas-style "Q," but more like the Bushes of Crawford than the soulful South. Best bets are full-flavored ribs, chicken wings, and authentic Texas bean-free chili with classic fixins. Low-moderate.

Ye Olde Bicycle Place and Café 6792 University Ave., La Mesa, 619-582-4024. A bike museum with food offers tasty toasted panini and cold sandwiches. Inexpensive.

Leucadia

The Calypso Café 576 N. Coast Hwy. 101, Leucadia, 760-632-8252. The cuisine is French, ranging from warhorses like onion soup and coq au vin to Gallo-Cal-Italian-Pacific Rim hyphenates. Mussels are the specialty, and their rapid turnover here ensures freshness. Upper-moderate.

Linda Vista

Sab-E-Lee 2405 Ulric St., Linda Vista, 858-650-6868. Tiny eatery serving authentic, fiery, fabulous food from northeast Thailand, as spicy as you want. Don't miss onion-rich tom yum soup or amazing liver salad. Look for "Linda Vista Food" awning. Cash only, BYO, no reservations, waits at prime-time. Inexpensive.

Over 900 more restaurant listings at SanDiegoReader.com

Mission Beach

Jake's Tiki Bar at Mission Bay Deli 1548 Quivira Way, Mission Beach, 619-223-5056. This everyday deli does the usual sandwiches burgers, and dogs for boatyard crews but on Sunday afternoon don't miss the scene at the palapa with beer and live music. It's one of this town's best-kept secrets. Deli daily till dusk. Inexpensive.

Saska's & Saska's Sushi 3768 Mission Bl., Mission Beach, 858-488-7311. Venerable local steak-and-seafood joint that tries harder, from the thin homemade terivaki sauce (sweet up front, fading to bitter ginger) for the well-cooked (if mild-flavored) fish to the cut-on-the-premises aged beef. Service till midnight or later. Moderate.

Sportsmen's Seafoods 1617 Quivira Rd., Mission Beach, 619-224-3551. The menu is devoted to the "fruits of the sea" and includes a seafood platter (shrimp, squid, clams, fish, fries, and salad). And, of course, a crispy fish 'n' chips platter. Inexpensive.

Mission Hills

Izakaya Masa 928 Ft. Stockton Dr., Mission Hills, 619-542-1354. Friendly spot serves interesting Japanese tapas. Among the hits: crunchy, spicy chuka kurage (jellyfish salad); fried oysters (kaki); ethereal fried tofu in broth; and kara-age (spicy fried chicken). Inexpensive to moderate Saffron Thai Grilled Chicken 3731 India St., Mission Hills, 619-574-0177. Saffron Noodles and Saté is sit-down, all about Thai noodles and saté. Next door, take-out only, owner Su-Mei Yu serves skewered grilled chicken marinated in garlic, ginger, and spices. Delicious green curry, too. Inexpensive.

Shakespeare Pub & Grille 3701 India St., Mission Hills, 619-299-0230. English pub grub is bluff and plainspoken. Shepherd's pie, bangers and mash, ploughman's plate (the pickled onions and cheese, Scotch egg, and Branston pickle make it the real thing). Inexpensive.

Mission Valley

All American Grill 7510 Hazard Center Dr., Mission Valley, 619-296-9600. This huge indoor-outdoor sports pub offers genuinely good food from a wood-fired oven and grill. The gifted chef highlights seasonal American ingredients (many local) in creative mini-pizzas, grazes, hearty entrées, smart desserts. Muted TV's sound turns on for game Sundays. Low moderate

Bully's East 2401 Camino del Rio South, Mission Valley, 619-291-2665. Word is, they serve more prime rib with au jus and horseradish than any eatery in San Diego. Or try the Bully Burger, French dip sandwich, or calamari sandwich. Înexpensive to lowmoderate

Ikea Restaurant 2149 Fenton Parkway, Mission Valley, 619-283-6166. Healthy Swedish food amidst Nordic housewares: meatballs with Swedish lingonberry (not cranberry) sauce. Seafood is big: the shrimp open-faced sandwich, the salmon plate with potatoes and broccoli, and the Gravad Lox Plate (cured salmon) are always on. Inexpensive King's Fish House 825 Camino de la Reina, Mission Valley, 619-574-1230. Also 5625 Paseo Del Norte, Carlsbad; 2015 Birch Rd., Chula Vista. Generously sized entrées come with soup or salad and two hefty side dishes. The menu changes daily to reflect the fresh catch and includes some rotating regional specialties (New Orleans, Hawaii, New England). Family friendly and fun but not noisy. Moderate.

National City

Lai Thai Restaurant 1430 E. Plaza Bl., National City, 619-474-5546. The soups, tom kah (spicy coconut) and tom vum (hot and sour), are good as is the house Lai Thai Fish (usually tilapia) in delicious panang coconutcurry sauce. Inexpensive to moderate.

McDini's 105 E. 8th St., National City, 619-474-6771. Open continuously since 1890 in various locations, now under a new owner who spiffed up the room. The eats are hearty diner-style food like Irish breakfasts, meat loaf sandwiches, roast beef. Inexpensive to moderate.

Normal Heights

Jyoti Bihanga 3351 Adams Ave., Normal Heights, 619-282-4116. Bengali-tinged vegetarian health food from Sri Chinmoy devotees can be delicious. Chutney-topped Neatloaf bursts with nutty, intriguing flavors. Even the accompanying mashed potato and gravy tastes different. Also delish: Brahma Burrito, Infinite Blue (brown rice salad with bleu cheese dressing). Inexpensive.

North Park

Best Cheesesteak. Hands down.

3501 30th Street, North Park Eddiesphilly.com • 619-296-6325

Lefty's Chicago Pizzeria 3448 30th St., North Park, 619-295-1720. The ultimate is Lefty's "stuffed" pizza, a 14-inch, 8-pound monster that needs one hour "make and bake" time. They do Chicago hot dogs, char burgers, beautiful spicy fries, juicy Italian beef au jus sandwiches. Inexpensive to low-moderate.

The Linkery 3794 30th St., North Park, 619-255-8778 The artisanal 'slow food" cuisine here features local ingredients and made-from-scratch preparations. The focus is on sausages. Some of the best include the juicy "super bison Mexi-dog," the linguisa, and the Polynesian pork. Moderate.

Pomegranate Russian-Georgian Restaurant 2302 El Cajon Bl., North Park, 619-297-4007. Georgian food sings with fresh herbs, garlic, touches of hot pepper. Don't miss the world-beating beefy, herb-jungle borscht, the lobio bean dip, and Olivier salad. The chef slow-smokes moist barbecued beef and pork and

The Ritual Tayern 4095 30th St North Park, 619-283-1618. A quiet, civilized tavern serving Niman meats, Jidori chicken, locally grown organic vegetables, and a mouth-filling, étouffée-thick Saddlebrush (Yankee) gumbo that's not remotely Cajun or Creole (it's got carrots but no okra or filé). Moderate cold-smokes whole trout. Moderate.

Sicilian Thing Pizza 4046 30th St., North Park, 619-282-3000. Sicilian-style pizzas are inch-thick, bready, but lighter than Chicago deep dish. When you order, they add sauce, cheese, and put it back in the oven to double cook. Open late. Inexpensive.

The Smoking Goat 3408 30th St., North Park, 619-955-5295. Small, noisy room with tiny patio offers a hungry neighborhood a changing menu of serious, up-to-date dishes (some simple, some elaborate) from French-trained chef-owner Frederick Piehl. Reserve or prepare to wait. Some inconsistencies, huge promise. Moderate.

El Sol Mexican Restaurant 2037 University Ave., North Park, 619-298-0874. Miguel "Nacho" Madera does breakfasts and Mexican food, including seafood (ceviche tostada is great). But if you want the burger, ask for his Clintonburger with cheese and bacon. Inexpensive.

Ocean Beach

3rd Corner Wine Shop & Bistro 2265 Bacon St., Ocean Beach, 619-223-2700. Also 897 S. Coast Hwv. 101, Encinitas, 760-942-2104. Eclectic dishes designed to go with wine until late evening, with bottles a pittance over retail. Low-moderate.

Portugalia 4839 Newport Ave., Ocean Beach, 619-222-7678. The menu is split between the homeland and Brazil, including coconut-milk-swathed seafood dishes from tropical Bahia rarely found locally. Enjoy salt cod fritters, fried pastry pockets filled with shrimp, codfish with chickpeas.

Ranchos Cocina 1830 Sunset Cliffs Bl., Ocean Beach, 619-226-7619. Also 3910 30th St. North Park, 619-574-1288. Healthy, creative Mexican and vegetarian cuisine in a tropical setting. A big plus: zero attitude. Top picks are the seafood dishes and the house-made mole sauce with a zillion ingredients. Inexpensive.

Oceanside

Paul's Place 3671 Mission Ave. Oceanside 760-721-0124 The menu strikes a balance between American and Greek fare. The baked Greek half-chick en, the spiced grilled chicken sliced over salad, and the gyros mix with all-American three-egg breakfast specials and meaty burgers. Inexpensive

Old Town

El Agave 2304 San Diego Ave., Old Town, 619-220-0692. Serious Mexican food highlighting mainland re-gional cuisines, including five different Oaxacan moles (plus a sixth from Chiapas). Moderate.

