Diego Hash House Harriers' annual Red Dress Run, all wore red women's dresses, wigs, and running shoes. They became confused and lost their way early into the four-mile run through Mission Bay. Spectators say the accidental invasion was likely due to poor communication, a poorly marked trail, and pre-race alcohol consumption.

Marina Village management personnel did their best to disperse the crowd and route the group around the property, but they were relatively ineffective against the large group.

Observers say the lead pack became confused halfway across the Sunset Cliffs Boulevard Bridge, stopped, and turned back toward Quivira Basin. The bewildered mob then started up the road that runs adjacent to Sea World Drive, toward the Sports Arena Boulevard Bridge. After another hundred or so vards, the pack stopped, turned 180 degrees. and charged back over Quivira Road toward the Hyatt, yelling and screaming through the wedding in progress.

Another wave of foreclosures imminent?

ions on the local housing market: investment group Blue Sky Capital released a statement yesterday predicting another wave of foreclosures will soon hit San Diego County, this one even worse than the first round of massive

"Option ARM," or adjustable rate mortgage. These loans allowed consumers to make payments based on a "teaser" interest rate, often as low as 1 percent. Although the rate adjusted upward several points as soon as one month after the loan was funded, borrowers were allowed to keep making the lower payments, with the unpaid interest being added to the principal balance each month.

Blue Sky has singled out one neighborhood in particular likely to feel the wrath as these loans come due.

"While these Option Arm and Alt-A loans exist throughout the county, areas like Carmel Valley are filled with them. During our tracking of distressed properties in the county we found many homes in areas like Carmel Valley were purchased with zero, or a small amount down, so there is very little equity in these properties," says CEO Chris Williams.

"While higher-end families have been able to withstand the initial housing meltdown, things are about to change."

One Bullet Kills Two

Family loyalties divided after shooting

Escondido — Testimony today suggested that two sisters who "ear-witnessed" a shooting last April now have a strained relationship, because one sister continues her romantic connection with a man charged as "accessory after the fact" in the killing of a third sister.

Ruben Anthony Cepeda, 21, was in court today, accused of murder in the death of Viri Rodriguez, 18. The prosecutor alleges that Cepeda put a gun to the belly of his pregnant girlfriend and killed both her and her four-month-old fetus with a single 9mm shot, in an Escondido apartment.

Older sister Diana Rodriguez, 27, testified

Public defender Michael Washington, Ruben Anthony Cepeda

today that she dated the alleged "accessory," Jesse Juan Lopez, 22, for more than a year, and, "Yes, he's still my boyfriend."

Jesse Lopez allegedly helped the shooter to flee, driving him to the U.S.-Mexico border immediately after the shooting on April 7, 2012.

The other sister who was at the apartment, named Yemely, testified at a prior hearing for Jesse Lopez. Both sisters have said

National Football League's Dirty Secret

By Don Bauder

picture a couple cozily cohabiting for more than 90 years but publicly pretending they aren't conjoined. That's the National Football League and the gambling industry (both legal and illegal).

This faux separation is in the news again. Today, Nevada is the only state in which sports gambling is legal, regulated, policed, and taxed, but it only accounts for about 1 percent of sports wagering, according to the American Gaming Association. New Jersey wants sports gambling permitted at its racetracks and in Atlantic City; other revenuehungry states want in on the action, too.

The National Football League, which earlier beat back Delaware when it wanted to have Nevadalike privileges, might sue New Jersey. Well, sue with a wink. Commented one wag on the ProFootballTalk website, "NFL has its headquarters in New York, but 'dey keep de books in Joisey." In reality, Joisey's all-powerful mob will probably decide whether the state goes for legalized sports gambling. Dem kneecappers may prefer to keep it in their own hands, although if they surreptitiously control the Atlantic City casinos and state racetracks (quite possible), they might want sports gambling legalized. In either case, the league will quietly rejoice.

The National Football League's feigned indignation about gambling is a joke. A conservative estimate is that $80 billion to $100 billion is wagered on NFL games each year, only a fraction legally. People place their bets through bookies, office pools, fantasy football, and the like. This gambling clearly boosts attendance and TV revenue, the mother's milk of the sport. When you have money in a game, your interest is intensified. (Would you even bother to watch a horse race if you had no cash on a nag?)

The National Football League's actions belie its supposed contempt for gambling. For example, the league requires teams to state before games what players may have to sit out because of injury and what players are questionable. That information only benefits gamblers. And does the league complain that newspapers run the point spreads on the games? Of course not.

The long-running but secret alliance of pro football and gambling has been chronicled thoroughly in the book Interference: How purportedly breaking up so that the racetracks and casinos won't be mixed with the football team.

In the sport's first halfcentury, one team after another was owned by high rollers, often with sordid connections. The Cleveland Browns were owned by crime syndicate bookmaker Arthur (Mickey) McBride, head of the Continental Racing Wire, the mob's gambling news service. The U.S. Senate's Kefauver Committee called that news service "Public Enemy Number paint. Everybody brought whatever they had. That's how it was. We didn't plan. We just started painting."

He and I are standing amid blue scaffolding beside the wall of an I-5 ramp to the San Diego–Coronado Bridge on the last day of the repaint of this Chicano Park mural. This panel is where it all began, back in 1973, when Nuñez and other young Chicano artists started creating the first of 72 murals that have been painted on ramps and pillars under the bridge. Today they make up the largest collection of outdoor murals in the United

And after nearly 40 years, five of the original artists have come back to repaint this mural.

"We were just a bunch of young artists, angry young men looking to establish our own identity," Nuñez says.

That outburst of revolution-by-art didn't happen in isolation. Barrio Logan had been mauled, first when the City relaxed zoning rules and allowed junkyards and metal shops to move in next to houses, and then when the state destroyed over 5000 barrio homes and businesses to make way for Interstate 5.

The final straw came on April 22, 1970. That day, a City College student named Mario Solis noticed bulldozers parked right next to the area the City had promised to turn into Barrio Logan's first park. Instead, a California Highway Patrol station and parking lot were about to occupy the spot.

Solis ran through the barrio telling his neighbors. Soon they were forming human chains around the bulldozers. He told his professor of Chicano Studies, Gil Robledo. Robledo printed flyers. The word spread. Some started creating a park themselves. They planted cactus, flowers, trees.

But the pivotal moment came the next day, when Salvador Torres, an artist, said, "Hey, why don't we cover the pillars supporting the freeway and bridge with beautiful paintings representing who we are?"

Torres is now called "the architect of the dream."

But, then, three years passed. "I was 22," says Nuñez. "Not much had happened. We needed to fight back more, start something meaningful. Somebody said, 'It's the third anniversary. Let's just go and start painting."

Guillermo Aranda, the guy in his 60s repainting a ten-foot pyramid next to the skeletons, says he was instrumental in making this happen. Maybe 200 to 300

UNDER THE RADAR

Filner's solid waste Chase Victory in the race for San Diego mayor, most inside observers predict, will come down to which candidate can raise the most money and deploy his cash most effectively. So far, GOP candidate while Democratic congressman Bob Filner demonstrates an uncanny ability to accomplish the latter. But Filner is also attempting to encroach on DeMaio's fundraising territory by courting some distinctly Republican-flavored donors. Take, for example, Nancy Chase, San Diego's long-lasting political doyenne, who rose from a small job running the nascent Gaslamp Quarter Association way back in the 1970s to become Roger Hedgecock's mayoral intimate and eventually the solid-waste queen, spokeswoman for the controversial Gregory Canyon Landfill, developed by her husband, the late Richard Chase.

According to city campaign filings, on May 24, Chase gave Filner $500, the maximum individual contribution permitted by law. These days Chase runs a PR and lobbying outfit by the name of Public Policy Partners, which boasts on its website that it is "a pro-business, bi-partisan firm with strong ties in the southern California region that brings together subjectmatter experts best suited to meet each client's public affairs and governmental relations." Records show that the firm, which once lobbied at San Diego city hall for Gregory Canyon and Massachusetts alternative-energy company Competitive Power Ventures, is not currently active with the City. But Chase's website showcases a long roster of well-heeled clients, including tant, enabling the election of valued Congress members, State Assembly and State Senate members, San Diego District Attorneys, Mayors and council members." Whether Chase can enable the election of Filner remains to be seen; her contribution to the Democrat has already raised eyebrows in light of her previous affiliation with ex-Hedgecock aide Tom Shepard, the GOP political operative who managed the failed mayoral bid of self-proclaimed independent assemblyman Nathan Fletcher. And Nancy was not the only Chase to kick in. Peter Chase of Boulder, Colorado, also listed as working for Public Policy Partners, gave $500 to the Filner cause.

Correct Your Hubby

Barbarella does a good job. However, the tone of the foie gras article (Diary of a Diva, June 28: "What the Foie?") with what her hubby, David, states about the forced feeding of the ducks is not the issue — right or wrong. It's the forcing of the internal organ of the animal to abnormal size and to a diseased condition. Babs should have called the APRL (Animal Protection & Rescue League) for their version. Then — and I know it's a stretch — she could correct her David, in print, and educate the public as well!

Barb Didn't Bother

This is regarding Barbarella's article, "What the Foie?" (Diary of a Diva, June 28). I'd like to state that Barbarella has proven that she is truly not an investigative reporter, as she did not bother to investigate the other side of the story about foie gras the cruelty to a single species.

Although I hesitate to give too much importance to Elizabeth Salaam's story (June 21 cover story: "No One Cares About Being Cool"), I take exception to being misquoted, taken out of context, and seeing information given "off the record" used in her story.

Re "Kopeikin shakes his head and says something about the 'huge difference between art and decoration." Ms. Salaam has gone out of her way to make my statement seem like an insult, which as she knows was never my intention.

Re "which Kopeikin has already dubbed 'art-fair art." The collection as I recall was very personal and not at all "art fair art" so I do not know where this quote came from, but it didn't come from me in regard to the collection we were visiting.

Re "...at which point Kopeikin rolls his eyes, causing both you and Victoria to choke on stifled laughter." Ms. Salaam's point here seems to be to make Victoria and I sound as if we were laughing at out hosts? Nothing can be further from the truth.

Re "Later, by email, Kopeikin will inform you that none of the portfolios sold, "though I would have been surprised [if they had], given the crowd." My point to Ms. Salaam was that these events are not intended for sales, which happen later, but rather as showcases.

Were Ms. Salaam a real journalist I would have received a call from her and been given the opportunity to correct her 100% record

Instead she decided to write what she wanted to write to fit her predetermined judgement of what the evening was about.

Surely the San Diego Reader can find more competent people to write for them.

h, no, she didn't," I said to my screen. "What? Who?" David was seated in a chair five feet behind me. I stepped to the right of my standing desk so he could see my computer. He squinted his eyes and then widened them to indicate he was waiting for me to elaborate.

"Remember that chick we met at Charley and Rebecca's wedding in the summer of 2009?" David shook his head. "Lia? She wore the white dress, but wasn't the bride?" I watched the light come into his eyes. The bride, Rebecca, had chosen a lavender gown, and had invited guests to wear white. The only woman to take her up on the offer had shared a table with us at the reception.

"Yeah, well..." I was about to launch into a Twitter tirade, but then I remembered David doesn't speak Twitter, so I took a breath, turned to face him, and explained: "Someone I don't know tweeted that she's looking for a place to crash in San Diego during Comic-Con with a 'non-murderer-slash-rapist type.' I only know this because I was atted — which means I was mentioned with an at-symbol so it shows up in my feed — along with three other people in Lia's tweet back, which says..." I turned to read from my screen. "I have a shit ton of friends down there."

"I haven't seen her since 2009 — you don't just offer up someone else's place. That's so presumptuous. It's beyond ballsy. It's straight-up rude."

David still looked confused, so I broke it down another way: "Some random asked for a place to stay in town and Lia offered us up as an option. She replied to this girl's request for a crash-pad by recommending me as her friend, along with Charley and two other people I don't know. Get it?"

The Nerve

Realization washed over David's face and was immediately eclipsed by a scowl. "Uncool," he said. "You should tweet back, tell her you're not running a hotel."

"Who does that? Even if we were friends, which we are not — I haven't seen her since 2009 — you don't just offer up someone else's place. That's so presumptuous. It's beyond ballsy. It's straight-up rude." I stared at my screen. "Yeah, you're right. I have to squash this

I was sure to copy the others, including the wouldbe couch-surfer, when I tweeted, "Uncool. We've only met twice and I'm not running a hotel."

Lia had been cool enough at the wedding, but my second, and last, encounter with the tweet-offender proved her to be irritatingly audacious. It was December 2009, and I'd scored four free tickets to Disneyland. Because I hadn't been to the park in 15 years, I wanted to go with Disney freaks who could show me around. I offered two of the tickets to the newlyweds, Charley and Rebecca, and told them they could extend the extra ticket to Lia, whom I knew shared the couple's love for all things

The drama began a week before our excursion. I hadn't realized Lia lived in Northern California when I extended the invitation. Suddenly there were all these logistical complications. Lia had to juggle her work schedule, Lia needed a ride, Lia needed a place to stay, Lia wanted to go later in the day, Lia wanted to meet up with another group of friends at a particular place in the park at a particular time. Lia was the nail to my tire, her participation serving only to deplete and hinder.

Uninterested in sorting her needs, I left Lia's ticket at will-call. I was not disappointed when she arrived at the park only to hook up with her other friends. And now, a quarter of a decade later, Lia was publicly claiming me as her friend, and as someone to hit up for a place to stay.

I'm not sure what I was expecting after my terse tweet. An apology, perhaps, some admission of overstepping that I would pardon and then we'd all winky-face emoticon and go back to our regularly scheduled tweeting. I checked my @s. What I saw made me fume audibly, the hot steam coming out in a huff of appalled breath that caught David's attention. "What now?"

"The chick looking for a place to stay is okay, though she made sure to namedrop in case I didn't realize how 'important' she is — she wrote, 'Don't worry about it. My Marvel coworkers can probably hook me up.' But Lia — wow. Get this: 'It's very acceptable to connect friends with other friends,' she says, but here's the clincher: 'Am I to assume that you would not be kind or giving?"

"Are we supposed to assume that she's selfish and presumptuous?" David quipped. We shook our heads at each other.

"Holy Manipulation Tactics, Robin," I said. "Seriously? Connecting friends with other friends? Bitch, I just tweeted that we've only met twice. Any real friend of mine would have had the courtesy to feel me out first before offering my shit up to some random. So you presume to claim me as a friend first, as a possible free room second, and then have the audacity to contend that if I say that's uncool it's because I'm not a kind person? Are you fucking kidding

David sighed and returned his eyes to his laptop. I remained standing and seethed at my screen. This attempted guilt-trip and shaming strategy had hit a nerve. I'm no stranger to the art of manipulation — it was my mother's contrivance of choice for keeping four spastic girls in line while my father was on naval deployment.

For a time in my early 20s, certain people took advantage of my excessive empathy and desperate need to please. But my susceptibility for being guilted into some sense of obligation to satisfy other people ended the day I learned how to politely kick out a friend-turnedsquatter without losing sleep over whether or not the person I'd just embarrassed and disappointed would still like me. And that had been an actual friend.

STRAIGHT FROM THE HIP BY MATTHEW ALICE

BLACK

Hello Matt:

I've always wondered where the term "black-mail" came from. Is it the opposite of white mail, since most envelopes are white? Why would blackmailers use black paper to write their ransom notes or whatever? If their ransom notes or whatever? If you get something black in the mail, I'd think you wouldn't open it because you know it's something bad.

— Anonymous, via email

Yeah, though you might miss a few invitations to Halloween parties, I s'pose. "Blackmail" is a trickety trickster, though. The word sends leximaniacs off in wrong directions right from the start. The word has nothing to do with the postal service or metal suits and only a bit to do with "black." So, back, back we go to the grim days of the 16th Century in the dampness that is Scotland. Tough guys owned land, most of us tilled it. For that privilege, we paid rent. In the vocabulary of the day, that rent was known as "mail," a contract. Has its roots in some weird Norwegian word that nobody cares about anymore. So there we are paying our mail in the traditional way, with silver coins. Word histories say the system was nicknamed "white mail." I dunno...did white mail precede blackmail? Anyway, with all the time the clan chiefs had on their hands, they dreamed up another moneygrabbing system that we'd call protection. You don't pay this extra fee, we destroy your crops, grab the land, generally do lots of bad stuff to you and yours. This, it's said, immediately became known as black mail — black, as in the dark side of human nature. Unlike a lot of made-up terms, this one was useful enough to survive by word-of-mouth and in print, though its meaning morphed over the years.

Hevmatt:

What ever happened to the county fair's beauty pageant to pick the Fairest of the Fair? She was an old standby for most of my life.

— Bob, telephonically

Hey, yeah, you're right. Haven't seen her around lately but never missed her until you asked. The Fairest (a.k.a. Miss San Diego County) was a big deal at the county fair every year since the 1930s. If she survived a bunch of later pageants, the winner had a chance to become Miss Universe or Miss Crab Nebula or something like that. Story goes that in 2003 and again in 2004, disputes broke out over the contest rules, and there was a big whoop-dedoo over who the winners really were. They resolved the arguments behind the scenes with a minimum of hair-pulling and no threats of sash strangulations. But some of the glitter was gone from the tiara.

At about the same time, the fair's name and administration changed, so I guess it was seen as a good time to hustle her majesty off the stage, too. It reportedly cost about $85,000 a year to host the shindig, anyway.

One of the Fairest's main jobs was to appear on TV and radio and at shopping malls as the official comely fair promoter. But in this world of spin control, who can afford to leave a major PR function in the hands of a high school senior with puffy hair? The fair's PR function has been reassigned, but they've never replaced the Fairest's cheese factor.

Hello Matt:

At first I wondered about "spitting image," and that reminded me of "nothing to sneeze at." Why do we say these?

— Bonnie and her dog

We shouldn't have sent the word nerds three questions in a single week. We had to post guards outside their windows to make sure they didn't try to escape when they heard us coming. They did spend about 15 minutes making paper airplanes out of Bonnie's inquiry and sailing them over the elves' heads but finally got down to it. Spitting image: Apparently there have been a bunch of spitbased expressions that mean "an exact likeness between two people." Comes from the idea that one person spit out the second image in his own likeness. The original expression was "spitten image," an image that had been spit out. Our forebears were not always clever thinkers.

At least with "nothing to sneeze at" we have a good plot and a cast of goofy characters the bygone upper crust. In 17th-century England, sneezing became quite the fad, probably helped along by the import of tobacco. With brandies around the fireplace, snooty dudes huffed and sneezed away the evening. Sneezing, they believed, cleared the head and stimulated the brain. With snuff we could sneeze at will and always stay at the top of our game. But, as usual, men turned the whole thing into a competition, and soon enough being sneezed at was a personal insult. "Achoo, sir, the point you're making is stupid." "M'lord, my words are nothing to sneeze at." I think when you submit too many questions to word nerds, this is the kind of junk you get back.

Koch Brothers Raise $400 Million at El Cajon Family Restaurant

Conservative Billionaires Stop by for Ham Steak and a Nice Chat at Tyler's Taste of Texas, Raise Record Sum from Everyday Hard-Working Americans Before the Check Comes

THE HAM STEAK REALLY IS SOME-THING SPECIAL, EL CAJON — Much was made of the Koch brothers' plans for a socalled secret fundraising meeting in San Diego this past weekend. The oil tycoons, based out of Kansas but with fingers in the pies of every swing-state government in the Union, were supposed to have been orchestrating a swanky get-together at an ultra-exclusive location known only to Carl DeMaio and other Republican fat cats. The sort of place still staffed by proper servants in white gloves who light your cigar with a flaming $100 bill while pouring 60-year-old Scotch over your foie gras ice cream.

"But as it turned out," says Charles Koch, "we didn't even have to rent the facility. We reached our fundraising goal before we ever reached our intended rendezvous point." It happened like this: "We had decided to drive into town in our matching Bugatti Veyrons do a little desert drag-racing, you know? But just as we were passing through this godforsaken hole on the eastern edge of the greater San Diego metropolitan area, my brother David called to say that he was hungry for ham steak, of all things. I asked Suzi — that's the special, artificial intelligence version of Apple's Siri that's available only to people with a net worth over $4 billion — to help out, and next thing you know, we were sitting there at Tyler's."

And the next thing the brothers knew after that, they were being deluged with contributions from grateful, red-blooded, God-fearing Americans who were sick and tired of seeing the country they loved so much flushed down the toilet by a liberal elite seeking to destroy the United States from within by eroding our cherished freedoms and hallowed institutions in order to further their personal, atheistic agendas. "People were writing us checks," says Charles. "They were handing us cash. They were calling their friends and relatives and getting them to contribute online. It was amazing."

