UNDER THE RADAR

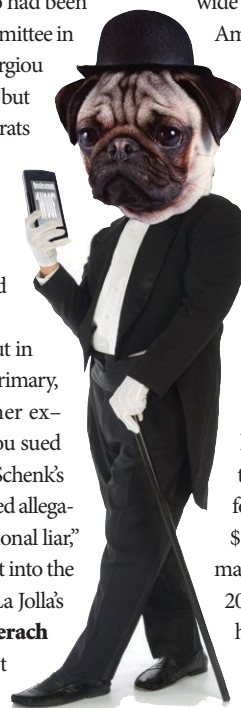

Out of the passed Once again presidential election season is about to begin, with potential GOP candidates jostling for position in a crowded and confusing pack. A few possible contenders have already made their way to San Diego County to pick up campaign cash. Of special note is Minnesota's conservative firebrand Republican congresswoman Michele Bachmann, who got $1000 from retired weight-loss magnate Jenny Craig of Rancho Santa Fe, as well as $500 from real estate investor John Peck Jr.... Meanwhile, ex-San Diego lawyer and politico Byron Georgiou is trying to carve out a new career in Nevada, where he's running for the U.S. Senate seat vacated by scandal-plagued Republican John Ensign, who resigned last month, unable to revive his political fortunes following news of his affair with his top aide's wife.

A onetime political prodigy here, Georgiou was legal affairs secretary for Democratic governor Jerry Brown during the early 1980s and ran for Congress in a 1990 Democratic primary against incumbent Jim Bates, who had been reproved by the House Ethics Committee in a 1989 sexual harassment case. Georgiou lost out to Bates by a 3 to 2 margin but was widely blamed by local Democrats for softening up the incumbent, who was taken down that November by Republican Randy "Duke" Cunningham, who is today serving a federal prison term on bribery and corruption charges.

In 1992, Georgiou again lost out in a nasty Democratic congressional primary, this time to Lynn Schenk, another ex-Brown aide. In that battle, Georgiou sued Schenk for libel and slander, citing Schenk's campaign advertising, which featured allegations that Georgiou was a "professional liar," among other things. Georgiou went into the casino business and worked with La Jolla's legendary securities lawyer Bill Lerach in pursuing his fraud case against Enron. Lerach later copped a plea to kickback charges in a separate case and did time in federal prison. In July 2006, Georgiou traveled to Ashford Castle in Ireland to marry Thérèse Nora Collins in a lavish ceremony attended by many California political bigwigs. Earlier this year, the couple attended a Saint Patrick's Day party at the White House, and Georgiou posed for a photo with Vice President Joe Biden.

Despite his big-time connections, and his hiring of the Democrats' internet whiz Joe Trippi as a top advisor, Georgiou is considered a long shot for the Senate seat in Nevada. He is facing off in the primary against Congresswoman Shelley Berkley, who is directing most of her fire at Republican Dean Heller, a former congressman who was appointed last month to fill out Ensign's Senate term. Berkley has been endorsed by Nevada Democrats and enjoys the support of Emily's List, the feminist political action committee, but that hasn't stopped Georgiou's local, liberal Democratic friends from kicking in. They include former foe Schenk, who with husband C. Hugh Friedman gave a total of $2000 in March; La Jolla investor Murray Galinson, who came up with $2500; and Michelle Ciccarelli, who owns Cups, a trendy cupcake shop in La Jolla, and also happens to be married to Bill Lerach. Federal records show that through March 31 of this year, Georgiou had $1,073,907 in cash on hand, $500,000 of which he personally lent to the campaign.

According to his campaign website, "Byron currently oversees Georgiou Enterprises, with wide ranging interests throughout Nevada."

Among the firm's local ventures, its website says, are Chula Vista's Salt Creek golf club: "Located beneath the shadows of Mt. Miguel and adjacent to a State Wildlife preserve, Salt Creek offers a unique golf experience to all levels of players."

Top lobbying dogs San Diego's Qualcomm Inc. has already spent $1,930,000 on federal lobbying through May 2, according to the website OpenSecrets.org. That's more or less on the same pace as in 2010, when the cell phone giant spent $6,500,000 for the entire year. It compares with the $340,000 year to date spent by drone-maker General Atomics, which rang up a 2010 total of $2,020,000. Sempra Energy has spent $230,000 this year; last year the company paid out $1,010,000. Synthetic Genomics, run by genetic engineer and UCSD alumnus J. Craig Venter, has spent $80,000 so far this year; last year the company spent $320,000.

Not Much to Brag About

By Don Bauder

We may not suffer an economic double dip, but we're in for double trouble, and it could last several more years. Both in the nation and San Diego, recent signs of weakness portend more years of high unemployment, receding home values, anemic construction, soft consumer spending, slow manufacturing, pain from excessive debt, and only moderately improving tourism.

San Diego enjoys one advantage: growing employment in tech, particularly biotech. On the other hand, one-fifth of the San Diego economy is tied to the military (both weaponry and payroll), and there is talk of cutbacks. Remember the early 1990s? The nation got a peace dividend; San Diego got a piece of poop in the kisser as aerospace companies closed down and engineers were laid off en masse.

There are a number of long-standing problems that have come together to bring the American economy down. Beginning in the 1980s, consumers, governments, and financial institutions piled up far too much debt. Wall Street went on a speculative binge. Then came the 2007-early 2009 crash. Washington came to the rescue of the financial institutions, handing them trillions of near-zero interest rate dollars for a record length of time.

That caused a double whammy. The stock and bond markets thrived on the cheap money. But the value of the dollar plummeted as the Federal Reserve, in effect, kept printing more bucks. Commodities, which are denominated in dollars, soared in price. So American families were hit with higher food and fuel prices. The big rise of financial asset prices boosted the wealth and incomes of the richest 10 percent, who control 80 percent of stock and bond wealth, but the lower 90 percent suffered from inflation and sagging incomes.

Thus we suffered a two-tier recovery. The wealthiest 10 percent were gleeful; the rest were glum as the gap between the rich and the rest widened. Not surprisingly, consumer confidence polls show Americans' mood stumbling along at 25 to 30 percent below the normal level. And consumer spending is 70 percent of the economy.

Economically, San Diego has been doing somewhat more poorly than the nation as a whole. The unemployment rate in the county has generally been above 10 percent while the nation's has been a notch below dou-

No Fun on Game Day

By Eva Knott

The surprise witness identified the defendant right away. “He sits in front of us at the Charger games,” said Sara Anderson.

She had video and photographs of him at the game on the night of the fatal crash.

John Francis Sudac Jr. was accused of hitting a car on I-5 in Solana Beach, then fleeing while a woman lay dead on the pavement.

A smashed silver Nissan Altima abandoned at the scene was registered to Sudac, and investigators located him. But the other man in Sudac’s car was not identified, Prosecutors convinced a jury that John Sudac Jr. was driving this Nissan Altima when it smashed into...

so Sudac’s defense attorney began building a case to raise reasonable doubt as to who was driving the Nissan at the time of the crash.

Anderson is not scary-looking, but she may have frightened Sudac when he saw her walk into the courtroom. It was more than two years after the crash when she entered the witness box. Anderson looked at Sudac, who was seated at the defense table, and said that she recognized him. “He has helped me and my mom take pictures of ourselves,” said Anderson, who likes to take a camera to Chargers games. She and her mom are season ticketholders.

When the Bolts bested the Indianapolis Colts in a play-off game on Saturday night, January 3, 2009, Anderson

The fans went to their feet at the end of the game. A photo showed the time on the scoreboard as 8:40 p.m. and the words “WE WIN!” One of the fans in the photo was Sudac. Anderson pointed him out. And standing next to Sudac was a man with a grin on his face looking straight at the camera. The man wore a black baseball cap. The cap looked just like the cap that investigators found in the smashed silver Nissan.

The Man Driving the Ford

There were five people in the 1998 Ford Explorer that was hit.

Vinicio Jimenez said he was driving from his home in Tijuana to visit relatives in Los Angeles. He borrowed the Explorer from his brother. Jimenez’s pregnant wife Yine was in the front passenger seat, and their five-year-old daughter Naomi was in the backseat with two relatives.

He was going about 55 miles an hour when he noticed lights coming up from behind. “All of a sudden they were very close. And they hit me,” Jimenez said.

“He flung me against the little wall. And then my car started turning over.”

Jimenez said the car that hit him became jammed under his vehicle. “He was in back of me, in the rear. He was stuck to me.” He said the cars did not disengage until his Ford smashed into the center divider and began tumbling down the

Crackdown on Chewing Gum Litter

Tijuana — In an effort to curb certain citizens’ tendency to toss gum on city streets, Tijuana businesses, under the auspices of city hall and the police department, have posted placards that warn of fines for sidewalk gum-dumping.

The city has paid whopping sums to resurface streets and create new sidewalks in the past few years. It hasn’t taken long for thoroughfares to become littered with gum.

Despite business owners’ efforts (including sections of sidewalk varnished with some kind of acrylic to thwart the sticky chicle), the accumulation hasn’t stopped. The signs indicate that police will now arrest, prosecute, and fine offenders caught in the act of gum-chucking.

Just One?

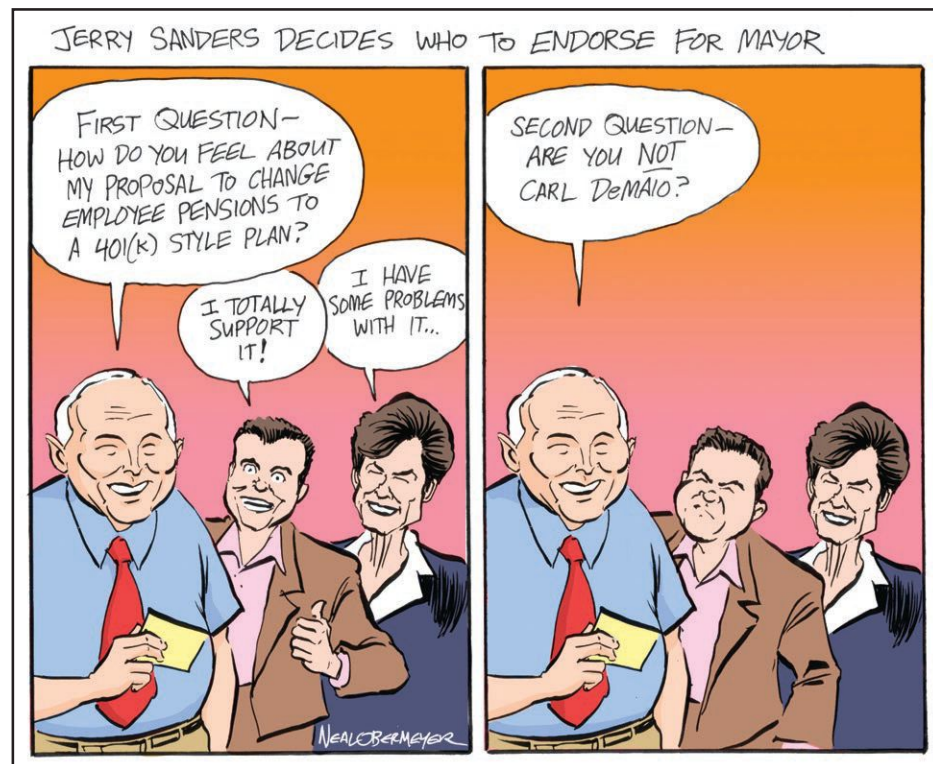

City Council Hears Gripe About Ban on Feather Flags Escondido — Kevin Niems, a 15-year Escondido resident and owner of three area Subway sandwich shops, appeared before the city council on June 8. He was there to voice his opposition to the city’s enforcement of the ban on vertical “feather flags” he has used outside his business.

Niems, who has been an Escondido business owner since 2000 and claims to employ 40 people, said the city’s decision has adversely affected his business.

“For the last one to two years, we have been using a feather flag at two of my locations,” said Niems. “I’ve seen

Can't Get No Satisfaction

Re “I Want Love Now” by Heather Augello (Cover Story, June 9). No matter what you do, you can never make everyone happy! All you can hope to do is do your job to the best of your ability and hope that some jerk doesn't get you fired for not finding love. I used to work at an Arco, and customers can be horrible. I've had money thrown at me and then they'd walk away. One customer blamed me for giving her gas away when it was her fault for giving me the wrong pump number. People would give me attitude. If I was nice to them — attitude. If I was too slow — hell; even if I was too fast. With people, you just can't win!

Gimme

The article “I Want Love Now” (Cover Story, June 9) by Heather Augello typifies much of today's attitudes in society. The “I want it yesterday” notion that everything should be readily available to me whenever I want it seems to encompass material goods, education, and relationships. Ever notice how many good-paying, rewarding careers can be obtained in just a few short months or weeks and even online, without even leaving your home? Only then can you get all the things you've ever wanted, including love! But, wait...if you call now, we'll include...

Bare Barbies

This is a concerned reader of the Reader. I'm looking at the cover here (June 9), and I really think it's inappropriate, especially for a child's view. It looks like we have three Barbies that have no tops on them, like they're sunbathing or something. My child did bring it to my attention. Somebody's a real brainiac on this one.

Patience, Grace, Mercy

I just read the column on Evelyn Irving-Jackson, a woman I never met (“There Is No Black San Diego,” Feature Story, June 9). However, I thank God for the work that she is doing. You really need to have the love of God to do the work she is doing. It takes patience, grace, and mercy. You have to walk in the love of God because we are human, and it can only take us so far. We need to have someone higher than us. She is a blessing, and my prayer for her and her husband is that God will give them both the desires of their heart. Evelyn, if you should see this little note, I want you to know that you are always in my heart. Keep doing the work that God has given you.

Cabana Boy

I didn't recognize the number with the San Francisco area code, but when I read the text I picked up my phone and dialed it. Once Eddie grabbed the line, I said, "Does this answer your question? Of course it's still my number. You in town?"

It had been about three years since I'd seen him last, but Eddie and I go all the way back to high school. When we reconnected a few years after graduating, we were heavy in the party scene. One morning, he laid out a small towel to sunbathe on the asphalt of the parking area in front of my apartment (these were swanky times, when I lived behind the Wienerschnitzel). Aviator glasses on his face, orange Speedos protecting his modesty, and a cocktail in one hand, it was then that Eddie earned his nickname: Cabana Boy. The best part of that day was when my sister (my roomie at the time) came home from work to find the oiled-up specimen lounging right in front of our open door.

"I've been here all week," Eddie said. "Tomorrow I'm going to visit Ben and Grace and see their new baby, but tonight I'm open."

"New baby?" I said. "Good for them." Then, in a sardonic tone, I added, "Apparently, babies are like tattoos — seems nobody can stop at one. Everyone around me is popping 'em out, one after the other. It's like an epidemic."

I expected him to laugh, but instead, Eddie said, "Um, well, that's part of why I'm here."

"Come again?" I racked my brain. Eddie is gay. Last I heard, he was single. But there was a quality in his voice that signaled what he was about to say, and though I needed him to confirm it with words, I already knew.

"Remember my friends Lindsay and Justina? Well, they're going to have my baby."

Fortunately, one of my super powers is the ability to switch gears. I learned this ability from my mother, who could halt herself in the middle of an ear-splitting tirade and answer the phone in a quiet, treacly tone.

"Eddie, that's AWESOME! Congratulations! What? How? Wait, tell me about it later, when you come over. Talk about 'modern family'...I love it! I can't wait to hear more."

"I know. It's crazy, right?"

I could hear the excitement in my friend's voice, and though part of me thought, losing another friend to baby land, the majority of me was full of pride and joy, as these were the emotions that were emanating from Eddie. "From Cabana Boy to Baby Daddy," I said. "Congratulations. Now get your hot ass over here so I can get the full scoop face-to-face."

The Clock Is Ticking

Perhaps it's because I'm in a bad mood today, or maybe it's because I've heard it one too many times this week, but regardless of the reason, I'm all in a huff over one particular phrase. It's one you know, one you've heard, likely from a parent or sibling. It's usually spoken in a familial context. It's not the phrase alone that bothers me, so much as all of the weight of its subtext — and the guilt.

The phrase doesn't stand alone — it can't. It needs to be preceded by a certain premise: that there is someone elderly or ailing, and that someone is elsewhere. Someone with whom you are likely not close, but whose home your business or pleasure will soon bring you within the general vicinity of. It is only after these factors are in place that a family member will say, "Are you going to stop by and visit [said elderly or ailing person]?" And it is this question, which is followed by the phrase that is currently the focus of my menstrual-induced rage: "I mean, we're not sure how long he/she is going to be with us."

To which I think, but never say, What does that matter? You visit a person because you want to, not because you're afraid they might die tomorrow and you'll have missed your chance to say whatever it is you've always yearned to say but never had the courage because you were convinced they'd still be around to judge you for it.

Who knows how much time any of us has? I could walk outside today, get hit by a car, and die on the spot. In fact, three people have died on the crosswalk in front of my building, so this is not as far-fetched as you might think. Sure, someone who is extremely elderly or ill has a greater chance of sleeping the final sleep. But is that what it takes to pull you out of your self-absorbed world and show a little kindness?

I spend time with people I love. Most of them are healthy. When those healthy loved ones of mine do fall ill, or elderly, I won't feel the guilt and weight of "rushing" to be the way I wish I'd been when they were well. Why wait until then? It seems downright stupid. So, know this, dear loved ones — if I care, I'm there. Now. In sickness or in health. And if I'm not there now, when you are well, don't expect me to knock on your door with apologies and excuses when you fall ill. Because if I'm anything, it's consistent.

Going Out on a High Note?

Family of Man Who Committed Suicide Using La Mesa Woman's "Exit Kit" Suing for "Pain and Suffering Caused by the Unintentionally Hilarious Death of a Loved One by Helium Inhalation"

"Remember meeeeeeeeeeeee!" MANNING THE BALLOON MACHINE AT PARTY CITY IN EL CAJON — The saga of the Gruesome Grandma of Grossmont just took a turn for the blackly humorous, thanks to an unemployed technical writer and an Apple computer's built-in webcam.

First, a little background: La Mesa grandmother Charlotte Hydorn was arrested in late May in connection with the death of 29-year-old Poway man Rick Krepeski after he purchased one of her homemade "exit kits" and used it to end his life. Hydorn, who sells the kits at $60 a pop, is the sole member of GLADD (Glorious Life And Dignified Death), an organization dedicated to helping the terminally ill to see themselves out of this world on their own terms. The kit consists of a plastic bag that seals around the neck and is equipped with a rubber tube that may be hooked up to a helium tank.

Straight helium is lethal after just a couple of minutes. Unfortunately, it's also hysterical after just a few seconds, and after deciding to commit suicide, Krepeski made the perhaps doubly regrettable decision to record his demise on his computer in a kind of video suicide note. When his horrified family viewed the video in an attempt to understand why their beloved son and brother would make this terrible decision (Krepeski was not terminally ill), they soon found themselves subjected to the nightmarish experience of howling with laughter at the death of a loved one.

"The past few years have been agony for me," began Krepeski, sounding not unlike Theodore from Alvin & the Chipmunks. "Ever since Diana broke up with me and I got laid off from work, I've been so depressed, and nothing seems to help. Whoa, dizzy."

"God help me, it was the 'whoa' that did it," said Krepeski's mother Lydia. "His voice was already high as a kite, but it must have jumped another half-octave right there, and I just lost it. 'Whoa. Dizzy.' I just wanted to scream at the computer screen, 'No shit, Sherlock!' But I was laughing too hard to speak. I mean, I literally almost die... Oh, God."

"I'm so confused," confessed Krepeski's brother Mike. "I mean, if this were anybody else, I'd be slapping this up on YouTube and forwarding it to my friends. At one point, when he's going on about how it's not our fault and that he knows we love him and that he's sorry, he sounds just like Cartman from South Park. What am I supposed to do with that? So epic, and yet so tragic."

"I loved my son," concluded Krepeski's father John, his jaw clenched in an effort to stifle the chuckles welling up from within. "He had so much potential — this video just confirms that. It's the tears of the clown to the nth degree. Andy Kaufman, eat your heart out. But, funny or not, you can bet your ass I'm going to make that old lady pay for what she did."

The civil case will not take place until after Hydorn's criminal trial, and there are some who wonder if the 91-year-old will even be around long enough to face justice. "It's probably just as well," admitted one San Diego judge, speaking on condition of anonymity. "I doubt we could ever get a jury that could keep a straight face during presentation of evidence."

San Diego's Naval Center for Combat and Operational Stress Control Unveils New Campaign to Rebrand Combat Stress

Center director Scott Johnson: "We're trying to destigmatize the crazy-train part of being sent overseas to shoot people and get shot at, and then being brought back stateside and told that 'We're on a path in the Department of Defense to turn it into a benefits company that may occasionally kill a terrorist.' That's from retired major general Arnold Punaro, a former Marine currently serving on the Defense Business Board. The guy advises the Pentagon on financial questions, for God's sake. I'm thinking he probably wishes we weren't so careful about keeping our boys alive. Maybe a ground war with China would help to thin the ranks. Anyway, you gotta laugh. Otherwise, you'll probably snap and shoot up a Walmart."

Mayoral Candidate Blasts Opponents for Serving "Their Particular Special Interests" Through "Back-Door Deals"

OUT BY THE FLAGPOLE AFTER SCHOOL — "My opponents [councilman Carl DeMaio and district attorney Bonnie Dumanis] are local operators, part of the administration that queered the city's finances in the first place," said mayoral candidate Nathan Fletcher, addressing a crowd of supporters from atop a decommissioned Sherman tank that he had maneuvered into the auditorium at Roger Hedgecock Elementary in Rolando. "What this city needs is a real straight-shooter, and if there was one thing I learned in Iraq, it was how to shoot straight!"

Fletcher, DeMaio, Dumanis

When this reporter reminded Fletcher that DeMaio had actually campaigned for his council seat on the platform of financial reform for San Diego's fiscal fudgepot, the candidate lowered the tank's gun into firing position and politely reminded those in attendance that this was not a scheduled debate.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP BY MATTHEW ALICE

Hey, Matthew:

Is there any practical limit to how big passenger planes can get? They seem so huge now, I was just wondering if there's some top size that they can get to before they just can't fly.

— Anonymous, San Diego

Yeah, the Airbus A380 can haul around a small town's worth of folks at its maximum configuration. Of course, the size limit might have more to do with how long it would take to get all those people through inspections to get on the plane in the first place. Start shuffling through the X-ray machine on Wednesday for a Friday flight. But, actually, the state of physics being what it is today, there's no limit to the size of a flying object, assuming you can generate enough engine thrust to haul the beast off the ground and to stay aloft. But, you have to keep in mind the fact that weight increases by a cube of the length, width, or height of your new Pterodactyl 5000. If you double the size of the A380, weight would increase by a factor of eight. Perhaps you can specialize in transporting very thin people with few clothes to keep things under control.

What you need, obviously, is the strongest, lightest fuselage material you can find. The Airbus is 25 percent plastic. Comforting thought. It's aluminum (like most other planes) reinforced by quartz, carbon, or glass fibers and plastic laminates. Take-off weight is calculated at about 650 tons and it cruises at about 560 miles per hour. It can take off on most runways that can accommodate a 747, so you don't have to enlarge your airport into the next county. Boeing's 787 is 80 percent plastic composite, but not as big as the Airbus. Each Airbus customer designs its own interior configuration, but the maximum passenger load is up to 800 fellow travelers in a double-decker style. So, theoretically, the only size limit to a plane is what the market can bear, and, boy, I'd say we can't bear much more than we're subjected to now.

Hi Matt:

Why can foreigners like David Beckham, Yao Ming, and many others just pop over to the USA whenever they want, make millions here "working," yet the foreigners who come to pick the lettuce get their butts deported as soon as they are found? If there is some easy way to get a work permit for the Beckhams, why can't the poor foreigners get one, too? Sounds unfair to me.

— CC, Vista

Part of your answer is the fact that nobody will pay huge sums for season floor seats to watch an anonymous immigrant pick lettuce. Beckham, Yao, and planetloads of athletes, performers, educators, tech specialists, biochemists, and other professional superstars can get past the migra easily with their O-1 visas. These are reserved for what the consular service calls

"aliens of extraordinary ability."

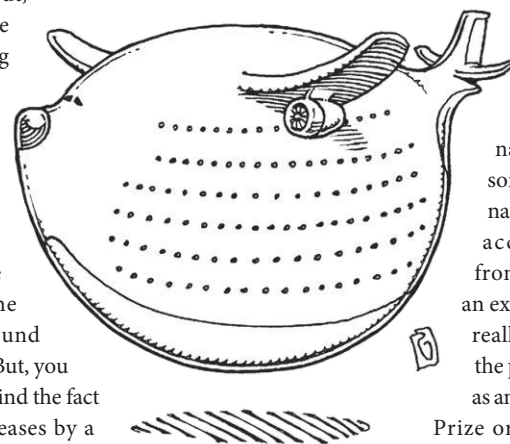

So, how do you prove you have extraordinary ability? You need some sort of "sustained national or international acclaim" and letters from peers stating what an extraordinary alien you really are. Cited often in the professional literature as an expert? Have a Nobel Prize or two? Film and TV personalities need to show some "advanced achievement." Athletes need a "level of expertise not possessed by others" and must have risen to the top of their professions. Beckham seems to qualify, but there's a lot of wiggle room in those descriptions. "Extraordinary ability," in reality, might mean being over seven feet tall or being a handsome, photogenic British bloke.

O-1s must have a guarantee of employment before they enter the U.S. (Nike, in the case of Yao), and the future employer handles the visa-application process. Once you have your papers, the consular service considers you a "temporary worker," not an "immigrant"; the visa says nothing about residency — just employment — and gives you no resident-alien status. If eventually you get booted off the movie set or out of the locker room or genetics lab, your employer is supposed to buy you a one-way ticket back to Shanghai or Manchester or wherever you came from.