Barra Barra 4016 Wallace Ave., Old Town, 619-291-3200. Yes, it's tourist central, but the patio is real and so is the history: Somebody's been living on this spot since 1838. Cheap happy hour deals such as Indian flatbread tacos, and there's a free Thursday Tequila Tasting with generous appetizers. Inexpensive to low

Pacific Beach

The Australian Pub 1014 Grand Ave., Pacific Beach, 858-273-9921 Try the Road Kill sandwich (grilled chicken breast with hot sauce and cheese) or the huge, baroque Aussie Burger. Inexpensive Kabuki Sushi Restaurant 4475-C Mission Bl., Pacific Beach, 858-270-1986. Tempting dishes delivered to you via boats floating along a mini-canal that surrounds the sushi bar. The sushi chefs have the panoply of sushi, sashimi, nigiri. The dragon rolls and spider rolls are tasty too. Inexpensive to moderate.

Karinya Thai 825 Garnet Ave., Pacific Beach, 858-270-5050. Karinya remains true to its Thai origins. Try tom yum kung (hot and sour shrimp soup), a meal in itself served over a charcoal fire at your table, or pad talay, sautéed seafoods in spicy sauce. Inexpensive to moderate.

Lamont Street Grill 4445 Lamont St., Pacific Beach, 858-270-3060. P.B.'s most romantic restaurant serves California comfort food. punctuated by bold Mex/Asian/Cajun flavors. Salmon over fettuccine in a delicate dill cream sauce is especially

Point Loma

The Pearl 1410 Rosecrans St., Point Loma, 619-226-6100. The fare is California-eclectic and emphasizes grazing, with local produce and sustainable meat and fish, Candied pork belly, "deconstructed" shrimp nachos. wings du jour, and salmon with skin are among the hits. Moderate.

Red Sails 2614 Shelter Island Dr., Point Loma, 619-223-3030. Vintage waterside eatery serves seafood and steaks of uneven quality. Start with clams on the half-shell or clam chowder. Coconut shrimp entrée is a good, guilty pleasure; finfish fare less well. Low-moderate

Solare Ristorante Lounge 2820 Roosevelt Rd., NTC Promenade, Point Loma, 619-270-9670. Northern Italian cuisine with Asian-fusion touches like a sea bream carpaccio with lychees. The chef cooks from scratch with mainly local or organic ingredients, including Brandt beef. Pastas moderate, entrées expensive

Solana Beach

California Pizza Kitchen 437 S. Coast Highway 101, Solana Beach, 858-793-0999. Additional locations in Mission Valley, Carmel Mountain, University City, Vista, Chula Vista. The Original BBQ Chicken Pizza, the chain's first hit, is their top seller. It has barbecue sauce, smoked Gouda and mozzarella cheeses, BBQ chicken, red onions, and cilantro. Inexpensive to moderate.

Fidel's Little Mexico 749 Genevieve and 607 Valley Avenue (two entrances), Solana Beach, 858-755-5292. Old-line place where the Del Mar race crowd goes for a "safe" Mexican experience. Yet, alluring. Look for happy hour deals. One fat taco will almost fill you up. Inexpensive to moderate

Sorrento Valley

Corner House Café & Pizzeria 11815 Sorrento Valley Rd., Sorrento Valley, 858-755-3183. You lunch in country-style gardens, hidden inside a glossy business park. Sandwiches reign: try the Ironman (chicken, avocado, cheese) or Sorrento's Choice (turkey, cream cheese, sunflower seeds). Sophisticated pastas, too. Inexpensive

South Park

Big Kitchen 3003 Grape St., South Park, 619-234-5789. Judy "the Beauty" Forman presides over this highly social scene of big healthy breakfasts and lunches, including from-scratch waffles, muffins, omelets and scrambles, vegan choices. Inexpensive.

Southcrest

Sang Dao 4212 National Ave., Southcrest, 619-263-0914. Family-run Laotian restaurant offers delicious, exotically spiced catfish, BBO beef, som tum (papaya salad), and especially the spicy minced meat salad called larb, the national dish. Inexpensive.

Spring Valley

Ranas 9683 Campo Rd., Spring Valley, 619-589-1792. Mexico City style menu includes unexpected taste combos, such as pollo en salsa de cacahuate (Thai-tasting chicken in pea-nut sauce) and Aztec huarache (cactus with potato, cheese, lettuce, sour cream, and salsa). Inexpensive.

University City

Apollonia Greek Bistro 8650 Genesee Ave., University City, 858-455-1535. Sister restaurant - Café Athena — in P.B. With a more upscale, eye-catching decor and a longer and more serious menu than most Greek cafés, this is a popular destination. Inexpensive to low-moderate.

Donovan's Steak and Chop House 4340 La Jolla Village Dr., University City, 858-450-6666. Classic steakhouse atmosphere and menu, with traditional appetizers, wet-aged Prime beefsteaks gas-grilled to order (with potato and vegetable in-cluded). Sauces are extra, and a side of creamed spinach is worth its price. Very expensive.

P. F. Chang's China Bistro 4540 La Jolla Village Dr., University City, 858-458-9007. Additional locations in Mission Valley and Chula Vista. The decor at this busy Chinese chain (130-plus restaurants) is fun; the food is mainly mediocre, but the massive Great Wall of Chocolate dessert will knock vou over. Moderate.

University Heights

Soltan Banoo Persian Eatery & Tearoom 4645 Park Bl., University Heights, 619-298-2801. Try the pomegranate soup or the strawberry tabbouleh salad. Ghormeh sabzi is a lamb stew. Koofteh berenji is a ball of basmati rice with lamb, eggs, onions, and plums. Inexpensive.

Wire) has apparently gotten no SD press or local mention outside of SD hip-hop's inner circles: the SD-set. substantially 619 hip-hop soundtracked the "Vendetta of Blood" episode of History Channel's Gangland television series, which has aired repeat-

Slick's absence from the ballot. Also, his fine 2010 gangsta rap collection — Mitchy Slick Presents Tha Wrongkind: Yellow Tape, glaringly omitted from the SDMA

"Best Hip-Hop Album" nominees — has gotten belated recognition. San Diego CityBeat music editor Peter Hoslin astutely noted that it's a "record that talks about gang life with as much honesty, brutality, and inscrutable slang as an episode of The Wire."

However, an easy call as the most fascinating, scarifying, informative, colorful, and somewhat hilarious SD hip-hoprelated document of the past year (and which can indeed recall the surveillin' cops 'n' dealin' gangstas aesthetic of top-shelf HBO series The edly since its mid-May debut. Complete with slightly overdramatic narration and given to mid-sentence punctuation by gunfire (pause: bang-bang-bang), it explores the long history and brazen activities of Southeast San Diego's Lincoln Park Bloods. And its recurring focus is Mitchy Slick, as a veteran gang member and established music artist.

Slick, often serving as an articulate guide throughout the episode (even contributing music to the soundtrack), was incensed with the sensationalistic show that finally aired. He disowned his participation within hours of its premiere, tweeting, "IM SORRY TO ALL MY FRIENDS AND FAMILY FOR ALLOWING THESE PEOPLE TO TRICK ME.... IT WAS SUPPOSED TO B ABOUT CHANGIN FROM GANG S**T TO MAKIN REAL BUISINESS MOVES!... THEY SAID IT WAS GONE B ABOUT RAP AND GANG-LIFE...NOT ALL THIS S**T ABOUT KILLIN POLICE!"

This controversy and more that the show relates are way too involved to fully note here — but some edifying, can't-wait info-nuggets presented on the show are not. Gangsta argot for San Diego itself is the coolest SD nickname you've probably never heard: "The Salty D." The Lincoln Park Bloods are famously dangerous but also have a rep "for throwing SD's best parties"; disguised senior LPB member "Big Red" discusses "renting out beaches, having skis and boats, and having pretty feet parties: you got the prettiest feet, you might get a hundred bucks, babe. And that's how we get down." And SD police scrutinizing locally consigned mix CDs that have gang members rapping, sometimes incriminating themselves about specific crimes or conveniently matching previously unknown criminal voices caught on police wiretaps. Very verité.

The singer brought Jay Crawford back into the fold, the reunion gig happened, and now, 22 years after it was recorded, Girlfiend hits the street on Saturday, October 23.

"It's very strange for me to have such an old recording being released now," says the 2008 SDMA Best Jazz Album nominee. "I play so much better now, but I can hear my first inklings of my jazz-playing coming out on this album, like a very rough Coltrane quote in one tune."

Bartosik says that if Girlfiend does well, "I would like to do new stuff with Housecoat Project, but there are no plans to do so now. We used to write new material very quickly, and Jay Crawford and I always had a kind of intuitive way of playing ideas off of each other, so that would be fun. Meri always has tons of lyrics ready to go. There's been talk of a West Coast tour to support the new album, but so far it's just talk."

Squeaky Wheel Tour.

On October 17, 2000, Regina Marie Bos, a 40-year-old mother of three, performed during an open mic at Duggan's Pub, a neighborhood saloon near her home in Lincoln, Nebraska. Her Saturn was parked across the street. Known as Gina, Bos left Duggan's at closing time, stowed her guitar case in the trunk of her car, and then disappeared without a trace. Gina Bos was neither seen nor heard from again.