The Kochs sat and talked with the filthy, haggard locals about their sagging hopes and shattered dreams for what seemed like an eternity (about 15 minutes) after finishing their ham steak with eggs and biscuits and gravy. Then they settled up, saddled up, and left in a cloud of exhaust and gravel dust, but not before laying down a $200 tip on a $50 bill. "Just doing our part to bolster the economy," said David with a grin as he walked out the door.

POST TITLE: Getting Over the Hump POST DATE: June 20, 2012

I was in a beautiful place in Guatemala when the illness hit. A foreign stomach bug had abruptly changed my plans. No daily excursions or tropical exploration for me. Nobody to talk to, either, because no one with a sense of smell would've wanted to be within a 20-foot radius of me. For two weeks I couldn't do much besides read and write (there was no TV; no internet).

That was about two years ago.

That's when I started writing this novel, To Be Frank Diego.

Despite my physical condition, writing the first draft was fun. Oddly, the title was the first thing that came to mind as I thought up a story about a guy who resembled me and walked through San Diego one day, venting about its history and culture and his ex-girlfriend. The problem was that the first draft was a self-indulgent rant — pure therapy. And it came across as bitter and frustrated. After the second re-read, I realized that it needed a lot of work if I wanted it to be accessible to the reader, and humorous rather than harsh. I read Anne Lamott's book Bird by Bird about the writing process. Her chapter "Shitty First Drafts" made me feel a little bit better. On Writing, by Stephen King, gave me some inspiration and guidance, too. I continued to write upon my return to teaching that fall semester in San Diego, but the time and attention I gave to Frank Diego soon diminished and almost disappeared.

If it weren't for my high school English students, I might have quit writing To Be Frank Diego altogether. But because the academic culture at High Tech High values critique and professionalism, I felt I couldn't be a complete hypocrite — encouraging my students to do peer critiques and multiple rewrites while I avoided my own writing project. So I continued to work on my novel, sometimes sharing my chapters with students, sometimes with trusted friends. As a teacher, I witnessed the value of good critique versus destructive criticism or (on the other end of the spectrum) vague compliments — so I sought real feedback. After sharing later drafts, I didn't want a pat on the back. I wanted critical details, patterns and new ideas to build on. But because writing wasn't quite as fun after a nine-hour > day of work, I reserved only my weekend days and vacation time to sit and write — or at least tried to.

> That year passed by in a flash. And though I continued to write, my output was nothing compared to that first twoweek burst while bedridden in Guatemala. I recognized that since I'd returned to San Diego, Frank Diego had inched forward at a sluggish pace. I could picture myself 10 or 20 years into the future: the English high school teacher with the mangy beard and elbowpatched corduroy jacket who occasionally referred to the unfinished Great American Novel collecting dust in the bottom drawer of his desk. I didn't want to be that guy. So, after a month of thinking about it, I quit teaching in order to finish my book.

Soon after I quit my job, I moved to Italy for four months. The only reason I could afford it was because I rented an attic in a friend's apartment for next to nothing and taught private English lessons to put food in my mouth. I lived in Padua, which is about 15 miles west of Venice. I had unlimited time to write there. I drank a lot of coffee and wine, made cheap pasta, and gained inspiration by exploring places like Venice and Bologna. Then, like that, I ran out of money and the dream I'd been living was over. But Frank Diego was finished — kind of.

Because the manuscript was so close to being done, it made it easier to write and revise when I returned to San Diego. There was finally light at the end of the tunnel. I had made it over the writing hump. Now, a dozen complete drafts later, I feel good about my novel. I also feel a lot better about where I'm at in life now — pursuing creative projects and passions after years of putting those things on hold.

The first draft came across as bitter and

The house had a two-level porch that looked out over a canyon. The backyard was full of trees and then a steep descent to the floor of the gorge below. I asked Kelly, the owner, if she ever got wildlife from the canyon. She answered in the affirmative.

Once, when her daughter was playing in the idyllic doll-house that's set up at the corner of the porch, a fox leapt up over the rail and scared the poor kid half to death. Kelly also suspects that something, probably a coyote, might have gotten to her old cat.

The party had been going for a little while by the time I got there, so I decided to pass students, classrooms, parents, and grades, but I don't really have much to offer on that, so I dragged a few people into a conversation about struggling to learn musical instruments.

We all agreed that we'd never be rock stars.

On my way back from a bathroom visit I heard chanting. It sounded like a man saying, "...tuna, tuna, tu-NA, tu-NA..." over and over. It was John, a big guy who looked like a surfer and confessed at one point that he tells grade-school kids he used to be on the Lakers with Magic Johnson. They believe him because they have no idea how much bigger Magic Johnson is than John. To them, all grown men are giants.

It turned out that the "tuna" mantra was part of a game. Here's how it went: one player thought of a song, and then another player picked a word — in this case, "tuna" — but it could be any word. The first player then had to sing the melody of the chosen song using only the appointed word, and everyone else tried to guess the tune based on the melody. Whoever guessed it first thought of a song, and the original singer picked a new word to sing. Play continued like that until everyone was over it or too drunk to care.

There was talk of a trip to Redwing to sing karaoke, perhaps inspired by the tuna game, but nobody seemed ready to step in and organize an exodus. One guy, a different John who has never claimed to know Magic Johnson, went in for a goodbye hug from one of his classmates and got a glass of red wine emptied onto his shirt in the

"Oh, my God, I'll email you tips to clean that off!" said the girl who dumped the wine when she saw that John wasn't all that angry.

"Just throw it away," I offered. "Casualty."

Everyone sort of flowed out the door together, dispersing into the night. ■

ning to snake, Charles Kaufman, owner of Bread & Cie, assists the staff in taking orders while entertaining hungry people by cavorting and telling jokes. At 62, he moves nimbly around his bakery. Kaufman looks distinguished, despite an REI outfit and Merrill Walkabouts. He swears he "never intended to be a bread-maker."

Kaufman grew up in New York City. When he was eight years old, his mom took him to see his first show, Ethel Merman in Gypsy. Upon viewing that "first set of boobies in the strip-dance scene, I knew exactly what field I would go into," Kaufman laughs.

Despite a stutter, he dreamed of being an actor; his hopes and ambitions were encouraged. "My dad was an independent lawyer who moonlighted in amateur theater," Kaufman says. "My mom was an unconventional narcissist with a passion for Broadway. It fit."

Kaufman grew up in midtown Manhattan. His address, a brownstone on 65th, between Park and Third avenues, screamed privilege. At five, he was sent to Trinity Academy, one of the best all-boys' schools on the Upper West Side. "At the time, I didn't think I was privileged. I didn't think it was a privilege to be away from my family from 8:00 a.m. until Kaufman tried to get his parents' attention when he was home. "My parents were very busy with work and philanthropy." He found his way by being funny. For a year, he carried a puppet around and talked in a puppet voice. "That fell flat after awhile, especially after my parents brought me to a shrink."

He began telling jokes. His mom took notice. "I lived for making her laugh, and I knew very young that if I could make her laugh, she'd be pleased with me. There was nothing quite like that feeling of approval and comfort." Also, if he told a joke and

In high school, he was class president. "I lost many nights' sleep before speeches, but I knew if I could just make them laugh, I could get through it."

He graduated from high school in 1967 and went on to college at the University of Connecticut. He was accepted into UCLA's graduate film school, graduating with honors in 1973. "My first real-world job out of film school was as an intern for NBC Studios in Burbank.

"I was given the clandestine task of driving to Bob Hope's house to pick up paper 'receipts' that contained the topics Hope wanted to cover in The Bob Hope Show." It was live television, and Hope left nothing to chance: the receipts had to be delivered in haste to Hope's writers. "He was very secretive and didn't want his topics getting out."

Every day, Kaufman would drive to Hope's house in Burbank, pick up the slips, then drop a slip off at each of the show's writers' homes. Some lived in the Valley, some across town in Culver City, near the airport. "The trip would take hours. I'd get lost all the time." Kaufman would wait for the writers to come up with material, then he'd drive it back to Bob.

"Sitting in traffic in my red 1968 Volvo, on the dusty, hot, polluted streets of Los Angeles was torture. In order to keep myself entertained, I'd peek at Mr. Hope's topics. If the receipts said he wanted jokes on 'inflation' or 'Nixon,' I'd come up with my own jokes and tell them to a makebelieve audience. Other drivers must've thought I was nuts."

He began writing his own gags and sneaking them into the pile with the paid writers' submissions. When Kaufman wrote, he didn't have a speech impediment. "I had great timing on paper."

Hope and the producer of the show figured out that additional scribbled jokes were coming in on the sly. After reading Kaufman's gags, they knew their intern had comedic talent. They offered to hire him as a writer, as long as he passed a typing test.

Kaufman didn't know how to type, but "I told them I did." Determined to begin his writing career, he spent three days hunkered over a Remington typewriter, teaching himself. "This was a job writing jokes for Bob Hope. I was going to walk barefoot over hot coals, if I had to."

He passed the test, got the job, and worked as a writer on The Bob Hope Show for four years. What he remembers most about that time is how Bob Hope wouldn't laugh when he thought something was funny. He'd read through the "gags," checking off the pieces he wanted to use by saying "That's funny, that's not funny, that's funny" as he went down each writer's list. "This guy was such a pro, he didn't have to laugh, he just knew."

To this day, Kaufman doesn't think Hope knew his name. "I tried to distinguish myself by wearing a jacket and tie every day, but it only made the other writers think I was a twerp." He wanted to make an impression, stand out somehow. Now, he laughs: he made such a big impression that, when the show went off the air, "Mr. Hope gave me a keychain with his picture on it."

After The Bob Hope Show ended in 1978, Kaufman moved back to New York. He could've stayed in Los Angeles and worked his way up the ladder in the studio system, until finally given permission to direct a film — or he could move back to New York, learn everything possible about the film business, and finance a film on his own.

He landed a temporary job in New York doing "sound" on a small independent film. "I knew that part of the reason I stuttered had to do with my hearing. And even though my hearing was technically not quite right, I had to take the job and make it work."

He also took a job assisting an agent who sold rights to American films all over the world. The agent brought Kaufman to the main venue at the time, Cannes Film Festival, where distributors screen films, then make offers to buy the rights for agent knew that when the lights in the theater went down, the buyers would be 'distracted.' This got more buyers into his screenings and many more offers to buy his films. I didn't want to have to employ the seedier part of selling, so I made friendships."

Kaufman took everything he'd learned in graduate school, working behind the scenes and selling films abroad, and put together an idea for his first film. He wanted to start with a low-budget "B" film. "They didn't require big actors or millions of dollars. They were certain territories.

Cannes Film Festival was where Kaufman learned the sales part of the industry. His gregarious personality and ability to be funny served him well. "I focused on getting to know the people who bought the films abroad." Kaufman raises his eyebrows. "I remember one screening, my boss hired 25 Parisian prostitutes to sit in every other seat in the theater during the showing. This way, the typically genre exploitation films with low budgets, short shooting schedules, short running times, and minimal postproduction efforts."

He crafted a storyboard of a horror film and "carried it around to everyone I knew," to raise enough cash to make his film. He even pitched it to his dad, who at first scoffed at the idea.

"After I raised a majority of the money on my own, my father was impressed. My dad thought that if I was this passionate and determined about the project, then he was going to help. He had the money. Although he knew it wasn't Oscar material, he would finally support me." Kaufman began production; he even offered his dad a small part. His dad accepted, and thereafter acted in every film Kaufman made.

This was the 1970s. B films, especially horror movies, were raking it in at the box office. Exploitation films developed devout followers, and theaters and distribution companies were snapping them up. Halloween had just grossed over $80 million worldwide; it was made for $320,000.

To Kaufman's delight and "quite frankly, amazement," Mona, the first film he wrote and directed, was made for $15,000 and sold for $250,000. With this initial success as a writer/director, Kaufman "wanted to buy a vacation home in the Adirondacks."

Charles serves a cookie to one of his customers.

He sought advice from his father, who "was a very smart guy, with good street sense." His dad said, "Use the money you earned to [film] what you want. That money will buy your freedom. Make it last. It will extend the length of time where you can work for yourself. It will support you."

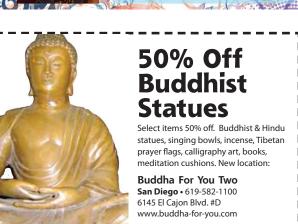

Kaufman didn't buy the vacation home. He took his father's advice and used his profit to make more films. Once the films were "in the can," he would get them into theaters, sell them to other venues, and make enough money for the next project.

When The Texas Chainsaw Massacre and Halloween made big profits, the major studios took notice. They made their own B films, with bigger and better budgets and storylines.

"The smaller filmmakers couldn't keep up," Kaufman says. The studios "monopolized the low-budget genre industry, and little guys like me began to struggle." Kaufman's films, along with those of many other independent film companies, were locked out, market after market.

His wife Dori wasn't all that disappointed. Kaufman's films left "something to be desired," she says. Kaufman knew this. His movies were funny yet gruesome. "I made the wise decision not to let Dori see any of my films until after we were married. She was to uncontrolled type 2 diabetes and heart disease. Learn more about this medical research study for adults struggling with both of these medical issues.

Managing type 2 diabetes, along with heart disease, can be challenging. Watching what you eat, monitoring your blood sugar, getting some exercise, and taking your medication are all important. But for some people, these aren't enough to effectively control their diabetes, which can place them at a greater risk for a heart disease-related episode, like a heart

Local doctors are currently conducting the CAROLINA research study for individuals diagnosed with uncontrolled type 2 diabetes, who have also had, or are at risk for, a heart disease-related episode. They want to compare an investigational type 2 diabetes medication to another anti-diabetic medication.

If you have uncontrolled type 2 diabetes, plus a history of heart disease, we hope that you will consider learning more about this study.

über-intelligent, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of UC Berkeley, and working for a school for the blind. I didn't want to scare her awav."

Dori and Kaufman met in 1988. Kaufman was 39, Dori was 38. Kaufman had been the fifth wheel on too many bowling double-dates when a friend told him about Dori. Perhaps there could be six players? She slipped him Dori's phone number. Kaufman called.

They had several long conversations before meeting face-to-face. Dori ignored Kaufman's stutter and laughed at all of his jokes. "She was the only girl who wanted to see my full face without a mustache. That should tell you something."

Dori remembers: "We discovered we grew up within six miles of each other in New York. Once we began talking, I felt like I had known him my whole life."

After six months of dating, they got engaged. Three months later, they married at their engagement party at the Plaza in New York. Both had headstrong mothers who intended to have their way with how, where, and what type of wedding Dori and Kaufman should have. The young couple had their own ideas.

The party was in a ballroom at the Plaza. The families met for the first time. Both sides attended en masse, or, as Kaufman jokes, "en mess."

After awhile, people began to notice that Dori had disappeared. Kaufman quieted the party. He addressed them as seriously as he was able. "I have an announcement. As you all can see, Dori has left the party. You're 'family,' and I have to be honest with you — this engagement thing just isn't working out."

After an audible gasp, he continued: "As a result, Dori and I have decided we'll be getting married, right here, right now."

for the wedding vows; she'd be able to see all of his face. But he was so nervous, he cut himself. "It was really bad; blood was all over the place. I couldn't stop the bleeding. I had to lie down on the bathroom floor as my best friend administered first aid. The wedding had to be postponed for 45 minutes."

Dori didn't know what was going on. She assumed he was refusing to come out to get married. But once Kaufman's bleeding was under control, his best friend, nurse, and legal minister perial passion in me. I knew I would make a lousy employee and wanted to avoid the further humiliation of being fired. Growing up in Manhattan, I was exposed to every type of food imaginable."

Whenever his mother went to the bakery to buy fresh bread for the family, Kaufman would tag along, anxious to watch the bakers knead and shape the dough.

Later, while traveling to Cannes every year, he'd visit bakeries and sample varieties of artisan bread. The bakeries were warm. They were places where family and friends gathered.

"The bakers enjoyed what they were doing," he says. "There was honor in baking a great loaf of bread and sharing it with others. I decided that I was going to learn how to make this kind of bread. Then I was going to build a bakery — how hard could it be?"

But, he admits, "I was older, with a kid on the way. I wasn't sure I still had the guts to do it. I knew that to do it right, I had to immerse myself in this world the way I'd immersed myself in the film world. I scoured the country for bakeries where I could apprentice."

Once again relying on humor to break the ice, Kaufman would call, introduce himself, and try to stay a few thoughts ahead, so he wouldn't stutter. "I'd offer to work for free in exchange for learning how they made their bread."

He was amazed by the bakers' generosity. He was used to the film industry, where if you have a groundbreaking way of shooting or editing, you keep it for your own films. "In the culinary world," he says, "bakers and chefs were gloriously

"landed in a big city with the feeling of a small town." They could begin their dream here.

It was 1993. Hillcrest was quiet. There were few hip stores, coffee shops, or restaurants. The Kaufmans were able to rent enough space to house an Italian, 50,000pound, gas-fired, steaminjection, four-deck Tibiletti oven. It would be the most important tool of their bakery.

They custom-built Bread & Cie Bakery to fit the hearth-deck Tibiletti. which is over two stories tall and 15 feet wide. The oven bakes 50 loaves of bread at once. It must be controlled by a human being and watched with a baker's eye.

Kaufman and Dori worked side-by-side. Kira's first playground was the bakery. The family dug in and put down roots. They got involved in the community. They helped build Explorer Elementary; they remained on the board of directors for years.

They grew Bread & Cie slowly. Kaufman sold his fresh bread the way he used to sell films: "Only this time around, my product was more tasteful." The bakery didn't advertise; it was all word-of-mouth marketing.

When KPBS asked Kaufman for an interview, he agreed. "We didn't have any advertising out there, and now I was going to be on the radio. People depended on me. I didn't want to blow it.

I didn't sleep the whole week before, afraid I would stutter. I didn't want to distract people from learning that my bread was wholesome and delicious."

Once again, Kaufman relied on humor. He got through the interview without stuttering.

They continued to grow the business, supplying bread to local restaurants and food stores such as Henry's, Whole Foods, Bristol Farms, and certain Vons, Albertsons, and Ralphs. They also sold bread and bakery items at San Diego farmers' markets, in La Mesa, Solana Beach, Hillcrest, and Little Italy. Jeff, one pastries are shaped; it's where talented bakers try out new recipes for pies and cakes. Billboard-sized posters of Kaufman's films adorn the towering walls. The posters remind him of where he came from.

The name "Cie" was also pulled from Kaufman's childhood memories — until he was eight, he had Celiac disease.

Kaufman started Bread & Cie with six employees. On the first day they were open for business, he "sold 35 loaves of bread." Now, almost 20 years later, he employs "129 San Diegans, and on a busy weekend day, we'll bake over 10,000 loaves of bread."

His daughter Kira just graduated from high school. She's decided to take time off before college to pursue her dream of being a ballroom dancer. Kaufman supports that dream.

"After all," he says, "I followed mine."

He adds, "The best thing in life is to have passion for something and go after it. You never know where that passion will take you." ■

IWW shot twice. He died 19 days later.

Emma Goldman — "Red Emma," the nationally-known anarchist — was in Los Angeles when Mikolasek died. She had organized a feeding station at IWW head-quarters for the "destitute boys who had escaped their tormenters [in San Diego] and had reached us alive."

No local funeral parlor would bury Mikolasek, so Goldman had his body shipped to Los Angeles. At a memorial attended by hundreds of mourners, she said that Mikolasek had been "obscure and unknown in life, but he grew to countrywide stature in his death."

Moved by the scores of bruises, blood-drenched clothes, and broken bones that kept trailing into the feeding station, Goldman decided to give a lecture in San Diego: her topic, Henrik Ibsen's An Enemy of the People, about a man like Mikolasek who stands his ground against an entire

Goldman announced her plan in cables to police chief Keno Wilson and mayor James Wadham. She'd given talks in San Diego before. But this time, both urged her to stay away. Of what followed, Goldman wrote: "No dramatist could have imagined a more inflammatory scenario."

Goldman called her manager-lover, Dr. Ben Reitman, "Hobo." An eccentric from Chicago, he wore long black hair and clothes that, said Goldman, "were successful fugitives from soap and water." His shabby look was a deliberate comment, he said, on "bushwa" morality. While conceding that he helped Goldman in many ways, Elizabeth Gurley Flynn dubbed Reitman a "half-loaf liberal" and "an insufferable buffoon."

On May 14, when their train pulled into the California Southern depot, a large crowd awaited the "Red Queen" and the "Hobo King." ("It did not occur to me," Goldman wrote, "that the reception was for us.") Cars blocked the tracks. Under fancy hats, women dressed for a night on the town shouted, "Give us the anarchist!" "We'll strip her naked!" "We'll tear out her guts!"