The consular service offers 11 different kinds of temporary-worker visas covering different situations. If you're a foreign employee of an extraordinary alien and your work is vital to keeping the alien extraordinary, then you get an O-2 visa. And in Beckham's case, the adorable Skeletal Spice might get an O-3 visa identifying her as the spouse of an extraordinary alien, but that wouldn't give her permission to work.

BACK WHEN in the Reader

Thirty-Five Years Ago

Dear Matthew Alice:

Why don't cats have to have licenses?

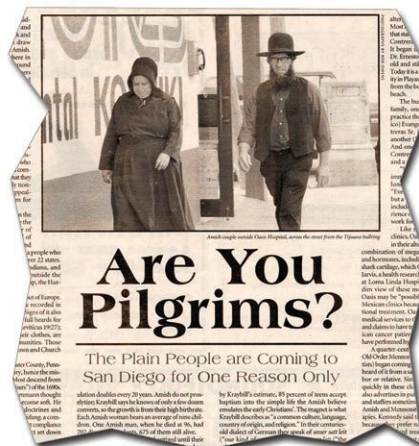

Paul Bloom, Point Loma

Dear Paul:

Cats in San Diego are classified "wild animals," just like opossums and werewolves. Not only does this allow cats to roam free, as is their nature, but it saves the city from having to hire cat catchers (even if there were cat catchers, they'd probably have a tough job).

In Saddle Brook, New Jersey, all cats are required to wear bells, to protect birds from sneak attacks. In sections of New York state, anyone over 21 possessing legal firearms can shoot cats that are out to get birds of any species that are protected by law.

Here's how AutoMates works: Single female sees single male driving a Buick Riviera along Interstate 8, his handsome profile highlighted by an open sunroof. Maybe he is a real estate broker. She stares, then smiles when she looks back at him. The next move is hers. She coyly accelerates, wagging her vanity license plate in his face. He recognizes the AutoMates decal in the back window of her Mercury Cougar. Auto ardor can be followed up by copying down a member's license plate and calling the club for personal details.

Seen through the distortion lens of depression, San Diego is not a pretty town. The poor man's Los Angeles; San Francisco with a lobotomy; America's finest retirement village; none of these clichés do justice to the awful chipboard-and-stucco creepiness of the place....

I am on the cliffs at Torrey Pines or on Mt. Soledad. Nearby, I've left a will and a farewell note. (It's this last business, by the way, that has forestalled suicide. I can't manage a farewell note. Even a George Sanders valedictory — "I'm simply bored" — expresses more sense of purpose than I can summon up.)

The Amish. They don't live here or anywhere in California, but they've been seen around the South Bay in increasing numbers since 1990, mainly in the northern end of Chula Vista, San Ysidro, and Imperial Beach. "I see them sometimes around the Tijuana estuary," says Mike, an I.B. beach-comber. "The women always walk behind the men. But I wave to them, and they wave back." Mike thought they were Quakers.

Crushed epazote smells a little like gasoline, pungent and vaguely sulfurous. ("An animal smell" is a friend's best description.) The aroma is difficult to describe because it's said to resemble only that of an even lesser-known herb. Peumus boldus Molina, or Boldo, found in the Andean highlands in Chile. What the two plants have in common is ascaridol, a high-smelling chemical reviled by intestinal parasites.

Five Years Ago

There were blue thongs piled on a table, a mix of what thongs used to be — flip-flops — and what they are today — bikini bottoms. Trying to get a picture of both types of thong, I moved them together. As I snapped the photo, I noticed smoke. I had thrown a bikini onto a candle and it caught fire. I put it out and looked around. Only one woman noticed. I folded the thong so the black spot I burned in it wouldn't show. The woman smiled at my clumsiness. I said, "Well, instead of bra burning, it was thong burning."

Pop Quiz

Reggie Bush received improper benefits at USC and last year made $8,000,000 as a Saint.

We'll start with the University of Southern California (USC) bust. You remember the school criminals: O.J. Mayo (received improper benefits) played college basketball for one year, skipped to the NBA (Memphis Grizzlies), and made $4,456,000 last season. Reggie Bush (received improper benefits) jumped to the NFL (New Orleans Saints) after his junior year, made $8,000,000 in 2010. Pete Carroll, Bush's coach, left town while the NCAA investigation was under way, hired on as the Seattle Seahawks head coach, signed a five-year, $33 million contract.

Yes, these people are suffering, but that's not all; in fact, that's barely the beginning. USC sent back their 2004 Bowl Championship Series (BCS) trophy. I should put in here that the Associated Press announced they will continue to rank USC as the 2004 national champion. Still, the BCS Trophy cost $35,000 and looked pretty on the shelf. And now that bit of pretty is gone from the USC campus. USC has served one year of a two-year ban on bowl games, which will include, this year, the Pac 12 championship game. And the Trojans lose ten scholarships per year for three years. Plus, any upperclassman can transfer to any other football factory without having to sit out for a season. We have, finally, true collegiate free agency.

Now, is this something you can live with? Is going in front of a judge, pleading guilty to kidnapping an elementary school, and getting unsupervised probation for two months something you can live with?

And, yet, these sanctions are the most severe sanctions since 1987, when SMU football was flat-out banned for two years. SMU, by the way, is the only school that has ever been subject to that penalty.

But, let's not gloss over the pain. These program-killing sanctions have profoundly wounded

USC, to the extent that, according to USA Today, Trojans football only managed to sign a top-five national recruiting class this year. Hey, top-five is not number one. The pain of being somewhere in the top five and not number one can only be known by those who have endured it. And that's not you, Pilgrim.

Like any world-class bureaucracy, the NCAA excels at enforcing minute infractions while allowing members of the collegiate-industrial complex to plunder and pillage. Follows is a pop quiz entitled "Is This an NCAA Rules Violation?" beginning with one from Bill Lubinger of The Plain Dealer (Cleveland).

"The team's star linebacker is headed to the local banquet hall to speak [for free] at a pee-wee football dinner. He swings by the athletic offices, where the head coach notices he's not wearing a tie. The coach pulls one from his drawer, tosses it to the linebacker, and wishes him good luck with the speech.

"Possible violation. A tie, or other dress clothes for that matter, could be bought by the student-athlete using the Student Athlete Fund — a fund provided by the NCAA to help them cover the difference between their scholarship and the cost to attend school. However, institutions are not allowed to loan dress clothes. If a school requires a suit/jacket and tie, the items would have to be bought through the fund. Even if the linebacker returned the tie after the event, it could still be viewed as a violation."

NCAA rules prohibit fans from contacting prospective student-athletes. Fans, meaning those people who live in front of their television screens or anybody else. No contact includes Facebook and Twitter messages.

How about this: a high school football player sends a text message to an Arizona football coach about the game he played last night. The coach texts back, congratulating him. Is this an NCAA rules violation?

Violation.

A coach is allowed to call a recruit one time per week. The coach calls, recruit answers, says hello, the call is dropped. Can the coach call back? Hell, no.

Then we have the booster situation. What is a booster? Well, you are a booster if you've ever belonged to any organization that promotes a college athletic program or if you, personally, have ever promoted the aforementioned in any way. If you've ever given money to the money-begging athletic department. If you've ever attended a college and was on a college athletic team. If you are a season-ticket holder. And, once you're identified as a booster, you stay a booster indefinitely. Think of it as a collegiate "no fly" list.

The football team playing a road game checks in to a hotel the night before the big contest. Can the college purchase pay-per-view movies for their warriors?

Sure, but only the night before the game, only if it's not porn, only if the good guy wins, and only if the NCAA is portrayed as omniscient provider of goodness.

T.G.I.F.

BY JOHN BRIZZOLARA

How do I keep from losing weekends like that? The answer was a small voice. "Ask someone normal," the voice said.

This would be a Friday night some weeks back, the most recent Friday the 13th, technically not a full moon but close enough for rock and roll. I was walking along C Street, downtown, past the Fish Joint, closed now for hours; it was around 11 p.m. I was unable to sleep — tossing, turning, thinking of Sartre and my own lingering alienation (decades now) in my converted hotel room, which is a kind of real-life imitation of some artful movie-set flop house, lacking only a bare lightbulb suspended from the middle of the room, maybe a revolver on the cigarette-stained night stand with a half-full bottle of cheap bourbon, and a stuttering neon sign just outside the third-floor window: O-T-E-L.

I gave up trying to recall my once-memoirized chapters of Sartre's Troubled Sleep, threw on my raincoat, turned my collar to a wind that was not there, thrust my fists deep into the pockets, and followed my nose and the tomcat perfume of jacaranda along the trolley tracks. Stepping into a pub on Sixth, I stood in the doorway and scoped out the bar sprouting snap-brimmed hats hunched over shots and beers. A hostess leered wantonly at me (an uncanny resemblance to my mother) and extended a menu, asking, "How many are you, sir?"

"One," I told her, saying nothing of the legion of warring demons within me. In my trench-coat pocket, my fingers had closed around the empty prescription bottle for my antidepressants. It had been over a week now without them, which might explain why the O'Doul's she poured me looked like the excrement of the post-industrial and electronic culture that suffocated me daily.

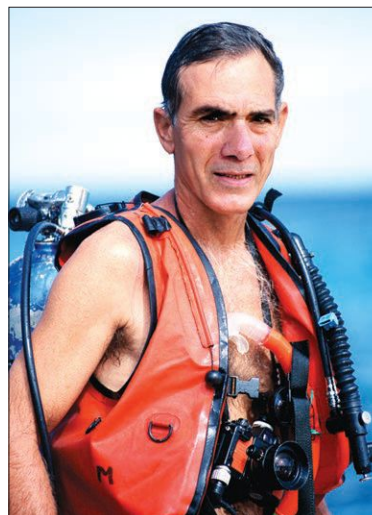

Leaving the faux beer unfinished, I quickly fled the establishment, stifling my existential nausea. On the street again, I wondered if downtown had gotten worse in the 30 years I've been here — or is it me? Are these unfortunates, these psychosocially dysfunctional souls hanging onto the edge of the planet with suction cups, just another version of themselves, avatars of the same stained and damned souls that populated these city blocks three decades ago? My nausea gave way to a light-headedness that threatened to overcome me on these Gaslamp streets.

I lifted the back of my right hand to my forehead, staving off, I hoped, yet another fainting spell. With my other hand, I signaled a passing taxi. Returning to my cell of a room, anemic with hopelessness, I clutched the thin blanket about me, lodged my thumb against my inner cheek and fled for three days into unkind dreams.

The following Tuesday brought relentless rain beneath a still somehow fullish moon visible occasionally between clouds. But I set out, recorder in hand, in search of hope and an answer to the question, How do I keep from losing weekends like that? The answer was a small voice yet with a majestic power suggesting God. Maybe not the God, but a god. "Ask someone normal," the voice said.

Jackie Fundak, 44, is having lunch in Little Italy with her girlfriend Paula Kwast, 48. Both are from San Diego. Last weekend Jackie put the Fun back in Fundak by attending a horse show in Bonita. "If your daughter rides horses, you go to horse shows," she said. Fundak has no plans for the upcoming weekend as of yet but describes her ideal weekend as "a weekend in Bermuda. Did that four years ago and it was fun!"

Jackie F's companion nods. "A weekend at the beach is her thing, all right. This weekend I'm helping to move my office, but ideally I'd be spending that time by the side of the pool, not running the kids around."

"Scuba-diving in Monterey," Sharif Ahmed, 28, tells me. "That's what I did last weekend." No plans as yet for next weekend. "Last year I saw my first shark, that was in the Bahamas. About eight feet, not too big. That would be my weekend all the time, if possible. Scuba-diving."

Bill Wells, 56, is a security guard with Elite Security. "Last weekend was great. I worked. Ideally, I'd be working every weekend; that's what I'm after, full-time work. I was passed over for that because of discrimination." Wells feels he was discriminated against as a Caucasian in favor of other ethnic groups. "But last weekend I worked the North Park Festival of Arts. I enjoyed that, just watching the people and meeting artists and musicians." Wells is a former long-distance trucker but does not miss it. "There's nothing fun about pulling into Detroit, dead of winter, two in the morning."

—EVE KELLY

‘Henna is usually part of joyful occasions,’ explained Wardah Halim of HennaTrendz in Chula Vista (858-366-3374; hennatrendz.com). ‘Marriages, birthdays, graduations, sweet 16s, bar mitzvahs.’

A few of those occasions are in the Kelly family’s near future, and I’ve always been fascinated with the flowing designs of henna art. That’s why I was talking with Halim, who explained that henna is a plant.

‘The scientific name is Lawsonia inermis. It grows in hot, humid climates: India, Pakistan, Yemen, India, Egypt, Morocco. The leaves of the plant are ground into a fine powder and then a paste is made out of that powder, using natural ingredients such as lemon juice and essential oils. The paste is used to draw designs on the skin. It’s a natural dye. It’s temporary; it lasts anywhere from one to three weeks. Because it’s staining the top few layers of skin cells, it will come off as your skin cells exfoliate.

‘The final stain of henna comes out as a shade of brown — a burgundy brown, mahogany brown — but never black.’

Halim cautioned about using what is called black henna. ‘Black henna is p-phenylenediamine [PPD], which is used in artificial dye — it’s not good for your skin.’

Halim has been doing henna since she was 12. ‘I am a traditional girl. I do the floral traditional styles — Indian, Arabic, Hindu-like styles. I don’t do creatures — dragons, birds, fish.’

HennaTrendz prices for the design start at $10 in her home studio. Parties start at $70 an hour.

‘I am from Pakistan,’ said Anita Bhakta of Hennasphere in Bay Park (858-220-6782; hennasphere.com). ‘In our culture, we have henna parties before any big event — weddings, religious occasions. I grew up going to these parties. The host would distribute henna cones, and everyone would try their hand at it. Usually there were only a handful of people at the party who felt comfortable doing it. Everyone would always be very willing to let me draw them, even when I was eight years old.’

Bhakta specializes in Indian and Arabic styles of henna. ‘But if someone brings me an image, I can pretty much copy anything,’ she said. ‘For a bracelet, a flower, or an anklet, it only takes a couple minutes. If I was to do an Indian bride who wanted the traditional amount of henna — both hands, front and back, the feet, up the ankles, and maybe even further up — it could take four to six hours. The more you practice doing your henna, the faster you get. For a half-hour appointment, someone can get quite a bit of henna done. So sometimes I say, ‘Bring a friend, because if you are just wanting something going up your arm, I can do that in 15 minutes.’

‘Henna on pregnant bellies is a big trend right now,’ she added. ‘It’s definitely a Western thing. We don’t do that in our country, but it is a really nice canvas.’

Bhakta charges $75 an hour, with a two-hour minimum, and a travel fee for more than ten miles. Her home studio rates are $60 for a half hour, with no time minimum.

‘I do quite a few pregnant bellies, which is a fun addition to a baby shower,’ said Natasha Papousek of Crescent Moon Designs Henna Art in Lemon Grove (619-337-5780; cmoondesigns.com). ‘I also get quite a few people just wanting to do something special to show off in the summer. I had one guy who was going to an event in San Francisco, and he wanted something really wild, so I did his whole chest and back and down the arms.’

Papousek charges $75 an hour to come to a client. In the studio, she averages about $10–$15 per appointment. If a client is having henna done for an event, she recommends scheduling the appointment two days before the event in order for the henna to come to its full color.

‘I get calls from clients that want to get henna done because they want to get a permanent tattoo,’ said Tejal Shah of Henna San Diego in Rancho Peñasquitos (858-752-3628; hennasandiego.com). ‘The client tries it out first in henna.’

Shah charges $65–$100 an hour. No travel fee for up to 25 miles. Individual appointments at the studio are $5 and up. (Ten percent off when you mention that you saw Henna in the Reader!)

Style Stalker

BY KENDRA CLARK

My Style

Terri Beth Mitchell

My Style "Premeditated whimsy."

I'm a designer; it's okay for me to look a little off.

My Shopping Approach I get dressed like a little kid gets dressed: Ooh, that's pretty or sparkly or bright, I want to wear that. Then I force an outfit around whatever it is I want to wear — it's a way for me to be creative.

My Philosophy I don't take myself seriously. I love my pantaloons because, A., I get to call them pantaloons.

(Note, there's no B.)

My Faves I love all things miniature. For earrings I'll wear Legos, knives, hamburgers, and hotdogs — anything miniature. I also like fun purses, like this pizza handbag and bomb purse.

I've been obsessed with mermaids since The Little Mermaid came out. I went on Etsy.com and searched the words "mermaid" and "dress." My mother was excited to find these yellow heels for me. She said, "These are stripper shoes from a stripper site!"

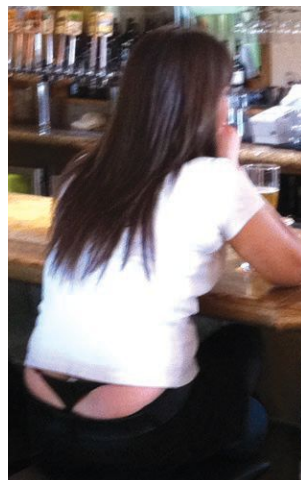

I really like this because it subtly tells people I am a queen.

DARE TO BE DIFFERENT... OR NOT

Slumber Party Chic, spotted on Palomar Airport Road. How to rock it: grab your pajama pants and that old throw from the couch, tie it all together with an accent scarf, and you're ready for the asphalt carpet.

Kudos for concealing your tramp stamp. That would have been way too much sexy for Carlsbad's Karl Strauss Brewery on a Sunday.

If clothing came in flavors, this ensemble would be "magically delicious."

No more sleepless nights spent wondering what would happen if Sharon Osbourne and Drop Dead Fred ever did it.

MIKE ELLIOTT'S FATHER DISAPPEARED WHEN HE WAS 13 YEARS OLD.

Not disappeared as in vanished mysteriously. Disappeared as in left and never came back. Some 27 years later, on a rainy afternoon, Mike drove through Pinellas County, Florida (1100 miles from his hometown of Bayonne, New Jersey), in search of an address that might or might not belong to his father. He vacillated between hope and fear that whoever answered the door would be the man he was looking for. He decided that, if it was his father, he would give him a good "Fk you" and maybe a quick, hard fist to the jaw.

"As I'm driving," Mike tells me from the safe distance of 13 years, "I'm trying to find this place, and the thing that sticks in my mind is that my father would be living in a good area. I remember his selfishness. So as I drove through these trashy little towns and trailer parks, I said, 'He's not going to be here.' And then, sure enough, I pass the last big road, and then it becomes a really beautiful area. As soon as I saw all the beautiful palm trees and the nice houses, I said, 'Aw, shit.'"

"In my town, fathers gravitated toward the bars. That's what we were famous for in Bayonne."

Mike sits at the edge of a cream-colored leather loveseat in a clean, light room with wooden floors. The decoration is sparse. On an end table, ice melts at the bottom of a blue highball glass that he filled with Tanqueray a half hour ago. "To loosen me up," he'd said as he poured.

To fully appreciate that particular moment in Mike's story, the one where he's driving down an unfamiliar road, looking for an address he doesn't want to find, it's important to get to know Mike.

The 53-year-old business systems analyst rides a grumbling Softail Deluxe Harley that awakens his neighbors at 6:00 a.m. Yes, he's apologetic about the early morning noise, but still, he's that guy.

Then there's his chest-up, tough-guy walk, and his heavy brow. Everything most obvious about him suggests that he'd have a grittier interior design aesthetic than the Zen-like sanctuary of this City Heights condo. Potted plants stand in every corner. On the kitchen stove, a whole chicken floats in a stockpot full of mushrooms, celery, and carrots. Tonight, when his girlfriend Huang comes home, they'll have homemade chicken soup for dinner. For now, however, it's Tanqueray on ice, and maybe a few sips of the Fat Tire on the end table next to his glass.

Mike is perched at the edge of the loveseat, but a half-hour ago, when this story began, he was sitting back with his legs splayed, as if the particulars he was sharing were of little consequence. Outside, a rare San Diego storm was beginning to brew. He'd already pulled the plants off the balcony, bringing them inside to protect them from a wind that was whipping up the trees in the canyon behind the condo.

"In my town, fathers gravitated toward the bars," he said. "That's what we were famous for in Bayonne. A bar on every corner. We were all in the same boat. All the fathers were either missing in action or they lived at home and were drunks. I remember my friends' fathers coming down the block and stumbling off the sidewalk, drunk out of their minds. To us, if you had one, it was, like, 'Who cares?' A father wasn't something to respect."

of his father's comings and goings throughout his childhood years, his tone of resignation and slumped posture gave me a glimpse into the kid he once was, and the attitude he'd had to adopt. Even good memories are tinged with disappointment.

"They had just started a Little League team in our town," he said, beginning the story of his "best memory" of his father. "This was back in the early- to mid-'60s. They had basic tryouts. Then somebody would contact you, give you your uniform, and you'd show up. My father took me to my first game. Brand new Little League field. Brand new Little League gear. The coach had never seen any of the kids, so he had no idea who could play what. He puts me at catcher, and my number was ten."

He raised a hand to demonstrate the way a catcher would hold up his mitt.

"I'm sitting there, catching, and the ball kept hitting my glove and falling out because I wasn't strong enough to close the glove. And I made a couple of mistakes on the field.... Anyhow, long story short, we're on the way home on the bus, and I swear to you, my father says to me, 'Who was that catcher?' And I said, 'What do you mean?' He said, 'That catcher stunk.' And I said, 'What catcher?' and he said, 'Number ten.' I said, 'I'm number ten.'"

Mike shook his head and reached for his drink.

"He didn't even know that was me. The best part [of the day] was that he had come with me. The second part is that he also bought me one of those little Italian ices. That's the only time I ever remember him giving me something."

Then there was the time his father came around to show off a new car.

"Guess what kind it was," Mike prodded. When I couldn't, he said, "An MG Midget." He paused for effect, then looked with incredulity over the rim of his high-

Mike wasn't the kind of kid who asked questions. He didn't know where his father spent his time, only that he wasn't around much, and that when he was, he and Mike's mother often fought about money. His mother was always asking for some.

"It wasn't for her. It was for milk and food. [We were] five kids living in the projects," he said of himself, his three brothers — one older, two younger — and his baby sister.

Eventually, Mike's mother took his father to court to force him to pay child support. Mike was eight or nine at the time. His father gave the judge a sob story about how he didn't have the money and couldn't make the payments. But when the judge threat-paternal grandmother and his father's brother, Uncle Cookie, brought Spam and Velveeta to the kids. They sat together with Mike's mother and ened him with a night in jail, Mike's father took out his checkbook and wrote a check.

"He paid up what he owed, and then we didn't see him again for years."

Mike's mother never received another payment. The family went on welfare and lived in subsistence housing. Every Saturday, Mike's talked in the kitchen all day.

"They would rave about my father. His name was Robert, but they called him Boobie."

Mike sucks down the last of the gin in the blue glass.

"They'd say, 'Oh, Boobie was so good.' My mom sat there, and I think she was just tortured by that shit. Year after year of them telling her how great [my father] was, and he was nowhere to be found. But, on the reverse side, there they were every Saturday, taking time out of their day to come visit the grandkids and bring at least a little food. I don't remember a Saturday without them being there."

When Mike was 13 or 14, his father reached out to the family and invited the kids to south Jersey for Thanksgiving. His mom said, "Whoever wants to go can go." By then, Mike's oldest brother had established himself as Mom's loyal protector and refused to go. He hated their father "like he was the devil," and Mike's sister "couldn't be bothered." But Mike and his two middle brothers decided to go and spend the weekend.

"We went to his house, which we thought was the greatest, because it was on farmland. He actually lived in a small apartment, but he had this girlfriend — beautiful girl, really sweet — who had a big house out in the country."

Mike's voice lightened with the memory. His face softened.

"We shot BB guns with him and stuff. It was fun to be around him. There was green grass and open land. We did outdoor things that we hadn't done in the city. It was kind of cool. I actually had a good time."

A couple of weeks later, his father called again and asked if the kids could come back for Christmas. This time, his mother said no.

"She blew up about it. She figured, 'You took three of my kids for Thanksgiving, and now you want to take them for Christmas, too? You haven't been around forever.' I just remember she had a huge fight with him over the phone. The next thing I knew, he dropped off some gifts for us, and that was the day he disappeared."

This time, Boobie disappeared for decades. "While he was gone,

Mike Elliott's mother (on right)

he was gone. There was no change from what it was before. So, big deal. We were all mad as hell at him. To be honest, I think if he had come around when we were in those late-teenage, early-20s, early-30s years, he would have gotten his ass kicked. I think we were all pretty much united on that."

At one point, Mike's grandmother let it slip that his father might be in Florida, but by then, Mike and his brothers and sister had written Boobie off. As far as they were concerned, he no longer existed. The only time any of them had attempted to contact their father was when Mike's sister got married. She sent Boobie a wedding invitation through their grandmother.

"When he didn't come, she never talked about him again. In other words, that was the last opportunity he had, if he was ever going to participate in our family."

Fast forward to 1998. Mike was living in San Diego. The company he worked for sent him all over the country to open regional offices and train new employees. This took him to Tampa, Florida, for a couple of weeks.

"I'm doing my job, and it hits me that I'm in Florida. That one thing that my grandmother said about Florida kind of stuck in my head."

He asked around about the best way to look for someone. This led him to the real-estate assessors' office in Pinellas County.

"I just happened to be in the right county. Sure enough, I make one phone call, and I say, 'Hey, do you have anybody under the name of Robert Thomas Elliott it began to rain. He returned to his hotel, got the address, and made the 25-mile drive from Tampa to Seminole.

He drove through the cruddy trailer parks, that has property in this county?" And the guy says, 'Yeah, we have one person living at this address.'"

Mike wrote the information down and pocketed it. When the weekend came, he spent Saturday at the beach. He thought about the address, still unsure what he would do about it.

"At the beach, I had this kind of heavy feeling that I was in the vicinity of him. The fact that they found one person with his name spooked me a little bit."

The next day, on his way back to the beach, thinking, No, my dad wouldn't be here. Then the scenery changed. The houses were big and the palm trees tall, and Mike knew, This is where he would be.