Finding out what became of Bos would turn into a life's cause for her sister, Jannel Rap. After Lincoln police and private investigators failed to turn up any clues, Rap founded a nonprofit and named it the GINA for Missing Persons FOUNDation in honor of her sister.

"In the past ten years," says Del Mar Heights singer"411GINA has worked with the families of missing people, local law enforcement, and music artists to help find 500 missing people."

Morris is 15 and a sophomore at Cathedral Catholic High School in Carmel Valley. To date, he has performed at house parties, Soma, and the San Diego County Fair. "I play a lot of charity shows. I'm hoping to expand that." He met Jannel Rap last year at a music-industry convention in Las Vegas.

There, he learned about the GINA annual fundraiser called the Squeaky Wheel Tour. This year, it kicks off in San Diego. Morris says the venue is undecided as yet but that he will be a part of the tour.

"During the Squeaky

to watch the tragedies of Chelsea King and Amber Dubois unfold. I remember seeing Amber's grandfather every day at church for the longest time. I hope my efforts can help prevent more tragedies like these from occurring."

In the past, the Squeaky Wheel Tour has gotten a hand from national touring acts ("Maroon 5 has helped us out several times," says Jannel Rap), and the outreach, Rap says, has become global as musicians around the world in various countries have taken on the cause. "This year is different," Rap says, as she is kicking off the Year of the Squeaky Wheel in recognition of the tenth anniversary of her sister's disappearance. More information about the coming tour can be found at 411GINA.org.

BRUCKNER'S 8TH AND KISSING

Symphony, Beethoven is giving us a reminder that life isn't as serious as we'd like to think it is.

CLASSICAL GARRETT HARRIS

A BIKINI ON THE FLOOR OF THE SENATE

I decided to go back and listen to the beginning, middle, and end of classical music. That would be Beethoven's 5th Symphony. Argue all you want about periods, styles, or historical accuracy.

What comes to mind when you think classical music? Dat, dat, dat, daaaah. Dat, dat, dat, daaaah. Once you hear it, you remember it for the rest of your life. It has famously been called, "fate knocking at the door."

E.M. Forrester said, "Beethoven's 5th Symphony is the most sublime noise that has ever penetrated into the ear of man." The last movement marks the first time trombones are used in a symphony.

What stuck out this time was the 2nd movement. Beethoven has a tremendous sense of humor in his music and you can hear it plainly here. [Here the author puts a link to the YouTube video of Toscanini conducting the second movement.]

The opening is stately and then at the end of the section, this trite, little button shows up out of nowhere. The rhythmic figure is dat, dat, dat, dut. "Fate knocking at the door" is now a silly variation that almost feels out of place. Think Dianne Feinstein in a bikini on the floor of the Senate.

Among all the "sturm und drang" of his 5th

Anton Bru

Anton Bruckner's 8th Symphony is a colossal piece of music. After listening, one may imagine having been to Alpine heights and the soulful depths of a saintly man. Bruckner fanatics - yes, they're out there - will go on for hours about different recordings, conductors, sound engineers, and speaker companies and kill each other over the merits of each. I witnessed a few displays of this most rare of blood sports while working at the Sports Arena Tower Records, may it rest in peace. Bespectacled, middle-aged gentlemen of sedentary build would be at each other's throats over the advantages of Horstein's live edition vs. von Karajan's studio versions vs. Furtwangler's wartime recordings while Berlin was being bombed and whether or not an Italian like Giulini or Abbado had any right to conduct Bruckner in the first place. Then it got serious: Nowak edition or the Hass edition? Unlike his pupil Mahler and certainly his hero Wagner, Bruckner took his critics to heart and actually changed his music to accommodate them. We now have two editions of Bruckner Symphonies and no idea what Bruckner himself actually preferred.

The passion with which his fans discussed these topics got me to listening to Bruckner. What's best? I have no idea. What I do know is that if you want to really learn how to kiss another person, listen to the 3rd movement of Bruckner's 8th and take notes. No joke. The tenderness with which this music begins can melt your heart and the heights to which it storms can take your breath away, just like a really good kiss. This is not music for "the beast with two backs." If Bruckner, ever chaste and humble, knew people thought his music was sexy, he'd die a thousand deaths. There is other music for that activity, Italian music.

MUSIC AND ART

Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings may be America's greatest contribution to the world of classical music. The point can be argued and discussed, so feel free.

What is unique about the Adagio is that its passion is tinged with melancholy from beginning to end. I cannot think of another piece of music that is filled with such resigned yearning — perhaps Mahler's adagietto from his 5th Symphony comes close. The Mahler was conducted by Leonard Bernstein at JFK's funeral.

In this Adagio, it is almost as if Barber were setting Michelangelo's Pietà to music. The face of Mary, as she hold's the body of her slain son, shows a resignation to God's perfect choice. I hear that in Barber's music. This is a music that can guide us and teach us and remind us that our lives can contain some sense of the holy. ■

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

A few months ago I went to see the XX, a young band that won just about every award available in the British music industry this year. Everything about that band is minimal and sparse, from their name to their guitar parts to their beats. They don't even have a guy playing drums, just a guy playing percussion noises on a sampler. And it works. But I noticed that the audience got most excited near the end of the set, when one song reached a crescendo and the bass player picked up some sticks and started bashing away on a cymbal. There's nothing like watching and listening to people hit things with sticks.

White Rabbits knows something about that. They often play with two complete drum kits onstage and sometimes with three or more members playing percussion. In parts of the aptly titled song "Percussion Gun," even the guitars sound more like drums than stringed instruments. The first time I heard the song, I felt certain it was built on a sample from the famous Drummers of Burundi -Adam and the Ants and Bow Wow Wow built their careers sampling that African group. But apparently it's just the White Rabbits making that awesome racket. Onstage, it's an incredible sight to see and an exhilarating thing to hear.

Originally from Columbia, Missouri, the band now lives in Brooklyn and tours with the likes of the Walkmen and Spoon. Spoon's Britt Daniel produced the band's sophomore album,

It's Frightening, with some of his characteristic sense of space. That means we don't get overwhelming percussion in every song, but when we do, it's tremendous.

Interpol headlines.

BY DAVE GOOD

Rocket from the Tombs was a mid-'70s Cleveland band that never got a lot of recognition. But Rocket snawned bands that did gain notoriety — such as Pere Ubu and the Dead Boys — and in so doing gave us a reference point to the beginning of punk. Aside from a bootleg collection of demos. Rocket was never properly recorded until 2003, when founding guitarist Cheetah Chrome (Gene O'Connor) reformed the band. Chrome, it turns out, has not gone quietly in the years since he and the late Stiv Bators repulsed and fascinated the buying public as the Dead Boys. Chrome's got a new Rocket album coming out, and his autobiography (A Dead Boy's Tale: From the Frontlines of Punk Rock) was recently released. While the press has long delighted more in Chrome's had behavior than his music, how would he like to be remembered?

"At this point, I don't give a shit," he says by phone from his home in Nashville, where he has lived since the 1990s. He laughs. "I'm too busy to care what anybody thinks."

If Cleveland brought anything to bear on rock music

it is this: the need to escape from boredom. Otherwise. Chrome says, there was no punk scene there. "Cover bands. That was the scene. We [Cleveland punk bands] all rehearsed in basements, and we never saw each other excent maybe three times a year when we got gigs together." As for not getting much credit for his music, he says he's over it. "The press, especially the New York press, has never given us our due as to how good the Dead Boys really were." Touring with the Dolls' Sylvain Sylvain as the Batusis (expect a new album any day), Chrome says their set list is full of surprises, even to himself. "To tell you the truth, I really don't know. It could all change."

Brian Wilson: Reimagines George Gershwin

CD Review by Alan Segal

Help me, Rhonda, help, help me, Rhonda, get this CD... out of my head. Brian Wilson takes one of the greatest love songs ever written and turns it into the Beach Boys singing "Little Saint Nick." "They Can't Take That Away From Me," George Gershwin's hall-of-fame American standard about lost love is simply trashed by Wilson's upbeat "reimagining."

Who needs to hear Brian Wilson singing a bossa nova version of "'S Wonderful" with his thin and tired voice when Diana Krall already has set the bar for this arrangement far above his reach? Who needs to hear Brian Wilson singing bad karaoke versions of Porgy and Bess classics "Summertime" and "I Loves You Porgy," sounding here like "In My Room"? Who needs a doo-wop version of "I've Got a Crush on You"?

There are two unique, unfinished Gershwin songs, "The Like in I Love You" and "Nothing but Love," which Wilson was given permission to turn into new "Beach Boys-type" songs, and they aren't bad, but there is nothing to compare them to.

Brian Wilson and George Gershwin are both musical wonders, but as we learned in the Gulf of Mexico, oil and water don't mix.

Sia: We Are Born

by Michael Caldwell

Songstress of sulk Sia Furler gained prominence via Six Feet Under's use of her sublime "Breathe Me." Remember? "Help, I have done it again/ I have been here many times before/ Hurt myself again today..."

With her fourth studio album, the Australian vocalist reveals a sunnier disposition. Above quirky quitar lines that sound like Johnny Marr creations, Sia acknowledges the triumph over gloom as she sings on "The Fight": "We made it through the darkness to the light." Along with the brighter outlook come snappier beats. "Clap Your Hands" is homage to the buoyant bass lines and crisp, cutting guitars of Nile Rodgers's Chic, handclaps included! On the bouncy "Bring Night," a dirty electric guitar provides crunch, and "Whoaah-uh-uh-oh" never sounded so good.