E.E. Kirk, the original Wobbly lawyer, and his wife had promised to meet Goldman at the station. Peering through the window at raised fists and flickering flags, Goldman couldn't spot the Kirks.

"Let's go to the hotel," said Reitman, pointing to the U.S. Grant's bright-red, double-decked autobus parked off to the side. Since no one had considered that they might take a shuttle, Goldman and Reitman snuck on unobserved. The inside was stuffy, so they climbed to the upper deck, where the Kirks sat in the open air. gant VIPs, a scruffy, working-class couple fled through the lines of bluecoats and into the swank structure that had been completed less than two years earlier at a cost of $1.9 million.

"There's that Goldman woman! Up there!"

"There's that Goldman woman! Up there!"

Hundreds mobbed the bus. They pounded doors and tried to scale the sides. They wanted to hurl "the most dangerous woman in America" to the ground.

Fearing for his life, the driver floored the gas pedal. He blitzed nine blocks up Broadway to the U.S. Grant.

At the hotel, bystanders watched a puzzling sight. The bus skidded to a stop before the handsome carriage entrance, where police had formed a protective gauntlet. But instead of ele-

Soon after, honking horns and whistles streamed up Broadway. A parade of pedestrians, over two blocks long, followed. They waved flags, sang songs, and punctuated sentences with "Goldman," "anarchist," or "red."

The original Free Speech protest began a block away, in January, at Fifth and E. By nightfall, four months later, at least a thousand San Diegans swarmed in front of the U.S. Grant and became the city's largest anti–free speech mass meeting. They resented Goldman's presence — and wanted blood.

Owned & Operated by Vishal Verma MD. and Vinita Parekh DDS.

The harried couple had just settled into their rooms on the third floor when James H. Holmes, hotel manager, ran in: vigilantes had checked the register; they knew where the anarchists were staying. Holmes wanted to transfer them to a top-floor suite. Once there, they couldn't leave, he added, even for meals. "Vigilantes're in an ugly mood."

Goldman and Reitman watched the mob swell through the sixth floor's celebrated windows. Horns tooted, voices sang patriotic songs or howled and jeered at the "anarchist murderess."

A rap on the door: Holmes and two others. The mayor and chief of police wanted Goldman downstairs.

"Ben sensed danger," she wrote, "and insisted that I ask them to send the visitors up. It seemed timid to me. It was evening, and we were in the principal hotel of the city. What could happen to us?"

Holmes escorted the couple into a room off the lobby. Seven men stood in a semi-circle. Chief Wilson entered. With his blue officer's cap he loomed even taller than his six-foot-three-inch frame.

"Please come with me," he said to Goldman. "The mayor and other officials are next door."

When Reitman rose, Wilson said, "You aren't wanted, Doctor. Wait here."

Goldman entered a room, facing Broadway, filled with official-looking men. Through partially drawn blinds, she saw demonstrators under electric streetlights. They chanted, "Emma, Emma, in a dilemma!"

"Hear that mob?" asked a grim-faced man. "They mean business."

He could have been the mayor or police commissioner John Sehon. Goldman wasn't sure. Don't let the fancy clothes down there fool you, he said — many, if not most, were vigilantes. "They want to get you and Reitman out of the hotel. We cannot guarantee anything."

Goldman stared, dumbfounded.

"If you consent to leave," the man added, "we will get you safely out of town."

"That's very nice," said Goldman, "but why don't you disperse the crowd? Use the same measures you have against the free-speech fighters?"

Goldman raised her voice: "Your ordinance makes it a crime to gather in the business districts. Hundreds of IWWs, anarchists, socialists, and trade-union men have been clubbed, room.

"Where's Reitman?" Goldman asked. "What have you done with him?"

"How should I know?"
"If any harm comes to him, you'll pay if I have to do it with my own hands!"

No one claimed to know where Reitman had gone. Goldman returned to her room and paced. She couldn't telephone anyone. That would "endanger their safety."

"I felt helpless. Time dragged on, and at midnight I dozed off from sheer fatigue." She dreamed of Reitman, "bound and arrested, and some even killed for this offense. Yet you allow the vigilante mob to congregate in the busiest part of the town and obstruct traffic. All you have to do is disperse these law-breakers!"

"We can't," the man replied. "These people are in a dangerous mood — and your presence makes things worse."

"Very well, then, let me speak to them." Goldman started toward a window. "I've faced infuriated men before and could always pacify them!"

Two men blocked her path. The man in charge said no.

"I've never accepted protection from the police," Goldman blurted, "and do not intend to now. I charge all of you men here of being in league with the vigilantes!"

Someone said that if anything happened, "I [Goldman]should have only myself to blame."

With that, she went to Reitman's room. But the door was locked. A gentle rap. No reply. She pounded hard. Nothing. "The noise I made brought a hotel clerk. He unlocked the door, but no one was there."

She ran back to the lobby, just as Chief Wilson emerged from the other gagged, his hands groping for me. I struggled to reach him and woke up with a scream, bathed in sweat."

Raps on the door: the house detective and another man. Reitman was safe, the detective said. Vigilantes had put him on a train for Los Angeles, unhurt.

Goldman didn't believe a word, but the second man looked honest, and he was nodding in agreement.

Holmes entered. He pleaded with Goldman to leave. She couldn't give her lecture and Reitman was gone. She had no reason to stay.

"I was only endangering his position," she said. "He hoped I would not take undue advantage because I was a woman. If I remained, the vigilantes would drive me out of town, anyhow."

Two bellhops escorted her to a taxi on a side street. She rode down deserted Broadway to the depot. As she boarded the "Owl Train" at 2:45 a.m., horns, blaring like fire alarms, headed her way: "The fearful sound I had first heard at the station." Someone must have tipped off the vigilantes.

"Hurry!" It was a man's voice. "Get in quick!"

Two men helped her into a Pullman car. They lowered the blinds and locked the door. Outside, heavy shoes and boots pounded the platform, then came a riot of rumbles on the thick wooden planks. "There was mad yelling and cursing — hideous and terrifying moments till at last the train pulled out."

As the train headed north, it stopped at several stations. No Reitman. And he wasn't at the Los Angeles depot. When she reached her apartment, Goldman realized that "the U.S. Grant Hotel men had lied to get me out of town!"

Reitman's Account

Within minutes after Goldman left for the other room, the seven men with Reitman drew revolvers from their overcoats and pointed toward the door. "Utter a sound," one said, "we'll kill you."

Two grabbed his arms, a third the front of his coat, another the back. They led him down the corridor to the kitchen, took the kitchen elevator to the basement and the freight elevator up to the Third Street sidewalk. There, a car awaited.

The car slowly drove east down Broadway. When the crowd recognized Reitman in the back seat, "they set up a howl."

A second car followed behind, "containing several persons who looked like businessmen."

As soon as they left the central district, said Reitman, "these Christian gentlemen...kicked, pounded, bit me and subjected me to every cruel, diabolical, malicious torture that a God-fearing respectable businessman is capable of conceiving."

"We could tear your guts out," one boasted through alcohol-tinted breath, "but we promised the chief of police to not kill you."

About 20 miles from town — possibly near Rancho Peñasquitos — the cars stopped but kept their headlights on. Fourteen men formed a ring around their prey. "Undress," one said. When Reitman refused, they tore off his clothes and "kicked and beat me until I was almost insensible."

As the others whooped and hooted, someone — Reitman said it was a "doctor" — lit a cigar and burned "IWW across my buttocks."

They poured a can of tar over his head and "feathered" him with sagebrush.

"One attempted to push a cane into my rectum," said

"Only his eyes tried to convey what he had passed through."

The New York Times said Reitman exaggerated his story ("he got a mild coating of cold pine tar with a few leaves in it, but no beating") and San Diego's civic leaders denied that the "patriotic ceremony" ever happened. But Reitman was never the same. The Reitman. Someone urinated on him, and "another twisted my testicles."

Though he could barely move, they ordered him to kiss the American flag and sing the "Star Spangled Banner" — "with feeling."

"When they tired of the fun, they gave me my underwear, for fear we should meet any women." They also returned his vest — "in order that I might carry my money, railroad ticket, and watch" — but "the rest of my clothes they stole from me in highway fashion."

Then the vigilantes formed two lines and ordered Reitman to run a gauntlet. As he hobbled along, "each one gave me a blow or a kick. Then they let me go."

At 10:00 a.m. the next morning, Goldman received a long-distance call. An unfamiliar voice told her that Reitman was on a train for Los Angeles. His "friends should bring a stretcher to the station."

"Is he alive?" Goldman shouted. "Are you telling the truth? Is he alive?"

No response.

Goldman and several others waited at the station for hours. When the train arrived, "Ben lay in a rear car, all huddled up. He was in blue overalls, his face deathly pale, a terrified look in his eyes...and his hair was sticky with tar."

He couldn't speak.

assault, wrote Goldman, "consumed him with terror" and "became almost a hallucination." ■

ing stable with one Morris (Mushy) Wexler, whom the Kefauver Committee named one of the "leading hoodlums" in McBride's wire service. In 1969, Modell got married in the Las Vegas digs of William (Billy) Weinberger, president of Caesars Palace, whose hidden owners included such dignitaries as Tony (Big Tuna) Accardo, Sam (Momo) Giancana, and Vincent (Jimmy Blue Eyes) Alo. When he died in 1996, the Las Vegas Sun called Weinberger "the dean of casino gaming."

A 1969 happening spotlights the National Football League's blatant hypocrisy. New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath invested in a Manhattan bar. The National Football League told him to sell his shares because the joint had ties to big-time gamblers and unsavory individuals. The league said nothing about Modell's ties — or the unsavory ties of numerous other team owners. (The late Carroll Rosenbloom, a high roller with a major interest in a mobbedup Bahamian casino, owned the Baltimore Colts and Los Angeles Rams at different times. His second wife and widow, entertainer Georgia Frontiere — who had been married five times before latching on to Rosenbloom - inherited control of the Rams and moved them to St. Louis when she got a stadium 96 percent funded by taxpayers.)

CITY LIGHTS

There have been too many incidents to recount here. The Youngstown DeBartolo family, long involved in casinos and racetracks, owns the San Francisco 49ers. In the late 1990s, Edward DeBartolo Jr., then head of the 49ers, paid a Louisiana governor $400,000 to get a riverboat casino license. The governor went to the slammer; DeBartolo got a wrist slap but had to leave the 49ers. The family still runs the team, while DeBartolo Jr. runs the company that is based back in Youngstown. Not surprisingly, San Diego has been in the middle of the NFL/gambling love affair. The late Pete Rozelle, Rancho Santa Fe resident and onetime head of the NFL, deftly tiptoed around team owners' mob/ gambling ties, Moldea shows in his book. Rozelle stepped on players suspected of consorting with gamblers (but never told them not to associate with their mobbed-up team owners).

The Chargers were founded by longtime gambler Barron Hilton, who had both a business and personal relationship with Los Angeles attorney Sidney Korshak, who was described by law enforcement officials as "the link between the legitimate business world and organized crime." A later owner was Eugene Klein, another Korshak friend with mob and gambling associations. The late Al Davis, a former Chargers coach who wound up owning the Oakland Raiders, was a business associate of San Diego casino owner Allen Glick. Davis's survivors still control the Raiders. Bridgepoint gave GOP state senator Joel Anderson $404worth of "Event Tickets, Food & Beverages" for two occasions in September and December. And the corporation gave Democratic assemblyman Marty Block football tickets worth $146 in September, along with a $200 ticket to the San Diego County Taxpayers Association banquet in May of last year. Other companies also provided entertainment. From Cox Communications, the cable TV giant, Supervisor Cox got $301 in two admissions to Padres opening day. Sacramentobased California Strategies and Advocacy was founded by Bob White, the onetime social director of San Diego State fraternities who became top operative for San Diego mayor Pete Wilson and moved up the power ladder even further as his boss became a U.S. senator and California governor. According to the firm's latest disclosure with the California secretary of state's office, filed in April, California Strategies grossed a total of $346,917 during the first three months of 2012. The main group painting this mural back then included Armando Nuñez, Guillermo Aranda, Salvador Barajas, Victor Ochoa, Guillermo Rosette, Arturo Romano, and Ernesto Paul, all young artists involved with Toltecas en Aztlán, an artists' group at the Centro Cultural de la Raza in Balboa Park, which paid for the paint.

How did they decide what to paint? Aranda stands in front of one of the first scenes he painted. It depicts skeletons wearing Spanish helmets, one skeleton-soldier roasting a baby in the fires of a volcano, next to a jaguar, Tezcatlipoca, Lord of Darkness. Near that is the Great Pyramid of Cholula, where Cortés and his Tlaxcalan allies massacred 3000 Cholula citizens and burned the city in October 1519.

"This is history," says

Are all these beautiful, bright images basically angry protest paintings?

"No," he says. "I realize now, more and more. these are paintings of love. This repainting has been an incredible experience. It brings back the excitement and fear we had to conquer, to go through what we went through, challenging the authorities. But anger? After the first two or three years, I realized that anger was what had driven me. When I was 18, I went to jail for stealing tires. When I got out, I realized I needed to make a break. So I joined the Air Force. It opened doors to the bigger world but also to a harsh racism I'd never felt

"So I was still angry when this happened. But, eventually, you start to feel the effects of anger on your psyche. I didn't want that. I realized I still had to act, to fight for Chicano culture and respect, but as an act of love."

Has the next generation been as interested?

"Young Chicano people? They know nothing," he says. "They're not interested in how they came to be. Technology gives them a detachment. Their only real relationships are with their friends online, which makes me more determined to preserve and document all this."

Five of the seven friends who started this painting 40 years ago are here today. They and others are working on 18 of the 72 murals that most need restoring. Caltrans, once the enemy, has shepherded the $1.6 million state grant to pay for the restoration costs.

For that, everybody here is quick to credit Caltrans' Martin D. Rosen. According to Guillermo Aranda, it's only because Rosen wrote the grant back in 1999 and then stayed on the project until the money finally became available in 2011 that this $1.6 million restoration has been possible.

The guys line up along the scaffolding for a group photo. It's about 11:00 in the morning, getting hot. Salvador Barajas is telling me about the technical manual for the restoration of the murals that he helped compile when a young Anglo guy wearing a construction helmet comes up, tentatively. Nathan Bellamy. He's working on the nearby Mercado shopping center and apartments.

"Was wondering if I could help you guys with your painting?" he says. "I do airbrush art."

Barajas is taken aback for a moment. Then he says, "Sure. Of course. Uh, first you'll have to find out about us, our story, our history, if you want to help tell it. But, hey, welcome. There are plenty of pylons left to paint." ■

Sweetwater Soiled Again

Toxic dirt trucked to Southwest High School Chula Vista — A large pile of contaminated dirt was reportedly deposited on the Southwest High School campus in the spring of 2010. After 10News.com reported the story last week, the district shrouded the dirt pile in plastic and in mystery.

Where did the 10,000 tons of contaminated dirt originate? Sweetwater Union High School District interim superintendent Ed Brand told 10News.com on June 15, "I can't tell you specifically where it came from. I believe it was a group of volunteers that brought the dirt in."

Several days later, Dianne Russo, interim deputy superintendent for the district, told the Proposition O Bond Oversight Committee that Southland Paving Company put the dirt there and that it was going to cost $498,000 to remove it. Nick Marinovich, the new chair of the oversight committee, has stated that the money will not come from Prop O funding.

The district has yet to release the soil report to the public; however, according to 10News, "Out of 14 samples, 10 show elevated levels of lead, pesticides including DDT — or petroleum hydrocarbons linked to underground gasoline storage tanks."

Pot Shop Redux

City council forced to revisit pot dispensary ban Imperial Beach — Proponents of prescription pot will once again converge on City Hall in Imperial Beach to ask the city council to end the current moratorium on medical marijuana dispensaries and enact a new ordinance that allows dispensary owners to open shop in commercial and industrial zones.

The decision this time may be a costly one if the council decides to pass on a new ordinance. On June 12, the county's Registrar of Voters verified that members of Canvass for a Cause (an LGBT nonprofit) and San Diego Americans for Safe Access submitted enough valid signatures — 1,012, to be exact — to qualify the item to appear on this November's ballot. That means if the council doesn't act, they will have to shell out tens of thousands of dollars.

"Although an unlikely scenario, the City Council could save the cash strapped city approximately $20,000 by immediately adopting the ordinance as law instead of placing it on the ballot," reads a statement from the San Diego Chapter of Americans for Safe Access.

The fight over patients' rights to medicinal marijuana has been brewing in the small beach community for more than two years. Last year, on June 15, the council voted in favor of banning dispensaries and collectives.

Ex-con millionaire's celebrity bash against capital punishment

La Jolla — La Jolla's favorite former superlawyer, Bill Lerach, who did a stretch in a federal penitentiary after pleading guilty in a kickback case, is throwing a star-studded party to raise money for the so-called SAFE California Act, a measure on November's ballot that would eliminate the state's death penalty.

"SAFECalifornia is a ballot initiative that will replace the death penalty with life in prison with no possibility of parole, saving our state billions of dollars and making our communities safer and stronger," says an invitation to the July 28 event.

Since his release from prison two years ago, Lerach has frequently hosted political fundraisers at his La Jolla Farms mansion, most recently a $500-a-head "V.I.P. Reception" and

Child sex trafficking ring dismantled in Tijuana

Tijuana — Ten girls, from the ages of 13 to 17, were rescued from a sex trafficking ring in Tijuana last week. State police arrested five men on June 19 who ran the operation.

Five of the victims gave statements regarding how men paid from $15 to $100 to have sex with them. The victims stated they had been in forced prostitution for over a year and that many others were in the same conditions in Tijuana.

The girls were transported to hotels in the colonia Manuel Paredes and other various parts of the city to meet clients.

Young women from other parts of Mexico are often promised work in border cities and then forced into prostitution. The victims are often moved from one city to another to work in brothels and on the streets.

whether it be $500, $750 or $1,000. When Red Wizard was pulled from the bill, they were allowed to exchange the $10 for the ticket with the friends they sold them to and turn those tickets back in. BUT, for the tickets they couldn't retrieve, they had to pay the promoter for those tickets. So they did pay something and they didn't get to play. It came out of their pocket.

Regarding There For Affair: "The band did agree to pre sale 50 tickets at $10.00 per ticket in order to ensure there are sufficient patrons to purchase food and beverages to cover overhead costs." Again, that says they are on the hook to come up with $500 on the night they are to play. You may not like the name Pay to Play. But that is the industry term.

"Extortion" was deemed to be the wrong word. How about you send the musician who said the word a threatening letter. That word was a quote.

Yes I spoke with "Mo" a couple of times. He requested that instead of answering questions over the phone, I send him a list of questions. Although he would not give me his last name he did provide his email, and I was happy to cooperate with him on those terms.

On May 9, 2012, at 12:59 pm I sent him an email with the following text:

"These questions are for an article in the San Diego Reader about the arrival of pay to play in San Diego.

- Mo, are you involved with Breakthru Entertainment?
- What other venues have you worked with?
- Why is pay for play a good business model for bands and for music lovers?
- Why is it a good thing for venues?
- Mo, what is your last name and what do you do for the House of Blues? Are you an independent promoter?"

I asked him the last question because when I asked him on the phone if he was with Breakthru or House of Blues he said "Both." That is not true. He is not with House of Blues. Not only did he not answer these questions by email, he then told me over the phone he would have nothing to say for this interview.

Seems like you left this fact out, Mr. Holt. In your letter you said "Mo" told how it wasn't pay to play. Really? Where is the email response? He told me everything would be handled via email. It is interesting the attorney would not reveal Mo's last name in his letter. I guess Mr. Holt's social skills are so superior that he deals with everyone on a first name basis. Back at ya, David dude!

I also contacted House of Blues and they had no comment. They could and should clear this up in my personal opinion. It is important that the House of Blues thrives. It is the only venue that allows both under-21 and over-21 to see music events. HoB has a superior sound system, and it is a great opportunity for local bands to open for nationally touring artists. But the overwhelming consensus of bands I have spoken to say that they do not share the same enthusiasm for this business model that the industry knows as "pay to play."

When House of Blues employees speak of these nights, they make it clear that these nights have nothing to do HoB itself, that they just rent out the room. But at some point I think the venue may want to reverse this trend, even if it held its outside promoters to a more reasonable ceiling like $200 or $300, is what I'm hearing from bands. Not all venues use pay to play. Maybe HoB feels it needs to. I would hope that it reins in the upfront money these promoters are demanding.

These are only my personal opinions only.