Mike leans forward on the loveseat. He wrings his hands. Tension concentrates in his tightened neck.

"So, I drive down the block, and all the mailboxes are white. I get to the Elliott house, and it's a black mailbox. With my name on it. All the way there, I was rehearsing what was going to happen. It was 27 years after I last saw him. I hadn't really thought about him a whole lot, but when I was going to the beach that day, I said, 'Oh, shit. Something's going to happen.'"

Mike leans his elbows on his knees and closes his eyes. His head hangs for a second before he covers his face with his hand. Then he stands and leaves the room. He's gone around the corner to pull himself together. I can hear him swallowing back his grief.

When he returns to the loveseat, he says, "Shit, I don't like talking about it." But he picks up the story again. "Anyhow...I get to the street, and I don't want to go knock on the house. There's a guy across the street mowing his lawn. I go over there, and I ask him, 'Do you know Mr.

brother. Then I looked at his arm, and he had a paratrooper tattoo that I remembered." Mike's voice is shaking now. "I asked him...I asked him if he knew who I was. He said no, and I told him who I was. I told him that I was his son Michael, and he started crying." Mike wipes his eyes with the back of his hand. "I didn't cry. I was too stunned. But he was crying, and he said, 'I always knew that one of you would come looking for me.' And then we went inside his house."

While his father went to put a shirt on, Mike stood in the middle of the foyer. He looked at a guitar in a corner, a parrot, the swimming pool out back, and he thought, Goddamn, I'm because I think it was a little bit revealing about him that he hadn't had that contact with us."

Mike let his father do the talking. The story Boobie told was that he'd moved originally to Tennessee, gotten a truck-driving job, and ended up with the Teamsters union. He took Valerie (the girl Mike and his brothers had met at Thanksgiving) with him to Tennessee, and then they ended up in Florida. Until six months prior happen as we got older or what we might have done to him."

Mike's eyes are dry now, though red. He stands up and goes into the kitchen to stir the pot of chicken soup. The warm salty scent intensifies.

"Maybe he was right in some way," he says from the stove. "I don't think we would've done anything violent to him, other than punch him in the face. But I think he was just a chicken-ass. I don't think he had it in him to stand up and do the right thing."

At one point, Boobie asked if anyone had ever gone looking for him.

and listened for “anything that would foul him up, anything that would suggest he was just bullshitting me. I didn’t see anything.”

But hearing sincerity in his father’s voice wasn’t the most satisfying part of the visit. “The most satisfaction I got out of the whole thing was telling him that my mother was able to raise us — and do a good job of it — without him.”

After they left the bar, Mike dropped his father back at his house and asked if he could take a picture. Boobie let him and even smiled. Mike could tell it was forced, but he wasn’t going to let his father’s discomfort keep him from snapping the photograph.

“That was my evidence that the whole thing happened.” He still has the picture somewhere in his garage.

Then Mike left. Though his father had cried several times that afternoon, Mike stayed dry-eyed until he drove away.

“I got behind the wheel, and as soon as I got to the corner, I lost it. I mean, I fell apart. I was driving and bawling my eyes out.”

It occurs to Mike that he’s left out two important facts. One, Boobie asked for everyone’s Social Security numbers, so he could put them on his life insurance. Mike tells me this as if in passing, then describes his older brother’s reaction to the visit and the request (“That son of a bitch! He’ll never be a part of my life!”), his sister’s indifference, and his younger brothers’ curiosity and excitement. Then he tacks on the second important fact.

“Oh, yeah.” He reaches for the blue glass. He puts it back down when he finds it empty. “I guess I probably should have mentioned that he had slow-moving leukemia that he was fighting at the time.”

After Mike’s trip to Florida, the only other contact he had with his father was an occasional email. Three years later, Boobie died. Although he’d already signed the house over to Valerie, he left everything else to Mike’s mom (whom he’d never divorced) and their five children.

The six of them received about $14,000 each.

On the phone several days after our conversation, Mike says, “Hey, I forgot to tell you. You know the money I inherited? The $14,000? I used it to buy my Harley.”

He laughs.

“I have to say that’s the best thing my father ever did for me.” ■

Then and Now

When I watch Twilight Zone or old horror movies from the '40s and '50s, I miss the fact that almost everything terrifying that happened in them was left to your imagination. Yes, most of the movie monsters of old, when they were finally revealed, left a lot to be desired.

But that was part of the fun.

Was your date imagining the same thing you were, or was everything that was unfolding on the screen entirely subjective? Now all that's needed is the imagination of the producers, directors, and computer engineers. Audiences can check their own imagination at the door, which sometimes seems rather lazy. Don't get me wrong — at times I appreciate the free ride, not having to think or delve into the limitless boundaries of my imagination. Other times, however, I want to rely on it. But I guess that's what books are for.

The realities of our fears have escalated dramatically over the years. In the '50s, our country's citizens were almost universally convinced that soon, very soon, the U.S.S.R. would systematically drop nuclear weapons on us, wait for the radiation to subside, and then seize our land as well as our very freedom from the handful of hapless, shambling survivors left alive. The survivors would then, certainly, be rounded up by the Red Army and herded onto freighter ships bound for Siberia to unwillingly participate in God knows what.

In retrospect, envisioning that dramatic scenario must have been no different than believing that a science-fiction movie would eventually come true.

Today we're worried that Middle Eastern terrorists are going to activate a dirty bomb in one of our beautiful cities or perhaps blow up our reservoirs. Terrorists have no interest in occupying our land, only in destroying it, and themselves. This conviction, however, is reserved only for obedient flunkies that lead miserable lives in ugly, desolate lands, and so they have nothing to lose in killing themselves. Muslim extremist leaders never put their own lives on the line — they're comfortable convincing their unsophisticated followers to kill themselves, which then elevates the extremist leaders to an even higher level in the eyes of the rest of the dimwitted losers standing in line to commit suicide in the name of religion.

They believe, in their skewed vision of religious justice, that for committing murder, God will reward them in the afterlife with 70 virgins. After each virgin has been deflowered, does she instantly return to her ignorant state or does she reap knowledge with every carnal encounter? Maybe it's just me, but I wouldn't want one virgin for eternity, let alone 70. Give me a woman with

And what about women suicide bombers? Does God give them 70 virgins, too? It really doesn't seem as if a woman, any woman, even Breakthrough!

What is Ortho-K? Ortho-K (or Ortho-Keratology) is a non-invasive scientific breakthrough utilizing lightweight gas permeable lenses worn while you sleep. They are a gentle, natural method of correcting vision, allowing you to wake up to a brighter, clearer world.

How does Ortho-K work? Ortho-K nighttime lenses gently reshape the clear front surface of the eye so you can see clearly even after the lenses are removed when you wake up.

Is it expensive? No, Ortho-K typically costs half as much as LASIK and lasts a lifetime. Low or no interest financing is also available at our office.

Is it for everyone? Yes, most cases of Nearsightedness, Astigmatism and Presbyopia (reading glasses) can benefit from Ortho-K. In fact, Ortho-K has been a well-kept secret of professional athletes who need 20/20 vision but don't want to experience the downtime, side effects or risks associated with surgery.

Is it guaranteed? Yes it is! If you are not completely satisfied, our offices will reimburse you the price of the Ortho-K sleep lenses with new prescription eyewear from our vast selection. You have absolutely nothing to lose — only natural, hassle free vision to gain!

And, really, is God so superficial and uninspired that He equates immortal spiritual reward with nothing but the primitive physical act of sex? I do love sex, but in death, after we leave our physical bodies, don't we leave all of its limitations and urges behind as well, thereby leaving us free to pursue more philosophical, enlightening, and profound goals? And if we are ever fortunate enough to experience Heaven, isn't it still our responsibility to learn, expand intellectually, and nurture our souls indefinitely until we reach the highest peak of spiritual growth and encompassing love? (I won't bother with semantics, our God versus their God — God is God, only the interpretations differ.)

And what about the virgins themselves? Do they have a say in the matter? Is being the virginal sex-slave to someone for eternity a reward or a punishment? For him, Heaven; for her, Hell.

I suppose in the '50s it may have seemed as if the Soviets actually were going to, at any moment, rain

Is being the virginal sex-slave to someone for eternity a reward or a punishment?

Perhaps, in life, she didn't conceal herself in head-to-toe black cloth well enough to suit God, or maybe she had the audacity to allow herself to be raped. Whatever the case, God has made her a submissive seminal ashtray for the good and sainted man who blew up 13 innocent people and severely maimed half a dozen more when he detonated the bomb strapped around atom bombs down on our heads, but now, especially after our dear Twin Towers were destroyed, the idea that something terrible could happen to our country is all too real.

It seems almost quaint to me that '50s motorcycle and street gangs used to settle scores with their rivals armed with nothing more than fists, chains, and switchblades. ■ ble digits, although recent local joblessness has slipped a bit below double digits. American housing values are down about 30 percent from their 2006 peak. San Diego is down 38 percent from its 2005 peak to a median $321,000, which is still high by comparison with other metro areas. The Pacific region consumer mood surveys are slightly below the nation's, according to San Diego Workforce Partnership.

San Diego tourism is picking up, but it trails other major California metro areas. For the year to date, the local hotel occupancy rate is 65.9 percent, up from 63.3 for the same period last year. But San Francisco's rate this year is 71.6 percent, Orange County's is 68.3, and Los Angeles's 69.8, according to Smith Travel Research. "It is important to remember in comparing cities that Los Angeles, San Francisco, and [Orange County] are international destinations," says La Jolla tourism guru Jerry Morrison. The weak dollar is helping those markets more than it helps San Diego. Many downtown hotels remain underwater. The posh Sè San Diego was recently sold out of bankruptcy for one-third of its original cost.

Through the years, San Diego household income has grown at 2 percent a year. In both 2009 and 2010, it fell by 2 percent. "[Yearly] incomes could drop further — not 2 percent but maybe 1 percent," says Marney Cox, chief economist of San Diego Association of Governments. Employment will only go up half of 1 percent this year, and housing prices have another 5 to 10 percent to fall, he feels. "It will take another five years to get the jobs back that we lost in the recession."

San Diego retail sales were up 8 percent from July of last year through March of this year, but that was greatly as a result of higher gas prices, says Cox. "People are not consuming; the savings rate remains high," he says. "There is way too much commercial space. We have to figure out what to do with the excess retail space. Strip malls are going to have way too much space."

Kelly Cunningham, economist for the National University System Institute for Policy Research, notes that San Diego County retail sales peaked at $47.8 billion in 2006, and the estimate for 2010 is $40.7 billion. He thinks it will be 2021 before local retail sales get back to their 2006 levels, adjusted for inflation. "It's astonishing," says Cunningham. "We used to have population growth of 50,000 a year. Now it's 30,000, or less than 1 percent, annually." Babies keep getting born, and births outnumber deaths. "But for the last several years we have had an exodus of residents."

In theory, shoppers are supposed to pay tax on internet sales, but that is not a reliable expectation. Beset by reluctant consumers who check the internet before they buy anything in a store, communities have to raise their sales taxes to survive. The San Diego rate is 8.75 percent. La Mesa's sales tax is 9.5 percent, and National City and El Cajon are at 9.75, says Cunningham. (Those aren't tops in the state. South Gate, in the Los Angeles area, has a whopping 10.75 percent rate.) "High taxes are a disincentive to spend," depressing sales tax receipts, says Cunningham — one of several reasons, along with excessive pension commitments, why communities continue to cut public sector employment.

San Diego has a potential problem: the military, directly and indirectly, accounts for 19.9 percent, or $33.5 billion, of the county's total yearly economic output. This figure includes such things as military pensions. The Pentagon prefers to slice payroll, such as medical benefits, rather than cut back on weaponry. "The military is telling us it is going to shift its focus to the West Coast, but if there is a cutback we would see a pretty big setback in our economy such as what we saw in the early 1990s," says Cunningham.

The positive story is in tech. Biotech jobs have grown from 18,000 in the first quarter of 2008 to 21,000 in the same period this year, although venture capital going into the field is coming down moderately. Software jobs are increasing, but some other areas such as telecommunications are soft.

Manufacturing, which enjoys higher salaries, "is only 7.5 percent of [San Diego] employment," compared with 9.2 percent nationally, says Cunningham. "If you go back to World War II, [manufacturing] was 50 percent in San Diego." Today, "Consumer spending is weak; job growth is weak. I would expect a bigger rebound, but we are not seeing it." ■ freeway. "He hit me, and he was behind me until my car started to roll over."

One of the passengers in the backseat, 56-year-old Josefa Barrigan Dunn, said the Ford "made many turns. I don't know how many. Maybe I'm dead now, I thought." When the SUV stopped rolling, she took hold of the crying five-year-old girl and passed her out the back window to a man who stopped to help.

A 25-year-old Marine named Zach Thomas was on his motorcycle heading home to Oceanside when he saw the crash. He said he pulled over on the side of Interstate 5. It was about

"I helped the family get out of the Ford Explorer." He took the little girl out of the back and handed her to her father, who was walking in circles and yelling out nearby. "My daughter had all her hair full of blood," Jimenez remembered later.

The Good Samaritans

Another driver on the freeway that night, Timothy Ricker, said that when he came upon the crash, he parked so his headlights lit up the cars. The cars were near each other and alongside the center divider, the Nissan upright, the Ford lying on the passenger side. Ricker said he climbed up onto the Ford to look through a window, taking care to avoid a front tire spinning wildly in the air. He tried to open a door. "It was crunched closed," he said, so he climbed through a window down inside, where he found a woman. He saw that part of her body was trapped under the vehicle.

Ricker and four Marines who had stopped — Solomon Huss, Thomas Harley, Sean Wax, and Zach Thomas — pushed the Explorer back onto its wheels to free the woman.

As the vehicle was righted, the woman fell through a window onto the pavement.

Jimenez said, "When they lifted the car, my wife was just lying there." She was bleeding from her head. His wife was six months pregnant.

No one could find a pulse on 24-year-old Yine Erandy Gonzalez Angeles. She was declared dead later at Scripps Memorial Hospital La Jolla. The medical team performed a Caesarean section to try to save the baby. The death of Baby Girl Gonzalez Angeles was declared at 1:55 a.m. by the county medical examiner. Jimenez was a widower at 26 years of age.

Out of the Nissan

The Marines helped two people get out of the Nissan.

Then-Marine Corporal Solomon Huss helped a dazed man out a rear door. Huss asked the man who the driver was. "He told me he was." Huss said he advised this man to "Stand by on the side of the road and wait for a [California Highway Patrol] officer." Corporal Huss was also an off-duty Los Angeles police officer.

Huss later identified Sudac in a photo lineup as the man who said he was the driver that night.

The dazed man told Huss that his friend was still in the car. Huss smashed a window with a golf club that someone handed to him. He reached in and pulled up on the door handle from inside. An evidence photo showed the head of a golf club resting on the rear seat of the Nissan surrounded by broken glass. On the floor of the front passenger side, wedged beneath the dashboard, Huss found an unconscious man and pulled him out. After the man regained consciousness, he stood next to Sudac on the side of the freeway.

Walking Away

Traffic began to back up behind the crash immediately. One witness stuck in the traffic jam told authorities he saw two men walking away on the shoulder of the road, headed south toward the Lomas Santa Fe exit. He said one man was wearing a blue Charger jersey and "One was on the cell phone."

Records showed Sudac's cell phone called his wife's cell phone starting at 1:03 a.m. that night. Sudac made four more calls to her in quick succession, the last one at 1:14 a.m. His wife's cell phone called him back at 1:05 a.m. and 1:09 a.m.

CITY LIGHTS

In court, prosecutor Natalie Villaflor said that Sudac's wife came to pick him up in a blue Dodge pickup truck. The truck, registered in her father's name, had blood spots on the passenger's seat when investigators looked at it later. DNA from the five blood spots matched Sudac's DNA.

DNA tests showed that the blood on the driver's airbag in the Nissan belonged to Sudac.

Witnesses said that from where Sudac and his companion stood on the side of the freeway, they had a clear, unobstructed view of Yine, who lay facedown near the trunk of their car. Blood from her head ran under the Nissan. This was shown in many of the crime scene photos displayed in court.

Huss reported hearing Sudac yell into his cell phone before he disappeared, "There's been a terrible accident. I need you to come pick me up right fucking now!"

About 20 witnesses were called to the stand who said they were on the freeway that night, and they all said that they did not see Sudac offer help or ask about anyone's well-being or give his contact information.

Bad Memories All Around

Investigators found an address for John Francis Sudac Senior.

The elder Sudac told highway patrol officers that he did not know where his son lived, he did not know his son's whereabouts that night, and he did not know his son's cell phone number.

The lead investigator, Patrick Holt, said of the senior Sudac, "He was polite" and "He did not provide us any information."

Highway patrol officer Michael Bush was more blunt, describing Sudac Sr. as "basically useless." Bush said they contacted Sudac Sr. at about 3:45 a.m., almost three hours after the crash.

Cell phone records showed that the phone belonging to Sudac Sr. called his son's cell phone three times that morning, at 3:18 a.m., 3:20 a.m., and 3:26 a.m., according to a Verizon Wireless analyst who testified.

Sudac Jr., accompanied by a defense attorney, turned himself in at 6:45 p.m. on January 4. Eighteen hours after the collision, his blood was taken, and the analysis showed no alcohol or drugs in his system at that time. Sudac was taken into custody. He posted $200,000 bail the next day.

The second man in the Nissan went unidentified for more than two years, until this March, one month before Sudac went on trial for hit-and-run manslaughter.

The Man in the Passenger Seat

At a preliminary hearing in January 2009, it appeared that defense attorney Herb Weston would build a defense based on the fact that the second person in the Nissan had not been identified and therefore reasonable doubt could be created as to who was driving the car.

But investigators had found shredded Charger tickets in Sudac's apartment. In the ensuing months, they pieced the tickets together, and lead investigator Holt got a search warrant to obtain information about season ticketholders who sat near Sudac. When Holt found Sara Anderson, eventually she showed him the picture of Sudac and the man in the black cap. This January, investigators put a rush on a DNA test for the black cap they had removed from the Nissan.

CITY LIGHTS

The DNA profile came back on March 15 as a match for Eliseo Jimenez, whose DNA was already on file because of a felony conviction.

It took an investigator for the district attorney's office, Tom Morgans, two weeks to track down Eliseo Jimenez, who was said to live in the Bonsall-Fallbrook area. Jimenez said he was surprised when an investigator showed up and asked for a DNA swab of his mouth.

Eliseo Jimenez, who is no relation to Vinicio Jimenez, the driver of the Ford Explorer, said that Sudac had picked him up at his home in Fallbrook the Saturday of the playoff game. The time stamp on the parking-ticket stub showed they arrived at the stadium at 2:08 p.m. The game didn't start until about 5:00.

Jimenez said he drank and partied before the game, but Sudac did not. "I never saw him drinking," Jimenez could not remember Sudac drinking that afternoon, during the game, or after the game. "I didn't see him drinking." What time did they leave the parking lot that night? "I'm not sure." Where did you all go for dinner that night, after the game? "I can't remember."

In sworn testimony during trial, Jimenez said that Sudac drove the Nissan as they headed for home after midnight. Do you remember the car crash? "No, I don't." You don't remember the Nissan hitting the Ford? "I don't remember anything from that car accident," Jimenez said in the witness box. "I believe I was knocked unconscious." Do you remember walking away from the crash scene on the shoulder of the highway? "I don't remember anything." Prosecutor Villafior demanded to know the next thing that he did remember. "Pretty much, I remember waking up at John's house,"

CITY LIGHTS

Jimenez said. "My girlfriend, she came, picked me up from John's house."

So how did he learn that he had been in a car crash? Jimenez said it was Sudac's wife Alexia who told him, "There was an accident with another vehicle." Jimenez said days later he learned that a woman died in the crash. Didn't he know police were looking for him, the other person who was in the Nissan? "Yeah, I heard about that," Jimenez admitted. But he never tried to contact investigators because he said his pal Sudac "did the right thing" by turning himself in. Jimenez decided there was "not much more to say about anything."

Jimenez said that he is on probation for possession of marijuana for sale. Investigators had recovered from the Nissan a plastic bag holding 4.7 grams of marijuana. Jimenez said the bag did not belong to him and he hadn't given it to Sudac.

The Defense

During the trial, defense attorney Herb Weston suggested that the driver of the Ford fell asleep or was "inattentive" or that "for whatever reason" he was the one who lost control of his vehicle and smashed into the center divider. Weston proposed that it was the Ford that careened back out into lanes and caused a collision with the Nissan driven by Sudac. The defense attorney vigorously questioned highway patrol investigators. Weston said there were no fragments of broken taillights photographed where the investigators claimed the collision occurred.

Weston suggested that statements made by the driver of the Ford were too influential on investigators. "Maybe your theory is wrong," he suggested to officers who testified.

Investigators said that the trailer hitch on the back of the Ford had made an obvious indentation in the Nissan, visible in photos taken of the front of the Nissan. Investigators documented the tire marks, which progressed for hundreds of yards down the freeway, climbing up onto the center divider and then back down onto the pavement in more than one place.

Weston called to the stand his own forensic expert and traffic accident reconstructionist, Stephen Plourd, who found fault with the highway patrol's investigation and conclusions.

Guilty

Sudac turned 30 years old on April 20, 2011, a day when the jury was being selected.

The seven men and five women heard evidence for two weeks from more than 30 witnesses. They deliberated a full day before finding Sudac guilty of felony vehicular manslaughter and felony hit-and-run causing death.

Sudac had been free on bail, but on May 5, the day of the verdict, he was taken into custody.

Naomi, the daughter of the woman who was crushed to death, turned eight years old this month. On September 9, John Francis Sudac Jr. will be sentenced. He could get a maximum of 11 years in state prison, but he is eligible for good-conduct credits and could serve only half his sentence, according to the prosecutor. Villafior said, "I'm pleased that the jury reached a just verdict and Sudac is being held accountable for what he did. But it's never going to bring back Yine Gonzalez and her baby."

Judge Runston Maino said at an earlier hearing, "Just for the record, I have heard some evidence that the woman who died was pregnant, and that appears to be six months pregnant. That, of course, means that you have another potential victim there. But whether the DA charges it is not up to me, but it's there if you want to."

The district attorney's office did not bring charges for the unlawful killing of the unborn baby. ■ increases in my business, even with the downturn in the economy. Unfortunately, code enforcement has been really cracking down on all signage — especially feather flags."

Niems said sales from his Escondido stores have "steadily declined" since the recent enforcement: he estimated a loss of "$28,000 in revenue" since he was told to take down his feather flags three months ago.

"Although there is no specific language about feather flags, code enforcement has decided they are not allowed even if you have a permit," he said, contending that his loss in revenue translates to a loss of tax earnings for the city.

The business owner proposed that Escondido allow a permit for one feather banner per business.

San Diego County Board of Supervisors Accused of Neglecting Social Services Downtown — About 40 people attended the June 7 San Diego County Board of Supervisors' public hearing on the 2011–2012 budget.

Participants at the 2 p.m. session urged supervisors to fund social services, salaries, and staffing.

Connie Soucy of Access to Independence spoke about a 78-year-old woman diagnosed with Alzheimer's. The county denied in-home supportive services because the woman didn't have Medi-Cal. Although she met the income requirement, her Medi-Cal application had been denied, according to Soucy.

She then cited a report stating the county enrolls less than 50 percent of people eligible for Medi-Cal. She said the county's failure to enroll food-stamp applicants resulted in $106 million in unclaimed state and federal

Laurie Macrae of the National Alliance on Mental Illness said the state was shifting responsibility for providing mental health services to counties. Discussing that responsibility "should be part of the budget process," said Macrae, adding, "I am the mother of a man with a mental illness."

Patricia Gonzales of the Lemon Grove Family Resource Center said staffing falls short of increased applications for public assistance. The board will accept written comment on the budget until June 15.

Sweetwater Union High School District Money Trail Gets Longer Chula Vista — In a recent interview, Bertha Lopez voiced a strong opinion about Sweetwater Union High School district attorney Bonifacio Garcia. Lopez, who has been a Sweetwater boardmember since 2008 and served as a Chula Vista boardmember for ten years before that, said she did not trust the advice offered by the attorney. Why not?

Garcia recently advised the board to hire attorney Greg Vega to do an independent review of district expenditures. According to Lopez, Garcia did not reveal that Vega had worked for the district. A Union-Tribune story also reported that Vega reviewed Garcia's employment contract last July.

Citizens for Good Government in the South Bay was a political action committee that operated out of Garcia's office until March, when it became inactive. Yuri Caldeon, a member of Garcia's law firm, was the treasurer. Garcia gave generously to this committee, as did Laura Martinez, who co-owns a house with Garcia in Sierra Madre, California, according to documents.

According to records kept by the San Diego

County Registrar of Voters, Jim Cartmill, a Sweetwater boardmember since 1996, received $5000 from the Citizens for Good Government in South Bay in last November's election. Jewelry Store Robbed Escondido — The Royal Maui jewelry store at the Westfield Mall on Via Rancho Parkway was robbed at about 2:30 p.m. on June 9.

According to a witness at a nearby kiosk, three Caucasian men entered the mall; while two of them held the doors open, the third man smashed a window with a sledgehammer. Two male employees ran out of the Brookstone store next door and one of them asked, "What are you doing?"

The robbers were in their early 20s and, according to the witness, "looked scared." One robber grabbed two watches, and the three men ran to a waiting red Nissan Versa with no license plates. The car stalled as the men tried to make a getaway, but even so, they eluded the police who were on the scene minutes later.

Almost immediately, the area near the window was cordoned off and workers replaced the broken glass. A witness mentioned that this was the second time the store had been robbed since December.

over to collect my desk, a gorgeous, glass-topped contemporary thing with geometric wooden shapes holding it together (cylinder stand, triangular shelves). This desk is way too big to fit into our new space, which is exactly half the size of our current space. But that's not the only reason I'm letting it go — I could make it work if I wanted to. It's not the size so much as the height.