Music Reviews from Our Readers

Sia makes it through the

The guitar parts keep the indie in Sia's pop. Her multifaceted vocals do the rest. Sia becomes a sassy schoolgirl gone Go-Go's on "Stop Trying," and her R&B chanteuse comes out on "Be Good to Me."

Then "Cloud" rolls in and the mood shifts. The somber Sia resurfaces on "I'm in Here." Surely as we are born, Sia slides back into the songwriter with which fans supplant their sorrows.

Kava Lounge Hosts Bonobo Benefit and Todo Mundo

Concert Review by Wate Charles

The vibe at Kava Lounge, home of the Vegan White Russian, is cheery for the Bonobo Benefit. About 25 primate empathizers mill about beneath dangling fliers of factoids from bonobo.org.

Did you know bonobos are the closest extant relatives to human beings? Highly sexual? Endangered because they are sold as pets and bush meat?

Concert organizer Brooke Kettering volunteers with the intelligent apes locally and beams that there is "no greater feeling than when someone from another species picks you as a friend."

"Bonobos...need our help," says Latin/

Todo Mundo for Bonobos

reggae/folk band Todo Mundo's front man Santiago Orozco. "Every small thing is a big thing."

In headscarf, white pants, and tank top, Colombian-born Orozco and band, which comprises a Argentinean guitarist, and a Venezuelan percussionist, play a passionate "Primavera." After, Orozco disclaims, "Some songs are in English. Some are in Spanish. But the language doesn't matter. Feel the music in your heart."

Orozco certainly does. A vegetarian and goodnatured guy, the 23-year-old Bogotá native says, "It doesn't matter where you are from or what you are thinking. We are one."

Menomena Brings the House Down at Casbah

Concert Review by Matt Zielinski

Portland's Menomena maneuvered through their musical minefield to a capacity crowd at Casbah. Supported by Tu Fawning and Suckers, the trio of multi-instrumentalists/vocalists highlighted material from their acclaimed 2010 release Mines.

Band members Danny Seim (drums), Justin Harris (guitar/ bass/sax), and Brent Knopf (keyboards/ synth/quitar) split vocal duties, each lending a unique voice to their labyrinthine indie rock. Aided by touring guitarist and fellow Portlander Joe Haege, Menomena was able to translate the math ematical meticulousness and depth of their studio recordings onstage.

Menomena's palette of acute fretwork, sonorous brass, and pulsing percussion paint a beautiful, if melancholic, musical mosaic. Opening the set with "Tithe," Seim bares his soul: "Spending the best years of a childhood horizontal on the floor, like a bobsled without the teamwork or televised support...and nothing sounds appealing." Collective sighs follow. At the end of the set, just as the rabbit's hole threatens to collapse, the lights come on and we shuffle to the door, our hearts a little heavier.

"To move away would be to deny the redemptive process of God."

n Walden, Henry David Thoreau says doing good can have selfish motives. Goodness, he writes, "must not be a partial and transitory act, but a constant superfluity, which costs him nothing and of which he is unconscious." Clarence Jordan (1912–1969) took Thoreau's injunction — be good, and good will follow — to heart.

You might recall his nephew — Hamilton Jordan was Jimmy Carter's chief of staff — but not Clarence. He had a degree in agriculture and a Ph.D. in the Greek New Testament from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary. Like Martin Luther, he wanted to return Christianity to its basics. For example: "There just isn't any word in our vocabulary which adequately translates the Greek word for 'crucifixion.' Our crosses are so shined, so polished, so respectable that to be impaled on one...would seem a blessed experience."

In the late 1960s, Jordan wrote The Cotton Patch Gospel, a Southern, colloquial translation of the Greek New Testament in which Paul's letter to the Ephesians becomes "The Letter to Christians in Birmingham," and he substitutes the word "lynching" for crucifixion.

In 1942, he and wife Florence bought 440 acres in Americus, Georgia. They founded Koinonia ("Fellowship") Farm, a spare, racially integrated Christian collective in the middle of Macon County. When word spread that blacks and whites lived side by side, even ate meals together, locals boycotted the farm. Jordan was also a student of Gandhi, in particular his belief in satyagraha: the "soul force" of passive resistance. On at least 23 occasions the KKK attacked Koinonia — vandalism, gunfire, bombings — and put Jordan's credo of nonviolence to the test

Instead of reaching for a gun, Jordan wrote: "If it costs us our lives...to redeem our brothers and sisters in the flesh, so let it be.... To move away would be to deny the redemptive process of God."

In 1965, when only a handful of members remained, Millard and Linda Fuller visited the farm. They became so inspired they created "partnership housing" with Jordan: quality homes, with a no-interest mortgage, for low-income families. In 1976 Koinonia Partners became Habitat for Humanity. Jordan never saw the first house constructed. He died of a heart attack in 1969.

Jordan's decades-long turn-the-other-cheek battle is a great idea for a play. Dennis Hassell's Glory Man, world premiering at Lamb's, sketches in the life but tries to account for every event from

The Glory Man: The script only skims the surface of a deep reservoir.

The Glory Man by Dennis Hassell

Lamb's Players Theatre, 1142 Orange Avenue, Coronado

Directed by Robert Smyth; cast: Antonio "T.J." Johnson, Bryan Barbarin, Keith Jefferson, Deborah Gilmour Smyth, Rick D. Meads, Adrian Blount, Avery Solsbak, Alexis Rae Tenny, Jesse Abeel, Jason Heil, Caitie Grady, Cynthia Gerber, Doug Waldo, Kerry Meads, Mike Sears, Cashae Monya, Matthew Meads; scenic design, Mike Buckley; costumes, Jeanne Reith; lighting, Nate Parde; sound, Deborah Gilmour Smyth, George Wheeler; choreographer, Colleen Kollar Smith

Playing through November 14; Tuesday through Thursday at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday at 4:00 p.m. and Sunday at 2:00 p.m. 619-437-0600.

1942 to 1970 and rarely holds still. In the process, Jordan and the plight of Koinonia Farm beam on and off. The script only skims the surface of a deep reservoir.

Hassell has an annoying habit of jumping from seriousness to comedy, often in seconds (just about every time the two children enter, for example, they defuse a dramatic moment). In effect, he has laced a soft vein of comedy through real hardship and woe. The same holds for his characterization of Jordan. Possibly backing away from hagiography, Hassell often makes him clownish — too clownish, as if he were just shallow ("Clarence had the passion of a prophet and the sense of a mule"). But the guy was tough as nails. The comic veneer dilutes his courage and drive. Revisions could begin by eliminating the play's ever-present smile and giving Jordan, and the script, a firmer spine.

But while The Glory Man needs work, the Lamb's production's a treat. On Mike Buckley's minimalist set — unpainted wooden stairs and platform, like an unfinished house — director Robert Smyth turns his cast into a chorus. Rural sounds, from cowbells to gunfire, emerge from actors seated in the background. Canes and boot-heels tap rhythms; spirituals sprout (including "Love Lifted Me"). The Glory Man, it turns out, lies somewhere between a "play with music" and a full musical. The songs, well chosen and directed by Deborah Gilmour Smyth (including her lyrical "Follow, Follow"), create ongoing, and affecting, aural scenery.

Rick D. Meads heads a strong ensemble as Jordan. He does well what the script gives him, always an engaging presence, but should have more than one or two beats to register painfully conflicting emotions. Antonio "T.J." Johnson's Old Rupe narrates the story with humor and wisdom. Mike Sears smartly tones down Carrick, which makes the bigoted thug even viler. As Jordan's wife Florence and Reverend Modret, Deborah Gilmour Smyth and Robert Smyth play figures torn between life-saving expedience and visionary dreams ("I follow Jesus," says the Reverend, "up to a point"). Keith Jefferson makes Gus Rawley the story's doubting Thomas and rocks the rafters when he sings.

Jeanne Reith has designed 18th Century and Victorian costume extravaganzas. Here she works with a much narrower palette — humble denims and cotton prints — with just as much success. ■

Brighton Beach Memoirs

Portrait of the One-Liner Artist as a Young Man. Eugene Morris Jerome (i.e., 15-year-old Neil Simon) recounts the week in 1937 when his childhood ended. On this large, autobiographical canvas, each member of his extended family has a crisis. As in Chekhov, all are stuck, desperate, as one says, for "a way out." Unlike Chekhov, however, the final hour piles one facile resolution onto another — a forgiveness binge — and they return to a newly revived status quo. What the play and Old Globe production do well: Simon articulates the perplexities of puberty and how they color Eugene's world. Except for speedy, sense-swallowing deliveries, and music that drifts in and out (and often intrudes), the production serves the play quite well. Director Scott Schwartz runs his well-chosen cast up and down the aisles. Austyn Myers makes Eugene an engaging narrator. Ralph Funicello's two-story set (beachweathered façade and interior) gives the Jerome household an appropriately claustrophobic feel. And Aleio Vietto's costumes pinpoint the period and the family's modest means. Note: Brighton Beach runs in repertory with Simon's Broadway Bound. Worth a try.