Edited out of the article was what one local promoter/music venue owner who has used such promoters had to say...that due to particularly unsavory recent experiences, the owner was cutting back on such promoters.

Interesting to note the attorney didn't want some kind of retraction on the phrase, "these promoters don't promote anything." That would seem to me to be pretty hard hitting description. I guess his client had no problem with that.

I would truly hope the House of Blues itself attempts to mend this situation by giving Red Wizard and There For Affair a show at some future date. They are good kids and do not deserve this stress simply because they stood up for what was right.

And I may also suggest that if Breakthru Entertainment wants to do all this business down here, that you tell us who you are, what you are all about, and maybe not tell a band they have to pay $1,000, then cut it back to $750, then settle on $500 because the father saw through it. Hey, and maybe make some posters and flyers.

These are all my own thoughts.

City Lights: "Creation of a Monster, John Gardner" Published June 28

In today's society people will do just about anything to get their 15 minutes of fame. By publishing this in a local paper-and the book due to be released- you have granted this monster his wish. Yes, he's messed up in the mind- but I'm sure he's proudly smiling, thinking how "everyone knows who I am Now". I feel sick- because I know the mothers of these precious girls will hear of this and they will have to relive their horror and sorrow all over again. It's really a shame, yet you have made him a celebrity of sorts by continuing to put him in the media.

By aquarimary 11:33 a.m., June 27, 2012

Some people were horrified when neighbors took out their ire on his mother. (I'd suppose she relocated very soon.) She was a psychiatric nurse for Pete's sake and didn't have any clue of his pathologies? Gimme a break! Had the Escondido cops contacted him, and he was in that area, when Amber went missing, he might have been sufficiently scared off to avoid any further attacks, hence saving Chelsea from the same fate. But they didn't contact him, and that's why not just a few people question the competence of that PD and any reason for its further existence. This whole wretched story of a screwed up kid who became a screwed up man and the mismanagement of his criminal history is an incredible tragedy. And it is all built of "what if" questions.

By Visduh 9:44 p.m., June 27, 2012

My parent's house overlooks the park where Chelsea died, and my daughter walked there everyday around the time Gardner committed the murder. I wish people would just leave the subject alone, including Chelsea's parents. It comes up over and over again, and it is definitely something my family doesn't want to be reminded of.

The only funny thing to come of it is that my mother's neighbor (they live in the orange houses on the ridge above the community park) still comes into her house and yells "Jean, it's John Gardner here to see you."

I hope people do not buy this book and therefore do not allow people to profit off the grief of others. There is nothing I want to know about this dirty monster or his sick mother. Let them both rot.

By Mindy1114 8:52 p.m., June 29, 2012

Don, Enough of the tragic story about what he did to those innocent victims has already been told, that the animal was guilty and shall never go free again, ever. NO excuses for what he did, AT ALL. He should get NO more attention or any profit from it, ever. Boycotts can happen, unless any/all publishing profits go directly to the victims families. He is the example for keeping and using the death penalty in this state. Most local parents never want to see his face or hear about him ever again in this life, and wish his had ended like his victims did. May still happen in prison.

By Equalizer 10:41 p.m., June 29, 2012 I doubt that Rother wrote the book to cash in on a tragedy. There's no money in writing a book like this. Rother's books sell for under $10. She might sell 10,000 copies if she's lucky. If she was interested in money her time would likely be better spent working full time as a reporter rather than researching and writing crime books.

By Burwell 12:17 a.m., June 30, 2012

I grew up in a house that was literally around the corner from where Amber was abducted. I went to High School with Carrie, her mother. I can't even find the words to express how much this tragedy has haunted me. It still does. I feel that both Gardner's mother and girlfriend were accomplices and should have been charged. AND that the judge should have thrown out the plea bargain.

Blurt: "Embrace the Suck" Published June 28 Well...

I hate to say it, but I think the death knell is being heard on what was once my beloved FM 94/9.

They have changed so much in the last three years, and not in a good way. They haven't just lost their way, they lost their own vision and core philosophy that made the station so unique and appealing in the first place.

Gone are Desert Island Discs, gone are the Blues Break, Insider takeovers, Coup De'Tat.... replaced with call in radio contests and talk over the beginnings and endings of songs. You know, that thing they prided themselves on NEVER doing?

Worst of all? Gone is the integrity. It's not "About the Music" anymore, and hasn't been for a while now.

This truly is a damn shame. FM 94/9 used to be everything I could have ever wanted in a radio station.

Now?

Now I think I'll go back to 91X full time, where with Halloran, Steve West, and now music director Robin Roth back at the mics, things might be the way they should be in San Diego alternative radio. At least....as much as they can be.

RIP FM 94/9....

TRAVEL STORIES AND TIPS FROM OUR READERS

P. Burgos Street in Manila — Amsterdam meets Tijuana meets New Orleans' French Quarter

Manila Nights By Dominic DeGrazier

I'm in Manila for my last evening in the Philippines before I hop on a flight back to LAX. Now there's nothing left to do, except...see midgets ("little people") fight. I refused to be in the same town as this spectacle — taking place in a refereed boxing ring — and not witness it. So, where did I book my hotel room? In the red-light district on P. Burgos Street, about a block away from Ringside Bar — the site of the fight.

A few steps outside the hotel's entrance, and I'm thrown into an Amsterdam meets Tijuana meets New Orleans' French Quarter. Men are pushing Viagra and Cialis pills on every corner. Just when the pill peddlers have given up on the fairly common (but relatively young) white guy, the nurses rush to their aid. Nurses? Yep. Hordes of attractive girls in nurse outfits are beckoning tourists to get a massage.

P. Burgos Street is lit up with bar signs lining its slender sidewalks. Throughout the streets are children asking for money. I play with the kids, taking pictures and showing them the results. An American-accented man passes me, grunting, "Don't give them any money." What?

A lady boy (I think) gives me a price not just once, but three times, to take her...him...whatever up to my room. By the end of the three-block walk, he/she/it is asking me to do it for free. I can't wait to get inside Ringside Bar.

The door opens, I pull a red curtain to the side, and there it is, the boxing ring, adorned in red, white, and blue, ready for action. Ringside Bar is a girlie bar. Scantily dressed young ladies are sitting with patrons, others shake around a shiny pole.

I asked the DJ to play as many LMFAO songs as possible (why not?), danced a bit, drank two drinks for a bit more than ten dollars (an atrocious price in the Philippines), and took a few videos of the midget fights. Then I realized my Philippines trip was complete. I thanked the DJ, the fighting midgets, and the bartender, then slid back to my hotel for a few hours of sleep.

Dingle, Ireland By Derek Ray

Dingle, the northernmost of three peninsulas along the southwest coast of Ireland, was annointed "the most beautiful place in the world" by National Geographic Traveler a few years ago. It took little time to become entranced by the scenery. As I made my way through the peninsula toward the town of Dingle, I savored the green fields and coastline.

Once I arrived in Dingle town, the owner of my B&B was willing to help with directions and answer questions about the area. I found that I was just two blocks from the pub I'd heard raves

DOUBLE PEAK - SAN MARCOS

Double your pleasure on this hike with inspiring vistas and a remarkable assortment of flowering plants

Distance from downtown San Diego: About 37 miles. Allow 45 minutes' driving time. Take I-15 to Escondido and merge onto SR-78 west (exit 32), exiting with a left turn onto Twin Oaks Valley Road (exit 13). Turn right on Craven Road, then left on Foxhall Road for 0.3 mile to Discovery Lake Park. Facilities, picnic benches, and playground. Hike Length: 1, 4.6, or 7.6 miles — around Discovery Lake, to Double Peak, or the addition of Ridgeline Trail. Difficulty: From easy to strenuous. Elevation gain/loss: 0, 900, or 1932 feet, depending on distance chosen.

The trail to the peak crosses Discovery Lake dam and proceeds sharply up a hillside.

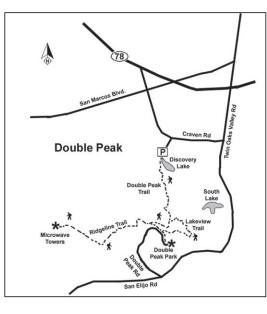

Something is blooming nearly every month of the year on this network of trails to and around Double Peak in San Marcos' Cerro de la Posas Hills. About 80 percent of the "trails" are fire or service roads, usually paved and up to ten feet wide. The main exception is the Secret Trail, a well-maintained footpath through the chaparral.

The trail to the peak crosses Discovery Lake dam and proceeds rather sharply up a hillside toward a collection of mini-mansions after hiking about 0.5 mile. The trail continues through the housing development, paralleling Stonewall Street, for 0.1 mile. When Stonewall turns right, the trail goes left, leaving the houses behind as it passes a large water tank, then resumes the climb up the mountain. At 1.15 miles into the hike, there is a brass plaque set in concrete, marking the start of the San Elijo Hills 10K. The trail forks here. Go right to take the direct route to the peak. However, the trail to the left, known as the Lakeview Trail, is more interesting. It is almost level as it contours around the chaparral-covered ridges, providing views of South Lake in one of the canvons below and of the more distant California State San Marcos, set in the rapidly urbanizing city of San Marcos.

The "single track" Secret Trail begins off to the right 0.5 mile after leaving the San Elijo Hills 10K plaque. It is steep for a short distance as it goes up a ridge, but then it reaches the end of the paved road heading to the left. The Secret Trail continues to the right from this point. It is well maintained and easily navigated as it passes through tall ceanothus, scrub oaks, and mission manzanita. In many places the chaparral arches over the trail, creating a shady tunnel through the mini forest. The Secret Trail ends just below Double Peak Drive, a newly built road that leads from the community of San Elijo Hills to Double Peak Park. To reach the peak, follow the trail that parallels this road for about 0.25 mile. On a clear winter day the ocean view from the peak may include Catalina Island, while to the north the snowcapped summits of the San Gabriel and San Bernardino mountains may be visible.

After taking in the remarkable views from the peak, go 0.5 mile back down the trail alongside Double Peak Drive, past the Secret Trail, to another trail going off to the right. After going less than 0.1 mile on this trail, there is a dirt path leading off to the right. This leads back down to Discovery Lake and, if you take it. you will have gone 4.6 miles when you reach the lake. However, you could take the trail leading off to the left, known as the Ridgeline Trail. that follows the spine of the ridge to the microwave relay towers. This will add another 3 miles, out and back, to the hike, Take this side trail if your main goal is exercise. It is popular with mountain-bikers and runners as well as walkers. Look for mariposa lilies, roadrunners, and meadowlarks as the trail passes construction for a new San Elijo Hills development.

about: O'Flaherty's.

O'Flaherty's is a cozy pub awash in local tradition and traditional Irish music. Its walls are covered with photos, news clippings, posters, even poems by local writers. As with most of the pubs, music starts about 9:30.

I sipped on a Guinness while listening to Fergus O'Flaherty, the owner, play about eight different instruments. He transitioned smoothly from one piece to the next, a bevy of instruments to his side. O'Flaherty performs almost

The following day was set aside to explore the peninsula. The views from Slea Head Drive, which traces the coastline of Dingle, were among the most impressive I've experienced anywhere in Europe. Weather is almost a nonfactor; a misty day just heightens the area's

There are ruins along this route dating back to the Iron and Bronze Ages. It's said that the monks who made Dingle their home in the Dark Ages kept literacy alive in Europe. If your curiosity is stirred by the ancient remains, beehive huts, and old, abandoned abbeys, you

On a clear day, the views of the Blasket Islands from Slea Head Drive are exquisite. A visit to the islands also makes for a memorable day trip.

Those who have steady nerves and a small car can take the Connor Pass through the heart of the mountains in Dingle. The views are, again, amazing, but don't lose your focus on the road while driving — there's little room for error. (This drive is not recommended on misty days.)

Dingle town is fun to explore by foot. An Café Liteartha and Murphy's Pub provide inexpensive lunches. You can also pick up lunch at the Super Valu Mart and have a picnic along the harbor.

Fungie the dolphin is a popular local attraction, having adopted the peninsula as his home several years ago. His somewhat legendary status among the locals reminded me of Petros the pelican in Mykonos, Greece. There's a statue of Fungie in the harbor, and tours will take you out looking for him.

The Dingle Peninsula offers a variety of outdoor activities, including hiking and even surfing. Some of the finest beaches in Ireland are here.

Rhyme & Verse

In Time of 'The Breaking of Nations' A poem by Thomas Hardy

Only a man harrowing clods In a slow, silent walk With an old horse that stumbles and nods Half asleep as they stalk.

Only thin smoke without flame From the heaps of couch-grass; Yet this will go onward the same Though Dynasties pass.

Yonder a maid and her wight Come whispering by: War's annals will cloud into night Ere their story die.

Thomas Hardy (1840-1928) was a major British novelist and poet. Asked by a magazine in 1916 to write a heartening poem about the war in Europe, a war which by that time had become a horrific slaughter, he composed this quietly pointed 12-line poem suggesting that the ordinary life of humanity — a farmer with his old, trusty horse preparing his farmland for the new crop and young lovers strolling together — would remain long after the world war was no more than a forgotten chapter in mankind's history. The title comes from Jeremiah: 51: "... for with thee will I break in pieces the nations, and with thee will I destroy kingdoms." It is a chapter of the Hebrew scriptures in which Jehovah describes in lurid detail his plans for the annihilation of Babylon and the inhabitants of Chaldea.

These organic objects "and their clear connection to nature will be enhanced with large-scale photographs of Japanese landscapes and natural elements." Closes Sunday, January 6.

View "Hats and Headdresses" from the museum's permanent collection, with selections "from cultures and countries around the world," through Sunday, September 9. Free-$7. Mingei International Museum, 1439 El Prado. (BALBOA

"Santa Ana Condition" "John Valadez 1976 to 2011" — through Sunday, September 2 — is "the first survey exhibition of this important Mexican-American artist and muralist, who has had profound influence on the Chicano art movement in the United States." Exhibit spans 35 years of Los Angeles-based Valadez's photographs, paintings, pastels, and other works on paper. Valadez "turns the ordinary snapshot into a source for his portrayal of a large, diverse cast of urban inhabitants drawn from his everyday life." Free-$10. Museum of Contemporary Art San Diego, La Jolla, 700 Prospect Street. (LA JOLLA)

"Santa Fe Style" Reception for Diana Gries, whose exhibit is subtitled "Capturing the Images of Native American Faces and Designs Used." The artist is "drawn to the culture, beauty, and rhythm of Native America." Opening includes music by San Diego Flute Circle. View exhibit through July. Friday, July 6, 5pm; free. Sophie's Gallery NTC, 2825 Dewey Rd., Gallery 101. (POINT LOMA)

"The Invention of Glory: Afonso V and the Pastrana Tapestries" The Pastrana Tapestries are considered among the finest surviving Gothic tapestries. Exhibition showcases "four recently restored, monumental tapestries measuring 12 feet by 36 feet," commemorating "King Afonso V's conquest in 1471 of the Moroccan cities of Asilah and Tangier." Closes Sunday, September 9.

The focus of "Dynamic: Blue Note After Rivera," featuring 12 paintings by Mexico City-based artist Roberto Cortázar, is a series of recent works inspired by Diego Rivera's The Hands of Dr. Moore, one of the museum's "modern masterpieces." Cortázar's paintings approach this intimate subject from a highly personal perspective. Through September.

Carved into the mountains, the Buddhist cave temples of Xiangtangshan in China were "crowning cultural achievement of the sixthcentury Northern Qi dynasty." Once home to monumental Buddhas, divine attendant figures, crouching monsters framed by floral motifs, the limestone caves were severely damaged during 20th century, when their contents were chiseled away and sold. "Echoes of the Past: The Buddhist Cave Temples of Xiangtangshan," closing Sunday, July 22, boasts 14 objects from Xiangtangshan and three related Northern Qi works of art, juxtaposing dispersed sculptural fragments with a set of media projects. Free-$12. San Diego Museum of Art, 1450 El Prado. (BALBOA PARK)

"Three Story House" Drawn from museum's photography collection of more than 7000 images, this exhibit "traces how photographers have captured the familiarity of the domestic environment to tell stories of how we live and where we live, as well as transforming it into a creative space to make art." Continues through September.

In 1957, W. Eugene Smith, a former Life magazine photographer, moved out of his home and into a dilapidated, five-story loft building in New York City's wholesale flower district. Between 1957 and 1965, Smith made approximately 40,000 exposures of the nocturnal jazz scene inside the loft, and of the street below as seen through his fourth-floor window, as well as creating 1,740 reels (4,000 hours) of stereo and mono audiotapes, capturing more than three hundred musicians. Enjoy the results of his work in "The Jazz Loft Project: Photographs and Tapes of W. Eugene Smith," on view through Sunday, October 7. Free-$6. Museum of Photographic Arts, 1649 El Prado. "A Letter to His Sister at the Time of Her Husband's Death"

Let us seek for comfort where alone it may be found, let us learn a dutiful acquiescence in whatsoever proceeds from that Great Being from whom we ourselves proceeded and who being the sole Author of all our enjoyments has an undoubted Right to withdraw them in his own good time and whose Goodness so conspicuous in his General Providence may be as eminent for aught we know though not so plainly discerned even when he deals to us the bitter cup of Affliction. We may all profit in the School of Adversity if we will but make a proper use of its Sacred Lessons. If in this life we only had hope it would indeed be harder to acquire a due serenity of mind upon the loss of a beloved Friend. If he were absolutely extinct, to forget him would be perhaps necessary to our Peace of Mind. But now as our Holy Religion teaches we may contemplate him translated to a better Life and ineffably enjoying all that variety of Bliss which Eye hath not seen nor Ear heard nor the Heart conceived.

— from History of the Blair, Banister and Braxton Families (1898), by John Blair

John Blair (1732-1800) was a founding father of the United States, a signer of the U.S. Constitution, and one of the most renowned jurists of his times. He avoided the political scene, choosing instead to work through legal and juridical means to ensure that the newly formed United States would survive its infancy and endure into the future. Born and raised in Virginia, he became a stalwart ally of fellow Virginians James Madison and George Washington. It was the father of our country, in fact, who nominated him to the Supreme Court in 1789.

Oh, My Giddy Aunt

"Iraqis love big entrées. It's the Lebanese who like to snack on different small tapas."

apas in El Cajon? I wasn't even thinking of the possibility as I tramped along East Main, heading west. It was well past 8:00 p.m. and I was hungry, so I stopped at this old twostory clapboard house that has somehow survived, right in the middle of downtown El Cajon's redevelopment — I've always wondered about it. New England Saltbox...think that's what they call the style — wooden clapboards, the lines of the building straight up and down, like in that famous painting American Gothic.

A plaque on the front wall reads, "Historic El Cajon Hall 1894." Seems this was the town's first social hall. Just think: people have been walking in and out of these doors for, like, 118 years? When this was built, El Cajon was a dusty, horse-snortin' Wild West town, population 500.

It's a restaurant now, and a smart one at that. Through the window, I see mustard-colored walls, chandeliers, arched stone doorways, and an intimate bar at the end. There's a patio off to the side, too. Looks over the city center park, Prescott Promenade. A sign by the front door reads, "Mezzah. Mediterranean tapas and more." Hmm...head in.

"'Mezzah.' It means 'Tapas' in Arabic," a guy tells me when I walk through the door. "Still open?" I ask.

"Oh, sure," he says. "Well, the kitchen's open another half hour. Bar, a little later."

His name is Ammar. Iraqi Christian, not Chaldean. He and his brother Laith started this restaurant a year ago. "We are Iraqi, but our tapas are mainly Lebanese. Iraqis love big entrées. It's the Lebanese who like to snack on different small tapas, to have a drink, and socialize."

Ammar shows me to a table by the front window. Can't help wondering how many mayors back in the horse-and-buggy days sat right here, ready for an evening's fun.

He hands me the two-page menu. Part of one side lists the entrées, from $12 (kofta kabob, "seasoned ground beef grilled over > open fire" — comes with pilaf rice and veggies) to $17 (twicebaked lamb shank) to $25 (Masgov Samak, grilled tilapia for two).

The rest of the menu is all about tapas. Mezzah, $6-$9.

They look interesting. There's Samaka Hara, a spicy dip with grilled veggies mashed with walnuts and red chili peppers ($7). Or Arayes, marinated ground beef grilled inside pita bread ($7). Grilled quails ("grilled in a garlic pomegranate reduction"), $8. Or Boraq (Middle Eastern spiced-beef spring rolls). You can even get a chicken pesto pizza ($8).

Everything runs about a buck cheaper at lunchtime. Greek burger wraps are $6, lebnah is $5. Baba ghanouj goes for $6.