After I move, I'm getting a standing desk. That's right, a desk with no chair. I'm sure you've seen all the recent news stories about all of the studies with scary headlines like "Sitting Will Kill You." Studies that show how, even with regular exercise, hours spent on your butt add up and slowly sap your life away.

I figured this was the case before I read the science articles. My editor has had a standing desk ever since I've known him. At first I thought he was merely eccentric. But recently, after I started taking up jogging, I'm noticing more how all my sitting has been taking its toll. I work an average of ten hours a day — that's writing, researching, editing video, corresponding, and more. Ten hours of sitting.

I get up to stretch often, but rather than get up to stretch, I'd rather stand all day and sit down to rest. Out of curiosity, I put my computer on a box atop my desk and stood to work for a few days. I found I had more energy and would even dance a bit as I typed when music was on. It felt better. So I'm going for it. I'm choosing an adjustable desk, one that rises and falls, not only so I can adjust it to my height, but for those days that for all of standing's benefits, I just want to sit. ■

Middle Chef

I'd like to respond to Ms. Wise's review of Frank Terzoli's restaurant (June 9). Her comment "Local-born chef Frankie 'The Bull' Terzoli won a TV chef contest (Bravo's Top Chef)" is very misleading. It implies he won top chef. He didn't. He may have won one elimination challenge, but he was sent home halfway through the season. Also, the tagline under the picture says "Top Chef-winning." Again, misleading at best and dead wrong at worst. I hope a correction will be printed.

Just A Little Higher

Joe Deegan's "It Was Scary Up There" ("City Lights," June 2) was a very good article. I lost my son off the bridge in 1994. I tried to get them to put some kind of a fence or little barrier up. When Deegan quoted the Caltrans fact sheet — that the wall on the bridge is only three feet high — that was very good of him to do that. It's the only bridge in California that doesn't have some kind of a little fence or something. There is a bridge in Pasadena. It was called Suicide Bridge, but after multiple suicides, the city put up a barrier. Suicides are rare there now. Even a two-foot railing on the Coronado bridge would give a person time to rethink jumping and get help.

I liked the perspective of this story, being mostly female insight. I wish I had some of the money these services get.

Having personally been the subject of a one page dating service horror story published in the Reader back in the late 80s, I think I can appreciate this walk down dating service memory lane. I joined more than one back then. Some of them worked, some didn't. I also just celebrated my 21st anniversary with my dating-service met wife. We don't even think about how we met. When I was looking for a partner/lover/lifemate I spent a bit of time researching. One fact stood out above all others. At that time (and according to previous decades census data I looked up, BEFORE the internet), San Diego has a skewed male vs female ratio, way heavy on the male side, in every datable age group under 65. It had the highest imbalance of any city in the US, at that time. In fact, there was NO city in the US with a similar high female vs male ratio. Closest was Pittsburgh. And don't blame the military. I think the census counts military members in their home district. That just makes it worse.

I laugh at the fact that there are now 'introduction' type services in airline magazines, advertised on the TV, etc. All of them still have that same basic concept, let someone else choose for you. That's wrong, from my perspective and experience.

If there's anything I learned, it's best to make your own choices, even the first date. Don't let another person, even a claimed 'professional' choose for you. I'd like to think the internet had eliminated these type of chosen introduction scams, but idiocy still exists.

And yes, men will always want someone young, and thin (or at least not fat). And women will always want someone tall, with hair, and monetarily secure. Women can't control their age, and men can't control their height. Everybody has to be more reasonable.

With the availability of the internet and cheap travel, US men have the world to choose from. I don't know what US women have, in turn. But, having now traveled to four continents, the one statement I've heard from women outside the US, in modern developed countries and poorer ones, is that US women are unrealistic in their mating requirements (in other words, stuck up, arrogant).

By the way, my wife was not born in the US, but she went to school here and I met her here. And her family lives here, are citizens. And she's within 2 years of my age. And she, like me, struggles with her weight. And I love her attitudes, and her family. After meeting her, I was convinced to give up on US born ladies of my own age group. I think the US born ladies of my age group are a lost generation. Sorry, just experience.

TY for speaking for all men and all women, glad to know you have met everyone and know we all want the same thing as you do.

I don't want someone young, she doesn't have to be thin and I am sure there are plenty of women who go out with men who are short or average height and some who are bald-in fact most guys age 50 or older have at least thin hair.

Instead of six words, there could be a limit of FIVE characteristics required of the partner you are looking for.

NO MORE than FIVE! That would make the focus more on what really mattered and less on the trivial non-dealbreaker imperfections that usually prevent connection between lonely hearts.

Like that cute 30yr old woman with the 6 page dossier, most people carry a mental checklist of many trivial things with which to rule out another possible match. Guess what, it works!

Most people DO rule out each other over something or other they pounced on as an imperfection, so they can say "Next" and go back home alone to their 3 cats or tiny dog.

Remember people ARE imperfect. IF you want a human being instead of a canine greeting you at home, become more tolerant and limit your list of dealbreakers to the MOST IMPORTANT FIVE !

(determining those 5 can be the subject of another whole article here, which I could do if asked)

Go home, feed your cats, sit down and think about what is really most important in someone you could be involved with.

Starting with CHARACTER...

By Equalizer 2:02 p.m., Jun 9, 2011

Good article -- brought back many memories.

I remember the old "Single" magazine that used to be sold here in San Diego County. I got a few dates by responding to the ads, and they were cool.

What wasn't cool was I ended up on a mailing list for "The Millionaire's Club" dating service. It was to expensive for me to join, so I did not bother.

Frankly, if you decide on using a dating service, you need to remember that Prince Charming or Princess Hot-stuff will more than likely NOT be your first date. It's the same equation--you have to deal with a lot of candidates before you pick "the winner."

As for expectations:

Some are realistic--but most are not grounded in reality. Frankly, when you meet somebody you might be interested in, you might want to remember that you are dealing with the another member of the human race. One who has both strengths and weaknesses.

If they do not meet "your needs," send them on their way--but try to be polite about it. The point about the woman leaving the restaurant via the rear door (after seeing what her date looked like) has probably inflicted a nasty psychic scar upon her date, and exposed the woman's true character (the one she was hiding all along).

Dating is like fishing--you have to keep baiting your hook and tossing the line in the water, for you never know when the fish will bite!

Enjoy our day.

TRAVEL STORIES AND TIPS FROM OUR READERS

"Warning! Do not attempt to hike to the canyon rim and back in one day!"

The Grand Canyon: Phantom Ranch

By Joe Tuborg

The hardest part about visiting Phantom Ranch isn't getting there, but getting back. There are no welcome signs, no strategically placed words of encouragement. In fact, it's just the opposite. The only sign we saw was ominous at best — it didn't so much state its message as it shouted it:

"WARNING! Do not attempt to hike from the canyon rim to the river and back in one day! Each year hikers suffer serious injury or death from exhaustion." If you dared to pass, then you acknowledged the risk.

With most risk comes reward, and the Grand Canyon does not disappoint. There are many trails down to Phantom Ranch, but we chose the shortest and steepest, South Kaibab Trail. We started down before daybreak and were rewarded for our early entry by dawn's artistic light show. The morning sun splashed a multitude of colors against the sandstone rocks and formations, making the nighttime shadows melt away amid an ever-changing wheel of color.

The hike was hard. It was dirty, dusty, and jarring. Halfway down, we were almost run over by a young mountain goat that came sprinting over a rocky outcrop. It was a danger we had not anticipated, yet the moment passed so fast, one had to question if it really happened. I believe the animal was more surprised than we were.

South Kaibab initially starts down with gentle meandering curves, which are replaced with more severe snake-like switchbacks as you near the river. The trail was desolate and almost abandoned except for a couple of other fellow hikers and a team of ten mules lined up single-file, hauling out tourists from the depths of the canyon.

At the bottom of the trail is a bridge that leads into a tunnel with a small hobbit-like opening. After several yards of cooled darkness you emerge on a bridge spanning the Colorado River. It is gentle and beautiful here, unlike the heaving rapids one encounters downstream.

Past the bridge lies Phantom Ranch. Of the five million people who visit the Grand Canyon every year, only 1 percent make it to the ranch. The degree of difficulty, the discouragement, and the almost impossibility of booking a room or campsite dissuades all but the most determined from reaching this remote destination.

At first you come to the mule corrals; a small stream separates them from the human campground. Further ahead, the restaurant and cabins appear.

The word rustic is kind. Other than the national park's roofed shelters, the structures are old, with the restaurant constructed primarily of rock and mortar. Inside, wooden floors support picnic tables and a small kitchen. Food and drink are expensive, the furniture uncomfortable. Were it not for the fatigue of the hike, it would not be a place to loiter. Like the canyon itself, the ranch is not a soft place.

We chose to return to the rim of the canyon via the Bright Angel Trail. It's almost three miles longer than our descent, but with a gentler incline. (All things being relative, as ten miles of uphill climbing awaited.) As we pushed off, the phrase "Between a rock and a hard place" seemed apropos.

ROAM-O-RAMA

A Guide to Unexpected San Diego and Beyond | by Jerry Schad

IMPERIAL BEACH WALK

Looking for secluded beach? Try the one just south of Imperial Beach.

Distance from downtown San Diego: 14 miles Hiking length: 1.6 miles round trip • Difficulty: Easy

Strand south of Seacoast Drive

Imperial Beach's beaches are not as glamorous as others farther north, but they do include some very secluded stretches of sand, including the one described here, lying within the Tijuana Slough National Wildlife Refuge.

To get there, drive to the south end of Imperial Beach's Seacoast Drive, where hopefully you can find a parking space nearby. At the street's dead end, a planked walkway and interpretive plaques off to the left introduce you to the green tidal marshlands of the Tijuana River Estuary to the east. All of that is part of a four-square-mile tideland expanse managed by various national, state, and local agencies. This is one of Southern California's most important coastal wetland areas simply because it has been mostly spared from commercial and housing developments. The area is a recognized haven for birds. More than 400 species have been logged here so far, which is no surprise since the estuary is a key stopover on the Pacific Flyway — the equivalent of Interstate 5 for bird-migration traffic. The marsh's endangered inhabitants include the light-footed clapper rail and the California least tern. Visiting birds include ospreys, golden eagles, and peregrine falcons.

The beach walk itself begins with a little hop over rocks to the sandy beach. Modern houses and condominiums line the sandy strip to the north, and absolutely nothing in the way of buildings lies south, the direction you travel. Artificial dunes back up the beach to the left — they're closed to protect nesting terns. Depending on the level of the tide, you could be edging close alongside those dunes or enjoying a wide, glassy smooth expanse of wet sand, dimpled with rounded pebbles here and there.

At 0.8 mile from then start, you reach the mouth of the Tijuana River, which drains a substantial area of both Baja California (two-thirds of the river's drainage area, including the city of Tijuana) and San Diego County (one-third of the river's drainage area). When storm runoff courses down the river, it's fascinating to watch the outrushing turbid freshwater mixing with the incoming blue-green ocean waves. In winter, gulls set up shop here, feeding in the water and wheeling overhead in great flocks.

The water quality of the Tijuana River is of variable and often dubious quality, so it's not a great idea to wade or swim in the river mouth area. Most swimmers and surfers tend to hang out near the Imperial Beach Pier, a mile north of the starting point, where the beach is lifeguarded during the warmer months, and the ocean water quality is better. The nearest drinking water and public restrooms are also located near that pier.

OUTDOORS

Summer Solstice, the time when the sun reaches its northernmost point in the sky, occurs this year at 10:16 a.m. on Tuesday, June 21. The summer solstice not only marks the beginning of summer for the Northern Hemisphere; it also means that the daylight hours are maximized. San Diegans now enjoy approximately 14 hours of daylight, in contrast to the meager 10 hours or so we experience in December. Anytime this week or next, try checking your shadow at 12:50 p.m. (the local daylight time in San Diego currently equivalent to astronomical noon). The sun is then only 10 degrees south of the straight-up direction and casts near-vertical shadows. A lesser-known consequence of the summer solstice is that our twilight periods are longer than usual. Evening and morning twilight periods are now lasting more than 90 minutes.

Grunion Runs are predicted to occur during the late-evening hours (generally after 10 p.m. and before 1 a.m.), following the nocturnal high tide, June 15 through June 18. The small, silvery grunion tend to spawn on wide, gently sloping beaches such as Silver Strand, Mission Beach, Pacific Beach, La Jolla Shores, and Del Mar. Open season for grunion starts in June, and from then until the end of summer, the fish can be collected in reasonable numbers using the hands only (fishing licence needed for persons 16 years of age and older). For more information, visit dfg.ca.gov/marine/grunionschedule.asp.

The Chirping of Crickets tells us the warmer weather of summer is well on its way. Their plaintive pleadings for mates are heard wherever bits of semi-natural scenery cut across the urban tapestry of San Diego. Try the Spruce Street suspension footbridge, west of Balboa Park between Front and Brant streets. From the swaying deck of the 70-foot-high bridge you can admire a canyon filled with green and gold grasses, nasturtiums, and eucalyptus, pepper, and palm trees. Sound effects begin by mid-afternoon.

ing off its small, inconspicuous clusters of cream-colored flowers this month. Several kinds of buckwheat, found in dry, sunny locations throughout San Diego County, are the source of the "wild buckwheat" honey sold locally. Near the coast look for flat-top buckwheat, common on south-facing slopes. Here it shares space with other low-growing shrubs of the sage-scrub plant community like black sage and California sagebrush.

Adventure Under the Stars Family campout with boating, night hikes, s'mores, campfire, interpretive presentation by Blue Sky Ecological staff. Fee includes continental breakfast. Bring tent, camping equipment, food to barbecue (grills, charcoal provided). Fee per family: $52 Poway residents/$62 non-residents. Reservations required. 858-668-4781. Grand Canyon continued from page 56.

Bright Angel follows the river before taking a hard left into the rocks. The trail is less severe than South Kaibab, with an a-ha moment at "Indian Garden" — best described as an oasis amid a lunar landscape. Despite the beauty, fatigue set in. It was then that water, sports drinks, and food became extremely important. Did I mention the water? Very important!

The trail became more populated as we neared the top, with people moving in both directions...many curious as to what lies around the next turn, others stumbling upward, regretting their initial foray into the canyon.

At the rim we smiled and hammed for the camera next to the sign we had passed so much earlier that morning. Nature is kind to those who appreciate her. She certainly smiled on us that day.

Rhyme & Verse

we are all our own mothers

A Poem by Shin Yu Pai

I was not born with the mothering

bone, so it's not the young woman

my own age on the 48 bus

hoisting her offspring aloft

who trains my attention, or catches my heart

but the face of the ruined man in a wheelchair strapped down to the coach, eyes gone wide watching his jaw grown slack until drool leaks out the corners of the mouth he cannot wipe himself calling out in a language which none of us will respond to but which we all apprehend

Shin Yu Pai, who grew up in Southern California, is a poet, photographer, oral historian, and editor. The author of seven collections of poetry, she has served as a poet-in-residence for the Seattle Art Museum and produced literary programming for the Crow Collection of Asian Art, the Women's Museum of Dallas, and the Rubin Museum of Art. A former assistant curator for the Wittliff Collections, she is currently associate director of the Hendrix-Murphy Foundation for Language and Literature at Hendrix College. "we are all our own mothers" is from her recent collection, Adamantine, published by White Pine Press, and is reprinted by permission. Her website is shinyupai.com. The author's photo is by Daniel Carrillo.

SHEEP and GOATS

“Wherefore I much marvel why these things are thus turned upside down, and the punishment of wickedness oppresses the good, while evil men obtain the rewards of the good. And I desire to know of thee what may seem to be the reason of so unjust confusion. For I would marvel less if I thought that all things were disordered by casual events. Now God being the governor, my astonishment is increased. For since that He distributeth oftentimes that which is pleasant to the good, and that which is distasteful to the bad, and contrariwise adversity to the good and prosperity to the evil, unless we find out the cause hereof, what difference may there seem to be betwixt this and accidental chance?” “It is no marvel,” quote [Lady Philosophy], “if anything be thought temerarious and confused, when we know not the order it hath. But although thou beest ignorant of the causes why things be so disposed, yet because the world hath a governor, doubt not but all things are well done.” — from

The Consolation of Philosophy, book IV, part v (trans. Anton Pegis).

Anicius Manlius Severinus Boëthius (ca.480–524) was a Christian writer born in Rome to a family which claimed emperors and noblemen in its pedigree. After being made consul of the kingdom of the Ostrogoths in 510, he was jailed and eventually executed by King Theodoric for his suspected role in a conspiracy against the throne. While awaiting his death, Boëthius penned The Consolation of Philosophy, an attempt to find peace of mind through a philosophical examination of life and death. The book was one of the major influences on Medieval thought and helped to shape the Western approach to theology and Christian philosophy.

SHEEP AND GOATS

I ANSWERED THE CALL

Journey Community Church

Contact: 8363 Center Drive, La Mesa; 619-464-4544
journeycommunitychurch.org

Attendance: 2400

Pastor: Ed Noble

Born: Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Formation: California State University, Long Beach; Biola College (University), La Mirada; Talbot School of Theology, La Mirada

Years Ordained: 24

San Diego Reader: How long do you spend writing your sermon?

Pastor Ed Noble: Probably the better part of two working days are devoted to sermon preparation....We try to make our sermons and series connect with some point of need in people's lives. So as we package the sermon, we try to have something to which even a person who doesn't go to church would say, "I can see how that would be interesting" or "That's something I'd like to hear more about."

SDR: What is your favorite subject on which to preach?

PN: It always gets back to this longing for God that is in all of us. Even for people who wouldn't label it like that. My all-time favorite quote is St.
Augustine in the Confessions, on the very first page:
"Thou hast made us for thyself and our hearts are restless until they rest in thee."
It almost seems that every sermon I preach winds up being some riff on that idea.

SDR: What do you find the most mysterious about your faith?

PN: I think the most unfathomable part of my relationship with God is also the simplest.
God really, truly, deeply loves me and you. That's why we say it over and over again — that God loves us. There's something about it that is a little too good to be true. I think the greatest act of faith is to truly believe that God does love me. This whole Christian story of Jesus, his death on the cross and resurrection from the dead, is very much about the love of God for his people and the world.

SDR: What is your main concern as a member of the clergy?

PN: The prophet Jeremiah says that the people commit two errors. They forsake God, the fountain of eternal water, and they dig for themselves broken wells that can hold no water. If you boil it down, most of the stuff we wring our hands over are symptoms of that essential problem — we're digging all these broken wells and we expect them to do stuff for us that they're just not able to do.

SDR: What is the mission of your church?

PN: Our mission is to reach as many people as possible with the good news of Jesus and help connect with God.
We're all about seeing people that feel far from God con-

Ed Noble: "We're digging all these broken wells and we expect them to do stuff for us that they're just not able to do."

nect with him.

SDR: Where do you go when you die?

PN: I think that scripture is very clear, especially in the Gospel of John. Jesus says over and over again, "He who trusts his life to me has eternal life." For those who trust Jesus, there's something — a life — that begins in them eternal in nature. It's God's life that comes into you.

What Jesus holds out is life with him now and forever.
That's the most biblical way to answer it.... In 2 Corinthians, St. Paul says that those who reject Jesus will be away from the presence of the Lord. Heaven and Hell are a little more nuanced than a place in the clouds and a place of fire. Those are words that are used to describe that union with and separation from God.

Welder at Work

Loose air-maze bundles of looping steel cables bespeak Smith's lifelong conviction that sculpture is "drawing in space."

Some clichés smell okay, others stink. Whenever I hear a California enthusiast hyperventilating about how the West Coast is culturally "cutting edge" and so "out there," I remember that the last time David Smith

(the most important and grandest 20th-century American sculptor) had a major exhibition in California was in Los Angeles in 1965. It wasn't planned as a memorial exhibition, but that's what it became when Smith died in a car accident earlier that year. He was 51 years old.

If you go East this summer, drive northwest from New York City into the Hudson Highlands to Storm King Center, a smallish museum set among 500 acres landmarked by works by Alexander Calder, Mark di Suvero, and other major sculptors of the past hundred years. It's not so much a sculpture garden as a sculpture estate, and the estate is owned, so to speak, by 13 works by David Smith. To see these in the open air, in varied weathers, is to see them more or less as Smith himself did in the fields outside his workshop in Bolton Landing, way north of Storm

King on the western shore of Lake George. Hilton Kramer years ago described Bolton Landing as "a machine shop in a landscape," which nails the mechanical-bucolic quality of some of Smith's work. As a kid, he was either playing around railyards and factories or fields and creeks. If you're not going East, consider a pilgrimage to David Smith: Cubes and Anarchy, a thrilling selection of Smith's sculptures, paintings, and drawings currently at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art. Anybody with a passion for the sculptural imagination will want to see this exhibition.

That includes machinists (if there are any left), metalworkers, inventors, and mechanical engineers. Smith grew up middle class — his father was an engineer-inventor, his great-grandfather a blacksmith — but during a summer job following his first and only year of college, he learned to solder and spot-weld at a Studebaker factory and would later say that his geometric, non-representational forms owed everything to "gears, crossmembers, and brackets." As his welding skills developed, so did his political affinity for the workingmen who were his first teachers. (First teasers, too: his coworkers, old-style beer-and-shot guys, made quick work of the wispy, bohemian goatee Smith sported on the job.) For the rest of his life, Smith identified himself as a blue-collar artist (he called Bolton Landing "Terminal Iron Works") and unrepentant leftie, and he produced a body of work unequalled for its industrial-pastoral lyricism.

SAN DIEGO OYSTER FEST

June 18, 2011, Embarcadero

Ingredients:

6 strips Bacon • 1 cup Chili sauce
2 tbs horseradish • ½ tsp worcestershire
¼ tsp tabasco • ¼ tsp salt • ¼ tsp white pepper 24 oysters on half shell

Instructions

Fortunately, these are much easier to make than the Oysters Rockefeller. All you need to do is fry some bacon and mix a few sauce ingredients, then bake on the half-shells ... voilla!!

Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

1. Cut the bacon slices into four pieces. Fry or broil until just beginning to turn crisp.
2. Mix all the other ingredients except the oysters in a bowl.
3. Place a piece of bacon atop each oyster. Spoon a generous tablespoon of the sauce on top. Bake six minutes in a preheated 450-degree oven, or until the sauce begins to bubble. Serve immediately.

stage of Smith's development, beginning at the end, with the austere enchanting stainless-steel cubes, slabs, and cylinders of the Cubi series, their surfaces burnished with the whorling, sliding, serpentine sweeps of a circular sander, back through the Zig and Tanktotem works of the 1950s and early 1960s, then to the earlier work where we see Smith's furious curiosity about sculpture's possibilities, from small-scaled, reductive, purely abstract "constructions" to ascetic vertical humanesque works (like the 1954 Sitting Printer, whose torso is a type-case) and loose air-maze bundles of looping steel cables that bespeak Smith's lifelong conviction that sculpture is "drawing in space." The only things I miss are the chunky, hefty ode-to-machine-shop pieces of the 1950s that utilize gigantic wrenches, gears, pliers, scrap, gears, connecting rods, and just about anything else Smith found that he could absorb into his form vocabulary.

Smith was born in Indiana (the Studebaker plant was in South Bend) in 1906 and by 1923 was in New York, where he studied painting and drawing at the Art Students League. During the New York years, he was exposed to Cubism and Russian Constructivism and experimented with punching a third, relief-like dimension into his paintings. He was also soaking up progressive politics, when one could still speak of a proletariat and a workers' revolution. It was during this period that Smith learned what he called "cubes and anarchy," and he would go on to make art that compounded an exquisite cubist-abstractionist sensibility with the energy and robustness of heavy-duty materials. No artist's originality is original. Smith was quick to declare the critical influence of Picasso's welded sculpture and Picasso's own mentor, the great Catalan iron-welding artist Julio González (1876–1942), who learned his craft in a Renault factory near Paris. In 1932, Smith bought welding equipment and set about expanding the language created by González and Picasso. By the late 1930s, he was producing his brutally sardonic, anti-war bronze medallions, Medals for Dishonor.

The only difference between painting and sculpture, Smith believed, was "one element of dimension." For him, drawing and arc-welding both depended on incremental additions. He was an adventurer and would try anything. For Steel Drawing, I, he used a steel slab as a draftsman uses paper; his pen was an oxy-acetylene cutting torch. The networks of angular lines and ocular points look like fantastical constellations, and the curators have installed it just a few steps away from his rapturous gyroscopic Starcage, an airy three-dimensional weave of wiry oval hoops. Smith possessed a machinist's feeling for massive materials and a magical imagination. We see its transformative power in Cubi 4, a large abstract work whose leaning "posture" and buoyant, tilting fleetingness were modeled on a photograph Smith took of his daughter Becca running around with a plate in her hands.

doorway of his Bolton Landing workshop — they look like titanic greeters to the shop's magisterial contents, or like lookouts overseeing the nature that empowered Smith's imagination. Some of the photos are giveaways: one, of a ship's steam stacks, winches, ropes, and pipe railings, is a formal index to Smith's work; and a Bolton Landing photo of vigilant "sentinels" (trimmed and capped and footed by snow) standing next to a birch tree perfectly expresses how the imagination models from nature, in however abstract a manner, then restores an intensified nature, transformed, to our lives. Seeing Smith's works in their proper places — the wild places of studio and the natural world — makes me think that he wanted to find fresh, adamic ways of greeting the world, formally and politically. Even in a museum setting, you can sense how one man's imagination takes what history and the reality of his moment give him and turns it into a passion for existence and the work of existence.

The exhibition concludes with drawings and paintings. The drawings are a formal laboratory, and it's no surprise that many have a celebratory, sexualized energy. We also see the continuity between his flat paintings and the geometric fields of paint he applied to a lot of his sculptures. Some of the pictures are made with automobile enamel spray paint. The aerated, gaseous compositions recall one of his formative models, Kandinsky, who in the 1920s and 1930s made atomizer-spray drawings, but they also remind me that one technique used by the artists who decorated cave walls at Chauvet 32,000 years ago was to blow pigment through tubes of hollowed animal bone or their own cupped hands. Smith's work arcs between such prehistoric ceremonialism (or decoration: the jury's still out on that) and modern manufacturing. Every piece in Smith's Tanktotem series incorporates a boiler-tank drumhead, and the "totem" component expresses communal animism.