OLD GLOBE THEATRE, 1363 OLD GLOBE WAY, BALBOA PARK, 619-234-5623 8PM THURSDAYS 8PM FRIDAYS 2PM AND 8PM SATURDAYS, 2PM AND 7PM SUNDAYS, 7PM TUESDAYS, 7PM WEDNESDAYS, THROUGH NOVEMBER 7.

Broadway Bound

Twelve years have passed since Eugene Jerome (then aged 15) recounted how his childhood ended. Now he and brother Stan leave young adulthood and head to New York to write comedy (unlike Moss Hart's wonderful Act One, where he starts at the top with George S. Kaufman, the brothers enter through the back door). But this story's more about those left behind and Rubicons crossed: their two-timing father (gruff David Bishins); Trotskyite grandfather (Howard Green with stopwatch-precise timing); and rags-to-riches Aunt Blanche (Bonnie Black). The third of Neil Simon's autobiographical trilogy, Bound tries to account for all family members and rambles on occasion. Many of the script's best scenes are about script writing, as the brothers (Brandon Uranowitz as Eugene and Joseph Parks as Stan, both quite capable) brainstorm, create, and watch, almost appalled, how others react to their work. As their mother Kate, Karen Ziemba is sad, officious, and quite touching, especially when her character sheds decades and dances. once again, with George Raft. # Into the Woods

New Village Arts could have picked an easier musical for its first ever. Stephen Sondheim's anti-fable weaves a passel of fairy tales through complex scenes and equally complex score. In the second act, which revisions still haven't fixed completely, Into the Woods shows what happens after "happily ever after" (does the end, as one says, justify the beans?). Though in the capable hands of director James Vasquez (whose work on Diversionary's [title of show] ranks among 2010's best), the production is uneven. Most of all, it needs to adapt vocally to the intimate space, since several performers play big enough for the Starlight Bowl (much close-range screaming wore the opening-night audience down). Also, several singers were uncomfortable with Sondheim's intricate musicality. These troubles are fixable, once the cast settles in. And there are pluses: Steve Gunderson and Melissa Fernandes, as the Baker and his wife, do top-quality work (especially his singing of "No More" and hers of "Moments in the Woods"); Randall Dodge (a hoot as a horny Wolf and as Prince Charming); Devlin as the resurrected Witch; and Manny Fernandes gives the Narrator a Sesame Street smile. Tim Wallace's set, cartoony woods with trees that roll off and on, proves useful, as does Charlie Reuter's musical direction.

miXtape

Jon Lorenz and Colleen Kollar Smith are right. The creators of this revue of 1980s music say that favorite songs function like a time machine. They "mark your memories." miXtape is a sprawling, longish evening, performed with rampant energy and polish by an eight-person cast. Memory-triggers zip past: Pet Rocks, Pac-Man, Nelson Mandela, AIDS. Smith's choreographic collages range from Jazzercise riffs to Michael Jackson's genius moves to a parody of Top Gun done with rolling office chairs. Jemima Dutra's costumes include The Breakfast Club togs and proton-packed Ghostbusters. The musical's about the 1980s but has a 2010 radar-blip attention span. Most of the songs are song-bytes (a taste, and a tease, of the original). More respites and showcasing a full number (like Journey's "Don't Stop Believin") would help. Requiring an audience to flit nonstop from one song to another eventually works against the concept. But as a performance, backed by Andy Ingersoll's versatile band and under Kerry Meads's feisty direction, miXtape is always entertaining — and memory-provoking. (Note: due to popular demand, Lamb's Players has extended the show's run.)

The Norman Conquests: Table Manners, Round and Round the Garden, Living Together

Alan Ayckbourn's trilogy – Table Manners, Living Together, Round and Round the Garden sounds like a medieval triptych. But Norman isn't an invading army; he's a lowly assistant librarian, with "three emotions for every occasion." He's such a junior-grade Don Juan that, to bat an eyelash his way, potential lovers must verge on implosion. The plays cross-stitch the events of a weekend. They function like a musical "round," stating then restating the theme. As with Chekhov's Prozorov sisters, three women are so stuck that even sleazy, infantile Norman offers a soupçon of hope. Cygnet Theatre emphasizes the comic elements: a farce performed in a threering circus, but let the inherent bleakness fall where it may (even though Ayckbourn called the plays "black farce" and put genuine misery behind the masks). What the productions do, they do quite well and are always funny and well-acted and -designed. No great epiphany waits at the end; the payoffs are more lateral. Seeing all three plays gives vou a temporary omniscience: when you watch a scene, you know what's going on elsewhere but remain powerless to aid these lives of not-so-quiet desperation. # Welcome to Arroyo's Back in the day, when the original hip-hop DJs "turned it out without a doubt," one of them may have been a Boricua, a Puerto Rican woman called "Reina Rev" ("queen king"). A month ago, Allejandro (Andres Munar) and Amalia's (Amirah Vann) mother died. She ran Arroyo's, a popular deli in the Lower East Side. Allejandro wants to commemorate her by turning the deli into a lounge; tough Amalia, who even "hates people she likes" and punches a rookie cop (Byron Bronson) twice, just wants to make art, i.e., graffiti. Lelly Santiago (Tala Ashe), a prolix grad student, theorizes that A&A's mother was Reina Rey, which comes as news to both and complicates their grieving. If Kristoffer Diaz's play were staged just for its bare bones, except for electric dialogue, it wouldn't amount to much. But an engaging theatricality trumps the tale. Two DIs (Wade Allain-Marcus and CO) comment on the action and sustain a party atmosphere throughout (only persistent problem: the cast often addresses small portions of the audience at the White, leaving the rest to wonder what they said; another: if strong language offends you, steer clear). Directed by Jamie Castaneda, the piece also has a generous spirit; a positive ending's never in doubt, and the answers to some questions are none of your business. Worth a try.

Write Out Loud: Quoth the Raven Short stories are mini-dramas.

made so by language alone. So, asked the founders of Write Out Loud, why not assemble a troupe and read them in public? That idea has grown into a popular event. These aren't staged readings, with little advance preparation. Local actors rehearse a story as they would a script, emphasizing style and meaning. At the same time, however, all is subordinate to the word. As in the old days of radio, regular attendees often close their eyes and listen. Each reading clusters around a theme. "Quoth the Raven" celebrates Halloween and includes Edgar Allen Poe's classic poem "The Raven." CARLSBAD CITY LIBRARY 1775 DOVE LANE CARLSBAD 7PM TUESDAY

Yellow Face

For his new play, David Henry Hwang (author of M Butterfly) wanted to deconstruct Rudyard Kipling. Instead he deconstructed his image as a multicultural role model Yellow Face (the Asian equivalent of white actors in "black face") is a topsy-turvy, often funny, and ultimately thought-provoking piece. After he protested the casting of Ionathan Pryce in Miss Saigon, Hwang accidentally casts Marcus, a white actor, in an Asian role, then pretends Marcus isn't white Complications multiply ("I was an Asian-American role model." Hwang shouts, "back when you were a Caucasian!"). For the Mo'olelo Performing Arts Company, director Seema Sueko does a splendid job of negotiating the script's quirky tonal shifts (in which comedy and seriousness perform a snake-dance deconstruction). As DDH (i.e., a fictionalized Hwang), Greg Watanabe gives an outstanding performance, part comedian, part pin-cushion, always fully present and engaging. No weak links in the supporting cast, led by Brian Bielawski's innocent (calculating?) Marcus. David F. Weiner's spare, handsome set includes projections that evoke multitudes, 619-342-7395.

Different Strokes

The central figure gets upstaged by two snooping, pot-stirring teenage girls.

DUNCAN SHEPHERD

repidation is not the ideal frame of mind in which to approach a film, even around Halloween. But after I Stand Alone and Irreversible, the French enfant terrible Gaspar Noé merits nothing less and nothing else. That is the only frame of mind in which to enter Enter the Void. What's in store for us this time? Well, in chronological order....

Ridiculously, unreadably rapid credits in flashing eye-straining pop color. Then a long-drawn hand-held wide-angle single take that appears at first to be a home video in a Tokyo apartment and on its balcony, but is actually, once we notice both hands simultaneously in front of the camera lens and an intermittent "blink" of black screen, intended to be a first-person point of view, straight through the eyes (and eyelids) of the protagonist, much like Robert Montgomery's Lady in the Lake. Then a psychedelic drug trip, really going to town with the garish neon palette of Tokyo, and taking off on an outof-body experience that allows us at last to get a look at the protagonist

> (Nathaniel Brown), in addition to some kaleidoscopic computer animation that could be substituted in toto for the Jupiter landing in 2001. Then a spoken synopsis of The Tibetan Book of the Dead during the descent of a multi-story stairway. (The film is in English.) Then, at the half-hour mark, the death of the protagonist in a standard Drug Deal Gone Wrong, followed by an almost two-hour illustration of the uncannily prognostic synopsis: going into the light; floating above the city in endless direct overhead shots, the disembodied spirit briefly penetrating the head of a Japanese nightclub owner in midcoitus for some vicarious incest with his stripper sister (Paz de la Huerta); his life passing before his eyes — the camera now positioned behind the back of his silhouetted head - to provide some background for, and ultimately a good deal of repetition of, what preceded the death; and an extended series of visual variations on a "hole" motif, starting with the fatal bullet hole in his torso and carrying on through the assorted orifices and canals of a gory abortion, a gratuitous hardcore tour of a Love Hotel, and a Nova-style documentary shot of a penis ejaculating inside the vagina, point-blank.