I'm a happy camper. Except I make a miscalculation. I've seen some of the "small plates" you get in upscale downtown bars at happy hour. You need a microscope. So — feeling flush tonight — I go a little crazy and decide to order three tapas: the Ghanouj Beiruti (Beirutstyle eggplant), $7; a Sherhaat ("country-fried steak medallions cooked in tahini sauce"), $7; and a Fetoosh ("Lebanese salad topped with grilled pita bread flavored with pomegranate vinaigrette"), $7.

And when everything comes, oh, my giddy aunt. The Fetoosh is a whopping salad on a big plate. It looks a meal in itself. The roasted minced eggplant is a sea of creamy eggplant with golden chunks of grilled, chopped-up pita. And the Sherhaat — well, it ain't quite medallions, more like slabs of thin-cut steak, with smears of tahini (sesame-seed paste) on top, and broccoli, carrots, and grilled peas in their pods all around.

Plus, there's hot pita bread wrapped up in a cloth napkin to keep it warm.

Oh, and a glass cup of Iraqi-style tea ($2 with endless refills).

"Mezzah means 'tapas' in Arabic," says owner Ammar.

The sherhaat — slabs of thin-cut steak with smears of tahini (sesame seed paste) on top Overkill! But so delish. Dang, I'd love to order a bottle of the Lebanese beer, Almaza ($6). Never heard of that before.

I know I'll never finish all this, but I give it a shot. The things I like best are the pomegranate molasses squirted over the eggplant, in dark, sweet, tangy, lines; and the pomegranate vinaigrette on the Fetoosh, along with the crunchy little surprise of grilled pita-bread chunks.

Oh, wait — maybe the best thing is the tahini rubbed onto the Sherhaat steak slices. It's delicious.

Turns out, Ammar's older brother Laith went to the Brooklyn Culinary Institute in New York. He joined the U.S. Army after he graduated and spent tours in Iraq fighting and interpreting. By the time he got back, Ammar had a master's in philosophy at UCSF and was working as a bank manager in San Francisco.

Then the two decided to take a gamble. Each left his career to make it happen.

I could chew the fat with Ammar all night long — he studied social-constructivist linguistics at UCSF — but I can tell these people are twitching to end their day.

Mezzah opens onto Prescott Promenade Park in downtown El Cajon.

I have to pack up half of everything I ordered. I tell Ammar I'm coming back with the lovely Carla. This'd be just her scene. I'm thinking Friday, sunset, when some band's playing a concert in the park. Right here, you'd have a ringside seat.

And, we wouldn't have to worry about hitting happy hour. I'm sure two of these tapas would fill the two of us.

"Come back and ask my brother to cook the quail," Ammar says. "He'll grill them men kol galba...with all his heart. He has the touch." ■

Mai, Oh Mai Tai

Over the years, one thing has instigated my trips to Bali Hai — mai tais. Umbrella drinks may harken to a bleaker period of culinary history, but there's a reason they've stuck around as the American culinary scene has evolved around them. They're pretty damn good and, unlike other alcoholic libations, palatable enough to appeal to just about anybody except discerning alcoholics who prefer their liquor straight up and their intoxication biting and lightning-quick.

Sweet tropical fruit juice is what makes all the rum in this classic cocktail go down so smooth and easy. As such, the majority of bartenders tend to overdo it in their efforts to mask the booze. It's tradition, after all. Nowadays, consumers want to taste their liquor especially the finer varieties —but mai tais originate from a time in the drinking culture when the point was to get ripped on standard-issue hooch while having to endure the taste of the firewater as little as possible.

One thing I really appreciate about the mai tais at Bali Hai is that when you take the first hit off one, you know the punch you're downing is anything but virgin. It's the kind of potent concoction that at first makes you think you must have tapped into some pool of bottom-settling alcohol but find after working your way to the end that it is high-grade octane all the way through.

Call me crazy, but the point of drinking cocktails is to get lit...or at least buzzed well beyond normalcy. Nobody orders martinis and mules in hopes of maintaining an everyday level of control over their behavioral faculties. This one gets the job done while still providing a myriad of tasty island flavors.

On my last trip to Bali Hai, a mai tai left me in a state where I needed to wait things out before hitting the road for the mainland. I opted for dessert to help pass the time. This turned out to be a splendid move, for soon I was digging into a quartet of ice cream sandwiches representing a contemporary take on good ol' PBJ.

They come with dessert forks, but the best method for downing these petite Chambord ice cream and peanut butter cookie delights is to pick them up and go to town. Since raspberry liqueur > makes up the ice cream base, it doesn't taste quite like a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, but the flavor combo works, and who doesn't love the interplay of textures presented by an ice cream sandwich?

> Like those mai tais, this dessert is another specialty of the house worth jaunting to Shelter Island for.

Freaking Delicious

What can I say? I assumed the Hillcrest restaurant was named after the ex-president. It wasn't. I asked. My server told me that Jimmy was the owner and a third-generation San Diegan. He told me that if I walked over to the bar, I could see a picture of Jimmy up on the wall — affable-looking gent with a mustache and a big smile.

Jimmy Carter definitely looks like he has a Jimmy Buffet sort of personality. Maybe I had stumbled accidentally into Margaritaville? If it's out there somewhere, Margaritaville definitely has the same brightly colored walls and tables as Jimmy Carter's Mexican Cafe. Everything is yellow and purple and blue.

I tried a margarita ($6.25) that made up for in strength what it lacked in refinement, which I'll readily accept for six bucks. I had just missed happy hour, but I'm willing to wager that Jimmy's could be a sure bet for a strong margarita session during the 5–8 p.m. happy hour every day.

I'll give Jimmy Carter a lot of credit: the menu runs the gamut from inexpensive nibbles to full plates of food and everything in between. There's every kind of burrito, taco, enchilada, and soup one could think of. For some reason, the burger gets served with cottage cheese as a side. Very strange, but also kind of cool. There was a time when I eschewed cottage cheese with great zeal, but these days I have a soft spot for the stuff.

An intriguing option on the menu was the "tlaquepaque" sauce that can be ordered as a house specialty with pork or chicken for $12.50. It's a spicy jalapeño salsa that's been blended into a cream base, and it's a new one on me. It's named after a part of Jalisco, which is where tequila comes from. I didn't feel up to an entire platter of food, but it's an option to smother an enchilada with tlaquepaque. One carnitas enchilada ($4.95) with tlaquepaque sauce and a side of rice and beans was plenty of food. Once I dug through the mound of lettuce, I discovered a rich supply of excellent carnitas. The sauce had a little heat to it, though nothing overkill, and the fresh green flavor of the jalapeños was an interesting counterpoint to the cream base. It was a good sauce for an enchilada. I could have dealt with less lettuce, more finely shredded.

On a more modest note, a vegetarian taco ($4.25) seemed maddeningly expensive at first, but it did come with a generous scoop of guacamole on it and it was, according my friend, "freaking delicious." While that's not a particularly...subtle review of the food, I think he meant that the vegetables weren't all watery and the taco itself had a lot more flavor than he often gets when he orders vegetarian food at Mexican restaurants.

Service was friendly and the hot carrots were plentiful. I think that Jimmy Carter — if he really is the mustached bon vivant that his picture suggests — would have felt that the meal delivered the experience he intended. The restaurant is kind of quirky and a little bit goofy, but the food was above average and the drinks were strong.

THE RESTAURANT THAT NEVER SLEEPS

Located on Girard Street in La Jolla, Ariccia had only been open for one day when I stopped in on Saturday. Okay, so I'm a little impatient.

There's a whole refrigerator full of duck products: buckets of duck fat, big lobes of duck foie gras, duck confit, and duck salumi with truffles. Other cases display more typical Italian deli fare, prosciutto de Parma, pancetta, speck, buratta, and the specialty of the house, porchetta, that lovely traditional Italian dish of deboned pig, rolled with herbs, spitted and roasted. Spices, herbs, sauces, honeys (dandelion sounds interesting) and Italian wines line the shelves. There are fresh pastas in regular and out-of-the-ordinary flavors. Beer and pretzel spaghetti was the flavored offering at $12 per pound.

The friendly staff provided samples of everything I showed interest in, coffee (strong and rich), porchetta (crisp herbal coating and smooth, silky marbled meat), and parmesan (nutty, sharp). Unfortunately, the porchetta was not available except as panini ($12). Coowners Robert Pascucci and Stephanie Savchuk stated that in the future, they may make it available by the pound as well. I hope that happens.

I went home with a round of smoked goat ricotta ($12/8 oz.) and a pound of fresh bucatini ($6.50).

The cheese was very smoky around the rind and creamy rich in the center. I served it with a dip of fruity olive oil and cracked black pepper on toasted slices of rustic bread.

The bucatini just needed a few minutes in salted, boiling water. Dressed with a simple puttanesca and a shower of shaved grand padano, it was thick and nicely chewy. Fresh pasta is always a delight, and this easy, quick dinner was a perfect beginning to a cozy Saturday night at home.

I'm looking forward to a return visit to try one of their porchetta panini.

Rich Living

When I hear from several people that a restaurant is good, it's time to give it a shot. That's what brought me to San Marcos' Restaurant Row parking lot, driving around in search of the elusive Sublime Ale House. By the way, it's in the back, facing north. My daughter and I went for lunch, since I already knew that it was more than just a bar. Though I had difficulty convincing her of that!

It has a modern, rustic feel with metal and wood features throughout the restaurant. Despite the small lunch crowd, mostly families, the acoustics amplified the sound. After reading through the menu, which takes me longer with a new restaurant, we ordered some fries with truffle oil and parmesan as a starter ($7). They came with our choice of two aioli; we selected lemon basil and roasted garlic. Though tasty, I didn't notice any truffle flavor on the fries. The aiolis were a delicious addition.

In addition to the 48 beers on tap, the menu has sections proffering burgers, pizzas, salads, sandwiches, and six types of grilled cheese. What stood out from the other offerings were the number of macaroniand-cheese dishes. I suggested to the server that other than beer, the mac 'n' cheese must be what they're known for. She agreed but informed me that their burgers are also popular because the beef is ground fresh at the restaurant every day and the buns are baked in-house.

Since I don't have mac 'n' cheese every day, I went all out and chose the one called Ecstasy. The base is a gorgonzola béchamel and includes bacon, mushrooms, red bell peppers, garlic, and thyme. Knowing that it was going to be a rich dish, I ordered the smallest size ($8) and a side Caesar salad ($2). My daughter opted for a bowl of meatballs with fresh bread ($9) off of their "Small Plates" section. Still reading the menu, I noticed a number of items with locally sourced ingredients. And beer had found its way into a number of menu items, including a salad dressing, a soup, and mussels.

The bowl of meatballs was quite large, as were the meatballs! They were served with a tomato sauce and three slices of baguette. Aside from pulling out the bread right away because she didn't want it to get soggy, the dish went over well with my preteen. I was happy with the al dente noodles and the flavor of my mac 'n' cheese. However, it was very rich! Though I ordered the smallest of the three serving sizes, it was still too much for me. I think next time, I'll order the Beet Salad or Avocado Citrus Salad and split a mac 'n' cheese with the kid.

So Good For You

I've always remembered the story José Montez told me the first time I popped in here, how he had come up from Durango in Mexico and worked for a catering company, cooking 20,000 pieces of chicken and 1000 pounds of spuds every week, here in San Diego.

Then he met Patty, who had arrived from Guanajuato. Down there, she made a living selling drinks from fruit she squished outside the church in the main plaza.

They fell in love, got married, and Patty suggested, "Why not try the same thing here, set up our own business?"

Patty's Fruitland (1789 National Avenue, at Beardsley, Barrio Logan, 619-239-3085) is the result.

And whenever it's hot and I'm in need of refreshment, I come in here not for the drinks they have, but for their fruit bowl.

Fruit bowl's loaded with strawbs, banana, apple, honeydew melon, cantaloupe, pineapple, mango, papaya — nine fruits in all, plus cottage cheese on top (or yogurt or ice cream or whipped cream), plus granola, raisins, and a long drip of honey.

Or pico de gallo — the same basic assortment but with the bite of mixed chilies on top.

Ooh, man. Starting to drool. Haven't had one for months.

But today, just happen to be checking out what happened to El Porvenir (at 1786 National Avenue), opposite Patty's.

It's been closed a couple of years, but I'd been told they were going to reopen for those wicked lard-laden burritos they'd been serving since 1918. But, closed. No action yet.

I cross over to Patty's Fruitland. See if they know anything.

Inside, these guys Kip and Gareth are sitting in the red chairs hunched over plastic bowls bulging with fruit. "I'm here about once a week," says Kip. "It's, like, a health break, and tasty?"

He doesn't have to go on. I'm at the counter and already José's chop-chopping at the fruit. Everything fresh. Then, after the granola and cottage cheese and the long honeypour, we're good to go. So good, so good for you.

Only thing is now I'm feeling a bit sorry for the folks in that Guanajuato plaza. Our gain has been their loss.

Brewery on the Hill

It's only been open for a week, so this isn't intended as a conclusive verdict on the self-styled "first gay brewery" that's owned by the company in charge of Mo's and Betty's. The move from nachos and sugary drinks to pizza and craft beer is a pretty dramatic one, a brief history of which was up on the Reader a little while back courtesy of Brandon Hernández.

The building that houses the HBC, formerly a Chinese restaurant, got a major overhaul. The design scheme features lots of openness and a vague border between inside and outside. Guests, as far as I could tell, were able to flow in and out of the building at will and servers had to track them down. While novel and somewhat liberating, the service model definitely is going to take a little getting used to by the staff. The brewpub started out with an already dedicated and lively fan base in the form of the Hillcrest gay community, which frequents the company's other watering holes on the regular. In fact, there is a little shuttle that will drive revelers between the four places under the same ownership. This has got to be one of the stranger practices in modern restaurant culture, but it seems to work.

As mentioned by Brandon, HBC will be selling a lot of its own beer. The draft list includes a few options produced in-house and a selection of other, quality brews from local brewers such as Stone and Lost Abbey. There's basically no way around the fact that the first round of beers to come out of the HBC operation were terrible.

I tried a blonde ale that was drinkable but had the dirtywater taste that I associate strongly with Natty Ice. It wasn't terrible, but it was far from good. Lucy's Ale, a 4 percent ABV session beer, came with a cute story attached. The brewer is apparently really into animals and he put together a brew that combined all the grains that his pet raccoon, Lucy, liked to munch on in the homebrew days. No raccoons were included in the brewing process, as far as I know, but the resultant brown ale was probably the best of the bunch, although it was still underwhelming. The worst brew was the Brain Lubricant. Billed as a strong ale, some friends of mine whom I encountered by chance described it as "nail polish remover." Acetone is non-delicious in beer and a seemingly common error in novice brewing.

Despite how this is starting to sound, I don't mean to pour Haterade all over the Hillcrest Brewing Company. Like anything, they'll take some time to get on their feet. Far from consigning the fledgling brewery to the scrap heap, I anticipate that HBC will learn from this initial foible in brewing and come back twice as strong.

Now, to say something nice, the pizza was very good! Despite the fact that everything on the menu (and the beers as well) gets saddled with suggestive, if not downright raunchy, names, the menu had some appetizing choices on it. Seriously, though, a "meat packer" pizza with "girth-aroni" on it is about the most egregiously named piece of food I've seen lately.

I tried a "snappy clam digger" pizza, which had chopped clams, lardons of bacon, and lots of cheese layered over a garlicky white sauce. There was way too much thyme on the pizza, but other than that the generous amount of shellfish and cured pork made for a tasty pie. Likewise, an allveggie special pizza looked good despite its woeful lack of meats and cheeses.

As the menu is priced now, a trip to HBC is expensive. A couple rounds of beer and a small pizza for each of two diners ran the bill up to $75 with tax and tip. That outpaces even upscale pizza joints like BLAH, and as of now the HBC is definitely not on par with the Blind Lady, gay hang-out or otherwise.

But, hey, the future is wide open and perhaps, if management is receptive to feedback from the local community, the Hillcrest Brewing Company will fulfill the potential that a great location and a doubtlessly massive financial backing gave it.

Hillcrest Brewing Company, 1458 University Avenue. by Ian Pike

Crest Café, a Hillcrest staple, is celebrating 30 years in business this year. Because of that, my expectation was that the food there would be a little dated, that the restaurant had operated on institutional credibility more than an ability to stay relevant. It's not like that isn't a valid strategy that appeals to a certain demographic, but I found the Crest Café has kept up with the times well.

Truth be told, there was a slightly retro vibe going on inside, but it was subdued and managed to tread the fine line between hip and kitschy. Also, despite the rainbow-clad restaurant's appeal to the Hillcrest gay scene, the dining room had a pretty diverse crowd during breakfast. Basically, my expectations were way off, which I liked. It's not that I found the scenario preferable to what I'd envisioned. I just like to be surprised within the confines of an industry that tends toward predictability.

The breakfast menu had a lot of interesting variations on classic breakfasts. I was tempted by power pancakes ($9.25) that had cottage cheese, blackberries, and almonds somehow worked into whole wheat pancakes. Likewise, the bacon pancakes topped with eggs ($9.25) appealed strongly to my penchant for artful use of bacon. In the end, I opted for an artichoke-and-ham strata ($9.95). The dish was really a savory bread pudding. Artichoke hearts and ham had been bound together with sourdough cubes and a light custard. The portion was reasonable and the mountain of fresh fruit that served as a side dish made things seem healthier. Often, we eat terrible breakfasts, as I just read in a Men's Health online article, and finding something a little more reserved than a massive stack of pancakes and sausage can change the way we approach the day. I felt like the "strata" gave me a little indulgence and a little temperance at the same time.

Price was the main sticking point for the Crest Cafe's breakfast. Since all the items were pushing (or exceeding) the ten-dollar margin, it would be difficult to make the place a regular breakfast spot. Still, it felt justifiable as an occasional step up from typical coffeeshop fare.

Ribbon Cut, Doors Open

Friday afternoon, mayor Jerry Sanders wielded his giant novelty scissors, snapping them shut on a yellow ribbon on the threshold of the new White Labs tasting room (9495 Candida Street). The symbolic gesture marked the official grand opening of the Miramar-based company's first-of-its-kind bar, which I wrote about on the dawn of its soft-open period back in March. Back then, the tasting bar had been fully constructed but was a work-in-progress from an interior-design standpoint. Everything is now in place and looks sharp, especially with a crowd of beer lovers taking up every inch of square footage.

When addressing the suds-hungry masses, Sanders — who, over the course of his mayoral tenure, has been a vocal proponent for the San Diego brewing industry — gave big-time props to White Lab owners Chris and Lisa White. In doing so, he recalled a meeting with Jim Koch, where the founder of the Boston Beer Company (the largest craft brewery in the U.S., which most people better know as Sam Adams) touted White Labs as the best yeast producers in North America.

Most brewers agree. The figures aren't readily available, but the majority of brewing-industry insiders speculate that White Labs is the number one yeast-production company in the country. They are as much a part of the fabric of the San Diego brew scene as any of the breweries in the county.

The component they add to the beers that shape the scene — yeast — is the primary provider of the flavors unique to each style of beer they are used to produce. Thanks to the establishment of the White Labs tasting room, this fact is now on display for beer drinkers to easily experience. Flights of beers made using the same recipe but different strands of yeast can be sampled there, and the variance in each is dramatic, not only in taste, but aroma and appearance as well.

Sanders referenced his own experience in learning the differences in yeast characteristics under the tutelage of the Whites. He also commented that what White Labs does is as sophisticated as anything going on in the biotech industry and labeled their business as a cornerstone of what he called "brewtech," a segment of local business that continues to grow and thrive.

This is the first year the Del Mar Fair staged "Cantautor Latino," a contest that awarded $6000 to the top three artists who turned in the "best solo performance of an original song in Spanish." First place won $3000, second

Olmeda was informed by contest coordinator Nelly Cervantes that his song "Mi Casa Es Su Casa" made him a top-ten finalist. Those ten artists were asked to play a 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. showcase at the fair on June 17. After that show, the top three would be

First place went to Oscar Muñoz of Chula Vista. Possibly the most recognized participant in the contest was Carlos Olmeda, who has supchosen by a panel of judges.

"In the subsequent days, she informed me in no uncertain terms that I would have to arrive at the special-events trailer no later than 2:45 p.m."

Olmeda says that Cervantes told him she would provide a golf cart to take him and his equipment to the performance area, but he needed to be there by 2:45. "She said, 'I'll meet you there.' I thought that was great because that would give me an hour to be ready for my 3:50 slot.... I called my brother Toca [who backs Jason Mraz as a percussionist and was planning to back his brother for this show] and said that I still had a shot and could he come down to City Heights to rehearse. He was gracious enough to come from Escondido two times."