The ravishing surprise of the exhibition for me is the way the sanded surfaces of the Cubi's solid stainless-steel blocks and logs teem with actions of light. The gallery illumination creates ripples, runners, and flashings that seem to move inside the steel, as if a hidden life is being briefly, uncannily exposed. The whorls and jags where the sander has "drawn" on the steel become, as you move around the work, cascading necklaces of pearly light, boas and ribbons and chevrons and wings that won't stay still. They give mass an unearthly transparency. Smith gets it all, both the gravity and the lightness of being. ■

"Bold Expressions" More than 50 quilts made in the American South between 1910 and the 1970s are showcased in exhibition of "African American Quilts from the Collection of Corrine Riley," on display through Sunday, November 6. Many of the quilts are made from materials that were readily available to the makers, including flour sacks, old blue jeans, work clothes, fabric remnants. Exhibition explores variety of construction techniques and quilting.

"In Their Own Words" Classic and Contemporary Native American Art" presents classic art from North America's indigenous artisans shown alongside paintings by native Californian contemporary artists L. Frank, Robert Freeman, Billy Soza Warsoldier, Catherine Nelson-Rodriguez. These artists "predominantly work on canvas with oils or acrylics and they all project a personal message in their work." Closes Monday, September 5.

turies, each cat is unique; most are made of clay, but some are wood, metal, ceramic, papier mâché. A fabricated cat with a paw upraised in the Japanese gesture of beckoning has been considered a good luck charm, drawing good fortune to individuals and businesses, since the Edo period (1603-1868). Enjoy the cats through Sunday, January 15. Daily, except Mondays, 10am; free-$7. Mingei International Museum, 1439 El Prado. (BALBOA PARK)

"Face to Face: Works from the Bank of America Collection" Show illuminates "the rich historical diversity of photographic portraiture." Exhibit "includes some of the earliest techniques, including a salt paper print from the 1840s by David Octavius Hill and Robert Adamson and a half-plate daguerreotype by Albert Southworth and Josiah Johnson Hawes." Also on view: portraits by Yousuf Karsh, Lisette Model, Tina Barney, Rineke Dijkstra, Walker Evans, Richard Avedon. Closes Sunday, September 25.

What is a portrait? "Inside Out: Portraits from the Permanent Collection" explores the question by looking at the many varieties of photographic portraiture, from daguerreotypes to interpretive portraiture. Through Sunday, September 25. Daily, except Mondays, 10am; free-$6. Museum of Photographic Arts, 1649 El Prado. (BALBOA PARK)

"George Inness in Italy" Organized by Philadelphia Museum of Art, exhibition examines Inness's two Italian sojourns (1851-52 and 1870-74), their formative impact on his experimentation with style, composition, and subject as he sought inspiration in art of the Old Masters and his personal experiences of the places they painted. Exhibit, showcasing ten oil paintings and one watercolor, continues through Sunday, September 18.

Museum features Saint Bartholomew, said to be "only Rembrandt painting on public display in San Diego." Permanent collection includes European old master paintings, 18th- and 19th-Century American paintings, and Russian icons. Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10am; Sundays, 1:30pm; free. Timken Museum of Art, 1500 El Prado. (BALBOA PARK)

"High Fidelity: Selections from the 1960s and 1970s" Exhibition showcasing more than 50 "greatest hits" from museum's collection features works representing "formative decades in the museum's own maturation and a period of artistic ferment in the United States." All works on view reflect experimental spirit of period. Exhibiting artists: John Altoon, Robert Irwin, John McLaughlin, Sol Lewitt, Alfred Jensen, Donald Judd, Vija Celmins, Bruce Connor, Edward Kienholz, John Baldessari.

"Emperor's River: Philipp Scholz Rittermann," boasts dramatic landscapes of China's Grand Canal captured through the San Diego-based photographer's lens. "Rittermann's panoramic images portray the often jarring contrasts of history and modernity, rural terrain and burgeoning metropolises of this rapidly developing country." Both exhibits close Monday, September 5. Daily, except Wednesdays, 11am; free-$10. Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, La Jolla, 700 Prospect Street. (LA JOLLA)

"Paris: Dialogues and Meditations" Photographer Jonas Yip and his father, poet Wai-lim Yip, chose Paris as "focal point of a dialogue between text and image, classical and modern, East and West, and father and son." Jonas Yip embraces "the spontaneous and accidental" in his photographs. Inspired by these photographs, Wai-lim Yip — influential poet, critic, and Taiwanese avant-garde member — composed minimalist poems linking the aesthetics of Classical Chinese poetry with mid-20th-century Anglo-American Imagism. Enjoy the results in "Paris: Dialogues and Meditations" through Sunday, June 19.

"Global Journey/Local Response: Works by Jean Charlot," continuing through Sunday, June 26, focuses on work revealing "an artist who traveled frequently but who sought great inspiration from local environments." Born in Paris in 1898, Charlot traveled to Mexico shortly after the end of the Mexican Revolution and studied at the Open-Air School led by painter Alfredo Ramos Martinez. Charlot became a pioneer in Mexico, leading experimentation of fresco techniques in mural-making process. Years later Charlot worked in Georgia, Colorado, Kansas, and Hawaii, where he spent the final decades of his career. Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10am; Sundays, 12pm; free-$12. San Diego Museum of Art, 1450 El Prado. (BALBOA PARK)

"Patricia Patterson: Here and There" Exhibition attempts to summarize a lifetime of Patterson's work, while giving attention to the museum's "spacious rooms, tall ceilings, cool and classic design." Patterson will create a new work specifically for one of the galleries, fusing two previous environmental pieces she created for distinct shows. Patterson makes art about "ordinary things," even though "domestic material is risky...it can seem too sentimental, too intimate." Patterson navigates around sentimentality by "creating works monumental in both scale and subject matter." Closes Monday, July 4. Tuesdays through Saturdays, 10am; Sundays, 1pm; free-$5. California Center for the Arts, Escondido Museum, 340 North Escondido Boulevard. (ESCONDIDO)

"Prospect 2011" The museum's Contemporary Collectors and International Collectors groups provide funds for acquisition of new works for permanent collection. Exhibit showcases works from the collection, alongside several new works to be considered, then voted on for purchase by the group. Created in media including sculpture, photography, and installation work, the proposed selections include work by David Ellis, Helen Pashgian, Ai Weiwei, Sam Gilliam, Janine Antoni. On view through Sunday, July 10.

"Joan Jonas: The Shape, the Scent, the Feel of Things" — on display through Sunday, July 17 — features "a complex five-channel video installation," an artistic consideration of the Hopi snake dance.

"Jennifer Steinkamp: Madame Curie," a new digital video animation continuing through Monday, January 2, is inspired by Steinkamp's recent research into atomic energy, atomic explosions, and the effects of these forces on nature. The "enveloping panoramic work will activate a field of moving flowers and flowering trees." Daily, except Wednesdays, 11am; free-$10. Museum of Contempo-

Tenured Trucks

On bright, sunny, San Diego days, I often crave a crisp, Ensenada-style fish taco. With apologies to Ralph Rubio — and the popular bar-and-grill that tops their fish tacos with a concoction that includes ranch dressing — the first places that come to mind are the loncheras (food trucks) serving up mariscos (seafood) around San Diego County. Tacos de pescado handed to you out of a window of one of these trucks are better, both for your wallet and your taste buds, than what you'd get at any sit-down establishment.

I'm glad folks are warming up to food trucks, although sometimes it strikes me as more hype than hope. I grew up eating at food trucks in Hawaii; we called them lunch wagons. Tsukenjo and Kewalo's were regular stops on our daily lunch rotation, so initially I had a hard time understanding what the big deal was about the food-truck movement. Especially since some excellent mariscos trucks, like Mariscos German, have been serving up tasty cócteles, tacos, and tostadas for some time. I'll take that over the latest iteration of con-fusioned beef bulgogi tacos topped with canned mandarin oranges and sriracha-based sauce any day of the week.

When it comes to fish tacos, two of my favorite trucks are located in Chula Vista, a mere two miles from one another. On visits, I've noticed that each has a loyal following. The trucks are easy to find. Look for lines of customers waiting under a hastily set-up tarp, sipping on steaming Styrofoam cups of seafood consommé, the standard prelude to a mariscos meal. The hours are also the same, starting at about 10:00 a.m. and closing later in the afternoon.

I've been eating at Mariscos el Pescador for almost two years. The truck is located in the parking lot of the Toys "R" Us off the I-5 L Street exit in Chula Vista. You can't miss it. The drill is simple: first, get in line at the order window. It used to be that the folks here didn't speak much English, but things have changed. You order your fish taco, maybe throw in a gobernador (sautéed shrimp-onion-bell-pepper taco) or perhaps a taco de marlin (smoked fish). Then you give them your name. For some reason, they often get mine wrong, but they can call me whatever they want as long as I get my tacos.

Out of another window, a few cups of consommé will appear. One of them has your name on it, figuratively, of course. Eventually, tacos appear in a little tray on the sill. I've never seen the system fail. You either pay up front or wait and order some more. The fish tacos here will set you back a buck-and-a-quarter. Each has a generous piece of whitefish, battered and fried to a golden brown. There's a nice flavor to the batter, and the fish is always moist; occasionally, there's a mild sweetness, to boot. The fish is topped with shredded cabbage, pico de gallo, cilantro, and onions. Then there's the all-important crema Mexicana on top. I like the version at El Pescador. It isn't too heavy, or mayonnaise-y, nor is it a faux ranch-dressing topping. The proportion of toppings to tortilla and fish is perfect for my taste; this isn't a fried filet lost in a sea of cabbage, pico de gallo, and crema. If you visit Mariscos el

The Mariscos el Pescador truck is in the Toys "R" Us parking lot off I-5 at L Street.

Pescador, I encourage you to try the cócteles. As for aguachile (where acid cooks the fish rather than heat), I think Mariscos German has them beat on that one.

A two-mile drive from Mariscos el Pescador, at the corner of Main and Fourth Avenue, is the Mariscos el Prieto truck. Residing in one of those warehouse-shopping complexes, I knew el Prieto was doing some serious business from the minute I drove into the lot. I'd never seen a lonchera with its own designated parking spaces.

To get a fish taco here, you'll have to part with a buck. That's it, one dollar. The procedure is the same, except that where el Pescador has a few plastic patio chairs, there's nothing to sit on here. You'll still get the consommé, and you'll get some great fish tacos. The first time I had the tacos de pescado at el Prieto, I recall how wonderfully fried they were. The batter here is crisp, similar to a lacquered tempura batter. On that visit, I thought the fish a bit dry. But on two subsequent visits (easy to do, when the food costs a buck), the fish was moist and tender. It's smaller than el Pescador, but I really enjoy the batter. There's a bit more cabbage and pico de gallo in these tacos, and the crema has more of a mayo flavor. The combination of textures overcomes any balance-of-flavor issues.

As I was finishing up my tacos from el Prieto, elbows propped on the hood of my car; a breeze blew over the strawberry fields across the street. It was the perfect dessert for a satisfying meal. ■

Food Trucks: Gathering of the Tribes

Wow. Several food trucks I haven't tried are coming this month.

Talking about the third Friday Food Truck Extravaganza in the yard at 57 Degrees, the wine place (1735 Hancock Street, at Washington), coming next Friday, June 17.

Saw them last month as I zipped past on the trolley, dammit.

This time I want to try Two for the Road, Gathering Spot, Food Farm, Kalbi-Q, and India on Wheels. But, who knows? Should be maybe 15 to 20 trucks, the way things are lining up.

Starts at 5 p.m.; entrance fee, $2. Should be live music, art, too. Get off Blue Line trolley at Washington Street.

For more on food truck phenomenon — and it is a heckuva take-back-the-streets phenom — check my April 6 cover story.

Enotic Dreams on India Street

Remember Scott Harris?

He's a nice, unpretentious guy, the Chicago restaurant chef-entrepreneur who bought out the old-line Zagarella restaurant in Little Italy. In its place, he was going to clone one of his Chicago-based Mia Francesca chain Italian eateries, with their love-me-do, doe-eyed-girl logo and their big-plates-for-medium-prices formula.

He's had a change of heart: it's not going to be Mia Francesca now. It's gonna be... Davanti Enoteca.

Uh, say what? Davanti Enoteca? Dave's Aunty's Naughty Books? No, that can't be right. Oh, Forward Wine?

Whatever, is this supposed to sound like wine-sophisticate cognoscenti only need apply? Ex-clusive? As in, excluding you and me, the Great Unwashed?

At least Big-eyed Francesca seemed welcoming, inclusive, like Little Italy's own pioneers, who came largely from everyday Sicilian fishing families.

I'm sure it'll be great, enotica or not enotica. But I guess, bottom line, the prices will tell if we're all gonna be welcome.

Kendon Hawkins showed me this one. He's proud of his baby. "It's my first bathroom with grass on the ceiling," he says. Okay, AstroTurf. Even better, though, the walls are all blackboard, so you can write that brilliant thought down before you forget it.

This is hART, the very groovy coffee/hookah lounge across from the New School of Architecture in the East Village (734 Park). Kendon came to help convert this from the deli/liquor store it was and just kinda stayed, because he likes it.

"There were three of us who started this," says Arturo González, one of the partners (the other two are studying at the NewSchool of Architecture across the road).

"We wanted a place where students could get their art supplies, and then we thought we could make it a great gathering place too. Now it's developing a life of its own. We have art shows, and on Wednesday nights we show movies."

At first it was just a hookah lounge (you pay about $10 with three coals). Now the coffee's up and running, and in the next couple of weeks they'll have food, too. Sandwiches, panini.

But don't expect a lot of meat. Arturo says Harsh Bohra, one of the three partners, is a Jain, from Mumbai. "Jainism is a tradition which believes you shouldn't act violently against any living thing," he says.

They're open 9 a.m. to midnight, seven days, or later, specially Fridays and Saturdays. They even made some of the tables high so architecture students can come across to clack out term papers or finish wooden design models they're working on.

Fridays, it's open mike. "People can sing, say what's on their mind, whatever."

Or, maybe, just quote from a poem someone's scrawled on Kendon's bathroom blackboard...?

RIP: Clay’s

Clay’s, on the top floor of the Hotel La Jolla, is no more.

The hotel has been sold, and the new owners plan to move the restaurant — now renamed the Grill at Hotel La Jolla — down to the ground floor in a few months (turning its current scenic site into luxury suites).

The menu still has a few Clay’s holdovers, but the thrust is no longer fine dining so much as California/American comfort food. Chef Clay Bordan left the building about two-and-a-half weeks ago.

A Baker’s Dozen of Dining Patios

(Well, I had the idea about the same time as Ed Bedford, but then the weather turned so cold...) Here’s a list of my favorite patios:

1. Hacienda de Vega, Escondido. This isn’t just a patio, it’s a lush garden with trees, flowers, waterworks — the whole magical enchilada. (But Señora Vega doesn’t much make enchiladas — her food is more serious.) Sunday brunch in Paradise.
2. Bertrand at Mr. A’s. Of course. To watch airplanes land inches from your nose and yet not hear them roar.
3. Candelas, Coronado Ferry Landing. Bay view. Happy people. Terrific food.
4. Roppongi. Somehow, snacking on fusion-grazes on this large front patio in La Jolla feels sophisticated.
5. JDN, Pacific Beach. You’re so close to the beach here, your feet are almost in the sand.
6. Firenze, Encinitas. You don’t just “feel like” you’re in the country, you ARE in the country, at the edge of town.
7. George’s at the Cove. The rooftop patio has, probably, the best view of the Cove of any restaurant.
8. Red Marlin. The patio sprawls all over, with views of the yachts you wish you owned.
9. El Vitral. Just beyond the patio, Petco. With grass and all.

10. Cosmopolitan. Live old-time parlor music amid planters of flowers and miniature trees, with a central firepit where chilled Yumans warm their knees.

11. Jake’s Del Mar. Depending on where you land, you’ll have a closeup of the sea or of a park.

12. El Prado. The garden patio is the only place to be if the weather will support it. (It’s quieter than the inside.)

12. C-Level. Here, it’s all patio with water views.

An Angry Panda Descends on Urban Solace

The latest libation to debut on the SD craft-beer scene has a most-interesting name. Dubbed “The Angry Panda,” one might think it’s an homage to the most storied residents of the San Diego Zoo, but that explanation’s too black-and-white...and incorrect.

The newest brew from Airdale Brewing Company, Angry Panda is named after owner Tony Clarke, who — before founding his brewing operation in 2008 — was a Navy pilot who went by the call-sign "Angry Panda."

"It was given to me because I was usually calm and collected but could quickly become bold and aggressive when I needed to be," says Clarke.

"I really love this beer because it is well balanced but big in flavors. It has a nice, smooth caramel maltiness with a touch of spice."

Clarke says the beer goes well with food, especially when it reaches a 55-degree F temp. If you want to test that theory, pack your thermometer and head to Urban Solace in North Park. There, the Angry Panda is being served for the first time as part of a three-beer flight that includes Airdale's Afterburner Amber Ale and Dark and Stormy Imperial Stout. Chef Matt Gordon will be preparing a small tasting to accompany the Panda and its stout companions.

Angry Panda will remain on tap at Urban Solace through the week, but if you can't make it to 30th Street, it will be available while supplies last at Bottle Craft in Little Italy, Best Damn Beer Shop downtown, Clem's Bottle House in Kensington, California Liquor in South Park, and the Pizza Port Carlsbad Bottle Shop. Clarke brewed only 15 barrels for the initial batch.

Fore! She's a Jolly Good Fellow

Gotta thank the beautiful Carla for this. She insisted on loading our bikes on the 901 bus and heading for Coronado Island.

"We'll ride around it," she said. "Much better than paying a gym."

Course, first you have to get through the bridge freak-out. You watch your machines sway back and forth outside the front as the driver does a Nantucket sleigh ride down that long-legged sky-road. But a moment later you're off at the first stop, cutting past the hospital, joining the bike path that snakes under the bridge and heads for, hey, the golf course.

"You should play here," says Carla. "This is public."

"Doesn't mean it's free," I say. "This is Coronado, remember? Plus, me? Play?"

"Let's just go see," Carla says.

By now the sun is getting down, heading for Japan. And the fact is, we're hungry, and down the golf club driveway you can see what look like...white umbrellas? "Let's eat first," she says.

The rest is history, or really, herstory. Because it turns out this public golf club has a public eatery called Grumpy Dan's Grill (2000 Visalia Row, Coronado).

It's right in the swank clubhouse, with a dining patio that gives you a spectacular bridge'n bay view.

But here's the charm. It turns out they have a seven-day happy hour from three to six.

And "three" is the magic number. Three dollar appetizers like crab cakes, nachos, potato skins with cheese, bacon, green onions, buffalo chicken fingers, onion rings, and street tacos.

Glass of house wine's $3, Bud pint is $2...I tell you, these admirals have it good.

But so did we. And we're coming back — next time I'm flush. For one, a $15 sunset round of golf (a good anonymous time to whack the ball if you're a sod-digging gofergolfer like me). Two, the prime-rib dinner (Thursdays and Sundays only, around $16 for 10-ounce to $20 for the 14-ounce).

Eat Your Heart Out, Herbie Hancock

Whew. I was worried. Couldn't get through to Mario at his Hancock Street Café (3354 Hancock Street, between Old Town and the Sports Arena area).

Turns out he has a new number (619-408-2101). I wanted to get to him to see if he'd heard: Herbie Hancock, his jazz piano-playing hero, is coming to town, late summer.

See, most of Mario's café is studio, with pianos, guitars, drums. He's a heckuva musician, but his dream has always been to invite the great Herbie Hancock himself to come play here. Heck, that's why he chose this location, on, yeah, Hancock Street.

I've always gone for good-value Italian chow (Mario's oh-so Italian, from New York), but I've also come here to Mario's for the talk and the music. Most days, he's open from 8 to around 2:30 p.m. Friday, Saturday that extends

Grant Grill Dishing the “Father-Iode” for Dad’s Day

I don't make it a habit to post menus, but some sound so tantalizing that I can barely help myself with Grant Grill's Father's Day Beer, Barley, & Hops menu, June 18 to 24.

Grant Grill's beverage director, Jeff Josenhans, has come up with pairings for the brew-friendly courses and created a cocktail called the “Hopped Manhattan Sour.”

This tippie starts out with a base of muddled Williamette hops (used in brewing to impart mild bitterness and a massive floral nose) and builds courtesy of a 100-day barrel-aged variety of rye whiskey that Josenhans crafted in Utah to commemorate the US Grant's 100th year in operation. Pressed lemon and egg whites add dimension and texture to stand up and with a duck sausage dish that includes figs, cherries, a wild fennel tart (likely made using wild fennel from the Grant's rooftop garden), and a syrup made from yet another beer ingredient: malt.

Guests may choose to have three courses ($40 alone or $60 with pairings), four courses ($60 alone or $85 paired), or five courses ($80 alone or $110 paired). It's a bit on the pricey side, but if your dad is anything like my son's dad, his love of suds and their power to make the trials of parenthood seem more bearable makes it all seem worth it.

Beer, Barley, & Hops Menu (excluding duck sausage dish above):

Crispy Pork with Apriums, Cascade Hops, Pickled Mustard Seeds, and Maltose Crackling paired with Blue Star Wheat Beer (Mendocino, CA).

Robiola a Tre Latte with Belgian Sourdough, Caramelized Almonds, Summer Berries, and Grilled Peaches paired with Duchesse de Bourgogne Flemish Ale (Belgium).

Recently Opened in Kearny/Clairemont Mesa

I noticed a couple of new openings last week while shopping and stopping in the Kearny Mesa-Clairemont area.

The first was Sufi Mediterranean Cuisine, which seemed to take forever to open — though, on second thought, they might have been open for a while, but the place always looked closed. I'd hardly have noticed except for the open sign.

The location is right next to Balboa International Market, which is hard enough to find since it's tucked away from Balboa Avenue: Sufi Mediterranean Cuisine, 5915 Balboa Avenue.

The second is a shop called Mama Jamaica, which opened in the strip mall that houses Suzuya and Oton. I think I'm having a senior moment because I can't remember what was here before.

If the food delivers, it'll be a nice addition to the area. There's probably some braised oxtail in my future: Mama Jamaica Cafe and Grill, 5447 Kearny Villa Road.

Burrito Barato — El Zarape Fish Tacos

El Zarape in University Heights is the Jabba the Hutt of Mexican restaurants Illustrious, spirited, and always entertaining an eclectic crowd, El Za's singular delight stems from tossing succulent sundries into my sarlacc pit. And while this metaphor might be falling apart, El Zarape's award-winning fish tacos unite San Diegans daily under the banner of cheap, delicious eats.

What this week's Burrito Barato lacks in burrito, it makes up for in pure barato. At 99 cents a pop, you could take the entire forest moon of Endor out to lunch and still have enough credits to stop for drinks on the way home. Whether you're between beers at Small Bar or on your way to a free summer concert at Trolley Barn Park, El Za is the perfect place to stop for bite of battered white fish with cabbage and tomato on

Good Cause Brings Out Good Cooks

Two of San Diego’s best chefs who’ve been off the radar for quite some time are taking temporary respite from their hermitism to help out a cause.

Amy DiBiase — who rose to fame at Laurel (now Cucina Urbana) in Bankers Hill, served up exquisite Mediterranean fare at Rosville in Point Loma, and got Old Town’s Cosmopolitan up and running — will don her whites in public (versus the back-of-house consulting she’s been doing since saying adios to the Cosmo) along with Brian Sinnott, who recently hung up his kitchen clogs after resigning from 1500 Ocean at the Hotel Del Coronado.

The impetus? The chance to help Feeding America San Diego, the county’s largest distributor of donated food at Hospitality for Hunger, a fundraising barbecue and canned food/donation drive being held at Mosaic Wine Bar in North Park from noon to 4 p.m. on Sunday, June 12.

Joining the aforementioned duo will be equally talented chefs Olivier Bioteau from University Heights’ Farm House Cafe and Anthony Sinsay from Harney Sushi in Old Town. Given the caliber of this quartet, the cover charge of $20 seems as much a charity as the nonprofit that will benefit.

All proceeds raised from Hospitality for Hunger will benefit the organization’s Feeding Kids programs. FASD services 73,000 families, children, and seniors each week through a network of 180-plus partner agencies, community distributions, and various programs. Mountain Brew, BBQ

If you’re a fan of Bad Boy, Duet, Odin’s Raven, or my other absolute fave, Irish Red (and, clue, we’re not talking racehorses here), you’ll know I’ve been up to Alpine and Pat McIlenny’s Alpine Beer Company brewery/pub (2363 Alpine Boulevard).

This guy’s a retired fireman-turned-world-class brewer. But the surprise is he and his family also turn out some pretty durned good

TRUFFLED CHICKEN CROQUETTES

RECIPE BY ANTHONY SINSAY
Executive Chef, Harney Sushi, Old Town

I come from an Asian and Filipino background. My dad was in the Navy for 17 years and was the cook in our house. He died when I was 11, so there was a void there. I tried to fill his shoes. Even to this day, when I am in the kitchen, I feel closer to him. So that was how I got my start.

I was born and raised in San Diego, so I’m a homegrown boy. After culinary school, I worked at the Viceroy Hotel in Las Vegas but was looking for an excuse to move back to California. When I was offered a job at the Platinum Hotel and Spa in Santa Monica, I took it.

Now, I’m happy to be back in San Diego at Harney Sushi. Here, my focus is on everything that isn’t sushi. I added some updated classics to the menu, like our bagels and lox. To make it, we cure sustainably raised and caught salmon in-house. Then we air-dry it and serve it with traditional garnishes. We make our own cracker with an “everything” topping and we freeze cream cheese in liquid nitrogen and then run it through a piping bag so it looks like a noodle. We finish it off with pickled cucumber. It’s unfamiliar and yet classic.