There seems to be no reason for the film ever to end as long as there remains in Tokyo some unvisited den of iniquity, some trash pile, some snake pit, some cesspool. But end it eventually does, the initial trepidation having long since given place to exasperation, not an ideal frame of mind, either, but somehow more comfortable, more settled. Much could be said about the phantasmagoric, virtuosic visuals, so much in fact that we might forget to say, might be distracted from saying, the obvious and the essential: that The Tibetan Book of the Dead could just as well have been illustrated through the experience of a Buddhist nun, a dedicated veterinarian, or a Chilean miner, and that the filmmaker's preference for lurid sex-and-drug banalities exposes him, for all his "experimentalism," as a run-of-the-mill sleazeball

Tamara Drewe, a sex romp of above-average intelligence and in full-blooded color, deftly directed by Stephen Frears, is a contemporary riff on Far from the Madding Crowd, set knowingly (or if you must, selfconsciously) in Hardy country, at and around a writers' colony in Dorset, where it seems a bit thick of the visiting American Hardy scholar not to remark on the parallels. The title character is a decamped local (Gemma Arterton, once the lead actress in a miniseries of Tess of the D'Urbervilles for British television) who now returns — oh very well, the return of the native - with a nose job, a pair of short shorts, and a swing in her gait, and who proceeds to toy with the affections of three men, the honest hunky horticulturalist she has known since girlhood (Luke Evans), the middle-aged and very married detective novelist (Roger Allam), and the heavily eyelined rock drummer who has just quit his band on tour in the area (Dominic Cooper). The motivations and indeed the entire personality of the central figure, a would-be novelist herself, are fuzzy in the extreme, and she, along with everyone else, gets upstaged by two snooping, pot-stirring teenage girls (Jessica Barden, Charlotte Christie) whose heads are permanently in the clouds but whose minds are paradoxically in the gutter: "He's not even a proper celeb," sniffs the chief instigator when the heroine takes up with the worldwide best-selling author. To put it another way: the pretensions of the arty folk supply ample fun, gentle fun (sample detail: the skull-and-crossbones on the collar of the rocker's dog), but it's the aspirations of the adolescents, low as they appallingly are, that put some teeth in the fun, some pain, some horror.

Never Let Me Go, pardon my tardiness in getting to it, might be termed low-profile science fiction, so light on the hardware, the décor, the couture of the genre, so mundane in all its trappings, as to skirt classification, operating in a borderland, a no-man's-land, occupied by the likes of On the Beach, Lord of the Flies, maybe Daniel Petrie's Resurrection, maybe Todd Haynes's Safe, a short list at any rate, shorter on screen than on the bookshelves. Adapted from the acclaimed Kazuo Ishiguro novel I haven't read, it is set in the near past in an alternative universe where medicine, post-WWII, has cured the incurable and life expectancy has topped a hundred. It is set, more narrowly, amidst a love triangle, two girls and a boy, at the private school of Hailsham in the English countryside, the "special" student body of which is bred for organ transplants, just two or three apiece before a premature demise. I think I'm allowed to give that away. But there is also a reason these particular students are enrolled there, and I think I'm not allowed to give that away, even though the film doesn't trouble to hold its cards too close to the vest.

The time span of the narrative runs into the common problem of aging on screen, whereby the three stars, Carey Mulligan, Keira Knightley, Andrew Garfield, must cool their heels in the wings while younger players take their places in the year 1978, pretty good likenesses for the girls and not so good for the boy. (Sally Hawkins, as a compassionate teacher who believes in telling her pupils the truth about themselves, helps tide us over during this preliminary stretch.) And the stars themselves do a decent job of acting younger than they are, seven years later, before they catch up to their correct ages in 1994. There's a kind of wan monotony to their performances, especially Mulligan's, and again there's a reason for it I can't go into, but it's monotonous nonetheless. Director Mark Romanek, of the quite dissimilar One-Hour Photo, gives the film a gray gloomy image to go along with the rueful yearning mood, and Rachel Portman chimes in unrelentingly, as if she thought the name of the film were Never Let Up, with musical accompaniment out of the "cowpat school," like a lowergrade Vaughan Williams, a Lark Descending. (The title tune, a pastiche of the lushly orchestrated pop ballad in the bailiwick of Kay Starr or Margaret Whiting, ostensibly lifted off a cassette tape of the fictitious "Judy Bridgewater," is rendered with an unerring ear by jazz singer Jane Monheit.) Although the pervasive monotony can get a little oppressive, a little imploring, the mundanity no doubt makes it easier for the spectator to remember that the principal business of science fiction, whenever it may be set, is the present day. (The all-hardware variety, which nowadays means all-CGI, makes it easier for the spectator to forget, prone as it is itself to forget.) Clearly, comprehensibly, affectingly, this fringedweller has something to say about the plight of disenfranchised people in particular and, for that matter, of people in general, our common condition.

The eleventh San Diego Asian Film Festival runs this next week, October 21 through 28, at the Ultra-Star Mission Valley, a "new decade" in the words of the forward-looking press release, although the scheduled demolition of the theater in the makeover of Hazard Center casts a bit of a shadow. Enjoy it if and while you can. Overlapping that festival, October 22 through November 5 at the Museum of Photographic Arts, and at Landmark's La Jolla Village on October 23 only, is the fourth annual San Diego Italian Film Festival, containing within it a five-film retrospective of Marco Bellocchio, at least three of which five have hereabouts never been shown in public. ■ and all, serves up a creditable rendition of Melancholy Bogie. With Violante Placido, Paolo Bonacelli, Thekla Reuten, and Johan Levsen, 2010.

★ (HORTON PLAZA 14)

Buried — Gimmicky thriller whose single gimmick, if you have not been tipped off beforehand, dawns on you with a mounting sensation of hopelessness and resignation. Ryan Reynolds, in a word, is to be the only human being to appear on screen for the duration, entombed underground in a wooden coffin in Iraq, with only a cellphone to connect him to the world above: sort of a Sorry, Wrong Number pushed to an extreme of confinement and claustrophobia. The overt political overtones prove to be no more than a convenience, a facile solution to the plausibility problem of what kind of person would bury another person alive. And rather than being pulled into the reality facing the character, we're more apt to be pulled into the reality facing the filmmaker, the Spaniard Rodrigo Cortés. That is both the drawback of the movie and the draw. The pressing question is not so much how he, the character, is going to get out of it as how he, the filmmaker, is going to keep it going. For a movie contained in a crate, the camera is strikingly mobile, the space strikingly flexible: tracking shots and panning shots by the inch or by the foot. short sharp in-and-out zooms, a 360-degree rotating camera, Expressionist expansion and distortion of the box's dimensions. The trick of the thing, the challenge of it, is to be not so strikingly mobile and strikingly flexible as to sacrifice the sense of confinement and claustrophobia, yet not so confined and claustrophobic as to sacrifice the sense of cinema. The stunt, in a level-headed and even-handed view, is sustained very well for the full hour and a half but never developed into more than a stunt, 2010.

Conviction — Double meaning: the sister of a convicted murderer has complete conviction in his innocence. He may be a ne'er-do-well, but he ne'er did as bad as that. The true case, a DNA exoneration case, serves as an advertisement for the Innocence Project, with a specific plug for Barry Scheck, glamorized in the person of Peter Gallagher. The principal performances - Hilary Swank, Sam Rockwell, Minnie Driver, Melissa Leo, Juliette Lewis, Clea DuVall — really slather on the proletarianism, the main thing separating the film from the Lifetime Movie Network. an inspirational tale of faith, perseverance, triumph. Director Tony Goldwyn, fiddling like mad with the focus, isn't happy unless something in every shot is a blur. 2010.

Easy A — Surprisingly bright teen comedy, littered with tidbits of literary and cinematic erudition, about a viral highschool rumor that transmutes a studious virgin into a "dirty skank," a lesson in "the accelerated velocity of terminological inexactitude." The path the story takes is not always judicious (the girl plays up her new reputation, wearing a scarlet "A" in tribute to Hester Prynne), and the husky-voiced heroine, Emma Stone, seems preternaturally poised at all stages of it, and the satire of the Jesus freaks is complacent and obvious, and vet the writing, while overly showy, remains throughout fast-paced and punchy, whether in the framing webcast that furnishes a loquacious first-person narration ("If there's one thing worse than chlamydia, it's Florida") or in the snappy dialogue ("I got that V," she laments to a gay male friend, "where you'd rather see a P") that liberally spreads around the good lines, especially to the hip, cool parents (Stanley Tucci, Patricia Clarkson) and the hip, cool English teacher (Thomas Haden Church). The unhip and uncool are clearly differentiated. Both the opening credits, planted around the terrain like hidden Easter eggs, and the closing credits, over a leisurely travelling shot on the road to nowhere, are a significant part of the fun. With Lisa Kudrow, Penn Badgley, Amanda Bynes, and Malcolm McDowell; written by Bert Royal: directed by Will Gluck, 2010.