Olmeda says he and Toca arrived at the special-events trailer at 2:35, ten minutes early.

'The nice administrator behind the desk was kind enough to call Ms. Cervantes. The nice administrator said, 'Ms. Cervantes says the contest was over. I'm sorry.' I calmly said to the nice lady the director of the event gave me specific instructions to be standing in front of you no later than 2:45. I asked to speak on the phone with Ms. Cervantes." Olmeda eventually got to speak with Cervantes. Olmeda recounted what Cervantes told him. "I'm so sorry, the contest is over. The last person finished

All I could hear in my head was, If you want, you can sing a song about love between all the Latin cultures and the human race, right after I stabbed you in the back. The next five minutes was like having a terrible nightmare and knowing that for many simple reasons, I couldn't scream. I told her, 'But, Nelly, you said specifically to be at the trailer no later than...' Then she said, 'Oh, we were going to disqualify you anyway because a woman who works for the fair and had a fair identification said she was your mother.' "Why didn't someone take down any info about the ghost of my deceased mother? What is this employee's name?"

Good question. But no answers. Numerous calls to Cervantes, Luis Valdivia (director of marketing), and Linda Zweig (media director) were not returned.

Olmeda said Valdivia eventually contacted him and admitted that giving him a 3:50 set time was a mistake. According to Olmeda, Cervantes told Valdivia that she told him to be there at 2:30, not 2:45. "Mr. Valdivia said that although the ghost story was a miscommunication, there was no malice intended and that, to the contrary, she

A Life Worth Imitating.

"At the Del Mar Fair? We played to what they said was one of the biggest crowds ever. We were on the stage in front of the grandstand." Dylan Hyde calls from the Chrissy Field studios in Spring Valley. "People were right in front and all along the sides and around the big fountain." He fronts an eightpiece. "It was awesome."

Things are heating up for the 15-year-old pop crooner from Santee. "I've got Teen Hoot coming up in Nashville, and then we're gonna go on tour." Chrissy Field, his label, will release his debut full-length in October; so far, a pair of singles have been released on iTunes. Hyde also stars in the web TV series Amazed. And then there's the endorsement deal he just landed with Barnabas clothturer. "Every month, we try to exemplify someone who is living that lifestyle." Hyde, it turns out, has what some might consider an occupational handicap to his chosen line of work: he is partially

"It's our main tag line," says Alex Aquino, president and CEO of the Pasadenabased clothing manufacdeaf. In June, he posted a YouTube video that said as much.

Using a series of handwritten flash cards, Hyde revealed that he has been hearing-disabled since birth. "My hearing impairment has affected my speech and made it hard for me to relate to others," says one card. Another card reveals that he will need to undergo more surgery in the coming months. The video ends with Hyde stepping up to a microphone and covering a Sigur Ros tune.

"So, I'm relearning English," Hyde laughs. "I'm learning words I heard incorrectly as a child that were not words at all." He explains that the congenital issue was in both ears. "[Doctors] did the right one first, and it came out good. Then they did the left one, and something went wrong. It doesn't work at all, but the right one works even better now.

For your ears only: all crawlers need some cheese in their nightlife diet, and Little Italy supper club Anthology will be serving up a killer block of aged cheddar when it stages "Shaken Not Stirred: The Music of James Bond." Yes way. Boston-based pianist Ted Howe & Company will "swizzle and sizzle, reinventing the beloved music from the James Bond legacy to skyrocket you through decades of classics — no need for an ejector seat or gadget from Q." Eesh. Anyway, the evening's selections (top secret, of course) will feature vocalists Cheryl Bentyne of the Manhattan Transfer and L.A. jazz staple Sweet Baby J'ai... Follow your cheese with some greazy treats right down the street at Casbah, where Avalon Tattoo celebrates another year of inking you up, SanDago, with barroom rock by Makeup Sex, Los Loaded Saints, Focke Wolves, and Grampa Drew. Stuck-up town — I mean, stuck uptown and feel like banging your cabeza, TJ hardcore hits Days of Struggle will take the stage at Ché Café after SoCal straightedgers OnexChoice.

n June, Robin Roth was named music director of 91X FM. Roth is the midday host on the alternative-music station. She joined the on-air staff in 1986 and worked steadily for nearly 20 years. Then she "went to Rock 105.3," she says, "for a little over three years." Roth returned to 91X in 2010.

Roth was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. She moved to San Diego with her family at the age of 15 and graduated from Patrick Henry High School in Del Cerro. "Then, onto the real world of college at UCSD, she writes in her 91X bio, "where I actually studied my butt off and double majored in drama and communications. I was an undeclared major for a few years, but the acting bug had bitten me very early in life so I knew that in some

HOW DID THE JOB COME ABOUT?

"After Capone left and Christy [Taylor] moved to the program director position from music director, I volunteered to help out at music meetings, and one thing led to another."

HOW MUCH DAY-TO-DAY INFLUENCE DOES THE MUSIC DIRECTOR HAVE OVER THE 91X PLAYLIST?

"The music director at 91X has as much influence as the program director. It comes down to what we decide together. We don't always agree, but we work it out. This is the first time in 91X history, by the way, that two women have been in these positions at the same time."

YOU SAY YOU AND TAYLOR WORK OUT YOUR DISAGREEMENTS — HOW?

"There are boxing gloves in the office. I'm not kidding. That's what we do. We bring out the gloves."

WILL YOU BRING ANY CHANGES TO

"[Choosing music for airplay is] not rocket science," says 91X's Robin Roth. "I always go with my gut."

THE MUSIC PROGRAMMING?

"I like where things are right now. So, as of right now, no. The thing I'm looking to see is if we can play a little more new music on the weekends. Plus, we have this feature called 'The 91X Local Break.' That's where a local band gets played for a month. Right now, it's Oliver Trolley. In the past, we've aired the New Regime, Family Wagon, Low Volts, Little Hurricane, and one of my favorites, Grand Tarantula. We're on the prowl for bands from TJ, so we're putting out the word. We're thinking of maybe including one of them as a 'Local Break.'"

WHAT STATIONS DO YOU SEE AS DI-RECT COMPETITION? AND HOW WILL YOU PROGRAM AGAINST THEM?

"There are several stations that share the same '80s-'90s music. My job and my goal is to make sure that we continue to represent the brand that is 91X in San Diego."

that is 91X in San Diego." HOW DO YOU GUYS CHOOSE MUSIC

"That question cracks me up. It's not rocket science. Christy and I decide together. I always go with my gut. Plus, we keep an eye on what's selling in San Diego."

DOES SOME OF THAT INTEL COME FROM MUSIC BLOGGERS?

"I look at Pitchfork every single day. In fact, it's one of the websites I look at a couple of times a day. And, I look at what people are posting on Facebook and Twitter."

ARE YOU SURPRISED WHEN A RECORD YOU REALLY BELIEVE IN DOESN'T WORK?

"Yeah. Like, when a club killer clears the floor? Yeah." She laughs. "But, sometimes that changes after people have heard a new song a few times...they start to like it." ■

BY WILLIAM CRAIN

Sometime in 2001, I was at a party in San Francisco when someone introduced me to Jason Hammel, one-half of the keyboardsdrums duo Mates of State, which had recently moved to the Bay Area and was gathering buzz on the local scene. He told me that he and his bandmate, Kori Gardner, were about to get married. He seemed like such a nice guy and so genuinely happy that I felt caught up in his good fortune. I went to see the band soon after that and watched this young couple, obviously in love, harmonizing together on songs that were almost comically upbeat and exuberant. Much of the audience seemed to be going through what I went through at the party. They were caught up in Hammel and Gardner's happiness.

More than ten years later, Hammel and Gardner are indie-rock veterans. They moved to Connecticut long ago, and they're still married, and when you follow Mates of State, you're still caught up in their relationship. For years, Gardner wrote the blog Band on the Diaper Run on the parenting site Babble. com, where she would document the joys and absurdities of touring around the world with the couple's two little girls. Gardner now runs a business that provides nannies for the children of touring artists.

But from a listener's point of view, the biggest change can be heard in the music. Compare 2011's Mountaintops to the band's early releases and you'll find that both Hammel and Gardner's voices sound deeper, their songwriting much richer. Final track "Mistakes" has them harmonizing on the line "I need you," and maybe they're singing about themselves, maybe not. I don't know. I'm caught up in the music alone.

BY DAVE GOOD

The guitars spit like grilled pork and the vocalist sounds as if he got his music training at skateboard camp. For a punk band, perfect! Otherwise, the Wastrels are hard to place. Eastern Europe? Ireland? Nope. The band claims to have roots in Cincinnati and South Texas but is actually home-based in Lemon Grove. That's an East San Diego neighborhood known for the giant concrete lemon on display next to the train tracks. One step to the south and you're in Paradise Hills. which is anything but.

Soundwise, the Wastrels are a fit with other underground miscreants such as Butt Trumpet and Social Spit. You say you haven't heard of them? That's because they don't play many hometown gigs. In fact, for a while the Wastrels ceased playing. From the band's Myspace page: "Anthony is joining the navy so we all wish him luck with that shit (crazy fucker). It was good having him around, he did a bad ass job while he was with us. The rest of us are not planning on stopping completely, but we'll be giving it a little break for some time. After that, we'll need a new drummer, so if your interested, let us know." Well, they found one, and they're back.

After parting ways with cofounding member Jelly, the current lineup is singer Joshy Wastrel, Lil' Jonny Cuz and Rockbottom on guitars, Drewski on bass, and drummer Mordy da Gordy. This is the latest information available: for all anybody knows, things could have changed again. The Wastrels are road warriors with an album that has a filthy title (Y Que Puto) and a disdain for social networking. They have a Facebook page, but there is very little on it.

This I find oddly reassuring. They're a band stuck on doing '90s So-Cal hardcore punk, and my bet is that they still photocopy their own gig posters and staple them to telephone poles.

Nick Bone & the Big Scene, Johnny Castle, and Bandits also perform.

THE WASTRELS: Shakedown. Thursday. July 19, doors 8 p.m. 619-804-9523. $5.

The band sounds comfortable as they move through the mellow breeze of this record. "Mayla" has some lovely guitar work, playful bass, and delicate group vocals. The album's opener, "Man on Fire," would fit well on the first record, but as good a song as it is, the lyrics at times fall into some hippie clichés: "I want the whole damn world to come dance with me." "That's What's Up" has the Jade/Alexander shared leads of their earlier hit "Home," but it falls short in the sugary allure of its predecessor — like Here, which is a strong record outshined by the potent nature of its older brother.

FM 94/9's Sandy Parts Festival By Marcus Perez

In its third year of existence, the annual FM 94/9 concert took place at the Oceanside Pier for what was titled the FM 94/9 SPF (Sandy Parts Festival). Headlined by producer-turnedartist Santigold, the lineup included a mix of indie, pop, dance, R&B, and reggae.

Overcast weather did not put a damper on the excitement of the all-ages crowd. The up-and-coming indie-pop fourpiece Electric Guest provided an impressive kickoff to the sold-out show. Small in stature, lead singer Asa Taccone's vocal range was a pleasant surprise. Sin City band Imagine Dragons followed and behind their radio-friendly hit "It's Time," the alt-rock quartet put on a decent performance. Next up, from New Zealand, was the post-punk five-piece the Naked and Famous ("Young Blood"). This having been their second appearance here in less than a year, there is no question they have received an abundance of support from San Diegans.

Santigold took center stage just before 9 p.m., with African-dressed backup dancers, and headlined an overall entertaining show. Santigold's diverse music was an appropriate ending to a diverse festival. However, her talent stands alone in the music world of today.

The Quarterly is a next-level gourmet food and craft beer tasting that pushes beyond the basics. South Park neighbors and fellow bon vivants

Scot Blair (San Diego's premier craft beer bar impresario and certified Cicerone) and Ricardo Heredia (one of San Diego's most celebrated and creative farm-to-table chefs) aim is to build cuisine on techniques both classic and cutting edge presented via thematic menus celebrating everything from entire beasts and seasons to concepts as abstract as the vernal equinox, a color, a region, an emotion or a unique moment in time. As for the beer, abandon all expectations. It's simple ... yet anything but. It's The Quarterly.

Satanic Schemer

"Talk'st thou to me of ifs! Thou art a traitor: Off with his head!"

OW IS THE WINTER OF OUR DISCONTENT MADE GLORIOUS SUMMER BY THIS SON OF YORK..." Jay Whittaker screams his first entrance as Richard III with such strained ferocity you'd think his audience sat across Balboa Park in the Starlight Bowl. Slope-shouldered with a feeble left arm — but not humpbacked — Whittaker wears a brace down his left leg. He does a one-legged goose step — like half a Hitler — and moves with fits and sudden jerks, speaks in a shrill, screechy cackle, and cavorts like a spoiled brat.

Whittaker's opening-night performance was an acquired taste. Just about every move, early on, had a calculated, fingernails-on-the-blackboard intent, but had yet to become engrained. He came in full bore and was obviously working hard to be a world-class irritant.

This isn't the expected Richard III, a satanic schemer trailing clouds of evil. This is more a manic gargoyle, ripped from the façade of a gothic cathedral. Though hindered by deformities, he's far more active than anyone else (he loves to "bustle"). It's clear that, since he "cannot prove a lover," his plots have an almost sexual appeal. It's also clear that nothing recharges his battery more than evil itself.

Richard claims to be "subtle." Whittaker is not. But once he settles in, his zig-zaggy, loose-cannon performance could serve the text better than more somber readings. Under Lindsay Posner's smart direction (not counting sight-line problems), Whittaker portrays severe psychological deformity. He recalls various dictators, but also conjures up Ted Bundy and Jeffrey Dahmer. The Duke of Gloucester's a serial killer who slashes his way to the crown.

For Richard III, Shakespeare wrote a star vehicle for a black hole. Richard boasts he will woo and wed Lady Anne (whose husband and father Richard has slain) — and does it in one of theater's most brilliant scenes. He systematically eliminates whoever stands next in line, including an extraordinary turnabout with soft-spoken Lord Hastings: "Talk'st thou to me of ifs! Thou art a traitor: Off with his head!"

Fortune's wheel spins as swiftly. In the instant Richard becomes king, the wheel 180s, and he flips from archer to bullseye.

Dr. Faustus made a pact with the devil for 24 years of worldly power and pleasure. In a way, Richard makes a pact with the audience. He brags and shares his plans. When he falls from seemingly godlike control to chaos, the pact breaks, allies fall away as enemies did before, and he becomes increasingly alone. In the end, no one will come to his aid, not even a horse.

Whittaker's at his best with Richard's paranoia. His claw-like grasp, once firm, is now oily. No creature loves him, he says, and no one will pity him because he never pitied himself. But in the end, he has an admirable moment: "I have set my life upon a cast,/ And I will stand the hazard of the die."

Richard's like a photographic negative of the world around him. And the broken pact severs a strange connection. His soliloquies play like confessions — or, better still, anti-confessions. Which makes us, what? Anti-priests? Who does this diabolical villain, this "carnal cur," think we are? And just how complicit have we been?

The Old Globe gives the play a spare, modern-dress look. Graffiti in several languages covers tall, concrete slabs. Huge eyes in the rear like those at UCSD's Ché Café — add a Big Brother touch. For the second half, Times Squaresized billboards resemble ads for a summer blockbuster: Richard III: First Blood. Deidre Clancy's costumes delineate character. But their many shades of brown also serve as foils for Richard's showy, outsized garb.

Ralph Funicello's flexible set allows for intimacy and room enough to stage the Battle of Bosworth Field (1485), where Richard dies and the Plantagenet dynasty with him. It's also the one place where the modern-dress concept breaks down: the soldiers fire automatic weapons, so instead of asking for a horse, you'd half expect Richard to shout, "My kingdom for a Humvee!"

After the battle, the Earl of Richmond (as Henry VII he'll begin the reign of the House of York) asks a telling question: "What men of name are slain on either side?" At least 15,000 soldiers fought that day. Stanley, Earl of Derby, mentions only four, all nobles.

The play's a bit like that. Many of the characters exist as set-ups for Richard's schemes. The cast fleshes them out as best they can: in particular, Robert Foxworth's patient Hastings; Happy Anderson's guilt-clogged Clarence; Dana Green's irate Elizabeth (grandmother of Queen Elizabeth I); and Robin Moseley's whitehaired, prophetic Margaret (though she'd have been better served if they trimmed her lengthy speeches; the production made few, if any, cuts to a long script).

Jesse Jensen and Matthew Bellows give life to Richard's lieutenants, Catesby and Ratcliffe (who resemble Michael Corleone's Rocco and Neary in Godfather II). They, along with Francis Lovell, have been commemorated in a doggerel: "The Cat, the Rat/ And Lovell our Dog/ Rule all England/ Under an Hog." ■

Coming Attractions

Back in the '50s, the Desert Knight Hotel was a Palm Springs hideaway for the "Twilight set," closeted film stars. Zsa Zsa Gerschick's world premiere comedy takes a look back, 30 years later. The script displays her knack for one-liners and the premise is an attraction. What the often visually static play needs is less talk and more theatricality, Act Two in particular, where everyone feels compelled to set the record straight and the story stumbles. Individual performances perk up the uneven writing: Samantha Ginn plays a hallucinated Anita Bryant (who may be hallucinating as well); Benjamin Cole as Donovan Tate, a tower of cross-dressed glitz; and Robin Christ as Veronica Scott, ex-over-the-top star who through-lines from vitriolic villain into a reluctant hero. Worth a try. MOXIE THEATRE 6663 FL CAION BL SUITE N COLLEGE AREA 858-598-7620, 8PM THURSDAYS, 8PM FRIDAYS, 8PM SATURDAYS, 2PM SUNDAYS, THROUGH JULY 1

Harmony, Kansas

In Anna K. Jacobs (music) and Bill Nelson's (book and lyrics) world premiere musical, Heath has a farm in rural Kansas. On the outside, he's a hard-working Kansan. Inside the farmhouse he lives with his partner of four years, Julian, who wants to join a group of gay men who sing on Monday nights. Then they want to sing in public. The musical's slow to take shape. But blessed by a knockout production at Diversionary, it evolves into a funny, warm-spirited, ultimately touching evening. Director James Vasquez and an outstanding ensemble cast make it hard to imagine the show being better served. Critic's Pick. Hoodoo Love

Young Toulou, an aspiring singer, lives in a shack near Memphis famed Beale Street. In Katori Hall's "play with blues music," she finds her artistic voice through shards of heartbreak. Hoodoo Love unfolds like a fable with a brutal underside. It also unfolds as if unsure where to go next, and the characters are often sketchy. The script has highs and lows (when the former, under Nataki Garrett's direction, powerfully so). But Mo'olelo Performing Arts has made a find who trumps the troubles. Jasmine Hughes gives a special performance as Toulou. She reacts with the elastic chakras of a little girl. She digs deep, often going from zero to 200 at light speed. Toulou yearns, suffers, and grows, and her final song packs in all the dues she paid to sing it. Worth a trv.

Waltz: Love and Consequences

A window fan blows the heat out of a sweltering Toronto kitchen as Michelle Williams kneels on the floor, her cheek pressed against the glowing oven door, her heart burning with desire. Happily married doesn't always mean happily ever after, and the tension between the two sets the tone for an unordinary journey through the summer of a young, even childlike bride who is suddenly confronted with the prospect of infidelity.

Williams floats between her fiveyear marriage to cookbook author Seth Rogen and her attraction to new neighbor Luke Kirby, the man ultimately responsible for consummating the most memorable zipless fuck of her life. And while Kirby might make Williams regret her decision to marry young, he's no heavy homewrecker. The only villain in the piece is human emotion.

You never know what writer-director Sarah Polley's characters are going to do next, and it's that unpredictability of love (and its consequences) that drives her latest story. Williams continues her unbroken string of flawless performances, and if Hollywood can keep Rogen away from Judd Apatow and comic books, he just might have the makings of a leading man. With Sarah Silverman and a full-frontal shower scene that's bound to set tongues wagging.

Best Entries to 48 Hour Film Project to Screen at UltraStar Poway

Armed with little more than three required elements (a TV newsperson named Gary or Gretta Greenberg, a cell phone, and the line, "Where are we going?") and a two-day shooting schedule, the best entries for this year's 48 Hour Film Project are ready to be unveiled to a paying public.

In 2011, nearly 60,000 filmmakers in 96 cities on 6 continents submitted 4000 films. This year they plan to go even bigger, with filmmakers from across the globe competing to write, shoot, edit, and score a short film in just 48 hours.