Yeah, I guess I’m influenced by molecular gastronomy. But I hate that term because it implies I do something other than cooking. What I love to do is to ask questions about how to cook something better. Not better than the guy next door but better than I cooked it the day before. What makes bagels and lox so good? What’s so comforting? Then I like to turn it upside down.

I never used to cook at home, but I am doing it more lately. I do things all over the place. The other day I made chicken and dumplings for someone. For Christmas, my girlfriend and I made a lamb dish with polenta. I make what’s in season and at the market. Spring is a good time of year for chicken. And there are so many vegetables now at the Farmers’ Market. You can do anything this time of year.

More Gluten Free

Gluten-free? Latest place I saw where they’re serious about this was at the University of San Diego. At USD (where I went recently), everybody did something GF in the big dining hall (“Pavilion Dining”):

- * Tapenade, the Mediterranean-type place, always has GF salmon & steak for lunch and grilled chicken breast with brown rice for dinner; * at Sea Salt Grill, the burger joint, they have hamburgers and cheeseburgers sans buns; * the Mex outlet, Maiz, does GF tortillas if you ask; * Nori Now, the sushi outlet, will do plain sushi with no soy or eel sauce; * at Lemon Grass, the popular Vietnamese eatery, all curry items are GF; * and Bert’s Bistro, a “nut and peanut-free dining location,” says they offer “numerous” gluten-free dishes.

I’m starting to understand what a pain in the you-know-what it must be to search out places if you have this problem. I’ll keep an eye out from now on. Probably good for the rest

HOW TO DO IT

In a stockpot simmer whole chicken in chicken stock, thyme, parsley, bay leaves, celery, and onion until chicken is tender and falling off the bone, about an hour. (Use large cooking spoon to skim off any grayish-white foam that develops on surface of liquid; repeat periodically and regulate heat to keep liquid from reaching a boil.) Then, remove the herbs, celery, and onion with a slotted spoon and discard. Remove the chicken and allow to cool. Reserve the stock. (Can be done a day ahead. Reserve chicken and stock in refrigerator.) When chicken is cool enough to handle, remove the meat from the bones and shred it. In a separate large saucepan, melt butter over low heat. Add flour and stir constantly with a whisk until well combined into a white roux. Slowly stir warm stock into the roux and simmer until the mixture is thick enough to coat the back of a spoon. Add chopped truffles, shredded chicken, and gelatin. Continue to cook until gelatin has completely melted and distributed evenly. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Pour mixture into a cake pan or jelly-roll pan and allow to cool completely. Make an egg-wash by combining the eggs and milk with a fork. Using a small melon-baller or ice-cream scoop, form the cooled croquette mixture into desired size and dredge in flour, then egg-wash and coat in panko breadcrumbs. Form the croquettes into small, thick patties. Continue until you have finished all of the croquette mix. In a frying pan or large pot, heat at least 2 inches of peanut oil until it reaches 365°. Fry croquettes until crispy on the outside and golden brown. Serve with a salad or pickled spring vegetables.

be causing this? Aside from the shrimp thing, could it be a result of new varieties that yield more... something like that? If I don't watch out I could turn into a gluten "birther."

After doing a search for "gluten" in my files for the last couple of years, here's all I turned up:

Proper Gastropub, 795 J Street (on pedestrian alley near 8th), 619-255-7520; propergastropub.com. Gluten-free food by request. Widely varied menu. I think there are a lot of items in which gluten would just be irrelevant, if you don't get something with bread.

Many top restaurants will extend themselves to meet their patrons' health needs. One that comes instantly to mind is 910 in La Jolla because pastry-chef Jack Fisher has always worked a lot with uncrusted fruit sweets and makes SD's best panna cotta (delicate "custard" made with cream, gelatin, sugar — no flour at all. It's basically cream Jell-O for the gods).

I'd advise staying away from "old fashioned" French restaurants (e.g., Bleu Boheme) where the chef is likely to use flour to thicken sauces. Modern French chefs (and chefs trained in French disciplines) nowadays make cream sauce by straight reduction, not with a roux. You're generally safe with sauces called "reduction" or "gastrique."

Mexican food: Corn-flour has little or no gluten.

(When you make cornbread, you have to add baking powder &/or baking soda and a liquid to make it rise.)

Venture out of the ordinary. Ethiopian food is one example: The huge pancakes called injera (serving as your plate and your spoon) are made with tef — ground seeds of a wild grass, totally gluten-free. Injera gets its bit of a "rise" through soda water and light, overnight fermentation. You can satisfy your "bread jones" without gluten-forming bread there.

Most Asian foods come with rice, which is low-or no-gluten. (To make a rice pastry rise, you typically have to add beaten egg white.) Even dim sum at Jasmine Bistro can work for you — you'll sadly have to skip a lot of delish dishes, but when you look at the wrappers on the wrapped dishes, choose the translucent white wrappers, made with rice flour or tapioca flour. Shrimp har gow, si! Pork siu mai, no!

If you live in El Cajon, land of the flying carpets of Chaldean restaurants, it's a matter of restraint — e.g., eating hummus and baba ganouj with a fork, not pita, and forgoing the pita wrap around the grilled meats. If you should happen to find couscous on a menu, they'll probably be okay for you (no promises here).

More ideas, folks? Speak up.

Cafe Sevilla reopens, big party — ole!

Real-life Spanish food (as opposed to "global tapas", "small plates," etc.) is an endangered species here. Cafe Sevilla does a reasonably nice job with both the little and the big bites.

(The basement nightclub in the old place no doubt supported the quality of the food upstairs. Yes, that'll come back at the new location, too.)

Last fall, Cafe Sevilla shut down to move to new renovated quarters (still in the Gaslamp). It's taken longer than they expected, but they're reopening at the end of this month.

Wanna party? Cafe Sevilla's Grand Opening Party is on Wednesday, June 29. New loca-

Nina Gets Dumped. Since it became a modern-rock station eight years ago, FM 94/9 has carried syndicated alternative-oldies show New Wave Nation on Sunday mornings. Hosted by the raspy-voiced Nina Blackwood, the show is dedicated to '80suncommon. KSDS (88.3 FM), for instance, airs a night of blues-style music from 8 p.m. Saturday to 7 a.m. Sunday morning. For a commercial station like 94/9 to air a blues show is a rarity. "There are only five or six rock or classic-rock stations in the whole the news. He says before 94/9 started airing Blackwood's show, his Sunday-morning Resurrection Sunday killed it in the ratings. "We were always in the top three among all stations...among all listeners," says West. "When Nina came along, it sort of fragmented that audience. That show has acted as a sort of spoiler, spoiling other people's glory. But, I welcome all her former listeners." West says 91X has been airing Resurrection Sunday since 1990. West has hosted the show for the past 13 years.

94/9 has had success with its other Sunday-morning specialty show, the all-reggae "Brunch with Bob and Friends," which airs 9 a.m. to noon. But some wonder how well blues will go over in the morning.

"It does seem like a night-time thing," says Michael Kinsman, president of Blues Lovers United of San Diego. "It seems like [that time slot] starts the show off with a handicap. On the other hand, any blues on commercial radio is greatly welcomed. But people are going to have to find it. If it's done well, it could be a huge success."

Helping to spread the word will be T, the single-letter-named blues DJ who has been working at KSDS since 1978. "I have the longest-running prime-time blues show west of the Mississippi." His show, Every Shade of Blue, airs from the better." T suggests having a blues show on commercial radio is a stretch. "God bless the sponsors who are putting up the money to sponsor it."

8 p.m. to midnight on Saturday and anchors an overnight block that includes blues, gospel, zydeco, and R&B. "The more blues on the radio

T says he has been blind for the past ten years. "I can't do requests anymore, but I can run the control room by myself. Most people who listen have no idea I can't see. I spend eight to ten hours each week getting the show ready." He says being blind has opened up his ears to new artists.

"Everybody who sends me a CD now gets a fair shot to be on the air. It used to be if some dorky white kid sent in a CD with his picture on the cover, chances are I wouldn't listen to it. Now I give everyone a fair shot."

in San Diego?" Castro, a Bay Area blues artist, performed at two of the original San Diego Blues Festivals back in 1999 and 2002. Kinsman's answer this time around was Saturday, September 17, at the Embarcadero Marina Park North, an all-day blues concert with James Cotton, Lil' Ed & the Blues Imperials, Lightnin' Malcolm, Café R&B, and more. Castro will headline what is being billed as a benefit show. "Any proceeds will go to the San Diego Food Bank," says Kinsman, who hopes the event will draw at least 6000 people. Admission is $10 and two cans of food. "At that price, we have a good shot."

An ex-Union-Tribune reporter, Kinsman coproduces the annual Oktoberfest in Ocean Beach. He writes articles for Blues Revue magazine, and is currently working on a book about a bluesman named Watermelon Slim. He also produced a string of local blues festivals here between 1998 and 2003. ("My highest attendance was 4500 people.") The series was discontinued after 2003. "It was a losing proposition," Kinsman says.

Kinsman says he didn't want to produce any more blues festivals. "I just didn't have it in me. The San Diego Blues Festival meant a lot to me. The failure was hard." So, what brings him back into the arena? "I've been to events and I get excited by them." A willing sponsor with deep pockets, he says, was the tipping point. "This was not my idea. I couldn't afford to do it as a little guy. It just wasn't gonna happen." Vince Kasperick, founder and CEO of AimLoan.com, deserves the credit for creating this event, Kinsman says. "And Mitch Mitchell, former chairman of the Food Bank, embraced the idea immediately."

Production costs have all been underwritten by AimLoan.com. Kinsman explains that he is acting only as producer of this incarnation of the San Diego Blues Festival. "It's [the Food Bank's] event. All the admission, all the donations of canned food, and any excess funds we might make from the concessions will go to them."

In this particular case, it’s a risky event, but I’m not personally taking a risk.”

Kinsman indicates that if all goes according to plan, there may be more Food Bank Blues Festivals in the future. “But this is not a festival that is ever gonna have a B.B. King

The group played their first show last November at the Tin Can Ale House and has since Trash’d Tower, Ken, Soda, Eleven, Ruby Room, Slab City Fun Fest, Vegas, TJ, and countless house parties. With keys and guitars (one clean, one with Big Muff distortion) filling out the bottom end, Shiva Trash carries the garage-punk energy of the Sess and Atoms to a more psychedelic, shadowy place, which Jimenez calls “dark surf slash punk slash weird.” Think

This Week In Music

Thursday 16

...And You Will Know Us by Our Wicked Long Name fills up that tiny little chalkboard on the Casbah door tonight. After a few false starts in the mid '90s, the Austin act broke with their 2002 Interscope debut, alt-rock essential Source Tags and Codes — the rare record that's made the progression from my Walkman to Discman to Pod. Trail of Dead is known for cavity-rattling rock that teases the edges of trad song structures and then hits hyperdrive at number 11. Fun ride. The quartet's out to tout this year's Tao of the Dead, out on the band's appropriately named Richter Scale Records. With nu-gaze trio Ringo Deathstarr setting it up, this'd be the gig to get to tonight. By the by, Deathstarr's new one, Colour Trip, would make for one fuzzy summer, Bloody Valentine fan.... Portland punk-pop trio the Thermals will warm up House of Blues. They're touring in support of last year's mixed bag of bubblegum rave-ups, Personal Life. The band's standout is 2006's

...AND YOU WILL KNOW US BY THE TRAIL OF DEAD AT CASBAH

apparently irreplicable The Body, the Blood, the Machine, which tempered the cute with, well, temper. So, get that one. Dance-punk duo Matt & Kim headline. Everything you need to know about the Brooklyn band can be seen — wink wink — in the vid for "Lessons Learned" Uptowning, the Whistle Stop's Makeout Weird welcomes multimedia artist and UCSD professor Michael Triglio doing some heady shit or other...the folk-rocky Fire Eaters, Fierce Creatures, and Nukes drop on Bar Pink...and art-punk act Ghetto Blaster turns up at Ruby Room with Marsupials, Jr. Worship, and Traindodge. Looks as if the GBs will be taking the show on the road this summer. God speed you Ghetto Blaster.

HUNX AND HIS PUNX AT SODA BAR

Nobunny and the late Jay Reatard, cross-pollinating his girl-group tendencies (Gravy Train, anyone?) with garage-rawk balls. The Punx signed to Sub Pop subsidiary Hardly Art for this year's Too Young to Be in Love, "a throwback pastiche of rock's early years." Bleached (Mika Miko), Viper Squad, and Fine Steps (Ganglions) go first, while DJ Mario Orduno spins round sets.... Best of the rest has Tin Can Ale House hosting the shoegaze-y anti-band Moonbeams' record release with Rebar and Plums, Whirl, and Wife in support...Brick by Brick taps the Psychic Realm, an L.A.-based "sick-hop supergroup" ...Silverlake girl-group Kissing Cousins visits Ché Café with Maren Parusel, Roxy Jones, and Colony...while psych-folk four-piece the Donkeys clop into Casbah with tropical-rock big band Red Pony Clock. The Donks are off for a brief summer swing after this thing, touring in support of sophomore set, Born with Stripes, which is out now on Dead Oceans.

Saturday 18

Canadian power trio Rush is the big ticket at the Cricket this week. These three guys introduced me to a whole 'nother section of the book-store. Concept rock. Jazz. They strrrretched my attention span and lost me a lot of girlfriends. I wouldn't miss this for the world. Any of you kids need a primer or brother nerds need a reminder, I highly (arched brow) recommend documentary Beyond the Lighted Stage. Excellent, and I do believe Jack Black hits the nail with his "rocket sauce" soliloquy.... And (just cuz my boss is watching): L.A. punk-n-roll trio Thousand Watt Stare (ex-Black President and Unwritten Law) looks into the Shakedown...trip-hop hit Aesop Rock's at Casbah with Kimya (love the Peach)...Andrew Kenny's (American Analog Set) Wooden Birds alight at Soda Bar (Matt Pond is in this band?)...Tower stages an electro-garage show with Stalins of Sound and the Very... and Joey Belladonna (née Bellardini) of Anthrax fame stacks 'em up at Brick by Brick. Anthrax will be dropping a new disc, Worship Music, with Belladonna at the helm in September. The speed-metal crew heads home to da Bronx for a record-release that week. At Yankee Stadium. With Metallica, Slayer, and Megadeth. Oh, my.

D.O.A. AT SHAKEDOWN

Who's your daddy? Happy Fatha's Day, Pop! I vote punk-rock matinee at Shakedown. Beerin' and bullshittin' in the sun with that other Canadian power trio D.O.A. The hardcores helped launch the genre in '78 and last year released their 17th(!), Talk-Action=0. Like-minded locals Coda Reactor and crust punx Bumbklaatt will set the Midway stage. Show starts at 4p.... After that, Tinsel Teeth, Cacaw, Otro, and Batwings fill an outsider bill at Soda Bar. If you haven't seen Tinsel Teeth, I'm talking nudity, blood-spitting, in-your-face GG Allin shit, 'cept the part of GG's played by a hot little chick with a big rubber...stick.

Monday 20

Monday stuff looks and listens like Monday stuff should — a lot of strummin' and hummin', as surf-pop singer Donavon Frankenreiter settles into Belly Up for a two-night stint...Brooklyn indie folkies Leland Sundries visit Tin Can Ale House (dude sounds just like Lou Reed: myspace.com/leland-sundries)...and Brett Den-nen brings his Loverboy tour to House of Blues, where Cali acousti-cats Dawes go first.

Tuesday 21

More New York at the Tin Can, as the Ale House gets folk-punk mopes Sad and French and Brick Factory...L.A. alt-rock trio Nico Vega's down the hill at Little It'ly supper club Anthology...and Soda Bar's got "human karaoke," where/when you sing with their house band the Side-kicks. No, they don't know any Jonas Brothers.

Wednesday 22

Humpnight has The Show Is the Rainbow at Bar Pink. The Lincoln, Nebraska act is one-man maelstrom Darren Keen. "He sings. He raps. He screams. He produces. He makes videos. And in the end, so much is going on that it's hard to figure out which is the best part because it all is so good," last.fm does declare.... "Round the bend, Soda Bar sets up Henry Clay People. The cheeky, L.A.-based brother act is out to tout This Is a Desert EP, another v. good guitar record for the classic-rock throwbacks. Fellow Los Angelinos Owens Valley Dynamite go off first.... Utter mentionables: Singer-songer Duncan Sheik's selling American Psycho at Anthology...and Norwegian indie-punk cutie pie Ida Maria's at Casbah behind her second studio set Katla. Miss Maria's reported to have synesthesia — "she envisions colours when she hears music." Colours with a u. Not American colors.

Huge Thirst

David Rinck's local ties date back to 1981, when the singer/guitarist/sax player cofounded the original Wallflowers. Somewhat punk, a little mod, and always rockin', the band wrote songs about dangerous San Diego locales of the time, such as “Funland” (about a long-gone downtown game arcade frequented by hookers and sailors) and “Paradise on 4th Avenue” (mainly chronicling that street's early punk hangout, Studio 517).

“To be honest, I feel sort of comfortable with places where there isn't a lot of law and order, possibly as a result of growing up with a less-than-great relationship with authority,” said Rinck.

Long after he departed San Diego, Rinck continued to perform and record with local players, including the Ramblers (with Music Power producer Eric Camillo), the Blues Gangsters, founded in 2008 with Dave Ellison (Rockin' Dogs), Dave Fleminger (the Answers), Kristi Maddocks (Everybody Violet), and fellow former-Wallflower Matt Johnson. Until just a few weeks ago, he was also playing with the reunited Cardiac Kidz, one of the city's earliest punk bands.

“Over the course of all these years, a sort of musical canon has evolved. I love tunes like ‘Rubber Room’ from the Wallflowers, ‘Candy Rock’ by the Rockin' Dogs, ‘Find Yourself a Way’ by the Cardiac Kidz, and ‘Tigershark Blues’ by the Blues Gangsters. Some of these songs I've played on several continents, with multiple bands.”

Rinck is currently living in northern Africa. “Tunisia is a great place to be right now, because of the political opening, which is also producing all sorts of new freedoms for them in culture as well. They've been tied to France for many years, so there's a huge thirst for American music these days. San Diego bands that feel like coming out would find a great reception.”

MUSIC

WHAT'S IN YOUR MUSIC PLAYER?

1. Stan Getz, João Gilberto, and Antonio Carlos Jobim, Getz/Gilberto. “I'm still primarily a saxophonist, and this is exactly how I wish I could play.”
2. Faudel, Khaled and Rachid Taha, 1 2 3 Soleils. “Algerian punk rock that comes from the brothels of Oran. Really profane stuff. These guys were basically gunned down in the streets for their music during the civil war in Algeria.”
3. Cesaria Evora, Café Atlantico. “She has such a great voice. This CD takes me to a smoky piano bar in Cape Verde.”
4. Chet Baker, Chet Baker Sings. “I love to hear what a great musician does when he puts his talents into interpreting classic numbers like this.”
5. Jimmy Reed, Just Jimmy Reed. “He's my favorite guitarist, after Scotty Moore from Elvis's band.”

WHERE IN SAN DIEGO DO YOU HANG OUT?

“Lestat's West. I like the coffee and the easygoing ambiance. It's my office when I'm in San Diego. And it's open 24/7. I love staying out all night.”

FAVORITE CONCERT?

“Johnny Thunders & the Heartbreakers at the Whisky a Go Go, about 1980. He was the king on a good night, one of the greatest bluesmen ever. The Muddy Waters of punk rock. They brought the house down that night.”

IF YOU COULD TIME TRAVEL, WHEN/ WHERE WOULD YOU VACATION?

“I'd go back to 1977 London and go see all the punk-rock bands, just to see what it was really like. I bet it was fun as can be, in the halcyon days.”

BEST DISH THAT YOU COOK?

“Peri-peri chicken. Or shrimp, when I can get good ones. I make the peri-peri sauce from oil, whiskey, and chili peppers, and let it sit in a jar for a year.”

READ ANY GOOD BOOKS LATELY?

“I just went back and read The Plague, by Albert Camus, again. He was, of course, a Pied-Noir [French citizen in Algeria] who grew up in a poor neighborhood in Algiers called Belcourt. A lot of the French existentialists and post-modernists — like Jacques Derrida and Michel Foucault — grew up in French North Africa, so I wanted to figure out why this region gave us so many counter-cultural figures.”

LEAST FAVORITE MOVIE?

“Eat Pray Love was so bad that I would have walked out, but I was on a plane.”

EVER BEEN A CRIME VICTIM?

“I used to live in Nairobi, and I was driving through this traffic-circle about 7 p.m. with my window down, and this kid came up and stole my cell phone out of my hand. His partner tried to stab me in the eye, so the first one got the phone while I was distracted, trying not to have my eye gouged out. I didn't really care about my phone. He could have just showed me the knife

PHRASE YOU NEVER WANT TO HEAR AGAIN?

“You have a message on Facebook.”

THREE THINGS WE DON'T KNOW ABOUT YOU?

1. “I studied economics in Beijing, China, in 1988 and 1989. I was in Tiananmen Square during the whole uprising. Basically, my whole class died when the tanks rolled in.”
2. “I have an African cat named Aysho that's like family to me. He's fought falcons and stuff. He got bit by a venomous snake once in Kenya, and we had to give him anti-venom, but he lived.”
3. “I like Culture Club.” ■

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

A few weeks ago, The New York Times had an interesting article about how white rappers had moved from being outsiders in hip-hop to being the people carrying the torch of the old school — something like the way white guys have largely taken over Chicago-style blues. The article made an interesting argument, but I thought it gave the mistaken impression that all white rappers are still wearing gold chains and Kangol hats. In fact, many of the leading emcees in the forward-looking alternative/independent hip-hop scene are white. And perhaps the most remarkable thing about their presence in the scene is that their skin color seems not to matter.

Aesop Rock is one of the most respected of these white indie rappers. Born Ian Bavitz, Aesop Rock came out of New York around the turn of the millennium (he moved to San Francisco in 2005) and quickly gained a reputation for his artfully complicated lyrics and his laid-back delivery. He also has a knack for writing about unusual subject matter. On the 2007 None Shall Pass, Aesop has a track that begs astronomers to reinstate Pluto as a planet. At least I think that's what it's about — this is a guy who raps lines like "Flash that buttery gold, jittery zeitgeist/Wither by the watering hole, Border Patrol."

His music is often just as difficult to pin down as his lyrics. Maybe that's part of the reason Aesop often collaborates with musicians from both inside and outside the hip-hop world. His current tour has him performing with indie-folk star Kimya Dawson.

BY DAVE GOOD

Critics called A Fever You Can't Sweat Out electro-dance and emo and vaudeville, but I heard power pop. In many ways, Panic! at the Disco reminded me of the Nerves, a 1970s pre-new-wave band that may have invented the three-minute melodic blast that would later make bands like the Knack and the Romantics rich. Many of those same critics bashed Fever and called the band's music irritating and the lyrics overwritten. Still, that debut CD sold double platinum. It was released in September of 2005, and by March of 2006 the band was headlining their own tour, and they'd landed an MTV Video of the Year award.

Perhaps as a result of having spent all that time on the road performing, Panic! At the Disco changed when they followed up with Pretty Odd. It veered into a slightly matured Eleanor-Rigby-meets-the-Buzzcocks sound. The band members were no longer teens on testosterone, but they still had heroic ideas, and by now they had the industry clout to pull them off. When they played Madison Square Garden during the Nothing Rhymes with Circus tour, that's exactly what they brought to the stage: a circus.

Panic! at the Disco is another internet success story. Ryan Ross and Spencer Smith started the band while in high school in Las Vegas. They learned blink-182 covers in the ninth grade, and when they wrote and recorded a couple of originals, they posted them online. That got them signed and into the recording industry long before they'd performed in public as a band. Brendon Urie and drummer Spencer Smith are the current members of Panic!, with road-band warriors Ian Crawford on guitar and Dallan Weekes on bass and synth to flesh out the live sound. Now touring behind Vices & Virtues, they have matured even more over the years into melancholy emo dudes, but emo dudes who look on the bright side of things. Fun and Funeral Party also perform.

EVERYONE'S A CRITIC

Wasting Light
Foo Fighters

By Brian Palmer

Few bands as popular as the Foo Fighters go 16 years before having an album hit number 1 on Billboard's Top 200 for the first time, but that's what Wasting Light has done, and it's easy to hear why. The first minute of the album is one hell of an opening salvo, with Grohl screaming, "These are my famous last words," with all the force of an atomic blast.

From thunderous

lead single "Rope" to the blitzkrieg of balls-out rocker "White Limo," the Foos sweep you away in a flood of sound — the guitars roar, while the drums bowl you over. Even on slow-boiling rockers such as "Arlandria," Grohl proves you don't have to play at the speed of light to give your rock 'n' roll some white-hot intensity.

Grohl is one of the most charismatic and talented rock singers of this generation, alternating between throat-blistering abrasiveness and solid melodies with practiced precision. Grohl, Pat Smear, and Chris Shiflett blast the speakers out with their riffs, and drummer Taylor Hawkins fires off one missile after another with the vigor and precision of a marksman at a shooting range. Wasting Light clicks on all cylinders.

Louis Hayes Quartet

By Robert Bush

Jazz drummer Louis Hayes performed at the Saville Theatre for the final installment of this spring's "KSDS Jazz Live" series. Hayes has played with several jazz greats, from John Coltrane to Woody Shaw; he once turned down a job offer from Miles Davis in order to stay employed with Cannonball Adderley. Hayes is 74, and many of his contemporaries are either retired or deceased.

The Detroit native, however, shows no sign of slowing down. The drummer led a group of elite local musicians through a blistering set of hard-bop with an energetic sense of drive and clarity.

Trumpet wizard Gilbert Castellanos provided melodic leadership and dexterous solos. Bassist Rob Thorsen kept rock-solid time, and his solos were compelling examples of thematic storytelling. Pianist Mikan Zlatkovich provided thunderous power and economy to complement the drummer's propulsive take on Monk's "Green Chimneys" and Gillespie's "Con Alma."