Howl — Documentarists Rob Epstein and Jeffrey Friedman (The Celluloid Closet, Common Threads, et al.) try their hands at narrative film, or docudrama, or maybe just simulated documentary, showing little storytelling sense. The central action, if one can be pinpointed, is the 1957 obscenity trial of the publisher of Allen Ginsberg's titular poem, drawing upon actual court transcripts. For the rest, there are lengthy recitations of the poem, at a black-andwhite public reading or else illustrated with surrealist animation, and there's a staged interview with the poet in his own words (James Franco, adopting an alien rhythm of speech, dragging, accelerating, lurching). The overall impression is that the film, at barely over an hour and a quarter, runs a bit short of material, David Strathairn, Ion Hamm, Bob Balaban, Jeff Daniels, Mary-Louise Parker, Treat Williams, 2010.

Inside Job — High-dudgeon documentary, concise, lucid, and loaded, on the economic nosedive of 2008: "This crisis was not an accident." Handsomely photographed, though largely wasted on talking heads. Narrated by Matt Damon. 2010.

Lebanon — Sledgehammer antiwar film from the claustrophobic confines of an Israeli tank at the start of the Lebanon War, 1982. The noise and vibration of the machine in motion are horrific, the sweat and piss (copious excretions of the four occupants) can just about be smelled, and the gunsight provides, through its crosshairs, telephoto views of constant pitiful appeals from the world outside: an innocent chicken peddler crying "Peace! Peace!" after his arms and legs have been blown off, a reproduction of Madonna and Child askew on the wall of a bombarded private home. Every now and then the infantry commander, commandingly played by Zohar Shtrauss, drops through the hatch of the tank to breathe some strength into his men and into the movie. Machete — Co-writer and co-director Robert Rodriguez (writing with Álvaro Rodriguez, directing with Ethan Maniquis) makes a feature-length reality of the hypothetical little teaser trailer tucked into the overstuffed package of Grindhouse, a bad dream come true. If nothing else, it gives a nice big fat leading role to Danny Trejo, a clock-stopping face condemned to the humble caste of perennial henchman, as a vengeful former Federale, allowed to canoodle with Jessica Alba and Michelle Rodriguez into the bargain. In spite of the deep-seated piety on immigration issues, its highest aspiration is simply to be a hoot. Its highest actual achievement is perhaps a cheep. (If only for the Dracula hairdo on Steven Seagal as a Mexican drug lord.)

Psycho — The barrenness of the television-play production and black-and-white image works rather nicely in the early scenes of bleak urban existence — the comfortless hotel room, Janet Leigh's comfortless bra — but Hitchcock seems to be pushing and pleading, later on, to extract thrills from a nosy highway patrolman, a slimy used car salesman, a lonely wayside motel, a collection of stuffed birds, and a Disneyland haunted house. The Secret in Their Eyes — From Argentina, an old-fashioned slick manipulative commercial entertainment that took home the Oscar for foreign film. Firm-footed, smooth-surfaced, it centers on a retired public prosecutor struggling to write a novel on a nagging twenty-year-old case, the rape and murder of a newlywed schoolteacher. Generating suspense partly through its coyness as to the outcome of that case, the film shuttles between two time zones, then and now, plainly signalling the period by way of the relative blackness or grayness of the beard and hair of the leading man, Ricardo Darín, a masterly underplayer, a shrewd economizer, a dignified sublimator, once you get past his constant look of acid indigestion. In addition to Darín's tormented hero, the film is filled with well-drawn characters; his alluring but seemingly unattainable new boss (Soledad Villamil), still at work — now a judge and still alluring twenty-odd years after the murder case: his erratic alcoholic colleague: the sarcastic tyrannical department head; the self-aggrandizing policeman: the obsessed husband of the victim; and, when at length he turns up, the hateful perpetrator. The sturdy storyline braids together a number of complementary strands — the unravelling of a mystery, for starters, with flashes of psychological and philosophical insight worthy of Simenon; political corruption (but of course) and abuse of power; unrequited love; the regrets of advanced age — en route to a satisfying if unsurprising surprise ending. Directed by Juan José Campanella. 2009.

★★★ (MISSION MARKETPLACE 13, FROM 10/22)

The Social Network — Everything you never wanted to know about the advent of Facebook, where "friends" gather on the Internet. An amorphous series of flashbacks from the depositions of two separate lawsuits takes you through the steps by which a socially inept (how ironic!) Harvard computer nerd stumbled upon "a once-in-a-generation holy-shit idea" and transformed himself into the world's youngest billionaire, making more enemies than friends (how more ironic!) along the way. Of necessity, it is filled with references, jargon, proper names, which will be familiar to some and unfamiliar to others. The former will be in a better position not just to understand but to identify and to envy — and possibly, paradoxically, to feel superior. The others are apt to be left out in the cold or simply left cold. Regardless, the film engineers a remarkably smooth experience, even when pressing the accelerator to the floor. The compulsive rapid patter (Aaron Sorkin, logorrheic screenwriter) is well handled by all, but especially in the lead role by Jesse Eisenberg, the pretentious high-schooler of The Squid and the Whale grown now into a pretentious collegian, adding the essential ingredients of detachment, abstraction, and arrogance to complete the character's charmlessness. The busy churning industrious background music sweeps you into the excitement whether or not you can see it or comprehend it. And director David Fincher bathes the eve with the muted dark harmonious color schemes of Whistler's Nocturnes. Despite the pieciness of the narrative, the film gives a good impression of being all of a piece, all of a tone. Altogether, it glides, it slides, and it never really grips. With Andrew Garfield, Justin Timberlake, John Getz, David Selby, Rashida Jones. 2010.

The Town — Ben Affleck's second directed film, after Gone Baby Gone, is a moderately diverting, mildly despicable game of copsand-robbers that counts, in its play for the spectator's sympathies, on the moral depravity of the public at large, a cynical safe bet. The central character (Affleck himself), a sensitive stickup man who afterwards woos the hostage taken at his latest caper, is hoped, or more truthfully presumed, to be protected from viewer disapproval by his personal avoidance of killing any innocent parties in the application of his trade, leaving that to the violent loose cannon in his gang of four (Jeremy Renner from The Hurt Locker, and still the cowboy), never mind his legal status as an accessory in such killings or his earnest attempts, when the bullets start flying fast and thick, to add to them firsthand. Even viewers who remain morally alive and kicking can be grateful for a crime thriller grounded in gritty reality; grateful at the abstinence from music-video visuals, explosions, martial arts, superheroes and archvillains; grateful enough to put up stoically with such standard usages as the raw rough grainy image (for grittier reality), the chopping off of the tops of heads at the tops of frames (for closer closeups), and the jittery jumpy iostled camera (for peak action); grateful enough not to squirm overmuch at the pro tracted car chase or the climactic full-scale warfare at the Boston "cathedral," Fenway Park. They can follow along through all of that in a half-hooked, half-wriggling kind of way, until, at last, they fully realize where the filmmaker's sympathies lie, and more than just sympathies, his sentimentalities, his laxities, his, well, insensitivities. Rebecca Hall, Jon Hamm, Blake Lively, Chris Cooper, Pete Postlethwaite. 2010.

Vertigo — It makes a certain sort of sense that this movie is not routinely grouped with other private-detective cases, since the case per se makes no sort of sense at all; not the sort of sense, at any rate, that a detective would be expected to make of it. Hence, the people who rank it as one of Hitchcock's finest, or as one of anybody's finest, would contend that the detective plot doesn't matter; that it is just a vehicle; that what the movie is "really about" is an erotic obsession, illusion vs. reality, a range of neuroses extending beyond mere acrophobia to clinical nostalgia, necrophilia, and Pygmalionism; that its kinship is nearer The Collector than The Maltese Falcon. This other (higher) thematic level no doubt lessens the bothersomeness of the plot holes. But any limitations inside the genre must to some extent limit the movie outside as well — and to a greater extent than if the limitations in question were those of unimaginativeness or over-obviousness or some such timidity that would nonetheless not erode its solidness as a springboard. Its troubles are bigger than that, however, and Hitchcock accepts them. Accepts them, that is, not with reluctance and resignation, not with his mind engrossed in higher things, but rather with complete co-operation, with that same petty deceitfulness that so cripples lesser works like Suspicion and Frenzy. This spirit of acceptance keeps the movie at all times within, or within easy range of, the borders of the private-detective genre, and aficionados of the genre ought to be as eager to claim it for their own, faults and all, as are some Hitchcock partisans to fight such a claim. James Stewart, Kim Novak, Barbara Bel Geddes. 1958.

★★★★ (GASLAMP 15, 10/26, 7:30 P.M.)

Waiting for Superman — Davis Guggenheim, the overshadowed director of An Inconvenient Truth, tackles another man-sized topic, American lower education, giving him much more to do than just to film a visually-aided lecture. He delivers his own personalized narration, includes footage from an earlier documentary of his, The First Year, digs up a clip of George W. Bush proclaiming optimistically, "Childrens [sic] do learn," takes on the teachers union, finds a few heroes to follow, and homes in on four heart-tugging minority grade-schoolers as examples. He also leans, conventionally enough, on a rotation of talking heads, and he narrows his scope in open advocacy of charter schools (with an endorsement from no less than Bill Gates). The lottery climax — his four pet students in competition for limited spots in superior schools — is brutal. 2010.

Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps -

Twenty-three years after he first visited the scene, Stone weighs in (thud!) on recent developments in the stock market, another chapter in his career of heavy breathing over epochal events. Gordon Gekko, his most memorable fictional creation (not to compete with Nixon, W., or Alexander the Great), out of prison after serving eight years for securities fraud, takes a backseat to his prospective son-in-law (Indiana Jones's son, Shia LaBeouf), but the banal personal drama in turn takes a backseat to the abstruse financial shenanigans. A couple of charmingly literal-minded symbols (wind-borne soap bubbles, falling dominoes) offer simplification if not clarification. The sleek swank production certainly appears to have some familiarity with money. Michael Douglas, Carey Mulligan, Josh Brolin, Frank Langella, Eli Wallach, Susan Sarandon, 2010.

Woody Allen back in England, plugging away in the manner of his endless autumn: unpretentious, unpressured, unpolished, just a kernel of an idea, thin on jokes and one-liners, fortunate still to find funding, free to do and to be. With little deliberation, he choreographs a dance of discontent and delusion for seven (or eight, nine, ten) featured dancers, the new divorcée who after a forty-year marriage falls under the spell of a fake fortune-teller, the liberated lonely old ex-husband who tumbles for a paid escort, the blocked novelist who gazes longingly past his wife at the Boccherini-playing guitarist in the window across the way, the wife who in her new job at a posh art gallery gazes longingly at her unhappily married boss. The immutable pattern overrides the arbitrary details, although Lucy Punch, the gaudiest detail, with a racehorse's flaring nostrils, steals the show in the same way that Mira Sorvino in a similar role stole Mighty Aphrodite. The occultism, taken with utmost unseriousness, adds perhaps a new dimension of discontent and delusion, or a new angle on them, but it could have added, with a little extra effort, a lot more. And yet the familiarity of the entire enterprise, beginning and ending with the changeless typeface of the opening and closing credits, brings a level of comfort that can only come with time, a level of expectation easily met and not likely exceeded. Somewhere the grass is sure to be greener, and Allen, as his film makes perfectly plain, is serenely resigned to it. Wander if you will. Gemma Jones, Anthony Hopkins, Josh Brolin, Naomi Watts, Freida Pinto, Antonio Banderas, Pauline Collins, 2010.

★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN 14: FLOWER HILL 4: HILLCREST CINEMAS; LA JOLLA VILLAGE; TOWN

Young Frankenstein — Mel Brooks's insular spoof on the old Universal Pictures horror series — it doesn't reach very far in any direction, but it expends a good deal of comic energy within the narrow confines. Basically, it resembles the sort of affectionate parody of old movies common on the Carol Burnett Show, although it is larger, fuller, and usually funnier. Brooks's stature as a moviemaker is boosted considerably by his efforts to carry the parody even to the Hollywood studio techniques of the 1930s On that score, he noses ahead of his closest competitor in screen comedy, Woody Allen, who has long gravitated toward old movies in search of subject matter, but whose comic copies achieve the proper cinematic style haphazardly at best. Same goes for his acting style. Whether he is impersonating a bank robber, a Latin American revolutionary, a robot, or a Bogart tough guy, Allen is always undermined by his feelings of imposture; Brooks suffers from, or at any rate displays, no such insecurities. With Gene Wilder, Peter Boyle, Cloris Leachman, Terri Garr, Marty Feldman, and Gene Hackman, 1974.

THE READER PUZZLE: RULES OF THE GAME

1) Submit your completed puzzle to the Reader each week for our ongoing contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online each week to sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by 7:00 a.m. Monday. 2) Be one of the first 125 people who submit the correct answers to one of the puzzles and we will print your name in the paper along with your brief message (10 words or less, no URLs or phone numbers). Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.

3) The puzzle-contest ranking, shown online and in the paper, will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year! 4) Entries must be faxed to 619-231-

0489 or 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803, or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy, or scanned and e-mailed to: puzzles@sdreader. com. Submissions by e-mail must be attached in JPG format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

10 Reader baseball caps are awarded weekly to contenders chosen randomly! And now for the really small print:

1) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided 2) Late entries will not be considered.

3) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.

4) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible

THE READER SUDOKU PUZZLES:

RULES OF THE GAME

1) Submit one completed puzzle of any difficulty level (Easy, Medium, Hard or Evil) to the Reader each week for our ongoing contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online at sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by 7:00 a.m. Monday.

2) Be one of the first 125 people who submit the correct answers to one of the words or less no URLs or phone numbers). Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.

3) The puzzle-contest ranking shown online and in the paper will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year!

4) Entries must be faxed to 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803, or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy, or scanned and e-mailed to: format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

- 5) 10 Reader baseball caps are awarded weekly to contenders chosen randomly!
- 6) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided
- 7) Late entries will not be considered.
- 8) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.
- 9) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.

BRAINSTORM PUZZLES:

RULES OF THE GAME

1) Submit one completed puzzle to the Reader each week for entry into another contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online at sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by

2) Be one of the first 125 people who submit the correct answers to one of the puzzles and we will print your name in the paper along with your brief message (10 words or less, no URLs or phone numbers). Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.

3) The puzzle-contest ranking, shown online and in the paper, will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year!

4) Entries must be faxed to 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803 or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy or scanned and e-mailed to: Puzzles@sdreader.com. Submissions by e-mail must be attached in JPG format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

- 5) 5 Reader baseball caps are awarded weekly to contenders chosen randomly!
- 6) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided.
- 7) Late entries will not be considered.
- 8) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.
- 9) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.

- "Tom Tom," a two-year-old Yorkshire terrier, was laid to rest at the Oakland Cemetery in Monticello, Ark., in March, even though he was in good health. His owner, Donald Ellis, had just passed away but had left explicit instructions that he wanted Tom Tom buried along with him, and not later on, because he felt that no one could love Tom Tom as much as he did. Ellis's reluctant family finally took Tom Tom to a veterinarian, who tried to change their minds but ultimately acquiesced and euthanized the dog out of fear that they would put him down anyway, less humanely.

The Entrepreneurial Spirit!

 The Swiss government announced in March that it would help bring to market extra-small condoms for boys as young as 12. (The decrease in circumference from a "standard" condom would be about 5/16th of an inch.)

- The Washington Post reported in May that high school and college-age adults had complained that condoms given away by the District of Columbia's HIV-prevention program were of too-low quality and that the City should spring for deluxe Trojan Magnums in gold-colored packaging, giving them, said a city official, "a little bit of the bling quality."

- In July, the prominent BrewDog brewery in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, began producing the world's strongest (and most expensive) beer, called The End of History, which is 55 percent alcohol and sells for 500 pounds ($780) a bottle. As if to enrage both anti-alcohol and animal-welfare activists, BrewDog released the first 12 bottles taxidermally inserted inside the carcasses of roadkill (seven ermines, four squirrels, and a rabbit). Said company founder James Watt, BrewDog aims to "elevate the status of beer in our culture." - At least two employees at the Olive View-UCLA Medical Center in Sylmar, Calif., were accused in May of carrying on a makeshift "beauty salon" inside the facility's Neonatal Intensive Care unit. Allegedly, eyebrow waxes and manicures were given near sensitive equipment used to combat infant infections and respiratory disorders. An investigation is continuing, but a hospital official said the notion of a "salon" was overblown and that perhaps a few nail treatments were involved. (Simultaneously, the facility is being investigated for taking kickbacks from

Weird Science

 On an August ABC-TV Nightline episode, professor Matt Frerking of Oregon Health and nursing homes for placing discharged Medicare or Medicaid patients into those homes.)

Science University allowed cameras to record his narcolepsy-like "cataplexy," which causes temporary muscle paralysis each time he contemplates romantic love (hugging or holding hands with his wife, viewing wedding pictures, witnessing affectionate couples). He noted that he can often fend off an impending attack by concentrating on his own lab work in neuroscience.

· When Ron Sveden's left lung collapsed in May, doctors initially diagnosed a tumor, but on closer inspection learned that Sveden, of Brewster, Mass., had ingested a plant seed that had somehow migrated to his lung and sprouted open. He is recovering.

- A Pomeranian puppy recently found wandering in San Bernardino, Calif., was diagnosed with reproductive-organ complications that destined him to be put down, but a woman volunteered $1165 for "transgender" surgery. "Red" is now happy and ready for adoption (and, of course, neutered).

- In August, a gaudily designed toilet from John Lennon's 1969-71 residence in Berkshire, England, fetched 9500 pounds (about $14,740) at a Liverpool auction; and a North Carolina collectibles dealer opened bids on the toilet that long served reclusive author J.D. Salinger at his home in Cornish, N.H. The dealer's initial price was $1 million because, "Who knows how many of Salinger's stories were thought up and written while [he] sat on this throne!'

— In September, the Romanian Senate rejected a proposal by two legislators to regulate and tax fortune-tellers and "witches," even though the government is otherwise desperately seeking new sources of revenue. A prominent witch had complained about potential record-keeping burdens on the "profession," but one of the bill's sponsors told the Associated Press he thinks opposition came from lawmakers who were frightened of having spells and curses placed on them.

Questionable Judgments

- New Hampshire teenager Kyle Dubois was critically injured in March when, during an electrical trades class, he and fellow students attached clamps to his nipples and plugged in an electrical cord. Dubois suffered permanent brain damage, and in August his parents sued the school district and the teacher.