This year, the folks at 48HFP San Diego were gracious (crazy?) enough to ask this reporter to judge the winning entries. The awards will be handed out at 8:30 p.m. on July 8 at the Brigantine, 13445 Poway Road, preceded at 5 p.m. by a "Best Of" screening at UltraStar Poway. Tickets are $12; visit 48hourfilm.com for more info.

Blogfight: Rock of Ages

MOVIES

My mind was set on skipping Rock of Ages altogether until Licko-na brought out the bomb. He went so far as calling Julianne Hough and Tom Cruise a "plasticine nymphoid" and "ageless nostalgia bot," respectively.

Then this headline caught my attention: "Tom Cruise Has Worst Opening Weekend Ever with Rock of Ages" That's like saying, "Come and get me!"

A part of me wanted to see just how bad it was, but with the public staying away in droves and the majority of critics standing in line to shoot it down, something told me this might be another under-appreciated gem like Earth Girls Are Easy or Showgirls. (Ultimately, it's not as satirically satisfying as either.)

Monday night a friend and I, both banking on making an early exit, had the big Grossmont pretty much to ourselves. The presentation was as good as any I've witnessed in San Diego: 60 feet of screen and not so much as a centimeter out of focus.

Why the initial resistance to the picture? As much as I enjoyed director Adam Shankman's previous musical,

Take This Waltz features another flawless performance from Michelle Williams.

Hairspray, this looked like an excuse to cash in on Glee. It's bad enough that 80 percent of the pictures that play theaters nowadays look like television, do they have to feel like it, too?

Imagine my delight to find the film's main source of inspiration not a small-screen variety show (or Coyote Ugly), but the venerable early'60s rock musical Bye, Bye Birdie. I half-expected Catherine Zeta-Jones's Heavy Metal-hating mayor's wife to break into a chorus of "We Hate You, Stacee."

The story is pure corn: Midwestern girl moves to Hollywood to strike it big only to wind up working in a strip club before picking herself up by the bootstraps and hitting it big. There's not a drop of reality in this thing, something the filmmakers take great delight in. The strippers at the PG-13 dive Hough is forced to disrobe at wear more clothes than the patrons.

No matter the decade, both of Shankman's films tap into that period's bouncy ebullience just moments before the Kennedy assassination robbed America of its innocence. There's a strong knowledge of and affection for the era and it shows in the background detail that's lovingly revealed with every sleek move of the camera

And what camerawork! Not since The Sorcerer's Apprentice, also photographed by Bojan Bazelli (King of New York, The Rapture, The Ring) has a film with this deadly a script looked so good. Add to it production designer Jon Hutman's remarkable studio mock-up of Sunset Boulevard c. 1987 and it's unlikely you'll find a better looking picture this year.

Sparkling cinematography and luxuriant production design do not a masterwork make, and while Rock of Ages is far from high art, the film confirmed the ethereal beauty of sets constructed of plaster and wood, not pixels and avatars.

My eyes were so occupied that the dreadful parade of '80s songs barely registered. Cruise hands in another confident star performance. How much of a stretch is it to switch from egotistical movie star to self-absorbed rock god?

Bonus points: Raccoon-tailed Paul Giamatti steals every scene he's in and the entire pace kicks into overdrive when a professional singer (Mary J. Blige) enters the picture.

Remember what I just wrote next time one of you decides to chastise me with, "Can't you ever sit back and enjoy a film without ripping it apart?" I give you Rock of Ages.

MOVIE LISTINGS

All reviews are by David Elliott, Matthew Lickona, John Rubio, Scott Marks, and Duncan Shepherd. Priorities are indicated by one to five stars and antipathies by the black spot. Unrated movies are for now unreviewed. Thousands of past reviews sorted alphabetically, by year of release, and by rating are available online at SanDiegoReader.com.

Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter —

Perhaps surprisingly, Abraham Lincoln: Vampire Hunter is not just a showcase for director Timur Bekmambetov's relentless and varied barrage of combat-related special effects. (This is one of those films where 3-D really makes a difference, perhaps especially in its treatment of vampire eyes. We're a long way from Twilight's red contacts.) Perhaps even more surprisingly, it's also not a campy gorefest looking for some historical cachet to give it airs. The actors give it something close to their all, and Seth Grahame-Smith's screenplay is deadly serious about making the battle against vampires an integral part of Lincoln's (and even America's) ascendance. Naturally, history suffers in the process, as do vampire lore and the laws of physics. Still, there's something high and solemn about the rampant absurdity, and I found myself thinking that this is the sort of film the old Hammer Films people might have made if they had CGI and Wikipedia. 2012. - M.L.

Battleship - Might as well call it Bullship.Aliens arrive during 14-nation fleet exercises off Hawaii. Despite the aliens' superior technology, the Navy booze-brat Taylor Kitsch mans up to lead our forces, while his wow girlfriend Brooklyn Decker leads our land attack with a leg-less Army veteran and a science nerd. WWII swabbies pitch in, firing up the battleship Missouri (a museum for 20 years). It's enough to make Steven (Under Siege) Seagal explode in envy. Lavish effects. clunky lines, and dismal acting make this tasty junk. 2012. — D.E.

Bernie — Jack Black is the life-based but rather cartoonish Bernie, a sweet, dapper, fussy (read: gay) undertaker in Carthage, Texas. He is an angel disguised as an oddball, loved by all, even (for a time) the mean widow Marjorie (Shirley MacLaine). Director Richard Linklater provides a cozy jacket of style, is patronizingly fond of local yokels, and handles dark aspects (murder, prejudice) with tongs of whimsy. It is Black's movie, a quaint package of Southern Gothic with a Coen Brothers flavor. 2012. - D.E.

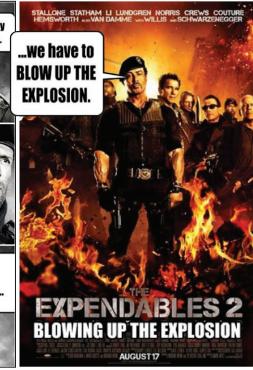

The Best Exotic Marigold Hotel - Or, Grand Hotel meets Downton Abbey in the old Merchant & Ivory curry kitchen. An aging bunch of swell Brits (though Penelope Wilton is a sour pickle) gather at a pretty, decaying hotel in Udaipur, India, for sunset lessons in living. It is very tidy and quaintly

The Big Lebowski — There are actually two Lebowskis, a big one and a little one, a multimillionaire philanthropist and a lazy, laid-back bowler, both christened Jeffrey; and when the latter - who prefers to be addressed as "the is mistaken for the other by a pair of dim-bulb thugs, he is pulled into an apparent kidnapping plot of rapidly deepening complexity: "a lot of ins, a lot of outs, a lot of what-have-yous." The Coen brothers, writer-director Joel and writer-producer Ethan, are here having fun with, among other things, complexity per se. Fun with the very idea of complexity. Fun with the concrete and mountainous evidence of complexity. And one of the richest sources of fun, played off in the sharpest contrast to complexity, is the glorious spectrum of stupidity on exhibit: the dope-addled but gropingly rational Dude (Jeff Bridges); the big lug who is always absolutely sure he is right in spite of the fact that he has never been right yet (John Goodman); the woolgatherer who falls behind in the slowest of conversations (Steve Buscemi): the several teams of hired "muscle" (all brawn, no brains), one team of which are self-styled Nihilists; the nympho bimbo; the adolescent jovrider who afterwards forgets his corrected homework ("Use a dictionary," "Spelling") in the abandoned car. The complexity is no illusion. It is right there in front of us in frightening and multiplying detail. It brutally illuminates the stupidity. And at the same time it forms the philosophical foundation for a broad and accepting, if aloof and frosty, view of humankind. The Coens - who better? who else? - are able to make wonderful sport of deadbeats and boneheads from the high ground of diligence and ingenuity. They never play "down" to the audience. They demand effort and intelligence, and they reward these by the truckload: lively characterizations, flavorful dialogue, dense atmosphere, clever and convoluted plotting, rich and welldeveloped themes, abundant allusions, "in" jokes, grace notes, and red herrings, each element teamed with the others in common purpose. Julianne Moore, David Huddleston, Sam Elliott, Peter Stormare, Ben Gazzara, John Turturro, Jimmie Dale Gilmore. 1998. — D.S.

Brave — With another wild-haired royal at the helm (and only one-tenth of Tangled's wit, charm, and stereoscopic invention), Pixar's latest amounts to little more than Rapunzel redux. What begins as a standard Disney fairy princess outing takes a turn for the better halfway through, when a magic spell converts one of the film's characters into an creature whose plush representation should be a big seller at Toys 'R' Us. Sadly, it's too little, too late as directors Mark Andrews and Brenda Chapman do nothing to exploit the Freudian possibilities inherent within the metamorphosis. Fans of classic Disney will rejoice in a dancing broom reminiscent of Fantasia and a woodcarving witch who functions as Grandma Geppetto. but imitation has never before been Pixar's stock-in-trade. We are spared the usual glut of excruciating songs — and Kelly Macdonald is the only actress alive capable of doing Merida's voice justice — but this marks Pixar's second clinker in a row. Featuring the vocal talents of Billy Connolly, Emma Thompson, Julie Walters, and Robbie Coltrane. 2012. — S.M.

A Clockwork Orange — Anthony Burgess's vision of the ultra-violent future (the novelist's linguistic inventions are carefully preserved and provide the movie with its strongest prop) becomes, in film form, wholly a pander to the youth market. Stanley Kubrick's frost-bitten, arm-waving, gimmicky direction seems very nearly distraught, willing to try almost anything, just so long as it's leering or lascivious and so long as it's certain not to go over anybody's head. With Malcolm McDowell. 1971. — D.S.

tribute to the TV goth soaper, with Johnny Depp fully committed as the heavily made-up vampire Barnabas. Their devotion is real, but the film is a rummage of poor gags and plot fragments that add up to little. It has campy design touches, corny creep-outs, vivid women (Michelle Pfeiffer, Bella Heathcote, witty Helena Bonham Carter, vampy witch Eva Green), and an aura of wasted expenditure. With Jackie Earle Haley, Christopher Lee, and a tiny cameo by the late Jonathan Frid, the definitive Barnabas. 2012. — D.E.

The Dictator — Sacha Baron Cohen plays "Admiral-General" Aladeen, the brutal dictator of a fictional Middle Eastern country who finds himself stranded in Manhattan after a case of mistaken identity. From the outset, much of the humor relies on sequences of shtick that outlast their wit. Behind the guise of political satire, the movie attempts to gain immunity from its offensiveness. Most scenes reach beyond stupidity to the point of verbal assault, such as those involving rape and pedophilia. The audience members become subjects to a kind of comedic dictatorship: laugh or shut up. 2012. — J.R.

Elena — Widowed Elena and her men - an indolent son and a gamy gamer of a grandson - look to her wealthy second husband to finance the vounger boy's way out of the army. From the well-appointed Moscow apartment in which she and her husband reside to her son's shabby flat down the road of a nuclear power plant. Elena lives her life on both ends of Russian society. She becomes jealous when her husband's sudden heart attack reunites him with his snappy, estranged daughter. ("Shit's gotta' be tasty. Millions of flies can't be wrong.") His refusal to help her family while constantly providing handouts to his own hedonistic child set the wheels in motion for a taut domestic drama in the Chabrol vein. Working with impeccable cinematographer Mikhail Krichman, this engrossing, resolutely-paced thriller from Andrei Zvyagintsev (The Return, The Banishment) once again shows the director to be a master of withholding information. With Nadezhda Markina, Andrey Smirnov, Aleksey Rozin, and Elena Lyadova. 2011.. — S.M.

For Greater Glory — Handsomely photographed but pious and simplistic story of the Cristeros, Mexican Catholics who fought back against a government crackdown in the 1920s. It's never really clear why the bad-guy soldiers take such delight in hanging priests, torturing children, and burning crucifixes. And it's all too clear why retired general Enrique Velarde (a wooden and sleepy Andy Garcia) decides to help out: he's tired of making soap, plus, "I believe in religious liberty." Well, o-kay then. There is a story here about the road to faith, but the scope is too broad for it to show properly, even as the perspective is too narrow. 2012. — M.L.

Headhunters — A Norwegian thriller "inspired" by American thrillers, now set for a Hollywood remake. Aksel Hennie plays a top corporate recruiter in Oslo who, to maintain the lifestyle of his tall Viking wife, steals an illicit Rubens painting. He spirals into a terrible mess, including a fully loaded outhouse. Credible actors and Morten Tyldum's fast, slick direction cannot relieve the incredible plot from its self-strangling suffocation of logic. 2012. — D.E.

Hysteria - A factually derived Britishcomedy about Victorian invention fever and sexual repression, as prim doctors devise the first vibrator to treat the perceived plague of female "hysteria." Maggie Gyllenhaal delivers a brayura performance as a feminist social worker who sees through the patronizing foolishness. Wilde and Shaw did such humor more wittily, without the jarring (even in 2012) jump from dainty chat about parsnips to a fellatio joke. Also, duck humping. Tanya Wexler directed a gifted cast: Hugh Dancy, Jonathan Pryce, Rupert Everett, Felicity Jones, Gemma Jones. 2012. — D.E.

The Intouchables — François Cluzet's resemblance to Dustin Hoffman continues. so does his subtle talent. As a rich, French quadriplegic, he is all sharp, suave nuances as a cocky new caregiver (Omar Sy) injects his limited existence with fun and warmth. Sv overplays dude-ness, but the two are amusing and touching together, and the story is not too sappy. There is a priceless moustache joke near the end. 2012. - D.E.

Madagascar 3: Europe's Most

Wanted — Or, You Can Go Home Again, But Would You Really Want To? The lion, hippo, giraffe, and zebra who escaped the Central Park Zoo and got back to Africa decide that they miss life in the Big City. They wind up joining a broke-down circus in hopes of landing a contract to tour the States, all while being pursued by a terrifying and indestructible Animal Control agent. It's pure animated formula, and the kiddies will likely roar with delight while they learn various genre tropes - action, horror, comedy, drama, you name it. We're raising a generation of sophisticated critics, and thanks to the contributions of co-screenwriter Noah Baumbach. perhaps neurotics as well. 2012. - M.L.

Magic Mike — Director Steven Soderbergh

checks off another box on his list of genre dreams by donning a banana hammock and simulating sex onstage. 2012. — M.L.

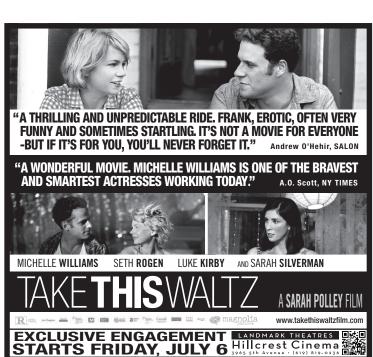

Men in Black III — A final scoop of franchise gravy ten years after the last one with good critters and effects, the gee-golly style again directed by Barry Sonnenfeld. Will Smith as agent J is getting too mature for his bouncy boyishness, and Tommy Lee Jones as sullen, snarky K is looking pickled by age. So in the time trip back to 1969, the main plot twist, Jones is replaced as a younger K by Josh Brolin, who has the drawl down but looks more like a beefier Matt Damon. It strives for breezy fun and sometimes delivers. 2012. — D.E.

Monsieur Lazhar — From French Canada, a stirringly direct, human film about an émigré Algerian who talks his way into teaching at a Montreal school. He helps repair the traumatized morale pics. This time, it's the showbiz story. featuring a minor star with bigger dreams (Channing Tatum), a young up-and-comer (Alex Pettyfer), a sleazy manager (Matthew McConaughey), the perils of the party life, and all the rest of it. A couple of twists may have made it seem worthwhile, or at least interesting: first, a measure of autobiography for former stripper Tatum, who manages the neat trick of summoning an easygoing and almost witty persona from within his gym-sculpted physique; second, the whoopwhoop hilarity of replacing cheesecake with beefcake. But despite (or perhaps because of) his past, Tatum doesn't sell the greased-up product half as well as the mesmerizing McConaughey. Cody Horn, alas, is overwhelmed by the thankless task of playing moral compass for a guy who's funding his

of students and staff after a loved teacher commits suicide. In the fine cast (the kids are beyond just acting), Mohamed Fellag as Lazhar has the power of an unpretentious life force, vulnerable but imposing. At heart, Philippe Falardeau's film is about civilization at work, one day and one child at a time. 2012. — D.E.

Moonrise Kingdom — Bookended by Benjamin Britten's stirring "Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra," this is the most subtle, supple, deftly stylized fantasy from Wes Anderson. It happens on an island where scouting sets the tone of life. Brainy, dreamy kids (Jared Gilman, Kara Hayward) flee camp and home to share a wee romance and adventures as they trek an old trail. It feels like James Thurber in a canoe looking for Huck Finn, or Groucho Marx chasing Tinkerbell. A terrific score and sly, softly whimsical design help the '30s-to-'60s ambience. Bored, jaded, or fussy adults are no match for bright kids, finding growth and liberation while still in the wonder spell of childhood, and the funny weirdness works. With Bill Murray, Ed Norton, Frances McDormand, Harvey Keitel, Bob Balaban. 2012. — D.E.

Neil Young Journeys — Jonathan Demme returns to the concert documentary, this time capturing a late-career solo show from the man who famously sang,

"It's better to burn out than to fade away." (Appropriately, it's a bookend playlist, with most of the songs hailing from circa 1970 or 2010.) Young himself may have faded a bit - certainly his voice is thinner than it used to be - but both his guitar work and his demeanor declare that the fires within continue to rage. (Even when his lyrics are at their most tender, he looks like he's snarling.) The pre-concert footage, taken on a drive from Young's hometown to Toronto's Massey Hall, serve mostly to make a regular guy out of a man famous for hounding the status quo. (The famed environmentalist admits to killing a turtle in his youth by "sticking a firecracker up its ass.") Demme's camera work matches Young quirk for quirk: a close-up of nose, mouth, and chin vs. an oddly extended repetition of the word "wife." 2012. — M.L.

People Like Us — According to the terms of his estranged father's will, Chris Pine must deliver $150,000 in a shaving kit to Elizabeth Banks, the 30-year-old sister he didn't know existed. Initially reluctant to hand over the cash to Dad's hippie love child, Pine manages to become a major part of his sister's life without letting the truth slip. For his directorial debut, blockbuster word-slinger Alex Kurtzman's (Transformers, Cowboys and Aliens) greatest sin is keeping the camera too close. In its earnest pursuit to untangle the web of lies under which the family has been operating, the screenplay (co-written by Kurtzman, Roberto Orci, and Jody Lambert) seldom crosses over into soap opera territory. For decades, the tagline "Based on Real Events" has been synonymous with "Cable-Ready" - particularly when there's a hint of incest added to the mix. Not here. The performances - including those by veteran actress Michelle Pfeiffer and newcomer Michael Hall D'Addario as Banks' rebellious son are uniformly superb. Those scorched by the "chick flicks" that pass for women's pictures nowadays (Katherine Heigl and Jennifer Aniston, take note) can finally rejoice: People Like Us is the real deal. With Olivia Wilde and Philip Baker Hall. 2012. — S.M.

 ${\bf Prometheus} - {\bf A \ long\text{-}planned},$ crushingly filmed prequel to Aliens, with director Ridley Scott again insulting his high achievement in Blade Runner. Many borrowed themes get rummaged together with absurd effects, dismal violence, and self-administered surgery by a scientist (Noomi Rapace) that seems both for and against abortion (in this ugly, loopy vision, who can tell?). The alien planet seems to be hell. Michael Fassbender preens as a blond robot, and clips from Lawrence of Arabia beckon us to that tough, real, better world. It is like watching a script wrestle its budget into exhaustion. Guy Pearce, as a crazy billionaire, is (to his credit) unrecognizable. 2012. — D.E.

Rock of Ages — "Rock is dead!" declares evil band manager Paul Giamatti, and Rock of Ages just dares you to disagree. Do you ever find yourself missing the glory days of dinosaur rock (Journey), glam metal (Poison), and power ballads (REO Speed-wagon)? Would it help if we blended all that up and used it as the soundtrack to a kitschy musical? Or what if we put those songs in the mouths of plasticine nymphoids (Julianne Hough) or ageless nostalgia-bots (Tom Cruise), depending on the emotional need (or approximation thereof) of the moment? Good times! 2012. — M.L.

Safety Not Guaranteed — A Proustian fairy tale for anyone old enough to have regrets, Safety Not Guaranteed is also good humanist sci-fi. The technology (whether or not it's actually real) exists in the service of genuinely human problems. Disappointed young woman (Aubrey Plaza) sets out to write a story on disappointed older dude (Mark Duplass) and his plan to go back in time and set things right. It isn't long before she realizes that whether or not he's crazy, his calibrations are indeed pinpoint. The occasional uneven performance, sitcomlevel joke, and horrific digital image aren't enough to sour the fundamental sweetness. 2012. — M.L.

Seeking a Friend for the End of the World — The cuteness doesn't stop at the title. An asteroid set to collide with earth brings together a freshly-dumped insur-

The Rocky Horror Picture Show

Software entrepreneur, Innovagears.com

Casablanca, by Michael Curtiz, is one of the first movies my grandparents said I must see. They were right. [It's] set in the early days of World War II in Northern Africa. I can recommend this because it shows what acting and movies were about before fancy edits, special effects, and huge budgets ruled the box office. The story of love, danger, and sacrifice is great.

The Rocky Horror Picture Show, by Jim Sharman, serves up campy fun, outrageous characters, and a cast of stars before they were famous (such as Susan Sarandon and Barry Bostwick). This film is great to watch on DVD and even better if you're dressed up and watching it with a large group of friends.

One Step Beyond

JEFF BERKWITS

Vintage TV columnist, SCI FI Magazine, syfy.com/magazine

There were myriad sci-fi programs on the air prior to The Twilight Zone's 1959 debut, and among the best of those relics is Tales of Tomorrow. Though there are many compilations on the market offering installments from the anthology, the cream of the crop is the two-DVD Tales of Tomorrow, Collection 3, which features among its 14 episodes "The Window," an ingenious teleplay that could only have been performed on live TV.

One Step Beyond is another wonderfully spooky anthology. Though many viewers mistakenly believe it to be a Twilight Zone knockoff, the program premiered nearly nine months before Rod Serling's landmark series. The three-disc One Step Beyond: The Official First Season is an ideal introduction to the show, which ostensibly based its stories on true-life tales.

TALES OF TOMORROW, COLLECTION 3 (USA) 2007, Image Entertainment List price: $14.98

ONE STEP BEYOND: THE OFFICIAL FIRST SEASON (USA) 2009, CBS Home Entertainment List price: $39.99

Run, Lola, Run

PAUL HORN

Artist and cartoonist, Cool Jerk, cooljerk.com

Run, Lola, Run was my favorite movie from 1999 (sorry, The Matrix) and my first DVD purchase, bought several days before I even owned a DVD player. This German-language mindbender is set in Berlin and explores three possible outcomes from a stressful money drop gone bad. Lola needs to get $40,000 to Manni in 20 minutes to save his life — what could go wrong with that?

If Point of No Return and The Bourne Identity had a crazy cousin, it'd be The Long Kiss Goodnight. It features Geena Davis as a charming-yet-amnesiac suburban mom and schoolteacher who slowly discovers her previous life was (spent as] a CIA black-ops assassin. Samuel L. Jackson, at the summit of his hilarious scenery-chewing best, is the low-rent private investigator who gets intertwined in this hyperbolic, high-caliber yarn. Features death by pie.

RUN, LOLA, RUN (German) 1999, Sony Pictures List price: $14.99

THE LONG KISS GOODNIGHT (USA) 1997, New Line List price: $12.97

ance salesman (Steve Carell), a man whose television beams nothing but exposition and clumsy non-sequiturs, and a free-spirited neighbor (Keira Knightley), Lorene Scafaria, a screenwriter (Nick and Norah's Infinite மி Playlist) making her directorial debut, peppers the first half-hour with a few chuckles and one well-placed jolt. After the couple hit the road, the film slowly sinks under the weight of predictable situations and t the weight of predictable situations and the actors' lack of chemistry. With Connie Britton, Adam Brody, and not enough Patton Oswalt. 2012. — S.M.

Snow White and the Huntsman —

Digitalized but not dim-witted fairy tale. with a heavy dose of gothic gloom and hard action. A few lumbering stretches in Rupert Sanders's fantasy are not a burden, effects (notably dwarves partly inhabited by famous, funny British actors) are good, and the atmosphere is intense. As chief hunk, Chris Hemsworth is like a slightly obtuse Sean Connery. Best of all, Kristen Stewart's lovely, humane Snow White and Charlize Theron's vicious Queen Ravenna are dueling feminist icons. Not for wee kids, more for not-easily-scared ones eight or nine and up. 2012. — D.E.

Ted — Once his 15 minutes of fame pass, an animatronic plush toy named Ted matures into a scruffy Boston bear who parties harder than his Kennedy namesake. His handler is the confident and overly charming Mark Wahlberg (in a role better suited for Paul Dano or even Jonah Hill). After the novelty of watching a computer generated toy work blue wears off, Ted contains about 10 minutes' worth of laughs. That's a pretty good ratio for a half-hour sitcom, but not a 105-minute feature.

Take This Waltz — Reviewed this issue.

Writer/director Seth MacFarlane may talk a convincing game, but when it comes to showing his hand, the small screen bad boy goes "all in" with a pair of Hollywood conventions: an unnecessary romantic subplot involving Mila Kunis, and a sociopathic stalker (Giovanni Ribisi). A first-reel logjam of references to E.T., Raiders of the Lost Ark, and Jurassic Park suggested that MacFarlane was about to score major points by taking a dump in Spielbergia. But instead, he waters Steve's lawn with a urine-scented drizzle of indebtedness. Ted isn't patterned after an invisible bunny named Harvey. He's Dirty E.T., a cursing CG sock-puppet that MacFarlane (like his idol) ultimately employs as a pathetic means of eliciting pathos. 2012. — S.M.

That's My Boy — For years Adam Sandler has been threatening to remake several Jerry Lewis pictures. The closest he's come is borrowing the title of a 1951 Martin & Lewis picture for this insipid, deeply misogynistic excuse for a comedy.Doing a gravellyvoiced, baby-talking variation on Al Pacino (complete with fright wig), Sandler stars as Donny, a beer-guzzling vulgarian whose major claim to fame is that his 8th grade science teacher went to prison for fathering their child. Years later, he tries to mend fences with his estranged son, Han Solo (Sandler heir apparent Andy Samberg), by crashing his wedding and hoping to borrow $43,000 to pay off the IRS. Expect the usual broad attempts at lampooning the rich, sudden bursts of physical violence one has grown tired of since first Sandler suckerpunched Bob Barker in Happy Gilmore, and old ladies telling "dick" jokes. Newcomer Sean Anders' "direction" leaves one pining for the Dennis Dugan touch. Is there anything even remotely amusing about That's My Boy? As is the custom, the biggest laughs in an Adam Sandler film come from cheap attempts at heartfelt pathos. 2012. - S.M.

The Amazing Spider-Man — Generation Y gets its web-slinger, and as cash-grab reboots go, it's not bad. This time, highschool dweeb Peter Parker isn't such a nice guy at the outset: he's a New Yorker, after all, and on top of that, he's an orphan with a dad-shaped chip on his shoulder. And he's also not such a hero by the end: though he eventually accepts this film's version of his Uncle Ben's dictum ("With great power comes great responsibility"), he's still gotta keep a little something for himself, you know? The story works hard to integrate various elements from Spidey's history, and the score works even harder to let you know what you should be feeling at any given moment. Star Andrew Garfield is all grins and grimaces, Emma Stone is reliably adorable as love interest Gwen Stacy, and Denis Leary is reliably testy as her police captain dad. 2012. — M.L.

To Rome With Love — At first blush, Woody Allen's latest entry into his grand European tour bears a close resemblance to Monica, the character played by Ellen Page in the film: very pretty to look at and just smart enough to suggest hidden depths, but ultimately a trifle shallow and self-centered. Unlike Monica, however, it's not necessarily a bad thing, especially if you know what you're getting into and why. When Allen first appears — as a father flying into Rome to meet the family of his daughter's fiancee - he's got death on his mind. It stays there throughout the movie, evanescing life set against the backdrop of the Eternal City. Mortal thoughts tend to make a body look back and take stock of what will get left behind, and Allen's certainly earned the right to do so onscreen. So yes, we've seen and heard a lot of this before. The gorgeous prostitute dispensing wisdom (Penelope Cruz)? Mighty Aphrodite. The quasi-character who serves as a kind of Greek chorus (Alec Baldwin)? Ditto. Freud jokes? Oy! And yes, the pop-culture references creak right alongside the overlong ruminations on celebrity and the emptiness of fame. But there is a point here, however modest: an artist considering his reasons for making art, and for continuing to do so as the twilight deepens. The plot, such as it is, gathers rather than weaves a number of threads that all trace back to Allen himself, if not to his character in the film. The most interesting of these centers on a man who sings opera, but only in the shower - who makes art for himself, but can't help wondering what the world might think. 2012. — M.L.

Tyler Perry's Madea's Witness Protection — In their heyday, Eugene Levy and the rest of the satirically contemptuous gang at SCTV would have had a field day gutting a formulaic mixed-message trafficker like Tyler Perry. Now? I know that standout comedic supporting players gotta eat, but does Perry own compromising Polaroids of Levy with barnyard animals? Admittedly, the stalwart Levy is the "Screech" of the American Pie franchise, but even that can't justify his participation in this subcompact sitcom. Levy plays a New York CFO unwittingly duped into participating in a Ponzi scheme that launders money for the mob. He and his lily-white family are then relocated to the deep South to hide out in the home of a giant, ad-libbing drag queen. (You thought Goodfella Henry Hill had it bad?) This is obviously Perry's bid at a crossover picture, but since his idea of humor is Denise Richards jive-talking and Levy hiding beneath a mustache, oversize beret, and Pepe LePew accent, you may as well stay home and watch reruns of The Carol Burnett Show. All that's missing is a laugh track And for a filmmaker who prides himself on Christian values, what's with Perry making actress Doris Roberts wring laughs out of Alzheimer's Disease? 2012, - S.M.

What to Expect When You're Expecting — A multi-character (pregnant) chick flick with five converging storylines about expectant couples. Don't expect much in the way of wit or originality from this Lifetime Channel stray, but the appealing cast and cinematographer Xavier Pérez Grobet's balanced 'Scope frames help defray much of the pain induced by a labored script. Kirk Jones directed; with Jennifer Lopez, Chace Crawford, Elizabeth Banks, Cameron Diaz, Anna Kendrick, and not enough Chris Rock. 2012. — S.M.

Your Sister's Sister — At first, YourSister's Sister plays like a comedy of very modern manners, everything so up to date that antique notions of "good" and "bad" can be replaced safely by "gratifying" and "weird." Jack (a bearish Mark Duplass) is a sweet, modern guy, but he's sad, because his brother died a year ago. So Iris (Emily Blunt), Jack's friend and his brother's ex, sends him to her family's cabin for a little alone time. But the cabin is already occupied by Hannah (Rosemarie DeWitt), İris's lesbian sister, who's there to get over a failed relationship. Jack and Hannah indulge in a drunken hookup, only to awake and find Iris paying a visit. After that, things get complicated - they even venture a little past manners and into morals. When someone says, "I'm a very bad person" here, it's an entirely sincere statement. Director Lynn Shelton's best trick is providing a picturesque space for some very fine performances; it's a real pleasure to watch the angular DeWitt and the cherubic Blunt conjure the shared history of siblings. 2011. - M.L.

THIS WEEK'S WINNERS: (All winning entries will be screened for plagiarism.) Prizes will be available for pickup at the Reader offices front desk from the Thursday your name appears in print to the following Thursday at 5 pm.

L. Barling, El Cajon, 6.

I could poke my eye out with a stick. I could eat rotten food and get sick. I instead try to write, Limericks capably bright. As if that's more fun. Boy I'm thick!

Charlotte Brown, Clairemont, 6.

Now that I have won the game, Not to brag would be a shame, I will try to be humble, but that being said: My new hat will be cocked to the side, on my head. Until she was almost insane.

Jane M. Reilly, University City, 6.

There once was a lady named Jane. Who found writing limericks a pain. She toiled with rhymes, More than hundreds of times.

Michael Rewa, Allied Gardens, 6.

As soon as I solved the puzzle I cheered so loud I was muzzled, By a fella who hated, That I was so elated. But then we made up and nuzzled.

Mark Moskowitz, Universty Heights, 5.

The limericks I sent in before. With you somehow they just didn't score, You didn't get my humor, You might have a tumor. A condition you should not ignore!

THIS WEEK'S WINNERS: (All winning entries will be screened for plagiarism.) Prizes will be available for pickup at the Reader offices front desk from the Thursday your name appears in print to the following Thursday at 5 pm.

Try as I might, Sudoku evil is a fight. It may be my age, That causes this rane

Or maybe it's just my sight.

Limericks are hard to write. It's easier to fly a kite, It's part of the game. No two are the same. I'm going to bed, goodnight!

Twas a meeting that's resounded for years hence, Our founding fathers were all in attendance. Grievances they did note. And together they wrote.

The Declaration of Independence.

Michael Rewa, Allied Gardens, 6.

While writing a limerick is hard to do. Getting the prize is now difficult too. Since I did not get them anon, Ergo my prizes are gone. So after this limerick I'm through...adieu!

C. Welling, San Diego, 1.

In San Diego we have the Reader, It's puzzles are often "head-beaters," I think I've solved one. But now that it's done How do they know I'm no cheater!

San Diego Reader July 5, 2012

- Herman Wallace, 70, and Albert Woodfox, 65, have been held in solitary confinement (only one hour a day outside) since 1972 in the Louisiana State Prison at Angola after being convicted (via flimsy evidence and a convenient prison snitch) of killing a guard. A third convict for the murder, Robert King, who was in solitary for 29 years but then released, explained to BBC News in an April dispatch what it's like to live inside 54 square feet for 23 hours a day for over 14,000 straight days. The lawyer working to free Wallace and Woodfox said the soul-deadened men were "potted plants."

That Sacred Institution

- A federal court magistrate in Melbourne, Australia, decided to split a divorcing couple's assets in half in February after listening to tedious details of their 20-year marriage. The "couple" lived apart except for vacations and kept their finances separate, constantly "invoic[ing] each other," according to the Daily Telegraph, for amounts as trifling as a $1.60 lightbulb.

 Though many Americans act as though they are in love with themselves, only Nadine Schweigert became an honest woman. She married herself in March in front of 45 family members and friends in Fargo, N.D., vowing "to enjoy inhabiting my own life and to relish a lifelong love affair with my beautiful self." And then she was off on a solo honeymoon.

Questionable Judgments

— On Feb. 1, the New Jersey Honor Legion — a civic association with more than 6000 members in law enforcement — nominated Frank DiMattina as "Citizen of the Month" for offering his catering hall in Woodbridge, N.J., numerous times for gatherings of police and firefighters. The nomination came three weeks after DiMattina (also known as "Frankie D") was convicted of shaking down a rival bidder for a school-lunch contract in New York City. Federal prosecutors told the New York Daily News that DiMattina is mobbed up — an associate of the Genovese family's John "Johnny Sausage" Barbato.

Unclear on the Concept

- In January, Ms. Navey Skinner, 34, was charged with robbing the Chase Bank in Arlington, Wash., after passing a teller a note that read, "Put the money in the bag now or [d]ie." According to investigators, Skinner subsequently told them she had been thinking about robbing a bank and then, while inside the Chase Bank, "accidentally robbed" it.

- Emanuel Kuvakos, 56, was arrested in April and charged with sending two Chicago sportsteam executives emails that threatened them with violence for having stolen his "ideas" for winning "championships." One of the victims was a former general manager of the Chicago Cubs, a team that has not won a National League championship in 66 years, nor a World Series in 103.

- In April, Arizona (recently the home of cutting-edge legislation) almost set itself up for the impossible task of trying to prohibit any "annoy[ing]" or "offen[sive]" or "profane" language on the internet. The state House passed the bill, which was endorsed 30-0 by the state Senate, ostensibly to make an anti-stalking telephone regulation applicable to "digital" communications. (Just as the bill was about to go to the governor for signature, sponsors realized the futility of the bill's directives, and on April 4, withdrew it.)

Least Competent Criminals

- CVS supervisor Fenton Graham, 35, of Silver Spring, Md., was arrested as the inside man (with two accomplices) in two drugstore robberies in April. Surveillance video showed that in the second heist, the nervous perp evidently failed to take the money with him, and Graham (the "victim") was seen taking it out to his forgetful partner.

 Kyle Voss, 24, was charged with four burglaries in Great Falls, Mont., in April after coming upon a private residence containing buckets of coins. According to police, Voss first took the quarters and half-dollars ($3000), then days later he returned for $700 in dimes and nickels. By the third breakin, the resident had installed surveillance video, and Voss was caught as he came back for a bucket of pennies.

Least Competent Bank

- Federal court documents revealed in March that AWOL Army Pvt. Brandon Price, 28, had convinced Citibank in January that he spoke for Microsoft cofounder Paul Allen (one of the world's richest men) and convinced the bank to issue Allen (i.e., Price) a new debit card and to change Allen's address from Seattle to Price's address in Pittsburgh. Price/Allen shopped decidedly downscale, running up charges only at Gamestop and Family Dollar, totaling less than $1000.

 Sophisticated automobile technology makes high-performance engines purr in relative silence, but automakers fear that their most demanding drivers are emotionally attached to the engines' roar. Consequently, as Car and Driver reported in April, the 2012 BMW M5, with 560 horsepower tempered with sound deadeners, has installed pre-recorded engine noise, channeled into the car's cabin via the stereo system. A computer program matches the amplitude of the engine's growl to the driver's acceleratorrevving. In other automobile tech news, Peugeot technicians announced in March that they were preparing "mood paint" for the body of the company's iconic RCZ model. The paint's molecular structure would be alterable by heat sensors in the steering wheel and elsewhere that measure a driver's stress levels. A calm driver might see his car turn green, for instance — but watch out for road-rage red!

Fine Points of the Law

 Finally, a nationally prominent judge has taken on prison "nutriloaf" as a constitutional issue. In March, U.S. Appeals Court judge Richard Posner reinstated a dismissed lawsuit by a Milwaukee County Jail inmate who claimed that the mystery meat gave him an "anal fissure." Posner wrote that the lower courts needed to rule on whether the food of indeterminate content is "cruel and unusual punishment," since (citing a Wikipedia entry) an anal fissure seems "no fun at all."

— The Missouri House of Representatives, after several times rejecting "sexual orientation" as one of the legally prohibited categories of discrimination, managed to find another category in March (to join "race," "religion," and so forth) that is deserving of special protection: licensed concealedweapons carriers.

— The Kansas Supreme Court ruled in April that Joshua Coman, convicted of having sex with a dog, does not have to register as a sex offender. Activists had urged that the sodomy law on which Coman was convicted be declared unconstitutional, since it appears to equate human-animal sex with man-man and woman-woman sex. However, the court declined, instead noting that Coman had been convicted of a misdemeanor and that only felons are required to register.

People with Issues

- In March, West Des Moines, Iowa, police opened an investigation, with video surveillance, of a 59-year-old employee of the state's farm bureau on suspicion of criminal mischief.

According to police documents cited by the Des Moines Register, the man would look through the employee database for photos of attractive female colleagues and then visit their work space after hours and urinate on their chairs. Not only does the man allegedly have a problem, but the farm bureau figured it is out $4500 in damaged chairs.

The Continuing Crisis

- With only 30,000 hotel rooms in Rio de Janeiro and 50,000 visitors expected for the June United Nations Conference on Sustainable Development, officials persuaded owners of many of the city's short-time "love hotels" (typically renting for four hours at a time) to change business plans for a few days to accommodate the delegates. A BBC News stringer reported that the hotels will remove some special fixtures and furniture, such as "erotic chairs" and velvet wall coverings, but that the large, round beds would stay. Fortunately, the conference does not begin until June 13. The night of June 12 ("Lovers Day") is a big incomeproducer for short-stay hotels.

- The Marine Wounded Warriors Battalion at Camp Lejeune, N.C., generally enjoys excellent support from the community, but in an April report of the Government Accountability Office, Marines complained of a "petting zoo" environment in which civilian charities and advertisers use the battalion to seek out "poster" faces and bodies that "looked the part" of wounded veterans, such as those severely burned or missing limbs. Warriors who suffer post-traumatic stress or brain injuries often appear outwardly "normal" and are likely to be ignored by the support organizations, thus setting a "bad tone" among the

 In October, Dr. Kimberly Lindsey, 44, a deputy director of the Centers for Disease Control's Laboratory Science, Policy, and Practice Program Office, was charged with two counts of child molestation and bestiality involving a six-year-old boy. - In April, Yaron Segal, 30, a post-doctoral researcher at a physics lab at MIT, was arrested upon arriving in Grand Junction, Colo., after arranging with a woman online to have sex with the woman's under-age daughter (an adventure that was the product of a law-enforcement sting). Two weeks later, Segal was found dead in his jail cell of an apparent suicide.