Concert: Louis Hayes Quartet

Venue: Saville Theatre, San Diego City College

SAN DIEGO WEEKLY Reader STREET TEAM designed by KIM RESCATE

This Week: The Shout House!

Trivia night! Every Monday. Drink specials, and such.

We met these two guys, seemed cool. Mr. Orange Shirt had a business importing ties.

It was this dude's 21st Birthday! I mean, this dude:

These guys actually showed up separately. But I (flawlessly) photoshopped them together.

We promised to put them in: But they also won Fair Passes for being good at trivia! So, hey!

Speaking of the Fair...

We did go on this ride. (no one barfed)

We did not go on this ride (because we all would have barfed)

see these photos, and many more on our f t @sdreader

THIS WEEK: WE ENJOYED A EVENING WITH DRINKS, DUELING PIANOS, AND TRIVIA AT SHOUT HOUSE DOWNTOWN. GREAT VENUE WITH A GOOD ATMOSPHERE FOR LETTING LOOSE A BIT. THEY CAN BE FOUND @THESHOUTHOUSESD OR ON FACEBOOK FOR BONUS INFO. OR, YOU COULD PRETEND IT'S THE 90S AND GO TO THESHOUTHOUSE.COM

WE ALSO WENT TO THE COUNTY FAIR OF COURSE. BIGGER THAN EVER, NOT COMPLETELY FULL OF SHAMWOW VENDORS.

Follow us on Twitter!

Set 'Em Up, Joe!

In the late '40s and early '50s, the Turf Supper Club was a magnet for bookies and horse-racing enthusiasts, according to bartender Stacey Sloate. "They [had] a group here that would go to both Del Mar and Caliente, in Mexico," she tells me. A 1948 phone book lists the establishment as "The Turf Cocktail Lounge," Sloate says, before assuming its current name in the 1949 directory.

Specializing in the no-nonsense approach to cocktails (quality and quantity), the Turf Supper Club offers the same array of classic potions that probably helped even the odds of winners and losers in the club's horse-powered heyday.

Edging close to 20 years of bartending, Sloate is an old hand at old fashioned, Manhattans, and martinis. These last, she says, come as filthy dirty and/or lip-curling dry as you want. Sloate has also helped inspire something of a comeback for the sidecar.

The Turf's sidecar is a cross between the original recipe (brandy, triple sec, lemon juice) and a margarita, due to the Turf's emphasis on lime to boost the flavor. "It's sweet but not too sweet and tart but not too tart," Sloate says. "For someone who's never had a sidecar before, I describe it as a brandy margarita with the citrus and sweet of a margarita without the harshness of the tequila."

Kitchen Proof: The sweet and tart go hand in hand with the firm brandy foundation.

Incomplete

How can evil and ugliness make a gift of beauty?"

When he was six, Asher Lev began noticing the contours and textures of the world. He became alert to shadings of color, to the degrees of blackness in a shadow. His eye sought the unique in the everyday. He began to draw.

One day he sketched wet spots on his mother's face. Why?

It was a hot day, he said. The heat made them. He didn't know the word for perspiration. Asked why he added the spots, Asher said that was how she looked. His father Aryeh, an observant Jew, said the "foolish" portrait showed disrespect. Asher must never draw again. "Torah Jews do not become painters."

His son could have a gift, Aryeh admitted. But it may serve the Other Side. In Aryeh's Hassidic tradition, the world has a "good" side and sitra achtra, the Other, where "all that is evil lurks." Has drawing yanked Asher from the Being Without End and into the "realm of darkness and evil"?

But Asher is an observant Jew. He prays three times daily. He keeps kosher and practices festivals of his religion. He believes "it is a man's task to make life holy."

Chaim Potok's novel (1972) makes Asher the battleground for competing traditions. It's a portrait of a prodigy torn, according to his father, between the divine and the demonic. Jacob Kahn, the world-famous sculptor who worked alongside Picasso, disagrees. "Art is a religion," he tells Asher. "Become a great artist. That is the only way to justify what you are doing to everyone's life."

So, Asher draws and paints and follows his gift. He studies the icons of the Western tradition. He begins drawing nudes, then — because he can't find the painful expression on the man's face anywhere else — crucifixions. Two have the face of Asher's mother.

The novel's a gripping read. Potok's descriptions of how Asher learns to "feel with his eyes" make you want to explore beyond the familiar. Aaron Posner's 90-minute stage adaptation, however, is so condensed it plays like a speed-read of the novel. Missing are the slow, agonizing percolation of Asher's identities, his parents' growing differences, and how his post-WWII sensibility can't reconcile his two "religions."

Asher narrates much of the story, often with direct quotations from the book. Telling rather than showing the story places it in the past, while theater thrives in the present (David Mamet: "the better the dramatist, the less the narration"). Two other actors join him in mini-scenes. Until the end, the drama's intermittent.

But here's an instance where the production enhances a so-so script.

For the North Coast Rep., Matt Novotny's lighting turns the stage into an artist's palette. Bold reds and subtle shadings enhance the story's flickering moods. Megan Schmid's costumes reflect both "traditions": yarmulkes and Hasidic ear-locks; Jacob Kahn's free-form, paint-splattered apparel.

Marty Burnett's minimalist set has an easel and fan-shaped clusters of empty canvases. These allow the audience to choose between Aryeh's accusation, "moral blindness," or Asher's father's "aesthetic blindness." They also help underscore the play's key word, "incomplete." A nagging sense of unfinished business drives each person into the unknown.

David Ellenstein, artistic director at North Coast, shows his versatility in four different roles, including the diametrical opposites: stern Aryeh and life-exuding Jacob Kahn. As Asher, Craig

New Village Arts, 2787 B, State Street, Carlsbad
Playing through July 3; Thursday through Saturday at 8:00 p.m. Matinee Saturday at 3:00 p.m., Sunday at 2:00 p.m. 760-433-3245

De Lorenzo's shackled by so much narration. Nonetheless, he braves through long speeches and often gives them emotional depth.

The adaptation's major flaw: it puts Asher's mother, Rivkeh, off in a corner (her suffering's the heart of the book). Crystal Serphen, adept in several roles, fills in as many gaps as she can as Rivkeh, trapped "between two different ways of giving meaning to the world."

* * *

For 34 years, Willy Loman lied his way inside the American Dream. In Arthur Miller's drama, the walls tumble down.

New Village Arts' current staging boasts three fine performances: Jeff Anthony Miller's Ben, the rich uncle, is an epic being; Eric Poppick's Charley, the next-door neighbor who breezes through life, does a master class in understatement; and Dana Case's Linda Loman, from her perfect accent to unconditional love for her family, ranks among the finest Lindas I've ever seen.

Jack Missett's opening-night effort as Willy had some strong moments. But too often his acting choices were clichés, especially the stagy

THEATER LISTINGS

Theater listings and commentary are by Jeff Smith. Information is accurate according to material given us, but it is always wise to phone the theater for any last-minute changes and to inquire about ticket availability. Many theaters offer discounts to students, senior citizens, and the military. Ask at the box office.

Chela
Ion Theatre presents Dulce Maria Solis’s theatrical biography of her mother, which Solis first penned and performed while living in San Diego. Todd Blakesley directed. ION THEATRE, 3704 SIXTH AVE., HILLCREST. 619-600-5020. 2PM AND 7PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 19.

Death of a Salesman
New Village Arts stages Arthur

Miller’s drama about Willy Loman, whose defenses can no longer keep the past at bay. Kristianne Kurner directed. NEW VILLAGE ARTS THEATRE, 2787 B STATE ST., CARLSBAD. 760-433-3245. 8PM THURSDAYS AND FRIDAYS, 3PM AND 8PM SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JULY 3.

Foggerty’s Fairy
What if you could drink an elixir and erase a piece of your past? Even if the small change could cause others? Frederick Foggerty, hooked on Jenny Talbot, swigs away a former love affair and reshapes the present. W.S. Gilbert wrote the piece in 1881. It features his sculpted prose but needs a better third act (which depletes accumulated energy with static chatter). Last year Talent to aMuse did a spirited version of Gilbert’s Engaged. Foggerty’s falls far short of that standard. The actors, many going beyond the requisite broadness, speak far too quickly. But the literary style — the wit and Gilbert’s verbal music — is the show. Pluses: George Weinberg-Harter’s hand-painted sets; Sandy Hotchkiss Gullans’s three fairies named Rebecca: one speaking French, another German, the third, Blanche DuBois. SWEDENBORG HALL, 1531 TYLER AVE., UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS. 8PM FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 18.

Forever Plaid
Moonlight Stage Productions opens its 31st summer season with the popular musical revue performed in “hip four-part harmony.” David Engel directed. MOONLIGHT AMPHITHEATRE IN BREngle TERRACE PARK, 1200 VALE TERRACE, VISTA. 760-724-2110. 8PM WEDNESDAYS THROUGH SUNDAYS, THROUGH JULY 2.

Humble Boy
Patio Playhouse stages Charlotte Jones’s fable about “broken vows, plastic surgery, astro-physics, with a touch of Shakespeare,” set in a bee hive. P.J. Abney directed. PATIO PLAYHOUSE, 201 EAST GRAND AVE., ESCONDIDO. 760-746-6669. 8PM FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 26.

My Mother’s Italian, My Father’s Jewish, & I’m in Therapy
Ron Tobin performs a one-person comic piece, written by Steve Solomon and “based on his wacky family” whose “sole purpose was to drive him into therapy.” LYCEUM THEATRE, 79 HORTON PLAZA, DOWNTOWN. 619-544-1000. 8PM THURSDAYS AND FRIDAYS, 2PM AND 8PM SATURDAYS, 2PM AND 5:30PM SUNDAYS, 7PM WEDNESDAYS, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 4.

My Name is Asher Lev
North Coast Repertory Theatre stages Aaron Posner’s drama about a Hassidic artist torn between his observant Jewish community and his need to create. David Ellenstein directed. NORTH COAST REPERTORY THEATRE, 987-D LOMAS SANTA FE DR., SOLANA BEACH. 858-481-1055. 8PM THURSDAYS THROUGH SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, 7PM WEDNESDAYS, THROUGH JULY 3.

National Comedy Theatre
The National Comedy Theatre presents a 100-minute improv comedy show based completely on audience suggestions. The show is “appropriate for all audiences.” NATIONAL COMEDY THEATRE, 3717 INDIA ST., MISSION HILLS. 619-295-4999. 7:30PM AND 9:45PM FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS, OPEN-ENDED RUN.

Rounding Third
Don and Michael coach a Little League team. To Don, the only fun is winning. To Michael, who couldn’t tell a fielder’s choice from a fungo, fun lies in the playing. Richard Dresser’s two-person comedy takes this odd couple through an entire season. You can predict the eventual melding of minds, but the curves life throws them make for a fun evening at Scripps Ranch Theatre. Walter Murray gives Michael a clean arc from bumbling newcomer to hardcore horse-hider. John Nutten has the juicier part and gives it one of the year’s funnier performances. Don has four-alarm, anger management issues (if it weren’t for baseball, he confesses, Don would dream almost exclusively about “revenge and sex”). Don’s a control freak, but Nutten (and director Robert May) cuts through the stereotype by showing that he actually means well. Don just keeps shooting himself in the foot. His solution? Get a bigger gun. Worth a try. SCRIPPS RANCH THEATRE, 10455 POMERADO RD., SCRIPPS RANCH. 858-578-7728. 8PM FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 25.

Swimming in the Shallows
InnerMission Productions presents Adam Bock’s surreal comedy about Barb trying to downsize possessions, Donna not wanting to marry a woman who smokes, and Nick, who goes on a date with a shark. Carla Nell directed. DIVERSIONARY THEATRE, 4545 PARK BL., UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS. 619-220-0097. 8PM WEDNESDAYS THROUGH SATURDAYS, 7PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 26.

Ted Williams: A Tip of the Cap
North Coast Repertory Theatre presents the San Diego premiere of Matt Thompson’s one-person show about the Baseball Hall of Famer and San Diegan. Thompson directed. NORTH COAST REPERTORY THEATRE, 987-D LOMAS SANTA FE DR., SOLANA BEACH. 858-481-1055. 7:30PM MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

Ten Cent Night
Hewitt Finley, who wrote the country song “Ten Cent Night,” committed suicide. Those who knew him can’t decide which — the song or the suicide — was the best thing he ever did. His children reunite, in Marisa Wegrzyn’s offbeat comedy, and dysfunction reigns. Sometimes in the longish script as well, since her plotting tends to run away from her. The Moxie production, directed by Delicia Turner Sonnenberg, fleshes out sketchy roles where they can. As do Jennifer Brawn Gitting’s precise, often hilarious costumes. Karson St. John, a Craig Noel Award winner who recently played the emcee in Cygnet’s Cabaret is pitch-perfect as Roby Finley (who’s following in her father’s footsteps as a singer and “hat puking” drunk). Sad as a country lament, Roby wants to do the right thing, for once, even though the universe conspires against her. Think it’s just paranoia? Then explain how she got handcuffed to a folding chair! Worth a try. MOXIE AT ROLANDO THEATRE, 6663 EL CAJON BL., SUITE N, COLLEGE AREA. 858-598-7620. 8PM THURSDAYS THROUGH SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 26.

The Music Man
It’s too bad Lamb’s Players couldn’t put its near future on hold. It looks to have a monster hit on its hands. This Music Man could run until the cows trundle home. The original played at the Majestic Theatre, one of Broadway’s largest. In Lamb’s relatively smaller space, the trombones still blare, but the more intimate staging — expert direction by Deborah Gilmour Smyth and choreography, Kolleen Kollar Smith — coaxes out nuances and details that make the familiar feel brand-new. Ablaze with rap-like riffs and Souza-marching steps, Rick Meads has a lark as Hill (and suggests throughout that he’s really a preacher, his sermon is belief in the imagination, and he’s conducting a secular revival). As Marian the Librarian, Sandy Campbell is special. Her beautifully clear voice illumines everything she sings. The fine ensemble cast takes up six pages in the program (but never seems cluttered on stage). Designer Jeanne Reith decks them all for a summer in Iowa. Mike Buckley’s white picket set is efficient to the point of eloquence. Critic’s Pick. LAMB’S PLAYERS THEATRE, 1142 ORANGE AVE., CORONADO. 619-437-0600. 7:30PM TUESDAYS THROUGH THURSDAYS, 8PM FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS, 2PM AND 6PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JULY 24.

The Tempest
As part of its 2011 Shakespeare Festival, the Old Globe Theatre presents the Bard’s late comedy, in which Prospero can enact revenge on his enemies or, “the rarer action,” forgive them. Adrian Noble directed. [Note The Tempest runs in repertory with Much Ado About Nothing and Amadeus]. OLD GLOBE THEATRE, 1363 OLD GLOBE WAY, BALBOA PARK. 619-234-5623. 8PM SUNDAYS, TUESDAYS, AND WEDNESDAYS, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 25.

Thoughts Around Midnight
For one evening only, Harold Sanditen, former San Diegan and now a London-based jazz singer and cabaret performer, takes a comic look at “those late night thoughts that can keep any of us awake.” TANGO DEL REY, 3567 DEL REY ST., PACIFIC BEACH. 858-794-9044. 8:30PM SATURDAY.

Voices From Chornobyl
InterMission Productions presents a staged reading of Cindy Marie

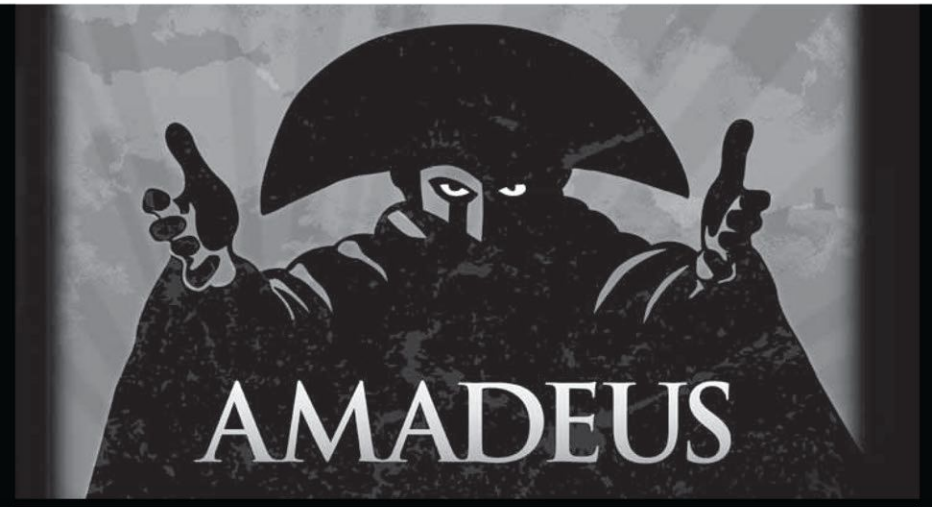

Jenkins’s drama about the disaster (which some spell “Chernobyl”) in Russia 25 years ago. DIVERSIONARY THEATRE, 4545 PARK BL., UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS. 619-220-0097. 8PM TUESDAY.

Write Out Loud: Go
Short stories are mini-dramas, made so by language alone. So, asked the founders of Write Out Loud, why not read them in public? That idea grew into a popular event. These aren’t staged readings with little advance preparation. Local actors rehearse a story as they would a script, emphasizing style and meaning. At the same time, all is subordinate to the word. As in the old days of radio, regular attendees often close their eyes and listen. Go presents “stories about moving, changing, going!” — by Alistair Cooke, Evelyn Waugh, Edward Albee and others. Worth a try. CYGNET THEATRE, 4040 TWIGGS ST., OLD TOWN. 619-337-1525. 12:30PM SATURDAY, 7PM MONDAY.

Ion Theatre has revived its acclaimed production of Neil LaBute’s trio of tales about unthinkable crimes. Neighbors would say of each speaker, “I had no idea. He/she just doesn’t look the type.” Their talk is disturbingly conversational; their deeds psychotic re-creations of Greek tragedies. Mounting them in the more intimate Sixth at Penn space makes the monologues even starker. Movements are few. The elemental staging, under Glenn Paris’s sensitive direction, aligns the plays as much with Samuel Beckett as with the Greeks. Brian Mackey and Rachael VanWormer reprise their roles. Both excel. Mackey’s garrulous speakers recall the title of Robert Scheer’s Thinking Tuna Fish, Talking Death. And VanWormer (who won a Craig Noel Award in 2008 for the coldhearted killer in Medea Redux) plays two women worlds apart temperamentally. So unlike, in fact, it’s hard to imagine the same actor not only doing both but doing them back-to-back with almost no break. Critic’s Pick. ION THEATRE, 3704 SIXTH AVE., HILLCREST. 619-600-5020. 8PM THURSDAYS AND FRIDAYS, 4PM AND 8PM SATURDAYS, THROUGH JUNE 18.

miXtape
Jon Lorenz and Colleen Kollar Smith, creators of this revue of 1980s music, say that favorite songs “mark your memories.” miXtape is a longish evening but performed with rampant energy and polish by an eight-person cast. Memory-triggers zip past: Pet Rocks, Pac-Man, Nelson Mandela, AIDS. The musical has a 2010 radar-blip attention span. Most of the songs are mere song-bytes. Showcasing a full number (like Journey’s “Don’t Stop Believin’”) would help. But backed by Andy Ingersoll’s versatile band and under Kerry Meads’s feisty direction, miXtape is always entertaining — and memory-provoking. (Note: Lamb’s Players has extended the run several times.) Worth a try. HORTON GRAND HOTEL, 311 ISLAND AVE., DOWNTOWN. 800-542-1886. 7:30PM WEDNESDAYS AND THURSDAYS, 8PM FRIDAYS, 4PM AND 8PM SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH SEPTEMBER 4.

Real Hero

How did he become the gentle Socrates of the horse corral?

Buck

There are precious few real heroes in movies. John Wayne was not a hero, he was more a stellar commodity with a graceful attitude. Usually it is documentaries that bring us heroes, such as the intrepid photographer in Bill Cunningham New York or hard-case survivor Mark Hogancamp in Marwencol — and now the genuine Western hero Buck Brannaman, in Buck.

My big equine experience was riding a nice mule down a side of the Grand Canyon. I feel like an honorary rider from seeing countless Westerns, but that isn't the real deal. The real, sane, fascinating deal is Brannaman, who never does the cruel equine stunts seen in old Westerns. As a trainer, Buck uses the rope sparingly and the whip never, though he can flick a soft, fly-whisk wand like Merlin summoning spirits. He doesn't so much tame as befriend horses, quickly winning them over with firm kindness and sensitive intuition of their needs, habits, and thoughts.

Buck was the savant who made Robert Redford's The Horse Whisperer effective. Redford appears in this film, still awed, and Buck won the audience prize at Redford's Sundance Festival. Debut-director Cindy Meehl follows Brannaman around the West for the four-day "clinics" he stages for horse owners. Rarely raising his voice, he tells deft stories and little jokes, and guides horses and people to a new companionship. He only "fails" with one angry beast, brain damaged at birth and then horribly mismanaged. Buck gets quietly mad just thinking about it.

The backstory is that Buck Bran-naman was once a kid called Buckshot who did trick-roping and lariat shows with his brother (barely seen here). If they messed up, or even if they didn't, their father would beat them (the mother died early). The father was a sadist, often drunk. The heartbeat of mystery in Buck is how that abused, silent, suspicious child, who lucked into fine foster parents, became this gentle Socrates of the horse corral. It seems a miracle of grit and character.

We see that Buck is a great dad with his teen daughter. He is also a great teacher. In short, he's great. Cindy Meehl made this film with devoted skill and a lucid eye for the settings, animals, and people. Her cogent passion would have delighted Budd Boetticher, the saddle-savvy master of Westerns and docu-poems on horses and bullfighting. We are led gently into the magic of Buck's game and gab, his past grief and present glory. So saddle up, starting June 24. ★★★★★

Korkoro

Writer-director Tony Gatlif is the bardic auteur of the Roma (Gypsies). Himself Roma of French-Algerian birth, Gatlif extends his ethnic filmography (Vengo, Gadjo Dilo, Latcho Drom) with Korkoro. This exceptionally well-grounded film about a migratory people is set in Vichy, France, as the Nazis tighten the noose and war shadows shiver through the tiny town and beautiful valley of the story.

Korkoro means "liberty." The main character, Claude, is played by engaging Mathias Liberté. The runaway boy, perhaps Jewish, joins a Gypsy band of hard-living nomads who seem spiritually closer to their horses than their religion. Speaking French, but rootless, they come to a town where ancient fear of the Roma as outsiders provides fertile soil for local fascists (their leader is made hatefully vivid by Carlo Brandt).

Facing detention or worse, the little group is aided by a humane mayor (Marc Lavoine) and a schoolteacher (Marie-Josée Croze). They recognize that the Roma incarnate the freedom that France has lost. Protecting them, and Claude, becomes a form of resistance. Gypsy music is a dramatic enhancer, and the Roma actors are compellingly raffish. Also a touch crazy in wild, thieving Taloché (James Thiérée, a grandson of Charlie Chaplin, who moves as if he has mime in the blood).

Canny in many ways, the Gypsies are nearly as naïve about politics as the French boy who becomes a foolish collaborator in Louis Malle's Lacombe, Lucien. This movie drawn from actual lives goes fatefully where it must, without a single dull moment. Julien Hirsch's photography is a richly textured asset all the way. One shot, involving a watch, resonates the Holocaust as well as any single image has on film.

The Art of Getting By

At 19, Freddie Highmore is no longer a child actor. But The Art of Getting

By sells him as the cutest boy-muffin since MGM's Freddie Bartholomew, or at least since the '70s high time of moon-faced Bud Cort. Closeups arrive like panting groupies as pale, brainy George (Highmore) flops through his last term at a New York private school. George is shy, sensitive, and tormented by angst, despite obvious talent as an artist. Adorable Sally (Emma Roberts) seems the obvious cure for his blues, but they diddle through "just friends" gambits until near the finish, all the while trading soft zingers.

Writer and debut feature-director Gavin Wiesen probably nailed some career chits by using Steven Spielberg's daughter Sasha as party-minded Zoe, and he has solid veterans like Tom Hanks's wife Rita Wilson, Sam Robards, Blair Underwood, and Alicia Silverstone. He should have spent more time scripting this blandly debonair coming-of-age carousel, which seems built to spin Highmore into maturity before Justin Bieber can grow into Titanic II: Boy Loves Mermaid. Despite a visit to the Whitney Museum, the film doesn't have nearly enough art to get by.

Bride Flight

Before the "chick flick," there was the "woman's picture." Each term can trigger facile male dismissal. I won't dismiss Bride Flight, though it blends those labels into a mix flavored with tears, erotic sweat, and Dutch cocoa. We're in a retro dimension where Imitation of Life meets The Group, one in which the heroines fly from austere, postwar Holland to fabulously spruce New Zealand: the sad-eyed but lovely Ada (Karina Smulders), plain-spun but indomitable Marjorie (Elise Schaap), and stylish early feminist Esther (Anna Drijver).

They come on a celebrated air-race flight, bond instantly, and then braid their man-sharing, baby-switching destinies into a soapy saga. Their favorite bed bazooka is Frank (Waldemar Torenstra), a Dutch émigré winemaker. If only he were not such a nice guy, he could be the Aryan super-hunk that insane Nazi Gregory Peck strives to create in The Boys from Brazil. Director Ben Sombogaart and writer Marieke van der Pol briefly toss in Rutger Hauer as Frank in old age, as well as a volcanic steam pit, a WWII blockhouse, a fire-breathing Calvinist preacher, Esther's flight from Judaism into fashion design, and torrid lust that would have melted Hollywood's old Production Code. Stale at the core, this chick-driven time capsule has some fresh and vivid touches around the edges.

Newsreel: Congratulations to those who dreamed long and worked hard to revive the Village Theatre in Coronado. Dark for a decade, the cherished but then run-down theater has been revamped as a boutique three-screener. The gala opening is June 24.

After the festive debut, questions will linger: How viable can this triplex be on an island that did not sustain one screen profitably? Can the two 45-seat "screening rooms" be more than curios? Are the retro-Deco touches only chrome on a popcorn box? Can standard filler like Cars 2 (the first offering) pull San Diegans across the big blue bridge? Will the programmers take chances? Once the Village is fully functional, I hope to visit and ponder some answers.

Rarely (but it happens), the best thing

Beginners — When writer-director Mike Mills isn’t flashing oodles of perky technique and “stylish” doodads (drawings, meet-cutes, old news clips, vintage music), his talented cast inserts human value and charm into this tale of a nice, lonely guy (Ewan McGregor) who lost his suddenly gay, then dead dad (Christopher Plummer) and finds love with a free-minded beauty (Mélanie Laurent). Facile but enjoyable, glib but not grating, the movie includes Plummer’s Jack Russell terrier Arthur, perhaps the friskiest movie pooch since Bogart’s Pard in High Sierra, or at least Richard Dreyfuss’s Matisse in Down and Out in Beverly Hills. 2011. — D.E.

Bridesmaids — A raunchy comedy with integrity from star and cowriter Kristen Wiig. The movie is unquestionably from a female perspective, a quality that is pervasive but never exclusive. Wiig plays Annie, a heart-ravaged, recession-broken middle-aged struggling to maintain an emotional parallel with her best friend whose life is on the up-and-up. The chief area of contention is the latter’s upcoming nuptial, for which Annie is the maid of honor. Wiig achieves a splendid vulnerability. Some moments miss the mark, but overall the movie maintains a genuine spirit. 2011. — J.R.

The Double Hour — Russian actress Kseniya Rappoport has a lovely, vulnerable intensity as Sonia, a chambermaid in Turin, Italy, who falls for a sensitive ex-cop (Filippo Timi, who was Mussolini in Vincere). Her soulfulness can’t save a moody jam-up of various genres utilizing robbery, two suicides, two loves, a dating club, brain injury, dreams, a creep, a coma, hot sex, ghostly visions, and a live burial. Good acting and Italian sensuality are buried in this deck of wild cards, the feature debut of video-rooted director Giuseppe Capotondi. 2011. — D.E.

★ (HILLCREST)

Fast Five — Ocean’s 11-style caper pic with more mayhem and darker skin. (Paul Walker’s whiteness here gleams like marble; his performance is similarly statuesque.) You get plenty of pretty machines and pretty ladies to go with your muscles, explosions, and bro-banter, but for a film stuffed with two of the hardest hardbodies in showbiz, it’s awfully soft in the middle. Notable: Dwayne Johnson’s surface bluster as a by-the-numbers federal agent makes Vin Diesel’s pudding-faced, lovable lug seem soulful by comparison. 2011. — M.L.

The Hangover Part II — Director Todd Phillips remakes his hit comedy The Hangover — a story about bachelor-party boys who wake up with an absent friend and no memory of the night before — only this time it’s bigger, louder, dumber, and completely joyless. (Original touch: a cute little monkey who smokes, deals drugs, and performs fellatio.) As part of the generally upped ante, the search for the missing buddy starts off with a severed finger. But the real problem is a missing heart. 2011. — M.L.

I Am — Tom Shadyac, director of such comedy hits as Ace Ventura: Pet Detective and Liar, Liar, did not find laughter the best medicine after a bad accident sank him into depression, and his lavish lifestyle was no consolation. He turned to wiser souls and made this benign tract using clips and interviews (the famous include Desmond Tutu, Noam Chomsky, Howard Zinn). It’s against material consumerism, aggressive competition, and dumb conformity. It’s for nature, holistic synergy, and universal cooperation. It is hopeful about New Age science (“particle entanglement,” etc.) and vague about cultural and political obstacles. The likeable Shadyac, having simplified his life, seems happy. 2011. — D.E.

Judy Moody and the Not Bummer Summer — Bright colors, ‘toony graphics, abundant closeups — mostly of adorable redhead Judy (Jordana Beatty, soon to be filmed as fabled Eloise of the Plaza Hotel).

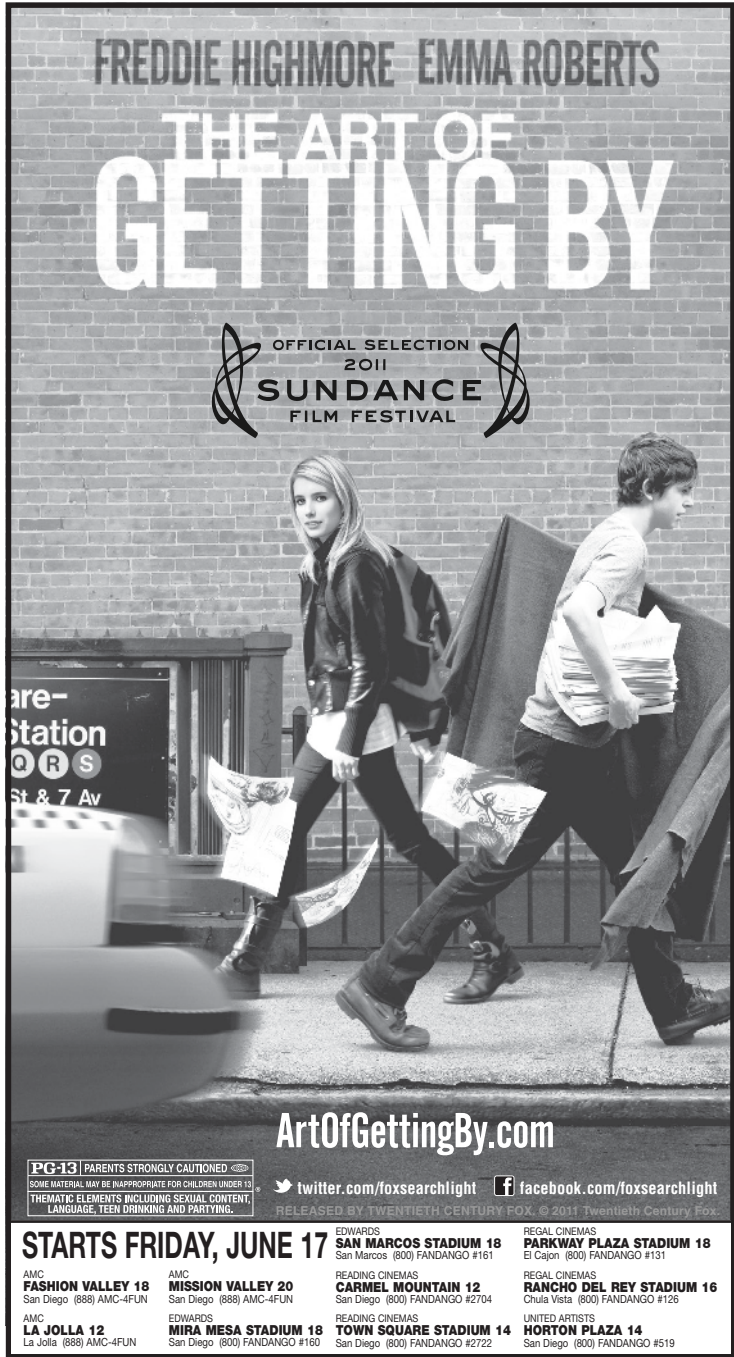

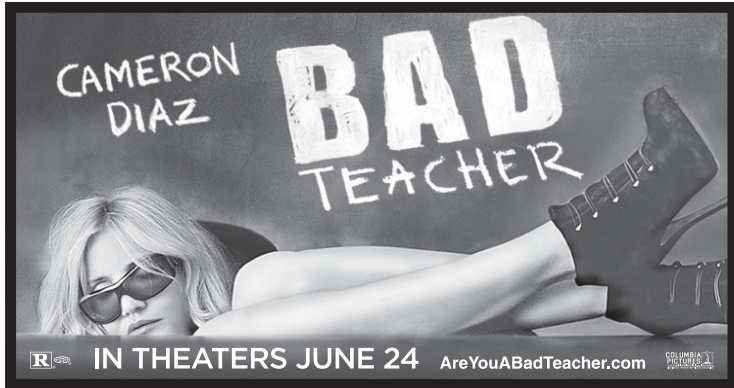

She is like a typhoon sugar high, her kid brother is named Stink, and Aunt Opal (Heather Graham) is also juvenile. The ancestral muse is Pee-wee Herman, the source is Megan McDonald’s novels, the high point may be a gaudy barf-up on a roller coaster. Okay fun for its demographic. 2011. — D.E.

SQUARE 14)

The Last Godfather — Hyung-rae Shim’s gangster comedy about a young Chinese man on the rise in a Mafia mob. Stars Shim, Harvey Keitel, Jon Polito, Michael Rispoli, and Jason Mewes. (GASLAMP 15; FROM 6/17)

The Lincoln Lawyer — As a smart, dressy, but not upscale lawyer whose main office seems to be his Lincoln (a very L.A. touch), Matthew McConaughey has a career high. He defends a pretty-boy heir (Ryan Phillippe, having his own peak) who is into sordid kinks with prostitutes. That torques into an old murder case. Brad Furman directed for speed and hard grit, and John Romano scripted from a novel by Michael Connelly, a savvy disciple of Raymond Chandler. This neo-noir has humor, good lines, and punchy moments of impact, and McConaughey is the engine that drives it. With Marisa Tomei, Josh Lucas, Frances Fisher, John Leguizamo, William H. Macy. 2011. — D.E.

★★★ (GASLAMP 15)

Midnight in Paris — One of Woody Allen’s mostly smoothly enjoyable entertainments. Like Stanley Donen’s Funny Face and Richard Linklater’s Before Sunset, it is a devotional candle of the American love of La Belle Paris. The blond wick who lights up for joy is Owen Wilson as Gil, a “Hollywood hack,” aspiring novelist, and mostly a thrilled tourist. Stuck with a pretty but philistine wife (Rachel McAdams), he magically escapes into his preferred Paris, that of the 1920s. There are fond, funny riffs on Hemingway, Picasso, Matisse, Gertrude Stein, Dalí, Buñuel, Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald. The charming, sneak-up romance of Gil with a French beauty (Marion Cotillard) adds luster to Darius Khondji’s delicious imagery. Not stuffy, the movie name-drops with a blithe bounce. 2011. — D.E.

★★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN 14; FLOWER HILL 4; GROSSMONT CENTER 10; HILLCREST; LA JOLLA VILLAGE; MIRA MESA 18; POWAY 10; SAN MARCOS 18; TOWN SQUARE 14; VISTA VILLAGE)

Mr. Popper’s Penguins — Popper is a businessman who inherits penguins. His life turns Arctic and antic, in a very Jim

Carrey way. Mark Waters directs, with Carla Gugino, Angela Lansbury, Philip Baker Hall, Ophelia Lovibon, Madeline Carroll. (CARMEL MOUNTAIN 14; CHULA VISTA 10; ESCONDIDO 16; FASHION VALLEY 18; FLOWER HILL 4; GROSSMONT CENTER 10; HORTON PLAZA 14; LA JOLLA 12; MIRA MESA 18; MISSION VALLEY 20; MISSION VALLEY HAZARD CENTER 7; OCEANSIDE 16; OCEANSIDE MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; OTAY RANCH 12; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; PLAZA BONITA 14; POWAY 10; RANCHO DEL REY 16; RANCHO SAN DIEGO 15; RIVER VILLAGE 6; SAN MARCOS 18; TOWN SQUARE 14; VISTA VILLAGE; FROM 6/17)

Nuremberg — The full title is Nuremberg: Its Lesson for Today (the Schulberg/Waletzky Restoration). The official film of the postwar Nuremberg war-crimes trial, which was released in Germany but not in America, is a captivating testament starring one of the supreme rogues’ galleries. Suave Albert Speer, odious Hans Frank, morosely bored Hermann Goering (who cheated the rope with a cyanide pill), and other Nazi masters of hell face the despicable truths of their rise, reign, and fall. Quite beyond the stern eloquence of prosecutor Robert H. Jackson, the film (narrated by Liev Schreiber) is a staggering witness to infamy, though the Jewish Holocaust is short-served. 2011. — D.E.

★★★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

Pirates of the Caribbean: On Stranger Tides — The third sequel has more story focus, although the silly, stretched plot is about finding the Fountain of Youth. Johnny Depp, as rigged-up as any sailing vessel, does his wry, sporty, mincing schtick as Jack Sparrow. With grungy villain support from Ian McShane and Geoffrey Rush, sexy but decorative work from Penélope Cruz, and a dense, clotted atmosphere that hides the seam lines of the special effects. The most special is the hissing upsurge of mermaids, including the wows Gemma Ward and Astrid Berges-Frisbey. This money machine is energetic, yet it seems stuck, like the series, in the carbonated Fountain of the Juvenile. 2011. — D.E.

★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN 14; CHULA VISTA 10; FASHION VALLEY 18; HORTON PLAZA 14; LA JOLLA 12; MISSION VALLEY 20; OCEANSIDE MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; OTAY RANCH 12; PALM PROMENADE 24; PLAZA BONITA 14; POWAY 10; TOWN SQUARE 14)

The Art of Getting By — Shy George and Adorable Sally diddle through “just friends” gambits

Something Borrowed — Rachel (Ginifer Goodwin, like a pocket-issue Marlo Thomas) is the best friend of Darcy (Kate Hudson, still a junior issue of her mother, Goldie Hawn), who plans to marry Dex (Colin Egglesfield, a streamlined issue of Tom Cruise). Loads of old history curl into new plot twists as the women angle for the hunk (the men are like wild game ready for taming). It’s the kind of chick flick where gal-pals improvise a synchronized hip-hop dance, then fall into confessional intimacy. The cast, including funny horndog Steve Howey, is better than the material, served as TV candy in glossy New York by director Luke Greenfield. 2011. — D.E.

★ (FASHION VALLEY 18)

Super 8 — Director J.J. Abrams’s spot-on remake of Steven Spielberg’s 1980s ode to the feeling of childhood, E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial. It’s all there: the broken home, the mysterious Visitor (more frightening this time, but as in Abrams’s Cloverfield, still somewhat beside the point), the looming shadow of grown-up authority. What is new is the emphasis on moviemaking as a way of engaging with that youthful feeling, and with the world in general. As our junior filmmaker attests, “It’s on TV, so it’s real.” 2011. — M.L.

★★★ (CARMEL MOUNTAIN 14; CHULA VISTA 10; ESCONDIDO 16; FASHION VALLEY 18; GASLAMP 15; GROSSMONT CENTER 10; LA JOLLA 12; MIRA MESA 18; MISSION VALLEY 20; MISSION VALLEY HAZARD CENTER 7; OCEANSIDE 16; OCEANSIDE MISSION MARKETPLACE 13; OTAY RANCH 12; PALM PROMENADE 24; PARKWAY PLAZA 18; PLAZA BONITA 14; POWAY 10; RANCHO DEL REY 16; RANCHO SAN DIEGO 15; RIVER VILLAGE 6; SAN MARCOS 18; SANTEE DRIVE IN; TOWN SQUARE 14; VISTA VILLAGE)

13 Assassins — Think The Seven Samurai with a revisionist twist. Yes, there’s a villain with murderous henchmen terrorizing the countryside. Yes, a master samurai must gather a team to confront the bad guys. But this time, the villain is royalty, the kind of guy the samurai usually live to serve. And this time, the commoner who comes to the samurais’ aid has no aspirations to their supposedly noble calling. (The confrontation, when it comes, is bloody and muddy and very, very long.) 2011. — M.L.

★★ (GASLAMP 15)

Thor — Director Kenneth Branagh almost manages a comic-book marriage of heaven and earth. Heaven, or rather Asgard, is full of mystical sci-fi, portentous speech, and world-shattering drama. Earth, meanwhile, provides comic relief and a forum for personal matters: character building, falling in love, etc. Both the visuals and the acting have enough spark to keep things lively until The Big Finish. Then, sadly, everything splinters into ruin — like crystal struck by the hammer of Thor. With Chris Hemsworth, Natalie Portman, Anthony Hopkins. 2011. — M.L.

★★ (MISSION VALLEY 20)

The Tree of Life — In only his fifth film in 38 years, eye-of-God director Terrence Malick wraps the pains of a family in ’50s Texas (partly based on his youth) in a bloated burrito of suffocating pomposity.

The “wow” nature visuals, cosmic perspective, and solemn, whispery spirituality destroy any chance for real, poetic profundity. Brad Pitt is an opaque, tough-love dad pious about his rules, Jessica Chastain is a shimmering vessel of the inexpressively maternal, and Sean Penn is barely used. The fine kid-actor Hunter McCracken simmers in sullen agony as the traumatized son. Some vivid, haunting images of childhood may seem to rise from your own private depths, but mainly this gasbag fishes up clichés planted into our soft heads by too many life-enshrining commercials. 2011. — D.E.

★ (HILLCREST; LA JOLLA VILLAGE)

The Trip — Steve Coogan and chum Rob Brydon, sort of playing themselves, drive around North England, sample gourmet restaurants, comically recite poetry, needle one another, and offer competing impressions (Coogan’s Michael Caine is slightly better, but Brydon is ace with Anthony Hopkins). Coogan is rather draggy, fretting about his career and serially betraying his absent American girlfriend. Michael Winterbottom directed this slimmed version of the duo’s six-part British TV show, and despite quite a few laughs it finally seems like the last, tired lark of aging cut-ups. 2011. — D.E.

★★ (LA JOLLA VILLAGE; FROM 6/17)

Twelve Thirty — A young man loses his virginity to the woman of his dreams, only to turn around and deflower her younger sister...before finally being shown a good time by their divorced mother. The only thing separating writer-director Jeff Lipsky’s low-budget, tripod-free, string-of-dialogue scenes from mumblecore is a non-improvised, overly elaborate script. In spite of its obvious shortcomings, the melodramatic downward-thrust and unexpected moments of frank desperation these characters are forced to endure eventually won me over. With Jonathan Groff, Mammie Gummer, Portia Reiners, and Karen Young. 2011. — S.M.

★★★ (GASLAMP 15; FROM 6/17)

Water for Elephants — Hal Holbrook doesn’t quite steal the show as the old-man-remembering version of pretty Robert Pattinson in this love story set in the days when a traveling circus was still enough to inspire wonder. No, the real thief is Christoph Waltz, who gives a monster performance as the circus owner, ringleader, and controlling husband of pretty Reese Witherspoon (doing her best Jean Harlow). One might even go so far as to call Waltz the real star here, except folks don’t go in for tragedy these days. 2011. — M.L.

★★ (GASLAMP 15)

X-Men: First Class — An ambitious superhero movie, one willing to invoke the Holocaust in its treatment of a feared and persecuted minority. This time it’s mutants instead of Jews, except for one mutant who is also a Jew, and who is looking to avenge his mother’s death at the hands of the Nazis, one of whom is also a mutant. Sadly, the proceedings get bogged down by the parallel story of teenage mutants struggling with their “gifts” and by sloppy execution all ’round. Not sloppy: the prequel’s fanboy devotion to setting up what we all know comes later. 2011. — M.L.

SLOW WAVE

by Kyle Kovalchek and Jesse Reklaw

I HAD DIED AND GONE TO HEAVEN, WHICH WAS A GIANT COMPLEX OF ALL THE CENTURIES OF LIFE ON EARTH.

YOU HAD TO TRAVEL THROUGH EACH CENTURY AND PICK ONE TO SETTLE DOWN IN. AROUND THE MIDDLE AGES A GIRL I DON'T KNOW SAID SHE COMMITTED SUICIDE TO BE WITH ME IN HEAVEN.

WHEN DID WE DATE?

I TOLD HER I DIDN'T LOVE HER AND SHE CHASED ME ALL THE WAY TO THE 21ST CENTURY, WHERE I TOOK REFUGE IN A CINEPLEX.

SHH!

GEORGE LUCAS RAN THE THEATER AND HE KICKED HER OUT. I TOLD HIM I LOVED THE PHANTOM MENACE, EVEN THOUGH I DIDN'T MEAN IT.

BASIC INSTRUCTIONS

How to Work Product Placement Shamelessly into Your Narrative

by Scott MEYER

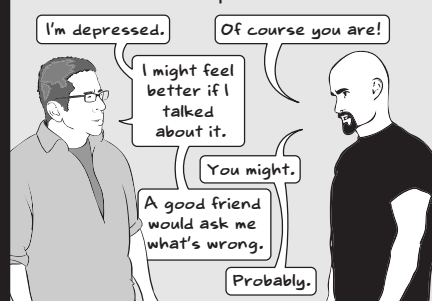

Product placement is common, especially in reality shows, because the reality is that TV producers need to make a profit.

Describe the product in glowing terms, giving the impression that it is the easiest solution to this, or any problem.

The key to seamless product placement is to set up a realistic situation, where there's a believable problem to solve.

Wrap up the placement with a lingering image of the product doing its job.

There's a New PROOPLES Property Manager in Town!

- Most aggressive use of technology, branding & social networking by a brokerage firm in San Diego
- Customized property marketing and advertising campaign
- High-res photos and Hi-Def professionally edited video showcased on proprietary website

- Online homeowner account with news-feed, email alerts, calendars and access to leases and agreements
- Staging and furnishing services for new homes, temporary, or vacation renting

"Since Prooples has taken over management my units have been rented year-round and revenues have increased by almost 10 percent. Prooples takes care of all my needs - and my renters' needs - quickly and thoroughly. I count on them to do everything: caulking the bath tub, calling in reasonably priced handymen; leaving the right welcome gifts and handling all my books. Prooples' prices are more than reasonable and I can't imagine why anyone would sign up with any other company."

- Ronnie Friedman-Barone, San Diego, CA

RULES OF THE GAME

1) Submit your completed puzzle to the Reader each week for our ongoing contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online each week to sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by 7:00 a.m. Monday.
2) Submit the correct answers to one of the puzzles along with your name and a brief message(20 words or less, no URLs or phone numbers). Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.
3) The puzzle-contest ranking, shown online and in the paper, will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year!
4) Entries must be faxed to 619-231-0489 or 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803, or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy, or scanned and e-mailed to: puzzles@sdreader.com. Submissions by e-mail must be attached in JPG format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

And now for the really small print:
1) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided.
2) Late entries will not be considered.
3) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.
4) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.

NEW RULES

Starting with the issue of May 12, we will award writers of the five (5) best messages among those who correctly solve the puzzle one of the famous Reader baseball caps. And we will print the winning messages in the paper. Puzzle winners with rankings will still be posted online at SDReader.com

A Night on the Boulevard

Sitting at one of the booths in Cali Baguette Express with a group of artists, travelers, and people who enrich their lives through the subtle beauty of life and the community surrounding them, I found myself living purely in the moment — laughing wholeheartedly (which reminds me, I need to form a laughing club!) and learning about the Asian culture with which I have been so unacquainted. Then couldn't have been more hospitable and welcoming. He offers free samples of tasty treats in the shop, our treat of choice being the ever-so-salty and stringy cuttlefish, a mollusk popular in East Asia with the chewy texture and spicy aftertaste that leaves you wanting more. We tried a “popping boba”; fruit juice — mango, in this case — exploded into our mouths with each bite. I also enjoyed hearing stories about my two new friends' travels through Vietnam, Laos, Thailand, and Korea.

A puzzler and a writer?

RULES OF THE GAME

- 1) Submit one completed puzzle of any difficulty level (Easy, Medium, Hard or Evil) to the Reader each week for our ongoing contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online at sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by 7:00 a.m. Monday.
- 2) Submit the correct answers to one of the puzzles along with your name and a brief message (20 words or less, no URLs or phone numbers). Clearly mark the puzzle that you want to enter this week by crossing off the other completed puzzles. All puzzles that are cut into pieces will be disqualified. Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.

3) The puzzle-contest ranking, shown online and in the paper, will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year!

4) Entries must be faxed to 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803, or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy, or scanned and e-mailed to: Sudoku@sdreader.com. Submissions by e-mail must be attached in JPG format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

- 5) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided.
- 6) Late entries will not be considered.
- 7) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.
- 8) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.

NEW RULES

Starting with the issue of May 12, we will award writers of the five (5) best messages among those who correctly solve the puzzle one of the famous Reader baseball caps. And we will print the winning messages in the paper. Puzzle winners with rankings will still be posted online at SDReader.com

SOLUTION TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE:

More Figures of speech

Hebrew, like Arabic, is written from right to left. The message, from Genesis 11:9, read:

Therefore is the
Babel
because the Lord did there confound
the language of all the earth
and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon the face
of all the earth

RULES OF THE GAME

1) Submit one completed puzzle to the Reader each week for entry into another contest! We keep track of each puzzle you successfully complete and the results are posted online at sandiegoreader.com. But your submission will only be counted when you successfully complete a puzzle AND get it to us by 7:00 a.m. Monday.

2) Submit the correct answers to one of the puzzles along with your name and a brief message (20 words or less, no URLs or phone numbers). Entries must include a message. This is a great way to express yourself. You may submit a new message weekly. We reserve the right to edit or reject inappropriate text.

3) The puzzle-contest ranking, shown online and in the paper, will begin anew every three months. Complete the journey four times a year!

4) Entries must be faxed to 619-233-7907 or mailed to Reader Puzzle, P.O. Box 85803, San Diego, CA 92186-5803 or delivered through our mail slot at 1703 India Street in Little Italy or scanned and e-mailed to: Puzzles@sdreader.com. Submissions by e-mail must be attached in JPG format, 800 by 800 pixels, maximum file size of 1MB. Submissions that don't fit the format will not be counted or viewed.

5) All answers must be legible and entered in the spaces provided.

6) Late entries will not be considered.

7) One entry per person per week or you will be disqualified.

8) Employees of the Reader and their immediate families are not eligible.

NEW RULES

Starting with the issue of May 12, we will award writers of the five (5) best messages among those who correctly solve the puzzle one of the famous Reader baseball caps. And we will print the winning messages in the paper. Puzzle winners with rankings will still be posted online at SDReader.com

THIS WEEK'S WINNERS:
